Magic Valley Residents Line Up for Deals

BURLEY • Shoppers a little weary after a night of battling crowds for the best deals rallied early Friday to hit the stores again.

"It was really crazy last night," said Lauri Burns of Fairfield, a Walmart shopper who returned to the store early Friday morning to pick up a great deal on a trampoline that she spotted the night before. "I mainly come out for the entertainment value of it. I don't go to blows with people."

Walmart shift manager Cordell Higley said it's too early to tell but it looks like sales went well.

"It went easy and was organized, and the customers seemed polite," Higley said.

By 9 a.m., C-A-L Ranch Stores cashier Christina Garcia still had a smile on her face, but it was beginning to wear a touch thin.

"I'm thinking about taking a nap," said Garcia, who kept her post and continued to joke with her customers.

THE MARKET AT A GLANCE

Stocks Soar on Black Friday; Tech Leads the Way

NEW YORK (AP) • The stock market enjoyed some Black Friday cheer, rising sharply as shoppers braved the annual post-Thanksgiving rush. Major stock indexes closed one of their best weeks of the year.

Traders were encouraged by positive economic news from Germany and China, two engines of global growth. Technology stocks soared after a few weeks of selling. And early reports from retailers suggested strong consumer spending.

The Nasdaq ended up 40.30 points, or 1.4 percent, at 2,966.85. The Dow Jones industrial average gained 172.79, or 1.4 percent, to 13,009.69 — the first time since election day that the Dow closed above 13,000.

The S&P 500 added 18.12, or 1.3 percent, to 1409.15. The rally gave the S&P 500 its biggest weekly point gain since last December – 49 points, or 3.6 percent. The Dow gained 3.4 percent and the Nasdaq almost 4 percent for the week.

The market closed early, at 1 p.m. EST.

Local ITD Region Recognized by NWS

TIMES-NEWS

TWIN FALLS • A local Idaho Transportation Department office's weather safety preparedness was acknowledged by the National Weather Service.

The South Central Idaho ITD office is the first transportation entity to earn the recognition in the U.S., according to an ITD news release.

The office earned the recognition after demonstrating appropriate levels of emergency operation that included communications, equipment, facilities and human resources. The office's region also made sure to include multiple methods of weather monitoring.

The recognition acknowledges ITD's participation in StormReady, a program that NWS runs with the help of the International Association of Emergency Managers and the National Emergency Management Association

"Here in south central Idaho, our natural environment and diverse terrain come coupled with severe weather risks in every season especially from blizzards and extreme cold in winter. These risks require constant communication with community officials year round," said Vernon Preston, warning coordination meteorologist for NWS in Pocatello. "The StormReady process arms us with improved communication and safety skills needed to save lives and property - before and during a weather event."

Three Injured in

TIMES-NEWS

TWIN FALLS • Three people were injured Thursday evening in a rollover crash at 1750 East and U.S. Highway 30.

Twin Falls County Sheriff's Sgt. Ken Mencl said a call about the crash came in at about 7:30 p.m.

Mencl said a blue GMC Jimmy rolled near the railroad crossing on Highway 30.

Mencl said the reporting party stated four people were in the vehicle and extrication was required to get them out. Three were transported to St. Luke's Magic Valley Medical Center and later released, he said.

Mencl said because of the Thanksgiving holiday, the final report on the crash was not complete and more information would likely not be available today.

Black Friday Creeps Into Thanksgiving Permanently?

BY ANNE D'INNOCENZIO Associated Press

This season could mark the end of Black Friday as we know it.

For decades, stores have opened their doors in the wee hours on the day after Thanksgiving. But this year, major chains such as Target, Walmart and Sears ushered customers in on Thanksgiving itself, even before the turkey leftovers had gotten cold, turning the traditional busiest shopping day of the year into a two-day affair.

Despite an outcry from some employees, both stores and shoppers seemed to like it. Some people went shopping with a full belly, going straight from the dinner table to the stores. Others slept off their big meal and went to the mall before daybreak on Black Friday.

"I ate my turkey dinner and came right here," said Rasheed Ali, a college student in New York City who bought a 50-inch TV for $349 and a sewing machine for $50 when Target opened at 9 p.m. on Thanksgiving. "Then I'm going home and eating more."

This new approach could become a holiday shopping season tradition.

"It's Black Thursday and Friday combined," said Jackie Fernandez, a retail expert at the consulting firm Deloitte. "This is going to be a new normal of how we shop."

It won't be clear for a few days how many shoppers took advantage of the Thanksgiving hours. But about 17 percent of people said earlier this month that they planned to shop at stores that opened on Thanksgiving, according to an International Council of Shopping Centers-Goldman Sachs survey of 1,000 consumers.

Meanwhile, 33 percent intended to shop on Black Friday, down 1 percentage point from last year. Overall, it is estimated that sales on Black Friday will be up 3.8 percent to $11.4 billion this year, according to technology company ShopperTrak, which did not forecast sales from Thanksgiving Day.

The Black Friday creep began in earnest a few years ago when stores realized that sales alone weren't enough to lure shoppers anymore, especially with Americans becoming more comfortable buying things online. Opening on Thanksgiving was risky, with some employees and shoppers complaining it was almost sacrilegious.

But many stores evidently felt they needed an edge, especially this season, when many Americans are worried about high unemployment and wondering whether Congress will be able to head off tax increases and spending cuts before the U.S. reaches the "fiscal cliff" in January.

Overall, the National Retail Federation estimates that sales in November and December will rise 4.1 percent this year to $586.1 billion, below last year's 5.6 percent.

ASSOCIATED PRESS

"Every retailer wants to beat everyone else," said C. Britt Beemer, chairman of America's Research Group, a firm based in Charleston, S.C. "Shoppers love it."

At Wal-Mart, the world's largest retailer, most of its 4,000 U.S. namesake stores are already open 24 hours year-round. But the chain added special sales at 8 p.m. on Thanksgiving, two hours earlier than a year ago.

The company said that its start to the holiday season was "the best ever," with nearly 10 million transactions and 5,000 items sold per second from 8 p.m. to midnight on Thanksgiving. Toys R Us opened at 8 p.m. on Thanksgiving, an hour earlier than last year.

Macy's, which opened at midnight on Thanksgiving, had 12,000 customers wrapped around its store in New York's Herald Square.

Julie Hansen, a spokeswoman at Minneapolis' Mall of America, the nation's largest shopping center, reported that 30,000 shoppers showed up for the mall's midnight opening, up from 20,000 last year. "This was additional dollars," Hansen said. This year, 200 of the 520 mall tenants opened at midnight following Thanksgiving. That's double from a year ago.

To be sure, it's not clear whether the longer hours will turn into extra dollars for retailers, or whether sales will simply be spread out over two days.

The Thanksgiving openings appeared to create two waves of shoppers — the late-nights and the early birds.

Sam Chandler and his wife, Lori, were among the night owls. They started shopping at midnight on Thanksgiving. By the time they reached the Walmart in Greenville, S.C., early Friday, they had already hit several stores, including Target and Best Buy.

"We've learned over the years, you have to stand in line early and pray," Sam said.

Stu and April Schatz of Rockland County, N.Y., went to the Garden State Plaza mall in Paramus, N.J., which didn't open until 7 a.m. on Black Friday, because they didn't want to deal with the crowds that show up late on Thanksgiving night.

"It's so much more civilized going in the morning," said April Schatz, a teacher. "We wanted to enjoy our evening."

C-A-L Ranch Stores manager Wayne Hubbard said the store opened at 6 a.m. and the customers continued to come in a steady stream.

"This is my favorite day of the year, and it's going great," Hubbard said.

Hubbard said the store's biggest sellers were the safes, sleeping bags and children's table-top games.

King's manager Bessie Thueson said a small group of customers was waiting at the door for the store's 7 a.m. opening.

"We really tend to get busier after people get done shopping at the other stores. Then they come in to see what we have," Thueson said.

Top sellers included a 43inch-stuffed bear and a doll house.

"People are looking for anything that's on sale," Thueson said. "They are just looking for good deals."

Burns said the Black Friday deals are always great and she likes to stock up on toys for birthdays and Christmas.

When they arrived at Target at 4 p.m., three other people were in line – Kelsey Wolfe and her siblings. The three were in line by 3:40 p.m.

"When we first got here we were going to get hot chocolate," Wolfe said. "Then we saw (Sandoval and Bonilla) and booked it back."

Sandoval brought a backpack filled with supplies that included energy drinks, pain killers, bottled Starbucks frappuccinos, whipped cream, cash and blankets.

The group eventually grew to about 10 people who danced, rapped, sang songs and played a few games to keep themselves entertained and warm.

Judd estimated about 500 to 600 people were waiting in line outside.

At the midnight opening of the Magic Valley Mall, many shoppers waited in their cars to avoid the night's chill. Lines didn't form until about 11 p.m.

Morgan Stanger and her friends were first in line at one of the three main mall entrances. Stanger said she was hoping for a good deal at Victoria's Secret.

Krystal and Carter Stewart traveled from Sun Valley to score some deals. The two waited in their car starting at about 9:30 p.m., then hurried toward the door at about 11 p.m. when they saw a line forming.

"They don't have stuff like this in Sun Valley," Krystal Stewart said.

Cori Hansen and Johnny Balls made Black Friday stops at Walmart and Shopko but hadn't made any purchases as of midnight. The two were hopeful they'd find something at the mall for their mothers.

Hansen said she'd been to Walmart twice on Thursday to pick up last minute Thanksgiving items, but couldn't find any deals she wanted after going back at 8 p.m.

"It was way too crazy," Balls said.

Just before midnight, war paint washed off, Sandoval and Bonilla made it to the line outside Macy's. After Target, Sandoval said, the two took a break at home, then headed out, though a little more tired.

OPINION

"Clearly, at a time when we're making difficult decisions at home over public spending, it would be quite wrong — It is quite wrong — for there to be proposals for this increased extra spending in the EU."

British Prime Minister David Cameron in urging other European Union leaders to show restraint in spending.

BY MICHAEL KINSLEY Bloomberg News

B ill Clinton became U.S. president on a platform of "change." Not change in any particular way – just change in the abstract. Like characters in a Chekhov play, Americans found daily life unbearable in some usually unspecified way and dreamed of escape. But they didn't have the energy to achieve escape velocity. Then along came this fast-talking charmer, and suddenly we've left Chekhov behind and are in "The Music Man."

Modifying Clinton's formula only slightly, Barack Obama's campaign mantra in 2008 was "change you can believe in." This year, a major part of Republican nominee Mitt Romney's challenge to President Obama was throwing this formula back in his face. Where was the change Obama had talked about?

This strategy failed, but not because the voters decided that, on reflection, maybe they didn't want change. It was because Romney is unconvincing in the role of change agent. He has it pretty good. Why would he want things to change?

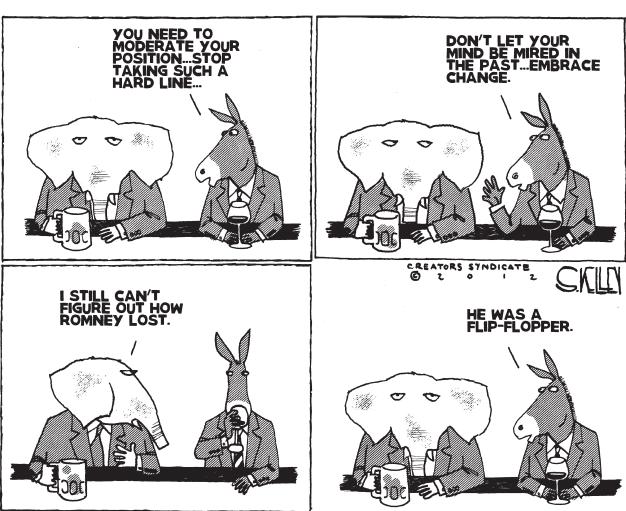

Americans certainly have change in our blood. Our semiofficial national myth — celebrated this week, on Thanksgiving — is of ancestors who uprooted themselves and crossed the ocean to start a new life. Americans with this basic story in their past are still a majority of the citizenry, though just barely.

Nevertheless, it's hard to take seriously any poll showing that we all share a desire for change. Imagine that your phone rings and it's some guy from the Gallup Organization or the Pew Research Center wanting to know whether you favor everything being fresh and new, or everything staying exactly the way it is. Are you really going to admit that you're a stick-in-the-mud who is more or less content with things the way they are?

Change in the abstract is now a fundamental American value, like liberty or fried chicken. Everyone is for it, in the abstract. Change in particular is a different story. Apart from a totally nonspecific call for major change, Obama beat Romney in part by accusing him of wanting to change something specific: Medicare.

Romney spent most of his energy on this issue, trying with increasing desperation to convince people that he came to rescue Medicare, not to change it. He said, first, that his proposed changes (basically, turning Medicare into a voucher system) would reduce the risk of major change by making the Medicare trust fund fiscally sound. Second, he said his proposed changes weren't really his: They were the brainstorm of his running mate, Paul Ryan, and he (Romney), not Ryan, would be in charge. And third, he said that anyone older than 55 would be allowed to opt out of his proposed reforms, no matter how wonderful they might be.

The big problem with "change" as a political slogan is that most people don't really want change. They just say (and possibly even believe) that they do. In fighting for the Affordable Care Act, the administration emphasized that you could keep your current doctors. (The failure to convince people that this would be true is one of the big reasons that "Hillarycare," the Clinton administration's health-care-reform effort, went down.) Premature nostalgia for the present is a big factor in opposition to immigration reform. All this isn't just a problem of what Kevin Phillips once devastatingly labeled "reactionary liberalism": a tendency among liberals to circle the wagons around any government program once it has been established. Republicans do it, too: exaggerating the perils of some program such as Social Security, then proposing a solution (almost always a tax cut for wealthy people) that won't solve the problem and will make our bigger fiscal problem worse. But it's not the quarreling politicians in Washington who stand in the way of change. It's the citizenry ourselves. The change we want is a suspension of the laws of mathematics. We debate tax increases for the rich to finance middle-class entitlement programs, versus tax cuts for the rich and "reform" of entitlement programs. In the end, we will have to raise taxes on everybody and cut entitlements as well. And that, unfortunately, is change you really can believe in.

A Dangerous Future of Killer Robots

BY TOM MALINOWSKI

Washington Post

The use of drones to kill suspected terrorists is controversial, but so long as a human being decides whether to fire the missile, it is not a radical shift in how humanity wages war. Since the first archer fired the first arrow, warriors have been inventing ways to strike their enemies while removing themselves from harm's way.

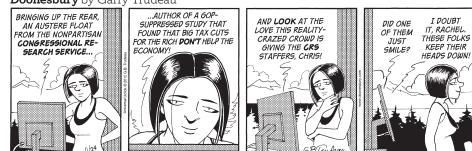

Soon, however, military robots will be able to pick out human targets on the battlefield and decide on their own whether to go for the kill. An Air Force report predicted two years ago that "by 2030 machine capabilities will have increased to the point that humans will have become the weakest component in a wide array of systems." A 2011 Defense Department road map for ground-based weapons states: "There is an ongoing push to increase autonomy, with a current goal of 'supervised autonomy,' but with an ultimate goal of full autonomy."

The Pentagon still requires autonomous weapons to have a "man in the loop" " the robot or drone can train its sights on a target, but a human operator must decide whether to fire. But full autonomy with no human controller would have clear advantages. A computer can process information and engage a weapon infinitely faster than a human soldier. As other nations develop this capacity, the United States will feel compelled to stay ahead. A robotic arms race seems inevitable unless nations collectively decide to avoid one.

I have heard few discussions of robotic warfare without someone joking about the Matrix or Terminator; the danger of delegating warfare to machines has been a central theme of modern science fiction. Now science is catching up to fiction. And one doesn't have to believe the movie version of autonomous robots becoming sentient to be troubled by the prospect of their deployment on the battlefield.

After all, the decisions ethical soldiers must make are extraordinarily complex and human. Could a machine soldier distinguish as well as a human can between combatants and civilians, especially in societies where combatants don't wear uniforms and civilians are often armed? Would we trust machines to determine the value of a human life, as soldiers must do when deciding whether firing on a lawful target is worth the loss of civilians nearby? Could a machine recognize surrender? Could it show mercy, sparing life even when the law might allow killing? And if a machine breaks the law, who will be held account able "the programmer or manufacturer? No one at all?

Idaho Falconers Channel History, Hunt with Raptors

BY JOHN MILLER Associated Press

KUNA • Gary Moon releases "Laser," his young prairie falcon, as the sun's first rays set southern Idaho's desert horizon ablaze. The two-pound female, a tiny radio transmitter strapped to each leg, lifts from Moon's leather gauntlet and with every rapid wing beat circles higher into the sky.

Moon, a semi-retired 70year-old businessman and mechanic from Boise, waits until his bird soars to 400 feet before sprinting toward a pond. With no ducks on the water, however, he reaches inside a sack at his side, flinging a homing pigeon aloft. Instinctively, Laser dives; only a last-second maneuver keeps the pigeon from becoming falcon fodder.

"Anybody can go out with a gun and get a limit of ducks in a few hours," said Moon, who 53 years ago pulled his first bird, a young red-tailed hawk, from its nest and was bitten by the falcon bug for life. "With falcons, it's the lure of the unexpected."

With its arid southern plain scoured with deep river canyons, Idaho is raptor country. More than 700 pairs nest each spring in the 485,000-acre Snake River Birds of Prey National Conservation Area south of Boise. Moon's Laser has plenty of wild company, with up to 200 prairie falcon pairs, the highest breeding density in the world – along with American kestrels, golden eagles, red-tails and fleet peregrine falcons that dive at 200 mph and decorate Idaho's state quarter.

It's also home to a select few who, like Moon, use these birds to hunt.

What they practice today is a remnant of what residents of the Middle East, China and Europe did hundreds or even thousands of years ago: Using birds to scare up a meal. Whether it's a duck or a pheasant, falconers must act quickly after a successful hunt to separate raptor from prey — not unlike nomadic tribesmen in places like Mongolia who still fly giant eagles after small game or even foxes. Other modern day falconers don't eat the prey, but hunt for the sport only — and to provide their birds with food.

Gary Moon poses Oct. 18 with his young prairie falcon, Laser, near Kuna in the southern Idaho desert. About 160 people have Idaho permits to keep and hunt with raptors like Laser.

"It's watching something that happens every day in nature, but you get to do it up close and personal," said Boise falconer Bob Collins, who flies a gyrfalcon and a peregrine.

Falconers are active in many states. Moon joined more than 300 people from around the world who spent last week hunting with falcons in Kearney, Neb., during the annual meeting of the International Association of Falconry and Conservation of Birds of Prey.

In Idaho, about 160 people have state raptor permits, according to a 2011 Department of Fish and Game survey. They reported harvesting 700 game birds, half of them ducks. That's just a sliver of the 210,000 ducks shot by all 14,100 licensed hunters in Idaho in 2011.

"They're really dedicated to making sure that their tradition stays alive," said Jeff Knetter, upland game and waterfowl biologist at Fish and Game, the agency that regulates falconry in Idaho.

Some animal rights groups have questioned the practice of keeping wild birds captive. That's one reason the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service outlines strict requirements for people who want to hold raptors, to prevent them from being exploited.

In Idaho, falconers must buy a $29 state license and a $100 federal license, as well as serve a two-year apprenticeship under a master falconer with at least seven years of experience.

Before unleashing their raptors on ducks, pheasant or even sage grouse, every falconer must buy a general hunting license.

Would-be falconers also must pass a written test even experienced falconers say is difficult. Idaho Fish and Game also inspects their raptor houses, known as "mews." Moon's mews, at his home in a neighborhood just south of Boise's downtown, consists of a storage shed with three 10by-10 dog kennels for his birds.

Like many falconers, Moon acquired Laser the old-fashioned way: Permits in hand, he and a friend scaled a lava cliff in southeastern Idaho's Minidoka County on a rainy spring day, taking two of four young birds from a nest.

That makes Laser an "imprint" bird, one Moon will likely keep for life.

For others who capture "passage" birds — migrating raptors simply on their way through an area — they may keep them for just a season before returning them to the wild. For instance, nearly every winter, Bill Heinrich, another Idaho falconer, traps a dark, chocolate-colored merlin, trains it for three weeks and flies it after starlings, their natural prey. "Merlins are extremely fast," he said. "The starlings are dead within seconds."

Come springtime, Heinrich releases his merlin to return to its summer home in the vast boreal forests of pine and spruce trees in Canada or eastern Russia.

Heinrich is a raptor biologist at The World Center for Birds of Prey, an education center run by the raptor conservation group, The Peregrine Fund. From its 580-acre hilltop campus south of Boise, its staff does work around the world, including saving endangered species like the California condor.

Falconers use bits of chicken or sometimes quail as treats to lure their birds back. But in rare instances, they don't return.

Stephen Buffat, an eastern Idaho falconer and licensed raptor breeder, was flying his peregrine-gyrfalcon hybrid in hopes of killing a sage grouse near Craters of the Moon National Monument and Reserve's ancient volcanos west of Idaho Falls.

Zeus, Buffat's bird, shed one talon-mounted transmitter; the other malfunctioned and the bird flew off into the failing evening light.

"It's a good probability he's gone," concedes Buffat, who posted a "Lost Bird" ad on the Internet. "But I'm going to keep my hopes up."

With a leather-hooded Laser sitting calmly on a backseat perch, Moon drives his camouflaged Honda SUV nearly every day into Idaho's open country. It takes hours of patient training. "The more they fly, the better they are," he said.

Just this month, Laser took her first Hungarian partridge, a classic midflight strike above the stark eastern Idaho desert beneath the Lost River Mountains.

"It's was beautiful," Moon said, still amazed. "The feathers just flew in the sunlight."

BAMS

LEWISTON (AP) • Officials with the Bureau of Land Management are preparing an environmental assessment as part of a plan to salvage timber burned last summer in a wildfire in west-central Idaho.

BLM officials want to log about 10 million board feet on 940 acres in the John Day drainage burned in the 75square-mile fire near the town of Lucile, The Lewiston Tribune reported.

Agency spokesman Robin Boyce said the agency is taking public comments and hopes to finish the assessment so the timber can be offered for sale by February.

Besides forestland managed by the BLM, the fire also burned forest managed by the Idaho Department of Lands and the U.S. Forest Service. The area includes ponderosa pine trees that are susceptible to blue staining caused by beetles. Officials say blue staining doesn't harm the wood but some buyers won't use it, fearing rot, so the timber should be salvaged quickly before beetles arrive.

"The bugs pack a fungus on their body and the fungus gets in the bole of the tree and that is the blue stain you see," said Chris Clark, a forester with the Payette Lakes office of the Idaho Department of Lands at McCall. "It only takes a few bugs in a tree to cause the bluing."

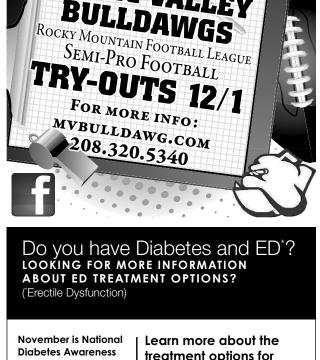

Clark said the state agency has already sold two timber harvest allotments in land the state manages. He said the sales include about 1,600 acres of burned forest that have about 5.3 million board feet on 803 acres with an estimated value of $337,000. The state timber sales are in Wet Gulch and the John Day drainage.

Clark said the agency plans to plant more than 400,000 seedlings on 1,142 acres after the logging is finished. Boyce said the BLM sale would likely be helped by the state timber sale because of temporary logging roads the state would build. But he said the environmental analysis for the federal timber salvage sale would include the possible need to build temporary logging roads.

Mark Craig, acting ranger of the Salmon River Ranger District with the U.S. Forest Service, said the agency didn't plan to offer salvage sales on land burned in the Nez Perce-Clearwater National Forests because of the difficulty in getting approval.

"Every salvage sale document in Region One has been litigated," he said. "With salvage sales you can win by not winning, by delaying."

He said the Forest Service instead will be looking at salvage efforts along roads and cutting trees that are in danger of falling.

Father Jorge Garcia from Columbia leads the Immaculate Conception Catholic Church on Wednesday in Buhl. The church celebrates 100 years on Dec. 8.

Buhl Church Celebrates 100 Years

BY KIMBERLEE KRUESI kkruesi@magicvalley.com

 $\ensuremath{\textbf{BUHL}}$ \bullet Between sips of coffee and laughter, Father Jorge Garcia took a moment to shake his head in disbelief.

"A 100 years is, well it's a 100 years!" he said. "Oh my god, are you kidding me? I am so blessed to be here."

Garcia leads the Immaculate Conception Catholic Church in Buhl. On Dec. 8, the congregation will celebrate the church's 100th year anniversary. It's a community meeting place that has served as a place to worship, to pray and to create fellowship with the church's diverse community.

"We are blessed to have three communities in our town," Garcia said. "We have Anglo, Spanish and Portuguese. Each one comes with their own background and histories and activities."

The church was first established in 1912. Back then, it was only a worship hall. However, with the help of a series of bishops and pastors that led the church for the next 40 years, a church and rectory were also built.

During the 1960s, the hall was transformed into a small school. Today, the church no longer holds elementary lessons, but the classrooms now provide a space for children's church and other activity rooms. On an average morning, it's not unusual to see new and old members linger the halls of the church. Morning mass is usually followed by a casual coffee hour, while the hall is usually scheduled with baptism or quinceanera celebrations.

Celebration

Longtime churchgoer Bernard Wagner said he's been going to the Immaculate Church since the 1920s.

"This is home," he said. "I'm always here."

Member Mary Wright said the church has served as a supportive tennial celebration, the milestone is also a time to reflect on what the next 100 years will look like, Garcia said.

"Our mission in the Catholic church is to become a devoted people to God," Garcia said."

Upon hearing the possibilities of changes, Wright quickly jerked her head to Garcia's direction.

"You're not going to change the altar, are you?" she asked. "Please say no. We had a priest a few years back try to do that, didn't work."

"Oh Mary, you are so funny," Garcia said with a chuckle. "I'm not planning on moving anything at the moment."

Immaculate Conception Catholic Church's 100th year anniversary celebration is on Dec. 8. Mass starts at 11 a.m. and a dinner celebration will follow shortly afterwards. The church is located at 1631 Poplar St., in Buhl.

Some Tips for Happier Holidays

appier Holidays! I hope you had a wonderful Thanksgiving, and that you enjoyed eating, relaxing, and remembering all that you have to be thankful for. I sincerely hope that your family is a joy to be around and that your thanksgiving was exceedingly pleasant. (Not all are!) Especially during the holidays, with all of the extra pressure and stress on families, my prayer for you is to have a joy filled, harmonious home. So in the spirit of encouragement, I want to give you a few thoughts for happier holidays in your home.

• Take off your combat boots, this isn't war, this is family. We don't fight against or with each other. We don't try to conquer one another. We are supposed to conquer something, and that something is selfishness. We don't have to have our own way, or keep pushing until we do. When we stay on the same team, there doesn't have to be a winner and a loser. Make family a win/win. Find common ground and places where you agree, and concentrate there. The Bible tells us that we should live at peace with one another as much as we can, so choose to be a peacemaker.

Sunday is Last Ingathering for Gifts of Love

TWIN FALLS • Ascension Episcopal Church will celebrate Christ the King Sunday, the last Sunday of Pentecost, at both 8 and 10 a.m. services Sunday. Blessing of the Pledges for 2013 will take place at the 10 a.m. service.

This will be the last Sunday for the November ingathering for Gifts of Love. New or gently used items for all ages are taken to local assisted living and nursing homes from which residents choose Christmas presents to give to family members and friends. The items will be blessed at the 8 a.m. service.

Thursday Nights in Advent will begin Nov. 29 at Ascension. At 7 p.m., contemplative prayer will be led by Pastor Deb Seles and Michael Johnson.

Throughout the next four weeks, Seles will encourage participation in an "Advent Conspiracy," with themes of "Worship Fully," "Spend Less," "Give More" and "Love All" guiding the spirituality of the season.

Episcopal Ascension Church is located at 371 Eastland Drive N. in Twin Falls. Regular worship and Christian Education are held on Sundays and Wednesdays. Information: www.episcopaltwinfalls.org or 733-1248. Ascension is handicapped accessible.

Sanctuary Prepares for Advent

FILER • The Rev. Carol Thompson will elaborate on Christ the King Sunday for worship at 9:30 a.m. Sunday at the Filer United Methodist Church on the corner of Fifth and Union streets. All are welcome.

An administrative board meeting will be held at 7 p.m. Wednesday in the Reesor Room. Your attendance is valuable.

For future planning, the sanctuary will be prepared for Advent at 10 a.m. Dec. 1. Many helping hands, young and experienced, are needed to assist in this part of Advent.

Information: 733-2629.

Small Groups Will Discuss Book on Christmas Hype

TWIN FALLS • United Methodist Student Day will be recognized during worship at 10 a.m. Sunday at the First United Methodist Church, 360 Shoshone St. E. in Twin Falls.

The offering supports United Methodist scholarships and the United Methodist Student Loan fund, both administered by the General Board of Higher Education and Ministry. Thanks to the United Methodist Student Day, people in our local church and annual conference have a chance to attain higher education.

"Christmas is Not Your Birthday," a book by Mike Slaughter, will be studied by small groups during this Advent season. This Christmas, cut through the hype that leaves everyone exhausted and broke at the end of the year and experience the peace of knowing that God is truly with us, the joy of giving sacrificially and the love of a Savior who gave everything he had for us.

The first small group study will be a lunch meeting at noon Wednesday at the church. The Rev. Philip Airhart will lead the group.

A second group study will begin at 9 a.m. Dec. 2 and will be led by Etha Carruthers. Everyone is welcome to either session.

A "Winter Mirth Event" will be held at 5:30 p.m. Dec. 1. This joyful event begins with a "Snowflake Dinner" of tossed salad, herb crusted pork loin, roasted red potatoes, seasonal vegetables, homemade dinner rolls and apple crisp. Music will be by "Wild Horses." Tickets are $12 each and are available at the church office. Children under 5 are free. Proceeds will support the Talent Project. Everyone is invited.

Information: 733-5872 or www.tffumc.com.

Christmas Gift Tag Tree Is on Display TWIN FALLS • The Rev.

Ron Lavoie, Kendall Presbytery's new executive Presbyter and stated clerk will speak on "Thy Kingdom Come" for worship at 10 a.m. Sunday at the First Presbyterian Church, 209 Fifth Ave. N. in Twin Falls. Fellowship will follow. Everyone is invited.

The deacons are collecting food no later than Dec. 16 for their Christmas boxes for families in need. Non-perishable food items may be left in the baskets in the foyer of the church.

The annual Christmas Gift Tag Tree will be downstairs in the fellowship room. Everyone is encouraged to take a tag and return the gift wrapped with the tag by Dec.16.

All are invited to come help decorate the church sanctuary for Advent at 9 a.m. Dec. 1.

Information: 733-7023.

Everyone Invited to Stone Soup Event

TWIN FALLS • The Magic Valley Unitarian Universalist Fellowship will meet at 10:30 a.m. Sunday at the Twin Falls Senior Center, 530 Shoshone St. W.

Marion Wallace will host the annual "Stone Soup" story and fellowship of sharing our "blessings" that often come in unexpected appearances. Audience participation is the fun of this program. All are welcome to bring an item or symbol of something you would like to add to the "Stone Soup."

Newcomers are welcome. Child care is available. Information: Ken Whiting at 734-9161.

Annual Christmas Bazaar Kicks Off Dec. 1

RUPERT • The New Life Assembly of God Church, 254 S. Highway 24 in Rupert, will hold its annual Christmas bazaar from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Dec.1.

Homemade soups and cinnamon rolls will be available.

be held Dec. 5 at the Lincoln Inn, 413 Main St. in Gooding.

The meeting starts with lunch at 11:30 a.m. Cost is $8.50 per person. Please make reservations by calling Carolyn Herzinger at 934-5700 on or before Dec. 2.

The free program begins at noon. Kalie Wright of Kimberly and Caitlin Boer of Jerome will present a musical Christmas program to begin the holiday celebration. Both Kalie and Caitlin are active in the musical ministries of their home churches and the local community. They are currently recording their first album together.

Public Invited to Attend Salt Lake City Trip

RUPERT • The Minidoka Company of the Daughters of Utah Pioneers is hosting a bus trip to Salt Lake City, Utah, to visit the International DUP Museum and attend the "Christmas Celebration Program" on Dec. 7.

This year, the program will feature "SunShade 'n Rain" as the main performers. The group will present music of "our" period - the Beach Boys, the Lettermen and others you may know. There also will be other music and some good stories to help put you in the spirit of the season.

The bus will leave at 6:30 a.m. from the Rupert LDS West Stake Center, 26 S. 100 W., will return from Utah after the program. All are welcome to join us. You do not have to be DUP member to attend. Anyone interested in sharing a fun-filled day with the Minidoka Company DUP members is encouraged to contact DeAnn Goodwin at 208-731-7154 before Wednesday, Nov. 28.

Jackson Council: Make Rodeo Prayer Non-sectarian

JACKSON, Wyo. (AP) • The Jackson Town Council wants the Jackson Hole Rodeo to start with a nonsectarian prayer addressed to "Father" instead of Jesus.

The Jackson Hole News Guide reported and Wednesday the council plans to add a provision to the rodeo operator's town contract spelling out the words of the prayer.

Some rodeo spectators complained to town officials last summer after the prayer offered by the announcer sometimes quoted Bible passages and mentioned Jesus Christ.

Two pastors who attended a Town Council meeting on Monday objected to the new language, citing the free speech provision of the First Amendment.

Council members responded that the First Amendment's provision on the separation of church and state requires a prayer that doesn't favor any religion.

Rodeo operator Phil Wilson's contract runs through September 2013.

other with the words you speak. Talk about the best in each other. Choose to stay away from hot buttons. Be honest, but never derogatory. The Bible says there is life or death in the words we speak, so choose your words wisely. (Proverbs 18:21)

• Cherish one another. You won't have your relatives forever, so don't take them for granted. My dad is already in heaven, so my memories of him are all that remain. You probably know someone who has lost someone they loved this year, and would long for a few more holidays with them. Life is fragile, so cherish life. The Bible encourages us to love one another fervently, so enjoy each moment you have together. (I Peter 4:8)

All of these thoughts sound simple, but in our own strength, family harmony can be difficult to accomplish. As we follow God, and put Christ in the center of our lives, we will have the strength we need to take off our combat boots, to speak life giving words and to truly cherish each other. Bring on a happier holiday.

Imams, Priests Play Soccer Match in Bosnia

ZENICA, Bosnia-Herzegovina (AP) • A soccer match between Muslim imams and Catholic priests has helped raise funds for a new kindergarten in Bosnia. More than 4,000 people paid 1 euro ($1.30) to watch the game in the central town of Zenica on Wednesday night, cheering "Bosnia, Bosnia" and celebrating whoever scored.

The Catholics won 5 -3. The match, organized by Bosnia's Inter-religious Committee, was played by priests of the Bosnian Franciscan order and Muslim imams, said Priest Fra Zdravko Andjic. His good friend, Imam Jakub Salkica, said both sides got along well, but joked that shouldn't raise suspicions more than 100,000 people died in this country in a war that involved Muslim Bosniaks, Christian Orthodox Serbs and Catholic Croats.

E.U. Budget Talks Collapse

BY JAMES G. NEUGER AND SVENJA O'DONNELL Bloomberg News

BRUSSELS • European Union leaders on Friday failed to agree on the 27 nation bloc's next seven-year budget, replaying the clash between rich and poor countries that has stymied the response to the euro debt crisis. National chiefs plan another summit early next year, when northern countries including Britain and Germany may have the upper hand in seeking to cut subsidies to lesser-developed southern and eastern economies clamoring for EU investment.

Britain's defense of its cash-back guarantee and France's clinging to farm aid gave the summit the flavor of EU negotiations in the 1970s or 1980s, diluting efforts to equip Europe with a budget to make it more competitive. Eastern and southern countries said reduced financing for public-works projects would condemn them to lag behind the wealthier north.

In the EU's last budget round, it took two summits, in June and December 2005, to strike a bargain. No date was set for the next negotiations. In the absence of an accord by late 2013, the EU would roll over its annual budget.

Wealthier countries such as Germany, Britain, Denmark, Sweden and the Netherlands banded together to cut what they pay to the collective pool, pounding away at the original proposal of $1.3 trillion, that came out in mid-2011.

The alliance of spending cutters unraveled when it came to the financing side of the budget. While British Prime Minister David Cameron defended a rebate won by Margaret Thatcher in 1984, Germany, the Netherlands and Sweden sought better terms for their own refunds and Denmark made a bid to join the money-back club.

French President Francois Hollande, for example, paired his farm-aid advocacy with calls for savings elsewhere, since France is among the 11 countries that pay more into the EU budget than they get out. As a result, agriculture was the relative winner as the leaders strengthened some budget lines and pared others.

European Parliament President Martin Schulz countered the wealthier countries' insistence on paying less with the contention that it is cheaper for them to promote European projects, since contracts in Latvia or Slovenia go to companies in places like Germany and Sweden.

"Every euro invested by the EU attracts an average of between 2 and 4 euros in additional investment," Schulz said. "The EU budget is not a zero-sum game in which one country wins what another loses. Synergies are gen-

Authorities Investigate Texas Highway Wreck

BEAUMONT, Texas (AP) • Authorities in southeast Texas continue to investigate a 100vehicle highway pileup that killed two people.

Texas Department of Public Safety Sgt. Chuck Havard tells KFDM-TV that investigators will determine whether any drivers face charges.

The massive Thanksgiving morning wreck occurred on Interstate 10 southwest of Beaumont, on Texas' Gulf Coast. A crash on eastbound I-10 is believed to have started a chain reaction that left cars and trucks piled on top of each other. Two people died and more

EGYPTIANS CLASH OVER MORSI'S EXPANDING PRESIDENTIAL POWERS

CAIRO (AP) • Supporters and opponents of President Mohammed Morsi clashed Friday in the worst violence since he took office, while he defended a decision to give himself near-absolute power to root out what he called "weevils eating away at the nation of Egypt."

were issued Thursday, have turned months of growing polarization into an open battle between his Muslim Brotherhood and liberals who fear a new dictatorship. Some in the opposition, which has been divided and weakened, were now speaking of a sustained street campaign against the man who nearly five months ago became Egypt's first freely elected president.

The unrest also underscored the struggle over the direction of Egypt's turbulent passage nearly two years after a popular uprising toppled Hosni Mubarak's authoritarian regime. Liberals and secular Egyptians accuse the Brotherhood of monopolizing power, dominating the writing of a new constitution and failing to tackle the country's chronic economic and security problems.

"I don't like, want or need to resort to exceptional measures, but I will if I see that my people, nation and the revolution of Egypt are in danger," Morsi told thousands of his chanting supporters outside the Cairo's presidential palace.

But even before he spoke, thousands from each camp demonstrated in major cities, and violence broke out in several places, leaving at least 100 wounded, according to security officials.

Security forces pumped volleys of tear gas at thousands of pro-democracy protesters clashing with riot police on streets several blocks from Cairo's Tahrir Square, birthplace of the Arab Spring, and in front of the nearby parliament building. Young protesters set fire to tree branches to counter the gas, and a resiyelled "erhal, erhal," — Arabic for "leave, leave."

His move came at a time when he was enjoying lavish praise from U.S. President Barack Obama and Secretary of State Hillary Rodham Clinton for brokering a cease-fire between Israel and Gaza's Hamas rulers on Wednesday. Clinton had been in Cairo for extensive talks with Morsi before the truce was announced.

"Morsi's decision means dictatorship. He creates the law, passes the law, and oversees the law," said Manal Tibe, an activist who was a member of the assembly writing the new constitution until she withdrew earlier this year to protest the Islamists' domination of it. "He is the state and the state is him?"

House to Consider Limited GOP Immigration Bill

WASHINGTON (AP) • House Republicans still smarting from their poor showing among Hispanics in the presidential election are planning a vote next week on immigration legislation that would both expand visas for foreign science and technology students and make it easier for those with green cards to bring their immediate families to the U.S.

Republican leaders made it clear after the election that the party was ready to get serious about overhauling the nation's dysfunctional immigration system, a top priority for Hispanic communities. Taking up what is called the STEM Jobs Act during the lame-duck session could be seen as a first step in that direction.

The House voted on a STEM bill - standing for science, technology, engineering and mathematics - in September, but under a procedure requiring a two-thirds majority. It was defeated, with more than 80 percent of Democrats voting against it, because it offset the increase in visas for high-tech graduates by eliminating another visa program that is available for lesseducated foreigners. Republicans are changing the formula this time by adding a provision long sought by some immigration advocates expanding a program that allows the spouses and minor children of people with permanent residence, or green card, to wait in the United States for their own green cards to be granted.

There are some 80,000 of these familybased green cards allocated every year, but there are currently about 322,000 husbands, wives and children waiting in this category and on average people must wait more than two years to be reunited with their families. In that past that wait could be as long as six years. The House proposal would allow family members to come to the U.S. one year after they apply for their green cards, but they wouldn't be able to work until they actually got the card. It applies to the families of green card holders who marry after getting their residency permits.

Bruce Morrison, a former Democratic congressman from Connecticut who chaired the House immigration subcommittee and authored a 1990 immigration law, said the bill neither increases the number of green cards nor gives people green cards early. But people "get the most important benefit of being able to live legally in the United States with their spouses

Washington, D.C. Will Have Fewer Than 100 Homicides This Year

WASHINGTON (AP) • The crack epidemic that began in the 1980s ushered in a wave of bloodletting in the nation's capital and a death toll that ticked upward daily. Dead bodies, sometimes several a night, had homicide detectives hustling between crime scenes and earned Washington unwelcome monikers such as the nation's "murder capital." At the time, some feared the murder rate might ascend to more frightening heights.

But after approaching nearly 500 slayings a year in the early 1990s, the annual rate has gradually declined to the point that the city is now on the verge of a once-unthinkable milestone. The number of 2012 killings in the District of Columbia stands at 78 and is on pace to finish lower than 100 for the first time since 1963, police records show.

"It strikes me probably daily as I ride around the city, or sometimes when I'm sitting at home at night, and it's 10 o'clock and my phone's not ringing. Or I get up in the morning, and I go, 'Oh my gosh, I've slept five hours," said Police Chief Cathy Lanier, who joined the department amid violent 1991 street riots. "It strikes me quite often how different things are now."

The drop reflects a downward trend in violent crime nationwide and is in line with declining homicides in other big cities. Though killings have risen in Chicago, New York City officials say homicides dropped to 515 last year from more than 2,200 in 1990. Houston totaled reported 198 homicides last year, down from 457 in 1985, while Los Angeles police reported fewer than 300 last year after ending 1992 with about 1,100. Across the country, violent crime reported by police to the FBI fell by 3.8 percent last year from 2010.

Though D.C. is hardly crime-free today, and crime in some categories is even up, the homicide decline is especially notable in a place where grisly acts of violence sometimes not far from the U.S. Capitol – embodied the worst of the crack scourge.

The number of homicides in this city of about 600,000 residents averaged about 457 between 1989 and 1993, a staggering rate that attracted unwanted attention. "A war zone? No, Washington, D.C.," was the sub-headline of a 1992 People magazine story that described Washington as a "city under siege." The Economist in 1995 called it "the violence capital of America." The 1990 arrest of then-Mayor Marion Barry for smoking crack cocaine fed a perception that the city where the nation's laws were made was, itself, lawless.

Everyone agrees there's no single cause for the trend.

One overarching factor is the city's continued gentrification - the 2011 median household income of $63,124 is higher than all but four states, census figures show. Whole city blocks have been refashioned, drug dens razed, a Major League Baseball stadium built in place of urban blight, high-rise public housing replaced by less-dense garden style apartments. Though the poverty rate has risen, the growing wealth has pushed impoverished communities farther away from the city center. Some crime has also migrated to neighboring Prince George's County, Md., though homicides are

Law enforcement techniques and medical care have advanced at the same time. Improved technology helps officers pinpoint gunfire, even before a 911 call, and share information faster. A police unit dedicated to seizing illegal firearms was re-established and prosecutors, benefiting from the city's strict gun laws, routinely ask that defendants arrested on weapons charges be held without bond - in part, to head off possible retaliation. Stronger community relationships mean detectives have developed better sources on the street and witness cooperation, police say.

Sudanese Aerial Bombardment Kills 7

NAIROBI, Kenya (AP) • Sudan carried out aerial bombardments on the northern part of South Sudan in the last three days, killing seven people and wounding others, a South Sudanese official said Friday, accusing their northern neighbor of breaking an agreement between the two countries to end hostilities.

Sudanese Antonov planes dropped more than 27 bombs in a disputed region near the village of Kiir Adem in northern Bahr el Ghazal State, said Col. Philip Aguer, the spokesman for South Sudan's military.

The attack is in violation of a security agreement signed between the two countries 54 days ago to end hostilities, he said. South Sudan is also accusing Sudan of frustrating its efforts to resume oil production. "They have been doing this for a number of years in defiance of the international community," Aguer said.

South Sudan broke away from Sudan last year after decades of conflict between the north and south. The South seceded after an independence vote that was the culmination of a 2005 peace treaty that ended decades of war that killed more than 2 million people.

The two countries have unresolved issues on border demarcation and distribution of oil.

VENEZUELAN OPPOSITION SEEKS RETURN OF EXILES

CARACAS, Venezuela (AP) • Venezuelan opposition lawmakers have drawn up a list of prisoners they consider to be wrongly jailed and want freed, and are also demanding that dozens of government opponents living in exile should be allowed to return home.

Opposition congressman Edgar Zambrano said Friday that a list being prepared by a group of lawmakers now includes 87 Venezuelans living in exile, as well as 22 prisoners. He said the list, when finished, is to be turned over to Venezuelan Vice President Nicolas Maduro. Zambrano said lawmakers traveled recently to Costa Rica, Panama and Peru to meet with politicians who have fled into exile during President Hugo Chavez's tenure. Some left after facing criminal investigations or charges that they contend were trumped up for political purposes. They include Manuel Rosales, a former presidential candidate who fled to Peru after being accused of corruption.

After Chavez won reelection in October, he said he was open to dialogue with his adversaries. Opponents say a step in that direction would be freeing jailed opponents and letting those in exile return. Pro-Chavez lawmaker Calixto Ortega said there is willingness within the president's movement to consider amnesty proposals.

OSLO, Norway (AP) • Nor- peacetime massacre. He deto-wegian mass murderer Anders Behring Breivik accused prison officers of trying to drive him to suicide in conditions he describes as "a mini Abu Ghraib."

Breivik was referring to a prison in Iraq that became notorious in 2004, when photos were released of detainees being abused by U.S. soldiers. Breivik wrote a 27-page letter addressed to prison officials, a copy of which was obtained by The Associated Press on Friday. "If it wasn't for the fact that I am an exceptionally patient person, I would most likely have lost my mind in pure frustration," Breivik said in the letter dated Oct. 15 that was updated on Oct. 26 and Oct. 30. "Anyway, there are limits to what a person can take?

Breivik wrote that he is frustrated that guards do not cooperate with his carefully planned daily schedule, where he times his various activities down to the minute. He also alleges that the prison director keeps the security regime tight out of personal vengefulness against Breivik.

The 33-year-old fanatic killed 77 people in twin attacks last year in Norway's worst nated a car bomb outside government offices in Oslo killing eight people and then drove to the island of Utoya where he massacred 69 in a shooting spree at the summer camp of the governing Labor Party's youth wing.

The Oslo District Court found Breivik guilty of terrorism and premeditated murder for the July 22, 2011, attacks. He was given a 21-year prison sentence that can be extended if he's considered a threat.

The self-confessed killer described numerous prison practices as "degrading" in his letter, including that he is watched when swallowing his vitamin pills, that he's not allowed a mop to clean his cell and that he is subjected to daily strip searches, sometimes by female prison guards.

The self-styled, anti-Muslim militant denied criminal guilt, saying he's a commander of a resistance movement aiming to overthrow European governments and replace them with "patriotic" regimes that will deport Muslim immigrants. Police said they found no evidence of Breivik belonging to any such group.

Best-selling Australian Author Courtenay Dies

ASSOCIATED PRES

In this August photo provided by Penguin Books, Australian best-selling author Bryce Courtenay walks his dog, Timmy, in Canberra Australia.

CANBERRA, Australia (AP) • Best-selling Australian author Bryce Courtenay, whose first and final books drew on his tough early life experiences in Africa, has died of stomach cancer. He was 79.

He started writing in midlife and called his first novels "practice books," but his debut was a success. "The Power of One" was published in 1989, translated into 12 languages and became a hit movie.

His publisher Penguin Group said Friday that Courtenay died at his family home in the Australian capital Canberra late Thursday, surrounded by his family and pets.

His 21st novel, "Jack of Diamonds," was published Nov. 12 and included a moving epilogue to his readers.

"It's been a privilege to write for you and to have you accept me as a storyteller in your lives," he wrote. "Now, as my story draws to an end, may I say only, 'Thank you. You have been simply wonderful."

Courtenay was born the lifelong ambition to be a novelist.

"The Power of One" was to be the first of three "practice books" Courtenay planned to write over three years before taking two years to write a fourth book which he hoped would find a publisher.

"I was absolutely staggered when somebody wanted to publish it in the first place," Courtenay said in his official biography released by Penguin.

"Now its worldwide success and the fact that it's available in 12 languages still amazes me," he said. It became a movie starring Morgan Freeman.

Courtenay dedicated its sequel, "Tandia," to his third son, Damon, who died of medically acquired AIDS at the age of 24 in 1991 - two months before the book was published.

That tragedy inspired his third book, "April Fool's Day," that deals with the public fear of AIDS and was published in 1993.

In June, doctors told Courtenay that there was no hope of curing his stomach cancer.

IMPUNITY ENDANGERS

SOMALIA'S JOURNALISTS

NAIROBI, Kenya (AP) • Somalia's journalists are urging their new government and the international community to help end the impunity they say is contributing to making Somalia one of the world's most dangerous countries to practice journalism.

So far 18 Somali journalists have been killed this year and 44 since 2007.

The National Union of Somali Journalists on Friday said that impunity has become a fundamental problem in Somalia. Journalists in almost every region of the country commonly face harassment, blackmail, arbitrary police detention and, in addition, criminals are hired to suppress them, said the group in a report to mark the International Day to End Impunity, sponsored by the free expression group, IFEX

"Despite this, the authorities provide no support to journalists, and the perpetrators operate with impunity," the report said. Journalism in Somalia has reached a state of emergency, said the report. None of these crimes are investigated properly, much less prosecuted, despite successive administrations, the report said.

No action has ever been taken following a case of violence against a Somali journalist, the report said.

Journalists are being targeted to silence them from speaking against corruption, violence and violations of human rights by radical Islamist groups, said Somali Journalist Mohamed Bashir Hashi.

"We are on the lookout behind our backs every minute because media is getting lots of enemies in Somalia," said Hashi, a reporter with the local Shabelle radio in Somalia.

The parliament last week voted to reduce the Cabinet to 10 members, in a sign Somalia's government may be willing to move away from its corrupt past.

Mexico Panel Rejects Azerbaijan Leader's Statue

MEXICO CITY (AP) • A commission of intellectuals recommended Friday that Mexico City's government remove a life-size bronze statue of Azerbaijan's former president that provoked a storm of criticism after it was installed on the capital's main boulevard.

The Stalinesque statue of the late Geidar Aliyev was erected by the Azerbaijani Embassy, which paid for the renovation of part of the city park where it sits and other public works totaling about $5 million. Aliyev has been criticized for repressing opponents and critics.

The commission of three writers and analysts appointed by the city government said authorities erred by accepting money to allow a foreign government to essentially decide which political figures or historic events should be commemorated in the capital's public spaces.

"In view of the majority opinions of the citizens and neighbors, the sculpture of Geidar Aliyev should be removed from the emblematic spot" on the Reforma boulevard, commission member Guillermo Osorno said.

The panel suggested that a citizen board be set up to review such proposals in the future.

"We believe that monuments or street names that are offensive, hurtful, or which make unilateral judgments on international disputes should not be installed in public spaces," Osorno said.

Protesters have said they are offended by a monument to an authoritarian figure like Aliyev, who led Azerbaijan first as Communist Party boss during Soviet times and then as president from 1993 until his death in 2003.

Critics' anger has been amplified by a plaque on Aliyev's statue that describes him as "a brilliant example of infinite devotion to the motherland, loyal to the universal ideals of world peace" and by the location of the statue not far from monuments to Mahatma Gandhi, Abraham Lincoln and Mexico's national heroes.

illegitimate son of a dressmaker on Aug. 14, 1933, in the mountain town of Barberton in what is now the Limpopo province of South Africa.

By the age of 17, he was working in the dangerous mines of what is now Zimbabwe. The work paid his way to Britain, where he studied at the London School of Journalism. He met an Australian, Benita Solomon, whom he followed to her hometown of Sydney in 1958 and married.

He fell into a career in advertising with U.S. agency McCann Erikson at the age of 26 and rose to creative director. He had an epiphany at the age of 50 when he decided to fulfill a nay's longstanding publisher at Penguin, said the author would produce a 600-page book in six months, sometimes writing for more than 12 hours a day.

"He was a born storyteller and I would tell him he was a latter-day Charles Dickens with his strong and complex plots, largerthan-life characters and his ability to appeal to a large number of readers," Sessions said.

Courtenay divorced his first wife, Benita, in 2000. She died in 2007 aged 72.

He married his partner of seven years, Christine Gee, last year. He is also survived by his sons Brett and Adam.

Kodak Inventor of Bayer Filter Dies

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) • Bryce Bayer, a retired Kodak scientist and the inventor of a widely used color filter array that bears his name, has died. He was 83.

Bayer, of Brunswick, Maine, died Nov. 13, a spokeswoman for Direct Cremation of Maine confirmed Friday. The cause of death wasn't released.

His Bayer filter was patented in 1975 and is incorporated into nearly every digital camera and camera phone, Rochester, N.Y.-based Kodak said in a 2009 press release announcing Bayer's receipt that year of the Royal Photographic Society's Progress Award.

"The elegant color technology invented by Bryce Bayer is behind nearly every digital image captured today," Terry Taber, Kodak's chief technology officer, said at the time.

The filter allows devices to capture color images with a single sensor.

Bayer also developed widely cited processes for storing, improving and printing digital images before retiring from Kodak in the mid-1990s.

Another child might be more than she can physically and emotionally handle.

DEAR ABBY: I'm 16 and have been in a relationship for five months. I know I'm young, but things just happened. I like this boy a lot and he likes me.

Before we went out we were best friends. Back then, we had so much to talk about. But ever since we officially became a couple, there's nothing really to say to each other. We used to talk all day on the phone, and now it's kind of hard to have a normal conversation.

The physical attraction is there, but the mental attraction is sort of going away. He is amazing and listens to all my problems, but when I don't have any problems there is nothing to say. I don't want to end it between us. What should I do?

-DISAPPOINTED DEAR DISAPPOINTED:

You and your boyfriend may be spending too much time together and not enough on other activities. If you interact more with other friends, become active in sports or group activities and spend more time apart, then you – and he – will have more to bring to your conversations. Please try it, and encourage him to do the same.

DEAR ABBY: I truly enjoy the "pennies from heaven" letters. I get goose bumps every time I read them. So, I want to go on record and say to everyone in heaven, I'd LOVE to hear from each and every one of you. However, to make it clear your message is intended for ME, please make it 1-ounce gold coins.

-WESIN GREENFIELD, IND.

DEAR WES: I'm not sure my column appears in the hereafter, but if it does, be careful what you wish for. If gold keeps inflating, the coins could bounce right back up to heaven.

ANSWER: Bid your hearts before your diamonds for two reasons. The first is that 10 tricks are easier to make than 11; the second is that it is easier to get diamonds into the auction economically at your next turn. You may not be able to describe your hand precisely, but you can get the thrust of your shape across by bidding three diamonds if your partner rebids two notrump.

YOUR BIRTHDAY: Between now and the first of the year, the world is your oyster. You have what it takes to enjoy the holidays and family get-togethers, but you would be wise to avoid starting anything of importance such as a new job or commitment until after the end of February. By March and April, your ambitions and energies begin to rise. June and July are the very best months to make crucial decisions or set plans in motion. Because you are optimistic and cooperative, you can make valuable contacts with people who have both the ways and the means to assist you in achieving your most heartfelt aspirations. Since you will be a wee bit wiser than usual, you can formulate plans and begin projects that have a much better than average chance of success. Don't waste opportunities that come to you then.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Picky people make their point. Where purchases are concerned, you are like Goldilocks and won't be satisfied with something too big or small. Keep searching until you find something "just right."

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): You could do it yourself, rather than spreading the cash around. For instance, baking your own cookies might save a few cents. You might be satisfied with less and find it means more to loved ones.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Pinch a few pennies and the bank account won't feel the pinch. Work happily side by side with members of the opposite sex, but it is a good idea to maintain decorum. Keep new contacts at arm's length.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Warmth and kindness mix well in social venues, as long as formalities are observed. Impulsive amorous advances might hit a solid brick wall. Clip a few coupons; take pride in an ability to economize.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): The spotlight shines on you. You could be more popular and in demand than usual. To maintain harmony in a key relationship, be sure to honor existing commitments even if doing so holds you back.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Reach a healthy state of equilibrium by steering clear of extremes. Find inexpensive LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Practice makes perfect. Going over the minute details in a meticulous manner is the best way to create beautiful results. You could balance the checkbook or play a game that includes an intricate rulebook.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Ian. 19): Harness powerful energy. Find ways to express physical exuberance within social situations. You could get a gang of friends together for a trip to the bowling alley or organize a volleyball game.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Fly straight on till morning. Like Peter Pan, sometimes you don't want to grow up. Your desire for independence could be mistaken for a lack of feeling. Be considerate of those who are less adventuresome.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): It is more important to be a team player than to get your way. If someone says that he or she wants to be "just friends," then honor the request. It could simply be a matter of maintaining mutual respect.

SIERRA STARLEY, TWIN FALLS

Times-News Volleyball Player of the Year

BY NICK RULAND

nruland@magicvalley.com

Twin Falls junior Sierra Starley recorded nearly 400 kills in 2012. Eclipsing the 1,000 kill mark against Jerome in September, Starley has the Bruins' school record in sight, which she'll likely break in her senior year, cementing her legacy as one of the best volleyball players to come out of the Magic Valley.

Starley's right arm — she lifts weights to strengthen her shoulder muscles — was largely responsible for the Bruins' fourth-place finish in state this season.

But that's just one of the reasons Starley is the Times-News Volleyball Player of the Year.

Her club volleyball coach, none other than the head woman at the reigning national champion College of Southern Idaho, sees more from Starley than a 30-inch vertical (the highest Twin Falls coach B.J. Price said he's seen in high school) and a pendulum hammer swinging from the right half of her torso.

"She has a high volleyball IQ and constantly wants to get better," Heidi Cartisser said. "She has a pure understanding of the game, which at such a young age is pretty special. Her skill continually gets better to match her IQ, which has been fun to watch."

CSI MEN RALLY PAST MILES

BY NICK RULAND nruland@magicvalley.com

TWIN FALLS • At halftime, it looked like the now unranked College of Southern Idaho men's basketball team would be tested late at home by pesky, undersized Miles (Mont.) Community College for a second year in a row.

After 20 minutes of feeling out the Pioneers, the Golden Eagles adjusted, eventually cruising 86-52 on the back of a big second half.

"We didn't come out with a lot of fire," head coach Steve Gosar said. "We have to respect everybody and fear nobody. I don't think we came out with a lot of respect for Miles City. They outplayed us for the first 10 minutes."

CSI (6-2) settled for jumpers and passively went through the motions against a zone and sagging man defense for much of the first half, going 0-for-7 from behind the arc.

But CSI did two things to get jumpstarted. In the last seven minutes of the first half, the Golden Eagles used its defense to create scores, using a 6-0 run in transition to go up 29-23 after trailing or being tied through much of the first 15 minutes.

Darius Johnson and Jon Pulsifer were the sparks, as Pulsifer capped the mini-run with a swooping up and under layup.

"I love Jon," Gosar said. "Nobody works harder in our program. Nobody. Darius played a really good game today, too, and we needed it because they got us going."

In the second half, the Golden Eagles found Miles' soft spot. It attacked the offensive glass, finding the Pioneers' porous boxing-out techniques futile against crashing Golden Eagles.

At the center of the newfound rebounding focus were center Billy Reader and backup power forward, Juwan Newman. Gosar used them together, and they helped stymie the Pioneers on offense as well, holding them to 28 percent from the field.

"I was really excited for Billy," Pulsifer said. "When he gets going he's hard to stop. He's like a train."

Reader and Newman combined for 24 rebounds. Reader had 16 of them to go along with 17 points and three blocked shots.

"We all came out kind of flat," Reader said. "In the second half we all wanted to build off (Pulsifer and Johnson's) energy. It was just one of those nights where shots weren't falling. But we'll be ready for tomorrow."

Tonight CSI hosts No. 4 Indian Hills-Ottumwa (Iowa), the team that ended the Golden Eagles' season last year. Indian Hills coached by former CSI head coach Barret Peery, who will return to Twin Falls as an opposing coach for the first time since leaving the program in 2008.

BY NICK RULAND

nruland@magicvalley.com

TWIN FALLS • The College of Southern Idaho women's basketball team shot 3 of 15 from the 3-point line, and it wasn't much better on mid-range shots. But by running, rebounding and getting to the foul line, the Golden Eagles managed to dominate winless Glendale (Ariz.) Community College 92-70 Friday night.

Led by Sarah Viehweg and Patrice Toston, CSI (3nabbed 26 offensive rebounds and got to the line 40 times against severely undersized Gauchos. They even ran with the smaller and quicker team in a contest that saw over 100 possessions for each team, often getting layups on offense and then contesting them on defense.

"We did a lot of running because we knew this was going to be a transition game," Toston said.

Viehweg had a gamehigh 21 points and 14 rebounds in the win.

The Golden Eagles got off to another slow start with its starting unit, despite yeoman's work put in by starting center Jessy Saint-Felix inside, who grabbed three early offensive rebounds. But when Viehweg and Cassidy Skidmore came into the game, CSI's energy seemed to pick up, and it went on a 42-25 run to close out the half.

"I thought Sarah was aggressive," head coach Randy Rogers said. "She really went after it."

Viehweg's night was highlighted by a five-point play in the second half, in which she got an offensive rebound, scored and was fouled, and then was fouled again after scoring off her own missed free throw.

"Sarah plays so hard, which helps us out a lot," Toston said. But Rogers' player of the game was Toston, who seemed involved in more plays on both offense and defense than her stats suggested.

"She gave us a chance to pull away in the first half," Rogers said. "She finishes so well. She can be great."

Toston scored 20 points in addition to three rebounds, two assists and two steals.

"I was just trying to take advantage of what I saw," Toston said. "There were chances to score and get the ball in the post, and we did both."

Jazmin Mays had 20 points, five rebounds and six steals for Glendale. Gooding High School graduate Brittany Wirth had 12 points in 15 minutes for CSI.

arrived back in Logan to the cheers of several hundred fans who didn't mind waiting in the rain.

Now, after earning a spot in the AP poll for the first time since 1961, the 25th-ranked Aggies have a chance to make more history in today's regularseason finale against Idaho.

"There are a lot of 'nevers' out there," said coach Gary Andersen, who was moved to tears after his Aggies beat high-powered Louisiana Tech last weekend to guarantee at least a share of the Western Athletic Conference crown.

"There are a lot of things that they can do that have never happened in the history of Utah State football. That's pretty special."

The Aggies (9-2, 5-0) can secure the program's first 10-win season and first 6-0 mark in conference play.

Though they are 39-point favorites against Idaho (1-10, 1-4), history has taught Utah State not to take anything for granted.

Last year they needed double-overtime to beat the Vandals in Moscow, prevailing 49-42 on Robert Turbin's 2vard TD run.

"Idaho is going to come in here prepared to play," Andersen said.

Just as the Aggies have much on the line, so do the Vandals, who have played the last three games under interim coach Jason Gesse, who is making a pitch to keep the job.

Radio: 1310 AM Line: Utah State by 38

Utah State is eligible to play in the Famous Idaho Potato Bowl for the second straight year, but another win conceivably could vault the Aggies to a bigger postseason payout.

"We couldn't ask for much more out of our season, but we still have goals in front of us," Utah State quarterback Chuckie Keeton said of winning the WAC title outright, then a bowl game.

Keeton entered the week ranked 11th in the nation in total offense (321.6 vards per game) and 25th in passing (273.3). Now he faces an Idaho defense that is allowing 42.2 points and 493.3 yards a game. He needs 258 yards passing to break Utah State's single-season record.

Utah coach Kyle Whittingham certainly knows what Keeton can do, having lost to the Aggies in early September in a game that saw the sophomore QB complete 22 of 32 passes for 216 yards and two TDs and rush for what then was a career-high 86 yards.

"He is just like the dual-threat quarterbacks we faced this year (in the Pac-12)," Whittingham said, drawing comparisons to the most recent opposing

"That's a huge difference to have that element in your offense. He's surrounded by a good back, good receiver ... it's not just him. But (Keeton) certainly is the catalyst that makes it go."

The other is senior running back Kerwynn Williams, who ranks 10th in the nation in all-purpose yardage (164.3) and is one of 19 seniors playing his final home game.

Then there's Andersen, who has been asked if this will be his final game as Aggies coach, considering all the times his name pops up for a vacancy.

"I get that 24/7, but my love has been Utah for a long time," said Andersen, who recently signed a contract extension to keep him in Logan through 2018.

He said there are no guarantees for anything in life, especially coaching, "But I love where I'm at and expect to be here for a long period of time."

Andersen said he knew this was a special group after the 6-3 road loss to Brigham Young before the Aggies went on their five-game winning streak.

"That was a tough loss and the way those kids bounced back and prepared as early as that Monday made me take a step back and realize how much it truly meant to them, how important it was for them to break the huddle every day they walked off the practice field and say 'WAC Champs,'" Andersen said.

Now the title is official. The Aggies just want it all by themselves.

Starley

years. But there's a Starley the setter. She is the one who plays for Cartisser, the one who will play college volleyball, in all likelihood, at a highly visible Division I program.

"She has a great skill set," Cartisser said. "She is the go-to player on her high school team as a passer and hitter. But she's a really good setter, too."

Starley's willingness to give up the role of setter on her high school team which would set her up for college the best given her relative lack of height - is a smart sacrifice.

First, Starley, one of the leaders on the Bruins, a team that won more than 70 consecutive sets against conference opponents, loves to win. When the Bruins' set streak was snapped in October against Wood River, Starley went into beast mode.

"They got one off us, but we came back and beat them pretty good," Starley said. "We were mad."

Second, hitting gives Starley a perspective she takes back to her club team as a setter. It's one she'll use in college.

"It's really beneficial because I know what the hitter wants," Starley said. "I actually like setting more, getting other girls opportunities."

Starley is team-first. In her first year in a leadership role, her approach caught on.

"I'd say this season our chemistry was a lot better," Starely said. "We flowed better. Everyone had a job to do, everyone knew what they had to do and there were no arguments."

Who knows if Starley can take the Bruins even further next season. With an 11month commitment to volleyball, which includes camps, club, and a rigorous workout regime, Starley's going to give it a shot.

"I know I always have to work hard because there is someone better than you," Starley said. "We are very competitive; we make a competitive environment for our kids. Coach always reminds us of how good teams at state are, so we definitely push each other. There is a point to have fun, but there's a point where it means business.

Hayward Fires Jazz Past Kings

ASSOCIATED PRESS

SALT LAKE CITY • Gordon Hayward scored 23 points, including the winning basket with 4.5 seconds left, and the Utah Jazz rallied to beat the Sacramento Kings 104-102 on Friday night.

James Johnson's running jumper at the buzzer bounced harmlessly off the rim as the Jazz (7-6) stayed perfect at home.

Hayward scored 10 in the fourth quarter.

Tyreke Evans led Sacramento (3-9) with 19 points and reserve Marcus Thornton added 18, including 13 in the wild fourth quarter.

Marvin Williams added 20 points for Utah. Al Jefferson had 17 and Derrick Favors contributed 16 points, 14 rebounds and a pair of blocked shots.

The Kings led 92-79 with 81/2 minutes left until Hayward, Williams, Jamaal Tinsley and Jefferson fueled the comeback.

school's inaugural 0-4 campaign in 1890. They also failed to win a game at home for the first time since 1920.

The Utes, who hadn't won on the road all season, outscored Colorado 22-7 down the stretch after third-quarter TD runs of 3 yards by Tony Jones and 5 yards by Donta Abron gave the Buffaloes a 28-20 lead heading into the fourth quarter.

The teams combined for 21 points in a stunning 29second span:

• Utah quarterback Travis Wilson scored on a 9-yard keeper to break a 28-28 tie with 8:41 remaining.

• Mosley returned the kickoff 100 yards to tie it back up at 35. It was Colorado's first kickoff return for a score in three years.

• Dunn then extended his NCAA records for most 100-yard kickoff scores in a season (four) and career (five).

After that, the Buffaloes turned the ball over on downs, Nick Hirschman threw his fourth interception, and Brian Blechen's diving pick at midfield sealed Utah's win and Colorado's doom.

FAYETTEVILLE, Ark. • Jarvis Landry made a spectacular one-handed touchdown catch and No. 8 LSU kept its BCS hopes alive.

Zach Mettenberger passed for 217 yards and hooked up with Landry for the play of the day with 1:12 left in the first half to put LSU up 10-0 on a 22-yard TD pass. The Tigers (10-2, 6-2 Southeastern Conference) reached double-digit wins for the sixth time in eight seasons under coach

LSU must now hope for an Alabama loss to Auburn and Texas A&M victory on Saturday in order to reach next weekend's SEC championship game. Even without a division crown, the Tigers could still get an atlarge bid to the BCS.

NO. 17 NEBRASKA 13, IOWA 7

IOWA CITY, Iowa • Rex Burkhead scored the goahead touchdown in his return from a knee injury and Nebraska secured a spot in the Big Ten title game.

The Huskers (10-2, 7-1 Big Ten) will face off against Wisconsin next Saturday in Indianapolis. It'll be a rematch of Nebraska's thrilling 30-27 home win over the Badgers in late September.

Burkhead, making his first appearance since aggravating a sprained left knee on Oct. 20 against Northwestern, broke through with a 3-yard TD run to make it 13-7 late in the third quarter.

NO. 23 KENT STATE 28, OHIO 6

KENT, Ohio • C.J. Malauulu returned an interception 33 yards for a touchdown -12seconds after another Kent State TD - and the Golden Flashes completed a perfect season in the Mid-American Conference with their 10th straight win.

The regular-season finale was a tuneup for Kent State (11-1, 8-0 MAC), which will meet No. 24 Northern Illinois in next week's MAC championship. The win allowed the Golden Flashes to continue the best season in the program's 90-year history. They are ranked for the first time since 1972, the last time they appeared in a bowl game.

NO. 24 NORTHERN ILLINOIS 49, E. MICHIGAN 7

YPSILANTI, Mich. • Jordan Lynch ran for 107 yards and Akeem Daniels scored a career-best four touchdowns as the Huskies won their 11th straight game.

Daniels scored on runs of 25 and 20 yards in the first half and finished with a career-high 112 yards on 12 carries to help the Huskies (11-1, 8-0) cap a perfect run through the Mid-American Conference.
