TWIN FALLS • House Assistant Majority Leader Scott Bedke, R-Oakley, publicly announced he is running for speaker of the Idaho House.

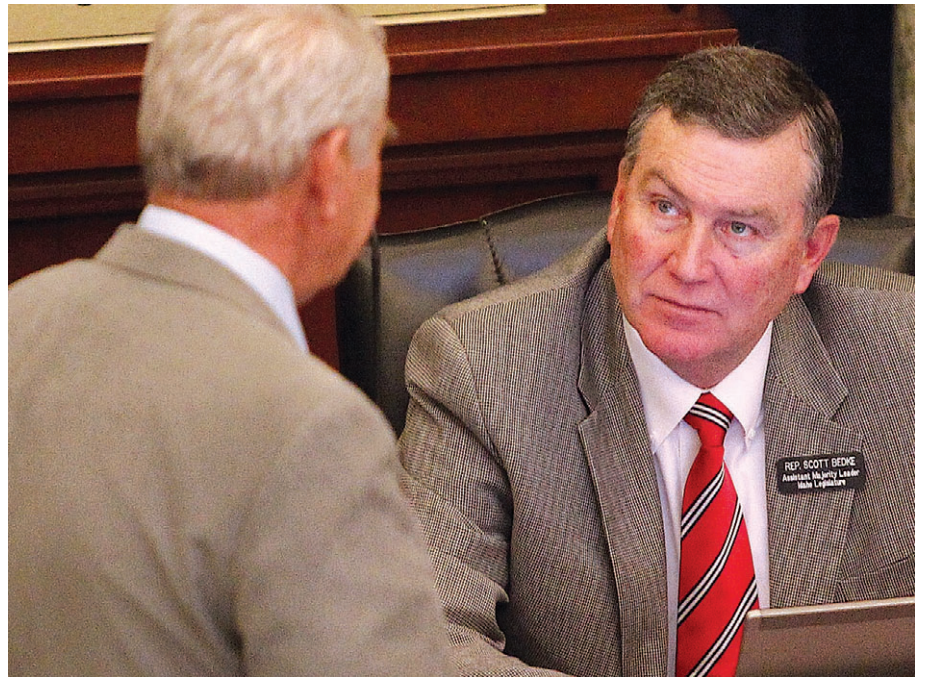

Bedke, who was first elected to the Legislature in 2000, is challenging current House Speaker Lawrence Denney, R-Midvale. Denney has held the position for six years.

"It's time for a change," Bedke told the Times-News.

Rumors have circulated about the House speaker race for months, with the Idaho Statesman interviewing Denney about his intent to seek another term. Bedke had previously declined to comment.

STORIES OF STRONG WILLS

TWIN FALLS • Brian Pike, chief of police for Twin Falls, hasn't lived the experiences of the military veterans he addressed Sunday.

But through his sons, Andrew and Daniel, Pike has observed the lives and sacrifices of America's armed forces. And that's the story he told during a Veterans Day ceremony in Twin Falls City Park: "Forged through the hearts of warriors and patriots," he said.

Braced against the cold, a gathering of veterans and other members of the public listened to Pike recall visiting the USS Abraham Lincoln aircraft carrier at sea, and of his trips to the former Walter Reed Army Medical Center after his son, Andrew, was paralyzed by a sniper's bullet in Iraq.

Force, the Marines — were scattered through the crowd, and many people donned thick jackets against the morning's chill.

"How many people have cold hands?" Bob Jackson, who introduced each speaker, asked as the ceremony started. "Warm hearts?"

Of Brian Pike's sons, Magic Valley residents may feel they best know Andrew, who was the focus of an outpouring of support following his injury in 2007. But the police chief's perspective on the armed forces also comes through watching Daniel, now serving on the USS Carl Vinson, an aircraft carrier.

"All these experiences are the ones I'll never forget," Brian Pike said after recounting watching both sons' military careers.

The experience he kept returning to was the time at Walter Reed. Pike said he felt out of place at the hospital.

"I didn't deserve to be there," he said. "I hadn't paid the price." Regardless, he was there and was moved by seeing a full hospital wing of wounded men, some missing limbs, others their sight, and others still grappling with traumatic brain injuries. Watching them, he said, he assumed they had gotten the worst end of the war.

Idaho Celebrates Adoption Day Friday

TIMES-NEWS

TWIN FALLS • The public is invited to the fifth annual Idaho Adoption Day at the Twin Falls County Courthouse Friday at 8:30 a.m.

Recent adoptions will be finalized in a ceremony sponsored by the 5th Judicial District, 5th Judicial District Court Appointed Special Advocates and the Department of Health and Welfare.

A proclamation signed by Idaho Supreme Court Chief Justice Roger S. Burdick declared Nov. 16 as Idaho Adoption Day.

"This statewide effort, along with similar ceremonies in all 50 states, the District of Columbia and Puerto Rico will celebrate the powerful difference adoption makes in the lives of children and encourages others to assist wherever and however they can," the proclamation states.

According to the proclamations, more than 100,000 children in the United States foster care system and 39 foster children in Idaho are waiting to be adopted.

The Pathway to Greatness

Greatness is having the courage to make a difference. Longfellow said, "Give what you have. To someone it may be better than you think."

When I look at greatness, I want to pay tribute to our veterans. Americans have always answered their country's call to duty and fought no matter the cause or reason for war. Our noble men and women counted it a privilege to serve. Human injustice and suffering awaited their confrontation.

The courage of a loving heart is the source of true greatness. The first step is to connect with the true and selfless love that may lie buried within us — beneath our own agendas — waiting to be resurrected. We choose to listen to our hearts and find purpose for life. Love empowers us to better serve our families, neighbors and communities. We dedicate ourselves to the unfinished work that lies ahead of us.

Stephen Covey teaches: My choice to act brings energy. My choice of purpose is my destiny. Choosing to live by principles provides the means of attaining my goals.

Sydney Smith said, "Great men hallow a whole people, and lift up all who live in their time." They inspire a quality of life that continues greatness. We cannot forget their distinguished service.

Wilma Rudolph gave us this kind of inspiration. She said, "Never underestimate the power of dreams and the influence of the human spirit. We are all the same in this notion: The potential for greatness lives within each of us." It is as normal and unique as breathing. We can inspire it in each other.

The story of the young man who took a bullet to save his wife and unborn child in the theater in Aurora, Colo., last summer provides an awesome story of sacrificial greatness. It demonstrates why someone will enter a burning building to rescue a child. It's why people risked their lives going into the crumbling World Trade Center on 9/11/01 to save others. Purpose-driven people — who love others — give themselves for them.

Sally Olsen, the Little Mother of Puerto Rico, went through the flats of Old San Juan to rescue a lost little boy from poverty, and her act of kindness helped save his whole family. Sally Olsen invested her life savings in the founding of the Rose of Sharon Home for Children, where the little boy became one of some 40 children, and his mother became the housekeeper.

The question is, do we have the heart to work hard and push through adversity the way our veterans have so nobly demonstrated for us? Gandhi said, "Be the change you wish to see in the world."

The pursuit of greatness is completely hollow unless it is to help others. It happens when we're willing to step entirely aside and give God's love a chance to shine through us. Our purpose exceeds our own interests, and we begin to change our own lives and the world around us.

Blaine County Fifth-graders To Get Anti-bullying Lesson

TIMES-NEWS

HAILEY • Fifth-graders in Blaine County will participate in an anti-bullying program this week.

Blaine County School District social workers will team up with Travis Jones from Hailey-based Advocates for Survivors of Domestic Violence.

He's traveling to each elementary school to talk to students about how to combat all types of bullying.

The program will focus on relational aggression, which can include put downs, rumors and exclusion.

Students will learn strategies that are in line with current research, emphasizing the importance that witnesses and bystanders help stop bullying.

The program is part of year-round educational efforts in the Blaine County School District about preventing bullying.

Rotary Club Hands Out Dictionaries to Third-graders

TWIN FALLS • Members of the Rotary Club of Twin Falls recently handed out dictionaries to the third-graders in District 411 as part of one of their annual projects.

Through The Dictionary Project, the club purchases more than 800 dictionaries annually so each student will have their own book. Other clubs through the Rotary District participate in this program. Members of the Rotary Club deliver the dictionaries to the classes.

Not only does the book contain the standard definitions of words but also includes the periodic table of elements, sign language alphabets, the U.S. Constitution, world maps and the longest word in the English language.

During the presentation, members talked about Rotary's Four Way Test and different projects that the service club had performed. Funds to purchase the book came from their annual "Death by Chocolate" fundraiser. The Rotary Clubs of Twin Falls meets weekly at the Turf Club on Wednesday at noon. More information about Rotary is available at www.twinfallsrotary.org.

Veterans

"I couldn't have been more wrong," he said. Though they struggled with basic tasks, the injured soldiers pushed their bodies to repair and returned to their service. "I never heard one soldier complain."

Pike's recollections accompanied a ceremony full of symbolism. A POW/MIA chair on the city park bandshell stage stood in for captured Army Sgt. Bowe Bergdahl of Hailey, who has spent more than three years as a prisoner of war. Jim Willis performed a mournful Tapped before Jackson announced that after three decades of performing at the Veterans Day observance and other events, Willis will hang up his bugle.

"It's time," Willis said after the ceremony, holding a plaque of thanks for his service and noting that he'll still perform as part of the Twin Falls Municipal Band.

For the third year in a row, veteran Jimmy Berkley received a Spirit of Freedom Award through U.S. Sen. Mike Crapo's office. Berkley, according to Crapo staffer A.J. Church, was honored for both his military service — as an air traffic control radio repairman in Vietnam — and his many acts of charity and care in southern Idaho, from maintaining the Rock Creek Cemetery to volunteering as part of the Magic Valley Honor Guard.

Church also read a letter from Crapo thanking Cheryl Ringenberg, Twin Falls County's veteran services officer, for her work over the years.

"Your dedication to assisting veterans and their families is commendable," Church read before presenting the letter to Ringenberg, in tears in the audience.

Bedke

Denney couldn't be reached for comment for this story, but last week he told the Statesman he would campaign aggressively to keep his position.

In an interview with the Times-News, Bedke was hesitant to talk about specific problems within the Republican caucus, but the tensions have been documented in both the press and public records.

The biggest of those conflicts: During the 2012 primary, Denney and House Majority Leader Mike Moyle, R-Star, donated tens of thousands of dollars to political action committees that aimed to defeat fellow Republicans, including House Majority Caucus Chairman Ken Roberts, R-Donnelly.

That money came from the House Victory Fund. The bulk of donations to that fund came from House Republicans; Previously, Victory Fund money went to help incumbents.

There have been other controversies. In 2011, Denney received criticism for removing Rep. Tom Trail, R-Moscow, and Rep. Leon Smith, R-Twin Falls, as committee chairmen at the very end of that year's legislative session. (Both Smith and Trail retired after the 2012 session.)

In January, Denney was part of an effort to remove former Reps. Dolores Crow and Randy Hansen — both fellow Republicans — from the state commission charged with creating new legislative districts following the census. (That effort failed in the Idaho Supreme Court.)

Bedke has been critical of Denney's actions in recent months.

"For the past six years, we've worked well as a leadership team. And I cannot condone any of these tactics," Bedke told the Times-News in May after the campaign finance scandal became public.

The scandal surprised Republicans who had donated to the fund.

"It did not occur to me at the time that that money would be used to pit candidates against sitting House members," said Rep. Stephen Hartgen, R-Twin Falls, in May. "And frankly, I don't think that's a good idea."

Since the primary, neither the House Victory Fund nor the House Republican Caucus Fund have received any donations from Idaho PACs or House Republicans who had previously contributed.

Denney's wife, Donna Denney, is treasurer of the Victory Fund.

In the months leading to the Nov. 6 general election, Bedke, who was unchallenged, donated thousands of dollars to Republican candidates across the state.

Bedke isn't the only Magic Valley legislator running for leadership. In July, Hartgen confirmed he is running to be House caucus chairman. Roberts resigned in July after being appointed to the state Tax Commission.

Each party votes for leadership on Dec. 5 in a private caucus meeting in Boise.

Nuclear Fuel From USS Enterprise Headed for Idaho

IDAHO FALLS (AP) • Spent nuclear fuel from the nuclear-powered aircraft carrier USS Enterprise that is being decommissioned will be sent to eastern Idaho for study and storage, a Navy spokesman says.

Tom Dougan of the Naval Nuclear Propulsion Program tells the Post Register the spent fuel from the ship's eight reactors will arrive at the Naval Reactors Facility at the Idaho National Laboratory in 2015.

"Many of the major components and other equipment are nearing the end of their useful life, and it's not cost effective to further extend the Enterprise for combat operations," Dougan said.

The world's first nuclear-powered aircraft carrier ended its remarkable career at sea Nov. 4 when it pulled into its home port at Naval Station Norfolk in Virginia for the final time after participating in every major conflict since the Cuban Missile Crisis of 1962.

Dougan said the spent nuclear fuel once in Idaho will be examined to help with future reactor design research before being placed in storage.

"(The) fuel is transported via rail in specially designed railcars that meet the Department of Transportation shipping requirements for spent nuclear fuel," he said. "The Navy has been managing spent fuel in Idaho since the late 1950s."

The Navy will officially deactivate the Enterprise on Dec. 1, but it will take several more years for it to be decommissioned as its reactors are taken out.

After spent fuel is removed at Norfolk, the Navy plans to tow the Enterprise to the Puget Sound Naval Shipyard at Bremerton in Washington state. The nuclear reactors will be cut out of the ship and barged to the Hanford nuclear reservation.

Israel Drawn into Syria Fighting for First Time

BY AMY TEIBEL
Associated Press

JERUSALEM • Israel was drawn into the Syrian civil war for the first time on Sunday, firing warning shots into the neighboring country after a stray mortar shell from across the border hit an Israeli military post.

The Israeli military said the mortar fire caused no injuries or damage at the post in the Golan Heights, which Israel captured from Syria in the 1967 Mideast war and then annexed. But in recent weeks, incidents of errant fire from Syria to the north have multiplied, leading Israel to warn that it holds Syria responsible for fire on Israeli-held territory.

"A short while ago, a mortar shell targeted an IDF (Israel Defense Forces) post in the Golan Heights," said army spokeswoman Lt. Col. Avital Leibovich. "We answered with a warning shot toward Syrian areas. We understand this was a mistake and was not meant to target Israel and then that is why we fired a warning shot in retaliation."

The Israeli military also said it filed a complaint through United Nations forces operating in the area, stating that "fire emanating from Syria into Israeli soldiers patrol along the Israel Gaza border Sunday.

Israel will not be tolerated and shall be responded to with severity," Israel returned fire with an anti-tank missile.

Nineteen months of fighting and the mounting chaos engulfing the regime of President Bashar Assad have already spilled across borders with Lebanon, Turkey and Jordan. The danger of drawing in Israel as well to a wider regional conflagration is one of the worst-case scenarios for the civil war.

Violence also flared Sunday on Syria's northern border with Turkey, a common flashpoint. Syrian army forces backed by helicopter gunships and artillery attacked a border area with Turkey after rebels captured a crossing point, activists said.

The Britain-based activist group Syrian Observatory for Human Rights said the Ras al-Ayn border area in Syria's northeast was "under siege" as dozens of rebels tried to hold onto the border crossing.

The upheaval has largely had no direct impact on Syria's bitter foe Israel, and their shared border has remained mostly quiet, as it has been since a 1974 cease-fire.

Still, Israel worries that Syria's civil war could spill across into the Golan — a concern made more immediate by multiple cases of errant fire in recent weeks and Israel's claim that three Syrian tanks entered the demilitarized zone on the plateau this month for the first time in 40 years.

Israeli officials do not see Assad trying to intentionally draw Israel into the fighting, though they have raised the possibility of his targeting Israel in an act of desperation. Israeli officials have repeatedly said it is only a matter of time before Assad's regime collapses.

Over the weekend, Vice Premier Moshe Yaalon said Israel recently conveyed several messages to Syria and Damascus had "conducted itself appropriately." He did not elaborate.

On Sunday, Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu told his Cabinet that Israel is "closely monitoring" the border with Syria and is "ready for any development."

Earlier, Defense Minister Ehud Barak warned, "If a shell falls, we will respond."

Israel fears that if Assad's regime is toppled, the country could fall into the hands of Islamic extremists or descend into sectarian warfare, destabilizing the region.

It also is afraid that Syria's arsenal of chemical weapons and missile could fall into the hands of its Lebanese ally, the Hezbollah guerrilla group, or other anti-Israel militants if Assad loses power.

The aftermath of Egypt's revolution has also provided Israel with reason to worry about its frontier region with Syria: Egypt's Sinai desert on Israel's southern border has turned even more lawless since long-time Egyptian President Hosni Mubarak was ousted in February 2011, and Islamic militants are now more easily able to use it as a launching ground for strikes against southern Israel.

Fighting in Syria on Sunday was centered around Ras al-Ayn, in the predominantly Kurdish oil-producing northeastern province of al-Hasaka. An Associated Press cameraman on the Turkish side of the border said he heard explosions and saw plumes of smoke rise on the Syrian side.

Food Labels Multiply, Some Confuse Consumers

BY GOSIA WOZNIACKA
Associated Press

FRESNO, Calif. • Want to avoid pesticides and antibiotics in your produce, meat, and dairy foods? Prefer to pay more to make sure farm animals were treated humanely, farmworkers got their lunch breaks, bees or birds were protected by the farmer and that ranchers didn't kill predators?

Food labels claim to certify a wide array of sustainable practices. Hundreds of so-called eco-labels have cropped up in recent years, with more introduced every month — and consumers are willing to pay extra for products that feature them.

While eco-labels can play a vital role, experts say their rapid proliferation and lack of oversight or clear standards have confused both consumers and producers.

"Hundreds of eco labels exist on all kinds of products, and there is the potential for companies and producers to make false claims," said Shana Starobin, a food label expert at Duke University's Nicholas School of the Environment.

Eco-labels have multiplied in recent years in response to rising consumer demand for more information about products and increased attention to animal and farmworker welfare, personal health, and the effects of conventional farming on the environment.

"Credible labels can be very helpful in helping people get to what they want to get to and pay more for something they really care about," said Urvashi Rangan, director of consumer safety at Consumer Reports. "The labels are a way to bring the bottom up and force whole industries to improve their practices."

The problem, Rangan and other said, is that few standards, little oversight and a lot of misinformation exist for the growing array of labels.

Some labels, such as the USDA organic certification, have standards set by the federal government to which third-party certifiers must adhere. Some involve non-government standards and third-party certification, and may include site visits from independent auditors who evaluate whether a given farm or company has earned the label.

But other labels have little or no standards, or are certified by unknown organizations or by self-interested industry groups. Many labels lack any oversight.

And the problem is global, because California's products get sold overseas and fruits and vegetables from Europe or Mexico with their own eco-labels make it onto U.S. plates.

The sheer number of labels and the lack of oversight create a credibility problem and risk rendering all labels meaningless and diluting demand for sustainably produced goods, Rangan said.

Daniel Mourad of Fresno, a young professional who likes to cook and often shops for groceries at Whole Foods, said he tends to be wary of judging products just by the labels — though sustainable practices are important to him.

"Labels have really confused the public. Some have good intentions, but I don't know if they're really helpful," Mourad said. "Organic may come from Chile, but what does it mean if it's coming from 6,000 miles away? Some local farmers may not be able to afford a label."

Nation Pays Tribute to Sacrifices of Veterans

BY CHRISTINA HOAG
Associated Press

LOS ANGELES • From sea to shining sea, the nation paid tribute to its members of the armed services Sunday, both with somber traditions such as a Virginia wreath-laying ceremony attended by President Barack Obama to honor those who didn't make it back from active duty, and more light-hearted perks including red-carpet treatment at Las Vegas casinos for those who did.

In California, a long legal case drew to a close as a war memorial cross that had been deemed unconstitutional was being resurrected Sunday in the Mojave desert, capping a landmark case for veterans fighting similar battles on public lands.

Sunday marked the official commemoration of Veterans Day, but the federal holiday will be observed Monday.

President Barack Obama laid the wreath at the Tomb of the Unknowns at Arlington Memorial Cemetery in Virginia and noted that this is the first Veterans Day in a decade with no American troops in Iraq, and that a decade of war in Afghanistan is coming to a close.

In a speech at the Memorial Amphitheater, he said America will never forget the sacrifice made by its veterans and their families.

"No ceremony or parade, no hug or handshake is enough to truly honor that service," the president said, adding that the country must commit every day "to serving you as well as you've served us."

He spoke of the Sept. 11 generation, "who stepped forward when the Towers fell, and in the years since have stepped into history, writing one of the greatest chapters in military service our country has ever known."

In California, a war memorial cross that once stood on a rocky hilltop in a national park before being deemed unconstitutional and ordered removed was being resurrected in the stunningly stark Mojave desert, marking the end of a longstanding legal dispute that had become entangled in patriotism and religion.

Henry Sandoz, who cared for the original cross as part of a promise to a dying World War I veteran, will rededicate a new,

7-foot steel cross on the same hilltop. The site is now in private hands as part of a land swap with the National Park Service that ended the legal battle.

Storm-ravaged New York hosted the country's largest Veterans Day parade with turnout sparse along portions of the 30-block route along Fifth Avenue.

Standing in warm fall sunshine, officials said veterans should be honored and remembered more than just one day a year.

"This nation has a special obligation to take care of you," U.S. Deputy Secretary of Defense Ashton Carter told the crowd.

Several officials also made a note of mentioning Vietnam veterans. This year marks the 50th anniversary of the Vietnam War.

'I Remember Thinking... I'm Going to Die'

On Nov. 15, 1987, 28 of 82 passengers and crew members died when Continental Flight 1713 crashed shortly after takeoff. More than half the people killed in the flight from Denver (below) to Boise lived in or had family in Idaho. The dead included the Gem County prosecutor, two students in the Melba FFA and an adult traveling with them. Survivors have moved on, but the dead's loved ones still struggle with their loss.

BY SVEN BERG
Idaho Statesman

Nov. 15, 1987, 1:03 p.m.

The DC-9 headed to the de-icing pad at Denver's Stapleton International Airport.

Toward the front of the plane, 20-year-old Laura Hobbs settled in between a man and woman who, even seated, towered over her.

About 800 miles away in the Treasure Valley, unsuspecting friends and family members sat down to watch the Seattle Seahawks take on the Green Bay Packers. Dan Popkey's story on the Idaho Statesman's front page that Sunday disputed the "myth of flight safety."

In Emmett, Edna Rood called the Boise Airport and asked when Continental Flight 1713 would arrive. Her son, Gem County Prosecutor Cy Rood, and his wife, Ruth, were on the flight, returning from a conference in Florida.

1:49 p.m.

De-icing was finished. The flight was almost two hours late.

Boise native Ann Nasrallah, 22, was ready for the trip to end. Traveling from Jacksonville, Fla., to Boise with her sons, 6-month-old Peter and 2-year-old Anthony, was hard enough when everything went as planned.

2:14 p.m.

The control tower cleared Flight 1713 for takeoff; 46 seconds later, the airplane sped to 100 knots. It left the ground briefly, reaching a maximum speed of 165 knots.

That was when everything went wrong. The plane lurched to one side, then the other, and came crashing back to earth.

The left wing struck the ground first. In the chaos that followed, the fuselage broke into at least three pieces.

One of the breaks was just behind Hobbs. Her row of seats was jerked loose and thrown from the plane. Upside-down, the seats skidded next to the runway at frightening speed, Hobbs' face a half-inch from the ground.

"I remember thinking, 'Oh my God, just get this over with. I'm going to die,'" she said.

Then the ride ended. The row of seats tipped back and the passengers looked up into the snow falling in the Denver afternoon.

Hobbs thought she was in heaven.

Back in Idaho, TV stations cut into the football broadcast with news of the crash.

Edna Rood turned to her husband: "That was the kids' plane."

Nov. 16, 1987

Nerves had got the best of Tony Nasrallah.

By the time he arrived in Denver, he was in physical pain, stress eating at his psyche. His mind was beginning to warp reality.

People he described as "some Continental executives, I suppose" told him they had a couple Jane Does in the hospital and two young children in the morgue. They asked him if he could identify the boys. They wanted to show him pictures, but he refused.

Patrick Lovelady lies in bed at University Hospital as members of the Denver media crowd in to interview and photograph him Nov. 17, 1987.

"My initial belief was — and maybe this was part of denial — 'Well, the only reason the Lord would let my children die is that I'm going to go to the morgue and I'm going to lay my hands on them and they're going to be healed,'" Nasrallah said. "That's how my brain was trying to process this."

They took him to a room and a glass window, and on the other side a stretcher and two tiny bodies.

"They made me identify them that way," he said. "And I tried to bust through to the other room and I had to be restrained. Just wanted to hold them."

At the hospital, he didn't recognize Ann Nasrallah, who was in a coma. Her face was so badly swollen that hospital staff estimated she was in her 50s. Only her wedding ring could confirm she was his wife.

They said she probably wouldn't make it. He spotted a window and swore he'd jump to his death if she died.

It was Cy Rood's 47th birthday.

His mother had arrived, heartbroken, in Denver the day after the crash. A sign greeted her and her husband. It read "Rood." A woman took them to see their son's and daughter-in-law's bodies.

"I cried. I thought I would never stop crying," Rood said.

Jim told John cigarettes would kill him. John told Jim flying was dangerous.

It was all a joke. Jim Marria was 38, the owner of a Boise lawn-care company, when he boarded Flight 1713. After the crash, he hung on for a couple days in the hospital.

At Jim's funeral, before they spread the dirt, his brother, John, played their joke one last time.

"I put a pack of smokes inside his jacket pocket, told him he could smoke," John Marria said.

Fear wasn't going to ground Hobbs.

She had things to do — things that required her to be in far-flung places.

She boarded a plane to Washington, D.C., for a Future Farmers of America training.

"I bawled all the way there. Tears just streaming down my face," she said. "But I was silent."

1995

In some ways, Tony Nasrallah's recovery took longer than his wife's. Ann's brain and bones healed, and her memory returned.

Tony languished. He was angry. He didn't understand why God took his children.

His way back came through an abandoned movie theater in Jacksonville. He and his wife founded a nonprofit, brought in Christian bands and reached out to young people looking for an alternative to the drugs-and-alcohol scene.

2012

Hobbs is married now. She goes by Laura Johnson. She serves as chief of market development for the Idaho Department of Agriculture. Her neck still bothers her.

Edna Rood is 96 and sharp as a tack. Her house in Emmett has hot pink trim.

John Marria isn't very talkative on the subject of Continental 1713. He said his brother's death "just left a nice little hole in the family."

The Nasrallahs have two sons, ages 20 and 22. When they were younger, they kind of looked like their older brothers. Ann will never stop missing Peter and Anthony, but she's made peace with their loss.

"Tragedy happens all over the world," she said. "It's just there and how we choose to deal with it, that determines the course of the rest of our lives. So I don't feel like I was being picked on or any of us on the flight were being picked on. It's just life."

Indy Residents Describe Blast, Fire that Killed 2

BY RICK CALLAHAN
AND CHARLES WILSON
Associated Press

INDIANAPOLIS • A massive explosion sparked a huge fire and killed two people in an Indianapolis neighborhood where about three dozen homes were damaged or destroyed, authorities said Sunday. The powerful nighttime blast shattered windows, crumpled walls and could be felt at least three miles away.

Aerial photographs of the once-tidy neighborhood of one- and two-story homes showed at least two had been reduced to blackened pits of debris. Other homes had sections gutted by fire or holes in their roofs or exterior walls. Siding dangled from the outside of other homes, and crumpled garage doors hung from houses nearby. Pieces of wood and other building materials littered the street and surrounding properties.

It wasn't clear what caused the blast at about 11 p.m. Saturday. Firefighters responding to a call about a single house fire were surprised by a much bigger blaze. The fire centered on four homes, two that were leveled and two others that only had the frames standing by the time the flames were extinguished, Deputy Chief Kenny Bacon said.

The damage extended two blocks in every direction, he said, and fire officials didn't initially realize the extent of it in the darkness. City and fire officials said Sunday afternoon that about two dozen homes were uninhabitable and would have to be torn down. Several more had severe damage but could be fixed.

Residents described a loud boom that shook their homes, blew out windows and collapsed ceilings. They rushed outside to find a chaotic scene with flames rising against the Indianapolis skyline to the north.

Bryan and Trina McClellan were at home with their 23-year-old son, Eric, when the shock wave from the blast a block away shook their home. It knocked out the windows along one side of their house, and their first instinct was to check on their grandchildren, two toddlers who were in the basement. One held his ears and said, "Loud noise, loud noise."

Eric McClellan said he ran to the scene of the explosion and saw homes flat or nearly so.

"Somebody was trapped inside one of the houses, and the firefighters were trying to get to him. I don't know if he survived," he said, adding that firefighters ordered him to leave the area.

Once the flames were out, firefighters went through the rubble and damaged homes one at a time in case people had been left behind, Fire Lt. Bonnie Hensley said. They used search lights until dawn as they peered into the ruined buildings.

Along with the two people killed, seven people were taken to a hospital with injuries, Bacon said. Everyone else was accounted for, he said.

Four of the seven who were injured minor injuries, fire officials said. They did not provide details on the others or identify those killed.

An investigation was under way, said Bacon, who would not rule a gas leak in or out.

Dan Considine, a spokesman for Citizens Energy, said people usually smell gas when there is a leak, but the utility had not received any calls from people smelling gas in that area.

Alex Pflanzner, who lives near the homes that exploded, said he was asleep when it happened.

"The windows and frames and everything came through the house and my wife started screaming and I didn't know what was going on. And my first thing is, I just, I thought someone was breaking in the house because the alarm was going off. So I just grabbed my gun and started running around the house.

"I saw our front door was open and then I saw the glow of the fire and I walked outside and all the houses were on fire," he said.

Dan Able, a 58-year-old state employee who lives across the street from the two homes that exploded, said his first thought was that a plane had hit his house.

The blast was "a sound I've never heard before, it was so loud," he said. His windows blew out and a bedroom ceiling collapsed on his wife, Jan. He pulled her out, and they went outside.

"Both houses across the street were on fire, basically, just rubble on fire," he said.

The Ables and about 200 other people evacuated from the neighborhood were taken to a nearby school. Some who had been sleeping arrived in their pajamas with pets they scooped up as they fled. Others had to leave their animals behind, and police said later in the day that they were trying to round up those wandering through the area and find their owners.

Most evacuees eventually left the school to stay with relatives, friends or at hotels, but seven or eight remained through the night, sleeping on cots. Some came back Sunday to pick up supplies from tables covered with baby food, wipes, blankets, and other essentials.

Judy's Garland's Oz Dress Fetches $480K in Auction

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (AP) • Judy Garland's blue gingham dress she wore in "The Wizard of Oz" has sold for $480,000.

Auction house Julien's Auctions says the pinafore fetched the highest price of any item during a two-day auction of Hollywood memorabilia that attracted bids from around the world. The auction ended Saturday in Beverly Hills, Calif.

Steve McQueen's racing jacket sold for $50,000, as did a purple skirt worn by Marilyn Monroe while filming "River of No Return" in Canada. Julie Andrews' "Sound of Music" dress brought $38,400.

Sunglasses worn by Jean Reno in "Leon" went for $8,320, while Johnny Depp's shades fetched $3,250.

Bidders also snapped up pieces of royal wedding cakes. Prince William and Kate Middleton's cake sold for $7,500 while Prince Charles and Princess Diana's cake sold for $1,375.

Judge Suspended in Video Beating Returns to Bench

CORPUS CHRISTI, Texas (AP) • A Texas judge shown in a video beating his teenage daughter in 2004 will return to the bench this week after the Texas Supreme Court lifted his suspension.

The justices reinstated Aransas County Court-at-Law Judge William Adams on Tuesday, a year after they suspended him with pay when a video of him beating of his daughter became an Internet sensation.

Adams is scheduled to preside over cases on the regular court docket Wednesday in Rockport, Aransas County District Clerk Pam Heard told the Corpus Christi Caller-Times for an article in Sunday's edition.

However, the Texas Department of Family and Protective Services will no longer present him with cases involving violence against children.

County commissioners voted earlier this year to cut Adams' 2013 salary by 1.6 percent to $144,000. Other elected county officials received a 2 percent cost-of-living increase. Adams doesn't come up for re-election until 2014.

The sheriff's office said it will enhance security the day he returns to work, a move Heard welcomed in light of the intense emotions generated by the family law cases presented in Adams' court.

"Everything is different now in this day and age, and you always have to worry about it," she said.

Adams' older daughter, Hillary Adams, uploaded the 2004 video to YouTube just over a year ago. The video shows William Adams repeatedly whipping his then-16-year-old daughter with a belt for illegally downloading music.

The nearly eight-minute video viewed millions of times shows the judge lashing Hillary in the legs more than a dozen times and growing increasingly irate while she screams and refuses to turn over on a bed to be beaten.

"Lay down or I'll spank you in your (expletive) face," Adams screams as Hillary wails and pleads for him to stop.

Adams wife at the time, Hallie Adams, also is shown striking the then-16-year-old girl. She and her daughter have reconciled since then and have argued that Hillary's father is unfit to sit on the county bench.

Congress Wants Answers on Petraeus Affair

BY ANNE FLAHERTY,

AND ADAM GOLDMAN

WASHINGTON • Members of Congress said Sunday they want to know more details about the FBI investigation that revealed an extramarital affair between ex-CIA Director David Petraeus and his biographer, questioning when the retired general popped up in the FBI inquiry, whether national security was compromised and why they weren't told sooner.

"We received no advanced notice. It was like a lightning bolt," said Democratic Sen. Dianne Feinstein of California, who heads the Senate Intelligence Committee.

The FBI was investigating harassing emails sent by Petraeus biographer and girlfriend Paula Broadwell to a second woman. That probe of Broadwell's emails revealed the affair between Broadwell and Petraeus. The FBI contacted Petraeus and other intelligence officials, and Director of National Intelligence James Clapper asked Petraeus to resign.

A senior U.S. military official identified the second woman as Jill Kelley, 37, who lives in Tampa, Fla., and serves as a social liaison to the military's Joint Special Operations Command. A U.S. official said the coalition countries represented at the military's Central Command in Tampa gave Kelley an appreciation certificate on which she was referred to as an "honorary ambassador" to the coalition, but she has no official status.

The official, speaking on condition of anonymity because he wasn't authorized to discuss the case publicly, said Kelley is known to drop the "honorary" part and refer to herself as an ambassador.

The military officials said Kelley had received harassing emails from Broadwell, which led the FBI to examine her email account and eventually discover her relationship with Petraeus.

A former associate of Petraeus confirmed the target of the emails was Kelley, but said there was no affair between the two, speaking on condition of anonymity to discuss the retired general's private life. The associate, who has been in touch with Petraeus since his resignation, says Kelley and her husband were longtime friends of Petraeus and wife, Holly.

Attempts to reach Kelley were not immediately successful. Broadwell did not return phone calls or emails.

A Surprising Turn in the Idaho Voting Booth

Idaho's 44 counties voted 132 times in all on the three ballot propositions on last week's Idaho ballots, concerning the school-related “Luna laws.” In those 132 contests, counties voted to sustain them 11 times and reject them 121 times. In the case of Prop 3, all 44 counties voted to reject the laws strongly promoted by Idaho's governor, superintendent of public instruction and passed by both houses of the Idaho Legislature.

(Those contrary counties, by the way: Fremont, Jefferson and Owyhee backing Props 1 and 2, and Adams, Boise, Cassia, Lemhi and Madison just on Prop 1.)

That was a stunning result, much the biggest news from this year's Idaho general election, and not even so much the grand total as it was how widespread it was. The big Republican wins on the presidential and congressional side were of course expected, and the Idaho Legislature's remaining exactly as Republican (extremely) was no shock either — at most it might realistically have shifted by a couple of seats or so. Nearly without exception, Idaho elections played exactly to the norm we've seen for two decades running.

The education issues were no given, however. Surveys and anecdotal evidence a year ago and into this spring seemed to suggest the efforts by the Idaho Education Association and others to repeal the laws passed in 2011 would fail. Idaho voters have no strong history of overturning at the polls what their legislators have enacted. And in this case, the enacting was done by the people elected overwhelmingly by Idaho voters.

Someone asked if there are voters who thought these laws originated from Democrats. That's hard to answer conclusively, but the association between the laws and Idaho's overwhelming governing party could not be clearer. Nor is there much dispute that the laws are an extension of recent Idaho state policy on education, teachers, accountability, outsourcing and more. They tie together coherently.

So this question: Is there a disconnect between voters attitudes on candidates (and their parties) on one hand, and public policies on the other? Or, more bluntly: Are there a lot of Idaho voters who really like electing Republicans, but without closely linking that to whatever those Republicans do once in office? I'm not claiming an answer here, but I think the question is fair.

There's been a line of argument for a few years that one tactic Idaho Democrats might usefully try is a series of carefully targeted ballot issues, the thinking being that they might be more successful in winning support for those (not on all Democratic issues, of course, but on some of them) than in electing candidates with the fatal “D” after their names on the ballot.

This election may, in Idaho anyway, help make that case.

A quick note about last week's column, which mentioned the last independent elected to the Idaho Legislature, A.L. Freehafer of Payette County. I said that I didn't know much about him, but it turns out at least one column reader knows quite a bit more. Boise attorney Ken McClure wrote in to say that Freehafer was his great-grandfather, and grandfather of his dad, former U.S. Sen. James McClure. The senator's middle name, Albertus, was taken from the A. in A.L. Freehafer. (I'd always wondered where that came from.)

Now Is the Time to Look Up in the Night Sky

Astronomy is looking up! How fortunate we in the Magic Valley are to have at our fingertips such resources as the College of Southern Idaho, the Herrett Center for Arts and Science, Faulkner Planetarium and the Centennial Observatory. As a member of the Magic Valley Astronomical Society, I take particular joy in attending and volunteering for many of the programs offered. I encourage everyone to visit the Herrett Center in person or via the Internet to learn about all the wonderful things they have to offer.

Now that the election is over we can turn our attention to more interesting pursuits. With our transition back to standard time the night sky is getting darker earlier so now's the time to start looking up! There are many events in the next week or two to help you get started, including our monthly, free public star party on November 10 an hour after dark at the Centennial Observatory. The observatory features a computer controlled, research grade, 24-inch Ritchey-Chretien telescope. Several MVAS members will be present to assist another of Twin Falls' terrific resources, observatory coordinator and doctor of astrophysics Chris Anderson, in presenting the nighttime sky.

Tuesday marks the beginning of this season's twice-monthly Telescope Tuesday viewing sessions at the observatory. Then on Wednesday, Chris Anderson will assuage everyone's end-of-the-world Mayan calendar hysteria in this month's Herrett Forum Lecture. On Thursday evening, NASA astronaut Stephen Bowen gives a presentation at Roper Auditorium and on Friday is Chris's bi-monthly Astronomy Talk on cosmic impacts. As always, admission to any Astronomy Talk includes the observatory viewing session immediately following. I would also like to take this opportunity to thank past MVAS President Terry Wofford and Vice President David Olsen for their many years of service. We look forward to their continued involvement in the future.

Election System Outdated, Needs To Be Changed

Every vote does not count — at least not in Idaho for the presidential election. I was at one of the polling stations in Twin Falls on Election Day and there was a steady stream of people all day. Many people came out to voice their opinions. I was, therefore, rather upset when Mr. Romney had conceded the election by 11 p.m. — before most of the votes from Idaho were counted. And this is even an improvement on those years when one candidate conceded the election before the polls in Idaho had even closed.

I grew up in Canada, where the elections work very differently than they do here in the states. I will be the first to admit that the system up there is not perfect. But I feel that the individuals' votes count for more in Canada than they do here, where the eastern and central states have their say about who will be president, but the West, especially Idaho, doesn't count for much.

I've spoken with several people who feel that, as far as the federal government goes, Idaho hardly exists. Some didn't even vote for the president because they figured their vote wouldn't count anyway.

I understand that when the current system of voting was put in place, there was a reason for it. But I think it is outdated and needs to be changed. How can it be changed? Right now I'm not sure. What I do know is that nothing will change if no one says or doesn't do anything about it.

I believe that every vote should count, regardless of how far west the person lives or how small the state. If nothing else, withhold the voting results until all the votes in the country have been counted. Then we might feel as though our 2 cents were still worth 2 cents. As it is, presidential elections leave us feeling short-changed in many ways.

Parent Looking for Advice on School Enrollment

My son and his family have moved to Rupert to be with me. We tried to enroll my 15-year-old grandson in Minico High School.

The vice principal told me that I would be better off enrolling him in the high school in Heyburn as he was coming from a school that was on semester schedule and not trimester schedule. I would like to know if this is school policy in Idaho or just the vice principal's policy.

I lived in Twin Falls and surrounding cities when my kids were young. I also moved them to California and moved them back, and I have never been told what this vice principal told us.

If anyone can give me any information on this, I would appreciate it.

Opponents of Props. 1, 2 and 3 Need a Grammar Lesson

On Saturday, Nov. 3, while driving through the Pole Line/Blue Lakes intersection, I couldn't help but notice many people on every corner holding signs to vote “no” on Propositions 1, 2 and 3. I am only assuming that most of these people are the teachers of our area's children.

While stopped at the red light, I read one of those signs. It said, “Us teachers & kids ...”

If this is an example of the education our children are receiving, then it is time for a “change” to institute better methods to educate our children. By the way, the grammar on the sign was incorrect; it should have read, “We teachers & kids ...”

Need anymore be said?

US Colleges Look to Foreign Students

BY JUSTIN POPE
Associated Press

ANN ARBOR, Mich. • Want to see how quickly the look and business model of American public universities are changing? Visit a place like Indiana University. Five years ago, there were 87 undergraduates from China on its idyllic, All-American campus in Bloomington. This year: 2,224.

New figures out Monday show international enrollment at U.S. colleges and universities grew nearly 6 percent last year, driven by a 23-percent increase from China, even as total enrollment was leveling out. But perhaps more revealing is where much of the growth is concentrated: big, public land-grant colleges, notably in the Midwest.

The numbers offer a snapshot of the transformation of America's famous heartland public universities in an era of diminished state support. Of the 25 campuses with the most international students, a dozen have increased international enrollment more than 40 percent in just five years, according to data collected by the Institute of International Education. All but one are public, and a striking number come from the Big Ten: Indiana, Purdue, Michigan State, Ohio State and the Universities of Minnesota and Illinois. Indiana's international enrollment now surpasses 6,000, or about 15 percent of the student body, and in Illinois, the flagship Urbana-Champaign campus has nearly 9,000 — second nationally only to the University of Southern California.

To be sure, such ambitious universities value the global vibe and perspectives international students bring to their Midwestern campuses. But there's no doubt what else is driving the trend: International students typically pay full out-of-state tuition and aren't awarded financial aid.

From left, University of Colorado graduate student Gowtham Ramkumar, of Chennai, India, graduate student Fan Zhang, of Beijing, China, and visiting scholar Lichum Wang, of Jing Su Province, China, talk with each other during International coffee hour at the University Memorial Center on the CU campus in Boulder, Colo.

Public universities hit hard by state funding cuts “really are starting to realize the tuition from international students makes it possible for them to continue offering scholarships and financial aid to domestic students,” said Peggy Blumenthal, senior counselor at IIE, the private nonprofit that publishes the annual “Open Doors” study.

Nationally, there were 765,000 foreign students on U.S. campuses last year, with China (158,000) the top source, followed by India, South Korea and Saudi Arabia (the fastest growing thanks to an ambitious scholarship program by the Saudi government). Altogether, IIE calculates they contribute $22.7 billion to the economy, and many stay after graduation. For the first time in a dozen years, there were more foreign undergraduates than graduate students.

Indiana charges in-state students $10,034 for tuition and non-residents $31,484, so the economic appeal is straightforward. Still, out-of-state recruiting — international or domestic — is always sensitive for public universities, fueling charges that kids of in-state taxpayers are denied available slots.

At one level, that's true: About one-third of Indiana students come from outside the state, and for this year it rejected 4,164 in-state applicants. But while conceivably it could enroll more Indiana residents, without the out-of-staters' tuition dollars they would likely have to pay more. Indiana and others figure more of their out-of-staters may as well be international, arguing you can't prepare students for a global economy without exposing them to students from abroad.

David Zaret, Indiana's vice president for international affairs, says the school's interest in international students is educational, not “nakedly financial.” He says IU could fill its out-of-state slots domestically, and points out that unlike some schools IU doesn't charge international students more than domestic non-residents, so there's no extra financial incentive. He also says there's been no particular effort to recruit Chinese students; he credits the extraordinary growth to hundreds of IU alumni now in China spreading the word. In fact, he said in a brief phone conversation from Argentina, “I'd like to see more balance,” with more students from places such as South America and Turkey.

While international students bring revenue, there are also costs, obliging universities to expand services like international advising, English instruction, and even targeted mental health services. There is growing concern about the isolation of international students on campus. Expanding numbers may not help, just making it easier to find a bubble. One recent study found 40 percent of international students reported no close American friends.

Kedao Wang, a Shanghai native and one of about 6,400 overseas students at the University of Michigan, said his experience has been excellent but agrees growing numbers don't solve the isolation problem. Virtually all Chinese students struggle at least somewhat to fit in, due to language and cultural barriers. Wang, who goes by Keven, bought football season tickets all four years and loves the games, but rarely sees fellow Chinese students at Michigan Stadium. When he first arrived he tried not to hang out only with Chinese students, but his social life has since moved in that direction.

Still, he says, the shy students who once studied in the United States on Chinese government scholarships have been replaced by better-off Chinese who pay their own way and arrive more familiar and comfortable with Western culture.

Wang says Chinese students are under no illusions why they're recruited: “It's a market economy. There are people who want this who are willing to pay.” Still, he'd like to see schools award more financial aid to internationals. Michigan non-resident tuition and fees ($41,870 for upperclassmen) are hugely expensive even for prosperous Chinese families, meaning the international students who come here aren't socio-economically diverse (just a tiny handful of U.S. colleges offer international students the same aid as domestic students).

Greece Passes 2013 Austerity Budget

BY DEMETRIS NELLAS
AND ELENA ECATOROS
Associated Press

ATHENS, Greece • Greek lawmakers approved the country's 2013 austerity budget early Monday, an essential step in Greece's efforts to persuade its international creditors to unblock a vital rescue loan installment without which the country will go bankrupt.

The budget passed by a 167-128 vote in the 300-member Parliament. It came days after a separate bill of deep spending cuts and tax hikes for the next two years squeaked through with a narrow majority following severe disagreements among the three parties in the governing coalition.

Prime Minister Antonis Samaras pledged that the spending cuts will be the last Greeks have to endure.

“Just four days ago, we voted the most sweeping reforms ever in Greece,” he said. “The sacrifices (in the earlier bill and the budget) will be the last. Provided, of course, we implement all we have legislated.”

“Greece has done what it was asked to do and now is the time for the creditors to make good on their commitments,” he stressed.

Athens says that with the passage of the two bills, the next loan installment, worth $40 billion, should be disbursed. Without it, the government has said it will run out of cash on Friday, when $6.35 billion worth of treasury bills mature.

Finance ministers from the 17-nation eurozone are meeting in Brussels later Monday, with Greece high on the agenda. However, German Finance Minister Wolfgang Schaueble has indicated it is unlikely that the ministers will decide on the disbursement at that meeting.

“We all ... want to help Greece, but we won't be put under pressure,” Schaueble told the weekly newspaper Welt am Sonntag.

Schaueble said the so-called troika of debt inspectors likely won't deliver their report on Greece's reform program by Monday. The creditors also want to see what the debt inspectors have to say about Greece's debt sustainability.

But speaking minutes before the vote, Samaras pledged the bailout funds would be disbursed “on time.”

Finance Minister Yannis Stournaras also stressed the precariousness of Greece's cash reserves, with the treasury bills due on Friday.

“Without the help of the European Central Bank, the refunding of these treasury bills from the banking system will lead the private sector to complete suffocation,” Stournaras said.

Delays in Power Restoration after Storm Anger Some

NEW YORK (AP) • Utility companies in New York and New Jersey closed in on restoring power Sunday to the last of the 8.5 million who lost it during the superstorm two weeks ago and a subsequent nor'easter, but tens of thousands of homes and businesses were too damaged to receive electricity, and delays and a dearth of updates have angered residents and government officials alike.

Power problems remained unresolved on New York's Long Island, where about 300 people protested Saturday at an office of the beleaguered Long Island Power Authority. About 130,000 of its customers still didn't have power Sunday, LIPA said, not including the homes and businesses that were too damaged.

“Each day you get a different answer from them,” Carrie Baram, 56, said of LIPA. Monday will mark two weeks since she's had power at her home in Baldwin Harbor on Long Island.

She and her husband have gone to her parents' home a few times to shower, and sent their adult children to stay with friends. They had to throw out most of the food in their refrigerator, so they've been eating meals out, which is getting expensive.

“It's dark, it's frightening, and it's freezing,” she said.

Workers were repairing unprecedented storm damage as fast as they can, LIPA said. About 6,400 linemen and 3,700 tree trimmers were at work, compared with 200 linemen on a normal day, said Chief Operating Officer Michael Hervey. He blamed the spotty information updates partly on outdated technology it's in the process of updating.

“I certainly feel the frustration of customers whose power remains out. Our hearts go out to them,” said Hervey.

Phillip Jones of Uniondale described feeling powerless, reduced to hoping each day would be the day the power came back on. Saturday was that day.

“You get a busy signal, busy signal, busy signal” when calling LIPA, he said.

Jones, a parole officer, had to miss two weeks of work. He and his wife and two children had been sleeping in one bed to try to stay warm.

Most of the rest of the power outages were in New Jersey, where residents received a boost from kindred spirits in Louisiana, whose memories of devastating Hurricane Katrina prompted them to send tons of relief items north via rail in a train that arrived Saturday, organizer Donna O'Daniels said.

The donations came alongside relief workers, volunteers and demolition crews who have flocked to the region in recent days to assist with the massive cleanup. For many, the prospect of repairing or rebuilding damaged homes looms as a long-term challenge.

Thousands of displaced New Jersey residents are calling real estate offices, looking to rent a home or apartment while they figure out what to do about their storm-ravaged homes. Others are joining waiting lists at hotels filled with evacuees and out-of-state utility workers.

“A lot of people who don't have a home to go back to, a lot of property destroyed,” Sen. Bob Menendez of New Jersey said Sunday on CNN's “State of the Union.” “So housing is a big issue as we move forward here, to have a place for people to call home for those who don't have other resources or family members to stay with in the interim.”

Vets Preserve Memories of War with Their Own Art

BY SHARON COHEN
Associated Press

CHICAGO • The fallen Iraqi soldier's face is frozen in agony, his eyes and mouth wide open, his arms spread in surrender, his death in the Kuwaiti desert captured for posterity.

The sculpture's title: Angel in the Desert.

Marcus Eriksen was a young Marine sergeant during the Gulf War, riding with a convoy to Kuwait City, when he encountered the Iraqi soldier. It was the first dead body he'd seen. The image was haunting, the experience unforgettable. But it took more than a decade before he started welding the memory into art.

Using a mannequin, an old uniform and plaster cast of his face and hands, Eriksen produced a mold and lined it with 70,000 steel ball bearings. He meticulously recreated the scene: the soldier on his back, knees bent. And swooping curves in the sand that suggested he'd moved his arms like a kid making snow angels.

This, says Eriksen, is not "an anti-war message. It's a reality of war message."

Every November, America honors its veterans with grand parades, speeches and tributes. But more than 350 veterans of Korea, Vietnam, the Gulf War, Iraq and Afghanistan have turned to art to preserve more intimate and enduring memories of war, and more than 2,500 of their works have found a home at Chicago's National Veterans Art Museum.

The modest museum, which focused at first on Vietnam vets but has since expanded, includes paintings, prints, drawings, poetry, photos, sculpture, collages and video. Most of the vets are trained artists who've used their skills to illustrate harrowing life-and-death experiences, explore personal demons and celebrate fallen comrades. This is art that dredges up nightmares for some, and healing for others — Eriksen, among them.

Now 45, he vividly remembers Feb. 24, 1991, when he and about a dozen other Marines stood around staring silently at the dead soldier sprawled 30 feet from his incinerated truck. "No one would cry," he says. "As a Marine, you just suck it up!"

A man with a mustache, a fringe of brown hair and almost cartoon-like huge brown eyes looks out from the canvas. His lips are a barely defined pink oval. His expression is blank.

Title: Thousand Mile Stare.

More than 30 years passed before Helen White painted the picture of the officer she saw at the 67th Evacuation Hospital in Qui Nhon, where she served as an orthopedic nurse. She doesn't remember his name, his face or much else beyond the fact that he'd arrived there after surviving a firefight that had killed almost everyone else. His eyes telegraphed his trauma.

"They were wide open, they were scanning, looking for safety and looking for danger," White says. "If you see the stare, it's not something you forget. ... The memories stay in my mind, even if I don't focus on them. And, of course, there's the mystery — what happened, how did he recover, what impact did it have on his life?"

Some people, she says, are disturbed by her painting; others think the raw image isn't even art.

White, who turns 65 on Tuesday, is retired from nursing and grappling with service-related PTSD, which she says has grown so intense that she has become agoraphobic. "Just going to the grocery store is a challenge," she says. "Sometimes I just stay in my house."

Painting has brought some solace, and also puts her in contact with a world beyond her Missouri home; she follows the works of artists who served in Iraq and Afghanistan and sees a commonality in their creations. "It gets back to the same song, just another verse," she says. "War is war."

"I don't regret being there," White says of Vietnam.

This undated photo provided by artist Marcus Eriksen shows his 'My Angel in the Desert' sculpture. Eriksen was a young Marine sergeant during the Gulf War, riding with a convoy to Kuwait City, when he encountered the Iraqi soldier. It was the first dead body he'd seen.

"There's a lot I wish I could have done. I got off the plane, did what I could. I got back on the plane and came home. Some people didn't. So this artwork is like leaving a sign behind that I was here. It's like a cave painting. I never intended it to be that, but in a way it's a legacy?"

A desperate Vietnamese mother clutches her starving baby on her chest as she flees her village. Looking back, she sees the chaos of her hamlet under attack. A Viet Cong soldier has his rifle pointed at the head of a villager on his knees, praying before he's executed.

Title: The Refugee.
Richard Olsen created the yellow-and-black linocut after returning home following a year's tour as an Army helicopter pilot with the 33rd Transportation Company in Vietnam. He came back in 1963, and the war in faraway Southeast Asia was not yet fully on America's radar, so producing these images was his way of sounding an alarm.

"It was like, 'Hey, you guys, there's a war going on,'" Olsen says. "Why make pictures of flowers? Why not make pictures of war?"

Olsen had always wanted to be an artist growing up in Wisconsin — he earned a master of fine arts degree — and Vietnam allowed him to create works that he says reveal a "little man swept into a world beyond his control."

"I had to tell the story ... the valiance, the heroism, the sacrifices, the personal giving for causes bigger than yourself," says Olsen, now a 76-year-old professional artist living in Georgia. "It occurs on both sides."

Olsen's work — paintings, drawing and prints — is ripe with pain, sacrifice and patriotism.

There's a POW, viewed from behind, on his knees, his hands bound behind his back with his shoe laces, waiting to be killed; an eerie bluish outpost at 4 a.m., illuminated by a searchlight; a tender portrait of his bunk mate, a lieutenant who didn't make it home. And then there's Hill 881, site of one of the bloodiest Marine battles in Vietnam.

The hill painting was created by copying stencil shapes onto a canvas. It repeats the same scene of three soldiers: one climbing a hill, one higher up, tumbling down after being hit, and the third at the top falling backward as he's shot. That final image was inspired by the famous Robert Capa photo of the fallen soldier in the Spanish Civil War.

"I wanted to make it an endless plight ... of the Marines trying to take the hill over and over and over," Olsen says. "There's just an absurd twist to it."

Olsen moved beyond Vietnam to an artistic career that has spanned more than 50 years; he's produced more than 1,000 paintings, many of them abstract. His work has been shown in galleries around the country.

Yet those days when he flew his chopper over the return in 2004, the former debate champ no longer wanted to follow family tradition and become a lawyer. "I was a different person," he says. "I wasn't interested in the same things. I threw away my TV. I wanted to express feelings and emotions."

He enrolled in art classes at the University of Wisconsin-Madison, read the newspapers religiously and became mesmerized by photos of the war in Iraq and Afghanistan. They seemed remote from his experiences, not reflecting the brutality he'd seen.

Over two years, Kyrie, now 31, collected about 1,500 photos from major newspapers.

Kyrie took some of the photos, blew them up into enormous prints and, using a transfer process, altered the images. From a distance, the harsh scene scenes are recognizable, but up close they look like a collection of beautiful crystals.

Friday

It's championship day in the football ranks. Lighthouse Christian heads to Eagle to play Salmon River (5 p.m.) for the 1A-II crown, while Declo plays Firth at Holt Arena (3 p.m.) for the 2A title.

Saturday

It's a light night on the high school schedule, with just three games, but another marquee cross-division girls basketball game happens when Kimberly visits Jerome (7:30 p.m.).

Magic Valley's Athletes of the Week

11-man football: Jason Gillette, Declo. Gillette rushed for 133 yards and two touchdowns in Declo's 36-0 win over Marsing on Saturday, setting a new school single-season record with 29 rushing touchdowns.

8-man football: Logan Bosma, Lighthouse Christian. Bosma had 226 passing yards and 52 rushing yards, accounting for eight TDs (four passing, four rushing) in a 58-14 win over Garden Valley on Saturday.

Girls basketball: Aubrie Vale, Burley. Vale scored 23 points to lead the Bobcats to a comeback 58-43 win over Filer on Friday in the season opener for both teams.

Gooding's Torin Brunson runs the ball as Shelley's Tate Brown (26) hits him during the 3A state semifinals Friday night at Keller Field in Gooding. Visit Magicvalley.com/gallery to see more photos of Friday night's game.

What We Learned: State Semifinals

And then there were two. In the scheme of football glory, that's all that matters. Lighthouse Christian and Declo have earned their chance for football immortality in 2012, while Raft River, Dietrich and Gooding were cast by the wayside in the semifinal round of the state playoffs.

On a surface level, that seems brutally fair. But not all of these teams are in the same position. Some will in hindsight look back at this being a successful season — satisfied isn't exactly the right word when you're so close to playing for a title — while others will view anything less than a championship as coming up short.

We determined where all five of the local semifinalists fell last week.

1. Gooding is legit, and is here to stay. The Senators hit Shelley in the mouth just like head coach Cameron Andersen wanted, and the Russets blinked for more than a moment. For the better part of three quarters Gooding was Shelley's equal — something hardly anyone outside the Gooding locker room believed. A momentum-swinging fourth-down call went against Gooding and the air was out of the sails shortly thereafter, before Shelley added a couple rub-it-in touchdowns late on to make the score look a lot more flattering than the game bore out. Gooding could get another chance: with a core of Cole McGinnis, Torin Brunson and Josh Finley returning, the Senators are in good shape both next year and into the future.

2. Declo is all-in on finally getting this state championship, and it shows. Twice in the last four years prior to this one, Declo got to the championship game. In 2008 the Hornets had their best chance and came up a little short. In '09 they got back expecting to win the title and again lost. It's been a long three years — as long as three can be, at least — but Declo has another chance. And by the looks of it, the Hornets won't be letting this one slip without a fight. Overcoming all sorts of adversity on a road trip to Grangeville, and dominating a Marsing club in a way that in effect sent a message to championship opponent Firth, Declo showed it's all about getting that elusive title, and the players have had a sense of urgency that wasn't on display during an easy regular season. There won't be any panic at Holt Arena on Friday from either side, and Declo has demonstrated it will be ready both for the title and for another crack at the team that dashed its dreams in the quarters last year.

3. Lighthouse Christian is in its own version of dynasty mode. Whether it'll result in a successful defense of their championship this week is still up in the air, but the Lions have made good on their potential after surprising the state by rampaging to the 2011 championship. The core of that team has largely returned, and two of the key players are coming back next year. Lighthouse Christian has shifted quickly from build to reload mode, and for another season or two at the very least the Lions should be tough to dislodge from the shortlist of championship favorites.

4. Raft River can be happy with the work it put in this season. Last week I noted that the Trojans benefited from an easier path to the semifinals than any of the other three teams were given to navigate. I stand by that. But Raft River gave a better account of itself on Friday against Butte County than I expected, at least defensively. It's hard to spin a positive offensive performance from less than 100 yards and no points. But this was a team that was outsized, outpaced and outmatched on paper, and for the better part of the game the Trojans were at least giving Butte County fits. There's still some work to do, namely replacing the seniors who were instrumental in this late-season run, but things are again looking bright in Malta.

5. Dietrich will be kicking itself for a missed opportunity. The Blue Devils hadn't had a state football trophy since 2007, so it's tough to criticize them for falling short of the championship game, especially since they haven't won a title since the Idaho High School Activities Association took over sanctioning the playoffs. But considering Dietrich was unbeaten and thoroughly embarrassed a decent Castleford squad the round before, the 35-12 loss at Salmon River has to go down as a missed opportunity. Many (myself and other District IV coaches included) believed that Dietrich was playing an inferior team to the one it destroyed in the quarterfinals. I have no idea if the Blue Devils played like they thought that, but Salmon River hit them in the mouth early and often, surprising them with the physicality on display. That, combined with the abandonment of the good breaks Dietrich had largely gotten all season, spelled doom for the boys from Lincoln County. The upshot is that many of the important players from this year's squad will be back next year for another run, but my guess is this one will sting for quite a while.

BYU Gets Off to Fast Start, Cruises by Idaho 52-13

PROVO, Utah • BYU gave the thousands of fans who braved bitter cold weather Saturday night good reason to head home early — an insurmountable first-half lead.

Cody Hoffman caught three first-half touchdown passes and freshman running back Jamaal Williams rushed for 104 yards and two TDs, all in the first half, to lead BYU to a 52-13 rout of Idaho.

BYU (6-4) put 28 points on the board in the first quarter and scored on five of its first six possessions en route to a 42-7 lead at the half.

Hoffman finished with nine catches for 108 yards. Riley Nelson was 19 of 31 passing for 236 yards and three TDs for BYU before departing early in the second half.

"It kind of takes the other team's wind when you can score on them right off the bat, so that was our plan going in," Nelson said.

Idaho (1-9) entered the game allowing 42 points and almost 500 yards per game. BYU had 367 yards at the half and finished with 539.

Boise State Ranked No. 22 in Coaches' Poll

ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK • Boise State jumped higher in only one of the four college football polls after solidly defeating Hawaii on Saturday.

The Broncos are now ranked No. 22 in the USA Today coaches' poll. BSU remains unranked in the BCS standings and AP poll. In the Harris poll, they remained at the No. 23 spot.

Oregon is No. 1 in The Associated Press college football poll after Alabama gave up the top spot following a loss to Texas A&M.

The Ducks have 45 of 60 first-place votes. Kansas State is No. 2 with 14 first-place votes. Notre Dame is third and received one first-place vote.

The Crimson Tide, which had been No. 1 for 10 straight weeks, dropped to fourth after a 29-24 loss to the Aggies in Tuscaloosa, Ala., on Saturday.

Texas A&M moved up six spots to No. 9.

The Ducks were last No. 1 in 2010. That was the first season in the history of the program that Oregon reached No. 1, and the Ducks spent seven weeks there and reached the BCS championship game, which they lost to Auburn.

NFL ROUNDUP

Rams, 49ers Play to 24-24 Tie

ASSOCIATED PRESS

SAN FRANCISCO • San Francisco and St. Louis played the NFL's first tie game in four years as kickers from both teams missed overtime field goals in Sunday's 24-24 outcome.

Greg Zuerlein kicked a 53-yarder, but the Rams were penalized 5 yards for delay of game. He tried again from 58 as coach Jeff Fisher played for the win, and missed wide right with 2:42 left in OT.

San Francisco's David Akers missed wide left on a 41-yard attempt that could have sealed it for the 49ers (6-2-1), who lost quarterback Alex Smith to a first-half concussion.

And just when it seemed the 49ers — and Akers' typically reliable left leg — would have one more chance to win it, San Francisco line-backer Patrick Willis was flagged for holding Lance Kendricks on third down. That extended St. Louis' last drive, a costly mistake in a long list of them on an uncharacteristically sloppy day by coach Jim Harbaugh's team.

Akers booted a tying 33-yarder with 3 seconds left in regulation after Sam Bradford threw a 2-yard touchdown pass to Austin Pettis with 1:09 remaining. The Rams are 3-5-1.

SAINTS 31, FALCONS 27

NEW ORLEANS • Jimmy Graham caught seven passes for a career-best 146 yards and two touchdowns, cornerback Jabari Greer made a diving, touchdown-saving pass breakup on a late fourth-down play, and the New Orleans Saints held on to hand the Atlanta Falcons their first loss, 31-27 on Sunday.

Graham and his Atlanta counterpart, veteran tight end Tony Gonzalez, both were superb in a game that showcased all the intensity and drama of one of the NFL's most passionate and longstanding rivalries.

Gonzalez finished with 11 catches for 122 yards and two scores for Atlanta (8-1), and in the process became the first tight end to catch 100 touchdown passes.

Brees threw for 298 yards and three TDs as the Saints (4-5) won for the fourth time in five games, keeping alive hope of getting back into the wild card race after an 0-4 start.

SEAHAWKS 28, JETS 7

SEATTLE • Russell Wilson threw touchdowns of 38 yards to Golden Tate and 31 yards to Sidney Rice, and Seattle sent the Jets to their worst start since 2007.

Wilson was harried for much of the day by the multiple looks from the Jets' defense. But the Seattle rookie responded with key throws, hitting Tate on the opening drive, then connecting with Rice early in the fourth quarter to give Seattle (6-4) a two-score advantage. Tate added a TD pass on a reverse to Rice later in the fourth quarter.

Mark Sanchez struggled in his reunion with Seattle coach Pete Carroll, his former coach at USC. Sanchez threw a costly interception at the goal line in the first half, then fumbled at the Seattle 32.

Muhammad Wilkerson's fumble return for a TD was the only score for New York (3-6).

San Francisco 49ers kicker David Akers (2) watches with Andy Lee (4) as he misses a 33-yard field goal during overtime of an NFL football game against the St. Louis Rams in San Francisco, Sunday. Also pictured is St. Louis Rams cornerback Bradley Fletcher (32). San Francisco and St. Louis tied their game 24-24.

COWBOYS 38, EAGLES 23

PHILADELPHIA • Tony Romo threw a pair of touchdowns, Dwayne Harris had a 78-yard punt return for a score and Brandon Carr returned an interception 47 yards for a TD.

The Cowboys improved to 4-5, and are second in the NFC East, 1½ games behind the New York Giants.

The Eagles (3-6) lost Michael Vick to a concussion after consecutive bruising hits in the second quarter and have lost five straight games under coach Andy Reid for the first time in his 14 seasons.

BRONCOS 36, PANTHERS 14

CHARLOTTE, N.C. • Peyton Manning made sure John Fox's return to Carolina was a successful one, throwing for 301 yards and a touchdown.

Manning threw his 420th touchdown pass to move into a tie for second place on the NFL's all-time list with Dan Marino. He trails only Brett Favre (508).

Manning had plenty of help from his teammates.

Von Miller harassed Cam Newton all day and Trindon Holliday returned a punt 76 yards for a touchdown as the Broncos (6-3) won for the fifth time in six weeks. The Broncos sacked Newton seven times, including once for a safety, and Miller pressured him into an interception. Tony Carter returned 40 yards for a score.

PATRIOTS 37, BILLS 31

FOXBOROUGH, Mass. • Tom Brady threw for two touchdowns, Devin McCourty ended Buffalo's hopes with an interception in the end zone and New England kept Buffalo winless at Gillette Stadium.

The Patriots (6-3) let a 17-3 lead slip to 34-31 with 7:47 left on Ryan Fitzpatrick's 2-yard touchdown pass to Donald Jones. Then the Bills (3-6) held the Patriots to a 27-yard field goal by Stephen Gostkowski with 2:06 remaining.

Buffalo then moved to a second-and-10 at the New England 15 before Fitzpatrick threw the ball right into the hands of McCourty while trying to hit T.J. Graham.

New England is 11-0 against the Bills at Gillette since it opened in 2002 and 20-2 overall in its last 22 games against Buffalo.

VIKINGS 34, LIONS 24

MINNEAPOLIS • Adrian Peterson raced 61 yards for the game-sealing touchdown midway through the fourth quarter, padding his NFL rushing lead with 171 yards on 27 carries for Minnesota.

Peterson had 120 yards in the final 15 minutes, 10½ months after reconstructive surgery on his left knee. Ponder bounced back from a rough game with 221 yards and two touchdowns on 24-for-32 passing for the Vikings (6-4).

Calvin Johnson had 207 yards on 12 catches, including a touchdown that brought the Lions (4-5) a little closer with 1:53 left. But Johnson's lost fumble near midfield on the previous possession put Vikings rookie Blair Walsh in position for his fourth field goal.

BUCCANEERS 34, CHARGERS 24

TAMPA, Fla. • Josh Freeman threw two touchdown passes and the surging Buccaneers scored on a blocked punt and Leonard Johnson's 83-yard interception.

Freeman has thrown for 13 TDs with one interception in his past five games, helping the Bucs (5-4) win four times to climb back over .500 following a 1-3 start.

Rivers threw for 337 yards and three touchdowns for San Diego. He was intercepted twice in the fourth quarter to ruin any chance of the Chargers (4-5) coming from behind.

BENGALS 31, GIANTS 13

CINCINNATI • Andy Dalton threw a career-high four touchdown passes — each to a different receiver — and the Cincinnati Bengals ended their four-game losing streak by beating the New York Giants 31-13 on Sunday.

The Bengals (4-5) took advantage of a fumble and Eli Manning's two interceptions, which set up third-quarter touchdowns. That helped A.J. Green back up his observation there are holes in New York's defense.

The defending Super Bowl champions have a lot of holes everywhere.

The Giants (6-4) head into their bye with back-to-back losses and a lot of issues, especially on offense. Manning had another subpar game, failing to live up to his family legacy of beating the Bengals. Older brother Peyton improved to 8-0 against Cincinnati on the same field a week earlier, leading Denver to a 31-23 win.

The Giants turned it over four times in the second half.

RAVENS 55, RAIDERS 20

BALTIMORE • Joe Flacco threw for 341 yards and three touchdowns, and Baltimore set a club record for points.

The Ravens (7-2) scored on six of their first seven possessions against the struggling Raiders (3-6), who have yielded at least 40 points in two straight games for the first time since 1962. The 55 points tied an Oakland record for points allowed, a mark set in 1961 and matched in 1981.

TITANS 37, DOLPHINS 3

MIAMI • Colin McCarty returned an interception 49 yards for a touchdown, and four takeaways helped Tennessee rout Miami.

The Titans came into the game on pace to set an NFL record for points allowed in a season, but they stymied Miami by intercepting Ryan Tannehill three times and recovering a Reggie Bush fumble to set up a touchdown.

Tennessee (4-6) rebounded from a 51-20 loss a week ago against the Bears that prompted owner Bud Adams to put the organization on notice. Last week the Titans trailed 28-2 after one quarter; this week they led 21-0 after 16 minutes.

For Miami (4-5), the home loss was the most lopsided since 1968.

TEXANS 13, BEARS 6

CHICAGO • Arian Foster finished with 102 yards rushing and a touchdown, and the Houston Texans intercepted Jay Cutler twice before knocking him out of the game with a concussion on their way to a 13-6 victory over the Chicago Bears on Sunday night.

In a showdown between two of the NFL's best teams, the Texans (8-1) beat the Bears (7-2) at their own game. They came away with four takeaways and Tim Dobbins delivered the biggest blow when he drove his helmet into Cutler late in the second quarter.

Grizzlies Beat Heat for 5th Straight Win

ASSOCIATED PRESS

MEMPHIS, Tenn. • Reserve Wayne Ellington had career bests with seven 3-pointers and 25 points, leading the Memphis Grizzlies over the Miami Heat 104-86 on Sunday for their fifth straight win and the best start in franchise history.

The Grizzlies (5-1) snapped Miami's four-game winning streak while topping their 4-1 start in 2000-01 — the franchise's last season in Vancouver. They also extended their own team-record home winning streak to 14 dating to last season.

Rudy Gay added 21 points and Zach Randolph had his sixth double-double with 18 points and 12 rebounds for Memphis. Mike Conley had 18 points and nine assists, while Marc Gasol added 10 rebounds and six assists.

THUNDER 106, CAVALIERS 91

OKLAHOMA CITY • Russell Westbrook banked in a half-court shot during a rough-and-tumble 27-point outing and Kevin Durant added 26 points to lead Oklahoma City over Cleveland.

Kyrie Irving led the Cavs with 20 points, Alonzo Gee had 18 points and Daniel Gibson.

Irving hit back-to-back 3-pointers after Oklahoma City had taken a 63-50 lead midway through the third quarter and his driving layups on consecutive possessions got Cleveland within 67-65 with 3:42 to go in the period.

NETS 82, MAGIC 74

NEW YORK • Brook Lopez scored 20 points, Kris Humphries added 14 points and 21 rebounds, and Brooklyn beat Orlando to complete a home-and-home sweep.

Deron Williams finished with 17 points, seven rebounds, seven assists and a couple key plays down the stretch after what appeared to be another blowout turned into a close game. The Nets beat the Magic 107-68 at Orlando on Friday and jumped out to an early 20-point lead in this one.

But after losing a 22-point lead at home against Minnesota on Monday, Brooklyn almost coughed up another huge cushion, letting Orlando get within five in the final 2 minutes.

CLIPPERS 89, HAWKS 76

LOS ANGELES • Blake Griffin scored 16 points, and Chris Paul had 15 points and eight assists to lead Los Angeles to a win over Atlanta.

Jamal Crawford had 11 points after coming in with a team-high 21.8 average — tops among the league's reserves. Fifth-year center DeAndre Jordan, coming off the first back-to-back 20-point games of his NBA career, finished with eight points. Josh Smith had a team-high 13 points for the Hawks, who shot 41.7 percent from the field in the opener of a four-game road trip. Atlanta also committed 22 turnovers that led to 24 points for the Clippers.

LAKERS 103, KINGS 89

LOS ANGELES • Dwight Howard had 23 points and 18 rebounds, Kobe Bryant scored 20 and the in-transition Los Angeles Lakers continued warming up for a possible return by Phil Jackson with a 103-89 victory over the Sacramento Kings on Sunday night.

Lame-duck interim coach Bernie Bickerstaff called the shots for the second straight game following the firing of Mike Brown on Friday with the team off to a 1-4 start — their worst in 19 years. They throttled Golden State 101-77 at Staples Center several hours after the change. Jason Thompson had 15 points and 10 assists for Sacramento before fouling out with 9:46 left in the game. Jimmer Fredette scored a team-high 18 points, most coming after the outcome was long decided.

Wild Race Blows Championship Open for Keselowski

ASSOCIATED PRESS

AVONDALE, Ariz. • When the fighting stopped, the oil had dried and the last of the wrecked cars had been towed away, Brad Keselowski found himself on the brink of a first Sprint Cup title for himself and team owner Roger Penske.

Only he wasn't in a celebratory mood.

He entered Sunday's race at Phoenix International Raceway trailing five-time champion Jimmie Johnson by seven points and had the better car all day. And moments after Keselowski raced his way into the lead, a blown tire caused Johnson to crash and take his battered car to the garage for repairs.

"I wanted to take the points lead by winning a race and not relying on a failure," Keselowski said.

It was just the beginning of the drama in the most chaotic race of the year.

One many fans will likely call the best of the season.

Perhaps for all the wrong reasons, and that's what had Keselowski so upset.

"I'm more just disappointed in the quality of racing that we saw," he said. "I thought it was absolutely ridiculous, and I was ashamed to be a part of it."

Kevin Harvick snapped a 44-race losing streak by beating Kyle Busch on a pair of late restarts, and crossing the finish line ahead of a melee that broke out because NASCAR failed to throw a final caution flag for an oil spill on the track.

It was the final exclamation point in a sequence that included Jeff Gordon slowing his car on the track to wait for Clint Bowyer so he could intentionally wreck him as retaliation for several weeks of on-track contact between the two.

It led to a full brawl inside the garage between the crews for the two drivers, with Bowyer sprinting from his car to join the fracas. He was held back by NASCAR officials from entering Gordon's hauler.

to go downfield more," BYU linebacker Brandon Ogletree said.

With the win, BYU becomes bowl eligible and will face a team from the Mountain West Conference in the Poinsettia Bowl on Dec. 20 in San Diego. It will mark BYU's eighth straight bowl appearance.

While compiling 252 yards on the ground and 285 through the air, BYU took advantage of excellent field position and three Idaho turnovers. Of the Cougars' first seven possessions, their worst starting field position was their own 36.

"We've been pretty good this year at stopping teams from running, and that's kind of forcing teams to try clean up a lot of things," Idaho interim coach Jason Gesser said. "We need to get better in a lot of areas, just sheer fundamentals. You know it's glaring out there."

The Cougars held the Vandals to 61 rushing yards on 23 carries and 273 total yards. BYU is allowing less than 95 rushing yards per game.

"We've been pretty good this year at stopping teams from running, and that's kind of forcing teams to try

WHAT WILL YOUR MORTGAGE PAYMENT BE?

magicvalley.com/homes

DEAR ABBY: In a few months, my husband's 10-year-old twin grandchildren are coming to live with us while their mother serves her time for felony DUI. My husband and I are in our 60s and have never met them before.

DEAR ABBY
Jeanne Phillips

We have tried to avoid contact with their mother because the encounters were generally unpleasant. She alternated between being bitter and hateful, and desperately calling for financial help because she's a single mother with four children. She alienated her own mother and it looked like the younger children would wind up with child protective services if we didn't step up and offer a temporary home with us.

The new circumstances will require the four of us to make some big adjustments, but we believe it will enrich our lives, too. My dilemma is what do we tell the kids when they inevitably ask why we have been absent in their lives? I can't bring myself to tell them the truth about the way we feel.

— CAUGHT OFF
GUARD GRANDMA

DEAR CAUGHT OFF GUARD: Having lived with their mother, your husband's grandchildren probably understand very well the reason for her felony DUI. Be honest and explain to them that you weren't around because their mother didn't make you feel welcome. Then assure them that you have always loved them, that you are here for them now and will be in the future if they would like you to be.

DEAR ABBY: I'm 43 and have been hosting Thanksgiving for 19 years. My mother turned it over to me when I bought my first house because she was tired of doing it.

We always entertain the same group of 12 relatives. I have mentioned doing something different, but no one has enough room or the desire. If I didn't host it, I'm afraid they'd be hurt and have nowhere to go.

How do I break it to them that I am burned out? I would just like to go out to eat and see a movie. Please help.

— EXHAUSTED
HOSSESS

DEAR EXHAUSTED: Ten days before Thanksgiving is a little late to cancel what has become an annual celebration. However, it would be the perfect time to announce that after 20 years of hosting the gathering, you are burned out. Therefore, those who have enough room should share the responsibility and alternate with you, or all of you should make your own arrangements.

DEAR ABBY: A few years ago, my husband and I decided that when our nieces and nephews turned 18 we would stop giving Christmas gifts. That decision has worked out fine — until my husband's nieces and nephews began turning 18. Now it has become an issue with his side of the family, particularly his mother. She has made it clear through emails that we "have" to buy them gifts.

I don't know what to do. I don't want to start a war over gift-giving, but on the other hand, if we buy for his family, we have to buy for mine. We don't have a lot of disposable income. Please help us find a way to get through this.

— GRINCHED
IN LAS VEGAS

DEAR GRINCHED: Emails are a wonderful form of communication, but when it comes to a discussion that involves emotion, it's time to use the old-fashioned telephone. You and your husband must call his mother and explain that buying gifts for the nieces and nephews on both sides of the family has become too much for you, which is why you have drawn the line at age 18. The "kids" are old enough to understand the gifts don't come from Santa. And so, for that matter, is your mother-in-law. Shame on her for pressuring you.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE®

Bobby Wolff

"I'll think them every one an Antony,
And say 'Aha! you're caught.'"
— William Shakespeare

How would you have dealt with the club situation in this deal, which arose during the 2007 European Youth Teams Championships, held in Jesolo, Italy?

Defending against four spades, West led the heart four. South won with the bare king, cashed the spade ace and king, then got off play with a trump. Back on lead with the spade queen, West deviously returned the club queen, which was ducked all around. West continued with the club nine, and declarer, deciding that West's initial club holding was Q-J-9, ducked again. East's jack won, and the club return to the ace defeated the contract.

Great play by West, but should declarer have fallen for it? Probably not. Think back to the opening lead. If West had held both the heart queen and jack, the queen surely would have been the opening lead. The actual lead of the four suggests that it is away from one honor, not two. So, if West had held such an attractive sequence of club honors — the one South was playing him for — wouldn't that have been the more obvious choice of attack?

At another table, also against four spades, West led a low diamond. Declarer inserted the jack — just in case — and East fell from grace and covered. South won, cashed his top trumps, then cashed his other top diamond, overtook the heart king with dummy's ace, and discarded a club on the diamond 10. When later in the play declarer led a club to the king, that brought in 11 tricks.

ANSWER: Don't be a hero. Yes, the club ace or a low club could be right; but equally, you may need to set up diamond tricks before they are discarded on declarer's clubs, and nothing in the auction tells you that you need to be desperate. So simply lead a low diamond and try to find your partner at home. When in doubt, avoid the unilateral play; it helps to keep partner's blood pressure stable.

IF NOVEMBER 12 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: Some people develop prestigious reputations and others build business sense, but you will be blessed with both during the next eight to 10 weeks. You are at your best in group settings in December, and your business sense peaks in January when you are more competitive than usual. Dream big, because by next spring, even your wildest dreams can come true. Aim for making important changes in May when you will be guaranteed peace and tranquility with any romantic relationships as well as success with your career aspirations.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Maintain your cool under fire. You have enormous energy, but others could be touchy if they feel herded or directed like cattle. You can get much accomplished if you are sensitive to hidden animosity.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Good ideas will go to waste if you don't share them with the world. Don't bite your tongue if you hold the answer to a problem. Show some initiative, but avoid confrontations or emotional issues.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Charity begins at home. You may be more generous than your friends because you can visualize future possibilities. At the same time, you mustn't waste resources or go out of your way to foot the bills.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): You will need more than an apple and a smile to become the teacher's pet. Use your business smarts to impress the boss. To receive recognition, you must prove your honest dedication and commitment.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Before you put your best foot forward, be sure your socks match. Muddled thinking might prevail. Take a rain check on crucial meetings, decisions and contracts - and reschedule for later in the week.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Important decisions should be postponed until diligent research answers questions. Study business strategies or emulate those with financial expertise, but delay putting new ideas into action.
