'TIS THE SEASON

Thanksgiving marks the beginning of ski season on Sun Valley's mountains.

BY JULIE WOOTTON
jwootton@magicvalley.com

KETCHUM • After he got off the chairlift at the top of Baldy Mountain, Fred Stackpole stood looking at a list of ski runs.

His two children waited at his side, bundled in winter gear.

The Boise family doesn't normally go skiing on Thanksgiving, but they decided to do something out of the ordinary this year.

"It's kind of a new thing for us," Stackpole said.

His daughter is a member of the Bogus Basin ski team, and he wanted her to have a chance to practice.

Sun Valley Resort opened Baldy and Dollar mountains Thursday.

Spokesman Jack Sibbach said the opening day of the ski season was "a good start with this many lifts and runs open."

"We're very excited about the upcoming season," he said.

10 Companies Bid on Judicial Complex Construction

BY LAURIE WELCH
lwelch@magicvalley.com

BURLEY • Cassia County officials received 10 construction bids on the county's new judicial complex this week.

The base bids ranged from $1.68 million to $2.19 million and included several alternatives for upgrades.

Cassia County Clerk Joe Larsen said county commissioner's deferred making a decision on which bid to accept until further review.

The decision will likely be made during the commissioners' business meeting on Monday.

"The bids came in really well," Larsen said. "And that should allow us some latitude to do some other things as well."

But, one of the companies, Harris General Contractor — which submitted the lowest bid — failed to complete all the needed documents and was disqualified.

The second-lowest base bid was submitted by Starr Corporation at $1.7 million.

Once a company's bid is accepted, the contract calls for work to begin in January with completion in late summer 2013, Larsen said.

Some additional items will include alternative upgrades, as well as landscaping and alterations to the roof and parking area.

Larsen said the building, an old grocery store located on the corner of Overland Avenue and 16th Street, is structurally sound.

The 16,000-square-foot building was purchased by the county for $600,000.

China Economy Hopes Give Markets a Lift

LONDON (AP) • An upbeat Chinese manufacturing survey helped offset the disappointment felt in the markets of another round of grim European figures Thursday — on a day that saw trading seriously curtailed by the U.S. Thanksgiving holiday.

The optimism in the markets came in the wake of a manufacturing survey from HSBC. Its purchasing managers index (PMI), a gauge of activity, rose to a 13-month high of 50.4 for November from the previous month's 49.5. Readings above 50 denote growth.

The figures gave Asian markets a boost earlier and that carried through into the European day. The FTSE 100 index of leading British shares closed up 0.7 percent at 5,791.03 while Germany's DAX rose 0.8 percent to 7,244.99. The CAC-40 in France ended 0.6 percent higher at 3,498.22.

The gains in Europe came despite a survey showing that the 17-country eurozone remains in recession. Financial information company Markit said its composite PMI, which assesses the service sector as well as manufacturing, for the eurozone rose to 45.8 in November from 45.7 the month before. That signals further contraction in the eurozone economy, which is now in recession, officially defined as two straight quarters of negative growth.

Report: Make Idaho's Weatherization Program More Uniform

BY KIMBERLEE KRUESI
kkruesi@magicvalley.com

TWIN FALLS • Despite serving a vital role in Idaho, weatherization programs should implement uniform cost-effective measures before increasing funding, a recent report recommended.

This recommendation comes from a staff report by Idaho's Public Utilities Commission. The report focused on weatherization programs provided by Idaho's largest electric utility companies, Idaho Power Co., Rocky Mountain Power and Avista Utilities.

The utilities provide funding from ratepayer dollars to assist low-income customers with weatherizing their homes.

The report expressed concern about the utilities' weatherization programs being cost-effective for the ratepayer and suggested not increasing funding to the programs until the issue could be further evaluated.

Idaho Power, which provides about $1.2 million in assistance each year, is the only company to claim its program has cost savings. But IPUC staff doubted the validity of the company's evaluation method.

They claim Idaho Power is using an older software model, calling the total savings are likely an "overstated energy savings estimate."

Idaho Power representatives were not available for comment when contacted by the Times-News on Tuesday and Wednesday. Yet, a spokeswoman said Idaho Power would submit comments responding to the report Wednesday. The report's comment period ends today.

"We stand by the accuracy of our cost-effectiveness test," said Stephanie McCurdy with Idaho Power.

Recommendations from the report included urging Idaho Power to continue carrying over unspent weatherization funding from base rates into the following year and continuing funding at current levels until better evaluation methods are implemented.

South Central Community Action Partnership works with Idaho Power to find and fund low-income households needing weatherization assistance, said Ken Robinette, the nonprofit's executive director.

Over the years, federal and private funding for weatherization programs have experienced drastic cuts, but the need remains high, he said.

"I understand the need to make sure the program is cost-effective. They are dealing with ratepayer money," he said. "However, the social benefits that weatherization programs add are difficult to measure but are critical for the individual and the community."

Mostly Quiet Weather Going Into Weekend

We will see a couple more nice days for the end of the week and into the first part of the weekend. For your Black Friday, it will start cold, but the skies will be sunny and temperatures will reach the low 50s by the afternoon. All this nice weather is courtesy a strong area of high pressure that settled over the region. This high pressure system will keep us dry and nice into Saturday. So if you are looking for a couple days to put up Christmas decorations, today and Saturday would be your best bets.

For the second half of the weekend, a cold front will slide through the Magic Valley on Sunday. This will bring rain showers and possible light snow in the South Hills and the Wood River region above 5,000 feet. It will turn colder with highs back into the mid 40s and a bit of breeze between 10 to 20 mph.

Most of next week looks fairly quiet. Another area of high pressure settles in across eastern and southeastern Idaho to give us sunny skies and seasonal temperatures. The next potential system to bring precipitation to the region appears to be waiting until the end of next week.

County Websites Rate Poor on Transparency

BY MELISSA DAVLIN
mdavlin@magicvalley.com

TWIN FALLS • If you want to know the operating budget of your county's sheriff's office, or your property tax rate, do you know where to go?

Chances are, you won't find it online.

A report released by The Sunshine Review slammed Idaho's counties for their websites. The Sunshine Review is a national nonprofit organization that examines transparency in state and local government.

The organization looked at each of Idaho's county websites, checking to see if the site has information on budgets, public meetings, contracts, public records, zoning permits, local taxes, lobbying disclosure and audits, as well as contact information for elected and administrative officials.

Multiple counties received "F" grades, including Twin Falls and Gooding counties.

"Idaho's county and city websites are appalling and lack the basic information that taxpayers deserve to know. It is very rare that Sunshine Review awards an 'F' grade, but Idaho's county websites were so inadequate, we were left with no other option," said Michael Barnhart, president of Sunshine Review, in a Nov. 8 press release.

That information is public and available at the county courthouse, said Twin Falls County Commissioner Leon Mills.

But should more of it be online?

Mills said the county commissioners have discussed e-accessibility. The problem, however, is manpower.

"Everything really should be (available) in today's age. I know we probably don't oppose it," he said. It's just having the personnel to update it."

Mills did say the county recently assigned someone to update the city's website, though he wasn't sure what that entailed.

Mills said in his time with the county, the commissioners have received only two complaints about the website, both from the same person. But, he said, he did think there should be more information online.

"We'll have to really look at that," Mills said.

Other Magic Valley counties didn't fare much better. Minidoka and Cassia both received C-minuses, the best grades in the region. Everyone else received lower.

Lincoln County was listed as not having a website, though the county does have one. Camas County doesn't have a website.

Feds Step Into Middle of Another Idaho Power Fight

BY JOHN MILLER
Associated Press

BOISE • Federal regulators are wading into another Idaho energy fight, taking the state to court to force it to approve contracts requiring Idaho Power Co. to buy electricity from a small wind project.

The move by the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission marks the latest instance where regulators in Washington have intervened in Idaho. In September, it forbid utilities from curtailing contractually required wind energy purchases during low-demand periods.

It also signals a showdown with the Idaho Public Utilities Commission, which is sticking by its decision to reject contracts between wind developer Murphy Flat Wind and Idaho Power.

Last month, the three-member panel decided Murphy Flat had missed important deadlines to appeal the state's rejection of its power purchase agreements. Gene Fadness, an Idaho Public Utilities Commission spokesman, said Wednesday state regulators see no reason to now change their ruling.

"We'll argue it in federal court in Boise," Fadness told The Associated Press. "In this case, Murphy Flat waited more than 15 months before filing its FERC case. The lack of a timely appeal disrupts the regulatory process, introduces uncertainty and is contrary to the interests of ratepayers and utilities."

Idaho's renewable energy landscape, especially for wind power developers, is extremely unsettled, with Fadness' agency now considering changes to state provisions governing when and how utilities must buy their electricity under a federal law, the Public Utility Regulatory Policies Act of 1978, or PURPA, designed to promote independent power sources.

Former Idaho Drug Dealer Thankful for 2nd Chance

POST FALLS (AP) • A former Idaho drug dealer who spent 16 years in prison is thankful for a chance to remake his life.

Bobby Wilhelm has written a book documenting his experiences, in-and-out of prison.

But the 54-year-old and others said he's a reformed man, working his way into management at a local car lot where he put his sales skills to good use.

In "Bobby Convict: School of Hard Knocks," Wilhelm talks of crossing paths with mafia bosses and others.

Among his supporters is Idaho state Rep. Bob Nonini, himself arrested in 1983 on a cocaine charge that was later dismissed. Wilhelm asked Nonini, now a Republican state senator-elect, to speak at his third parole hearing seven years ago — the one where he was finally released.

"I said, 'Jesus, if you give me a chance, I'll never get in trouble again in my life and I'll be a good dad,'" Wilhelm said, adding he cherishes the opportunity to help take care of his high school-aged son, Wolfgang. Nonini went to church with Wilhelms' parents.

"We get asked a lot as legislators to help people and I was putting my reputation and neck on the line," Nonini said, of helping Wilhelm. "Bobby has held up on his end of the bargain and has turned his life around 180 degrees."

Wilhelm is the son of Bob Wilhelm, known as "Big Bob" to many Post Falls locals, the man who started Bob's 21 Club bar back in the 1960s.

Bobby Wilhelm said he began playing pool at the club when he was just 8 years old, sometimes winning money from his dad's customers. In high school, he bartended.

In his book, Wilhelm said he began using cocaine at 21, something that helped him focus his attention. By the second time he tried the drug, however, he was selling.

Convinced that agents were after him, he moved from Idaho to Sidney, in eastern Montana, where he started a gambling house — and began running with Columbian and Cuban drug dealers, he said.

"The people I dealt with would get in trouble with the dealers and I'd pay them off to get their connections, so I kept moving up," Wilhelm said. "I'd be sitting in Miami with nobody who could speak English."

Wilhelm said he would make an average of $75,000 a month. "It was a pretty good incentive," he said.

He went to prison for the first time after a 1984 incident where he'd returned to Spokane from a cocaine run in Miami — only to discover a drug agent discovered his 3-pound cocaine stash.

Wilhelm struck the agent with his Corvette, he said, resulting in a high-speed police pursuit from Spokane International Airport. Eventually, Wilhelm spent three years in federal prison for that assault.

More time behind bars followed, four stints in all where he said he crossed paths with Paul Schneider, a former Aryan Brotherhood leader, and even Timothy McVeigh, the Oklahoma City bomber.

Along the way, he said, organized crime figures including Charlie Iannece, Anthony Pungitore and Gene Gotti became his friends.

Wilhelm said he was dumbfounded seven years ago when Idaho state prison officials finally let him free.

Nearly immediately, he won a sales job at a Coeur d'Alene car dealership, eventually working his way into management.

And today, Wilhelm co-owns the building that houses Bob's 21 Club.

But his sister owns the bar. "I have a felony record, so I can't own a liquor license," Wilhelm said. "I went to prison as a wild man with no education, but prison saved my life."

MONTANA GIRL ALIVE AFTER MARROW MATCH WITH GERMAN

BILLINGS, Mont. (AP) • For a 5-year-old Billings girl, the generosity of a complete stranger half a world away is reason to give thanks this Thanksgiving.

This next week, they'll be getting together, to advocate for people to register their bone marrow to help others who are critically ill.

The Billings Gazette reports Jada Bascom is alive today because of a bone marrow transplant from 37-year-old German Torsten Huber.

Bascom has spent half her life in the hospital with leukemia.

Finding a marrow match wasn't easy.

From the United States, her search was widened to include donors from Europe.

Eventually, doctors found Huber, a social worker from southern Germany.

HOMELESS VETS GET HELP AT IDAHO SHELTER

BY ANNA WEBB
The Idaho Statesman

BOISE • Each of the rooms on the veterans floor at River of Life shelter is named for servicemen and women with ties to Idaho: Vernon Baker, Brandon Titus, "Pappy" Boyington. The entire floor is named in memory of Idaho Medal of Honor recipient Ed "Too Tall" Freeman.

Army veteran Tommy Head lives in a room named for Carrie French, the first Idaho woman to die in combat in Iraq.

Head is living there through the Boise Rescue Mission's Veterans Ministry Program. For the past two years, the program has provided case managers to help homeless veterans work through substance abuse, health, financial or other issues. It includes the guidance of a chaplain and a private bedroom.

"That's important when people are rebuilding their lives," said program director Ed Cowley.

The small program is financed by donations from the public. And at Christmas, its participants are not forgotten by their fellow veterans across town at the Idaho State Veterans Home, who make sure there are presents under the tree.

Head, 52, uses a walker to get around. He ended up at the shelter after a series of bad events. His wife died in March in an accident caused by a drunken driver in Alabama. Head came West.

"I needed a new start and I just left," he said.

He had a lead on a job installing fiber-optic cable, but a combination of chronic foot trouble, medications and depression landed him in the hospital. His money soon ran out. He was in a strange city with no ties. Seeking shelter at the mission was his only choice.

He put in his time answering phones at the front desk. He helped install a new floor — work for which he was recognized at a recent lunch. A space for him finally opened up in the mission's veterans program. Counselors got him signed up for medical benefits.

"Like a lot of veterans, Tommy didn't realize he had benefits coming to him," said

Cowley. "That's a lot of the work we do here, just sorting those things out."

Head got the foot surgery he needed, and he has a room among friends where he's able to do his woodworking.

He'll be out of his cast and back on his feet in December, and mission staffers are confident that he'll find work.

"I've never known a town that would open its arms to me like this," said Head.

The Rev. Bill Roscoe, director of the mission, estimates that a quarter of the residents at its shelters in Boise and Nampa are veterans.

The Veterans Ministry Program, which works closely with the Boise Veterans Affairs office, has room for up to 19 qualified veterans at a time. There is a waiting list.

Pregnant Teens Need Better School Support

BY KELLI KENNEDY
Associated Press

MIAMI • When 15-year-old Kali Gonzalez became pregnant, the honors student considered transferring to an alternative school. She worried teachers would harass her for missing class because of doctor's appointments and morning sickness.

A guidance counselor urged Gonzalez not to, saying that could lower her standards.

Instead, her counselor set up a meeting with teachers at her St. Augustine high school to confirm she could make up missed assignments, eat in class and use the restroom whenever she needed. Gonzalez, who is now 18, kept an A-average while pregnant. She capitalized on an online school program for parenting students so she could stay home and take care of her baby during her junior year. She returned to school her senior year and graduated with honors in May.

But Gonzalez is a rare example of success among pregnant students. Schools across the country are divided over how to handle them, with some schools kicking them out or penalizing students for pregnancy-related absences. And many schools say they can't afford costly support programs, including tutoring, child care and transportation for teens who may live just a few miles from school but still too far to walk while pregnant or with a small child.

Nearly 400,000 girls and young women between 15 and 19 years old gave birth in 2010, a rate of 34 per 1,000, according to the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention.

In almost half of the states, including Idaho, Nevada, Nebraska, South Dakota and Utah, the definition of excused absences is not broad enough to include pregnant and parenting students. That typically results in a patchwork of policies where some school districts don't excuse absences even if the student is in the hospital giving birth, according to the study.

Those statistics have led child advocates to push for greater adherence to a 1972 law that bans sex discrimination in federally funded education programs and activities, according to a new report by the National Women's Law Center.

Fatima Goss Graves, the center's vice president of education and employment, says offering pregnant teens extra support would ultimately save taxpayers money by helping them become financially independent and not dependent on welfare.

But budget cuts have eaten into such efforts.

California lawmakers slashed a successful program for such students in 2008, ruling it was no longer mandatory, and allowed school districts to use the money for other programs.

More than 100,000 pregnant and parenting students have participated in the program that helps them with classwork and connects them with social services. It boasted a 73 percent graduation rate in 2010 — close to the state's normal rate — and advocates said participants were less reliant on welfare and less likely to become pregnant again. That compares to several counties where only 30 percent of pregnant and parenting teens graduated.

"It's unfortunate that this effective program fell prey to the enormous budget challenges we are facing as a state," said State Superintendent of Public Instruction Tom Torlakson.

Three years ago in Wisconsin, cost-cutting lawmakers dropped a requirement for school districts to give pregnant students who live within two miles of a school building free rides to school. The requirement had been part of an effort to improve access to education and reduce infant mortality rates.

Less than half of the states have programs that send home assignments to homebound or hospitalized student parents, according to the study.

But a few states have developed programs to help improve graduate rates among pregnant girls and young mothers.

In Washington, D.C., caseworkers in the New Heights Teen Parent Program often stand by the school entrance or text pregnant students and young moms to make sure they are attending classes.

When students do miss school, caseworkers take them homework assignments. About 600 students participate in the program which also helps students with housing, child care and parenting skills. But the $1.6 million federal grant funding the program runs out next year and officials said they don't have a clear future funding source.

Roughly 4,500 male and female student parents participated in a Pennsylvania program last year where case workers helped them balance school and child care. Nearly 1,300 graduated or received an equivalent, state officials said. The ELECT program, which started in 1990 as a partnership between state child welfare and education officials, monitors students' attendance, coordinates summer programs and links them with support systems in the community.

Florida allows pregnant and parenting students to receive homebound instruction and lays out a clear process to make up missed work. The state also gives those students the option of taking online classes.

In St. Johns County, where Gonzalez lives, the school district provides free day care for teen moms and bus transportation for students and their children.

Pregnant students are often stereotyped as low-achievers, but advocates say pregnancy actually motivates some to do better in school.

Gonzalez, whose daughter is now 2, said her grades improved after she became pregnant. "I did push myself a lot harder and I made sure that I wasn't going to be that statistic," said Gonzalez, who is now married and pursuing a nursing degree.

Season

It's the 77th winter season for the Sun Valley Resort. Thursday marked the earliest opening in 18 years.

The goal is to open on Thanksgiving each year, Sibbach said. And that happens about nine out of 10 years.

Ski patrol supervisor Bryant Dunn said guests come from all over the world, and the common thread is that "they're passionate about snow sports."

As for opening day, he said some people wait all year for the skiing and snowboarding season to begin.

"The vibe on opening day is electric," he said.

Dunn said the snow conditions were superb Thursday and the quality of skiing and snowboarding was excellent for early in the season.

Workers at the resort make snow at the mountains when the temperature allows, Sibbach said.

Not all the runs are open yet, but the plan is to keep expanding the available terrain for skiers and snowboarders.

The season generally runs until mid-April in Sun Valley, depending on weather conditions.

For Dunn, the Wood River Valley is home year round.

When he first moved to the area, he taught for a year. But he discovered he didn't have enough time to ski.

Now, as a 12-year ski patrolman, there's no such thing as a typical work day. His duties range from avalanche mitigation to first aid.

"Ski patrolling is a passion, and you never know what's going to happen when you come to work,"

People ski Baldy Mountain on the opening day of the ski season.

he said.

Despite the below freezing morning temperatures, it was a sunny day Thursday with bright blue skies.

At the top of the mountain, many took a moment to take pictures of their group and take in the views of the valley and surrounding peaks.

Ketchum residents Tami Harrison and Julie Youngblood were at Baldy Mountain with a group of friends. Some drove from Boise and Twin Falls.

Harrison, a snowboarder, said conditions were better this year than last Thanksgiving.

Inside the River Run Day Lodge, 17-year-old Megan Grassell sat around a table with her mother, Lynn, father, Chopper, and her siblings.

"We always ski together on Thanksgiving," Grassell said, but it's the first time the Jackson Hole, Wyo., family decided to come to Sun Valley.

The deciding factor? The early opening date and the fact that a number of ski resorts in the West aren't open yet, Chopper Grassell said.

Sibbach said for many, skiing in Sun Valley on Thanksgiving is a family tradition.

"This is a really important part of the year for us," he said.

More than 1,000 people were staying in Sun Valley lodging Thursday. The resort planned to serve 1,400 Thanksgiving dinners.

WILLIS BIDS ADIEU TO SOLDIER MOUNTAIN

FAIRFIELD, Idaho (AP) • "Die Hard" star Bruce Willis is saying goodbye to a small ski area in Idaho he's owned since the 1990s — by donating it to a nonprofit group.

Willis said he's happy with the people from Fairfield who formed a nonprofit to take over operations at Soldier Mountain, the Idaho Statesman reported Thursday.

The actor said in a news release that he wishes the group "the very best" now that he's exiting the scene.

"I couldn't be more pleased with the organization that will be responsible for the management of Soldier Mountain Ski Area," Willis said. "It was exciting to see that the very people who ski at Soldier care so much about its future."

Among those who formed the group to take over Soldier Mountain is Boise attorney Will Varin.

"It went from idea to execution in a matter of weeks," he said, describing how his group leaped into action in April after learning that Willis was considering donating the mountain and its three lifts that access about 1,400 vertical feet of skiing.

Varin said he grew up skiing at the mountain near Fairfield and wants to keep up the ski hill's legacy — while revamping services including its catskiing operation.

The U.S. Forest Service is working on renewing those permits.

Skiers and boarders could take a traditional daylong backcountry catski trip, or a cat will also leave for short trips within the ski area boundaries to serve the runs that aren't served by lifts.

Hearing

prosecutor was selected for the case.

On Nov. 9, Twin Falls County Prosecutor Grant Loeb petitioned the court to appoint Ada County Prosecutor Greg Bower, or a designee Bower selects as a special prosecuting attorney.

"The purpose of this petition is that it has become apparent that during the course of the investigation into this matter that a conflict may exist which requires an appointment of a special prosecutor," the petition stated.

On Nov. 13, George Gunn, a deputy prosecuting attorney for Ada County, was appointed as a special deputy prosecuting attorney for Twin Falls County.

He asked the court for the hearing to be delayed since he would not have enough time to adequately prepare for the hearing.

"Additionally there remains further discovery regarding medical and autopsy reports to disclose," his motion stated.

If convicted, Lish, 21, will face a maximum of 30 years in prison — 15 for voluntary manslaughter and 15 for a weapons enhancement.

In court documents, Twin Falls police detectives state they were dispatched to Canyon Crest for a report of a stabbing at about 12:56 a.m. Oct. 9.

When officers arrived, they spoke with Paiz's girlfriend, the report by police states. According to the report, she and Paiz were waiting for a taxi when Paiz and Lish had a verbal confrontation.

Lish is being held at the Twin Falls County Jail on $250,000 bond.

Idaho Power Is Committed to Water Partnerships

Water is on everyone's mind these days. After one of the hottest, driest summers on record, we turn to the skies and wonder if Idaho will see a third straight year of near or above-normal snowpack. At Idaho Power, we know how important water is to our customers, and we are committed to ensuring this precious resource is used wisely.

Water fuels Idaho's agricultural engine, turning desert to fertile fields along the length of the Snake River Plain. It also produces more than half the electricity used by Idaho Power customers, with the bulk of that hydropower generated by the 17 hydroelectric projects that our company operates on the Snake River and its tributaries.

Idaho Power recognizes its role as a steward of the Snake River and the water that powers the electrical grid in southern Idaho and eastern Oregon. We collaborate with local, state and federal agencies to help ensure flows are sufficient to help satisfy the many users that must share this increasingly scarce resource.

We also have an active cloud seeding program designed to increase the total amount of water in the river. This adds water to the Snake River, increasing our ability to use clean, renewable and low-cost hydro generation. It also benefits watersheds, fish, wildlife, water quality, recreationists and farmers.

That program, which operates in the Payette River basin in west-central Idaho and in eastern Idaho, will expand this year. As the project continues to expand over the next few years, we expect to put about 400,000 acre feet of additional water in eastern Idaho watersheds and another 200,000 acre feet in the Payette River basin each year.

Not all of that water will end up in the Snake River, but the extra volume that does make it through our hydro projects will generate an average 380,000 additional megawatt-hours per year. That's the annual electrical usage for about 30,000 average-sized homes in our service area.

Managing water when nearly every drop has been spoken for takes coordination among a broad spectrum of users. In general, farmers get highest priority. After the last two winters, the Upper Snake basins have more than enough water to satisfy farmers' needs. When that happens, Idaho Power has the option to rent water and send it downstream at the time of greatest need.

In addition, the United States Bureau of Reclamation controls a vast amount of water that it sends downstream during the summer to maintain water conditions for fish and help young salmon on their way to the ocean.

Idaho Power works with the Bureau and irrigation districts to maximize the amount of electricity we can generate with our hydro facilities, within operational guidelines.

Of course, surface water is only part of the story. Many farmers in Eastern Idaho rely on the Eastern Snake River Plain Aquifer to irrigate their crops. Idaho Power supports efforts by the Idaho Department of Water Resources (IDWR) to help farmers install more water-efficient equipment that allows them to maintain crop yields with less water.

The future of that aquifer is important to all Idahoans. That's why Idaho Power is working closely with the IDWR to drill monitoring wells in order to gather data about groundwater in the Hagerman area, where much of that water flows into the Snake River through springs.

As part of the recent reaffirmation of the landmark 1984 Swan Falls Agreement, Idaho Power supports aquifer recharge under the guidelines established by the state's Comprehensive Aquifer Management Plan (CAMP). Eastern Idaho irrigators can divert excess Snake River water in canals, allowing it to seep into the aquifer, which has been declining in recent decades.

Idaho Power will continue to work with the CAMP, along with the Upper Snake Rental Pool Committee, the Upper Snake Advisory Committee, Water District One Advisory Committee and other groups committed to wise water use to preserve one of Idaho's most valuable resources for generations to come.

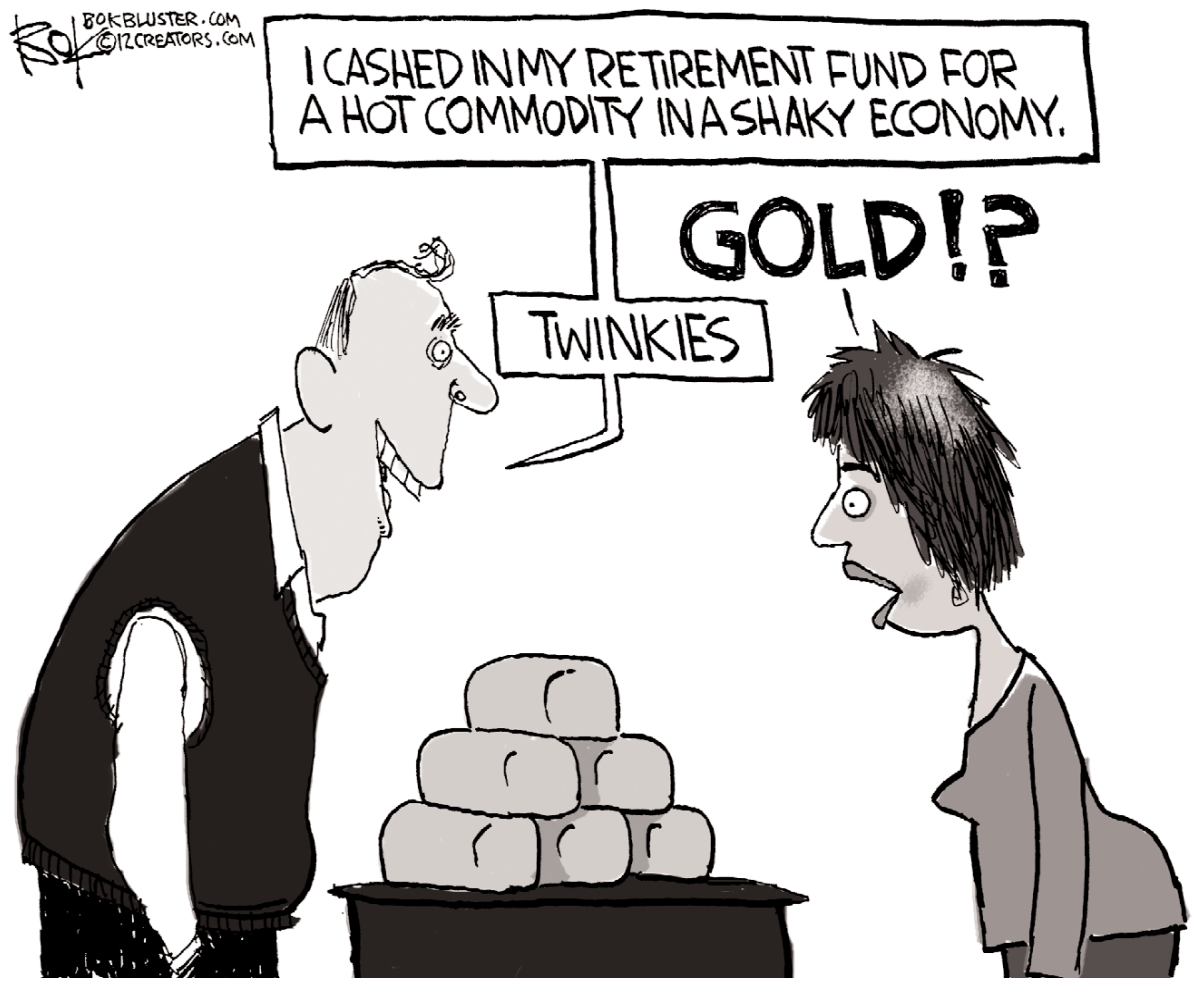

Roger Fuhrman is the manager of Idaho Power's Water Management department.

Why Do We Teach Algebra in School?

How many remember what a polynomial function is? Some of my friends have asked me, quite honestly and bluntly, why do we teach algebra in school? "I've never used algebra in my entire working life." Indeed, how often have you used a quadratic equation? They speak with 30 to 40 years of career experience.

Most do not need mathematics beyond simple arithmetic in their daily lives; with the advent of calculators, I wonder if they even need to master arithmetic. My direct experience shows me most children can't do multiplication or division by hand. Forget about calculating the square root of a number, which I had to learn. Ego-busting algebra has caused many to drop out of school. And if the desired jobs are in non-math areas, such as the fashion industry, why teach algebra or other highfalutin subjects and create low graduation statistics?

It would really be nice not to struggle in life from the beginning, especially with subjects like algebra, which you may not use. Similarly, learning about gerunds in English is only an exercise, never needed in actual life; and memorizing historical dates or facts, which one can look up in seconds on the computer, feels like a waste of time. Computers can now serve as our knowledge and memory bank!

I think we should blame the Soviets; if they hadn't launched Sputnik, the U.S. would not have emphasized math and science in schools, and students would not have to learn algebra for graduation. Life would have been much easier. But this brings the question: Are there other kinds of "Sputniks" being planned that we don't know about and may need to prepare for to be competitive?

When I first studied calculus, I didn't understand all the concepts put before me, but I persisted in learning it, as calculus was required by the curriculum. By the time I graduated college, I saw the beauty of calculus. It is the mathematics of changes, calculating what will happen over time. When I studied physics, I understood its relevance and why calculus was invented. If I had given up calculus because I thought it was a futile exercise in math, I could not have gone further.

Mathematics is not just a science of numbers; it is a tool for cognitive growth. It expands our reasoning ability. From numbers we move on to think in terms of x and y. We start to move from concrete to abstract reasoning. Algebra is the beginning of the mind's expansion — to see things in more than just general terms. And since we don't know what is coming in this century, it will be wise to prepare younger generations to (1) have good reasoning ability and (2) be alert to what may come ahead. Enhancing cognitive reasoning is absolutely needed for our country to prosper, even though its immediate need may not be obvious for many jobs.

Around the world, students are learning higher math in high school. If we eliminate algebra and other difficult subjects from school curriculums and emphasize subjects that are currently needed such as the latest in media marketing, we will create a happy generation, but they will be happy like being on drugs. They will not see what the clues around them are predicting because they have not learned to think abstractly about possibilities. So face it. Life is not a piece of cake and to stay competitive in this Internet age, we have to be multi-disciplinary, learn many and difficult subjects, think critically and imagine what is currently unknown.

Civilizations have died for various reasons; an attitude of emphasizing learning only subjects of immediate use may be a reason for the U.S.'s fall. If you believe that life will go on well in the U.S., the same way it has been, resting on laurels won in the past, then you don't need to force your children to learn difficult subjects.

If you believe that this country, like any other, will have to rise to new challenges, then you must encourage the younger generation to learn new knowledge and develop critical thinking abilities that may not be immediately needed but will come in handy when new "Sputniks" emerge.

Debu Majumdar is a physicist and writer who lives in southeast Idaho.

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

United States Has Become Another Rome

It appears we are rapidly becoming another collapsed civilization like Rome and 18 others when those getting government benefits (bread and circuses) outnumber taxpayers. More takers than makers. Besides Obama being Santa Claus to welfare recipients, widespread voter fraud with no photo identification and the mainstream media supporting Obama, there is another reason that Romney lost the election and received 2 million fewer votes than McCain got in 2008.

The Republican National Committee disenfranchised Ron Paul/Tea Party/conservative supporters at the National Republican Convention as they changed the rules and did not allow Ron Paul to be nominated and thus was not allowed to present his solutions to America's problems. His solutions are limited constitutional government, sound economic and foreign policies and personal liberties. Also, the RNC would not allow the seating of some Paul delegates.

Since Romney already had enough delegates to win, the RNC could have unified the party by putting out an olive branch to the conservatives. However, they alienated them and likely cost Romney the election.

Perhaps the book, "Tragedy and Hope" by Carroll Quigley, who was Bill Clinton's mentor at Georgetown University, explains the actions of the RNC. His book reveals the world's secret power structure. Quigley had access to elitist records. Those records revealed that the heads of both parties are controlled in America by elitists who largely want socialism and a United Nations world government.

W. Cleon Skousen, former FBI agent and founder of The Freeman Institute, wrote a review on Quigley's book titled, "The Naked Capitalist." He reveals that Quigley considered himself a member of the intellectual elite. The title, "Tragedy and Hope," was that those who resist globalization was the Tragedy but the Hope was that international socialism would prevail.

We must withdraw from the United Nations to stop global socialism/communism!

Hunters Can Bag Game at Historic Wyoming Site

ASSOCIATED PRESS

Hunter Jedediah Johnson harvests a whitetail buck while hunting Nov. 8 at the Fort Phil Kearny Hunter Management Area in Wyoming.

BY CHRISTINA SCHMIDT
The Sheridan Press

SHERIDAN, Wyo. (AP) • In addition to offering visitors a unique educational and cultural experience, the Fort Phil Kearny State Historic Site offers hunters the opportunity to harvest big game and game birds from the 700-acre site.

For the past several years, the fort site has been signed up as a Hunter Management Area through the Wyoming Game and Fish Department. As a HMA, the site offers hunters the opportunity to reserve the entire site for a day of hunting for themselves or a group.

“What we offer with the HMA is when they come in and get permission, they and the people they are with have the site to themselves for the day,” explained Fort Phil Kearny Superintendent Misty Stoll. “That is how it is different from a walk-in area. With a HMA, once you have permission from us you know you are the only person on site for the entire day.”

The site is available for resident or nonresident hunters. The cost for using the site is the regular daily use fee of $2 for residents and $4 for nonresidents. All regular game and fish laws and regulations apply, as well as some other rules specific to the site, such as no driving on the site.

“We are managing a natural area as well and a grazing area so we are trying to keep it balanced,” said Stoll, about why vehicles and ATVs are not allowed on the site. “And it has not been a problem. I have heard no complaints at all. We’ve had great hunters.”

Redmond Tunnels Boast ‘Greatest Salt On Earth’

REDMOND, Utah (AP) • Mark Bosshardt has spent eight years in the deep, dark tunnels beneath the small, central Utah town of Redmond.

He’s not mining for precious metals or coal. It’s all about the salt, deemed by some as the “greatest salt on earth” because of its ability to melt at much lower temperatures.

Redmond Trading Company will produce 12,000 tons of the pinkish salt a week — most of it used to make icy roads safer, KSL reports.

The salt deposit beneath the town is estimated to be about 3 miles long, one-quarter of a mile wide and roughly 5,000 feet deep. At this rate, there’s enough material to mine for hundreds of years, if not a couple thousand.

Much of it is used in the West on the roads, but it’s more than road salt.

Its table food name is Real Salt, because it is all-natural, from an ancient seabed geologists date to the Jurassic Era. “We try to leave it just the way nature created it, without adding any chemicals or anti-caking agents, without taking any minerals away,” said Darryl Bosshardt, sales manager for Redmond Trading Company. They just mine it, haul it, crush it, bag it and ship it, sometimes across the world. “You can go to Japan, Taiwan, Hong Kong, and there is a salt from deep within the earth in Utah that finds its way onto the grocery store shelves in Taipei,” Darryl Bosshardt said.

That’s a source of pride to miners such as Mark Bosshardt, who calls the tunnels home. “It’s kind of humbling to see how far that (salt) has actually (gone),” he said.

NV POPULATION SHOULD TOP 3 MILLION BY 2019

LAS VEGAS (AP) • Nevada’s population should pass the 3 million mark by 2019, Clark County alone should top 2 million people by the end of next year and Washoe County likely will get to one-half million by 2031, according to a new report.

State Demographer Jeff Hardcastle said he expects Nevada’s population to continue to grow the old-fashioned way, with more children being born rather than migration from other states and countries. He said that while more than 10,000 people left Nevada in the past two years, that was offset by nearly 40,000 births.

Statewide population grew by about 1 percent in 2012 to a total of 2.75 million.

Hardcastle projects it at slightly over 3 million in 2020 and nearly 3.4 million in 2030.

Clark County alone is now home to 1,988,492 residents.

For at least the past three decades, Nevada has been the fastest-growing state in the nation, but Hardcastle is projecting more modest growth, of 0.8 percent to 1.3 percent a year, for the next 20 years. That is more in line with the national growth rate of about 1 percent yearly throughout the past decade.

Hardcastle’s report showed 80 percent of the population increase in the 1990s, and 74 percent in the 2000s, came through domestic and foreign migration.

“It is going to be shifting more toward babies and a natural increase,” Hardcastle told the Las Vegas Review-Journal. “There will be some in-migration, but not like the 90s and early part of the last decade when we were showing 50,000 (migrants) a year.”

Amanda Powell, associate vice president of communications at Sunrise Hospital, said their 72-bed maternity unit was so busy Monday even the director of nursing had to help out.

Many new Nevadans, Hardcastle added, are children of Hispanics who migrated here in the 1980s and 1990s and who have reached adulthood. Hispanics have the highest birth rate across all demographics in the United States.

The Pew Research Center in 2010 said Hispanic women average 2.4 births; white and Asian, 1.8; and blacks, 2.1.

He released the new projections earlier this month during a hearing of the state Economic Forum, a group of five business leaders who determine tax revenues available to state government. Gov. Brian Sandoval is bound by those estimates in preparing the budget for legislative consideration.

Because of changes in the law, Hardcastle plans to release estimates every October and March.

The new estimates include only county, not city, populations.

Clark County, now home to 1.98 million residents, should pass the 2 million mark in 2013. The county was expected to top that mark in 2006, but the U.S. Census’ official count in 2010 debunked that estimate. In 2031, the county population should be 2.43 million.

Elko County, the center of Nevada’s gold mining industry, is expected to be the fastest-growing county in the state with an average of more than 4 percent annual growth over the next four years.

Elko County has 52,790 residents, ranking it fourth behind Clark County, Washoe County and Carson City. In 2031, Elko County is predicted to have 74,183 residents, Nye County 64,903, and Carson City 60,106.

Times-News Girls Cross Country Runner of the Year: JASMINE NESBITT

BY NICK RULAND
nruland@magicvalley.com

JEROME • After six years training, Jerome's Jasmine Nesbitt going back to middle school, cross country coach Randy Tolman knew what was coming on race day.

Despite being one of the best female runners in the state — she finished in the top four in all 10 of her races — Nesbitt was always a mess prior to the starting gun going off.

"He knows my nervous habits," Nesbitt said. "I will say this hurts or that hurts, and he will say, 'Oh, really? Go run!' When I would say something about a little injury, he would say, 'If you didn't say something, I would be scared!'"

Nesbitt won the 4A District IV meet, and finished second in the 4A state meet, where, in her last high school competition, she also set her career best time, breaking the 19-minute mark (18:58.50).

Nervous habits belie her toughness. She goes through real pain, the nature of which is still unknown. On July 4, Nesbitt was a passenger in a car that was T-boned by a

"It's always about finding the motivation to run every day. The boys push me, and when I complain about something, they tell me to suck it up. I don't like being beaten by the boys; beating them is a big pick-me-up."

semi-truck going more than 50 miles per hour. Somehow, neither Nesbitt nor the fellow runners in the vehicle were seriously injured.

It was the fourth car accident Nesbitt's been involved in — all as a passenger. But the last one was different.

Nesbitt still suffers headaches and nausea.

She once had severe symptoms for five straight days. She's set to see a neurologist. The pain forced her out of multiple practices. Despite it, Nesbitt's time gains were better this year than they were from her sophomore to junior seasons.

"I think the injury factored in a good way,"

Tolman said after the Dani Bates Invitational in October. "It made her realize that she has to work hard. She maybe has never had the best work ethic anyway, but it has helped her out there."

Tolman saw Nesbitt's greatness long ago. This year, he had her run with the boys, many of whom she outran.

"It's always about finding the motivation to run every day," Nesbitt said. "The boys push me, and when I complain about something, they tell me to suck it up. I don't like being beaten by the boys; beating them is a big pick-me-up."

Nesbitt is being heavily recruited by multiple schools, the names of which she won't reveal until she picks one.

But things have been tough. Nesbitt was impacted by the death of classmate Hannah Lock, who died in a car accident earlier this month. The ups and downs of the past six months, of not knowing what is wrong with her, gives Nesbitt motivation to live in the moment and push herself to reach her potential.

"The way I see it, I'm just happy to be alive," Nesbitt said.

Golden Eagles Come Home

BY NICK RULAND
nruland@magicvalley.com

TWIN FALLS • Coming off a 1-1 split at the Casper Invitational that dropped the College of Southern Idaho men's basketball team (5-2) from the NJCAA Division I top 25, the Golden Eagles return home for the Boise Office Equipment Invite.

CSI will play Miles City Community College Friday at 7:30 p.m., and No. 4 Indian Hills Community College Saturday at 7:30 p.m. Indian Hills ended CSI's year in the NJCAA national tournament, and is coached by Barret Peery, formerly the Golden Eagles head man.

Peery, who has his team 5-0 on the season, is known for utilizing full-court pressure for the entirety of his team's games. Last year, he used it to blow out the Golden Eagles in Kansas and lead his team to finish seventh in the country.

While CSI isn't overlooking Miles City, which gave CSI a scare last year, it's had Indian Hills circled on the calendar since losing to them in March.

"This whole season we have been practicing and preparing for this game," CSI guard Jaysean Paige said on 102.9 FM last week. "We're going to protect our house."

The Golden Eagles struggled in their most recent road trip, trailing for much of the game in its one-point win against Western Nebraska Community College, and then blowing a 10 point lead against Casper College.

CSI shot 22-38 from the free-throw line, with most of the misses coming down the stretch.

"This team has to learn how to finish teams off," CSI men's basketball coach Steve Gosar said. "It's unfortunate that our team has to learn these lessons. It's better to learn them now before conference play."

The Golden Eagles not only hope to pick up their free throw shooting, but energy. CSI has played with more energy at home, according to Gosar.

"We've got to have our starters, our sophomores, step up and give us good minutes," Gosar said. "They have to be aggressive on both ends of the court. Miles City came in and gave us a whale of a game last year. They are a very talented team. We bring in the best teams we can."

The CSI women (2-4), will play in the same tournament with each of its games at 5:30 p.m. The Golden Eagles, coming off a 1-2 road trip in which it lost to the No. 4 team in the country but played well in its other two contests, will have an easier schedule. It will face 0-5 Glendale Community College and 3-1 Miles City on Saturday.

Doctor: Puerto Rico Boxer Camacho is Brain Dead

BY DANICA COTO
Associated Press

SAN JUAN, Puerto Rico • Famed Puerto Rican boxer Hector "Macho" Camacho is clinically brain dead, doctors said Thursday, but family members disagreed on whether to take him off life support and two of the fighter's aunts said later that relatives had agreed to wait two more days.

Dr. Ernesto Torres said doctors had no more medical tests to perform on Camacho, who was shot in the face Tuesday night.

"We have done everything we could," said Torres, who is director of the Centro Medico trauma center in San Juan. "We have to tell the people of Puerto Rico and the entire world that Macho Camacho has died, he is brain dead."

He said at a news conference Thursday morning that Camacho's father indicated he wanted the boxer taken off life support and his organs donated, but other relatives opposed the idea.

"This is a very difficult moment," Torres said.

One of the fighter's aunts, Aida Camacho, said Thursday evening that two of Camacho's sisters had asked to have two more days to spend with him, and other family members had agreed even though they felt it was time to give in.

"I'm a person of a lot of faith, and I believe in miracles, but science has spoken," she said.

Another aunt, Blanca Camacho, also said the family had agreed to the wishes of the two sisters from New York to hold off on ending life support. But, she added, "There's nothing left here. He's already dead."

Most of Camacho's relatives left the hospital by Thursday night without commenting.

About a dozen people stood vigil outside. One, Orvil Miller, a singer and actor, expressed sadness about Camacho's fate and recalled his admiration for the fighter's flamboyance.

"He had the combination of the skills of a boxer along with a great sense for entertainment," Miller said.

Steve Tannenbaum, a friend and a former boxing agent for Camacho, said in a phone interview that he idolized Camacho as a boxer.

"He is one of the greatest small fighters that I have ever seen," he said. "Hector Camacho had a legendary status."

Tannenbaum said he initially believed Camacho would survive. "He was almost like the indestructible man. He had so many troubles with the law, so many altercations in his life. It's a great shame."

The 50-year-old Camacho was shot as he and a friend sat in a Ford Mustang parked outside a bar Tuesday night. Police spokesman Alex Diaz said officers found nine small bags of cocaine in the friend's pocket, and a 10th bag open inside the car. Camacho's friend, identified as 49-year-old Adrian Mojica Moreno, was killed in the attack.

Doctors had initially said Camacho was expected to survive, but his condition worsened and his heart stopped briefly overnight Tuesday, Torres said. The bullet entered his jaw and lodged in his shoulder after tearing through three of four main arteries in his neck, affecting blood flow through his brain, doctors said.

"That lack of oxygen greatly damaged Macho Camacho's brain," Torres said.

Camacho was born in Bayamon, a city within the San Juan metropolitan area, but he grew up mostly in New York's Harlem neighborhood, earning the nickname "the Harlem Heckler." He won super lightweight, lightweight and junior welterweight world titles in the 1980s and fought high-profile bouts against Felix Trinidad, Julio Cesar Chavez and Sugar Ray Leonard. Camacho knocked out Leonard in 1997, ending the former champ's final comeback attempt. Camacho had a career record of 79-6-3.

In recent years, he divided his time between Puerto Rico and Florida, appearing regularly on Spanish-language television as well as on a reality show called "Es Macho Time!" on YouTube. In San Juan, he had been living in the beach community of Isla Verde, where he would readily pose for photos with tourists who recognized him on the street, said former pro boxer Victor "Luvi" Callejas, a neighbor and friend.

Camacho battled drugs, alcohol and other problems throughout his life. He was sentenced in 2007 to seven years in prison for the burglary of a computer store in Mississippi. While arresting him on the burglary charge in January 2005, police also found the drug ecstasy.

A judge eventually suspended all but one year of the sentence and gave Camacho probation. He wound up serving two weeks in jail, though, after violating that probation.

His wife also filed domestic abuse complaints against him twice before their divorce several years ago.

TCU tailback Matthew Tucker (29) jumps over the Texas defense to score during the first half of an NCAA college football game on Thursday in Austin, Texas.

Defense Sparks TCU Over No. 18 Texas 20-13

BY JIM VERTUNO
Associated Press

AUSTIN, Texas • Matthew Tucker scored two touchdowns, Jaden Oberkrom kicked two field goals and TCU's defense forced four turnovers in dumping No. 18 Texas 20-13 Thursday night to get the Horned Frogs their biggest win of their first season in the Big 12.

Tucker scored on runs of 1 and 2 yards and the Horned Frogs (7-4, 4-4) dominated the line of scrimmage, running the ball 48 times and passing just 10. TCU had two interceptions inside their own 10 to kill Texas (8-3, 5-3) drives and picked up a fumble by Longhorns quarterback David Ash to set up Tucker's second touchdown.

Ash was relieved by Case McCoy, who led a late touchdown drive before an interception by Sam Carter in the final two minutes sealed the win for the Horned Frogs. Although Texas (8-3, 5-3) has been a Thanksgiving regular since playing its first game on the holiday in 1895, those contests were usually against Texas A&M. But that rivalry broke apart when the Aggies left the Big 12 for the Southeastern Conference.

So the Big 12 sent TCU to Austin this year and the Horned Frogs pushed around the Longhorns at the line of scrimmage and harassed Ash into one of the worst games of his career.

Patriots Pounce on Jets with 35-Point 2nd Q

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) • Tom Brady and the New England Patriots put this game — and the New York Jets' ugly season — away early.

At least it was competitive for a quarter. By halftime, it was a big-time laugher.

Brady threw three touchdown passes and ran for a score as the Patriots thoroughly embarrassed the Jets with a 35-point second quarter in a 49-19 victory Thursday night.

After a scoreless opening quarter, the Patriots (8-3) went on a touchdown spree despite holding the ball for only 2:14 as they took advantage of several mistakes by Rex Ryan's hapless Jets (4-7). Their 35 second-quarter points tied for the fourth-most in a quarter in NFL history.

Fans were chanting for Tim Tebow to play before the second quarter of this Thanksgiving showdown was over, and booing as the team left the MetLife Stadium field at halftime.

New England, which beat Indianapolis 59-24 on Sunday, scored four touchdowns in just over 6 minutes — including three in a jaw-dropping 52-second span — helping Bill Belichick become the eighth coach in NFL history with 200 career victories, including the playoffs.

Brady finished 18 of 28 for 323 yards before leaving with 2 minutes left in the game. He reached 3,000 yards passing for the 10th year, becoming one of six players to accomplish the feat.

He also passed Dan Fouts for 10th place on the career passing list. New York's Mark Sanchez was 26 of 36 for 301 yards, including a touchdown and an interception. Tebow didn't play at all — nursing sore ribs that made him questionable for the game — and stood on the sideline with a cap on throughout despite the occasional chants for him to get some snaps.

But Griffin answered — twice, actually. After Romo's long touchdown to Bryant, Griffin threw his fourth scoring pass, a 29-yarder to Niles Paul. The rookie became the first Redskins quarterback to throw four touchdown passes in consecutive games.

After the Cowboys (5-6) pulled within a touchdown, Griffin drove them into scoring position again, calmly completing three passes for first downs and running 5½ minutes off the clock before Kai Forbath made it 38-28 on a 48-yard field goal.

Tax Increases Could Factor in MLB Negotiations

BY RONALD BLUM
 Associated Press

Team executives and agents wandered into the Agave Sunset lounge at the resort where the general managers' meetings were held in Indian Wells, Calif. Four of the six flat-screen televisions were showing election coverage, with the other two turned to sports.

President Barack Obama's victory over Mitt Romney was of as much interest to baseball's money men as the game scores, given the millions of dollars routinely guaranteed in player contracts these days.

As free agents negotiate deals this offseason, tax policy is an area that comes up along with the usual issues. Some players are wrangling for as much money as they can get before the end of the year to avoid a take hike in 2013.

"Front-loading would make sense if at all possible as tax rates will definitely go up on January 1st on all high-income taxpayers," agent Greg Genske said in an email. "The only question is HOW MUCH will the rates increase???"

This much is known for now: Starting Jan. 1, there is an additional 0.9 percent Medicare tax on wages above $200,000 for individuals and $250,000 for married couples filing jointly under the federal Affordable Care Act, a rise to 2.35 percent.

In addition, the Bush tax cuts are scheduled to expire at the end of the year, which could raise the highest marginal federal tax rate from 35 percent to 39.6 percent — although a deal between Obama and Congress could change that.

Oakland Athletics general manager Billy Beane figures agents will be on top of the changes — but the results of negotiations about the so-called fiscal cliff are unpredictable.

"I think if you're hopping around the potential of tax reform, you're probably chasing your tail," Beane said. "If they can predict when something's going to happen, then they're much further ahead than the law-makers."

With baseball contracts worth as much as $275 million (Alex Rodriguez) and the major league minimum $480,000, tax policy affects every player who spends most of the season in the big leagues.

All-Star shortstop Jose Reyes, who has a $10 million salary next year, was traded from the Miami Marlins to the Toronto Blue Jays. While Florida has no state income tax, Reyes remains a New York resident from his days with the Mets and had high taxes to begin with. Ontario's provincial tax rises to 11.16 percent — on top of a Canadian federal level as high as 29 percent.

Among states with big league teams, income tax rates go as high as 10.3 percent in California and 8.82 percent in New York. At the other end, Florida, Texas and Washington have no state income tax. The top rate in the District of Columbia is 8.95 percent.

"I like ours; we're a no-tax state," Seattle Mariners general manager Jack Zduriencik said. "When we sit down with players, that's a huge benefit. I think any player out there that has an opportunity to play in a no-tax state gets benefits, enormous benefits. We hope that weighs in our favor."

OBITUARIES

Betty George Edwards

March 3, 1932-2012

Betty George was born March 3, 1932, to William and Mae George in Twin Falls, Idaho. Betty was born with a congenital hip problem and was in the Shriners Children's Hospital in Portland, Ore., for the first six and a half years of her life. Shortly after returning to her home in Twin Falls, her father was killed. Betty's mother then married Ernest Ullery and moved to Buhl, Idaho, where she attended school, graduating in 1951. After graduation, she attended and graduated from the Twin Falls Business College. She then went to work for M.H. King (Kings Discount Store) for 2 years. She then went to work at Magic Valley Memorial Hospital in the pathology department for 3 years, helping with autopsies. She continued her schooling and became a professional cook. She was head cook at the high school for many years, cooked at the Twin Falls Elks Lodge and the Magic Valley Youth Detention Center.

Betty taught tap dancing for several years. Playing the violin and piano, and sewing were also part of Betty's life. She also spent part of her spare time doing family genealogy, as well as helping Cloyce at the Mammoth Cave and Museum. At one time, Cloyce and Betty were members of a square dance club, and Betty was the instructor.

Betty married Cloyce Edwards on March 2, 1952, at the First Christian Church in Buhl, Idaho. They have been blessed with 5 children: Calvin (Karla) Edwards of Inkom, Idaho; Cerese (Chuck) Edwards Davidson of Twin Falls, Idaho; Candace (Vance) Edwards Whitaker of Twin Falls and Carmen Edwards of Pocatello, Idaho, as well as one deceased child at birth.

In 1956, Betty joined the LDS Church and volunteered many hours to that endeavor. In 1961, Betty at-

Actress Deborah Raffin Dies at Age 59

LOS ANGELES (AP) • Deborah Raffin, an actress who ran a successful audiobook company with the help of her celebrity friends, has died. She was 59.

Raffin died Wednesday of leukemia at the Ronald Reagan UCLA Medical Center, her brother, William, told the Los Angeles Times. She was diagnosed with the blood cancer about a year ago.

Raffin, the daughter of 20th Century Fox contract player Trudy Marshall, had roles in movies such as "Forty Carats" and "Once Is Not Enough." She also starred in television miniseries, most notably playing actress Brooke Hayward in "Haywire" and a businesswoman in "Noble House," based on the James Clavell saga set in Hong Kong.

She and her then-husband, music producer Michael Viner, launched Dove Books-on-Tape in the mid-1980s, which blossomed into a multimillion-dollar business. The company's first best-seller was Stephen Hawking's opus on the cosmos titled "A Brief History of Time."

Raffin's job was getting celebrities to provide voices for some of the books. Among them were the non-fiction bestsellers "Anatomy of an Illness" and "The Healing Heart," both by Norman Cousins and read by Jason Robards Jr. and William Conrad, respectively.

Raffin also compiled celebrities' Christmas anecdotes for a 1990 book, "Sharing Christmas," which raised money for groups serving the homeless. It included stories from Margaret Thatcher, Kermit the Frog and Mother Teresa. Raffin and Viner sold the company in 1997 and the couple divorced eight years later. Viner died of cancer in 2009.

Raffin is survived by her two siblings, William and Judy Holston; and a daughter, Taylor Rose Viner. Services are set for Sunday in Culver City.

Mexico's President Felipe Calderon delivers a speech Tuesday during a ceremony in Mexico City.

Mexico's President Tries to Change Country's Name

MEXICO CITY (AP) • Mexico's president is making one last attempt to get the "United States" out of Mexico — at least as far as the country's name is concerned.

The name "United Mexican States," or "Estados Unidos Mexicanos," was adopted in 1824 after independence from Spain in imitation of Mexico's democratic northern neighbor, but it is rarely used except on official documents, money and other government material.

Still, President Felipe Calderon called a news conference Thursday to announce that he wants to make the name simply "Mexico." His country doesn't need to copy anyone, he said.

Calderon first proposed the name change as a congressman in 2003 but the bill did not make it to a vote. The new constitutional reform he proposed would have to be approved by both houses of Congress and a majority of Mexico's 31 state legislatures.

Calderon said that while the name change "doesn't have the urgency of other reforms," it should be seen as a relevant issue. "Mexico doesn't need a name that emulates another country and that no one uses on a daily basis," he said.

The United States looms larger than perhaps any other country in the Mexican cultural imagination: Mexicans follow U.S. sports teams, watch U.S. television shows and buy U.S.-made products. For many, however, there is also resentment of a larger and more powerful northern neighbor that's often seen as ignoring or looking down its nose at Mexico.

Calderon has tried to keep Mexico's international image, and its vital tourism industry, from being tarred by the waves of violence set off by his six-year, militarized offensive against drug cartels. At least 47,500 people have died in cartel-related violence during his term in office, although the number is believed to be far higher, since his administration stopped releasing an official count last year.

Scientists: Galapagos Tortoise Can Be Revived

LIMA, Peru (AP) • Lonesome George, the late reptile prince of the Galapagos Islands, may be dead, but scientists now say he may not be the last giant tortoise of his species after all.

Researchers say they may be able to resurrect the Pinta Island subspecies by launching a cross-breeding program with 17 other tortoises found to contain genetic material similar to that of Lonesome George, who died June 24 around 100 years of age at the Pacific Ocean archipelago off Ecuador's coast after repeated failed efforts to reproduce.

Through cross-breeding, "100 percent pure species" can be achieved, said biologist Edwin Naula, director of the Galapagos National Park.

Egypt's Morsi Grants Himself New Powers

CAIRO (AP) • Egypt's president on Thursday issued constitutional amendments that placed him above judicial oversight and ordered the retrial of Hosni Mubarak for the killing of protesters in last year's uprising.

Mohammed Morsi also decreed immunity for the Islamist-dominated panel drafting a new constitution from any possible court decisions to dissolve it, a threat that had been hanging over the controversial assembly.

Liberal and Christian members withdrew from the assembly during the past week to protest what they say is the hijacking of the process by Morsi's allies, who they say are trying to push through a document that will have an Islamist slant marginalizing women and minority Christians and infringing on personal liberties. Several courts have been looking into cases demanding the dissolution of the panel.

The Egyptian leader also decreed that all decisions he made since taking office in June and until a new constitution is adopted and a new parliament is elected — which is not expected before next spring — are not subject to appeal in court or by any other authority. He also barred any court from dissolving the Islamist-led upper house of parliament, a largely toothless body that has also faced court cases.

The moves effectively remove any oversight on Morsi, the longtime Muslim Brotherhood figure who became Egypt's first freely elected president last summer after the Feb. 11, 2011 fall of autocrat Hosni Mubarak. They come as Morsi is riding high on lavish praise from President Barack Obama and Secretary of State Hillary Rodham Clinton.

Hamas Cries Victory as Truce with Israel Holds

GAZA CITY, Gaza Strip (AP) • Hamas leaders and thousands of flag-waving supporters declared victory over Israel on Gaza's first day of calm under an Egyptian-brokered truce Thursday, as Israeli officials flew to Cairo for talks on easing a blockade on the battered Palestinian territory.

Eight days of punishing Israeli airstrikes on Gaza and a barrage of Hamas rocket fire on Israel ended inconclusively. While Israel said it inflicted heavy damage on the militants, Gaza's Hamas rulers claimed that Israel's decision not to send in ground troops, as it had four years ago, was a sign of a new deterrent power.

"Resistance fighters changed the rules of the game with the occupation, upset its calculations," Gaza Prime Minister Ismail Haniyeh of the rally, said later in a televised speech. "The option of invading Gaza after this victory is gone and will never return."

At the same time,

Haniyeh urged Gaza fighters to respect the truce and to "guard this deal as long as Israel respects it."

The mood in Israel was mixed. Some were grateful that quiet had been restored without a ground operation that could have cost the lives of more soldiers. Others — particularly those in southern Israel hit by rockets over the past 13 years — thought the operation was abandoned too quickly.

Thousands of Israeli soldiers who had been sent to the border during the fighting withdrew Thursday, the military said.

Israeli Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu said the offensive's aims of halting Gaza rocket fire and weakening Hamas were achieved. "I know there are citizens who were expecting a harsher response," he said, adding that Israel is prepared to act if the cease-fire is violated.

Despite the tough talk, the cease-fire raised hopes of a new era between Israel and Hamas.

Sandy Victims Cheered at Thanksgiving Day Parade

NEW YORK (AP) • Victims of Superstorm Sandy in New York and elsewhere in the Northeast were comforted Thursday by kinder weather, free holiday meals and — for some — front row seats to the annual Macy's Thanksgiving Day Parade.

"It means a lot," said Karen Panetta, of the hard-hit Broad Channel section of Queens, as she sat in a special viewing section set aside for residents displaced by the storm.

"We're thankful to be here and actually be a family and to feel like life's a little normal today," she said.

The popular Macy's parade, attended by more than 3 million people and watched by 50 million on TV, included such giant balloons as Elf on a Shelf and Papa Smurf, a new version of Hello Kitty, Buzz Lightyear, Sailor Mickey Mouse and the Pillsbury Doughboy. Real-life stars included singer Carly Rae Jepsen and Rachel Crow of "The X Factor."

The young, and the young at heart, were delighted by the sight and sound of marching bands, performers and, of course, the giant balloons. The sunny weather quickly surpassed 50 degrees. Some parade-goers had camped out to get a good spot, staying snug in sleeping bags.

Alan Batt and his 11-year-old twins, Kyto and Elina, took in the parade at the end of the route, well away from the crowd and seemingly too far away for a good view. But they had an advantage: Two tall stepladders they hauled over from their apartment eight blocks away — one for each twin.

"We're New Yorkers," the 65-year-old Batt said. "We know what we're doing."

With the height advantage, "I get to see everything!" Kyto said.

At nearby Greeley Square, social worker Lowell Herschberger, 40, of Brooklyn, sought in vain to tear his sons, 8-year-old Logan and 6-year-old Liam, from a foosball table set up in the tiny park as the balloons crept by on the near horizon.

"Hey, guys — there's Charlie Brown," he said, pointing at the old stand-by balloon.

The boys didn't look up.

"I guess they're over it," the father said with a shrug.

Come by & show your support! It's going to be a big day for small business.

An emergency worker walks past a pile of cars from the accident Thursday on Interstate 10 in southeast Texas.

Massive Pileup Shuts I-10 in Texas

BEAUMONT, Texas (AP)

• Two people died and dozens were hurt Thursday when at least 100 vehicles collided in Southeast Texas in a pileup that left trucks twisted on top of each other and authorities rushing to pull survivors from the miles of wreckage.

The collision occurred in extremely foggy conditions at about 8 a.m. Thanksgiving Day on Interstate 10 southwest of Beaumont, a Gulf Coast city about 80 miles east of Houston.

Officials at Acadian Ambulance service told KFDM-TV that at least 51 people have been taken to area hospitals and at least eight are critically hurt.

It wasn't immediately clear how the pileup began, but Jefferson County Sheriff's Office Deputy Rod Carroll said the fog was so thick that deputies didn't immediately realize they were dealing with multiple accidents.

"It is catastrophic," Carroll said. "I've got cars on top of cars."

I-10's eastbound lanes were expected to remain closed for most of Thursday.

Texas Department of Public Safety trooper Stephanie Davis told KFDM that two people in an SUV died after the crash. She said at least 100 cars and trucks were involved in the accident.

Carroll said uninjured drivers tried to help as authorities sorted through the wreckage.

"It's just people helping people," Carroll said. "The foremost thing in this holiday season is how other travelers were helping us when we were overwhelmed, sitting and holding, putting pressure on people that were injured."

Trouble Not Over for Jesse Jackson Jr.

CHICAGO (AP) • Jesse Jackson Jr.'s resignation from Congress might end his once-promising political career but it doesn't mark the end of troubles for the civil rights icon's son.

Just two weeks after voters re-elected him to a ninth full term, Jackson on Wednesday sent his resignation letter to House Speaker John Boehner, citing his ongoing treatment for bipolar disorder and admitting "my share of mistakes" while confirming publicly for the first time that he's the subject of a federal probe and cooperating with investigators.

Federal authorities are reportedly investigating Jackson's possible misuse of campaign funds and the House Ethics Committee is investigating his dealings with imprisoned ex-Illinois Gov. Rod Blagojevich. It was unclear how the committee would proceed following Jackson's resignation. The committee could still decide to release a final report on him but it no longer has the power to punish Jackson.

Jackson, 47, was never charged with wrongdoing and in his resignation letter wrote, "they are my mistakes and mine alone."

Jackson's attorneys offered few details of the reported probe into misuse of campaign funds.

"Mr. Jackson is cooperating with the investigation. We hope to negotiate a fair resolution of the matter but the process could take several months," according to a statement from Jackson's attorneys, including former U.S. Attorney in Chicago Dan Webb. "During that time, we will have no further comment and urge you to give Mr. Jackson the privacy he needs to heal and handle these issues responsibly."

Experts said Jackson's resignation and confirmation of the federal investigation signaled more details would likely follow.

"I think it won't be too long before we hear an announcement of a plea agreement," said Bruce Reinhart, a white-collar defense lawyer in West Palm Beach, Fla., who was a federal prosecutor for 19 years. "The government doesn't like people who are going to plead guilty to abusing public office to remain in a position of public trust. ... Resignation would be a significant bargaining chip for Congressman Jackson in order to get a better deal from the government."

Late Wednesday the longtime Chicago congressman's father, the Rev. Jesse Jackson Sr., told reporters his son resigned because he didn't believe he could continue to serve effectively while also trying to get well.

"He made the decision to choose his health," Jackson said.

He also said there is no way of knowing how long it will take for his son to recover from what he characterized as an "internal unresolved challenge."

"It's not the kind of illness you can put a timetable on," Jackson said, adding that he is confident his son "will get well in time."

Jackson first took office in 1995 after winning a special election in a Democratic district made up of South Side Chicago neighborhoods, several southern suburbs and rural areas.

He began his career in Washington with a star power and pedigree that set him apart from his hundreds of other House colleagues. But despite high expectations, Jackson largely went unnoticed as a policymaker.

He went on medical leave in June, though his office was never forthcoming about details about his condition, his whereabouts or if he would return.

Whether you exhausted yourself with hours of shopping or spent today baking cookies, tonight's fireworks display in Twin Falls is a neighborly way to launch your Christmas. At the annual Christmas in the Nighttime Sky festivities, you can warm up with free chili, visit with Santa and listen to entertainment before the fireworks begin. ## Drama that Matters

If you missed their play in Twin Falls this summer, here's a second chance. Drama teacher James Haycock and retired comedian Danny Marona will reprise their heart-warming performance of "Tuesdays with Morrie" on a Ketchum stage tonight and Saturday, as a fundraiser for arts education. It's the autobiographical story of a journalist who reconsidered his priorities during weekly visits to a former professor dying from Lou Gehrig's disease.

TWIN FALLS • "One, two, three, four, and smile on your face," said ballet teacher Rachel Davis. "One, two, three, four — beautiful — all right." The girls in front of Davis danced across the room, the soles of their pink shoes stained with the dirt of floors, as their arms were elegantly raised. Some of them wore pink or black tights, their hair pulled into buns. The girls in the yoga room at the YMCA E Street on Nov. 17 were rehearsing for an opportunity that not many young dancers get to experience.

Fireworks Display Gathers Toy Donations

BY TETONA DUNLAP
tdunlap@magicvalley.com

TWIN FALLS • Tonight you can help out Magic Valley children while watching fireworks choreographed to Christmas music. The 22nd annual Christmas in the Nighttime Sky festivities start at 5:30 tonight at Kimberly Nurseries, 2862 Addison Ave. E. It's an outdoor gathering with food and entertainment that culminates in fireworks. Admission is one new, quality, unwrapped toy for infant to age 16. Proceeds benefit needy Magic Valley children through the Christmas for Kids program. In the past, said Kimberly Nurseries spokeswoman Sherry Wright, some families donated items such as bicycles.

ing at about 7:30 p.m. The music is provided by KOOL 96.5 FM. Wright described the event as an old-fashioned holiday outing and suggested people dress warmly. The fireworks display, she said, is crisp and clear because the sky will be black at 7:30 p.m. Addison Avenue will be closed from Eastland Drive to Hankins Road, but there will be free parking at Kmart and Grocery Outlet with free shuttle buses available there. Overflow parking is available at Lighthouse Christian Fellowship. Toy donations can also be dropped off at Kimberly Nurseries from 8 a.m. to 10 a.m. Saturday, or from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. Mondays through Fridays. Playing party guests, they are among the 39 local dancers selected to perform alongside professional dancers Nov. 28 in the Eugene Ballet's Twin Falls performance of "The Nutcracker."

"This is a rare opportunity," Davis said. "They have several big dances such as waltz with the adults and the lullaby with Clara."

The party guests show up in the first act where Clara receives the nutcracker and shows it off. In this scene, the party guests will perform an allegro, which calls for upbeat and quick dance steps, while the lullaby scene with Clara requires slower and more precise movement.

Davis, who teaches dance locally, was hired for the third time to help dancers learn the choreography for their parts. In addition to learning the dances, the girls must learn how to act their roles.

"Ballet is what I love, it's my passion," Davis said.

For some of the girls, being cast was a goal they danced toward.

"I've seen the Nutcracker before and always wondered what it would be like to be in the Nutcracker," said Shevelle Hurtado, 12, of Jerome, who has been dancing since she was 5.

"It's been a fun experience, learning all new steps," Hurtado said.

For Chloe Longoria, 12, of American Falls, the audition was a little nerve-racking.

"During tryouts my face was turning red," Longoria said, but added: "It was an awesome experience and I would do it everyday if I could."

Then there are girls like Mady Thornquest, 12, of Twin Falls who aren't new to the production. This is Thornquest's third "Nutcracker" role.

"I have it down pretty well," Thornquest said of the choreography. "The acting is hard because on stage you can't talk, you have to express yourself with your face."

important in the development of the western world," Mannen said.

The play opens Wednesday on a CSI stage.

"The show isn't about forcing an opinion or trying to get people to believe or agree with Spinoza," Mannen said. "Hell, I don't agree with Spinoza. But it should get people to think; that's what Spinoza's works do, and hopefully that's what the show will do."

The backdrop of "New Jerusalem" contains historically known snippets from Spinoza's life.

After escaping the Spanish Inquisition and settling down in Amsterdam, a small Jewish community finds itself again torn apart when Spinoza, the rabbi's heir apparent, leaves faith behind to become a revolutionary thinker. He's one of the first secular Jews and an influential philosopher, laying the groundwork for European Enlightenment and the democratic ideals and governments that followed.

Although it has wry humor, the theological drama should have audiences "feeling like they perhaps learned something," said Collyn Giltner, 18, cast as Baruch De Spinoza.

In the play, Spinoza is summoned to an Amsterdam synagogue, unaware that he will be forced to defend his theory of rationalism in front of the congregation, as well as his personal relationships and religious beliefs. In preparation, the CSI freshman and theater major studied Spinoza's works, the culture and standing religious dogma of the time.

"A huge piece of his character is how mathematically minded he was, and his writing reflects that," Giltner said.

As Noel Nelson researched for her part as Clara Van Den Enden — believed to have had a relationship with Spinoza — the CSI theater major noticed how even today religion can dominate conversation.

"In Idaho there is religious tension with similar things being brought up in the play, like beliefs that the world is ending," said Nelson, 18. "People were really upset. I think that the one thing I'll take and learn from this play is that things will be okay. It's okay to be open-minded with other people's ideas, even if you don't share or believe them. It's not the end of the world."

As for Mannen, his retirement won't be the end of his campus presence, although he must take a minimum six-month hiatus under state retirement benefits law. After that, Mannen looks forward to teaching periodical adjunct classes.

"I think I'm also going to write a book. The same friend that I'd had 45 years (who died last year and referred Mannen to 'New Jerusalem') had been pressing me and I think it's time," Mannen said. "I'm going to call it 'Letters to a Young Actor: Miscellaneous Ramblings of a Life in Theater.'"

Pottery Sale Is Antidote to Homogenous Gift-giving

TWIN FALLS • Shoppers will scour the tables Thursday morning as the annual Magic Mud sale opens, collecting piles of bowls or cradling lidded casseroles.

The ceramics sale — the College of Southern Idaho art department's annual fundraiser — runs Nov. 29-Dec. 1 at the CSI Student Union Building's Eagle's Nest.

Some ceramic pieces there are fanciful, but every piece is practical, too: dishwasher- and oven-proof, nontoxic and fine for food. The selection includes wheel-thrown and hand-built pieces.

The event brings together

the works of student and professional potters selling platters, bowls, vases, casserole dishes, cups, teapots and unique decorative objects. This year's potters will include Rebecca Rary, Mario Gauna, Paige Ward, Jess Adams, Jill Crozier, Linda Tuley, Jaquie Devers and Candace Kilgrew.

In addition to the ceramics, CSI art professor Bill West said this year's show will feature photography and Raku-fired ceramic jewelry. And for the first time, CSI dance students will do a modern dance performance that interprets the ceramic process.

The show runs from 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. Nov. 29-30 and from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Dec. 1.

McCall Recital Series Seeks Musicians

TWIN FALLS • Here's an opportunity for Magic Valley musicians: Second Sunday Sounds @ Six, McCall's free community recital series, is seeking musicians for the 2013 season.

The series, established by the McCall Community Congregational Church in 2006, provides sacred and classical music on the second Sunday of every month. Performances begin at 6 p.m. at the church and are free to the public.

The 2012 schedule included performances by university music faculty from throughout the Northwest.

Now the church is seeking musicians interested in performing during the 2013 season. Artist compensation has increased this year to $400 for soloists, $500 for duos and $600 for ensembles of three or more, plus overnight lodging if needed. Five recitals will be compensated at $1,000 for artists and ensembles of note.

Interested? Prepare a program with 50-75 minutes of sacred or classical music, then submit an application which includes a title or theme for the program and a detailed list of compositions. Artists without at least two years' study as a university music major or at least five years' professional performance experience must submit a recording of at least two of the proposed recital pieces.

Visiting artists may use the church's organ and piano. The three-manual 2005 Allen Renaissance Quantum Q345 Digital Organ has 58 stops, 232 voices and 16 memories and includes four individually voiced digital suites. The piano is a 1998 Knabe & Sons 5-foot-6-inch grand.

The deadline for applications is Dec. 14. Get application packets at www.McCallUCC.org, at 208-634-5430 or from the church's music director, Tyler Vance, at 208-634-7342 or SecondSundaySounds@gmail.com.

The "Primitive Skills for Kids and Families" sessions are free and open to everyone. Heck will teach participants how to make small woven bags, ducks, deer and other items. It'll be a free archeological make-and-

DEAR ABBY: My wife died a few years ago. I live alone and have been a bachelor since then. Old friends have been kind enough to pass along the names and phone numbers of widows or divorcees they felt would be of interest to me. I have taken several of them out to dinner. Some were interesting, but for one reason or another we didn't have enough "chemistry" for me to call them for another date.

DEAR ABBY
Jeanne Phillips

What is the considerate thing to do after having just one date? Should I call the person and say it was pleasant, but ...? Should I not call at all and move on? I feel guilty at times for not following up with some comment, as they were mostly nice women. Any suggestions about how to handle these situations would be welcome.

— MIAMI WIDOWER
DEAR WIDOWER: Conversations such as this can be awkward, which is why many people avoid having them. Because you feel you "should" say something, a way to handle it would be to say you had a nice time, but you are still grieving and are not ready for a relationship. Chemistry is supposed to be mutual, so don't be surprised if some of the women aren't interested in pursuing a relationship with you, either. That's life.

DEAR ABBY: I work in a store that is popular with teenagers. Every Christmas, parents and grandparents come in here with absolutely no clue what to get. Asking "What's popular right now?" doesn't help. (What's cool to one teen may be lame to another.) I'd like to offer a couple of tips to help clueless relatives select the right gift for their teen.

(1) Bring a recent photo of her or him. We can tell a lot by looking. It will provide hints as to what kind of gift they may like.

(2) Copy a list of their "likes" from Facebook and bring it with you. It may mention books, music, movies or other interests that will make it easy to track down something they would enjoy.

I hope this helps some of your readers.

— VALERIE IN FORT WORTH

DEAR VALERIE: Bless you for writing. I'm sure many parents and grandparents will take your suggestions to heart. Santa isn't the only one who needs a "helper" at Christmastime.

DEAR ABBY: What do you think of a 30-year-old man who posted every detail about his breakup with my daughter on Facebook for all of their 1,000 friends and family members to read? There was some personal and very painful stuff.

Is this the "new generation" norm? Or is he immature and inconsiderate?

— HURTING FOR MY DAUGHTER

DEAR HURTING: Welcome to the wonderful world of the Internet, where millions of individuals have chosen to live their lives online for all to see. And while you and I might consider what happened to be a form of kissing-and-telling, bragging, a bid for sympathy and in poor taste, the people who love your daughter will "unfriend" this person, and those who love gossip will devour every detail with relish.

In time your daughter will realize she is lucky this relationship is over. Whether her former boyfriend used Facebook to gain 15 minutes of fame or as a weapon to hurt her, I think she can do better. Don't you?

THE ACES ON BRIDGE® Bobby Wolff

"No kings are coming on their hands and knees, Nor yet on horses or in chariots, To carry me away from you again..."
 — Edwin Arlington Robinson

Today's deal comes from an international report. Against three spades, Geir Brekka began with his singleton club jack, ducked all around.

Now West was uncomfortably positioned. A spade continuation would allow declarer to fulfill his contract, since inevitably a few tricks later West would find himself endplayed, obliged to play a heart or diamond, allowing declarer access to dummy to pitch his club losers.

A diamond continuation was also unattractive. So West decided to switch to a small heart. Dummy played low, East played his heart two, showing an odd number of cards, and declarer won the trick with his king and led his singleton diamond.

By now Brekka already knew declarer's shape: six spades, two hearts, one diamond and four clubs. So he took his diamond ace, played his heart ace, and carefully continued with his spade 10 (NOT the five). Declarer won the trick with his jack and cashed the spade ace.

Brekka had realized that if he now followed with his small spade, at the next trick he was going to be endplayed by declarer with his spade king. He would then have to play a heart or a diamond, providing a much needed entry to dummy, letting declarer pitch all his club losers. Brekka therefore dropped his trump king under the ace, trading one trick for three and defeating the contract.

ANSWER: Is this auction forcing? I don't see why, since both opponents are bidding and partner could have jumped or cue-bid with a really good hand. If I had to guess, I'd say game couldn't be better than a 1-in-3 shot. Since hearts feels like our side's best fit, I would pass, and apologize if I misjudged the position.

Sudoku is a number-placing puzzle based on a 9x9 grid with several given numbers. The object is to place the numbers 1 to 9 in the empty squares so that each row, each column and each 3x3 box contains the same number only once. The difficulty level of the Conceptis Sudoku increases from Monday to Sunday.

IF NOVEMBER 23 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: The universe will give you the wise guidance and assistance you need in the year to come. Your business sense is sound during the next four to six weeks, but you might prefer to relax and concentrate on less-taxing situations between now and late January. Since you are more sensitive to outside influences, you might avoid competitive situations. June is a fabulous time to put major plans into motion that will help you glide through the rest of the year. That could be a good time to begin a new job, make a move or start any key project. If someone you count on is unable to contact you or can't complete a deal in that point of time, then it is a sign that he or she doesn't have your best interests at heart.

HOROSCOPE
Jeraldine Saunders

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Your companions may throw caution to the wind this weekend. Make an effort to be a good friend and act as a restraining influence. Tighten your purse strings and hold off on impulsive shopping sprees.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Social activities may bring you closer to old friends or put you in contact with the elderly. You must adjust your attitude to meet the expectations of others. Avoid complicated schemes that could drain resources.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Do it by the book. You may be able to get away from a job early if you hold up your part of a bargain, meet a deadline or exceed the quota. Others may be exacting and demand perfect manners.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): No one wants to be reminded of duty and responsibility when attending what should be carefree events. An effort to achieve emotional security with a new friend or lover might come at too high a price.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Grab your security blanket. A lack of confidence in the outcome of a proposed change could have you clinging to whatever is handy and offers comfort. Home and family is a source of pride and empowerment.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Guard your tongue. Make the wrong remark and you might find yourself in the proverbial doghouse. This isn't the best day for holiday shopping; everything on sale is not necessarily a bargain.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): The hunt is on for good times. You are eager to break free of dreary routines. Partners can seem aggressive and unwilling take no for an answer. The more you are chased, the more fun it is to be caught.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Even the seven dwarves had their "grumpy." Someone may rain on your holiday parade, or remind you of responsibilities, but that's OK because you can plan a special treat for later in the weekend.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Others close could mention the very things that power up your passions and add an interesting spark to the day. Capitalize on friendships; climb further by using others to further your goals.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): If you want to bend the rules, you must be fair to others when they bend them, too. Companions might be unpredictable; a lack of confidence in a romantic commitment could undermine relationships.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Variety may be the spice of life, but keep the reliable, but dull, salt shaker handy. Take the news on the grapevine with a grain of salt. Someone might be beating around the bush with the wrong stick.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Remain on your best behavior. Check the details in advance to ensure that you arrive on time. You could be led astray by your incorrect assumptions. Avoid embarrassment; don't wear jeans to formal affairs.
