BLACK FRIDAY Creeps into Thanksgiving

BY ALISON GENE SMITH
alismith@magicvalley.com

TWIN FALLS • Hilary Williams will head to work at 7:30 p.m. on Thanksgiving, but she's not letting it get her down.

Her work schedule means her family will eat Thanksgiving dinner a little earlier than usual, but Williams said it's worth it.

"It's a good sales day," she said. "I'm a commissioned salesperson. This is when I'll be able to make my Christmas money for my family."

Williams sells appliances at Sears in Twin Falls. She said she'll work her first Black Friday shift until 1 a.m. Friday, then start a second shift from 3:45 a.m. until 3:45 p.m. that day. While she admits her work schedule combined with the holiday preparation will be exhausting, Williams said the money she'll make makes up for it.

Last year, Williams said Sears opened at 4 a.m. on Black Friday. She believes this year's schedule will be better for customers even if it's a little tougher on employees.

"We have 8 p.m. door-busters and some at 4 a.m.," she said.

Having several bonuses for early shoppers should make for a calmer atmosphere, she said.

Many larger stores are scheduling Black Friday sales to begin Thursday on Thanksgiving. In a press release, Target announced it would open its doors at 9 p.m. on Thanksgiving.

"Opening at 9 p.m. gives Target's Black Friday guests a more convenient way to create an after-dinner shopping event that the entire family can enjoy," Kathie Tesija, executive vice president of merchandising, said in the statement.

While Sears opens at 8 p.m. Thursday, most Magic Valley Mall stores will open their doors at midnight Thursday night, said Trevor White, the marketing director for the mall.

"The mall itself opened up at 4 a.m. last year," White said. "It's changed. Macy's did open at midnight last year and they were one of the top Macy's in their district."

JC Penney, on the other hand is waiting to open until 6 a.m. Friday, White said. The more traditional Black Friday opening time was a decision by the company's CEO, he said.

While Leah Skinner, who owns Leah's Gifts and Ceramics in Twin Falls, isn't offering any Black Friday deals, she said she's noticed Christmas shoppers starting earlier every year.

"I've had one lady start in January making nativities for her kids," she said. "I'm finding more and more people doing that. They start thinking early because ceramics isn't something you can do overnight."

Skinner said her store will be closed today and on Thanksgiving, but open for her normal hours on Friday and Saturday.

Richard Pruneau, the manager of the plumbing department at Sweet's Sewer and Drain Cleaning, said he'll be busy on Thanksgiving and through the weekend.

Pruneau and his crew are on duty 24 hours a day, including holidays, he said.

"Normally we get pretty busy the week before Thanksgiving," he said. "They got all the family over and only one bathroom works."

While he's had to leave for a job in the middle of his own Thanksgiving dinner, Pruneau and other plumbers have saved Thanksgiving for other families, he said.

In the past, Pruneau said he's been able to make it to some Black Friday shopping between jobs, but he won't be headed out to any stores at midnight this year, he said.

"It was always nice to get up early and go at 5 a.m.," he said. "This takes the whole fun out of it."

More Arrests in Stabbing that Injured Two in T.F.

BY ALISON GENE SMITH

TWIN FALLS • Two Buhl men and a teenager have been arrested on charges relating to an October stabbing that left two other people injured.

Jeffrey W. Allred, 23, and Roberto Garza Jr., 20, were both charged with one count of aggravated battery with use of a deadly weapon or instrument, according to online court records. Both were held at the Twin Falls County Jail on $5,000 bond and have preliminary hearings scheduled for Nov. 30.

A 17-year-old boy has also been charged with aggravated battery and criminal conspiracy in the case. A pretrial conference for him is scheduled for Dec. 3.

At about 4:30 a.m. Oct. 28, deputies investigated an altercation involving several people at 1790 Blake St. N. in Twin Falls.

According to court documents, authorities responded for a call about a man who was stabbed in the stomach.

As officers arrived, they noted seeing pools of blood in the street near the home.

A knife was reportedly found in the

CSI Moves Forward with Tech Building

BY JULIE WOOTTON
jwootton@magicvalley.com

TWIN FALLS • In just a few months, construction could be underway on a new building that will house the College of Southern Idaho's technical programs.

Vice President of Administration Mike Mason told college trustees Monday night that the final set of design plans for the Applied Technology and Innovation Center were submitted last week.

CSI plans to advertise for construction bids next month. Mason said he hopes bids will come in around the $7 million range.

Construction is expected to last about 14 months, he said.

About $4.4 million in funding will come from a federal Economic Development Administration grant. The rest of the money will come from CSI's plant facilities fund.

The 41,630-square-foot facility will be located just north of the Canyon Building on CSI's Twin Falls campus.

The building will bring the college's technical programs under one roof, including wind energy, manufacturing technology, environmental technology, heating/ventilation/air conditioning technology and drafting.

It will also have space to accommodate one new program in the future.

THE MARKET AT A GLANCE

Stocks End Flat after HP Shocker and Fed Warning

NEW YORK (AP) • Falling oil prices and a surprise announcement from Hewlett-Packard weighed on technology and energy stocks Tuesday.

HP plunged 12 percent after executives said that a company HP bought for $10 billion last year lied about its finances. CEO Meg Whitman said that there were “serious accounting improprieties” at the search-engine company, Autonomy.

To account for it, HP took an $8.8 billion charge in its latest quarter. HP’s stock lost $1.59 to $11.71.

A warning from the Federal Reserve chairman, Ben Bernanke, about the dangers of the “fiscal cliff” also weighed on the market in afternoon trading. The Dow Jones industrial average dropped as much as 94 points shortly after Bernanke spoke.

47,000 and Counting

Nov. 15 marked two milestones for Alice Schenk.

The Rupert resident turned 55 years young last week, and sometime between 6 and 7 a.m. on her birthday she logged her 47,000th mile of running in her lifetime.

Howe

That's almost the equivalent of crossing the United States 16 times.

Schenk, who once held the record in Idaho for the fastest female marathoner, has worn out more than 150 pairs of running shoes. She began keeping track of her miles 35 years ago, so her 47,000 miles average out to 1,343 per year — or about 26 miles every single week.

Schenk has inspired countless people as a runner, triathlete, coach, CSI health and fitness instructor, wife, mother, friend, and — most importantly, she'll tell you — a Christian.

“God has gifted us with this life and we're all on temporary visa,” Schenk said in a Times-News interview last June when she ran solo the 62-mile Sawtooth Relay. “I've come to realize through years of running that He goes with me. He loves watching me use the gifts and abilities He's given me. He loves watching me enjoy running... He loves to see His children succeed and have fun.”

Happy birthday, Alice, and here's to the next 47,000.

A line of empty laundry baskets, boxes and other containers stretched halfway across the lawn Monday at the Helping Hands Mission in Burley.

Each of the empty containers represented a family that placed it there in hopes of getting a few extra food items for a holiday meal. An amazing young woman, Ashlynn Carver, 13, supported by her parents, local business people and church group, delivered more than 220 turkeys gathered during her project “Turkey Time.”

As Carver left the Mission on Monday, she gave out hugs with as much enthusiasm as she used to gather turkeys.

Childhood Dream

Twin Falls High student Lexi Ybarra, 14, said she was excited when she found out NASA astronaut Stephen Bowen was speaking at her school.

Wootton

She had a big smile on her face on Thursday as she talked about how Bowen answered one of her questions after a school presentation. When I was her age, I was also fascinated by science and what astronauts do.

As a high-schooler, we had to research a career in ninth-grade freshman seminar class that sounded interesting. I chose astronaut.

I wrote a letter to a NASA astronaut with a bunch of questions about his job and got some kind of form letter back.

Even though I didn't end up in a science-related field, meeting Bowen was still thrilling.

As Bowen told students, there isn't any set career path to become an astronaut. He told me there are fewer than 50 active astronauts. About 20 of them have been assigned to a mission or just got back from one.

A lifeless face peers up at us. “Sorta creepy,” I say. “Yeah it is,” comes the somber reply from Hailee Coats as we break into laughter.

Coats, a middle-schooler at Robert Stuart Middle School, is about to practice CPR on “Mini Anne” — an inflatable mannequin.

To reach the proper 100 reps a minute, the students are directed to disco — “Stayin' Alive” by the Bee Gees, to be exact.

I begin humming the song made famous by “Saturday Night Fever” while making pictures of 7th-graders mercilessly trying to breath life into their blowup training partners.

I found laughter and learning make for a great combination. Now I'm off to download some disco.

Winter Storm Could Impact Your Travel Plans

A winter storm will cause travel problems across the southern and central Idaho mountains today and into tonight.

The National Weather Service has a winter storm warning in effect for central Idaho including Ketchum, Sun Valley and the nearby Sawtooth Mountains until 5 p.m. Snow amounts will range from 6 to 15 inches above 7500 feet. This will make passes like Galena Summit and Banner Summit slick and icy. Winds will also be strong, gusting to 30 to 40 mph and causing blowing and drifting in the region.

This same system will also cause problems in the Pacific Northwest through Oregon and Washington with rain, snow in the Cascades and strong gusty winds. This system could cause possible flight delays if you are traveling to or through Seattle or Portland.

Across the Magic Valley, winds will be gusting to 30 to 35 mph out of the west and there will be off- and-on rain showers. Temperatures will get colder during the afternoon falling from the 50s into the low 40s by evening. Some of the rain could mix with or briefly change to snow. Don't expect any accumulation in the valleys.

Thanksgiving and Black Friday will be sunny to mostly sunny and a little cooler with highs in the mid- to upper 40s.

Natural Gas Explosion Rocks Lewiston, No One Hurt

LEWISTON (AP) • A backhoe struck a 4-inch natural gas line in Lewiston, sparking an explosion and fire that rocked the downtown area, destroyed the backhoe and damaged a nearby building. No one was seriously injured.

The Lewiston Tribune reports flames shot 100 feet into the air after the explosion at 1:35 p.m. Monday. The newspaper and several nearby businesses were evacuated while firefighters battled the blaze.

Dale Albright of M.L. Albright & Sons Inc. construction was operating the excavator during work to install new storm equipment when the bucket struck the Avista Utilities gas line. The pressure of the escaping gas shattered the excavator's windshield and destroyed the machine, Lewiston Fire Department Battalion Chief Travis Myklebust told the Tribune.

Albright rolled his ankle when jumping from the vehicle but was able to escape to safety before the gas caught fire, said his father, Marvin Albright.

It appears the explosion was the result of confusion over the shape of the gas line underground, officials said.

Workers knew the line's location and dug two holes above the line to make sure they could dig to a certain depth without hitting it, Marvin Albright said.

However, in the area between the two holes, the gas line apparently was at a shallower depth.

"Everybody thought we were OK," he said. "We didn't expect that one to be where it was."

Lewiston Community Development Director Laura Von Tersch said utilities are put in the ground at different times and at different depths, making it difficult to predict exactly where they are. The quality of mapping also is a factor.

"You're completely reliant on the work of another," she said.

Avista spokesman Mike Tatko said three natural gas lines that serve the area were shut off within 20 minutes of the explosion. The fire was out about 20 minutes later.

Suspect's Family has Questions in Monkey Killing

BY REBECCA BOONE AND JOHN MILLER
Associated Press

BOISE • A 22-year-old man who police say killed a monkey after breaking into the Boise zoo has encountered run-ins with the law in the last three years that include a pair of drug arrests and a conviction for driving drunk.

A day after Michael J. Watkins' arrest, authorities attempted to answer what may have prompted the once-promising wrestler from western Idaho to enter the facility early Saturday and what he planned to do with the animal, officials said.

Members of the community and Watkins' family also were trying to determine what could have led to the attack and why someone would do such a thing. His mother, Susan Watkins, said in a brief interview Tuesday from her home in McCall that as much as the public is perplexed by what happened, "I am too. That's all I can say."

Boise Police Chief Michael Masterson, with Zoo Boise Director Steve Burns, announced the arrest of Michael J. Watkins.

She declined further comment. Other family members didn't return phone calls.

Authorities allege the suspect entered Zoo Boise, took a patas monkey from its cage and beat it so severely it later died of head and neck injuries. He faces an arraignment hearing Wednesday in 4th District Court, where authorities say they'll charge him with at least two felonies: burglary, for allegedly breaking into Zoo Boise, and grand theft, for taking and killing the monkey.

Arrested Monday, Michael J. Watkins is to be moved from a county jail in Washington county to a detention facility in Ada County in Boise on Tuesday.

Idaho law allows prosecutors to bring a grand theft charge against someone accused of killing livestock or other animals valued at more than $150 dollars.

Police don't plan to charge a second man who was with Watkins Saturday morning, but apparently never entered the zoo.

A tip from a citizen led police to Watkins after identifying a hat found in the monkey's enclosure as similar to one Watkins was wearing the night two intruders were spotted at Zoo Boise, one inside and one outside the fence.

A security guard frightened away the intruders, and then discovered the gravely injured patas monkey. Zoo officials and police were able to get the animal into a crate and to the zoo's animal hospital, but the monkey died of blunt-force trauma to its head and neck just a few minutes later.

No other animals were harmed.

Giving Feasts and Friendship

Mini-Cassia volunteers serve up fellowship and tradition with annual meals.

BURLEY • Fellowship and tradition will be served up with a holiday meal Thursday as two groups of volunteers step up to the plate in Burley and Rupert to host free Thanksgiving Day feasts.

"I remember our first year, we had three or four turkeys and more than 100 people showed up," said Deb Anderson, who helps organize the Alaska's Best meal at the Rupert Elks Lodge with her husband Ron Anderson and good friends Leonard and Betty Martin. "We come together to do this for the community and the people who come each year have become like friends and family to us."

Anderson said the original idea was Leonard's.

"We had wanted to do it for a couple of years but didn't have a place for it," said Betty Martin. "Now we have so many people from the community donating turkeys and money. It's so nice."

other volunteers will join the foursome to help cook the 85 turkeys and trimmings that will serve more than 600 people. Several hundred of the meals will be delivered to those who are unable to leave their homes, including Minidoka County's Meals on Wheels recipients.

"We make sure we take care of them," Anderson said.

Members of the Elks Lodge also turn out to help with the event.

Charlie's Cafe owner Jose Ochoa has held a free Thanksgiving Day dinner at the cafe for the past eight years. A few years ago he began partnering with Jack Zarybnisky, who organizes a group of volunteers.

This year they have 300 meals to deliver before they serve hundreds more at the cafe.

"We have about 100 people who will come to help in shifts," said Ochoa. "We have one volunteer who is making 200 to 250 pies."

Volunteers and businesses across the community are helping to cook about 60 turkeys.

"My family is very involved and we really enjoy it," said Ochoa. "And my employees are right behind me."

Charlie's Cafe waitress Tammy Carroll has worked at the cafe for 11 years. She will help prepare food on Wednesday night for the dinner.

Thanksgiving in Mini-Cassia

Free community dinners planned Thursday include:

11 a.m. to 3 p.m.: Charlie's Cafe, 625 E. Main St., Burley.

Noon to 4 p.m.: Alaska's Best, Rupert Elks Lodge, 85 S. 200 W., Rupert.

"I think it's really a great thing to do. There are a lot of people who don't have friends or family or can't afford to buy dinner," Carroll said.

There will also be free clothing available at Charlie's Cafe.

Ochoa said any turkeys that are not cooked are put into food boxes by Zarybnisky and given away to families in need.

Leftovers and any proceeds collected from freewill offerings at both events are also donated back to local charities.

"We try to multiply the donations into something else and that makes it really special," Ochoa said.

School District Seeks More Damages against Contractor

BY JULIE WOOTTON
jwootton@magicvalley.com

HAILEY • The Blaine County School District is now seeking additional damages in a legal dispute with an energy service company.

In May, the school district and Seattle-based company McKinstry Essention Inc. filed civil complaints against each other.

The dispute is over the amount the company will be paid for a multimillion-dollar project to update heating, ventilation and air conditioning systems in eight school district buildings.

School district spokeswoman Heather Crocker said the district's attorneys filed a motion Friday in Blaine County 5th District Court to add a punitive damage claim to its counterclaim against McKinstry Essention.

The action, she said, is based on internal company emails the school district received during the pre-trial discovery process.

Crocker said the motions speak for themselves about the company's actions.

McKinstry Essention spokeswoman Heidi De Laubenfels said the school district's tactics are misguided and unnecessarily costly to everyone involved.

"That motion is just another in a series of baseless claims the school district has made in this case," she said.

De Laubenfels said the case is "nothing more than a dispute over payment."

A trial is scheduled to begin Oct. 15, 2013, and is expected to last 25 days.

In August, 5th District Judge Robert Elgee dismissed a school district claim that McKinstry Essention engaged in racketeering.

The school district's other two claims against the company — alleged fraud and violation of the Idaho Consumer Protection Act — remain in litigation.

Blaine County school trustees awarded a contract to McKinstry Essention in 2010 for school energy projects.

In addition to upgrading HVAC systems, the project also included drilling new wells at a few schools and installing ground-source heat pumps. Some school boilers that were about 40 years old were also replaced.

The contract for the long-term project includes a guaranteed maximum price of $15.1 million.

About $5 million of the funding comes from a federal energy grant. The rest is from a 10-year, $58.9 million plant facilities levy voters approved in October 2009.

Man Accused of Head-butting Police

BY ALISON GENE SMITH
alismith@magicvalley.com

TWIN FALLS • A North Dakota man was arrested Sunday after he allegedly head-butted a police officer.

Braxton James Martinez, 22, of Minot, N.D., was charged with assault or battery on an officer along with resisting or obstructing arrest.

At 1:15 a.m. Sunday, Twin Falls police responded to a call about a loud party complaint in the 600 block of Clinton Drive in Twin Falls.

According to a police report, a large number of people who appeared to be underage were running from the house, getting in cars and leaving as police arrived.

Several officers began detaining people, checking for identification and determining whether they drank alcohol, the report states.

When officers asked

Martinez to wait on a curb so they could check his identification, he allegedly asked "why?" and refused to comply several times.

According to the police report, Martinez "squared up" to an officer with his jaw and fists clenched. Police placed Martinez under arrest for resisting and obstructing and handcuffed him. According to the report, as officers searched Martinez, he allegedly tried to pull his hands away and head-butted the side of an officer's head.

As officers tried to get him in a patrol car, Martinez allegedly hooked his right foot under the door and refused to get in.

Martinez was held at the Twin Falls County Jail on a $5,000 bond. A preliminary hearing for the battery charge is scheduled for Nov. 30 and a pretrial for the resisting charge is scheduled for Jan. 2.

front yard of the home, the documents state.

The court documents detail a verbal altercation that then turned physical.

According to the documents, rocks were thrown at one point during the fight and a female was hit in the head and began bleeding profusely.

The male victim underwent emergency surgery for a stab wound. Upon waking, he identified Allred and the 17-year-old as two of his attackers, according to police.

The man said he thought four people attacked him, but told police he lost consciousness fairly quickly during the fight.

Nicholas Gray, 20, of Buhl, was arrested on a charge of aggravated battery after the fight, a release from the sheriff's office stated.

According to court documents, Garza, Allred and the 17-year-old stated they were going to travel to Twin Falls to physically harm the male victim and participated in the crime. The three allegedly admitted to hitting or kicking the man, but said Gray was the main aggressor in the fight.

Grant Will Boost Use of Khan Academy

TIMES-NEWS

TWIN FALLS • Students at more Idaho schools will soon be using an online resource for math education.

The J.A. and Kathryn Albertson Foundation will provide funding to support the use of the Khan Academy in classrooms across the state.

Jamie MacMillan, executive director of the Albertson Foundation, wrote in a statement that data shows many Idaho students struggle with math.

"We think accelerating the use of the Khan Academy in Idaho classrooms will not only bolster student math achievement, (but) it may also redefine what learning can and should look like in our state," she said.

Public and private schools — as well as after-school programs — who respond to a request for proposal will be selected to receive support from the Khan Academy and grants for purchasing one-to-one technology devices for students.

Grant winners will be announced Feb. 28. Full implementation for the pilot schools will start in fall 2013.

More than 20,000 classrooms around the world are currently using the Khan Academy website.

Members of the Khan Academy's school implementation team were in Idaho last month to conduct a two-day workshop for math educators.

Woman Injured in Monday Rollover

TIMES-NEWS

TWIN FALLS • A 42-year-old woman was injured Monday evening in a rollover crash.

Lt. Craig Stotts with the Twin Falls Police Department said Tara Martin of Twin Falls was transported to St. Luke's Magic Valley

Medical Center Monday after the crash. She was treated, then released Tuesday morning.

Stotts said Martin drove off the south side of Addison Avenue East near the intersection with Hankins Road and ran into barriers in the area before the vehicle rolled at about 5:05 p.m.

The initial cause of the crash is still under investigation, he said.

Stotts said Martin was not wearing a seatbelt and the airbags in the vehicle deployed.

The Twin Falls Street Department was notified about damage to the barriers, he said.

Deputies Wounded in Idaho Shootout Identified

BOISE (AP) • Law enforcement officials have identified two Canyon County deputies who were wounded in a shootout last month.

The Idaho Statesman reports Deputy Brad Childers, a SWAT team member who sustained minor injuries, has returned to patrol. Deputy Mike Roth, who was shot twice in one of his arms, is still recovering.

The men were among five deputies who were looking for 27-year-old Kyle Alan Batt on Oct. 23 at a Caldwell home. Investigators say Batt, who was a suspect in an aggravated assault, opened fire before fleeing to a nearby garage.

Batt was shot in one of his legs by police and reportedly shot himself in the face when a SWAT team surrounded the garage. He survived the injuries, and is recovering at a physical rehabilitation center in Boise.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Thank You for Funding Fit and Fall Proof Program

Recently, the South Central Public Health District was one of the fortunate applicants to receive funding from the First Federal Charitable Foundation. The funds were used to purchase medicine exercise balls for the Fit and Fall Proof exercise classes.

Fit and Fall Proof is an exercise program for older adults to increase strength and balance. Class leaders from the Fit and Fall Proof program were instructed on how to properly use the exercise balls. Currently Fit and Fall Proof sites in Carey, Eden, Gooding, Hailey, Kimberly, Oakley, Wendell and Twin Falls are implementing new exercises in their routines by using the medicine balls.

The South Central Public Health District would like to thank the First Federal Charitable Foundation for its generous contribution to the Fit and Fall Proof program. The medicine exercise balls are a great addition to the classes by helping older adults increase their mobility and flexibility and maintain their independence.

Letting Children Write on Faces Needs To Be Taken Seriously

My heart sank when I read in our Pendleton, Ore., East Oregonian paper about the children in Summer Larsen's (Declo Elementary) class being written on with permanent markers because they are slow readers!

Did she not realize the health issues with attempting to remove the marks? I am stunned! I would like to ask her, if the children were having trouble reading where was she as their teacher? Obviously, not teaching!

What must happen is:

1. The children will mark on her face with a permanent marker because maybe she knows of an easier way to get the marks off the skin!

2. Yank her teaching license forever and do it immediately, no questions asked about the stupidity of the act!

3. Fire that principal who allowed a teacher to bring so much disgrace to the school. Where is the communication between principal and teacher on what is allowed in class?

They need to take this happening very seriously! The behaviors are beyond comprehension!

Accelerated Reading Program Misused in Declo School Case

As a professional educator, I was appalled to read the report of the Declo Elementary School teacher who allowed students to write on the faces of children who had not met a reading goal. But I was really heart sick when I read in your paper that it was the result of using the Accelerated Reading program.

I was the director of the J.A. and Kathryn Albertson Foundation when that program was funded in 1997. At that time, we were privileged to have the creator come to Idaho and train us in the appropriate use of the program. It was never meant to be a way of teaching kids to read. It is only meant to encourage children to read and learn the joy of reading. It was never meant to be used to coerce children into reading and certainly not as a contest for which students would receive rewards or punishments. Obviously, the children who did not reach the reading goals had not been helped to choose appropriate goals and no doubt needed additional instruction and encouragement.

Any teacher, principal and, I might add, parent who condones the misuse of Accelerated Reader and thinks that this is how a professional educator would choose to treat students is sadly mistaken. I strongly encourage the school district to look into professional development training for all staff involved.

Time for Idaho to Work Together on Education

On Nov. 6, a majority of Idahoans rejected the Student Come First Legislation, commonly known as the "Luna Laws." As the politicians, lobbyists and other political pundits debate why and how that happened, those of us outside the political echo chambers of that five block part of Boise, we jokingly refer to as the "Emerald City," can tell you that those laws were rejected because they were simply not good enough for our children and they deserve better.

Now, in the interest of full disclosure, I am a recovering politician myself. I spent three terms in Idaho's House of Representatives and two sessions advising Governor Otter on education issues. I was with the Governor during the initial stages of what would become the Students Come First legislation. I was always under the assumption that those ideas we discussed on important improvements of education like increasing technology, dual credit classes and pay for performance would all be vetted in a collaborative process with the stakeholders that work with these students on a daily basis, the parents, teachers, administrators and school board members. I distinctly remember the Governor telling Tom that he needed to get the stakeholders on board because it not only affected their livelihood; it was the right thing to do. And Tom has been in Idaho long enough to know that even though Idahoans are typically independent-minded people, we always come together to solve problems to get things done the right way.

Sadly, for whatever reason, Tom Luna didn't take the Governor's advice and didn't work with the stakeholders, choosing instead to take a top-down approach, hurriedly forcing his legislation through the political process in a few short months. Not only is that a recipe for disaster, it is a recipe for bad legislation. If he would have taken the time to sit down and work with the students, parents, teachers, administrators and school board members - the five key stakeholder groups in K-12 education - who work tirelessly to provide the best education possible for our students, we could have come up with some great legislation we could have all supported that would have helped improve the education process in Idaho.

But with the election behind us it is time for us to stop pointing fingers and start working together for the sake of our children. It is my hope that Tom Luna will rise to the occasion, accept the message the people of Idaho have given him and reach out to those of us down in the educational trenches who are working hard every day and have always put our students first, long before it became a catchy political phrase.

If we are going to improve education, which should be a daily goal for all us, then we all need to come together and do what's right for Idaho's students.

Clete Edmunson is a former member of the Idaho House of Representatives and Education Advisor to Governor Otter. He currently teaches American Government and U.S. History at Murtaugh High School.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

The conversation continues 24/7 at Magicvalley.com:

An online reader had this to say in response to the article, "Under New Management, Animal Control Picks Up Steam:

twinfallsres: "I will not stand by with the countless and unselfish times the Manis have sent dogs out to a rescue and to adopters with THEIR own person vehicle! It's easy for a paper to get one side of the story when it's biased and someone wants to step on the backs of those that worked tirelessly before the management was switched. I have seen Mr. Mani on his back welding the cages there and his son also there helping them out to improve the shelter. Maybe the columnist should look at the city ordinance requiring dogs to be spayed and neutered BEFORE being sent to a rescue! There is more afoot than just saying its off and running! ...

"I thank those that made the shelter it is up to the point the shelter was improved and THEN taken over. Times-News should question why Mr Mani was let go of after almost 20 years of service in the same field to a less experienced individual. ..."

Readers were touched by the story, "Idaho Power to the Rescue:"

484436: "This was a very nice thing to do, it has changed some of my opinions on Idaho Power. Thanks to the crews that represented Idaho there. We are lucky to have them here, obviously."

Online readers continue to react to the article, "Declo Teacher Allows Students to Draw on Faces as Reading 'Incentive':"

karla813: "As a grandparent of two of the children who had faces marked on, I am very concerned, but those of you watching from afar this is the same old STUFF of "good old boy" small town politics. She is still in the class. I am not saying she should lose her job, but get her some education, or at least counseling. We have put eight children through this school district and we have some EXCELLENT teachers, our football team (that just won state) go Hornets! volleyball team were both academic all-stars with our track team a close second. But then there are those teachers who make all teachers look bad. Teachers, please go to school board and beg for something to be done, just because she might be the sister, sister in law, cousin, visiting teacher, daughter of a friend, should not give her the "second, third, or whatever" do over. ..."

Critics Want Feds To Reconsider Idaho Exploration

BY JOHN MILLER
Associated Press

BOISE • An Idaho environmental group wants the U.S. Forest Service to reconsider allowing more exploration for gold near the headwaters of the South Fork of the Salmon River.

The petition by the Idaho Conservation League marked its first public step to oppose plans by Vancouver, Canada-based Midas Gold to develop an open-pit mine in a historic mining district in Valley County.

Payette National Forest administrators recently approved construction of another 139 drill pads and 178 drill holes at the Golden Meadows project site.

The watershed is too valuable to risk with a modern mining project, conservation league representative John Robison said, "Just one catastrophic fuel spill, one landslide, or one toxic mining waste disaster could create an environmental nightmare for the Salmon River and its tributaries," added Karen Balch, who lives in nearby Cascade. "No amount of gold could ever replace the crown jewel of Idaho."

Robison has been joined by Balch and other community members who fear an accident such as the failure of an impoundment dam at a mine site near the proposed project in 1965 that sent sediment downstream. That problem damaged habitat for fish including bull trout, federal officials said.

Midas Gold executives have said the 100 workers now doing exploratory work are committed to mining safely and cleaning up past mining waste.

The company also points out that it has planted 12,800 trees during the past two years to reduce erosion and dust from areas previously disturbed by other companies that sought to exploit the region.

"Through mine development, we will be able to demonstrate to the satisfaction of regulators, local citizens and other concerned parties that we can leave the local environment in considerably better shape than when we found it," said Anne Labelle, a Midas vice president in charge of legal affairs.

Cassandra Kollenberg, a spokeswoman for Payette National Forest, didn't immediately return a phone call seeking information about how long her agency could take to consider the Idaho Conservation League petition.

Midas has spent several years consolidating ownership and control of land in the historic Stibnite-Yellow Pine mining area in Valley County, which it says is still home to millions of ounces of gold despite mining activity dating back about a century.

Last week, Midas Chief Executive Officer Stephen Quin told investors the results of 2012 exploration in the area exceeded expectations.

In the 1940s and 1950s, the Stibnite mine produced about four-fifths of the nation's tungsten, a metal critical to America's war effort largely because it retained its strength even under intense heat.

2 Injured in Natural Gas Explosion in Utah

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) • An explosion at a natural gas facility in Utah injured two workers and set off a fire that damaged several buildings Tuesday.

The explosion occurred just before 9 a.m. Tuesday near Price, Utah, when a gas line ruptured, the Carbon County Sheriff's Office said. Emergency crews were called out to the Dry Canyon natural gas operations center at about 10 a.m. and the fire was contained by 1 p.m., said Jim Felton, spokesman for the Bill Barrett Corp., which operates the station. Several buildings were also damaged.

The two injured men, both employees of Bill Barrett Corp., suffered burn injuries, the sheriff's office said. One man, in his early 60s, was airlifted to the University of Utah Burn Center in Salt Lake City. The other man, in his late 20s, was taken by ambulance to a hospital in Roosevelt.

The condition of the two men is unknown, said Felton. All gas wells going to the station have been shut down, but the cause of the incident is not yet clear, he said. No environmental spills have been reported, he said.

The natural gas operations center is located about 20 miles east of Price. Bill Barrett Corp. is an oil and natural gas exploration and development company with headquarters in Denver.

Shelter Workers Rescue 149 Chihuahuas from Hoarder

OGDEN, Utah (AP) • Shelter workers scrambled Tuesday to figure out what to do with 149 sick and starving Chihuahua dogs rescued from the home of an animal-lover turned hoarder.

Volunteers began removing the dogs Monday night after the owner called an animal shelter for help, the Standard-Examiner reported.

Pack 'N Pounce Animal Rescue spokeswoman Becky Cousineau was among the group that responded to the call.

"The lawn was gorgeous, the exterior of the home was in wonderful condition, but when you opened the door, the smell," she said. "It was overwhelming from 15 feet away."

The man apparently had been taking in strays and allowing them to reproduce. Neighbors also began dumping their unwanted pets over his 4-foot chain-link fence, Cousineau said.

The man was in poor health and living on a limited income. He shut off his electricity and telephone service to pay for dog food and even took the blankets off his bed to provide warmth for litters of puppies, Cousineau said.

The man initially told shelter workers that he had 60 dogs in his home, but the number kept mounting, the Standard-Examiner reported.

At least 16 of the rescued dogs are puppies. Officials have classified them all as mixed-breed Chihuahuas.

The animals are suffering from starvation and ammonia burns from exposure to urine. Some have birth defects from inbreeding, Cousineau said.

Lt. Chad Ferrin at the Weber County Animal Shelter told the Standard-Examiner that the 119 dogs the shelter took in need shots and deworming, and must see a vet before they can be adopted.

Rescuers have a nine-page waiting list for adoptions and are raising money to help the owner.

The man, who speaks limited English, is now receiving counseling.

"His intentions were to rescue these dogs," Cousineau. "The dogs keep having puppies, and he didn't know what to do."

Snag in Church Abuse Lawsuit Negotiations

BY MATT VOLZ
Associated Press

HELENA, Mont. • Settlement negotiations between hundreds of alleged sex abuse victims and the Roman Catholic Diocese of Helena may have hit a snag with the church's insurers refusing to cover the claims.

The insurers and the diocese are locked in a dispute over the terms and conditions of the diocese's insurance policies that date back to the 1970s — and whether some policies even existed. The sides disagree on how policies apply to the 324 claims of sex abuse stretching back decades by priests and nuns in homes, churches and school across western Montana.

The claims are from two combined lawsuits filed last year against the diocese and the Ursuline Sisters of the Western Province. The plaintiffs, many of them Native Americans, say the diocese and the sisters knew or should have known about the abuse, but covered it up instead of stopping it.

Attorneys for the alleged victims filed a legal complaint in state court on Nov. 14 asking for a declaratory judgment determining the scope and extent of the policies issued by the insurers.

Later that day, three of the diocese's insurers led by Travelers Casualty and Surety Co. filed a separate complaint in federal court asking for a ruling that they have no obligation to defend or indemnify the diocese.

Attorneys for the plaintiffs said Tuesday they object to the federal filing because the original lawsuit is in state court and that is the proper venue to decide state law.

"If the issues become an obstacle to settlement, then it's before a Montana court," attorney Gary Zadick said.

The negotiations with the diocese are still progressing, but the purpose behind the filing is to ensure there is enough money, including insurance money, available to compensate the plaintiffs, attorney Milt Datsopoulos said.

Travelers spokeswoman Jennifer Wislocki said she could not comment on pending litigation.

The alleged victims' complaint says the 13 named insurance companies all issued policies covering the diocese or the Ursulines, and the insurers are now obligated to defend them against the claims.

The complaint by three insurance companies led by Travelers says the insurers have no obligation to defend the diocese or pay out any claims. In a complex legal argument, the insurers claim the dioceses' insurance policies did not actually exist, or else were canceled or lost.

But if the policies actually exist, the insurers go on, they did not include liability coverage unless liability forms were included by mistake — a mistake the insurer did not discover until after the sex-abuse lawsuit was filed.

And even if a judge rules the policies included liability coverage, the insurers' argument concludes, the diocese breached its contract because it did not notify the insurers the abuse was happening.

OB/GYNs Back Over-the-counter Birth Control Pills

BY LAURAN NEERGAARD
Associated Press

WASHINGTON • No prescription or doctor's exam needed: The nation's largest group of obstetricians and gynecologists says birth control pills should be sold over the counter, like condoms.

Tuesday's surprise opinion from these gatekeepers of contraception could boost longtime efforts by women's advocates to make the pill more accessible.

But no one expects the pill to be sold without a prescription any time soon: A company would have to seek government permission first, and it's not clear if any are considering it. Plus there are big questions about what such a move would mean for many women's wallets if it were no longer covered by insurance.

Still, momentum may be building.

Already, anyone 17 or older doesn't need to see a doctor before buying the morning-after pill — a higher-dose version of regular birth control that can prevent

Elmo Actor Kevin Clash Resigns Amid Sex Allegation

BY FRAZIER MOORE
Associated Press

NEW YORK • Elmo puppeteer Kevin Clash resigned from "Sesame Street" on Tuesday amid allegations he sexually abused underage boys, bringing an end to a 28-year career in which he turned the furry red monster into one of the most beloved — and lucrative — characters on TV and in toy stores.

"Personal matters have diverted attention away from the important work 'Sesame Street' is doing and I cannot allow it to go on any longer," the 52-year-old performer said in a statement. "I am deeply sorry to be leaving and am looking forward to resolving these personal matters privately"

His departure came as a 24-year-old college student, Cecil Singleton, sued Clash for more than $5 million Tuesday, accusing the actor of engaging in sexual behavior with him when he was 15. Singleton charged that Clash made a habit of trolling gay chat lines for underage boys and meeting them for sex.

It was the second such allegation in just over a week. On Nov. 12, a man in his 20s said he had sex with Clash at age 16. A day later, though, the young man recanted, saying their relationship was adult and consensual.

Push for Israel-Hamas Cease-fire Gains Momentum

BY RAVI NESSMAN AND IBRAHIM BARZAK
Associated Press

JERUSALEM • A diplomatic push to end Israel's nearly weeklong offensive in the Gaza Strip gained momentum Tuesday, with Egypt's president predicting that airstrikes would soon end, the U.S. secretary of state racing to the region and Israel's prime minister saying his country would be a "willing partner" to a cease-fire with the Islamic militant group Hamas.

As international diplomats worked to cement a deal, a senior Hamas official said an agreement was close even as relentless airstrikes and rocket attacks between the two sides continued. The Israeli death toll rose to five with the deaths Tuesday of an Israeli soldier and a civilian contractor. More than 130 Palestinians have been killed.

U.S. Secretary of State Hillary Rodham Clinton held a late-night meeting with Israeli Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu after rushing to the region from Cambodia, where she had accompanied President Barack Obama on a visit.

"The goal must be a durable outcome that promotes regional stability and advances the security and legitimate aspirations of Israelis and Palestinians alike," she said at a news conference with Netanyahu.

Netanyahu said Israel would welcome a diplomatic solution to the crisis but threatened further military activity, saying he was ready to take "whatever action" is necessary.

The comments came after conflicting reports on whether a deal was imminent.

"We haven't struck the deal yet, but we are progressing and it will most likely be tonight," Moussa Abu Marzouk said earlier Tuesday from Cairo, where cease-fire talks were being held. A second Hamas official, Izzat Rishq, said later that a deal might not be reached.

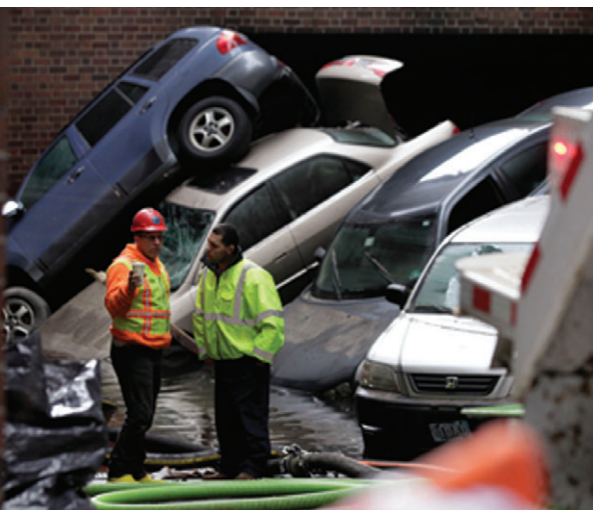

Israeli officials said only that "intensive efforts" were under way to end the fighting. Israeli media quoted Defense Minister Ehud Barak as telling a closed meeting that Israel wanted a 24-hour test period of no rocket fire to see if Hamas could enforce a truce.

In what appeared to be a last-minute burst of heavy fire, Israeli tanks and gunboats shelled targets late Tuesday, and an airstrike killed two brothers riding on a motorcycle. The men weren't identified.

Egyptian President Mohammed Morsi, perhaps the most important interlocutor between Hamas, which rules the Palestinian territory, and the Israelis, said the negotiations between the two sides would yield "positive results" during the coming hours.

Israel demands an end to rocket fire from Gaza and a halt to weapons smuggling into Gaza through tunnels under the border with Egypt. It also wants international guarantees that Hamas will not rearm or use Egypt's Sinai region, which abuts both Gaza and southern Israel, to attack Israel.

Hamas wants Israel to halt all attacks on Gaza and lift tight restrictions on trade and movement in and out of the territory that have been in place since Hamas seized Gaza by force in 2007. Israel has rejected such demands in the past.

Sandy Leads to Holiday Rental Car Shortage

NEW YORK (AP) • Thanksgiving travelers who have yet to rent a car in the Northeast are out of luck: Superstorm Sandy has created a shortage.

The storm has damaged thousands of cars — including those owned by rental companies. The loss of vehicles has been compounded by rising demand. Thanksgiving and Christmas are normally busy rental periods. And lingering mass transit problems caused by Sandy have added to demand.

Existing reservations are mostly being honored, but people who still want to book for Thanksgiving are finding almost no cars left. The few cars available carry a hefty premium.

Tadd Rosenfeld is flying into New York's LaGuardia airport Wednesday. He couldn't find a car with any major rental company. U-Save was the only one with a car and it wanted nearly $350 a day — more than his plane ticket from Florida. Now, he is considering renting a moving truck.

"Showing up to Thanksgiving in a U-Haul is worse than showing up with an escort. But at $19 a day, it's tempting," says Rosenfeld, CEO of TeamLauncher.com, an outsourcing company based in Miami.

U.S., Mexico Sign Rules on Sharing Colorado River

BY ELLIOT SPAGAT
Associated Press

CORONADO, Calif. • The United States and Mexico agreed Tuesday to rewrite rules on sharing water from the Colorado River, capping a five-year effort to create a united front against future droughts.

The far-reaching agreement signed near San Diego gives Mexico badly needed storage capacity by granting rights to put some of its river water in Lake Mead, which stretches across Nevada and Arizona.

Mexico will forfeit some of its share of the river during shortages, bringing itself in line with western U.S. states that already have agreed how much they will surrender in years when waters recede.

Water agencies in California, Arizona and Nevada also will buy water from Mexico, which will use some of the money to upgrade its infrastructure.

U.S. Interior Secretary Ken Salazar called the agreement the most important international accord on the Colorado River since a 1944 treaty.

"We have chosen cooperation and consensus over discord," he said.

The agreement, coming in the final days of the administration of Mexican President Felipe Calderon, is a major amendment to the 1944 treaty considered sacred by many south of the border. The treaty grants Mexico 1.5 million acre-feet of river water each year — enough to supply about 3 million homes — making it the lifeblood of Tijuana and other cities in northwest Mexico.

Mexico will surrender some of its allotment when the water level in Lake Mead drops to 1,075 feet and reap some of the surplus when it rises to Syrian fighters celebrate the victory on top of a tank they took after storming a military base in Aleppo on Monday.

Syrian Rebels Seize Base, Arms Trove

BY BEN HUBBARD
Associated Press

BASE OF THE 46TH REGIMENT, Syria • After a nearly two-month siege, Syrian rebels overwhelmed a large military base in the north part of the country and made off with tanks, armored vehicles and truckloads of munitions that rebel leaders say will give them a boost in the fight against President Bashar Assad's army.

The rebel capture of the base of the Syrian army's 46th Regiment is a sharp blow to the government's efforts to roll back rebels gains and shows a rising level of organization among opposition forces.

More important than the base's fall, however, are the weapons the rebels found inside.

At a rebel base where much of the haul was taken after the weekend victory, rebel fighters unloaded half a dozen large trucks piled high with green boxes full of mortars, artillery shells, rockets and rifles taken from the base. Parked nearby were five tanks, two armored vehicles, two rocket launchers and two heavy-caliber artillery cannons.

Around 20 Syrian soldiers captured in the battle were put to work carrying munitions boxes, barefoot and stripped to the waist. Rebels refused to let reporters talk to them or see where they were being held.

"There has never been a battle before with this much booty," said Gen. Ahmad al-Faj of the rebels Joint Command, a grouping of rebel brigades that was involved in the siege. Speaking on Monday at the rebel base, set up in a former customs office at Syria's Bab al-Hawa border crossing with Turkey, he said the haul would be distributed among the brigades.

For months, Syria's rebels have gradually been destroying government checkpoints and taking over towns in the northern provinces of Idlib and Aleppo along the Turkish border.

Rebel fighters say that weapons seized in such battles have been essential to their transformation from ragtag brigades into forces capable of challenging Assad's professional army. Cross-border arms smuggling from Turkey and Iraq has also played a role, although the most common complaint among rebel fighters is that they lack ammunition and heavy weapons, munitions and anti-aircraft weapons to fight Assad's air force.

It is unclear how many government bases the rebels have overrun during the 20-month conflict, mostly because they rarely try to hold captured facilities. Staying in the captured bases would make them sitting ducks for regime airstrikes.

"Their strategy is to hit and run," said Elias Hanna, a retired Lebanese army general and Beirut-based strategic analyst. "They're trying to hurt the regime where it hurts by bisecting and compartmentalizing Syria in order to dilute the regime's power."

The 46th Regiment was a major pillar of the government's force near the northern city of Aleppo, Syria's economic hub, and its fall cuts a major supply line to the regime's army, Hanna said. Government forces have been battling rebels for months over control of Aleppo.

Outrage in India over Arrests for Facebook Post

BY NIRMALA GEORGE
Associated Press

NEW DELHI • As India's financial capital shut down for the weekend funeral of a powerful politician linked to waves of mob violence, a woman posted on Facebook that the closures in Mumbai were "due to fear, not due to respect." A friend of hers hit the "like" button.

For that, both women were arrested.

Analysts and the media are slamming the Maharashtra state government for what they said was a flagrant misuse of the law and an attempt to curb freedom of expression. The arrests were seen as a move by police to prevent any outbreak of violence by supporters of Bal Thackeray, a powerful Hindu fundamentalist politician who died Saturday.

"We are living in a democracy, not a fascist dictatorship," Markandey Katju, a former Supreme Court justice who now heads the Press Council of India, wrote in a protest letter to the chief minister of Maharashtra.

Katju demanded that the state government suspend the police officers who had ordered the arrests and prosecute them.

The women withdrew the comment and apologized, but angry Thackeray supporters ransacked an orthopedic clinic run by the uncle of one woman.

A lawyer representing the women, Sudheer Gupta, said police arrested them Sunday, the day of the funeral, on charges of creating enmity and hatred. They were released on bail Monday.

Shaheen Dhada, the 21-year-old who posted the comment appeared on television Tuesday, her face covered by a scarf so that only her eyes were visible.

Clearly terrified by her arrest and the attack on her uncle's clinic, Dhada told NDTV television she would never again make comments on a social networking site. Both women said they have deactivated their Facebook accounts.

Dhada described her arrest as "unfair."

"It was not a crime," Renu Srinivas, Dhada's friend who also was arrested, told NDTV.

India's Information Technology Minister Kapil Sibal said he was "deeply saddened" by the arrests of the two women.

"Freedom of speech is a very important right, and we need to protect it," Sibal told reporters. He said the government would re-examine the laws governing information technology to prevent its misuse by the police.

"We want to make sure that this law is not meant to prevent people from stating their point of view on any issue," Sibal said Tuesday.

Rifle-toting Terrorists Called Major Threat to Power Grid

BY BRIAN WINGFIELD
Bloomberg News

WASHINGTON • An attack on the power grid by terrorists — even ones armed with relatively simple weapons — is among the greatest threats to the reliability of the nation's power system, the chairman of the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission said Tuesday.

"There are ways that a very few number of actors with very rudimentary equipment could take down large portions of our grid," FERC Chairman Jon Wellinghoff said at a Bloomberg Government breakfast in Washington. "I don't think we have the level of physical security we need."

The security of the power-network components such as transformers "is an equal if not greater issue" than cybersecurity, Wellinghoff said.

The agency two months ago created an office to help reduce risks to the electric grid and natural-gas and oil facilities. A terrorist attack on the system could cost hundreds of billions of dollars and result in thousands of deaths, according to a 2007 report that was declassified and released by the National Academy of Sciences on Nov. 14.

The FERC, which regulates the interstate transport of electricity, natural gas and oil, this year also has ramped up its enforcement against energy-market manipulation. Wellinghoff predicted that a recent surge in filings against energy traders would plateau, and said he had not decided whether to consider another term as chairman when his current one expires next year.

"A coordinated physical attack is a very, very unsettling thing to me," Wellinghoff said. The FERC chairman said that about six weeks ago he visited a Pennsylvania plant where high-voltage transformers are made. "It was a very interesting and very eye-opening experience," he said.

Transformers, which alter the voltage of electricity, are often custom built for utilities and can take 18 to 36 months to make, according to Wellinghoff. They are also inadequately protected, often surrounded only by chain-link fences, he said.

pregnancy if taken shortly after unprotected sex. Earlier this year, the Food and Drug Administration held a meeting to gather ideas about how to sell regular oral contraceptives without a prescription, too.

Now the influential American College of Obstetricians and Gynecologists is declaring it's safe to sell the pill that way.

Wait, why would doctors who make money from women's yearly visits for a birth-control prescription advocate giving that up?

Half of the nation's pregnancies every year are unintended, a rate that hasn't changed in 20 years — and easier access to birth control pills could help, said Dr. Kavita Nan-da, an OB/GYN who co-authored the opinion for the doctors group.

"It's unfortunate that in this country where we have all these contraceptive methods available, unintended pregnancy is still a major public health problem," said Nanda, a scientist with the North Carolina nonprofit FHI 360, formerly known as Family Health International.

Many women have trouble affording a doctor's visit, or getting an appointment in time when their pills are running low — which can lead to skipped doses, Nanda added.

If the pill didn't require a prescription, women could "pick it up in the middle of the night if they run out," she said. "It removes those types of barriers."

1,145 feet, according to a summary of the agreement prepared by the Metropolitan Water District of Southern California, which will buy some of Mexico's water.

The agreement expires in five years and is being billed as a trial run, potentially making it more palatable in Mexico.

"These are big political steps for Mexico to take," said Jeffrey Kightlinger, Metropolitan's general manager. "Chances are we won't have a surplus and we won't have a shortage but, if we do, we'll have the guidelines in place on how we're going to handle it."

In 2007, facing an eight-year drought, California, Arizona and Nevada agreed on how much each state should sacrifice during shortages on the 1,450-mile river that flows from the Rocky Mountains to Mexico. That same year, the U.S. and Mexico promised to work on ways to jointly address shortages.

The negotiations gained a sense of urgency for Mexico in 2010 after a magnitude-7.2 earthquake damaged canals and other infrastructure, forcing it to store water temporarily in Lake Mead.

"They have some storage but it's not enough for drought and emergencies," said Halla Razak, Colorado River program director at the San Diego County Water Authority.

Roberto Salmon, Mexico's representative to the International Boundary and Water Commission, said the pact was the latest sign of improved cooperation with the U.S.

Church of England Says No to Female Bishops

BY ROBERT BARR
Associated Press

LONDON • The Church of England's governing body blocked a move Tuesday to permit women to serve as bishops in a vote so close it failed to settle the question of female leadership and likely condemned the institution to years of more debate on the issue.

The General Synod's day-long debate ended with the rejection of a compromise intended to unify the faithful despite differing views on whether women should be allowed in the hierarchy. But backers failed to gain the necessary majority by six votes.

"There is no victory in the coming days," said Rev. Angus MacLeay. "It is a train crash."

The defeat was a setback for Archbishop of Canterbury, Rowan Williams, who retires at the end of December, and his successor, Bishop Justin Welby. Both had strongly endorsed a proposed compromise that would have respected the decision of those who objected to the ordination of women bishops.

Instead of ending decades of debate on the issue in the church, the narrow defeat opens the church, which has around 80 million members worldwide, to further years of internal discussions. It also forms an uncomfortable backdrop to the start of Welby's leadership. He is due to be enthroned in March.

Passage of legislation to allow women to serve as bishops must be approved by two-thirds majorities in the synod's three houses: bishops, priests and laity. Some took heart in the fact that both the bishops and the clergy voted overwhelmingly in favor. But among the laity, the vote fell short, with 132-74.

"This leaves us with a problem," said Bishop Graham James of Norwich. "Forty-two out of 44 dioceses approved the legislation and more than three-quarters of members of diocesan synods voted in favor."

OBITUARIES

Janet Rae Williams

July 15, 1929-Nov. 17, 2012

QUEEN CREEK, Ariz. • Janet Rae Williams, 83, of Queen Creek, Ariz., and formerly from Wendell, Idaho, passed away Saturday, Nov. 17, 2012, at home surrounded by loving family and under the care of Hospice of the Valley.

A celebration of life was held Nov. 19 privately with family.

Janet was born July 15, 1929, in Woodlake Neb., the daughter of Ray and Irene Lee. She attended school in Nebraska and California and graduated in Wendell, Idaho. Janet was united in marriage to Lamar Williams on Aug. 27, 1949 in Idaho. They moved to Evansdale, Iowa, then to Cedar Falls, Iowa, to make a home and raise six children. Janet loved to golf and play cards with friends. Janet loved her family and enjoyed large family gatherings and dinners.

She cherished and loved her grandchildren, Jason, Shawna, Samantha, Christopher, Jessica, Megan, Elizabeth, Lindsey, Derek, Rebecca, Shae, Racheal, Tiffany and Leslie. She also greatly cherished her great-grandchildren, Zackary, Sophia, Samuel, Charlie, Zoey, Rowan, Luis and Jaiden. She looked forward to their visits, pictures and stories.

Janet is survived by her husband of 63 years, Lamar Williams; six children, Roger Williams of Queen Creek, Ariz., Russell (Peggy) Williams of Cresco, Iowa, Randy (Glenna) Williams of Mesa, Ariz., Rhonda Gifford (Dan) of San Tan Valley, Ariz., Robin (Claire) Williams of Mesa, Ariz., and Rhea Williams (Clay) of Gilman, Iowa. She was preceded in death by her parents, Ray and Irene Lee; sister, Donna Belle (Leonard) Nichols; brother, Jim (Nona) Lee; and brother, Roland Lee.

Janet had a wonderful and successful life filled with so much love that it remains in everyone's hearts forever.

Former Mouseketeer Bonita Lynn Fields Elder Dies

BY RICK CALLAHAN

Associated Press

INDIANAPOLIS • Former Mouseketeer Bonita Lynn Fields Elder, an agile dancer who showcased those skills on the 1950s children's show "The Mickey Mouse Club" and later performed on Broadway, has died in Indiana at age 68.

Her cousin Robbin Myers said Tuesday that Elder died Saturday at a Richmond hospital following a two-year battle with throat cancer. Elder had smoked for decades but quit after her diagnosis, Myers said.

Elder had been living in Winchester after moving back to eastern Indiana a few years ago to care for her ailing, now-deceased mother.

She was 12 in 1957, when her dancing abilities helped her win a slot on the third season of "The Mickey Mouse Club." She auditioned in California, where her family had moved from Indiana when she was 9.

Elder always went by the name Lynn, but she adopted the stage name "Bonnie" — a shortened version of her real first name — at the suggestion of the show's producers because there was already a cast member, a boy, with the first name Lynn, her cousin said.

Myers, who now lives in DeBary, Fla., said she and Elder were a year apart and grew up together in Richmond until Elder's family moved to Granada, Calif. It was exciting when Elder was cast in the nationally broadcast show only a few years later, she said.

FBI: 4 Calif. Men Charged in Alleged Terror Plot

BY GREG RISLING

Associated Press

LOS ANGELES • Three California men excited at the prospect of training in Afghanistan to become terrorists prepared, authorities say, by simulating combat with paintball rifles, wiping their Facebook profiles of any Islamic references and concocting cover stories.

Just two days before they were going to board a plane bound for Istanbul — and then onto Afghanistan — FBI agents thwarted plans that officials said included killing Americans and bombing U.S. military bases overseas.

The arrests last week in the U.S. and of the man said to be the ringleader, 34-year-old American Sohail Omar Kabir, in Afghanistan was laid out in a 77-page affidavit, which included references to the group's online video conversations and audio recordings.

While authorities don't believe there were any plans for an attack in the U.S., two of the men arrested told a confidential FBI informant they would consider American jihad, according to the court documents unsealed in federal court Monday.

The arrests are the latest in a series of cases where U.S. residents were targeted to become terrorists. Last month, a Minneapolis man was convicted of helping send young men to Somalia to join the al-Qaida-linked terrorist group al-Shabab.

Along with Kabir, Ralph Deleon, Miguel Alejandro Santana Vidriales and Arifeen David Gojali are facing charges of providing material support to terrorists. The charges can carry a maximum 15-year prison sentence upon conviction.

Defense attorneys did not immediately return calls for comment.

Federal investigators said Kabir met Deleon and Santana at a hookah bar and introduced them to the radical Islamist doctrine of the U.S.-born extremist cleric Anwar al-Awlaki, who was killed last year in an American airstrike in Yemen.

Kabir, a naturalized U.S. citizen from Afghanistan, served in the Air Force from 2000 to 2001. He spent some time at Davis Monthan Air Force Base in Tucson, Ariz., pulling aircraft or vehicle parts from a supply store. He was administratively separated for unknown reasons and was given an honorable discharge, the military said.

"It was a standard enlistment that ended early but not for reasons of misconduct," said Air Force spokeswoman Ann Stefanek.

According to the court documents, Deleon said meeting Kabir was like encountering someone from the camps run by al-Awlaki or Osama bin Laden, who was killed in a U.S. raid last year on his compound in Pakistan.

Kabir was "basically a mujahid walking the streets of LA," Deleon said, using the term for holy warrior, according to court documents. "He was just waiting to get his papers. And I met him at the point of his life where he was about to go."

Authorities wouldn't say how the investigation began, but they tracked Kabir's travels last year and flagged violent extremist messages posted online by Santana. Covert FBI agents had conversations with Santana online where he expressed his support of jihad and desire to join al-Qaida.

"We were on them for quite a while," said FBI Special Agent David Bowdich.

In video calls from Afghanistan, Kabir told the trio he would arrange their meetings with terrorists, investigators said. Kabir added they could sleep in mosques or the homes of other jihadists once they arrived in Afghanistan.

Stateside, Deleon and Santana were eager about the prospects of being terrorists. When asked by the FBI informant if both men had thought about how it would feel to kill someone, Santana responded, "The more I think about it, the more it excites me."

The two men also discussed where they could do the most damage. After considering going to Palestine and the Philippines, Santana said he preferred Afghanistan because the military bases there could easily be ambushed.

Santana said he was easily influenced by people growing up and spent time around gangs. He said converting to Islam was a good move for him because he could fit in and "actually fight for something that's right," according to court documents.

Santana, 21, was born in Mexico, while Deleon, 23, was born in the Philippines. Both are lawful, permanent U.S. residents.

Jen Collins, who lives two doors down from Santana's apartment in Upland, east of Los Angeles, said at least a dozen FBI agents swarmed his unit early Friday. "It was like something coming out of the movies or TV," Collins said.

3 Dead in Murder-suicide at Calif. Senior Center

TORRANCE, Calif. (AP) • Three people died Tuesday in what appears to be a double murder-suicide at a senior citizens' high-rise south of Los Angeles, police said.

A man in his 80s apparently shot two women shortly after noon before turning the gun on himself in the lobby of the Golden West Tower apartments in Torrance, said Sgt. Robert Watt.

One of the women was an employee of the apartment complex, but neither victim has been identified and the man's motive was unknown, Watt said.

Residents and staff from the senior center told NBC4 that the man had been behaving erratically, and many of them were seeking to have him kicked out of the complex.

"People knew that he was a little bit off," Golden Tower employee Alex Galindo told the TV station. "People were warned, but nobody did anything, so I know there's going to be blood on a lot of people's hands. That's all I can say at this point."

Watt said the building's management had received complaints about the alleged shooter but police were never alerted.

Police were trying to obtain surveillance camera recordings of the shooting, Watt said.

According to the city of Torrance's website, Golden West Towers is a 180-unit, privately owned and operated facility. The low- and moderate-income housing is for seniors who can live independently.

A call to building management wasn't answered Tuesday night and the voicemail box was full.

There have been several murder-suicides at senior centers in Southern California in recent years.

In a shooting last month, investigators suspect 45-year-old Colin McGrattan shot and killed his ex-wife and her two nieces at O'Connor Woods Senior Living center in Stockton before killing himself.

In 2010, 77-year-old Arthur Baar shot and killed his wife Caryl, 72, before turning the gun on himself in Laguna Woods, the south Orange County retirement community formerly known as Leisure World.

San Francisco Lawmakers Vote To Ban Public Nudity

BY LISA LEFF

Associated Press

SAN FRANCISCO • San Francisco lawmakers disappointed committed nudists Tuesday by narrowly approving a ban on public nakedness despite concerns the measure would undermine the city's reputation as a sanctuary for free expression.

The Board of Supervisors voted 6-5 in favor of a public safety ordinance that prohibits exposed genitals in most public places, including streets, sidewalks and public transit. The law still must pass a final vote and secure Mayor Edwin Lee's signature to take effect early next year.

Supervisor Scott Wiener introduced the ban in response to escalating complaints about a group of men whose bare bodies are on display almost daily in the city's predominantly gay Castro District.

"The Castro, and San Francisco in general, is a place of freedom, expression and acceptance. But freedom, expression and acceptance does not mean anything goes under any circumstances," Wiener said Tuesday. "Our public spaces are for everyone, and as a result it's appropriate to have some minimal standards of behavior."

Wiener's opponents on the board said a citywide ban was unnecessary and would draw police officers' attention away from bigger problems while undermining San Francisco values like tolerance and appreciation for the offbeat.

"I'm concerned about civil liberties, about free speech, about changing San Francisco's style and how we are as a city," Supervisor John Avalos said. "I cannot and will not bite this apple and I refuse to put on this fig leaf."

To make his point, Avalos showed his colleagues a clip from the 1970 movie version of Joseph Heller's "Catch-22." In it, Orson Welles pins a medal on a naked soldier.

"I get emails all the time about people who are upset there are homeless people, and I would be the last person to legislate a solution for people who do not want homeless people in their neighborhood," Supervisor Christina Olague said.

Wiener countered that it was inappropriate for hardcore nudists to wrap themselves in the mantle of personal liberty.

They're milking goats, experimenting with cold frames and gathering eggs in the backyard. They bring bee hives or bunnies into city neighborhoods. They're determined not to let small spaces keep them from pursuing self-sufficiency. ¶ These are south-central Idaho's urban homesteaders. Today's stories are the second installment in a weekly Times-News series that celebrates their initiative and examines their challenges.

New Restaurant Builds on Food Wagon's Success

BY VIRGINIA HUTCHINS

known as Rock Creek Road.

HANSEN • An entrepreneur whose food wagon built a seasonal clientele for his specialty burgers and hot dogs has opened a year-round restaurant south of Hansen.

Elser

Does the eatery's name sound familiar? There's a reason for that.

From March through late October each year, Elser operates his Cactus Grill wagon selling hot dogs, hamburgers, hot sandwiches and snacks in the Home Depot parking lot in Twin Falls.

"We've been there for six years and we have a pretty big following," he said, adding that sales have grown every year. "This year our sales increased probably 30 percent over last year. It's been a pretty good ride."

Deadline Today: Sign Up for Cookie Contest

This December, someone will earn the title of southern Idaho's Cookie Champ.

It could be you, if you can bake the cookie that most impresses the Times-News' features department and our panel of cookie connoisseurs.

But the deadline to sign up is 5 p.m. today.

In 2011, our cookie contest drew 25 contestants, with Twin Falls' Virginia Reynolds narrowly beating out the others to claim top honors.

To compete for the 2012 title, sign up today by calling Tetona Dunlap at 735-3243 or emailing her at tdunlap@magicvalley.com. She'll give you the instructions and location for our Nov. 26 cookie-tasting panel.

We'll ask contestants to bring a half-dozen homemade cookies — from a single recipe of their choice — to wow our judges that day.

ASHLEY SMITH • TIMES-NEWS
Anita Selner of Bellevue and her husband, Keith, show the cold frames they use to grow vegetables well past the normal growing season. Last winter, they ate salad from their garden for Christmas dinner, Anita says.

GROW YOUR OWN: WINTER SALAD

BY TETONA DUNLAP
tdunlap@magicvalley.com

BELLEVUE • Three years ago Keith Selner went to the grocery store and had a revelation in the produce aisle.

That day he went to buy a package of baby kale spring mix and for the first time actually looked at the weight. For one pound of kale he would pay $16.

"This is insane," Keith said he thought as he held the small package. "Why pay more for food you can grow for less and get more?"

In addition to the price, Keith said, he was tired of eating food that was weeks old.

So Keith went home and did some research into cold frames — structures that protect plants from the cold season — and now he no longer buys certain vegetables from the store. Even in November.

On Nov. 13, Keith and his wife, Anita, were outside their Bellevue home tending to their garden and their hens.

That morning they awoke to a light dusting of snow, but by afternoon it was gone. Still, it was cold enough outside to require a jacket, the wind picking up slightly as the clouds increased to the north.

Please see WINTER SALAD, F3

In this weekly series, the Times-News features south-central Idahoans who've brought a bit of agriculture into their city neighborhoods.

Next Wednesday's stories:

- A man who eats his homegrown turkey for Thanksgiving.
- Your options for butchering your backyard livestock — or paying to have it done.

Read last week's stories: magicvalley.com/lifestyles

Your Go-to Resources

Want to get started with backyard cold frames? Keith Selner recommends these books:

- "Four-Season Harvest: Organic Vegetables from Your Home Garden All Year Long" by Eliot Coleman.
- To learn more about soil, read "Square Foot Gardening" by Mel Bartholomew.
- "Guide to Rocky Mountain Vegetable Gardening" by Robert Gough. "It's written for this climate," Keith said.

Rules for Selling Your Extra Food

BY TETONA DUNLAP
tdunlap@magicvalley.com

TWIN FALLS • So what if you have a plentiful backyard crop and you want to sell some extra carrots or beets to your neighbors?

"You can give all the produce you want to a neighbor for free," said Laura Johnson, bureau chief of the market development division of the Idaho State Department of Agriculture. But if you intend to sell instead, you have to follow a few guidelines.

Here are some of Idaho's guidelines, which mirror the laws for farmers markets:

- Produce cannot be sold to restaurants unless licensed by an Idaho health district environmental health officer.

• Unless you have this type of license, do not offer samples or slices.

• If you sell by the pound, you must have a certified scale inspected by the ISDA's Bureau of Weights and Measurements. Johnson recommends selling per item instead.

• When selling beans, it has to be beans grown from certified Idaho bean

Yogurt, Mustard Soak Keeps this Chicken Moist

STEPHANIE WITT SEDGWICK

Special to The Washington Post

Deviled chicken was one of my mom's standbys. Skin-on, bone-in chicken parts were smeared with Dijon-style mustard and broiled. It made for delicious skin, but the meat didn't have much flavor.

My modern-day makeover gets rid of the skin. To keep the chicken moist and flavorful, I soak it in a combination of yogurt and mustard, mixing Indian methods with French seasoning. Then I coat it in panko bread crumbs and add a spritz of nonstick cooking oil spray. After baking, the chicken pieces get a brief trip under the broiler to brown the crumbs.

You can use boneless, skinless chicken breast or skinless, bone-in chicken legs and thighs. I've got two kids who can't agree, so I make a few pieces of all three.

There's enough mustard in the marinade to be interesting but not overpowering. If you like your chicken mustardy, double the amount called for here. The same applies to the cayenne pepper.

The chicken pieces need to be refrigerated in the marinade for 8 to 12 hours.

Panko-Crusted Deviled Chicken

8 small or 4 large servings.

- 1 cup nonfat plain yogurt
- 2 tablespoons Dijon-style mustard, or more to taste
- 1/4 teaspoon salt
- 1/4 teaspoon freshly ground black pepper
- 1/4 teaspoon sweet paprika
- 1/8 teaspoon cayenne pepper, or more to taste
- Eight 4-ounce boneless, skinless chicken breast halves (may substitute skinless, bone-in chicken thighs or legs)
- 2 cups panko bread crumbs
- Nonstick cooking oil spray

Whisk together the yogurt, mustard, salt, pepper, paprika and cayenne pepper in a large bowl until smooth and well combined. Add the chicken breast halves; turn to coat evenly. Cover the bowl and refrigerate for 8 to 12 hours.

When ready to cook, position an oven rack in the lower third of the oven and a second rack just below the broiler. Preheat the oven to 375 degrees. Line 1 large or 2 small rimmed baking sheets with aluminum foil. Spray the foil with nonstick cooking oil spray.

Place the panko in a shallow dish. Working with one piece of chicken at a time, remove the chicken from the marinade (it should be well coated) and place it in the panko. Cover with panko, patting and moving the crumbs around so the entire piece of chicken is coated. Transfer the chicken to the prepared baking sheet(s). Repeat with the remaining pieces of chicken. Discard any remaining crumbs. Lightly spray the top of each chicken piece with nonstick cooking oil spray.

Bake on the lower oven rack for 25 minutes or until an instant-read thermometer inserted into the thickest part of the chicken registers 160 degrees; then set the broiler to high and transfer the sheet(s) to the higher rack, about 4 inches below the heating element. Broil for 2 to 3 minutes, until the crumbs are nicely browned. Let the chicken rest for at least 5 minutes before serving. Serve warm or at room temperature. Per serving (based on 8): 180 calories, 29 g protein, 10 g carbohydrates, 2 g fat, 0 g saturated fat, 65 mg cholesterol, 200 mg sodium, 0 g dietary fiber, 0 g sugar.

The contest, previously housed on the IPC's website, was re-launched on its Pinterest page in October (pinterest.com/idahopotato).

"Zoe's photograph beautifully captured the creativity of the dish through her composition and food styling," said Frank Muir, IPC's president and CEO.

Visit pinterest.com/idahopotato/recipe-photo-contest/ to find the featured recipe of each month, make the dish and pin it for an opportunity to win $250 cash.

Next up: November and December's featured recipe is Idaho Potato and Wisconsin White Cheddar Gratin.

Restaurant

He and his wife, Laurie Elser, also owned a Twin Falls catering business for four years and sold it two years ago; it still operates under the Cactus Grill name, he said.

So don't be confused by the subtle difference in his new venture's name: Cactus Grill Restaurant.

With a staff of 12, the Hansen restaurant is open for all three meals, seven days a week: 9 a.m. to 8 p.m. Mondays-Thursdays, 9 a.m. to 9 p.m. Fridays, 8 a.m. to 9 p.m. Saturdays and 8 a.m. to 8 p.m. Sundays. Billy Elser expects to shift to earlier opening times soon. The decor is outdoorsy, showcasing mounted hunting trophies.

The breakfast menu includes three-egg omelets such as the Greek, which features spinach, feta, sun-dried tomatoes and herbs. Dinner specialties include Parmesan-crust halibut and — on Friday and Saturday nights — prime rib and baby back ribs, Billy Elser said.

But it's the Cactus Grill Restaurant's lunch menu that will look familiar to fans of the food wagon.

For the Philly cheesesteak sandwich, thinly sliced rib-eye steak is chopped and mixed with red bell peppers, seasoned sauteed onions and other ingredients, then served with provolone or Swiss on a hoagie roll from Jim Bob's Bakery in Twin Falls. The restaurant's various burgers, also on buns from the Twin Falls bakery, come with a housemade sauce. (What's in the sauce? Billy Elser is coy on that point.)

Reach the restaurant at 208-421-1517.

Winter Salad

The cold frames next to the Selners' house are low to the ground, three side-by-side rectangular boxes covered by lids made from clear, hard plastic. When Keith opens the three lids, he props them up with a stick.

Keith built the cold frames next to the house; besides the overhead sunlight, the plants inside also receive reflective heat off the side of the house.

To help warm the plants during the night, empty juice bottles are painted black and filled with water. The "heat sinks" collect heat all day and release it at night.

It could be zero degrees outside but once the sun comes out it can be around 100 degrees inside the cold frames.

In the three cold frames that morning were the green tops of spinach, Swiss chard, carrots and Asian greens. There had been heads of lettuce in there too, but the chickens ate them. Every once in a while, Anita said, the Selners find eggs in there.

Well into the winter and in the earliest days of spring, the Selners can harvest fresh greens from their "Side Yard Farm," as they call it. If outside temperatures dip below 20 degrees, Keith will have to dig up the carrots and beets so they don't freeze in the soil. But the other vegetables — such as kale — can be left in the ground all winter.

"The best time to eat kale is in the winter; the colder it is, the sweeter it tastes," Keith said. He said that's because the sugar gets a chance to develop in the roots.

"We just harvested the Brussels sprouts," Keith said.

Last Christmas, Keith said, there was a foot and a half of snow on top of the cold frames. And right in the middle of winter, he harvested vegetables for a salad.

When Should You Plant?

Cold frames are meant to keep plants that usually grow in the summer months fresh and ready to harvest well into the winter,

The Selners grow mixed greens, onions and leeks in this low tunnel.

PHOTOS BY ASHLEY SMITH • TIMES-NEWS

Mixed Asian greens grow in the Selners' cold frames — in mid-November.

Keith said.

Cold frames do not allow you to grow new crops during winter — Keith said seeds usually won't germinate in temperatures colder than 50 degrees — but cold frames will extend the life of crops so you can pick them fresh even when it's cold outside.

How Much Do Cold Frames Cost?

Three cold frames with a total of 80 square feet of growing room cost the Selners less than $100. Each cold frame cost about $20 to $30 to build, using recycled materials and those purchased at a building material thrift store. Seeds for the garden were an additional $10.

Keith also has a low tunnel that he constructed to grow even more vegetables outside. His tunnel is on a raised bed of stone, but you can also construct one on the ground. Each PVC pipe for the tunnel cost $1, and the plastic sheeting was about $50.

The Difficulties

"It's a spiritual thing. I don't think of it as difficult, but you can't throw seeds in the ground and expect things to grow," Keith said. "You won't grow anything if you don't have good soil."

Cold frames are simple to build, but you'll have to do a little reading first. You'll need to be able to regulate temperature without blocking sunlight.

And even if you do it perfectly, you may grow good beets one year and not the next — just as in any garden.

The Benefits

Not only do you have your own fresh produce stand right outside your door, there are fewer pests to deal with after the weather turns cold. Because Keith puts his plants close to each other, they shade any weed seeds that might be in the soil, so there isn't a lot of weeding to do.

The Selners' chickens complete a portion of the compost cycle. The Selners make compost using chicken manure, straw and scraps from the garden. They have the compost in the pen with the chickens, which eat the weeds and rotate the compost.

"It's constant recycling. It's just a big circle," Anita said. "And they chase the hornets away."

The Selners provide family and friends with produce they would otherwise have to buy at the store. The Selners also sell food to their neighbors — tomatoes for $5 a pound, squash for 50 cents a pound, kale for $4 a pound — or just give them extra.

What's Next for Them

Inside his garage, Keith is experimenting with a small heated greenhouse sitting on top of pallets — with dreams to expand to a 120-foot one in the future — so he can grow a garden year-round.

There were some learning curves he had to overcome, like when he unknowingly brought in aphids with the soil. They were dormant inside the soil, and the heat of the lights caused them to hatch. To counteract them, Keith purchased ladybugs online.

On Nov. 13, clumps of ladybugs were basking in the heat of the florescent lights, protecting Keith's salad greens from future aphid attacks.

seed. The same goes for potatoes intended for planting in Idaho, which must originate from certified potato stock.

- Ungraded eggs can be sold without a permit if the producer has fewer than 300 birds. Ungraded eggs cannot be sold to restaurants.

- If you are selling beef, lamb or pork it must be slaughtered and processed in a U.S. Department of Agriculture-inspected facility. Poultry can be slaughtered and processed in an ISDA-certified facility if they will not be sold out of state. Selling these at a farmers market will also require a permit from the health department.

- If you are selling specialty or processed foods such as jams, these products must be produced in a licensed commercial kitchen and the vendor must obtain a license from the South Central District Health Department. No commercial food processing is allowed in your home kitchen.

- For a product to be marketed as "organic," it must be registered or certified by the Idaho State Department of Agriculture. If the producer grows less than $5,000 worth of produce annually, they can register with ISDA, pay a fee and call their produce "organic"; to read the organic criteria, visit www.ecfr.gov, go to "Title 7" in the page's drop-down box and select part 205.

If the producer sells more than $5,000 they must be certified to call their produce "certified organic" and use the USDA seal.

How Hungry Girl Shed the Pounds without Guilt

BY JOHN ROGERS
Associated Press

LOS ANGELES • She never set out to become the maven of guilt-free, fun-food dieting, the go-to girl for people who want to have their cake — and cheeseburgers and chili fries — and eat them, too, without getting fat.

No, 10 years ago, Lisa Lillien says, she was just another 30-something LA “Hungry Girl.” Someone who needed to drop 15 or 20 pounds and would do so periodically by following an all-liquid diet or a one-meal-a-day diet or whatever other weight-loss regimen was in vogue.

Afterward, she’d return to her beloved jam-slathered bagels and french fries and gain it all back.

“Then one day I just woke up and I said, ‘You know what? That’s not the way to tackle a weight problem,’” says the trim but not skinny Lillien who, presides over a multimillion-dollar empire of Hungry Girl cookbooks, low-calorie recipes, specialty products and TV shows, all of them geared to letting people eat the junk food they love and not get fat.

The trick is discovering why you’re eating too many calories, says Lillien, as she dashes from a couch at Hungry Girl headquarters to the kitchen, to help an assistant whip up baked potato skins stuffed with cheese and bacon.

In her case and, she believes, most everybody else’s, too many people are unwilling to give up comfort foods like pizza, spaghetti, cookies and cake in the name of better health.

Neither is Lillien, who likes to joke there was a time when she’d climb over a table to steal a companion’s french fries.

These days she just re-makes them — and a thousand other foods.

Her baked potato skins, for example, are really made out of zucchini stuffed with low-calorie cheese and bacon flavoring.

She bakes her chili-cheese fries and uses butternut squash, not potatoes. They clock in at 268 calories, about a quarter the amount in traditional fries.

Recipes for those and other feel-good foods like lasagna, pizza and sponge-cake have placed Lillien atop a brand that has grown phenomenally in the eight years since the former TV executive came up with the name (it just popped into her head one day) and blasted a daily email to 75 people.

Today, 1.2 million subscribers get a mix of recipes, advice and ads for food companies like Star Kist and General Mills, whose products she endorses.

Lillien, who started the business at home, now oversees a staff of 12 at a sprawling office in Los Angeles’ San Fernando Valley.

To some extent, the headquarters more closely resembles a huge teenage girl’s room with a kitchen thrown in. Pillows and cushions scattered about are decorated with pictures of Tootsie Rolls, Sweet Tarts and other candies. Cans of soup, packages of nuts, bowls of chips and other ingredients are stacked here and there. On one wall a silk-screen depicts a can of Campbell’s Soup, with Dino the dinosaur from “The Flintstones” TV show, on the label.

It’s here that Lillien and her staff experiment, mad-scientist-like, she says, with thousands of recipes.

The result is Italian, Mexican, Chinese and even unique Hungry Girl food, the latter including all kinds of egg-white concoctions that can be microwaved in a mug. That came about because even before she began counting calories she was often too lazy to pull out a skillet and fry anything.

The recipes she whips up can be found on her Food Network and Cooking Channel TV shows and in her seven books, which have sold more than 2.5 million copies, according to her publisher, St. Martin’s Press. Her latest, “Hungry Girl to the Max: The Ultimate Guilt-Free Cookbook,” debuted at No. 1 on The New York Times best-seller list for paperback advice books last month.

“If I’m helping people turn boxes around and turn cans around and read labels and understand what it means and learn how to maintain a healthier weight, then I’m doing good work.”

includes himself. He professes to be a big fan of her Lord of the Onion Rings recipe (155 calories) and her various mug cake desserts (you microwave them in a mug).

Dawn Jackson Blatner, a registered dietitian who has published her own cookbooks, calls Lillien’s recipes low-calorie junk food.

‘Hungry Girl’ Lisa Lillien

But, Blatner quickly adds, that’s not necessarily a bad thing.

“Two out of three people in this country are overweight. Do they need fewer calories? Is her whole enterprise teaching ways to achieve that? Yes,” says Blatner from her Chicago office. For people who won’t give up pizza and cheeseburgers, the Hungry Girl diet might not be a bad alternative.

Even Blatner says she’s sampled some of Lillien’s recipes, although she stays away from ones that use processed food products, preferring fresh fruit and vegetables.

“The spaghetti squash and butternut squash, the fun things she does with apples, I get most excited about those,” she said.

Lillien believes her lack of credentials as a dietitian or a nutritionist actually gives her more credibility with her audience, which realizes she’s one of them, just another foodie who doesn’t want to sacrifice taste for trimness.

Bird Basics: How to Buy, Brine, Roast and Rest

JANE TOUZALIN
The Washington Post.

Buying

Figure on about 1 1/2 pounds per person, which should provide enough for leftovers.

If dark meat is your thing, go for a heritage turkey. It will have a more balanced ratio of dark meat to white, and a more intense flavor. A tom turkey and a hen turkey taste the same. Toms are bigger.

Defrosting

Keep the turkey chilled. Leave it in the original packaging, and place it on a tray in the refrigerator. Allow 24 hours of defrosting for each five pounds of turkey. To brine a partially frozen bird, defrost it in the refrigerator by submerging it in the brine for up to two days before cooking.

You don't have to defrost a frozen turkey. The USDA says: "It is safe to cook a turkey from the frozen state.

The cooking time will take at least 50 percent longer than recommended for a fully thawed turkey. Remember to remove the giblet packages during the cooking time. Remove carefully with tongs or a fork."

Salting

Done correctly, pre-treating the bird with salt produces a tender, juicy result. Soak the turkey in a light brine (3 to 6 percent salt by weight) in the refrigerator for a day or two. You can also dry-brine the turkey with 1 1/4 teaspoons of salt per pound for about 18 hours. We pitted wet brining against dry brining in a test five years ago, and we preferred the wet method for its more uniform results.

Encasing and roasting a turkey breast in a salted-dough crust yields extremely juicy and evenly seasoned meat, and there's no rack or pan to clean up. (There's also no crisp skin to nosh on.)

Don't brine or salt kosher or self-basting turkeys; they have already been salted.

Prep

Stuffing butter or other fat under the skin doesn't protect the meat from overcooking, but adds fat. So the meat might be dry, it won't seem like it.

Spatchcocking, or butterflying, a whole turkey exposes all parts of the bird to even heat. Just cut out the backbone and push down on the turkey to flatten it.

Roasting

Covering the breast with aluminum foil during the first part of roasting helps reduce the risk of dry breast meat.

Basting with fat during roasting will speed cooking. Basting with water (or defatted cooking juices) will slow cooking.

The turkey is safe to eat once it has been cooked to a minimum internal temperature of 165 degrees, measured with a thermometer inserted into the innermost part of the thigh and the thickest part of the breast.

Post-roast

Let the cooked bird rest for at least 30 minutes or even an hour before carving. That allows the liquid and gelatin in the meat to set, increasing juiciness.

You can inject the bird with juices after roasting to return some of the lost moisture and fat. Much of it will run out again, but enough will remain to make it worthwhile.

Turn Holiday Leftovers into Savory Bread Pudding

THE WASHINGTON POST

This hearty bread pudding repurposes Thanksgiving turkey and stuffing. It's pretty (and tasty) enough to serve for brunch if you have guests staying past Thanksgiving Day.

The bread pudding can be assembled several hours in advance and refrigerated. Let it sit at room temperature for about a half-hour, then bake according to the directions. Adapted from Terri Pischoff Wuerthner, a cooking instructor and food writer in California.

Savory Turkey and Mushroom Bread Pudding

Makes 6 entree or 12 side-dish servings.

- 1 pound white or cremini mushrooms, sliced
- 4 large cloves garlic, minced
- 6 tablespoons (3/4 stick) unsalted butter, plus 1 tablespoon unsalted butter at room temperature
- 1/2 cup chopped fresh parsley
- 2 teaspoons dried sage
- 1 1/2 teaspoons dried thyme
- 2 1/2 cups leftover turkey, cut or shredded into bite-size pieces
- 1 teaspoon kosher salt
- 1/2 teaspoon freshly ground black pepper
- 4 large eggs
- 2 cups whole milk
- 1 1/2 cups half-and-half
- 1/2 cup shredded Parmigiano-Reggiano cheese
- 6 cups leftover cooked bread stuffing

Preheat the oven to 350 degrees. Grease a 9-by-13-inch baking dish with 1 tablespoon of softened butter.

Melt the 6 tablespoons of butter in a large skillet over medium-high heat. Add the mushrooms, garlic, parsley, sage and thyme, and cook for 10 minutes, stirring frequently and reducing the heat if the mushrooms stick to the pan. Add the turkey, salt and pepper, stir to combine, and remove from the heat.

Whisk together the eggs, milk, half-and-half and half of the cheese in a large bowl. Add the stuffing, breaking up any large pieces, and stir until well blended. Add the mushroom mixture and stir to combine.

Transfer to the prepared baking dish and sprinkle with the remaining cheese. Bake for 50 to 60 minutes, until the pudding is browned and set in the middle. Serve hot.

Can You Beat a Stick of Margarine?

BY KATHLEEN PURVIS

The Charlotte Observer

Question: All of my cookie recipes call for sticks of margarine (AKA oleo). Can I use oil instead?

Answer: Oil, margarine and butter aren't interchangeable in baking.

Butter gives cookies both crispness and that unbeatable butter flavor. Butter substitutes, such as margarine and shortening, usually make softer cookies. Although some butter substitutes are designed to be lower-fat replacements for butter, make sure you use margarine that's labeled for use in baking. Tub butter substitutes may have water beaten in.

Although you can substitute oil for a solid fat in baking, the results aren't all that great. Oil may make the cookies heavy and greasy. But if you need to replace dairy products in a recipe, you can use a butter substitute made for baking or try the new solid coconut oil that's available in most supermarkets.

POUR ON THE HOLIDAY SPIRIT WITH LIQUOR LARGESSE

BY MICHELLE LOCKE
Associated Press

It's no secret that liquor is a simple solution to holiday gift-giving. You don't see a lot of people lining up Dec. 26 to return bottles of 12-year-old Scotch. And what better way to embrace the spirit of giving than by giving a spirit?

But let's face it, sticking a ribbon on a generic bottle of booze can come across as a bit uninspired. Here, then, are a few suggestions to avoid a case of the blahs by choosing spirits that are good in the glass, but also do double duty in the kitchen, adding zest to seasonal dishes.

Appleton Estate Reserve Jamaica Rum: A blend of 20 different rums that's aged in oak barrels, Appleton Estate Reserve can be sipped on the rocks or in classic cocktails like the mai tai.

Stove-side it's good stirred into chocolate fondue with the spiced vanilla, nuts and candied orange flavors of the rum melting into the rich chocolate. An Appleton recipe calls for heating 2 tablespoons butter, 2 tablespoons plain or vanilla yogurt and a half cup of heavy whipping cream until hot but not boiling, then stir in 1 1/2 tablespoons of rum and pouring the whole thing over 7 ounces of chopped semi-sweet chocolate. Into a heated fondue pot it goes, and let the dipping commence.

Wild Turkey 81 Bourbon: There are two ways to serve turkey — too dry or too raw. Wild Turkey bourbon, on the other hand, is ready at the twist of a cap, absolutely no basting required. Aged six-to-eight years, the drink can be served straight or as a mixer in cocktails like the newly fashionable Old Fashioned.

On the culinary side, try boosting the brown-sugar-plus-butter treatment for baked acorn squash halves by spooning a tablespoon of bourbon into the cavities, along with a dusting of cinnamon. It also is delicious stirred into buttered and mashed sweet potatoes. A little brown sugar in there is nice, too.

Oro Azul Tequila Reposado: Double distilled and made from 100 percent blue agave, this tequila comes in a pyramid-shaped blue bottle. "Reposado" means "rested," and indicates the spirit has been aged in oak barrels for at least two months, but less than a year. (Oro Azul reposado is rested for six months.) A Christmas margarita might hit the spot.

Or why not stir a few tablespoons into your special secret homemade queso dip? (Is that a Velveeta box and a can of Rotel tomatoes in the kitchen? We'll never tell.)

Square One Organic Vodka: The company has a luscious recipe for pear noel, (a play on "Pere Noel," the French Santa Claus) on its website that involves pureed pears, vodka, tawny port, sweet red vermouth, brown sugar, honey and whipped cream. Yum. You also can check the old adage that the (80) proof is in the pudding by subbing vodka for the traditional brandy when setting your Christmas pudding alight. British celebrity chef Nigella Lawson recommends warmed vodka for a purer and longer flame. (And if you're looking for a recipe, her nonconformist Christmas pudding in her book, "Feast," may just change your mind about the much-maligned seasonal staple.)

Domaine de Canton Ginger Liqueur: Taking a gingerly approach to the coming festivities? This French import may help. Add to Champagne or sparkling wine for a ginger royale, or make a French ginger snap (liqueur plus citrus vodka, triple sec and fresh lemon juice). For those days when you've had all the holiday you can handle, consider adding a dash to a soothing cup of hot tea.

Luxardo Espresso Italian Coffee Liqueur: Sometimes, you're just not in the mood for a long winter's nap. Infused with coffees from Central America and Kenya, this liqueur can be served on the rocks or with cream as an after-dinner drink. It plays well with others, featuring in cocktails like the black Russian and Irish coffee. You also can add it to tiramisu and other desserts, or simply warm and pour over ice cream.

Meringue Creates a Lighter Take on Holiday Cookies

BY SARA MOULTON
Associated Press

Even if you avoid baking all year long, there's a very good chance the allure of the holidays will seduce you into having a go at a batch of cookies.

And why not? It's sweet food for a sweet season. Of course, the cookie season can be hazardous to your waistline. If possible, it's best to keep in mind Julia Child's motto: Everything in moderation. Go ahead and savor those cookies, just don't be a monster about it.

Of course, if you do happen to overdo it, you'll be better off if you snub the usual dough boys in favor of a lean and luscious gem like these chocolate-dipped meringue drops.

Each one is like a candy bar in a cookie suit. The hero of this story? Egg whites. They bind together the other ingredients — the coconut and dried cranberries — and provide a nice chewy texture, all without adding any fat. Yes, there's fat in the coconut and the chocolate, but the overall fat and calorie content is lower here than in butter-based cookies.

This is one of those recipes for which the fresher the egg, the better. Fresh egg whites boast more body than older ones, adding greater volume and stability to your cookies. The whites and yolks should be separated when the eggs are cold. But wait until the whites reach room temperature before beating them.

Though many of us separate egg whites from yolks using the cracked egg shell halves as little cups, it's safer to employ those even more basic tools — your hands. Your hands, unlike those egg shells, don't have sharp edges, which dramatically reduces the possibility of breaking the yolks. The quickest way to warm your whites to room temperature is to put them in a clean bowl, then put that bowl in to a larger bowl of hot water.

If you don't already own an oven thermometer, you might consider getting one. These cookies need to be baked at 275 degrees, and some ovens just don't work well at such a low temp. Though my own oven needed to be fiddled with again and again, my thermometer kept the job on track.

By the way, those of you who regularly bake up meringues as white as snow should know that this isn't that type of meringue. It is meant to be beige and chewy, not white and crispy. Likewise, the note of tangy bitterness provided by the dark chocolate is meant to offset this confection's overall sweetness. The proof, of course, is in the cookie. My daughter, who is no fan of coconut, dogged these chocolate-dipped meringue drops.

Chocolate-Dipped Coconut Meringue Drops

Start to finish: 55 minutes
(30 minutes active).
Makes 5 dozen.

1 cup dried cranberries
2 cups unsweetened shredded coconut
4 large egg whites, room temperature
Pinch of salt
Pinch of cream of tartar
1/2 teaspoon vanilla extract
1 cup sugar
6 ounces bittersweet chocolate, chopped

Heat the oven to 350 degrees. Line 2 baking sheets with parchment paper or spray with cooking spray and dust with flour, shaking off the excess.

In a food processor, pulse the cranberries until finely chopped. Set aside.

Spread the coconut on a third baking sheet or in a roasting pan. Bake on the oven's middle shelf until golden, about 5 minutes. Let cool. Reduce the oven to 275 degrees.

Once the coconut has cooled, in a medium bowl combine it with the cranberries.

In a large bowl, use an electric mixer to beat the egg whites with the salt, cream of tartar and vanilla until they form soft peaks.

Add the sugar, 2 tablespoons at a time, beating until stiff peaks form. Fold in the coconut cranberry mixture. Drop rounded tablespoons of the batter, 1 inch apart, on the prepared baking sheets.

Bake for 25 minutes, or until the meringue drops are beige (they will be soft at the center). Put the sheet pans on cooling racks and let the meringue drops cool completely.

Bring a small saucepan of water to a gentle simmer. Set a larger stainless bowl over the saucepan, then add the chocolate. Heat the chocolate, stirring occasionally, until melted. One at a time, dip the bottoms of the cookies into the chocolate, then set chocolate side up on parchment to cool. To set the chocolate faster, the cookies can be refrigerated.

Store the cookies in an airtight container and refrigerate for up to 1 week. Per cookie: 50 calories; 25 calories from fat (50 percent of total calories); 3 g fat (2 g saturated; 0 g trans fats); 0 mg cholesterol; 7 g carbohydrate; 1 g fiber; 5 g sugar; 1 g protein; 10 mg sodium.

Learning to Love Bison as the Other Red Meat

BY J.M. HIRSCH
Associated Press

Nothing says "Yum!" like a bit of nomenclatural confusion ... Especially with a side of near extinction.

But that's what you get once you venture down the culinary path with bison, an alternative red meat that is showing up at more and more grocers nationwide. And these massive shaggy creatures are such a delicious — and good for us — meat, it's worth sorting it all out.

So let's start with the name. The critter you know as the American buffalo (yes, of rolling plains and Native American fame) really isn't a buffalo at all. Turns out there are only a few types of buffalo in the world (including the Asian water buffalo and African Cape buffalo). The American buffalo (technically a bison) is more closely related to your run-of-the-mill cow.

Still, people tend to use the terms interchangeably and we're not going to get too bent out of shape over it.

Once, bison were hunted to near extinction. But they've made a pretty good turnaround and these days are raised primarily for consumption. Why do you care? Because bison meat (which is raised without hormones or antibiotics) can be incredibly tender and flavorful, with a sweet, rich beefy flavor.

It also happens to be amazingly lean, packing fewer calories and less fat than beef and even skinless chicken.

That low-fat profile comes with a price, however. Like any lean meat, bison has a tendency to cook quickly, so quickly that it's easy to overcook it. And that is why bison has a reputation for being tough. It isn't. If you have bison that is tough, that just means it was overcooked.

Though bison is available in most of the same cuts as traditional beef, the most common varieties at grocers are ground and steaks. We'll stick with those.

You can use bison much as you would beef. The trick is to modify the cooking method (rather than the flavors or other ingredients) to account for the leanness.

When cooking ground bison, it's best to work in some sort of liquid flavor to keep the meat moist. This might mean eggs or tomato paste for a meatloaf, or some sort of pan sauce or gravy if you are browning it in a skillet. That also makes it ideal for meatballs simmered in sauce or for using in chili.

For bison steaks, think fast and furious. Season them, then pop them under the broiler or on the grill for just a few minutes per side.

Seared Bison with Sage and Gnocchi

Start to finish: 15 minutes.
Servings: 6.

1 pound package

gnocchi pasta
2 tablespoons olive oil
2 cloves garlic, minced
Pinch red pepper flakes
1 1/2 pounds bison steak, thinly sliced across the grain
1/4 cup chopped fresh sage
1/2 cup grated Parmesan cheese
Salt and ground black pepper

Bring a large saucepan of salted water to a boil. Add the gnocchi and cook according to package directions. Reserve 1/4 cup of the cooking water, then drain the gnocchi and set aside.

In a large skillet over medium-high, heat the oil. Add the garlic and red pepper flakes, then saute the garlic for 30 seconds.

Add the steak and sear on each side for about 1 minute. Don't crowd the pan or the steak with steam rather than sear. If needed, work in batches.

Once the steak is seared, add the sage and cooked gnocchi. Cook for 30 seconds, then add the Parmesan. Drizzle in just enough of the reserved cooking water to form a sauce with the melted cheese. Toss, then season with salt and pepper.

Give the Gift of Seasoned Salt

BY J.M. HIRSCH
Associated Press

It seemed like a tall order. I wanted an edible gift that was fast and easy to make, inexpensive, wouldn't spoil or need to be refrigerated, and that kids could be involved in.

With so many caveats, the field is pretty narrow. I'm not a fan of baking mixes, such as muffins or pancakes. Too much measuring and printing of recipes so recipients know how to use them. Spice rubs are a good choice. Trail mix is another. But I've done those before and this year I wanted something different, something a little less expected.

The solution I came up with — seasoned salts. The concept is simple. Blend salt with various seasonings, then package them nicely. The kids can even get in on decorating the jars.

There are just a few things to remember as you do this. Most important is that seasoned salts — whether prepared or purchased — are intended as finishing salts. That means they should be used to season finished dishes, not during cooking. Most of the nuanced flavor of a seasoned salt would be lost if used for cooking.

For gift purposes, I suggest planning for two kinds of salt — powdered salt, which is intended for use on popcorn, and flaked salt, which is for sprinkling over finished savory foods.

First, the powdered salt. The powdered part of this is key. Movie theater popcorn tends to be perfectly salted because vendors use powdered salt; this adheres to the corn kernels far better than even fine grain salt does. This is why your homemade popcorn usually is unevenly salted, and why you end up with a sea of salt on the bottom of the bowl.

Making powdered salt is simple. Use inexpensive kosher salt (usually about $1.50 for a 3-pound box), then run it through either a food processor or blender (you also can use a mortar and pestle for smaller batches) until it reaches the consistency of powdered sugar. Seasonings can be mixed in by hand after the salt is ground, or simply added to the processor or blender at the same time.

When selecting seasonings for popcorn salt, don't hesitate to get creative, even mixing sweet and savory flavors. But always aim to use seasonings with a similar texture as the powdered salt (in other words, finely ground seasonings such as cinnamon, paprika, garlic powder, etc.).

For flake salts intended to use on savory foods, you'll need to start with pricier flaked sea salt. You usually can find bargains on this variety at places such as Trader Joe's and similar retailers. With these salts, you simply mix them with the seasonings you want, then bottle them. Even easier than powdered salts.

You also have more choice when it comes to seasonings. No need to worry about matching the texture of the salt, which in this case tends to be large and coarse. Finely ground seasonings or more robust dried herbs, or a blend of the two, all work well.

I've outlined a few suggestions for each variety, but this is a creative effort, so just explore your spice cabinet. Be sure to label your salts and include hints on what to use them on.

Popcorn Salt Combinations

Each makes enough for 4 to 6 gifts, depending on jar size.

- 1 pound kosher salt, six 3-inch cinnamon sticks, 2 teaspoons cayenne pepper (grind everything together).
- 1 pound kosher salt, 2 tablespoons pumpkin pie spice blend (mix the spice blend into the salt after it is ground).
- 1 pound kosher salt, 4 teaspoons garlic powder, 4 teaspoons smoked paprika (mix the spice blend into the salt after it is ground).
- 1 pound kosher salt, 2 1/2 tablespoons Sichuan pepper (grind everything together).

Savory Salt Combinations

Each makes 1 to 2 gifts, depending on jar size.

- 1/2 cup flaked salt, 2 teaspoons dried oregano, 2 teaspoons dried basil, 1/2 teaspoon red pepper flakes.
- 1/2 cup flaked salt, 1 1/2 tablespoons fennel

- seed, 2 teaspoons cumin seed, 2 teaspoons mustard powder.
- 1/2 cup flaked salt, 2 teaspoons curry powder.

Times-News Girls Soccer Player of the Year

BY DAVID BASHORE
dbashore@magicvalley.com

TWIN FALLS • Most soccer players live for the thrill of sticking the ball in the net.

Even if she's a capable goal scorer herself, Carolyn Hernandez's passion is dashing those players' dreams.

Turns out the 2012 Times-News girls soccer player of the year is pretty good at denying the opposition. The junior central defender anchored a Twin Falls rearguard that pitched 14 shutouts in 21 games and allowed just 11 goals in a season marked by the Bruins' first state trophy in the sport.

"It's a good feeling scoring, but it's an even better feeling knowing that you frustrate the other team so much. Stopping them is a great feeling," said Hernandez. "It was important to go to state and win a game, but also to place. We wanted to work hard for the seniors. It was important to me, because we've worked so hard and I think we deserved to come back with a trophy"

With Hernandez marshaling the defense, the Bruins won back-to-back district titles, the first two in the program's history. This season, she was charged with multiple tasks, like keeping the defense organized while playing further upfield, taking free kicks and joining in the attack from time to time. She not only adjusted to the new tactics, she thrived under them.

"She's just continued to develop as a player and that's one thing that we've been working on, not just adding more dimension to her game but to the whole team," said Twin Falls coach Katie Kauffman. "One of the things we worked on was working the attack starting from the backline, and she was definitely starting to make those adjustments to the end of the year. She's a good learner, and is working hard to put herself in the best position possible for the next level."

Of course, there's one more year of frustrating Great Basin Conference attackers left before that next level comes into play. But Hernandez is focused in getting the Bruins back to the state tournament and taking aim at another chance against three-time reigning state champion Bishop Kelly.

The Bruins had the Knights and their massive winning streak in their sights in the semifinals before falling 3-1.

"Coming into the game we were all a little nervous because you read about how good they are and their big record (68 games and counting)," Hernandez said. "It was a nice feeling to hold them for so long, but we're going to be after them again next year hopefully."

Valley Girls Break Out in Second Half

BY RYAN HOWE
rhowe@magicvalley.com

MALTA • Back-to-back 3-pointers by Valley's Lizzy Henry to start the second half broke open a defensive slugfest and the Vikings picked up a 36-21 nonconference road win over Raft River on Tuesday.

"I thank my teammates for getting me open on those good screens," Henry said.

At halftime, the 11-8 score was due to a combination of good defensive pressure and reluctance to shoot by both teams.

"We're working through a lot of things with the team, starting to learn the offense, working with different people and getting our bench involved," said Valley head coach Liz Thomas. "So I think instead of looking to shoot, we were looking to just run the offense." The Vikings loosened up in the second half, looked to score and got back to just playing basketball.

"We weren't flowing well, then coach got us together and we figured out what we needed to do and we got each other open," said Henry.

Valley (2-2) opened the second half on a 9-0 run, sparked by Henry's 3s. The Vikings also found success inside with junior forward Kami Elorrieta, who finished with a game-high 12 points.

Valley held Raft River's leading scorer Wynter Holtman to eight points, although she did pull down 11 rebounds. The Trojans turned the ball over 31 times.

"We really pride ourselves on defense," Henry said. "Since we're so small, we really want to make sure we hustle and we give it our all."

Overall, neither team shot particularly well, Raft River 34 percent and Valley 25 percent from the field. But the Vikings had the edge with 17 free throws to the Trojans' three.

"Turnovers have been our biggest thing," said Raft River head coach Garth Steed, whose team is now 1-2. "They're hurrying too much and not seeing the floor. Defensively we're doing great. We're doing a better job rebounding. Talent-wise we have a really good team. We just need to get them to settle down."

Filer Girls Grind for Win Against Burley

nruland@magicvalley.com

FILER • The Filer girls basketball team blew a double-digit lead and lost to preseason 4A contender Burley in its first game of the season. Tuesday night against those same Bobcats, this time at home, Filer didn't have a double digit lead to fritter away until very late, nor a chance to blink.

A 43-31 victory was not the result of shot making or crisp offense, but a possession-to-possession determination that seemed to slowly grind Burley into a less functional and confident team — one that should still make noise this postseason.

"My girls were ready, fired up, did not want to lose and they came to play," Filer coach Kody Ketterling said. "We never had a chance to relax. We were on our toes for 32 minutes. That was the most consistent energy we've had for four quarters all year."

The Wildcats (5-1) tallied their fifth win against a Great Basin Conference opponent in the rematch. While lacking aesthetically — the Wildcats shot under 40 percent — it was the way Filer swarmed to every loose ball, helped on every Burley foray to the rim, pressured the ball the entire court and positioned themselves under the basket for rebounds and put-backs against a feisty Bobcats team that made this perhaps the biggest win of the year for Filer — surely a statement.

PISCATAWAY, N.J. • As the Big East was being picked apart, Rutgers was looking for a way out and a new place to show off a football program that has been resurrected in the past decade.

Not only did Rutgers find that escape hatch, the Scarlet Knights ended up in one of the most desirable neighborhoods in college sports.

Rutgers joined the Big Ten on Tuesday, leaving the Big East behind and cashing in on the school's investment in a football team that only 10 years ago seemed incapable of competing at the highest level.

The move follows Maryland's announcement a day earlier that it was heading to the Big Ten in 2014. The additions give the Big Ten 14 schools and a presence in lucrative East Coast markets.

Rutgers announced its decision Tuesday at a campus news conference attended by Big Ten Commissioner Jim Delany, Rutgers President Robert Barchi and athletic director Tim Perneti.

"The Big Ten is really where Rutgers belongs," Barchi said. "This is not just a good fit for us athletically, it's a good fit for us academically and as an institution."

Rutgers has been competing in the Big East since 1991. But the league has been torn up by conference realignment, losing three key members last year.

Perneti had insisted all along that Rutgers would land on its feet, that being a member of the prestigious American Association of Universities and residing in the largest media market in the country would ensure the school wouldn't be cast aside as the landscape of college sports changed.

GRINNELL, Iowa • Jack Taylor scored 138 points to shatter the NCAA scoring record in Division III Grinnell's 179-104 victory over Faith Baptist Bible on Tuesday night.

Taylor made 27 of 71 3-point attempts, was 52 of 108 overall from the field and added seven free throws on 10 attempts in 36 minutes.

Rio Grande's Bevo Francis held the NCAA scoring record with 113 points against Hillsdale in 1954. In 1953, Francis had 116 against Ashland Junior College.

The previous Grinnell record was 89 by Griffin Lentsch last Nov. 19 against Principia.

San Francisco 49ers wide receiver Michael Crabtree (15) celebrates with quarterback Colin Kaepernick (7) after scoring on a 10-yard touchdown reception against the Chicago Bears during the third quarter of an NFL football game in San Francisco on Monday.

Smith Can't Steal Kaepernick's Show

ASSOCIATED PRESS

SAN FRANCISCO • Aldon Smith's high-flying defense gave Colin Kaepernick all kinds of extra chances in his first career NFL start. And the Kaepernick looked little like a backup in delivering on nearly every one of those opportunities under the lights on football's big stage. The strong-armed Kaepernick passed for 243 yards and two touchdowns in place of the injured Alex Smith, Aldon Smith had 5½ sacks, and the 49ers whipped the Chicago Bears 32-7 on Monday night in a highly anticipated NFC showdown that hardly lived up to the hype. "I wanted to come out and show what I'm capable of and show that I can be a starter," Kaepernick said. "That's what I've been trying to prove since I've been here."

With Aldon Smith wreaking havoc on the other side of the ball, Kaepernick threw touchdown passes to Vernon Davis and Michael Crabtree, and Kendall Hunter ran for a 14-yard score as San Francisco (7-2-1) jumped out to a big lead by scoring on each of its first four possessions. After Kaepernick's stellar night on national TV, there's certain to be chatter of a quarterback controversy for the NFC West-leading Niners. And anyone who knows coach Jim Harbaugh knows he's all about competition — at every spot on the field. "I usually tend to go with the hot hand, and we've got two quarterbacks with hot hands," he said. "We'll make that decision when we have to make it." Kaepernick certainly isn't counting on it. "I don't think one game can be called a hot hand," he said. Aldon Smith took over the NFL sacks lead with 15, passing Denver's Von Miller with 13, and recorded the second-best total in franchise history behind Fred Dean's six-sack day on Nov. 13, 1983, against New Orleans. "I think I have a thing for night games, I love playing at night," Smith said. "I love playing under the lights."

Kaepernick, Aldon Smith and Hunter sure made general manager Trent Baalke looked good for his selections from the 2011 draft class.

"Colin is the man!" Davis said emphatically. "Colin did a great job, I was very proud of him." And reigning NFL Coach of the Year Harbaugh earned a key victory four days after his own health issue. The 48-year-old Harbaugh had a minor procedure for an irregular heart-beat Thursday. Kaepernick threw for 184 yards in the first half alone — an impressive outing for the second-year pro selected in the second round out of Nevada. "I think after the first drive I felt really comfortable with what they were doing and what we had in our game plan," he said. "I really wasn't too nervous. I've had a lot of time in this offense. My teammates were really supportive." Alex Smith, the 2005 No. 1 overall draft pick, was ruled out earlier Monday after being evaluated by team medical director Dr. Dan Garza.

Today is Wednesday, Nov. 21, the 326th day of 2012. There are 40 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight:
On Nov. 21, 1942, the Alaska Highway, also known as the Alcan Highway, was formally opened at Soldier's Summit in the Yukon Territory.

TODAY IN HISTORY

On this date:
In 1789, North Carolina became the 12th state to ratify the U.S. Constitution.

In 1861, Judah Benjamin, who had been acting Confederate Secretary of War, was formally named to the post.

In 1912, actress and dancer Eleanor Powell was born in Springfield, Mass.

In 1920, the Irish Republican Army killed 12 British intelligence officers and two auxiliary policemen in the Dublin area; British forces responded by raiding a soccer match, killing 14 civilians.

In 1922, Rebecca L. Felton of Georgia was sworn in as the first woman to serve in the U.S. Senate.

In 1931, the Universal horror film "Frankenstein," starring Boris Karloff as the monster and Colin Clive as his creator, was first released.

In 1934, the Cole Porter musical "Anything Goes," starring Ethel Merman as Reno Sweeney, opened on Broadway.

In 1969, the Senate voted down the Supreme Court nomination of Clement F. Haynsworth, 55-45, the first such rejection since 1930.

In 1973, President Richard Nixon's attorney, J. Fred Buzhardt, revealed the existence of an 18½-minute gap in one of the White House tape recordings related to Watergate.

In 1974, bombs exploded at a pair of pubs in Birmingham, England, killing 21 people. (Six suspects were convicted of the attack, but the convictions of the so-called "Birmingham Six" were overturned in 1991.)

In 1980, 87 people died in a fire at the MGM Grand Hotel in Las Vegas, Nev.

In 1991, the U.N. Security Council chose Boutros Boutros-Ghali of Egypt to be Secretary-General.

Ten years ago: In a historic eastward shift, NATO expanded its membership into the borders of the former Soviet Union as it invited seven former communist countries (Latvia, Estonia, Lithuania, Bulgaria, Romania, Slovakia and Slovenia) under its security umbrella. In northern Nigeria, deadly rioting erupted after a newspaper suggested Islam's founding prophet Muhammad would have approved of the Miss World beauty pageant, scheduled to be held in the Nigerian capital, Abuja (the event was moved to London). Eleven bus passengers were killed in a suicide bombing in Jerusalem.

Five years ago: New Hampshire set its earliest-ever presidential primary, deciding on Jan. 8, 2008. Officials announced the recall of more than a half-million pieces of Chinese-made children's jewelry contaminated with lead. Engineer Herbert Saffir, who created the five-category system used to describe hurricane strength, died in Miami at age 90.

One year ago: Congress' bipartisan deficit reduction "supercommittee," tasked with finding $1.2 trillion in cuts over a decade, failed; under the law that established the committee, inability to reach a compromise would trigger about $1 trillion in automatic spending cuts in military and domestic government programs beginning in 2013. Detroit's Justin Verlander became the first starting pitcher in a quarter-century to be voted Most Valuable Player. Author Ann McCaffrey, 85, whose vision of an interstellar alliance between humans and dragons spawned the science fiction "Dragonriders of Pern" novels, died south of Dublin.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE® Bobby Wolff

"He that wrestles with us strengthens our nerves, and sharpens our skill. Our antagonist is our helper."
— Edmund Burke

Compare what happened in this deal from the first round of last year's Vanderbilt tournament, when a top-seeded team met a less highly ranked squad.

At the first table, where the expert was declarer, the heart jack lead went to declarer's king. East held up the club ace twice, West discarding a small diamond. Now, instead of playing a third club and giving East the chance to shift to spades, declarer cashed his red-suit winners and took his nine tricks.

In the other room, South also opened two no-trump and was raised to three no-trump. West led the heart jack to declarer's ace, and declarer then played the club king, West playing the five. How did the expert East defend?

East could see that he would never beat this contract unless his partner had good spades. Since one of the red queens in dummy was sure to be an entry to the clubs, the holdup in clubs was never going to be that effective.

Accordingly, East decided to break the rules and win the first club (in case it was declarer's ninth trick, as could easily have been the case if declarer had five diamonds). Now he switched to spades, and — more importantly — he covered the possibility that his partner had the ace and jack of spades by shifting to the spade queen.

Declarer was helpless now; whatever he did, the defenders had four spade winners.

ANSWER: You have a decent diamond stop and enough bits and pieces to make the no-trump game the most attractive option, so bid three no-trump. Note that this is a suggestion to play no-trump, not a command. Your partner can bid on with significant extra shape, or really short diamonds.

DEAR ABBY: My 24-year-old daughter and 21-year-old son work as banquet servers at a local country club. Many of the receptions at which they serve include guests consuming large amounts of alcohol.

DEAR ABBY
Jeanne Phillips

If an intoxicated male guest made suggestive comments to my daughter or touched her, he would be asked to leave the facility. But what is my son supposed to do when an intoxicated woman, usually much older than he, pinches his backside and makes inappropriate comments or "invitations"?

My son isn't a prude. His sense of humor allows him to "laugh it off," but it happens often and he is becoming annoyed. In fact, he'll say, "Mom, it's pretty gross!" Abby, what are these woman thinking? What should he do to promote self-respect but not cause an uncomfortable atmosphere for himself and the guests?

— CURIOUS MOM IN NEW JERSEY

DEAR MOM: The employee protection rules are no different for males than they are for females. What your son should do first is document the incidents with dates, times and the women involved. He should then report their behavior to the banquet supervisor at the country club. I'm sure the person in charge will want to know, because if the sexual harassment isn't stopped, it could result in a very embarrassing — and possibly costly — lawsuit against the club.

DEAR ABBY: I recently began dating a widowed co-worker. We are both private people and we have kept our personal lives out of the workplace. Only our close friends at work know we are dating.

The issue we now face is the office gossip queen has spotted us out and about, and is asking all our friends about whether or not we're dating. We barely know this woman and don't care much for her. How do I politely respond when people start asking me about my boyfriend? I'm concerned that if I tell them we're seeing each other, I'll be treated differently because he had been widowed only a short time. I have spent my entire life avoiding the drama machine, and now I'm afraid I'll be thrown onto center stage. Please help me.

— DRAMA-FREE MOUSE

DEAR MOUSE: Face it, your secret is out. If you prefer not to discuss your private life, all you have to do is say so to those who question you out of curiosity.

But why are you afraid that you'll be treated differently? Whether your co-worker's wife died two weeks or two months ago, he is available. Widowers have told me that women have approached them within DAYS of their wives' funerals. You're acting like you feel guilty for being happy. For both of your sakes, please stop feeling like you're doing something wrong.

DEAR READERS: I am pleased to offer the traditional Thanksgiving Prayer that was penned by my dear mother, Pauline Phillips. No Thanksgiving would be complete for me without it.

Oh, Heavenly Father,
We thank Thee for food and remember the hungry.
We thank Thee for health and remember the sick.

We thank Thee for freedom and remember the enslaved.
May these remembrances stir us to service,
That Thy gifts to us may be used for others. Amen.

Have a safe and happy Thanksgiving, everyone!

LOVE, ABBY

IF NOVEMBER 21 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: The focus of importance in your life will be changing this year as you harness ambitions and begin driving yourself toward material success. During the next six weeks, you are sharper than usual where money, career and business are concerned, making this a great time to put end-of-the-year tax strategies into play. Romance might ring your doorbell, too, so put some time aside for play. Plan ahead so that you can make the most important changes or launch the most crucial plans next June when you will have both opportunity and assistance from unexpected sources.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Love the one you're with. Harmony and love surrounds lovebirds; you should be humming romantic songs. It is a good night for candlelit dinners for two and romantic encounters behind closed doors.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Romance is on tap for tonight, so plan to go stargazing with a significant other. New love interests may not fare so well because the stars may get in your eyes and blind you to facts.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Be true to yourself and it will be a simple matter to be true to others. Seek good advice while wise people are willing to provide a helping hand. Someone's love light is burning bright just for you.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): A romantic rendezvous runs smoothly. Tonight is the night to pop open a bottle of wine and turn on soft background music. Harmony can grow stronger with a special someone.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Love and harmony are in the air. Your perceptions could be off-kilter, however, and not everything you see in your mind is exactly as pictured. You could give someone an inaccurate impression.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Valuable information can come your way. Just be sure that everything is kept aboveboard and out in the open. If your heart is going pitter-pat around someone new, it is entirely possible that the feeling is mutual.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Your judgment is a little better than usual. You may be in perfect mental harmony with a close companion. There is no reason to avoid social or business situations since you are at your best in a crowd.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): It takes two to tango. Sensual delights are in store for lovers who are already engaged in a committed relationship. There are loving stars shining tonight; you may receive treats of a sensual kind.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): A true blue nature will win permanent loyalty. Sometime today, you will hear the truth about something that has bothered you and it will restore your faith in others. Put romance on the priority list.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Put that sharp pin down. Partners could be in the mood for love. Be aware that companions want to escape into a dream world far from harsh reality; avoid pricking tender and harmless balloons of love.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): There is no time like the present. Find time for amorous interludes and make a present of yourself. Put flowers in a vase, light scented candles, turn down the lights and make up the bed with silk sheets.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Learn your lessons. You seem more energetic when you show you are eager for education. Cling to intelligent ideas and cherish new inspirations that give you a sneak preview of fascinating alternatives.

WARNING
When purchasing a vehicle, make sure that the title is in the name of the seller. Under Idaho motor vehicle code a vehicle cannot be sold unless the title is in the name of the seller (exception: Idaho licensed dealer). The seller shall provide the new purchaser a signed bill of sale showing the following: Full description of the vehicle, vehicle identification number, amount paid and name(s) and address of the new purchaser. The bill of sale must be signed, dated and show actual mileage at the time of sale. If you have any questions, please contact your local assessor's office.
