IDAHO INMATES CLAIM GANGS RUN PRISON

BY REBECCA BOONE
Associated Press

BOISE • A gang war that appears to have taken over parts of an Idaho private prison is spilling into the federal courts, with some inmates contending prison officials are ceding control to gang leaders in an effort to save money on staffing.

Eight inmates at the Idaho Correctional Center are suing the Corrections Corporation of America, contending the company is working with a few powerful prison gangs to control the facility south of Boise.

The lawsuit, filed Friday in Boise's U.S. District Court, paints the prison as a place where correctional officers work in fear of angering inmate gang members and where housing supervisors ask permission from gang leaders before moving anyone new into an empty cell. The inmates also contend that CCA officials use gang violence and the threat of gang violence as an "inexpensive device to gain control over the inmate population," according to the lawsuit, and that housing gang members together allows the company to use fewer guards, reducing payroll costs.

How Do You Retire a U.S. FLAG?

TIMES-NEWS

TWIN FALLS • Federal law specifies few details about how a U.S. flag should be retired.

The U.S. Flag Code says: "The flag, when it is in such condition that it is no longer a fitting emblem for display, should be destroyed in a dignified way, preferably by burning."

As such, while burning is the primary method of retiring an American flag, different ceremonies have evolved over time.

The Veterans of Foreign Wars, for example, suggest the following:

- "1. The flag should be folded in its customary manner.
- "2. It is important that the fire be fairly large and of sufficient intensity to ensure complete burning of the flag.

- "3. Place the flag on the fire.
- "4. The individual(s) can come to attention, salute the flag, recite the Pledge of Allegiance and have a brief period of silent reflection.
- "5. After the flag is completely consumed, the fire should then be safely extinguished and the ashes buried.
- "6. Please make sure you are conforming to local/state fire codes or ordinances."

This June, a retirement ceremony for 7,000 flags in Chicago featured members of each branch of the armed forces cutting stars from the field of a flag, according to television coverage of the ceremony.

A 2008 report by the Congressional Research Service concluded, "It would seem that any procedure which is in good taste and shows no disrespect to the flag would be appropriate."

Teachers to Get Merit Pay by Dec. 15

BY JULIE WOOTTON
jwootton@magicvalley.com

TWIN FALLS • Even though voters overturned the Students Come First laws, teachers who earned merit pay during the last school year can expect a payment by Dec. 15.

The Idaho State Department of Education announced Tuesday that 499 schools around the state qualified to receive pay-for-performance money.

A total of $38 million will go out Thursday to school districts and public charter schools. From there, it will be passed out to teachers. About 8 of every 10 educators earned bonuses, according to Tuesday's announcement.

In a legal opinion made public Monday, Deputy Attorney General Andrew Snook wrote that there doesn't appear to be any legal obstacle to school districts distributing bonuses to educators.

"It is recommended that this ministerial responsibility be completed as efficiently as practical," he wrote.

U.S. Stocks Fall in Uneven Trading; Home Depot Soars

NEW YORK • U.S. stocks closed lower after uneven trading Tuesday as fears about the “fiscal cliff” and Greece tipped major indexes between gains and losses. A surge in Home Depot’s stock prevented a steeper drop for the Dow Jones industrial average.

The Dow closed down closed down 58.90 points, or 0.5 percent, at 12,756.18. It would have been lower without support from Home Depot, whose stock jumped 3.6 percent after the big-box retailer beat expectations for its fiscal third-quarter earnings.

Investigation Continues into Monday Collision

BY ALISON GENE SMITH

HAGERMAN • Gooding County sheriff’s deputies are still investigating a Monday crash that injured a pedestrian in Hagerman.

Gooding County Sheriff Shaun Gough said Kenneth Pearce, 86, was struck by a vehicle driven by Joseph Marsh, 40, on State Street near its intersection with Bruneau Avenue in Hagerman.

Gough said Pearce was struck by the left side of the vehicle near the center of State Street while he was crossing the road. Emergency dispatchers got the call about the crash at about 4:13 p.m. Scanner traffic indicated Pearce was bleeding from his head at the scene. Dispatchers said emergency personnel called for an air ambulance, but it was unable to fly due to weather conditions.

Pearce was transported via ground ambulance to St. Luke’s Magic Valley Medical Center. He was not a patient at St. Luke’s as of Tuesday afternoon.

Gough said no citations have been issued, but the crash is still under investigation.

A shot rang out — kaboom! — and Paul Biagiotti brought down a chukar partridge with his shotgun. Argus, an English pointer, fetched the bird and brought it to his master. The rest of the covey escaped to lower lands just as Paul said they would.

The Valley Made Sure to Vote

On Election Day last week, strong voter turnout was a theme around the region.

I arrived at a polling place at the Jerome Recreation District about 30 minutes before the polls closed. There were a few people voting at the last minute.

For poll workers, it was a long day. Veronica Lierman — a senior judge for the Canyonside precinct — arrived at the polling location at 6:45 a.m.

“It was a very busy morning,” she said. At the Jerome School District polling place, two people were registering to vote right around the time the polls closed. As the final few voters marked their ballots,

‘The Best Part of My Week’

Last week I observed a great example of community mentoring as teen parents participated in a collaborative cooking program.

Welch

The program teaches the teens how to prepare nutritious foods for their children. Twice a month, students from Cassia High School and Mount Harrison High School meet after school at the University of Idaho extension office in Cassia County for the class.

CHS Principal Lauri Heward, extension office employees and members of the Soroptimists International Burley Chapter coached the teens, cuddled their babies and played with their toddlers as the teens worked on skills that will certainly impact their children’s lives.

The validation the teens received from the experience became obvious as one student approached Heward to exchange a hug as she prepared to leave. “It’s the best part of my week,” Heward said.

A Long Life and Stories to Tell

One of the best parts of being a reporter is the unexpected stories we run into on a daily basis.

Smith

Last week as we wound down from Election Day and geared up for Veterans Day events, I was assigned to cover the Veterans Day breakfast at Murtaugh High School. On Thursday morning, photographer Ashley Smith and I headed out to Murtaugh as the sun came up and arrived just in time for the flag ceremony that started the morning’s events.

As each veteran introduced himself or herself and shared when they served, one man’s story piqued our interest. Paul Kelly, an 87-year-old Murtaugh resident, described to the students how his B-24 Liberator was shot down over Germany during World War II. He then spent a year in a German prisoner of war camp, all when he was just 19 years old.

After the ceremony, Ashley and I got the chance to spend some time chatting with Paul and his wife Peggy. I asked Paul about how his family found out he was missing. He said the Red Cross told his family he was in a prison camp sometime during the summer of 1944, but for one terrifying month he was listed as missing in action.

Paul’s best friend, a tail gunner, died when their plane was shot down. His friend was from Tennessee and Paul is originally from West Virginia. “We were a couple of hillbillies,” he said. Then on May 2, 1945, Paul’s camp was liberated.

After the war, Paul went to college through the GI Bill. He studied geology, then political science for his master’s degree, and finally arrived in Idaho where he worked for Idaho State University. Eventually he and Peggy moved to Murtaugh, where she taught school.

Over the years, Paul said he’s kept in touch with his friends from the service and he even went skydiving while he was in his 70s. “He’s still not afraid to jump out of a plane,” Peggy said.

Quiet And Mostly Cloudy End to the Week

Meteorologist

Our weather remains fairly uneventful through the remainder of the week.

Temperatures will also return to near normal mid-November levels of around 50 degrees in the afternoon. A couple of storm systems coming in off the Pacific could bring showers and some snow showers by this weekend.

A few rain showers are possible this morning with mostly cloudy skies for southern Idaho. Don’t worry about snow this time around, as the snow level will be around 5,000 feet. Temperatures will be more seasonal with afternoon temperatures near 50 degrees.

Mostly sunny skies will return for Thursday with afternoon temperatures in the low 50s. We might see more clouds on Friday, but the weather will remain mostly dry and fair.

By the weekend, our weather pattern becomes more active. There is a chance of showers late Saturday and continuing into Sunday and Monday before another larger system tries to work into the region by the early part of next week.

Alleged Filer Robber Arraigned on Charges

BY ALISON GENE SMITH
alismith@magicvalley.com

TWIN FALLS • The man who is accused of stealing a car from a woman in Twin Falls, then threatening a gas station clerk in Filer, was in court Monday.

Aymere Gebremedhin, 24, was arraigned on two counts of robbery, one count of attempted robbery and one count of eluding. He is being held at the Twin Falls County Jail on $250,000 bond.

According to court documents, Twin Falls police officers were dispatched to the Phillips 66 gas station at 240 Addison Ave., for a call about a stolen car at about 6:20 a.m., Sunday. At the gas station, the woman who owned the car said a man, later identified as Gebremedhin, walked up to her and punched her in the face, causing her to fall to the ground. The woman said, Gebremedhin then got in her vehicle, a gold 1996 Chevrolet Blazer, and took off.

At about 6:38 a.m., Filer police responded to a robbery in progress at the Twin Stop Texaco station in Filer. According to the police report, Gebremedhin threatened to kill the clerk if he did not give her $50 in gas and food. He also allegedly attempted to take a car from a woman who was parked at the station — climbing on the top of her car and repeatedly trying to open her locked doors.

As police arrived, Gebremedhin allegedly took off driving westbound on Idaho Highway 30. According to the report, Gebremedhin reached speeds of 85 mph and was driving without his lights on. Gebremedhin stopped at 1900 East and Highway 30, where Twin Falls County sheriff's deputies arrested him.

Couple Accused of Holding Fake Cancer Fundraiser to Face Trial

TIMES-NEWS

TWIN FALLS • A Buhl woman accused along with her husband of holding a fraudulent cancer fundraiser will face a January trial.

Lisa Dawn Holley, 44, was arraigned in Twin Falls County 5th District Court Tuesday on two counts of grand theft by deception.

Holley and her husband, Michael Wayne Holley, 54, are accused of falsely claiming their daughter was being treated for cancer, then raising funds for her treatment. He also faces two counts of grand theft by deception.

Lisa Holley's trial is scheduled for Jan. 15. A trial is set for Dec. 26 for Michael Holley, with alternate dates on Jan. 3 and Jan. 8.

In October, prosecutors charged Lisa Holley with an additional count of grand theft by deception. Prosecutors say Holley falsely claimed she was pregnant with triplets and received more than $1,000 in cash and goods from church members in Buhl. Holley told the Times-News she has documentation of the pregnancy from her doctor, which she will produce in court. A preliminary hearing in that case is set for Nov. 30.

Prison

“The complaint alleges that CCA fosters and develops criminal gangs,” attorney Wyatt Johnson, who along with T.J. Angstman represents the inmates, said in a statement. “Ideally, the lawsuit should force this to come to an end.”

The inmates point to investigative reports from the Idaho Department of Correction that suggest gangs like the Aryan Knights and the Severely Violent Criminals were able to wrest control from staff members after prison officials began housing members of the same gangs together in some cellblocks to reduce violent clashes.

The power shift meant a prison staffer had to negotiate the placement of new inmates with gang leaders, according to the department reports, and that prison guards were afraid to enforce certain rules.

Corrections Corporation of America, the nation's largest private prison company, says its top priority is the safety and security of its prisons, employees and inmates.

“We take all allegations seriously and act swiftly if our standards have not been met,” spokesman Steve Owen said in a statement. “... At all times, we are held to the highest standards of accountability and transparency by our government partners, and expect to be.”

Owen said the Nashville, Tenn.-based company has operated the Idaho prison in partnership with the state correction department for more than a decade, providing housing and rehabilitation for “some of the state's most challenging inmate populations.”

Both Idaho Gov. C.L. “Butch” Otter's spokesman Jon Hanian and state Corrections Department spokesman Jeff Ray declined to comment because of the litigation, though neither the state nor the department is named as a defendant. The Idaho Correctional Center is the largest prison in the state, with an operating capacity of 2,080 beds.

The inmates also cite security footage of a violent gang attack carried out in May, which they say shows CCA staffers failed to follow basic safety and security policies.

The video, filed with the lawsuit, shows six members of the Aryan Knights prison gang jumping out of a janitor supply closet to attack seven members of a rival gang. The Aryan Knights in the video are armed with knives and other weapons made out of toothbrushes, drawer pulls and other materials.

Just one guard appears to be nearby at the time, and that guard tries to pull away one inmate who is repeatedly stabbing another. Other guards soon arrive and jump in to separate the offenders, deploying pepper spray and ordering the inmates to the ground.

After the attack the state Department of Correction completed a series of investigative reports, which showed CCA staffers weren't following basic safety and security policies at the prison.

The reports said prison staff failed to take such basic steps as making sure other inmates didn't go near the weapons used in the fight. As a result, the chain of evidence wasn't preserved, according to the reports, and it's unclear if any of the inmates were ever criminally charged.

The reports also include details from an interview with CCA's unit manager at the prison, Norma Rodriguez, who told department investigators that the gang members essentially were running some of the cellblocks.

Teen's 'Turkey Time' Project Brings in Flock of Donations

BY LAURIE WELCH
lwelch@magicvalley.com

BURLEY • Tiny in stature but big at heart, 13-year-old Ashlynn Carver has netted more than 180 turkeys to be given away to less-fortunate families this Thanksgiving.

Hundreds of people in Mini-Cassia will now sit down to a roast turkey feast after the determined Burley Junior High School student learned that others may go without on Thanksgiving Day.

Ashlynn hatched the idea of holding the “Turkey Time” drive after visiting the Helping Hands Mission a few weeks ago with her service learning class.

After she learned that the number of donated turkeys this year wouldn't likely meet the need in the community, she sprang into action.

“She came to us and said ‘We have a problem. The mission isn't going to have enough turkeys to give away,’” said Ashlynn's mother, Toni Carver. “Her father (David Carver) and I told her we would donate a couple of turkeys and she said, ‘No, no, they need 100,’” Carver said.

The Carvers told their daughter to pray about the issue. Ashlynn then decided a month ago that she needed to do what she could to lessen the gap.

She made flyers to post

Ashlynn Carver, 13, looks over some of the turkeys stored at the Chadwick Sports Grille Monday. Carver's 'Turkey Time' project has raised more than 180 turkeys that will be delivered in food boxes at the Helping Hands Mission next week.

around town and visited businesses asking for donations. Other businesses pitched in to help store the turkeys in their freezers.

“It didn't really bother me to go around asking for donations for this,” Ashlynn said.

“We thought maybe she'd get 60 or 70 turkeys, but it has exploded,” Toni Carver said.

After reaching her initial goal of 100, Ashlynn decided to keep the drive going and by Monday had nearly doubled the donations to 182 turkeys.

“What she's done is very impressive,” said Cody Thornton, who owns the Helping Hands Mission. “This means we'll have plenty of turkeys to give away.”

The mission will give out the turkeys in its weekly food boxes at 1 p.m. next Monday and Tuesday.

Toni Carver said a medical condition causes growth problems for Ash-lynn, but it hasn't dampened her ability to envision big endeavors for herself.

“She's tiny, about the size of a 10-year-old girl,” Carver said. “But we always told her that she can't use that for a crutch, and she didn't ever have any doubt that she could do this.”

“It's been a lesson for me as well. A lot of times people think they shouldn't get involved because what difference can one person make? She's shown me that I need to get involved more.”

Want to Help?

Anyone wishing to donate turkeys to Ashlynn Carver's 'Turkey Time' project can call First Baptist Church in Burley, 878-7613, or David Carver, 431-8691.

The turkeys will be donated to Helping Hands Mission in Burley and given out to underprivileged families on Monday and Tuesday.

Pay

Merit Pay Law Could Return

Even though voters decided “no” on Proposition 2 — the law that covered pay-for-performance — a merit pay system could return in the future.

At a press conference Monday, public schools chief Tom Luna told reporters he hopes to resurrect a portion of his Students Come First package during the 2013 legislative session, including merit pay.

“We're not going to go to the Legislature and propose legislation that is so controversial that it's going to drive the same kind of emotion you've seen in the past couple years,” Luna said. “But there are things that we all agree are good parts of the legislation.”

Twin Falls Superintendent Wiley Dobbs said he felt his school district created a strong plan for how merit pay would be awarded locally based on student achievement.

But he said the state's portion of the system had flaws.

“There were areas that we felt needed to be worked on,” Dobbs said.

For instance, he said he's not aware of any alternative schools around the state where teachers will receive pay-for-performance money.

But he said some of the best teachers work at those schools.

“I'm quite sure that if we go on with pay-for-performance in the state, some tweaks to the law are going to be needed,” Dodds said.

Darin Gonzales, a math teacher at Kimberly High School, said if legislators look at bringing back a merit pay system, they need to start by talking with teachers.

Once the Students Come First system was discussed at the school level, Gonzales said the holes were apparent.

“The saddest part of this whole thing is that there are some very good teachers out there who will not receive bonuses,” he said.

In Kimberly, all three schools will receive pay-for-performance money.

Schools Call System Divisive

Under the system voters just turned down, educators had to meet both state and local goals in order to receive merit pay.

State benchmarks were based on student performance and growth on the Idaho Standards Achievement Tests.

Local benchmarks were determined by each school district and ranged from student attendance to graduation rates.

The combination appears to have left many teachers and administrators frustrated.

Gooding Superintendent Heather Williams said she thinks the state's model doesn't adequately address the contributions teachers make.

All of the teachers in the Gooding School District earned some portion of extra pay under their local plan.

But teachers at only one school — Gooding Middle School — will actually receive merit pay. That's because it's the only school that earned state shares.

Meanwhile, teachers at Gooding High School have made “adequate yearly progress” under the federal No Child Left Behind Act for five years. And the school ranked the highest out of Gooding's schools on the state's new five-star rating system.

“The pay for performance system is divisive to our district as a whole when we have worked hard to have our teachers collaborate and work together on progress as a preK-12 system,” Williams wrote in an email to the Times-News.

Williams said it's frustrating to hear that “the most effective” or “all great” teachers will receive financial rewards.

In Jerome, the only school that will receive merit pay is Jerome Middle School.

Middle school teacher Jolene Dockstader said she's glad pay-for-performance money is being distributed, but it won't bring teacher salaries back up to where they were four years ago.

And middle school teachers in Jerome are disappointed, she said, that other teachers in the school district won't receive merit pay.

“There are very fine teachers in our district that could be held up to any measuring stick and yet they will not be receiving (pay-

Historian Wants to Identify Workers in Internment Photos

BY LAURIE WELCH

RUPERT • An Oregon historian is looking for people who can help identify people in photos taken at Idaho agricultural labor camps. Minidoka County Historical Museum curator Ginger Cooper said Morgen Young, a historian who works with the Historic Preservation League of Oregon and the National Council on Public History, sent the museum a compact disc containing 153 photographs taken by Russell Lee in 1942. Lee, a photographer for the Farm Security Administration, documented four FSA mobile Japanese internment camps in Oregon and Idaho. Young has applied for a National Parks Service grant to develop an exhibit titled "The Farm Security Administration Documentation of Japanese Agricultural Labor Internment Camps in the Pacific Northwest," which will debut in 2014. Cooper said the Minidoka museum plans to host the exhibit for three months. Young hopes to gain information on the identities of people in the photos from surviving residents of the camps and their family members. The information will be added to Lee's captions for the photos. According to documents, due to a shortage of farm labor in 1942, President Franklin D. Roosevelt approved a farm labor plan Lee arrived later that year to document the camp, its residents and agricultural labor. Cooper said many Japanese Americans were taken from the coastal areas during

Few Details Are Available in Sunday's Fatal Crash

TIMES-NEWS

HOLLISTER • No more details are available yet regarding a Twin Falls man who died Sunday in a single-vehicle rollover. Justin Sanderson, 39, of Twin Falls, was northbound on U.S. Highway 93 north of Hollister when he rolled his 1999 Chevrolet Monte Carlo, according to Idaho State Police. ISP responded to the crash at about 7:05 a.m. Sunday. According to ISP, Sanderson was ejected from the car and was pronounced dead at the scene of the crash. It's still not clear what led the car to roll. No additional information about the crash was available from ISP on Tuesday.

Jerome Names New City Fire Chief

TIMES-NEWS

JEROME • Jack Krill is the city of Jerome's new fire chief, officials announced Tuesday. He was promoted to the position Nov. 1. "Jerome is a great community and I look forward to working with staff to continue the progress we've been making," Krill said in a statement. City officials were unable to provide information about Krill's salary by deadline Tuesday. Krill — who was hired as Jerome's deputy fire chief in September 2011 — was named acting fire chief in October after Mike Hatfield resigned. He has been in the fire service since 1991 and previously worked as a chief fire officer for departments in Alaska and Idaho. He's a graduate of the National Fire Academy's Executive Fire Officer Program. Krill has a bachelor's degree in fire protection and safety engineering technology, as well as a master's degree in fire and emergency management from Oklahoma State University. In addition to working for the city of Jerome, Krill provides consultation services to companies and other fire departments.

Man Escapes in Handcuffs, Caught During Routine Traffic Stop

alismith@magicvalley.com

TWIN FALLS • A man who allegedly led Twin Falls police on a foot and vehicle pursuit last week, escaping while still in handcuffs, was arrested early Monday morning. Twin Falls Police Lt. Craig Stotts said Luis Enrique Gonzalez was arrested at 2:23 a.m. Monday during a traffic stop on three warrants including possession of a controlled substance, possession of stolen property and failure to purchase a driver's license. He was stopped near the intersection of Addison Avenue and Washington Street, Stotts said. Gonzalez was arraigned on the possession of stolen property charge Tuesday in Twin Falls County 5th District Court. According to an affidavit in support of arrest, on Sept. 9 Gonzalez allegedly stole $4,720 in jewelry from a home near 4000 North and 2300 East near Filer. On Thursday, Stotts said officers had information

Gonzalez was at the Weston Inn at 952 Blue Lakes Blvd. N. in Twin Falls. Officers arrived at the Weston Inn at about 3:15 p.m. and started to arrest Gonzalez. "A person with him took off running eastbound," Stotts said. One officer was able to pursue and detain the other man, but Gonzalez escaped with handcuffs still attached to one wrist, Stotts said. Stotts said Gonzalez will face additional charges for evading police.

No Bond Reduction for Admitted Robber

BY ALISON GENE SMITH
alismith@magicvalley.com

TWIN FALLS • The bond for a Twin Falls man who pleaded guilty to a Buhl home invasion robbery remains unchanged after a bond reduction hearing Tuesday morning. In August, the bond for John Valenciano Jr., was set at $500,000 for charges related home invasion robbery. Valenciano; Dylan Contreras, 20; Luis Sotelo, 20; and a 16-year-old boy were all arrested on charges relating to a robbery at the home of Leo and Judy Ray in Buhl. The Rays own Fish Processors of Idaho. Valenciano, 19, pleaded guilty earlier this month to charges of robbery and kidnapping. As part of a plea deal several other charges were dropped by prosecutors. At Tuesday's hearing, Valenciano's attorney, Tim Williams, said Valenciano was requesting his bond be reset to $20,000. Williams said Valenciano wished to see his family and his new baby before he is sentenced on the robbery case in January. Williams said the reduced bond was still a significant amount for Valenciano's family to pay, and Valenciano offered to wear a GPS monitor and check in with the court daily. Rosemary Emory, a Twin Falls County deputy prosecutor, said Valenciano's crimes and a prior charge of failing to appear in court show he is an extremely high risk to society. She noted Valenciano was finally arrested after seeking medical attention for a gunshot wound — and allegedly had methamphetamine on him at the time. Emory also said the Rays would be fearful if Valenciano was released. Twin Falls County 5th District Judge Richard Bevan said he understood why Valenciano wanted to see his family, but had to consider the seriousness of the crimes in the case and denied the request. Valenciano is scheduled to be sentenced Jan. 2, 2013.

Yellowstone-area Grizzly Population Growing

CASPER, Wyo. (AP) • The grizzly bear population in the greater Yellowstone area is growing despite an increase in the number of bear deaths. The Casper Star-Tribune reported Tuesday that there are an estimated 608 grizzlies living in northwestern Wyoming neighboring parts of Idaho and Utah. That's up from an estimated 593 grizzlies last year. As of Monday, 50 grizzlies have died in the greater Yellowstone ecosystem, up from 44 last year. Mark Bruscano of the Wyoming Game and Fish Department said that bear deaths are up because the growing population has expanded its range, creating more potential for conflicts. The death rate is considered sustainable. Six recent grizzly deaths in Wyoming are being investigated as human-caused. Few details have been released but they come at a time when grizzly-hunter encounters are most frequent.

14 DUIs?

Four weeks ago, we posted a short 80-word Associated Press story on magicvalley.com titled “Idaho man sentenced for 14th DUI.” The story was published online, but did not make the print version of the Times-News.

The story has not been commented on, no one has called to question the believability of the headline and it generally appears to have been either lost or ignored in the midst of late-fall fires, a presidential election and general pre-occupation with Propositions 1, 2, 3 and our local legislative and CSI board races.

That’s a shame. For more than 30 years I’ve worked at newspapers during which time there have been sad headlines, life-changing headlines and tragic headlines. But this is the first time that I’ve thought, “This is a headline that should never, ever be allowed.” The circumstances that would conspire to allow an Idaho resident to receive 14 DUIs are unconscionable.

The Idaho statutes that deal with Driving Under the Influence begin with 18-8004, the statutes dealing with punishments for DUI are in 18-8005 and those dealing with “Aggravated Driving” — that is DUIs that result in “great bodily harm, permanent disability or permanent disfigurement” — are found in 18-8006. Vehicular manslaughter statutes are in 18-4006(3).

The Boise man sentenced to 15 years to life in prison for a 14th DUI was likely able to do so because none of his DUIs resulted in great bodily harm or death of another. In other words, in 14 separate instances of this man driving while intoxicated no one else was ever in the wrong place at the wrong time.

Sarah wasn’t so lucky. Sarah was a 17-year-old junior who attended high school with my daughter back in Wisconsin eight years ago. Someone less than a close friend but far more than an acquaintance, Sarah and my daughter played in band and jazz groups together, attended conferences together and, despite being a year apart in school, shared some common dreams and ambitions.

We last visited with Sarah on a beautiful late June night in 2004. We were at a community event along the banks of the Mississippi River, and my daughter was talking with Sarah about the college orientation she had just attended at the University of Wisconsin. Sarah, who had just completed her junior year in high school, couldn’t wait to start college and become a Badger in Madison a year later.

Three days later, she was killed by 49-year-old drunk driver. A drunk driver who spent an entire afternoon at another community event and who had a blood alcohol level of .27. A drunk driver who had driven drunk before, and who had gotten caught before. A drunk driver who up until that Saturday evening apparently never really thought twice about it.

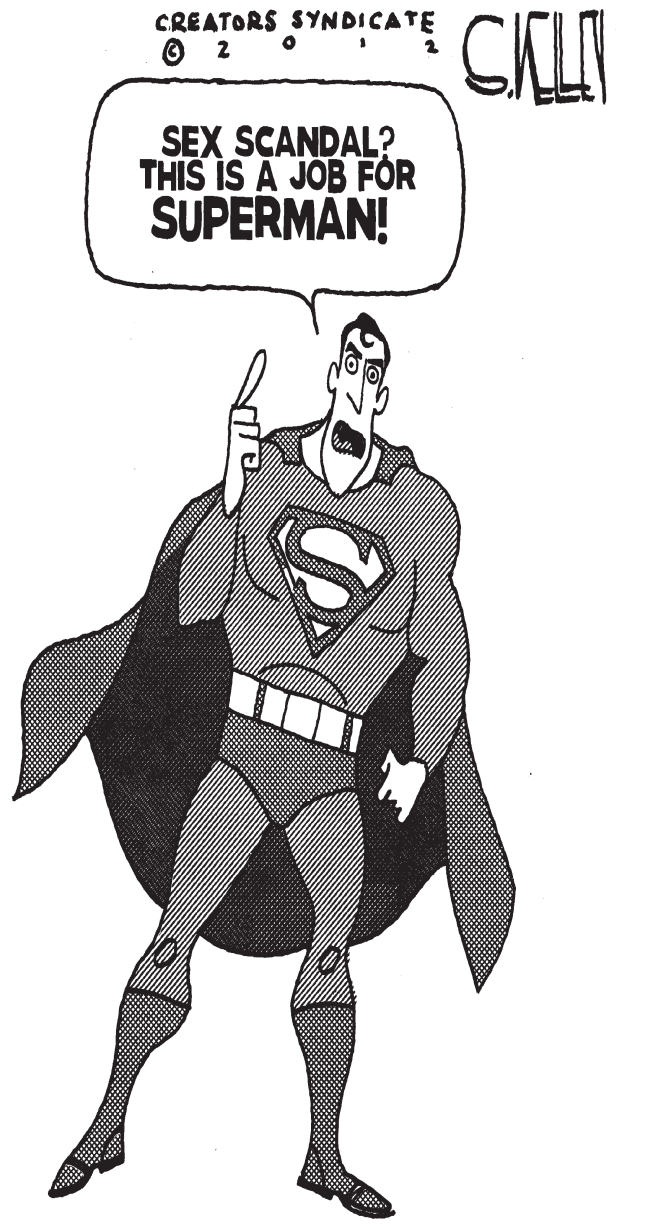

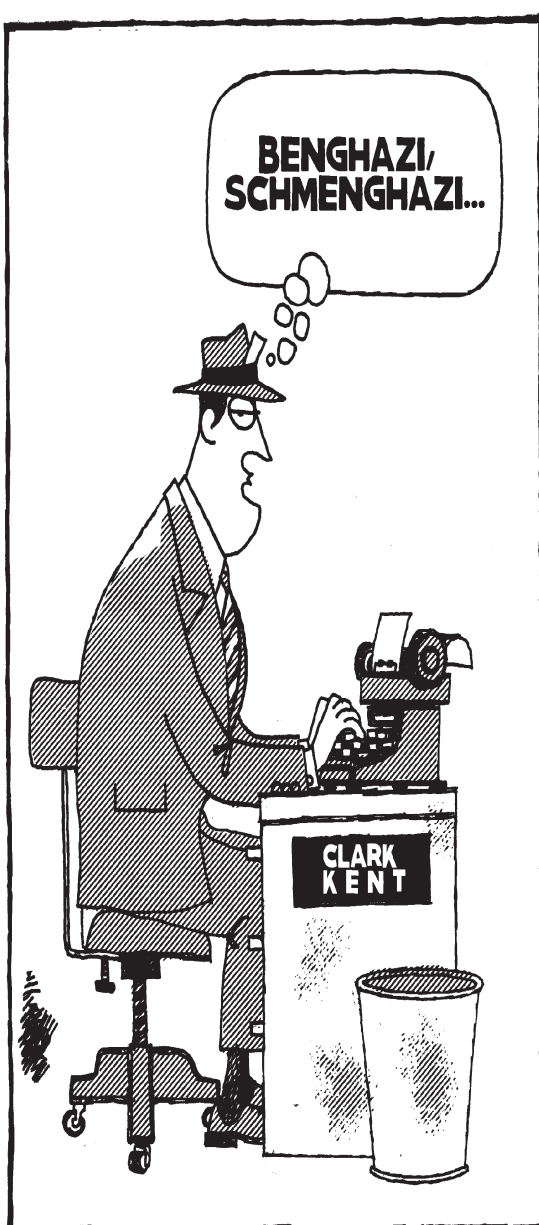

By the grace of God, the Boise man sentenced for his 14th DUI never killed anyone. But the fact that the state of Idaho has presented him with 14 different opportunities is simply wrong. Whatever statutes 18-8004 through 18-8006 currently do, it’s nowhere near enough.

When the Legislature reconvenes in Boise in January they’ll have the opportunity to discuss and disagree on a lot of topics that have become partisan. To the best of my knowledge, statutes relating to Driving Under the Influence are apolitical and non-partisan. Or should be.

When taking a break from health insurance exchanges, personal property taxes, any new ideas on education funding and budgets, I’d ask our legislators to do more than take a look at current DUI laws — I’d ask them to toughen those laws. A lot.

The headline “Idaho man sentenced for 14th DUI” should never, ever be able to appear in my newspaper.

Every Tuesday, we publish a column called “Curious Mind” in response to reader questions. This week, Curious Mind discussed, “The Legend of Balanced Rock.” An online reader had this to say:

Catmarie: “Kimberly, thank you for addressing this question. You’ve set me straight about the dynamite and pick axe. I wish this photo had been in the newspaper article. You’ve provided great information about the geology that I never knew. I’ve lived here nine years now and have never seen a story about Balanced Rock. Thanks for providing it.”

There was an outpouring from online readers in response to the obituary for Hannah Elysia Lock:

grievingmom: “My niece, Morgan knew Hannah from school and I have seen pictures and heard stories from her. She was a very special person, and it sounds like she touched many lives in such a positive way. Just wanted to say to the family that my heartbreaks for you! I have also lost a child. I know that does not mean I know how you feel. However, I do know some of the pain. I am so very sorry for your loss and I will be in my thoughts and prayers. God bless you all and keep you strong!”

Dawn28: “Aaron and Becky, Mike, Kirsten, Nick and I are so sorry for your loss. Hannah was a beautiful glowing light and we will all miss her. Her kindness to everyone was a blessing to those who knew her and those she touched.

You are in our thoughts and prayers. If you need anything please do not hesitate to call on us. Dawn Fernandez and Family”

Sarah1221: “Aaron and Becky! This is so beautiful! In the short time I got to know Hannah, I could see this in her! I am praying for your family every day! Sarah Spafford”

Thank You for the Opportunity to Perform

This coming weekend, Nov. 16, 17 and 18, I will be playing my saxophone in a Thanksgiving Musical at the Twin Falls Nazarene Church.

Show Respect to the Man Who We Elected President

I am “83 year young,” a veteran who served in the Air Force during the Korean Conflict.

I love this great nation we live in. We, as a country, may not be perfect, but who in this world is?

We just had a presidential election, and we elected “our” president as the majority of our voters have expressed themselves. It is “our” responsibility to “respect our president,” “respect our country” and “respect our flag.”

In the Nov. 10 edition of the Times-News on the opinion page, there was a cartoon drawing of our president wearing tennis shoes, holding a basketball with a smile on his face, being told, “OK, I’ll give you another four years to finish your homework, but no further excuses.”

Question: Is this how we show respect for our president and/or our country?

Answer: I hardly think so. It is more like absolute disrespect!

Times-News Only Covering One Person in Wendy’s Robberies

My question is pretty simple. Why have you chosen to only report what is happening to one person that is involved with the Wendy’s in Jerome and Twin Falls and Applebee’s robberies?

Branden Galbreath was not the only person who was present at these crimes and yet, he’s the only one that you continue to write about; the only one whose picture you continue to smear all over the paper.

Taylor was sentenced, went to a rider program and came back to another court date, but you didn’t say anything about that or the fact that he flopped the program and was sentenced to 2½ years in prison, but you were quick to put all the stuff up about Mr. Galbreath. You never said anything about Nick having a court date and getting sentenced for his part of the crime spree or the fact that he showed up late and didn’t have any remorse for what he did or the fact that he told at least two different stories in court that I heard personally.

I just want an answer as to why you chose only one person to smear all over the news.

TIMES-NEWS

BROOKHAVEN, N.Y. • Idaho Power crews who traveled to New York to help with the recovery from Hurricane Sandy have been released and are traveling home.

The two six-man crews — including four workers from the Magic Valley — were released late Monday, according to a Tuesday announcement by Idaho Power. The Idaho utility was one of many across the country who sent workers to help the Long Island Power Authority (LIPA); a number of other crews were also released Monday night.

The Idaho workers arrived on the East Coast on Thursday and were stationed near Brookhaven, N.Y. Late last week, Regional Operations Manager Bo Hanchey described fighting through cold temperatures, high winds and 6 to 8 inches of snow left by last week's followup storm.

Power was expected to be restored late Tuesday to all locations where it was safe for workers to perform repairs, according to Idaho Power. LIPA and its contractors will reconnect other severely damaged homes.

Meanwhile, the Idaho Power crews should be home by Friday.

"We got cheers in the streets and high-fives when we got people's power back on," Construction Manager Matt Smith said in Tuesday's announcement. "It was very gratifying."

Idaho Snowboarder is Preparing for Takeoff

BY MARLOWE HEREFORD

Post Register

IDAHO FALLS • The past six months have made 2012 one of the most memorable years of Jessica Jenson's young life.

In May, the effort from fighting through a concussion, torn meniscus and bruised heel in her third season as a professional slopestyle snowboarder paid off when she was named to the U.S. Snowboarding team by coach Bill Enos.

Since then, she has trained in Mt. Hood, Ore., and Waterville, N.H., and got to spend a rare three months at home in Rigby doing everything from mountain biking to boating with friends and family. Her biography was also added to the U.S. Snowboarding site and she is working on adding a double wildcat to her repertoire.

The next 16 months, however, could give the 2009 Rigby High School graduate her biggest adventure yet.

Jenson left Friday to re-join her teammates and prepare for her inaugural U.S. Snowboarding season, which is less than a month away. Her schedule is impressive and might include an ESPN appearance as she is tabbed to compete in the Winter Dew Tour in December in Breckenridge, Colo., the Winter X Games in January in Aspen, Colo., and a World Cup stop in Sochi, Russia, in February, one year out from the 2014 Olympics.

For as much as reality has sunk in for the 21-year-old who now trains alongside talents such as X Games gold medalist Chas Guldemond and 2010 Olympic bronze medalist Scotty Lago, she is even more ecstatic for what's ahead.

"I can't even explain how excited I am," Jenson said. "It's all coming together. My dream has always been to go to Dew Tour and X Games. I have another dream to make it to the Olympics. It's all coming true."

Jenson said the U.S. team has been a perfect fit. The other snowboarders share her commitment and enthusiasm, and working with Enos has allowed her to progress in ways she never thought possible.

"He's definitely one of the best," Jenson said. "He likes to go back to the basics and just perfect everything. He's really big on style and form. I've noticed a big difference just over the summer."

This year has been just as exciting for her parents, Kevin and Natalie and both of her sisters, all of whom have noticed positive changes in Jenson since she joined the team. One recent example is Jenson's recovery from minor knee surgery in August.

"The U.S. team has been such a blessing in our lives," Natalie Jenson said. "It's amazing because she's always trying to find things to help her. She's been researching how to stay focused to build her self-esteem and build confidence and not worry about her competition."

For as much as her life has changed this year, Jenson has also remained grounded despite being ranked 26th in the Ticket to Ride overall slopestyle world rankings.

"I'm still humble and I still hang out with the same people I hung out with in school," she said. "When I'm back home, everything is still the same."

Bear in Montana Mauling Avoids Death, Can't Be Moved

BILLINGS, Mont. (AP) • Montana officials said Tuesday they will not challenge a wildlife company's refusal to kill a captive 500-pound brown bear involved in the fatal mauling of an animal trainer.

State officials requested last week that the bear be killed immediately, but do not appear to have the legal authority to order its death, Fish and Wildlife Administrator Dave Risley said.

But the bear nicknamed Yosemite is still considered a potential threat to public safety. It's likely to be permanently barred from leaving the property of Animals of Montana, Risley said.

The company charges fees to film and photograph animals onsite at its Bozeman-area property and elsewhere.

"It had blood on it," Risley said of Yosemite after the Nov. 4 mauling of 24-year-old Benjamin Cloutier. "Was it a participant? Was it a bystander? We don't have any way of telling ... We're not going to ask again (for the bear to be killed) but we probably will never let that bear off-site again."

A second bear, known as Griz, was shot on the scene after Cloutier, originally of York Haven, Penn., was killed while cleaning the bears' pen with the animals inside.

General Petraeus Scandal Widens

WASHINGTON (AP) • The sex scandal that felled CIA Director David Petraeus widened Tuesday to ensnare the top U.S. commander in Afghanistan, Gen. John Allen, in a sudden public drama involving a Tampa socialite, a jealous rival, a twin sister in a messy custody dispute and flirty emails.

The improbable story — by turns tragic and silly — could have major consequences, unfolding at a critical time in the Afghan war effort and just as President Barack Obama was hoping for a smooth transition in his national security team.

Obama put a hold on the nomination of Afghan war chief Allen to become the next commander of U.S. European Command as well as the NATO supreme allied commander in Europe after investigators uncovered 20,000-plus pages of documents and emails that involved Allen and Tampa socialite Jill Kelley. Some of the material was characterized as “flirtatious.”

Allen, 58, insisted he’d done nothing wrong and worked to save his imperiled career.

Kelley, 37, who had worked herself into the center of the military social scene in Florida without having any official role, emerged as a central figure in the still-unfolding story that has embroiled two of the nation’s most influential and respected military leaders.

Known as a close friend of retired Gen. Petraeus, Kelley triggered the FBI investigation that led to his downfall as CIA director when she complained about getting anonymous, harassing emails. They turned out to have been written by Petraeus’ mistress, Paula Broadwell, who apparently was jealous of the attention the general paid to Kelley. Petraeus acknowledged the affair and resigned Friday.

In the course of looking into that situation, federal investigators came across what a Pentagon official called “inappropriate communications” between

Allen and Kelley, both of them married.

According to one senior U.S. official, the emails between Allen and Kelley were not sexually explicit or seductive but included pet names such as “sweet heart” or “dear.” The official said that while much of the communication — including some from Allen to Kelley — is relatively innocuous, some could be construed as unprofessional and would cause a reasonable person to take notice.

That official, as well as others who described the investigation, requested anonymity on grounds that they were not authorized to discuss the situation publicly.

The FBI decided to turn over the Allen information to the military once the bureau recognized it contained no evidence of a federal crime, according to a federal law enforcement official, who was not authorized to discuss the matter on the record and demanded anonymity. Adultery, however, is a crime under the Uniform Code of Military Justice.

Allen was not suspended from his military position, even though his nomination for promotion is on hold. The White House will soon be deciding how many troops will remain in Afghanistan — and for what purposes — after the U.S.-led combat operation ends in 2014. Allen provided his recommendations to the White House and is key to those discussions.

Still more subplots in the story emerged Tuesday with news that both Allen and Petraeus wrote letters last September on behalf of Jill Kelley’s twin sister, Natalie Khawam, in a messy custody dispute. In 2011, a judge had denied Khawam custody of her 3-year-old son, saying she “appears to lack any appreciation or respect for the importance of honesty and integrity in her interactions with her family, employers and others with whom she comes in contact.”

Mouaz al-Khatib poses on Sunday after he was elected president of the newly formed Syrian National Coalition for Opposition and Revolutionary Forces, in Doha, Qatar.

NEW OPPOSITION HEAD GIVES RENEWED HOPE

BEIRUT (AP) • Syria’s political opposition has struggled to prove its relevance amid the civil war under a leadership largely made up of academics and exiled politicians. With its relaunch as a new organization, it has taken a different tack: choosing as its head a popular Muslim cleric who preaches sectarian unity and can fire up a crowd.

The selection of a moderate religious figure, Mouaz al-Khatib, to head the Syrian National Coalition for Opposition and Revolutionary Forces is also an attempt to counter the growing influence of Islamic extremists in the rebellion against President Bashar Assad.

While lacking in political experience, the 52-year-old preacher-turned-activist is described by Syrians as a man of the people — a modest, unifying figure who commands wide respect among the country’s various opposition groups and rebels.

A Sunni Muslim former preacher at Damascus’ historic Ummayyad Mosque, al-Khatib warned against the militarization of the Syrian uprising and the pitfalls of sectarianism very early in the conflict.

“My brothers, we lived all our lives, Sunnis, Shiites, Alawites and Druse as a one-hearted community, and with us lived our dear brothers who follow Jesus peace be upon him,” he told a crowd of supporters in a Damascus suburb in April 2011, only one month into the uprising.

Twenty months into the conflict — as Syria sinks deeper in a civil war with increasingly deadly sectarian overtones — it is this message of unity and moderation that many inside and outside the country are hoping the new leaders can help convey.

Kari Bales, third from right, stands next to attorney Lance Rosen, third from left, as she listens to her sister, Stephanie Tandberg, second from right, read a statement to reporters on Tuesday, outside the building housing a military courtroom on Joint Base Lewis McChord in Washington state, where a preliminary hearing ended Tuesday for Kari’s husband, U.S. Army Staff Sgt. Robert Bales.

Preliminary Hearing Ends in Afghan Massacre Case

JOINT BASE LEWIS-McCHORD, Wash. (AP) • Army prosecutors on Tuesday asked an investigative officer to recommend a death penalty court-martial for a staff sergeant accused of killing 16 Afghan villagers in a predawn rampage, saying that Staff Sgt. Robert Bales committed “heinous and despicable crimes.”

Prosecutors made their closing arguments after a week of testimony in the preliminary hearing. Prosecutors say Bales, 39, slipped away from his remote base at Camp Belambay in southern Afghanistan to attack two villages early on March 11. Among the dead were nine children.

The slayings drew such angry protests that the U.S. temporarily halted combat operations in Afghanistan, and it was three weeks before American investigators could reach the crime scenes.

“Terrible, terrible things happened,” said prosecutor, Maj. Rob Stelle. “That is clear.” Stelle cited statements Bales made after he was apprehended, saying that they demonstrated “a clear memory of what he had done, and consciousness of wrong-doing.”

Several soldiers testified that Bales returned to the base alone just before dawn, covered in blood, and that he made incriminating statements such as, “I thought I was doing the right thing.”

An attorney for Bales argued there’s not enough information to move forward with the court-martial. “There are a number of questions that have not been answered so far in this investigation,” attorney Emma Scanlan told the investigating officer overseeing the preliminary hearing.

If a court-martial takes place, it will be held at Joint Base Lewis-McChord, the Washington state base south of Seattle, and witnesses will be flown in from Afghanistan.

The military hasn’t executed a service member since 1961, and none of the six men on death row at Fort Leavenworth, Kan., today were convicted for atrocities against foreign civilians. All of their crimes involved the killing of U.S. civilians or fellow service members.

In the most recent high-profile case at Joint Base Lewis-McChord before Bales, the Army did not seek a death penalty court-martial against five soldiers accused of killing three Afghan civilians for sport. In that case, the ringleader was sentenced to life in prison with possibility of parole.

Bales faces 16 counts of premeditated murder and six counts of attempted murder. The preliminary hearing, which began Nov. 5, included nighttime sessions on Friday, Saturday and Sunday for the convenience of the Afghan witnesses. Bales did not testify.

The witnesses included a 7-year-old girl, who described how she hid behind her father when a gunman came to their village that night, how the stranger fired, and how her father died, cursing in pain and anger.

None of the Afghan witnesses were able to identify Bales as the shooter, but other evidence, including tests of the blood on his clothes, implicated him, according to testimony from a DNA expert.

After the hearing concluded, Scanlan spoke with reporters, saying that in addition to questions about Bales’ state of mind, there are still questions of whether there were more people involved.

Some Dems: Drive Over ‘Fiscal Cliff,’ then Bargain

WASHINGTON (AP) • Some Democrats are pushing an unorthodox idea for coping with the “fiscal cliff”: Let the government go over, temporarily at least, to give their party more bargaining leverage for changes later on.

The idea has plenty of skeptics, and the White House regards it frostily. But it illustrates the wide range of early negotiating positions being staked out by Republicans and Democrats as lawmakers gathered Tuesday for their first postelection talks on how to avoid the looming package of steep tax hikes and program cuts.

Just as brazen, in the eyes of many Democrats, is the GOP leaders’ continued insistence on protecting tax cuts for the rich. President Barack Obama just won re-election, campaigning on a vow to end those breaks.

The “fiscal cliff” deadline comes in seven weeks. One provision: Unless Congress acts, all Bush-era tax cuts would expire, raising 2013 tax bills for most Americans. Obama wants to end those tax cuts only for households making more than $250,000 a year. Republicans insist on no tax rate increases anywhere. If the “fiscal cliff” takes effect, congressional Republicans would feel pressure to give ground in several areas to achieve their top goal: restoring tax cuts for as many people as possible. That’s why Sen. Patty Murray, D-Wash., and other Democrats have said their party’s leaders should seriously consider letting the Jan. 1 deadline pass and then negotiate with Republicans under different circumstances.

It’s questionable whether Obama and Congress’ Democratic leaders would let the government go over the fiscal cliff. Numerous financial analysts say the event would frighten markets, alarm employers and probably trigger a new recession.

Israel Considers Assassinations

JERUSALEM (AP) • Israel is considering re-summing its contentious practice of assassinating militant leaders in the Hamas-ruled Gaza Strip in an effort to halt intensified rocket attacks on Israel's south, according to defense officials.

That Israel might renew a practice that brought it harsh international censure is evidence of the tight spot Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu is in. With Israeli elections two months away, rocket barrages from Gaza are disrupting the lives of 1 million residents of southern Israel, pressuring the government to come up with an effective response.

In the latest flare-up, Gaza militants have fired more than 100 rockets at Israel in recent days, triggering retaliatory Israeli airstrikes that have killed six people in Gaza.

Some Israelis are demanding a harsh military move, perhaps a repeat of Israel's bruising incursion into Gaza four years ago. Others believe Israel should target Hamas leaders, a method it used to kill dozens of militants nearly a decade ago.

Advocates say targeted killings are an effective deterrent without the complications associated with a ground operation, chiefly civilian and Israeli troop casualties. Proponents argue they also prevent future attacks by removing their masterminds.

Critics say they invite retaliation by militants.

Khalid Ali-M Aldawsari, 22, right, is escorted from the federal courthouse in Amarillo, Texas.

Man Gets Life in Prison for Bomb Plot

AMARILLO, Texas (AP) • A former Texas college student from Saudi Arabia was sentenced to life in prison Tuesday for trying to make a bomb for use in a religious attack, possibly targeting a former U.S. president.

Khalid Ali-M Aldawsari was sentenced in Amarillo, where jurors convicted him in June of attempting to use a weapon of mass destruction. Prosecutors say he had collected bomb-making material in his apartment and researched possible targets, including the Dallas home of former President George W. Bush. A handwritten journal found in his apartment included notes that he believed it was time for "jihad," a Muslim term for holy war.

Although the 22-year-old Aldawsari apologized Tuesday for "these bad actions," Judge Donald E. Walter said the evidence against him was overwhelming. Walter acknowledged he was conflicted due to Aldawsari's youth and signs that outside influences had led him astray.

"But the bottom line is that but by the grace of God there would be dead Americans," Walter said. "You would have done it. In every step, it was you all alone.

Aldawsari stood silently in shackles as the sentence was read.

The formerly clean-shaven, close-cropped man now had a full beard and long hair, and appeared to have lost a lot of weight.

There is no parole in the federal system for defendants convicted of recent crimes.

Aldawsari came to the U.S. legally in 2008 to study chemical engineering. He was arrested in Lubbock in February 2011, after federal agents searched his apartment and found explosive chemicals, wiring, a hazmat suit and clocks, along with videos showing how to make the chemical explosive TNP.

Investigators say Aldawsari's goal was to carry out jihad. His attorneys claimed he was a harmless failure who never came close to attacking anyone.

FBI bomb experts say the amounts of chemicals he had would have yielded almost 15 pounds of explosive — about the same amount used per bomb in the 2005 London subway attacks. He also tried to order phenol, a chemical that can be used to make explosives.

Court records show that his emails and journal contained the explosive's recipe.

Prosecutors said other targets he researched included nuclear power plants and the homes of three former soldiers who were stationed at Abu Ghraib prison.

Congress Protects Airlines from Emissions Tax

WASHINGTON (AP) • Congress on Tuesday stepped in to protect U.S. airlines from having to pay into a European Union program to cut emissions that its critics say is unilateral and illegal.

House action to pass the bill came a day after the EU, facing protests from numerous countries and a possible trade war, said it was postponing enforcement for non-EU airlines.

Lawmakers, while welcoming the EU action, said it was still necessary for Congress to ensure that U.S. airlines won't get taxed by the EU in the future. "The EU's announcement still does not recognize that its system is illegal and that a global solution, not just one deemed acceptable by the EU, must be the path forward," said Sen. John Thune, R-S.Dak., sponsor of the bill in the Senate with Sen. Claire McCaskill, D-Mo.

"We want a long-term solution" to the emissions problem, said House Transportation Committee Chairman John Mica, R-Fla. "But we will not allow the United States to be held hostage."

The House originally passed the bill a year ago. The modified Senate bill passed in September, and Monday's voice vote by the House to accept the Senate bill sends it to President Barack Obama for his signature.

Two barges head north on the Mississippi River on Monday past St. Louis.

Corps Plans Missouri River Reduction

ST. LOUIS (AP) • The Army Corps of Engineers will proceed with plans to reduce the flow from an upper Missouri River reservoir despite concerns that it will worsen low-water problems on the Mississippi River, corps officials told The Associated Press Tuesday.

The corps expects to cut the flow from the Gavins Point Dam in South Dakota to 12,000 cubic feet per second from 17,000 cubic feet per second starting around Nov. 23 as a drought-related conservation measure.

Missouri Gov. Jay Nixon and a barge industry trade group in recent days have implored the corps to reconsider. The Missouri flows into the Mississippi north of St. Louis. Less water from the Missouri would lower the pool of the Mississippi between St. Louis and Cairo, Ill., potentially halting barge traffic. Nixon said that could create an "economic disaster" for farming, fuel and other interests that use the river to ship goods.

Corps officials told the AP about their plans three days ahead of a scheduled new conference in St. Louis. They said efforts such as dredging, river structures and rock removal aim to keep the Mississippi open for as long as possible.

Corps spokeswoman Monique Farmer said that the agency is obligated by Congress and the courts to act in the best interest of the Missouri River basin, an obligation spelled out in the Missouri River Master Manual.

"We do not believe we have the authority to operate solely for the Mississippi River basin," Farmer, of the

Petitions to Leave the Union Filed from Several States

WASHINGTON (AP) • From states across the country, Americans filed petitions on the White House website seeking to secede from the union and form new state governments.

While most of the petitions come from states that supported Republican Mitt Romney in last week's election, a few swing states and even the deep-blue Northeast are represented.

Petitions have been filed for Alabama, Arkansas,

Colorado, Florida, Georgia, Indiana, Kentucky, Louisiana, Michigan, Mississippi, Missouri, Montana, New Jersey, New York, North Carolina, North Dakota, Oregon, South Carolina, Tennessee and Texas.

"We petition the Obama Administration to peacefully grant the State of Alabama to withdraw from the United States of America and create its own new government," reads the Alabama petition.

A captured wild pig is seen in Virginia.

Wildlife Officials Say Wild Pigs Are a Threat

THE WASHINGTON POST

Wild pigs — not the cute kind you see at the petting zoo but the ones with black bristly coats, narrow snouts and long, self-sharpening tusks — have quietly established themselves in much of Virginia, according to the Department of Game and Inland Fisheries. The department estimates that there are between 2,500 and 3,000 wild pigs in the commonwealth. That may seem like a lot, but this number is well behind Texas, where, by one estimate, as many as 3.4 million wild pigs are at large. According to biologist Glen Askins of the Virginia game department, 36 states are coping with the consequences of wild pigs in their midst.

Wild and feral pigs have come and gone from the state over the past few hundred years.

Pigs started to appear at dramatically increased rates as more TV shows such as "American Hogs" and "Hogs Gone Wild" glorified pig hunting, according to Askins.

There are no laws against possessing or transporting pigs. Once they have been released, it is difficult to prove that the act was deliberate.

ZOO NAMES PANDA CUB

SAN DIEGO (AP) • There is a little gift at the San Diego Zoo that's going to get very big.

It's been 100 days since the latest panda cub was born there.

That's the day Chinese tradition at the zoo calls for the cub to get its name.

In a ceremony Tuesday, the cub was dubbed Xiao Liwu. That's means Little Gift.

Zoo visitors chose the name from a list of six.

Judge Stops Possum Drop Tradition

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) • A possum drop that attracts thousands of people to a tiny town in western North Carolina each New Year's Eve may have had its last hurrah. A judge ruled Tuesday that a state agency didn't have the authority to issue a permit.

"Citizens are prohibited from capturing and using wild animals for pets or amusement," Judge Fred Morrison wrote in his ruling. "Hunters must afford wild animals the same right Patrick Henry yearned for: 'Give me liberty, or give me death!'"

The ruling would end a 19-year tradition of suspending a possum in see-through box covered with holiday tinsel and lowering it to the ground at midnight. People for the Ethical Treatment of Animals had sued the N.C. Wildlife Resources Commission, which issues the permit for the event, saying it's illegal and cruel.

The commission has 30 days to appeal Morrison's decision to Superior Court. A spokesman said the agency will decide whether to appeal after reviewing the 18-page ruling.

Clay Logan, who owns Logan Corner store, manages the event, which attracts 2,000 to 3,000 people annually to the tiny hamlet. The commission "had no authority to issue any permit to Logan for the unlawful public display of a native wild animal" at the drop, Morrison wrote.

Thanksgiving Travel Should Increase Slightly

NEW YORK (AP) • Slightly more Americans will hit the road this Thanksgiving, according to AAA. That includes people who are choosing to drive instead of fly as household budgets remain tight.

In its annual Thanksgiving travel forecast released Tuesday, AAA predicts 43.6 million Americans will travel at least 50 miles from home over the holiday, up just 0.7 percent from last year.

But while more people are traveling, it appears that the pent-up demand seen following the recession has largely dissipated. Demand grew a healthy 8 percent and 6 percent, respectively, in the two previous Thanksgiving holiday periods even though economic growth was moderate. Now, AAA says it will take a stronger economy to spur a significant jump in travel demand going forward.

"Despite mild improvements in unemployment, the housing market and greater consumer optimism, the economy is still struggling to keep its head above water," AAA said in its forecast.

The number of travelers forecast to drive, fly or hop on a train or bus this holiday is still 26 percent below the peak in 2005 and 14 percent below 2007.

Air travel is expected to decline, one sign that many households continue to feel financially pinched. AAA expects 3.14 million people to fly, down from 3.2 million a year earlier. Even with gas at a current national average of $3.44 per gallon, driving the family from New England to the Midwest to see the relatives is still cheaper than flying.

And filling up the tank will take less money than people expected when the survey was conducted in early October. That's because of a dramatic drop in gas prices. The national average has declined 35 cents per gallon in the last month. AAA expects further declines through the holiday. Still, the price of gas on Thanksgiving Day should be around last year's record of $3.32 per gallon.

Airlines for America, the main trade group for U.S. airlines expects a mild increase in flying over Thanksgiving. The group's prediction covers the 12 days starting Nov. 16. AAA defines the Thanksgiving holiday travel period as Wednesday, Nov. 21 to Sunday, Nov. 25.

AAA's forecast, which is produced from a combination of a traveler survey and economic analysis, was done before Superstorm Sandy hit the East Coast. AAA said it doesn't yet know the full impact the storm will have on travel in the Mid-Atlantic region, but it expects it will be significant.

Arthur Wesley Werry

Sept. 5, 1923-Nov. 3, 2012

aVISALIA, Calif. • Arthur Wesley 'Wes' Werry, 89, passed on peacefully Saturday, Nov. 3, 2012, in Visalia, Calif.

Born in Wallace, Idaho, on Sept. 5, 1923, Wes grew up in central Idaho, primarily Bellevue and Shoshone, where he graduated from high school in 1941. He was a veteran of World War II, serving overseas with the U.S. Army Signal Corps in New Guinea, the Philippines and Japan. In 1946, Wes married first wife Mary Elizabeth ("Mary Beth") Letsinger, whom he met while in the Army. Wes received bachelor's degrees in 1949 and a master's degree in chemical engineering in 1950 from the University of Washington. Wes and Mary Beth moved to the San Francisco Bay Area after graduation, where they raised three children. He held chemical engineering and technical director positions at Leslie Salt Co. in San Francisco, and later he and Mary Beth owned sales and marketing businesses in the pet supply and education fields.

After a divorce, Wes married Marilyn "Lyn" Clark in 1986 and they moved to Sacramento, where they lived for more than 20 years. They owned a marketing business and enjoyed dancing, traveling and socializing with friends and family. Wes loved the outdoors, especially stream fishing and camping in central Idaho with his family, and was an avid, lifelong student of science, frequently sharing his insights and marveling at the wonders of the natural world. Wes also was known for his easygoing attitude, optimistic outlook, love of joke-telling, dancing and Big Band music.

Survivors include his wife, Marilyn C. Werry of Visalia, Calif.; brother, Ellwood V. Werry of Sandpoint, Idaho; children, Robert Werry, John Werry and Sara Baldwin; grandchildren, Joey Werry and Christopher Werry; niece, Jill Chambers-Loftus; nephews, Dan Werry and Scott Werry, numerous Letsinger family nieces and nephews; and Lyn's children, Michael Clark, Phillip Clark, Stephen Clark and Wendy (Clark) Fosnaugh and their families. Wes was predeceased by parents, Ellwood R. and Madeline (Vines) Werry; and first wife, Mary Beth.

Wes and Lyn have been watched over by attentive staff at Prestige assisted living facilities for almost four years. The Fosnaugh family — Timothy and Wendy and children, Tyler, Jennifer and Nicole — have provided Wes and Lyn with ongoing care, love and comfort.

A private service will be held later in Bellevue, Idaho. Memorial donations may be made to a favorite charity or the Alzheimer's Association.

Tips to Snagging Seats Together on Holiday Flights

NEW YORK (AP) • Flying this Thanksgiving and worried that you won't be able to sit with family?

You're not alone. Nearly 24 million people are expected to fly during the 12 days surrounding Thanksgiving, up slightly from last year. Many will be separated from their loved ones.

Airlines are making it much more difficult for groups of travelers to sit together — unless they want to pay extra for seats with more legroom or those near the front of the plane. Since last Thanksgiving, American Airlines, Delta, Frontier and United have increased the number of coach seats requiring an extra fee. That means it's much more difficult to find adjacent seats unless passengers pay an extra $25 per person, each way.

But don't fret. There are still a few things fliers can do between now and takeoff to snag seats together:

- Confirm your seat assignments online with the airline now. Sometimes plane types are switched between booking and departure, meaning there's a whole new seat layout. And if you booked through Expedia, Orbitz, Travelocity or other third-parties, your assignment might not have been recorded correctly with the airline.

- Set up alerts for seat openings. ExpertFlyer.com offers free notifications when a window or aisle seat becomes vacant. For 99 cents, it sends an email if two adjacent seats become available.

- Check the airline's website five days before the trip. That's when some elite fliers are upgraded to first class, freeing up their coach seats. Another wave of upgrades occurs every 24 to 48 hours.

- Check in 24 hours in advance when airlines start releasing more seats. If connecting, see if seats have opened up 24 hours before the second flight departs.

- Keep looking for new seats. Even after checking in, seats can be changed at airport kiosks and on some airlines' mobile applications.

- Ask at check-in. Agents can sometimes put families in seats held just prior to departure for disabled passengers.

Marguerite Kearns Sandmann

July 29, 1918-Nov. 9, 2012

BURLEY • Marguerite Marie Sandmann, died Friday, Nov. 9, 2012, at Highland Estates Assisted Living in Burley. She was 94.

Marguerite was born July 29, 1918, in Glenwood, Iowa. She moved to Burley early in childhood with her parents so that her father, William Sylvester Kearns, could take work building roads, including U.S. Highway 30, while her mother, Lottie D. Milar Kearns, cooked for the work camps. Marguerite graduated from Burley High School in 1936 with her mind set on seeing the world. She took a job at King's Variety Store to earn money for college, and she graduated from the Salt Lake General School of Nursing in 1940. She worked in Utah until the American Red Cross needed nurses to help with the war effort. She joined the Navy Nurse Reserve Corps in 1942. She served in California and Washington State military hospitals until 1944, when she was shipped to New Caledonia in the South Pacific where she cared for heavy casualties as the United States fought for control of the Pacific islands. She returned to Idaho in 1946, but not for long. The Red Cross needed nurses for a polio epidemic in Los Angeles. There, she worked toward a bachelor's degree in nursing from the University of California Berkeley, and she met her husband, L.H. "Sandy" Sandmann. They married on April 11, 1948, in Oakland, where they started a family before settling in Lafayette.

Marguerite stayed home to raise seven children but eventually returned to nursing and became an intensive care unit nurse at the Kaiser Foundation Hospital in Walnut Creek, Calif. The family moved to Marguerite's hometown of Burley in 1969, where Marguerite helped Cassia Memorial Hospital start its ICU program. Nurses who worked with Marguerite say that they respected her take-charge leadership abilities — certainly skills needed to raise seven children, six of whom are boys. She is also remembered for her sparkly smile.

Marguerite's health forced her into early retirement in 1983. She remained a lifelong learner taking classes in science, history and art from the College of Southern Idaho. She enjoyed water color and pottery. She had a strong love for animals and had a hard time turning away any strays. Although unknown by many, she was a skilled ballroom dancer. She was a longtime member of the Burley United Methodist Church.

Marguerite was preceded in death by her parents; husband; and brother, Frank Kearns of Burley. She is survived by her sister, Maxine Kearns Moore of Vancouver, Wash.; seven children, James (Jan) of San Ramon, Calif., Richard of Danville, Calif., Brian (Pam) of Redmond, Wash., and Alice, Michael (Joann Cloud), Don (Jennifer), and Karl (Karen), all of Burley; 11 grandchildren, Shawn, Jayme, Diana, Jamie, Landon, Brendan, Chad, Kimberly, Avilyn, Cole and Adrienne; and 11 great-grandchildren.

We, her children, are grateful for her peaceful passing but also feel the sense of not having had a chance to say goodbye. Take a moment to let the people you love know what they mean to you.

The funeral will be held at 2 p.m. Saturday, Nov. 17, at the United Methodist Church, 450 E. 27th St. in Burley, with the Rev. Kathy Abend officiating. Military rites will be provided by the Mini-Cassia Veterans Organization. Burial will be in the Pleasant View Cemetery. Friends may call from 6 until 8 p.m. Friday, Nov. 16, at the Rasmussen Funeral Home, 1350 E. 16th St. in Burley, and from 1 until 1:45 p.m. Saturday at the church.

The family suggests memorials be directed to the American Red Cross.

Mathew L. Kemp

April 20, 1964-Nov. 10, 2012

BURLEY • Mathew Laraway Kemp, age 48, quietly passed away at home Saturday, Nov. 10, 2012.

He was born April 20, 1964, in Salt Lake City, Utah, to Samuel Clyde and S. Jane Laraway Kemp. Matt graduated from Davis High School, Weber State College, Florida State University, Florida A&M University and Tallahassee Community College. He earned two bachelor's degrees and a master's degree in history, athletic administration and physical therapy. He was a certified athletic trainer and licensed emergency medical technician.

Matt served a full-time mission to Copenhagen, Denmark, from 1983 to 1984 for The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints. He met his wife, Christine Melissa Reams, in Aarhus, Denmark, as she was also serving as a full-time missionary. They were married in the Salt Lake LDS Temple on June 18, 1987, by their former mission president, Ronald K. Jensen. Together, Matt and Chris have four beautiful boys, Samuel Mathew, Spencer Adam, Peter Laraway and Ethan James. Matt was a devoted husband and father.

One month after Matt and Chris were married, he landed his first athletic training job in Tallahassee, Fla., at Amos P. Godby High School. He worked with all its sports teams for many wonderful years until he began physical therapy school at Florida A&M University. He loved working with all the athletes, but he especially loved the football and basketball teams and working with all the wonderful coaches.

Upon graduating from physical therapy school, Matt landed a job at Cassia Regional Medical Center in Burley, Idaho, in 1995. He was very devoted to his physical therapy patients and his co-workers whom he considered some of his dearest friends. He enjoyed his time there tremendously! He volunteered as the athletic trainer for Burley High School and the local area high schools. Athletic training was his passion. He also worked with the Cassia County Emergency Medical Services and was usually on call with Life Run II on his days off from physical therapy.

Matt was a strong, active member of the LDS Church and served mostly in the Young Men organization as president twice, first counselor three times and second counselor/Scoutmaster two times, and as ward membership clerk, which he also loved. He loved those he worked with, especially the young men. Matt loved helping youth succeed.

Matt was preceded in death by his father, Samuel Clyde Kemp; and is survived by his mother, S. Jane Laraway Kemp; his wife, Christine R. Kemp; his children, Samuel, Spencer, Peter and Ethan; his sister, Jane Ann Peters (Lincoln) of Bluffdale, Utah; his brothers, David L. Kemp (Martha) of Twin Falls, Idaho, and Michael L. Kemp (Sophie) of Moab, Utah; and many, many extended family members.

The funeral will be held at 1 p.m. Friday, Nov. 16, at the Burley LDS 3rd and 7th Ward Church, 2200 Oakley Ave. in Burley, with Bishop David Hansen officiating. Burial will be at 1 p.m. Monday, Nov. 19, at the Kaysville City Cemetery, 500 E. Crestwood Road in Kaysville, Utah. Friends may call from 6 until 8 p.m. Thursday, Nov. 15, at the Rasmussen Funeral Home, 1350 E. 16th St. in Burley, and from noon until 12:45 p.m. Friday at the church.

Matt's family would like to thank the Cassia County EMTs, Bishop David and Alice Hansen, George and Jacque Gorton, and Jeff Rasmussen for their strength and loving support on the night of Nov. 10. We will forever love them and be grateful for them!

Q. What can we do with our grandchildren to honor veterans on Veterans Day? I know your answer will be of interest to many readers.

A. Activities may vary with the age of your grandchildren. Read about the history of Veterans Day and share the story with your grandchildren. If you are a military veteran, show your grandchildren old photos, letters, medals or uniforms. Tell them your own story. Help your grandchild write a letter to a soldier currently serving our country. Have children draw a picture of Veterans Day and what this holiday means to them. If your grandchild knows someone in the military, they can draw a picture of that person and send it to them. Take your grandchildren to a Veterans Day parade or ceremony. Teach your grandchildren how to fold an American flag. Be sure to explain what each fold means. Veterans Day honors those who have served our country. It is never too early to teach youngsters about it.

June 29, 1930-Nov. 11, 2012

JEROME • Robert Amoureux, 82, of Jerome, passed away Sunday, Nov. 11, 2012, in Jerome. He lived a full and exciting life with a loving family.

Robert was born June 29, 1930, in Boise, Idaho, to Margaret Francis Armitage Amoureux and Amos LaRoche. He was later joined by a younger brother and sister. He graduated from Ontario, Ore., High School in 1949. He served in the U.S. Navy during the Korean War. After he returned home, he married Jane Borup in the Salt Lake Temple for all eternity. He attended Boise Junior College, Utah State and then BYU, where he received his master's degree in medical entomology. After living in Pakistan and many other locations, he moved his family to Jerome in 1970 and worked as the county health inspector for several years until he retired due to ill health. In 1998, he became the Kiwanis governor of the Utah/Idaho District.

Robert and Jane were the parents of seven children, Robert Amoureux (Sandra) of Boise, Ramon Amoureux (Tecia) of Meridian, William Amoureux (Katie) of Tucson, Ariz., Patricia French (Ray) of Idaho Falls, Marie Govan (Iherman) of Chubbuck, Sharon Amoureux of Gooding and John Amoureux (Kris) of Jerome. Robert was preceded in death by his parents; and one grandson, Robby Amoureux.

A visitation will be held Thursday evening, Nov. 15, at Farnsworth Mortuary, 1343 S. Lincoln in Jerome, where family and friends may call from 6 to 8 p.m. The funeral will be conducted at 11 a.m. Friday, Nov. 16, in the Jerome LDS 10th Ward Chapel, 825 E. Ave. B in Jerome, with a visitation beginning at 10 a.m. Interment will follow in the Jerome Cemetery.

In lieu of flowers, the family would appreciate donations to the Kiwanis Eliminate Tetanus Project at Campaign@TheEliminateProject.org or at the funeral in honor of Robert Amoureux.

Twin Falls Restaurateurs Expand to Jerome Kiosk

BY VIRGINIA HUTCHINS
vhutchins@magicvalley.com

JEROME • Two of the partners who operate a coffee shop on Twin Falls' south side have expanded into Jerome with a similarly named drive-though kiosk.

The Coffee Shack, with double drive-through windows, occupies a small white building with a red roof in the parking lot of Jerome's Subway restaurant just off Interstate 84. Open 6 a.m. to 2 p.m. Monday-Fridays, the shack at 3124 S. Lincoln St. serves house-made breakfasts including biscuits and gravy and a "potato bake" with salsa and sour cream.

What's the bake?
"My rendition of a frittata," co-owner Mo Black said.

She doesn't use the word frittata because nearby farmers and dairymen "might think it's girly," she said. "I've got to feed them a nice, hearty man-meal."

For lighter appetites, you'll find muffins, scones, parfaits and bagels, and The Coffee Shack (539-0656) serves the same coffee drinks as The Coffee Shop & Lunchbox Deli, which occupies a former lawn-mower repair shop on Kimberly Road in Twin Falls.

Black and her husband, Shane Black, own the Twin Falls business with partner Sam Wilson. But the Blacks alone own the new Jerome business, which opened about four weeks ago.

The Coffee Shack's parking lot has room for semi-trucks and recreational vehicles, Mo Black said. She hasn't had any of them drive up to the window yet, she added, but they probably could.

She hopes to extend her afternoon hours and open on Saturdays eventually. And come summer, she intends to dress up a nearby grassy knoll with picnic tables, flowers and a fence for outdoor seating and evening ice cream.

GROW YOUR OWN: RABBIT MEAT

BY TETONA DUNLAP
tdunlap@magicvalley.com

KIMBERLY • It all started with one.

Jenny Easton was 9 when her dad discovered a bunny in the backyard woodpile. She named the rabbit Hunny Bunny and convinced her dad to let her keep it so she could start a rabbit 4-H project.

Hop forward 10 years and now Jenny, 19, and her brother Ben, 15, raise 68 rabbits in pens covered by a white tent in the backyard of their parents' home.

And what started as a rabbit 4-H project is now a source of income and food.

Fifteen of the rabbits, New Zealand/Satin crossbreeds, are raised for meat. Ben said he has found that this mix grows more quickly than others and produces more muscle weight. Often during the week the family will butcher an 8- to 12-week old rabbit and prepare a meal, because they can't go to the store and buy rabbit meat.

They also sell rabbits to other people who want the meat. The Eastons don't butcher the rabbits for others, but they do their own butchering using the broomstick method. Jenny called this the most humane way to kill the rabbit: A broomstick is placed on the back of the neck, and the legs are lifted to break the neck.

"Unless it's a parent bunny you breed, we don't name them," said Jenny and Ben's mother, Kayleen Easton. "It makes it harder on butcher day."

And though Jenny and Ben are the main caretakers of the rabbits, the whole family is known as the "rabbit family."

Kayleen remembered one midnight when somebody came to their house after

In the weekly series launching today, the Times-News will feature south-central Idahoans who've brought a bit of agriculture into their city neighborhoods.

Next Wednesday's stories:

- A couple who expects to harvest salad greens for their holiday dinners — from their own cold frames.
- Idaho's cottage industry laws governing urban homesteaders who want to turn their extras into cash.

Your Go-to Resources

Want to get started as a backyard rabbit grower? "They have to do research; different rabbits are for different things, some are for fur, meat or show," said Mar-Rene Melody, a longtime 4-H leader.

- Kimberly teens Jenny and Ben Easton, as well as Melody, suggest going to the American Rabbit Breeders Association website: www.arba.net.
- The Easton siblings also suggest reading the book "Raising Better Rabbits and Cavies," an official guidebook of ARBA.

One Week Remains: Compete for Cookie Champ Title

This December, someone will earn the title of southern Idaho's Cookie Champ. It could be you.

That is, if you can bake the cookie that most impresses the Times-News' features department and our panel of cookie connoisseurs.

In 2011, our cookie contest drew 25 contestants, with Twin Falls' Virginia Reynolds narrowly beating out the other goody gladiators to claim top honors. Melanie Halsell's entry tied Reynolds' for best taste, and Vickie Stone's cookies took the honors for best appearance.

To compete for the 2012 title, sign up by calling Tetona Dunlap at 735-3243 or emailing her at tdunlap@magicvalley.com. She'll give you the instructions and location for our Nov. 26 cookie-tasting panel.

We'll ask contestants to bring a half-dozen homemade cookies — from a single recipe of their choice — to wow our judges that day.

The deadline to sign up: 5 p.m. Nov. 21. That's only one week away, so make the call to Tetona now.

The taste of victory: sweet, sweet, sweet.

WHAT'S LEGAL IN YOUR TOWN?

BY TETONA DUNLAP
tdunlap@magicvalley.com

TWIN FALLS • If you plan on starting an urban agriculture project in your backyard, find out first what the rules are in your city.

Several south-central Idaho cities do not allow swine or fowl. And keeping other types of animals may require a permit and a certain amount of land.

"We have a lot of people who have chickens but have to be asked to leave," Burley animal control officer Marsha Kenner said. "I go in and say, 'This is not permitted, and you have three days to comply!'"

Kenner said a lot of people just don't realize they can't have chickens in the Burley city limits.

But rules vary from town to town. Just up the road in Heyburn, Kenner said, you can have chickens with a permit.

Buhl's police chief, Eric Foster, tries to enforce ordinances with education first. If a family has a calf in the backyard, he said, he doesn't just go there and write a ticket immediately.

"There are no chickens whatsoever — two ordinances cover that — and we battle that all the time, but that's common everywhere," Foster said.

Here are the rules in a sampling of southern Idaho cities:

Nutritional yeast flakes lend a savory, cheesy flavor to this winter-friendly pumpkin and white bean soup.

MATTHEW MEAD • ASSOCIATED PRESS

Seasoning a Winter Soup with Nutritional Yeast

BY J.M. HIRSCH
Associated Press

It's awfully hard to get excited about a food called "nutritional yeast flakes." It sounds like something you either need a prescription to get. Or a prescription to get rid of. Even worse, it resembles yellow flaked fish food. But trust me, this is an ingredient worth looking beyond its name and appearance.

Nutritional yeast flakes have been around for years, but they are all but unheard of outside the vegan world, which uses them to simulate the flavor of cheese. There's a reason they use them that way. These flakes are jammed with glutamates, the compounds that give us the savory wonderfulness in Parmesan and steak.

But let's back up to the basics. Nutritional yeast flakes are produced by growing, harvesting and drying a variety of yeast that is different from that used in baking. The resulting powder is loaded with B vitamins, has 2 grams of protein per tablespoon, and has no fat, sugar, salt or gluten.

And yet it is a flavor powerhouse. Those glutamates (the same chemicals that give MSG its oomph) add lushly savery, decidedly cheesy flavor to whatever they touch. That's why vegans use them to create "cheese" sauces. But you don't have to be a vegan to appreciate them.

You'll usually find nutritional yeast flakes in the grocer's natural foods section, sometimes in shaker-style canisters (Bragg is a popular brand), or in the bulk section. So what should you do with them? In general, they need to be added to a recipe with at least some moisture (the popcorn idea below is the exception).

- The most popular use is as a popcorn topping. In a blender, combine a bit of kosher salt and a few tablespoons of yeast flakes. Pulse until finely ground, then toss with buttered (or oiled, if you're vegan) popcorn.

- Saute small whole button mushrooms in a bit of olive oil. When the mushrooms are browned, season with salt, pepper and yeast flakes. Saute for another minute or two, or until the flakes have dissolved.

- Add a tablespoon or two to chicken soup to punch up the savory flavor.

- Saute lean ground beef, then mix in a bit of yeast flakes, ground cumin, salt and pepper. Use as a taco filling or nacho topping. Or spoon onto buns.

- Saute cubed steak tips, chopped onion and minced garlic in a bit of olive oil. Just before the meat is done, add yeast flakes and a splash of white wine or broth to deglaze the pan and create a sauce. Season with salt and pepper.

Pumpkin and White Bean Soup with Sourdough Croutons

Start to finish: 30 minutes.
Servings: 6.

- 3 thick slices sourdough bread, cut into cubes
- 4 tablespoons olive oil, divided
- 4 tablespoons nutritional yeast flakes, divided
- 1 large yellow onion, diced
- 2 cloves garlic, minced
- 1/4 teaspoon red pepper flakes
- 15-ounce can pumpkin puree
- 15-ounce can white beans (such as navy), drained
- 1 quart (4 cups) chicken broth
- Salt and ground black pepper, to taste

Heat the oven to 375 degrees.

Place the bread cubes in a large bowl. Drizzle with 2 tablespoons of the olive oil, then toss to coat evenly. Sprinkle 1 tablespoon of yeast flakes over the bread, then toss again.

On a rimmed baking sheet, spread the bread in an even layer. Toast for 10 to 15 minutes, or until slightly crunchy, then set aside to cool.

Meanwhile, in a large saucepan over medium-high, heat the remaining 2 tablespoons of oil. Add the onion, garlic and red pepper flakes. Saute until the onion is tender, about 6 minutes. Add the pumpkin, beans and broth. Bring to a simmer and cook for 10 minutes.

Transfer the soup, working in batches if necessary, to a blender and puree until smooth. Return the soup to the saucepan. Add the remaining 3 tablespoons of yeast flakes and stir well. Season the soup with salt and pepper, then ladle into serving bowls and top with the croutons.

Pair Baked Doughnuts with Hot Chocolate

THE WASHINGTON POST

Serve warm with hot chocolate for a fine comfort dessert on a chilly night.

You'll need doughnut pans, preferably nonstick. Adapted from "Barefoot Contessa Foolproof: Recipes You Can Trust," by Ina Garten (Clarkson Potter, 2012).

Cinnamon Baked Doughnuts

Makes 12 doughnuts.

For the doughnuts:

- 2 cups flour
- 1 1/2 cups sugar
- 2 teaspoons baking powder
- 1 teaspoon ground cinnamon
- 1/2 teaspoon freshly grated nutmeg
- 1/2 teaspoon kosher salt
- 1 extra-large egg, lightly beaten
- 1 1/4 cups whole milk
- 2 tablespoons unsalted butter, melted
- 2 teaspoons vanilla extract

For the topping:

- 8 tablespoons (1 stick) unsalted butter
- 1/2 cup sugar
- 1/2 teaspoon ground cinnamon

For the doughnuts: Preheat the oven to 350 degrees. Use a baker's spray with flour, such as Baker's Joy, to coat 1 or 2 doughnut pans.

Sift together the flour, sugar, baking powder, cinnamon, nutmeg and salt in a mixing bowl.

Whisk together the egg, milk, melted butter and vanilla extract in a medium bowl or liquid measuring cup. Pour into the dry ingredients and stir until just combined.

Fill the wells of the doughnut pans a bit more than three-quarters full with the batter. Bake for 17 minutes or until a toothpick inserted into the wall of a doughnut comes out clean and the doughnuts are puffed and lightly browned. Let them cool (in the pans) for 5 minutes, then gently invert the doughnuts onto a rimmed baking sheet.

While the doughnuts are cooling, make the topping: Melt the butter in a small saute pan over medium-low heat.

Whisk together the sugar and cinnamon in a medium bowl.

Brush the warm doughnuts with the melted butter, then dip them into the cinnamon-sugar mixture on one or both sides. Serve warm.

rescuing a rabbit from dogs. The man thought it was one of their rabbits that got loose. It wasn't, but they ended up taking in the rabbit anyway.

"Unfortunately we've gained that title: 'Rabbit People,'" Kayleen said.

The Difficulties

Research rabbits before you decide to raise them for food or as pets, Jenny and Ben said.

"The main thing people assume is they are going to sit there and be cute and cuddly," Jenny said. "We all have bites and scratches from handling them."

You also have to keep the males, called bucks, separate because they will fight each other, as will some of the females, or does, Ben said.

Just like dogs, rabbits are bred for different purposes and have unique personalities. Some like a lot of human contact and handling, while others do not.

"They're not for everybody; it's definitely on their terms," Kayleen said.

When people come to the Eastons' house looking to buy a rabbit, Kayleen said, they tell them that rabbits require a lot of attention and care.

"We make sure it's something for them; (Jenny and Ben) lose a sale, but oh well," Kayleen said.

Jenny and Ben keep an eye on the rabbits, getting to know each one's personality. If one loses its appetite or starts to grind its teeth, it may be sick. It's hard to know when rabbits are sick because they will hide it as long as they can, Jenny said.

The Rewards

Rabbit meat is mild flavored and high protein with very little fat, said MarRene

Kayleen said she checked city ordinances and found no rules regarding keeping rabbits in city limits.

What You'll Need

You can raise a 4-H rabbit project on a 3-by-3-foot square, according to Melody. They do not make noise and do not attract flies like larger livestock animals do. But be aware: Dogs love to eat rabbits.

Jenny and Ben keep their rabbits in metal and wooden cages that are well ventilated.

If you plan to breed your rabbits, Ben said, you can start out with a buck and two does. You can breed does for three to five years, but always do your research, as this can vary with different types of rabbits.

The Eastons charge $15 to $20 for a pet rabbit; Ben suggests a Mini Rex or Silver Fox for first-time pet rabbit owners. For show, the family sells breeds such as French Lop for $30 to $50. A live market meat rabbit from the Eastons will cost you $15.

Rabbits should not be kept in direct sunlight. These animals regulate their temperature through their ears, and in the summer the Easton family freezes water bottles so the rabbits can lie on them and cool off.

Cages from a supplier cost $70 and up depending on size, and carriers are $30.

And the Eastons' monthly feed bill for 68 rabbits? It's $70.

Melody, a 4-H leader for 28 years who specialized in rabbits.

"It falls into the white meat category," Melody said.

The manure is high in nitrogen and can be used in lawn or garden fertilizer, she added.

And depending on what town you live in, rabbits are a 4-H project you can keep in town. In Kimberly,

There cannot be more than five sheep or goats, or a combination of the two, for each full half-acre. A person can keep one horse, mule or head of cattle in combination with three sheep or goats on each full half-acre of enclosed pasture.

• Roosters are not permitted inside city limits. People can keep fowl (no more than five hens) within city limits with a permit from the city clerk.

Hailey

• Lots with single-family dwellings are allowed up to three hens (roosters prohibited) for urban agriculture purposes only, provided the chicken coop meets requirements.

ONLINE: A Panhandle Brewery Looks South

Times-News City Editor Nate Poppino blogs on all things beer at "Idaho On Tap." Here's what's on his mind this week:

"Selkirk Abbey Brewing sits nearly as far away from the Magic Valley as you can get in Idaho.

"Tucked in an industrial park in Post Falls, its Belgium-inspired beers so far are found only in the Panhandle.

"But the small brewery that got lawmakers' attention early this year is gearing up for big things — including possible distribution in southern Idaho. ..."

Finding the Tastiest Choices for Food Book Gifts

BY MICHELE KAYAL
Associated Press

It's that time of year again, when retailers deck their halls, radio stations relentlessly jingle and cookbooks go forth and multiply.

The dawn of the holiday season also marks an onslaught from the publishing world — a rush of food books that begins in August and refuses to slow down until every family in America has gifted (and perhaps regifted) at least a dozen. Or maybe it just feels that way.

The upshot of all this is that there truly is a food book for everyone on your shopping list. Should you care to go that route, we've sussed out some of the best to help streamline at least that leg of your shopping trip.

For Cookbook Geeks

Fancy a sunderland pudding? Ever wonder how to dress a calf's head? Publisher Andrews McMeel has teamed up with The American Antiquarian Society to publish reproductions of 100 cookbooks documenting the early American cooking experience.

"American Cookery" (Andrews McMeel, $22.99) by Amelia Simmons was originally published in 1796 and is believed to be the first cookbook to document American culinary techniques. It offers a window into those days with recipes for items such as spruce beer and tongue pie set beside page images from the original cookbook.

Also part of the series is America's first Jewish cookbook, "Jewish Cookery Book: On Principles of Economy" (Andrews McMeel, $28.99) by Esther Levy. It originally was published in 1871 and includes recipes for fish balls and frimself (noodle) soup. Its recipes, menu suggestions and household management tips aimed to help European immigrants adapt to their new country while maintaining their religious heritage.

Both volumes are perfect for the armchair anthropologist in your life.

For Regular Geeks

Does your loved one stand over a pot of boiling water with a thermometer? Wonder why salt makes steak juicy? Muse out loud about why russets make fluffier mashed potatoes than red bliss? We got it covered.

"The Science of Good Cooking" (America's Test Kitchen, $40) by the folks behind Cook's Illustrated magazine doesn't just offer "400 recipes engineered for perfection," it also covers 50 basic concepts explaining why the recipes work. Useful sidebars showcase tips and techniques — use a skillet, not a wok to stir-fry — and charts that check your measurements (a cup of all-purpose flour should weigh 5 ounces) make it a handy reference guide.

"Modernist Cuisine at Home" (The Cooking Lab, $140) is even sexier. The laboratory that last year produced "Modernist Cuisine," a six-volume encyclopedia of molecular gastronomy by Nathan Myhrvold, has turned its blow torches and sous vide machines on home cooking. It's a monstrously fun and shockingly practical cookbook that truly lets you get your geek on in the kitchen.

Because who knew that a touch of citric acid makes the ultimate grilled cheese? Or that scrambled eggs can be dispensed from a whipping canister and that baking soda helps caramelize vegetables?

For Nostalgia Hounds

Americans have been hungry for nostalgia, and publishers are happy to feed them. "101 Classic Cookbooks: 501 Classic Recipes" (Rizzoli International Publications, $50) boils down the classic, most iconic cookbooks to 501 recipes, drawing from books that span Fannie Farmer's 1896 "The Boston Cooking School Cook Book" to Thomas Keller's 1999 "The French Laundry Cookbook."

Sneaking in between are recipes such as sole meuniere from Jacques Pepin's "La Technique," Bengal red lentils from Julie Sahni's "Classic Indian Vegetarian and Grain Cooking," and banana bread from Mark Bittman's "How to Cook Everything." Essays about each book and its importance make this an excellent gift for the person who loves cookbooks even more than cooking.

There also is the incredibly charming "Handwritten Recipes" (Perigee, $20), a collection of found recipes by bookseller Michael Popek. Tucked between the pages of books brought into his store, Popek found the jots and scribbles of recipes from unknown cooks. In "Handwritten Recipes," he collects those notes and recipes, assembling a book that is as much lovely artifact as cookbook.

For the World Traveler

Love pho, but want to branch out? Charles Phan, the chef behind San Francisco's famed restaurant The Slanted Door, offers "Vietnamese Home Cooking" (Ten Speed Press, $35), devoted to bringing tamarind, star anise, fish sauce and lemon grass to a kitchen near you. While many of the recipes are a little too "chefy" — who's going to fillet their own fish for the "simple fish soup"? — they go a long way to introducing the flavors and techniques of the cuisine. Bite-sized steamed rice cakes promise unusual party snacks, and lemon grass chicken could be a feather in your toque.

"The Hakka Cookbook: Chinese Soul Food from Around the World" (University of California Press, $39.95) by Linda Lau Anusasananan captures the flavors and stories of an often overlooked Chinese diaspora. Fried eggs and bitter melon, tangy-sweet raw fish salad, and chicken stuffed with preserved mustard greens offer new insights to even the savviest fan of Chinese food.

Among the steady supply of books on Latin food, three stand out. "Muy Bueno: Three Generations of Authentic Mexican Flavor" (Hippocrene Books, $22.50) by Yvette Marquez-Sharpnack, Veronica Gonzalez-Smith and Evangelina Soza, preserves recipes spanning old world Mexican dishes like pork tamales to fusion creations like scallop and cucumber cocktail. Charming family stories combined with richly colorful photos to make this a delightful invitation to cooking.

In "The Latin Road Home" (Lake Isle Press, $35), chef Jose Garces traces his culinary journey from his ancestral home of Ecuador through his different influences from Spain to Cuba, Mexico and Peru. Recipes for dishes like red snapper in tomato sauce and his grandmother's empanadas are woven with thoroughly readable narratives of his life and family, as well as useful information about the regions.

"Gran Cocina Latina: The Food of Latin America" (W.W. Norton, $45) by Cuban-born chef Maricel Presilla offers a sweeping, sophisticated history of Latin food that illustrates the diversity of techniques, styles and flavors through 500 recipes. Recipes for foundational adobos and sofritos pave the way for cuitlacoche and jalapeno quesadillas, various pilafs, empanadas and tamales.

For the Celebrity Chef Junkie

Who didn't love Kevin Gillespie, the tattooed "Top Chef" contestant who worshipped pig and always concocted something homey? His book, "Fire in my Belly" (Andrews McMeel, $40), brings home recipes like Brussels sprouts gratin with heavy cream and mustard and the "one-pot hog supper" with fat back and cracklings. Light it's not, but delicious?

Tickling the other end of the spectrum is "Hero Food" (Andrews McMeel, $35) by New York chef Seamus Mullen. More than 80 recipes such as caramelized cauliflower with anchovies and duck liver toasts with pickled raisins are part of Mullen's quest to manage his rheumatoid arthritis with 18 "hero" ingredients like sweet peas, parsley, berries and squash. Despite his motivation, Mullen's food tastes anything but medicinal.

Fans of uber chef Thomas Keller will welcome "Bouchon Bakery" (Artisan Books, $50), featuring 150 recipes from humble shortbread and oatmeal raisin cookies to pistachio madeleines, pain au chocolat, raspberry macarons and other items from his fabled bakery.

For the Baker

Love dessert but hate to fuss? A stout float from "Sinfully Easy Delicious Desserts" (Artisan Books, $25.95) by Alice Medrich is the treat for you. The float is joined by dozens more recipes such as peanut butter pavlova, honey caramelized figs, and food processor chocolate mousse that are just as easy. And easily as tasty.

"Piece of Cake: Home Baking Made Simple" (Rizzoli, $29.95) by David Muniz and David Lesniak offers more than 120 recipes for classic American treats — think brownies, peanut butter cookies and blueberry muffins. Black and white cheesecake, an honest-to-goodness New York crumb cake, and cakes from bundts to babkas join the fun.

Home-baked pies are the aspiration of many a cook. "A Year of Pies" (Lark, $19.95) by Ashley English offers strawberry, rhubarb and ginger hand pies for spring, pumpkin tiramisu pie in fall and pies for all the days in between. Savory pies like curried winter vegetable and galumpkis pie — the pie version of Polish stuffed cabbage — mix things up in the colder months.

Give the Gift of a Great (and Healthy) Breakfast

BY SARA MOULTON
Associated Press

As far as I'm concerned, the best holiday gift is one that's handmade and edible. And if you can make it in big batches on a budget — and have it be healthy — even better.

That's the thinking behind this delicious pancake and waffle mix. Face-to-face with a whiny child on a Sunday morning, too many otherwise accomplished and adventurous home cooks reach for a box of pre-fab pancake mix. That's a shame, not least because it's easy to make your own mix, using ingredients of your choice, and to do so in — you guessed it — a jiffy.

The food police love to vilify pancakes and waffles as nothing more than carbs and sugar, but these guilty pleasures can be nobler than that. At their base, pancakes and waffles depend on a few key ingredients: flour, salt, sugar and leavener. If you swap in whole-wheat flour for at least some of the white flour, add a little flaxseed, slash some of the sugar, and top off the finished product with fresh fruit, you're suddenly looking at a very respectable breakfast. Heck, you even could drizzle a little Grade B maple syrup (my favorite) on top, and it still would be a healthy choice.

Using whole-wheat flour in the mix should not be terribly objectionable. Though there are some folks who insist their bread be white because "brown bread tastes yucky," no one feels that way about pancakes and waffles. And when you toss in some flaxseed, you really amp the recipe's nutritional value even as you add a subtle but distinctive nuttiness.

Flaxseed is showing up more and more frequently on supermarket shelves these days, and you can always find it online. I often add a tablespoon or two of it to my breakfast cereal in the morning. Just keep in mind that flaxseed isn't properly digested unless it is ground. You can buy it pre-ground or grind it yourself in a spice grinder. After you open the package, keep it in the refrigerator or freezer; it tends to go rancid quickly.

At holiday time, you can measure the batch into pretty containers — old canning jars are perfect for this purpose — attach a nice hand-written label and recipe with a ribbon, and consider it done. The deluxe version? Just add a little package of dried fruit or a tiny bottle of maple syrup.

MATTHEW MEAD • ASSOCIATED PRESS

Flaxseed Pancake and Waffle Mix

Start to finish: 10 minutes.
Makes 4 cups of mix.

2 cups whole-wheat flour
1 cup all-purpose flour
1 cup flax meal
2 tablespoons sugar
1 tablespoon plus 1
teaspoon baking powder
1 teaspoon table salt

Into a medium bowl, sift together all of the ingredients. Transfer the mix to a 1 quart glass bottle or canning jar and screw on the lid. Attach the recipe (below) with a ribbon.

Flaxseed Pancakes or Waffles

Wrapped tightly in plastic, these pancakes and waffles also freeze nicely, so consider making a double batch. Start to finish: 10 to 15 minutes. Makes 6 large (3 1/2- to 4-inch) or 12 small (1 1/2- to 2-inch) pancakes, or 4 large waffles (depending on the manufacturer's instructions).

2 tablespoons unsalted butter or 2 tablespoons vegetable oil
1 cup milk
1 large egg
1 1/2 cups flaxseed pancake and waffle mix
Freshly cut fruit or berries and pure maple syrup, to serve browned butter or oil. To make pancakes, heat a large nonstick skillet brushed with oil or coated with cooking spray over medium-high heat. Reduce the heat to medium and ladle either 1/4 cup or 1/8 cup portions of the batter into the pan (depending on whether you want large or small pancakes). Let the pancakes cook for 1 to 2 minutes, or until small bubbles appear on the surface. Flip, then cook for another 1 to 2 minutes, or until golden on the second side.

Pancakes can be kept warm in a 200-degree oven while remaining batter is cooked.

To make waffles, heat the waffle iron according to product directions. Lightly coat the cooking surfaces with cooking spray.

Spoon out 3/4 cup batter (or the amount recommended by the manufacturer) onto the hot iron. Using a rubber spatula, smooth the batter to within 1/4 inch of the edge. Close the lid and cook until browned and crisp. Repeat with remaining batter, coating the cooking surface between waffles with additional cooking spray only if they begin to stick.

Waffles can be kept warm in a 200-degree oven while remaining batter is cooked. Serve the pancakes or waffles with fruit and maple syrup.

A Fresh Take on Carrots for Thanksgiving: A Tart

BY ALISON LADMAN

Associated Press

These simple, yet elegant individual tarts are at once surprisingly sweet and satisfyingly savory. It's thanks to the wonderful interplay between the naturally sweet carrots and lemon juice, and the herby thyme and sage.

The tarts also are a wonderfully refreshing way to serve carrots, which too often end up just steamed and buttered. And because these tarts are delicious warm or at room temperature, they are an easy do-ahead item. If you'd like to save a little time, you could use purchased pastry dough.

Lemon-Herb Carrot Tarts

Start to finish: 1 hour (30 minutes active). Servings: 8.

For the crust:

2 cups all-purpose flour
1 teaspoon salt
1 tablespoon sugar
1 egg
1 tablespoon water
1/2 cup (1 stick) cold unsalted butter, cut up

For the filling:

1 1/2 pounds carrots, peeled and chopped
2 tablespoons butter
1 tablespoon chopped fresh thyme
2 teaspoons chopped fresh sage
Zest and juice of 1 lemon
Salt and ground black pepper
2 egg yolks

Heat the oven to 350 degrees. Coat 8 individual tart pans with baking spray.

To make the crust, in a food processor combine the flour, salt and sugar. Pulse to mix, then add the egg and water and pulse until incorporated. Add the butter and pulse just until a dough comes together.

Transfer the dough to a lightly floured surface and roll out to 1/8 inch thick. Cut circles from the dough sized to fit your tart pans. Press the circles into each pan, trimming the edges as needed. Place the tart pans on a baking sheet and set in the freezer while you make the filling.

To prepare the filling, bring a medium pot of salted water to a boil. Add the carrots and boil until tender, 12 to 15 minutes. Drain the carrots, then transfer to the food processor. Add the butter and process until smooth.

Allow the carrots to cool slightly, then stir in the thyme, sage and lemon zest and juice. Taste and season with salt and pepper, then mix in the egg yolks. Spoon the carrot mixture into the prepared tart shells and bake, leaving the tarts on the baking sheet for ease, for 20 to 25 minutes, or until the crust is a light golden and the filling is set. Serve warm or at room temperature.

Parsnips: Learn to Love the 'Other' Mashed Potato

BY SARA MOULTON

Associated Press

As a kid I never much cared for parsnips. My dad was wild about them, but I was unmoved, figuring that if they were white and ended in "-nip," they must somehow be related to turnips. And I was definitely not a fan of turnips.

It was Julia Child who turned me around. One time at a live demo she made a parsnip puree and I was blown away. Certainly there was no confusing this sweet, nutty, velvety puree with a stinky turnip.

How'd she do it? By reserving the liquid in which she cooked the parsnips, boiling it down until it became syrupy, then adding it back to the pureed parsnips. So simple, but such amazing results. This greatly decreases the wateriness that typically afflicts non-starchy vegetables when they're pureed. Indeed, it thickens the puree. And it amps the flavor, too.

This recipe is my adaptation of Julia's original. The biggest change was to reduce the amount of butter quite a bit, which I don't think anyone will miss. (Sorry, Julia!) I never tell my guests what it is when I serve it. Afterward, without fail, they tell me how much they loved the mashed potatoes. I love enlightening them.

Winter is the season for parsnips, though when some varieties get too mature they develop a woody core, which then needs to be cut out. Otherwise, these sneaky little devils are wonderful at Thanksgiving, a lighter alternative to actual mashed potatoes during a feast that's usually one high-calorie dish after another.

Mashed 'Potato' Parsnips

Start to finish: 50 minutes (20 minutes active). Servings: 4.

2 pounds medium parsnips, peeled and sliced 1/2-inch thick
Kosher salt, to taste
1 tablespoon unsalted butter
Ground black pepper, to taste

Place the parsnips in a large saucepan, then add enough cold water to cover by 1 inch. Bring to a boil over high heat and add a pinch of salt. Reduce the heat to medium-high and simmer, adding a little more water if necessary to keep the parsnips barely covered, until tender, 25 to 30 minutes.

MATTHEW MEAD • ASSOCIATED PRESS

Drain and reserve the cooking liquid. Set the parsnips aside and return the liquid to the pan. Bring to a boil over high heat. Boil until reduced to 3/4 cup. Return the parsnips to the pan and add the butter. Working in batches, transfer the contents of the saucepan to a food processor and puree until smooth. Return to the saucepan, season with salt and pepper, then heat over medium until hot. Per serving: 190 calories; 30 calories from fat (16 percent of total calories); 3.5 g fat (2 g saturated); 0 g trans fats; 10 mg cholesterol; 41 g carbohydrate; 9 g fiber; 11 g sugar; 3 g protein; 140 mg sodium.

The Simple Tricks for Perfect Brussels Sprouts

BY SARA MOULTON

For The Associated Press

Brussels sprouts can generate some pretty strong opinions. As with cilantro or goat cheese, you either love them or hate them.

The little stinkers are the smallest of the crucifers and, when prepared incorrectly, can develop a scary aroma and deadly taste. Weirdly, they somehow remain a perennial feature on many Thanksgiving menus.

In fairness, it's hard to cook Brussels sprouts to their best advantage because they are so densely constructed. By the time the heat gets to the core, there's a good chance that the outside has been overcooked.

It used to be that I had no better idea about what to do with them than anyone else. I just followed the procedure I learned in cooking school — trim them, use a knife to score the bottom in a criss-cross pattern 1/4 inch deep (so they cook more evenly), and boil or steam them until done. The results were not exactly inspiring.

It wasn't until the Two Hot Tamales showed me a better way that I fell in love. The Tamales — chefs Sue Fenniger and Mary Sue Miliken, the co-hosts of their own show on the Food Network once upon a time — sliced the sprouts very thin, then quickly sauteed them. And I do mean quickly — 3 to 5 minutes in the pan and they're good to go.

The simplicity of this

technique is, of course, a huge bonus on Thanksgiving Day, when you are trying to cook 500 other dishes at the same time. You can either pre-saute the sprouts, then quickly reheat them when the moment is right, or just cook them from start to finish while someone else is carving the turkey.

Even more impressive than the process is the result — the surprising deliciousness of these shredded sauteed Brussels sprouts. You don't need a lot of fat to cook them in, and the little guys pair up nicely with all sorts of toasted nuts. I've opted for walnuts in this recipe, but swap in your favorite. And a tart little spritz of lemon provides the finishing touch.

Take my word for it; when it comes to Brussels sprouts, this recipe has turned haters into believers over and over again.

By the way, who put the Brussels in Brussels sprouts? The Belgians, of course. The sprouts were first cultivated in large quantities in Belgium in the late 1500s, and introduced to the U.S. in the 1800s.

Quick Sauteed Brussels Sprouts with Toasted Walnuts and Lemon

Start to finish: 15 minutes. Servings: 6.

1/2 cup coarsely chopped walnuts
1 1/2 pounds Brussels sprouts
2 tablespoons extra-virgin olive oil
Zest and juice of 1 lemon
Kosher salt and ground black pepper

Heat the oven to 350 degrees.

Put the walnuts in a pie plate and toast them in the oven for 8 to 10 minutes, or until they are fragrant and are a shade darker.

Trim the Brussels sprouts and discard any damaged outside leaves. Use a food processor fitted with the thin slicing blade to shred the sprouts.

In a large skillet over medium-high, heat the oil. Add the sprouts and lemon zest, then reduce the heat to medium. Cook, stirring, until crisp tender, about 5 minutes. The pan will seem very crowded in the beginning, but the Brussels sprouts will shrink down quickly. Season with salt and pepper, 1 to 2 tablespoons of the lemon juice, and the walnuts. Serve right away.

Ginger, Cranberries Turn Carrots into Something Special

STEPHANIE WITT SEDGWICK
Special to The Washington Post

The easiest way to dress up a meal is to turn the obligatory vegetable into something special. It's especially nice to use seasonal flavors. In this dish, ginger adds a subtle kick and cranberries a fall flair to glazed carrots. With sugar and butter, the dish is a little sweet and a little indulgent, but it captures the season beautifully.

Pair this with roasted meats. It's especially good with other seasonal favorites, such as roast turkey or duck.

If you really like the heat of ginger, use a little more of it.

Peeled baby-cut carrots are a convenient option, but if you prefer, use whole carrots, peeled and cut into 3/4-inch chunks.

Ginger-Glazed Baby-Cut Carrots With Cranberries

7 or 8 servings.

- 3 tablespoons unsalted butter
- 2 ounces fresh ginger root, peeled and grated (about 2 tablespoons), or more to taste
- 2 pounds baby-cut carrots
- 3 tablespoons sugar
- Salt
- 1 1/2 cups homemade or no-salt-added chicken broth or water
- 1 cup sweetened dried cranberries

Melt the butter in a large nonstick saute pan or skillet over medium-high heat. Add the ginger and cook, stirring, for 30 seconds. Add the carrots, sugar, salt to taste and the broth or water, and stir to combine. Cook until the liquid comes to a boil, then cover the pan and reduce the heat to medium-low. Cook for 5 minutes. Add the cranberries and increase the heat to medium-high, bringing the liquid to a boil. Cook until the liquid has reduced to a glazelike consistency and the carrots are just tender, 12 to 14 minutes. Taste, and adjust the sea-

Bacon, Maple Sugar and Butter Make Perfect Pizza

BY J.M. HIRSCH
Associated Press

Until recently, I was convinced the triumvirate of perfect pizza toppings was tomato sauce, mozzarella and basil. Simple. Classic. Delicious.

Then I encountered a maple-bacon-butter pizza and discovered new depths of pizza perfection and appreciation. But first, a disclaimer seems warranted. If this pizza was on a menu, it most certainly would not have one of those happy little heart icons next to it. Digest at your own risk.

I was attending an outdoor festival being catered by a pizza food truck, Mountain Fire Pizza based in Gorham, N.H. Their menu listed the maple-bacon pizza, and it held no appeal to me. My bacon-loving 8-year-old, however, had other ideas. So we ordered one.

The sauce-free pizza arrived sprinkled with bacon and dripping with butter. It was, simply put, breathtakingly delicious. And I knew I had to recreate it.

Predictably, the Internet abounds with recipes for pizza made with maple-cured bacon. But the pizza I'd had went well beyond that. There clearly was maple syrup or sugar involved, as well as an ample helping of butter to keep things interesting. So I started playing.

In the end, the pizza I created was refreshingly simple. A basic crust topped first with mozzarella, then cooked bacon, then more mozzarella, and finally dollops of maple compound butter (made by blending softened butter with granulated maple sugar). It's as good — and unhealthy — as it sounds.

Maple-Bacon-Butter Pizza

Start to finish: 30 minutes. Servings: 4.

- 3 tablespoons butter, softened
- 3 tablespoons granulated maple sugar
- 20-ounce ball prepared pizza dough, room temperature
- 1 cup grated mozzarella cheese
- 12 ounces bacon, cooked and crumbled
- 8-ounce ball fresh mozzarella, sliced

Heat the oven to 500 degrees. Lightly coat a baking sheet with cooking spray.

In a small bowl, mix together the butter and maple sugar until well blended. Set aside.

On a lightly floured surface, carefully roll out the pizza dough to about a 14-inch circle. You may need to use your hands to stretch the dough if rolling alone doesn't work. Transfer the dough to the prepared baking sheet.

Sprinkle the grated mozzarella cheese evenly over the dough. Top the mozzarella with the bacon, distributing it evenly over the pizza. Arrange the slices of fresh mozzarella over the bacon. Using 2 spoons, scoop and dollop the maple sugar butter evenly over the pizza. The dollops do not need to be spread; they will melt in the oven.

Bake for 12 to 15 minutes, or until the crust is puffed and browned and the cheese at the center of the pizza is lightly browned. Let the pizza rest for 5 minutes before slicing.

Bashore Journeys with CSI Spikers to NJCAA Tourney

SPRINGFIELD, Mo. • Fifteen hours, 52 minutes. And counting.

The College of Southern Idaho volleyball team retrieves its baggage from a charter bus at Salt Lake City International Airport on Tuesday in Salt Lake City. The team traveled on to West Plains, Mo., for the NJCAA Division I Volleyball Tournament, which begins Thursday.

This tornado shelter sign at Kansas City (Mo.) International Airport was one of the more interesting things seen on the College of Southern Idaho volleyball team's trip Tuesday to the NJCAA Division I tournament, held, starting Thursday, in West Plains, Mo.

That's the journey I've been on with the College of Southern Idaho volleyball team as we travel to West Plains, Mo., for the NJCAA Division I tournament.

And let me tell you, West Plains is everything it's cracked up to be. Two bus legs sandwiched around a flight and it's still going to take us the better part of 19, 20 hours to make it to our destination.

A 1:30 a.m. departure Tuesday morning from

Twin Falls got us to Salt Lake City with plenty of time to spare for our flights. The CSI party had to go through Minneapolis. I was fortunate enough to grab the nonstop. Such is the difference in booking for one and for 23, I guess.

Both flights had a set of interesting circumstances. CSI's plane was stuck on the tarmac while some fuel

HAZELTON • Marlee Musmann completed a three-point play with 18 seconds remaining to lift the Valley Vikings girls basketball team to a 32-31 nonconference victory over visiting Kimberly Tuesday.

Musmann scored a game-high 14 points, but her late heroics were only necessary after the Vikings blew a 10-point lead with six minutes to go.

"They were really aggressive on defense and worked really hard," said Musmann. "When they're all up in your face, they're hectic, and it makes you be hectic and get out of the flow."

Valley led 28-18 before Kimberly (0-1) picked up its defensive intensity and went on a 10-0 run, capped by Heidi Funk's steal and game-tying layup with 2:45 left.

"It was a breakdown on our part," said Valley coach Liz Thomas. "We got caught up in their fast-paced down instead of slowing things down and running what we want to do. We started playing their tempo."

Valley (1-1) took a one-point lead on a Kami Elorrieta free throw and

TWIN FALLS • Filer could get used to this whole 4A thing.

The 3A Wildcats, primed to build off a state consolation trophy finish last year, proved themselves for a third consecutive game against the Great Basin Conference, defeating Twin Falls 48-45 Tuesday night. The Wildcats beat Jerome and nearly pulled off the upset against Burley to start the season.

"It's really building our team to play these 4A schools at the beginning of our season," sharpshooter Sierra Koyle said.

Filer's Alyssa Case and Koyle sunk four free throws with under a minute to seal the victory after the Bruins mounted a ferocious comeback, scoring seven unanswered points in under two minutes with full-court pressure. Jenna Jarolimek scored an up-and-under three-point play against Mikayla Harris to give the Wildcats a 43-40 lead, one they wouldn't relinquish over the final two minutes.

Kaitlyn Merritt scored 14 points to lead the Bruins (0-1), while Harris added 11.

Combining a swarming 2-3 zone with a smart, quick-hitting offense, the Wildcats stayed in front of the Bruins on the scoreboard for almost the entire game despite a relatively poor shooting performance. Sarah Sharp, the 6-foot-3 star volleyball player, Koyle and 5-foot-10 Jarolimek keyed the defense in different ways.

Sharp contested shots at the rim, and was a general irritant under the skin of 6-foot-3 Bruins standout Harris, fighting for loose rebounds above the crowd, grappling with her long-armed-opponent, forcing rushed shots then tried to control the clock. But Kimberly's Jordan Wall stole a pass and went for a layup to give the Bulldogs their first lead of the game.

“We were trying to run through our offense but we weren't looking to score, really. We got tentative, then our defense got tentative, too, and let them get back in the game,” said Mussmann.

After Mussmann's three-point play, Kimberly's Kourtney Keller had her shot – which would have been the game-winner – hang on the rim for what seemed like an eternity, and then roll off. The rebound went out of bounds, Vikings' ball, with four seconds left.

Elorrieta finished with seven points and Lizzy Henry grabbed nine rebounds for Valley.

“Our start, since we haven't really played together, is feeling good. I think we have a lot of improvement to do, so by the end of the season we should be at the top of our game,” Mussmann said.

Funk scored eight points to lead Kimberly.

“Unfortunately we had to dig ourselves out of a hole because we shot so horribly. You can't shoot like that and win games,” said Kimberly coach Brett Wright. “I think we won every statistic except for the scoreboard and shooting. I was pleased with the effort.”

Kimberly travels to Wood River today, while Valley goes to Glenn's Ferry on Thursday.

Big East Will Have East and West Divisions

ASSOCIATED PRESS

The new Big East will have a West Division, and Temple, located in Philadelphia, will be part of it.

The conference revealed its divisional alignment Tuesday for the 2013 football season, when it becomes a 12-team league. The announcement came after the Big East presidents approved the plan at a meeting in Chicago.

The East will have Central Florida, South Florida, Connecticut, Louisville, Cincinnati and Rutgers. The West will have Boise State, Houston, Memphis, San Diego State, SMU and Temple.

Big East Commissioner

Mike Aresco said the goal was to keep natural rivals such as Louisville and Cincinnati together and make it as simple as possible for fans to know which teams are in which division.

“I like the East-West,” Aresco said in a telephone interview. “I like the clarity of the divisions. I like the identifiability. Some conferences, it's hard to know who is in what division.”

Navy will join the Big East for football only in 2015, and the conference plans to add another football member to reach 14.

Commissioner Mike Aresco indicated that division alignment would be readdressed after 2014.

“Despite the fact that Temple will be in the West Division during the 2013 and 2014 football seasons, we will have every opportunity to play institutions from the East Division and be eligible for the first Big East championship game,” Temple athletic director Bill Bradshaw said in a statement.

“Beginning with the 2015 football season, there will be two seven-team divisions with the addition of Navy and another football school (to be announced later) with every indication that division alignment will be reconstructed.”

Aresco said the conference will do everything it can to ease travel burden for the Owls.

“We will draft a schedule that will minimize travel,” he said.

The first Big East championship game will be played at the home field of one of the participating teams on Saturday, Dec. 7, 2013.

Aresco said the conference has yet to decide how it will determine which division winner will host the championship game. The typical way is to give it to the team with the best conference record, but he said having overall records and/or rankings involved in some way is still a possibility.

Filer

the Bruins' shot at the end of the third quarter, ensuring momentum into the fourth.

Koyle applied ball pressure throughout.

“I don't know that we've proven anything other than we're getting better every day,” Filer head coach Kody Ketterling said. “We're a puzzle and were putting the pieces together each night. Things are getting tighter.”

The puzzle seemed intact much of the night, as the Wildcats rose to every Bruins surge. Koyle and Katie Hughes were the scoring stars on Tuesday, but Filer used a balanced offensive approach to create opportunities. With passing from all positions, including small forward Case, Filer found a way to attack the Bruins when they made defensive mistakes or were slow to rotate.

Koyle had 14 points for Filer (2-1), while Hughes added 13.

It was Filer's first victory against Twin Falls in Ketterling's tenure.

CSI Trip

was siphoned out and the plane was again de-iced. Fortunately, they had a long layover scheduled in Minnesota so there wasn't an issue catching the flight to Kansas City.

I didn't have an issue either, but that was due more to luck than anything else. After CSI left I made my way to the assigned gate for my flight, which was supposed to leave nearly three hours after CSI's did (since it was nonstop, I'd get to Kansas City an hour or so ahead of them).

Short on sleep from the bus ride — I have trouble sleeping in moving vehicles no matter their ilk — I tried to catch up on some Zs, but not before noting there were two non-stops to Kansas City leaving from adjacent gates 25 minutes apart. I concluded the airport staff knew how tired I was and were deliberately messing with my head, then went to sleep.

When I awoke, an hour earlier than I had wanted to, I discovered my flight had been moved to a gate clear on the other side of the terminal. Serves me right. But because I'd stirred early, I got there with plenty of time to spare.

Kansas City is a curious airport. The terminal is curved with most of the restaurants on the outside of the security checkpoint (unusual, at least with most of the airports I've visited not named Los Angeles International). After grabbing some lunch to kill time while I waited, I shot a few pictures of the “tornado shelter” signs — we're on the plains, after all — and scribbled down “CSI Volleyball” in my reporter's notebook to hold it aloft as the team arrived, like those hired transport drivers waiting to pick up someone they've never seen before in their lives. Fatigue makes people do weird stuff like that, and it makes the recipient of such a goofy action find it funnier than it probably was.

By the time you read this, we'll have arrived in West Plains and settled into our luxurious accommodation (emphasis more on accommodation than luxurious). We're in the Super 8 in West Plains, the hotel assigned to the Region 18 champions.

Today is the team's one practice day at the West Plains Civic Center, before the tournament begins Thursday. I'll enjoy the ride from here in Missouri — tough gig, but someone's got to do it — bringing as much color, sights and sounds as I can. I hope you enjoy it back in the Magic Valley. I think this is going to be a fun one.

Times-News sports editor David Bashore will be covering CSI's quest for its 10th NJCAA Division I volleyball championship from West Plains, Mo. Follow his coverage at Magicvalley.com/sports and on Twitter @TNBashore.

Knicks Hold Off Magic 99-89 To Move to 5-0

ORLANDO, Fla. • Carmelo Anthony scored 25 points, J.R. Smith and Raymond Felton each added 21, and the New York Knicks held off the Orlando Magic 99-89 Tuesday night.

The Knicks remained the NBA's only unbeaten team and gave them their first 5-0 start since opening the 1993-94 season with seven wins.

J.J. Redick led Orlando with 18 points, with Arron Afflalo scoring 13 for a Magic team that was stunted by 20 turnovers that led to 24 New York points.

The Magic dropped their fifth consecutive game and continue to struggle without starters Jameer Nelson and Hedo Turkoglu.

BOBCATS 92, WIZARDS 76 CHARLOTTE, N.C. • Ramon Sessions scored 21 points and Charlotte beat winless Washington to get back-to-back victories for the first time since last December.

Rookie Michael Kidd-Gilchrist chipped in with 15 points and eight rebounds before leaving in the fourth quarter to ice down a sore back.

It marked the first time the Bobcats have won two straight since taking the final game of the 2010-11 season and the first of last season.

RAPTORS 74, PACERS 72 INDIANAPOLIS • DeMar DeRozan scored 15 points and Jose Calderon had 13 points, 10 rebounds and 10 assists to lead Toronto.

DeRozan and Calderon each had 10 points in the first half for the Raptors, who had a franchise-low five points in the fourth quarter.

George Hill scored 18 points and Paul George had 12 points and nine rebounds to lead the Pacers, who have lost four of the last five.

Indiana went on a 9-0 run in the fourth and pulled to 74-72 with 1:02 left in the game. Neither team scored again.

NETS 114, CAVALIERS 101 NEW YORK • Deron Williams had 26 points and 10 assists, Joe Johnson scored 25 points, and Brooklyn beat road-weary Cleveland for its third straight victory.

Brook Lopez added 23 points for the Nets, who opened a 20-point lead at home for the third straight game, but this time barely let up and beat the Cavaliers for the sixth time in eight meetings after losing nine in a row, mostly during the LeBron James era.

ATLANTA • Looking to bounce back from a season-opening loss, Michigan State turned to its top returning scorer from last season.

Keith Appling came through big time. Hitting a pair of huge shots down the stretch — one from beyond the 3-point arc, the other on an acrobatic drive — Appling capped the No. 21 Spartans to a 67-64 upset of No. 7 Kansas on Tuesday night.

“The offense was kind of stagnant, so I wanted to make a play the best way I possible could,” said Appling, who led Michigan State with 19 points. “From there, it was all she wrote.”

DUKE 75, KENTUCKY 68 ATLANTA • Seth Curry scored 23 points and No. 9 Duke held off a furious comeback by No. 3 Kentucky, beating the defending national champions 75-68 Tuesday night in the first matchup between the storied programs since 2001.

APPLING LEADS MICHIGAN ST. PAST KANSAS 67-64

ATLANTA • Looking to bounce back from a season-opening loss, Michigan State turned to its top returning scorer from last season.

Keith Appling came through big time. Hitting a pair of huge shots down the stretch — one from beyond the 3-point arc, the other on an acrobatic drive — Appling capped the No. 21 Spartans to a 67-64 upset of No. 7 Kansas on Tuesday night.

“The offense was kind of stagnant, so I wanted to make a play the best way I possible could,” said Appling, who led Michigan State with 19 points. “From there, it was all she wrote.”

DUKE 75, KENTUCKY 68 ATLANTA • Seth Curry scored 23 points and No. 9 Duke held off a furious comeback by No. 3 Kentucky, beating the defending national champions 75-68 Tuesday night in the first matchup between the storied programs since 2001.

San Francisco 49ers quarterback Colin Kaepernick heads toward the end zone on a seven-yard run past St. Louis Rams cornerback Cortland Finnegan (31), strong safety Craig Dahl (43), and middle linebacker James Laurinaitis during the fourth quarter of an NFL football game in San Francisco on Sunday.

Rams-49ers Tie Likely Not Enough To Alter NFL Rule

ASSOCIATED PRESS

When St. Louis and San Francisco couldn't produce a winner during 75 minutes of play, the complaints came from all corners of the NFL. The games, after all, aren't much fun for the fans or the players, who finish just as unsatisfied as anyone else. "I never had to think about it until now, and I sure don't like it," Rams defensive end Chris Long said. "I think everybody on the field would have liked to have gone back out and just settled it, but that's where we are. That's the rule right now, so it is what it is." The Rams-49ers game Sunday finished at 24-all, the first tie in four years and only the fifth since 1990. So the rule right now that limits regular-season overtime to one period is likely to stay the same for a while. "It's an occasional event. There is no real concern we need to change the system," said NFL Executive Vice President of Football Operations Ray Anderson, who happened to attend Sunday's game in San Francisco and was also present for the Atlanta-Pittsburgh draw in 2002. The other recent occurrence was Nov. 16, 2008, when Philadelphia and Cincinnati played at 13 apiece. Eagles quarterback Donovan McNabb infamously acknowledged afterward he was unaware tie games were still possible. San Francisco safety Dashon Goldson said the same Sunday. "When I saw both sides walking onto the field, I was like, 'Where's everybody going?'" Goldson said. "Did somebody quit? Forfeit?" Goldson, for the record, knew about the new wrinkle that now gives one team the chance to match if the other team gets the ball first in overtime and makes a field goal. (Touchdowns still immediately end the game.) "But I didn't know there wouldn't be a second overtime if nobody scored," Goldson said. Now he does, due to a rare sequence of events during the extra period that kept the two teams even. The Rams had an 80-yard pass on the first play negated by an illegal formation penalty. Then stalwart David Akers missed a 41-yard field goal for the 49ers. Rams kicker Greg Zuerlein made one from 53 yards, but that didn't count because of a delay-of-game call. His next attempt from 58 yards was wide right. By then, the anticlimactic ending seemed inevitable. "Ties just don't seem to make sense in football," said Bengals left tackle Andrew Whitworth, who played in that previous draw in 2008. "There's too much effort, too much sacrifice that goes into this game to end in a tie, that's for sure." The 49ers (6-2-1) now have a hard-to-figure-out lead on the Seahawks (6-4) in the NFC West, which makes Sunday's outcome all the more maddening. "A division game? Oh, wow. I guess that could make it interesting at the end of the year," Broncos wide receiver Eric Decker said. Overtime was introduced at the college level in 1996, and there the teams trade possessions on the 25-yard line until there's a winner. But the time when ties were permitted below the NFL was so long ago that current players never experienced it. Denver safety Rahim Moore dug deep in his memory but to Pop Warner ball to recall one. "I believe we went triple overtime and we ended up winning and I don't remember how it all went down," Moore said. "It was like the 90s, so I forget. Also, I would say it was in the rain." Even the NHL has abolished ties, using a penalty shot competition after scoreless overtimes in a regular season game with mixed reviews. (Imagine the NFL switching to a punt-pass-kick contest to settle the score!) "I would've loved to see a shootout," Seattle coach Pete Carroll said, joking. "A couple of guys firing the ball at the goal posts. Anything to settle the tie!" Uh, don't count on that. Anderson said the NFL's competition committee will consider the overtime rules annually, but in a league where injuries are common the likelihood of a change is slim. "To have these guys going into an additional overtime period or more, we would be taking on some risk we don't think is prudent to take on," Anderson said.

Discipline Issues Contributing to Chiefs Losses

ASSOCIATED PRESS

KANSAS CITY, Mo. • Romeo Crennel isn't sure why the Chiefs decided to start playing Dance Dance Revolution on the turf of Heinz Field with a national television audience watching on Monday Night Football. He is sure he didn't like it. The Kansas City coach said Tuesday that he plans to speak to his team about discipline issues that cropped up during an overtime loss to the Pittsburgh Steelers, including one instance in which the Chiefs were flagged for a group celebration on a touchdown that didn't happen. "It was a surprise to me," Crennel said of the sudden celebrations. Perhaps the Chiefs were simply channeling their inner Fred Astaire, or auditioning for "A Chorus Line," since there might be several of them searching for jobs come January. The personal foul-inducing dance occurred early in the third quarter. Steelers backup quarterback Byron Leftwich, pressed into service following a shoulder injury to Ben Roethlisberger, threw an incompleteness that was initially ruled a fumble. Chiefs linebacker Justin Houston picked up the bouncing ball and ran 21 yards for a touchdown that would have given his team a 16-10 lead. The second-year pro started gyrating in the end zone, and was quickly joined by veteran Derrick Johnson, safety Eric Berry and a handful of others. Whistles were blown. Flags were thrown. Then a video review determined it wasn't a fumble, giving Pittsburgh the ball back, along with the sobering news that the personal foul penalty would still be enforced. The Steelers got a free first down out of the deal, one of three caused by Kansas City penalties. "I'm going to emphasize to the guys those kinds of penalties are hurtful to the team," Crennel said, "and we don't need them, and then we'll see if we need to sit people or not." It wasn't even the first instance of taunting by the Chiefs, though. There was the time that wide receiver Dwayne Bowe stuck out the ball at chasing Pittsburgh defenders as he trotted into the end zone for another would-be touchdown. Another brief celebration ensued, only for a holding call on Branden Albert to nix the precious points. "It's always frustrating when you think you have a touchdown pass, and all of a sudden you see a flag on the field," said Chiefs quarterback Matt Cassel, who started again in place of injured Brady Quinn. "It is unfortunate and it's always tough to overcome that." Then there was the dancing following the sack that knocked Roethlisberger from the game. It might have been the most humorous moment of the night. Houston and fellow pass rusher Tamba Hali sandwiched the Steelers' quarterback on the first drive of the third quarter. The two linebackers left Roethlisberger lying in a heap, and offered up their best homage to the 1980s hip-hop duo Kid 'n Play with a well-executed collaboration. That dance wasn't received well, either. "So two defenders can choreograph the Kid and Play dance after a sack, but we can't do jack together when we score a TD?" Browns tight end Benjamin Watson asked on Twitter. The discipline issues, which contributed to six penalties for 76 yards and left Kansas City 2 for 13 on third downs, overshadowed what might have been the Chiefs' best game of the year. Sure, they managed to stage a franchise-record comeback to defeat the New Orleans Saints — still their only victory of the season — but that's increasingly looking like a fluke. Against the Steelers, the Chiefs put together a game plan that shut down the Pittsburgh offense, allowed Cassel to manage the game, and kept Kansas City within striking distance in the closing minutes. Cassel's interception in overtime — the Chiefs' NFL-leading 30th turnover of the year — ultimately allowed Shaun Suisham to kick the winning field goal for Pittsburgh. "We're disappointed about the final result, but I really think our team played a much more competitive game overall than we have been playing," Crennel said. "We had some opportunities to win the game, but there are things we have to polish up and get correct so we can win the game."

THE ACES ON BRIDGE® Bobby Wolff

"It's an odd job, making decent people laugh."
 — Moliere

Kit Woolsey reported that Fred Stewart found an amusing play in the following deal from the first final session of a recent Life Master Open Pairs.

But before we get to Stewart, look at that West hand and plan the defense to four hearts.

It is highly unlikely that two rounds of diamonds will stand up. Since declarer's clubs threaten to take care of his spade losers, it feels as if you should take an active role in the defense and go after your tricks quickly.

If you think about it, surely the best way to beat four hearts has to be to put partner on lead to play spades through declarer's presumed king — isn't it? So our unnamed hero (or was it goat?) in the West seat led a low diamond. Imaginative and unlucky, you may say, but only if Stewart put up the diamond queen at the first trick — and he did! That was his 10th trick for a great score.

Of course, the purists would point out that with hearts and clubs splitting, there were always 10 tricks except on the lead of the spade ace. Declarer could ruff out the clubs and end up in dummy after drawing trump in two rounds. He could have fallen back on the spades splitting if that line wasn't going to work — but this was more fun, wasn't it?

ANSWER: What an impossible problem! After your partner's bid of the fourth suit, raising hearts would be acceptable with a doubleton honor, but not really here, while bidding two no-trump without a stopper is inelegant. Some play that a two-spade call here would show this hand — but you would be in trouble if partner believed that it showed five spades and six diamonds! Maybe two no-trump is the least lie.

DEAR ABBY: I am delighted that you still offer the booklet "How to Write Letters for All Occasions." When I was in my early teens, I ordered this booklet from you. It taught me not only how to write letters, but it gave me confidence to write – letters and more.

I have continued to write letters throughout my life. My skills, honed at such a young age, helped me in completing the often required writing during college and in my working life. I am called upon to write many letters, reports and memoranda. I am always complimented on my style and form, as well as the speed with which I am able to produce the needed documents. Although I often use email for communication, my writing skills serve me well. I now do some creative writing as well, having built on the skills I attained through your booklet.

Most important of all, it is a wonderful feeling to have stayed connected with friends and family over the years. A letter is an enduring reminder of love and friendship – one that exists far longer than a phone call. I owe so much to the booklet I ordered from Dear Abby years ago. Thank you!

– KATHERINE IN STOCKTON, CALIF.

DEAR KATHERINE: Thank you for your beautiful letter and for letting me know how helpful my booklet has been for you. Letter-writing and emailing can be difficult for many people who aren't used to organizing their thoughts on paper or while viewing their computer screen.

Some don't know what to say, while others are afraid they'll say the wrong thing. But anyone can write a letter or email by following a few basic rules. My booklet, "How to Write Letters for All Occasions," contains not only the fundamentals, but also examples for almost every occasion. It can be ordered by sending your name and mailing address, plus check or money order for $7 (U.S. funds), to Dear Abby – Letters Booklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, IL 61054-0447. Shipping and handling are included in the price. With the holiday season upon us and people sending greetings and thank-you's through the end of the year, this is the perfect time to send a handwritten letter or a well-written email.

While letter-writing or emailing may always be a chore to some people, there are occasions when the most appropriate, sensitive and elegant means of communicating one's thoughts is by the written word.

DEAR ABBY: Why don't men wear their wedding rings? I can understand if they work in construction or something. But I see men at my medical office wearing suits, and while they wait for their appointments they talk about their wives, with no ring in sight. What gives?

– SINGLE AND WONDERING IN KANSAS

DEAR SINGLE AND WONDERING: What "gives" is that some men are not comfortable wearing jewelry, and their wives don't insist upon it.

Dear Abby is written by Abigail Van Buren, also known as Jeanne Phillips, and was founded by her mother, Pauline Phillips. Write Dear Abby at www.DearAbby.com or P.O. Box 69440, Los Angeles, CA 90069.

IF NOVEMBER 14 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: A surge of popularity and social activities in the next six to eight weeks can brighten your planner, but advances in the job market, improvements in investments and business success are also a centerpiece. In March and April, you could be inspired to take a long-dreamed-of vacation or to make solid plans for a business venture. May is the best time to make fresh starts, set significant plans into motion or to ask for favors from those who have your best interests at heart. Your judgment is a bit better than usual during that time period, so you can make huge improvements in some part of your life.

HOROSCOPE
Jeraldine Saunders

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Take pride in your strengths. After some deep soul searching, you may realize that you have many talents — but, even so, also have some faults. Have confidence that life will allow you to develop further.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Spread the love. Even when you are in the midst of misunderstandings, you can take the time to show kindness toward a special someone. All it takes is for you to make the first move; wave a white flag.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Impress people; investigate cause and effect. Take the first steps to settle issues that revolve around joint funds or any other subject that created problems in the past. Make peaceful overtures.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Be businesslike when dealing with business. Discuss the elephant in the room that everyone has ignored for the past few days. A friend may provide you with a solution answer you've overlooked.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Buck up. Maintain a positive outlook, rather than letting worries beat you down. Out of sight is not necessarily out of mind. Discuss your problems openly rather than pushing them to the back burner.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Lighthearted ways might get a tepid reception. Tomorrow and the rest of the week provide ample opportunities for financial and romantic ventures. Today, however, you should focus on astute business planning.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): There is light at the end of it but you must still beware of tunnel vision. Focusing on one particular goal to the exclusion of all else may cause you to ignore a problem in another aspect of your life.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Kindness is king. There may be more than one worthy cause that requires your support and generosity. It is admirable to work hard to achieve your ambitions, but be sure you don't step on the little guy.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): It's time to stop dragging your feet and get down to business. This may be the perfect time to work out certain sticky details that will help you get a project off the ground. Fix what needs fixing.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): There may a major undertaking on the drawing board. Go along for the ride on the coattails of a trusted partner or old friend. Focus on the big picture and make sure key issues receive attention.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Business should come before pleasure. You'll be nearing the completion of the deal, but must remain patient. A project or transaction will complete itself naturally; it isn't possible to force growth.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): You can afford to be benevolent. You may consider yourself to be tough as nails but even the strongest nails bend. If joint resources are a matter of contention strive to compromise; be fair and generous.

SUDOKU

Sudoku is a number-placing puzzle based on a 9x9 grid with several given numbers. The object is to place the numbers 1 to 9 in the empty squares so that each row, each column and each 3x3 box contains the same number only once. The difficulty level of the Conceptis Sudoku increases from Monday to Sunday.
