1 Dead, 1 Injured in Sunday Crash

TIMES-NEWS

HANSEN • A California man died after trying to make a U-turn Sunday at the Hansen Bridge, Idaho State Police say.

ISP responded to the crash near milepost 4 of Idaho Highway 50 shortly after 5:30 p.m.

Sunday. According to a press release, Jeffrey Evans, 53, and passenger Susan Evans, 59, both of Grass Valley, Calif., were in a vehicle on the highway's shoulder. Shane Scott, 40, of Filer, was driving west in a 2002 GMC Sierra with passengers Diana Scott, 40, and Trevor Scott, 14, also of Filer.

According to ISP, Jeffrey Evans attempted to make a U-turn in front of the Sierra, which struck his vehicle.

Jeffrey Evans succumbed to his injuries at the scene of the crash. Diana Scott was also injured, according to ISP; she was flown to St. Luke's Magic Valley Medical Center in Twin Falls, where officials said she was in good condition Monday.

Jeffrey Evans and all of the Scotts were wearing seat-belts. The crash blocked all lanes of the highway for about three hours.

CSI Students Organize World AIDS Day Event

TWIN FALLS • College of Southern Idaho students are putting on an event Wednesday with the goal of raising awareness about HIV/AIDS in the community.

The yearly event in recognition of World AIDS Day is scheduled for 11:30 a.m.-1:30 p.m. at CSI's Taylor Building.

CSI student Tom Hunt, a member of the college's Community Service Council, said groups hope to increase knowledge of HIV/AIDS and work to prevent it.

"Our goal is to bring awareness to CSI students and the community," he said.

This year's theme is "Getting to Zero: Zero New Infections, Zero Discrimination and Zero AIDS Related Deaths."

Hunt said the way to reach the goal of no new infections is through education.

The event is sponsored by CSI's Community Service Council and Wellness Committee, as well as the South Central Public Health District.

SCPHD will offer free, confidential HIV testing for students and community members from noon to 4 p.m.

Program manager Mary Jensen said the district has been involved with the World AIDS Day event at CSI since it started years ago.

In the past, SCPHD set up a table to give out information about HIV/AIDS and where students could get tested.

This is the first year it'll offer testing. "People should be tested annually," Jensen said.

That's based on a recommendation from the U.S. Centers for Disease Control and Prevention for those at high risk for HIV infection.

For those who decide to get tested Wednesday, SCPHD will use a rapid HIV test. It's similar to a pregnancy test but uses blood from a finger stick.

Hunt said there will be a room set aside in the Taylor Building for testing. It takes about 15 minutes to receive test results.

If test results are positive, blood will

Twin Falls to Stream Meetings Live

BY MELISSA DAVLIN
mdavlin@magicvalley.com

TWIN FALLS • Soon, you'll be able to enjoy Twin Falls City Council meetings from your couch.

On Monday, the Twin Falls City Council approved a plan to offer live streaming for public meetings.

The vote came after the city's public information officer, Joshua Palmer, presented options for showing public meetings live over the Internet.

There's no question that city staff wants to make meetings more accessible, Palmer said earlier in the day. The issue was how to do it. It costs money for equipment, software and video storage.

Options ranged from a lower-cost twice-monthly stream, to a more expensive system that would stream and store all public meetings at the council chambers. That includes meetings for Planning and Zoning, the Twin Falls Urban Renewal Agency and other committees.

Ultimately, the council approved the advanced system. That system, provided by a company called Granicus, will cost the city $649 per month, as well as $2,625 for software and about $2,500 for camera equipment.

Twin Falls isn't the first area city to look into live streaming. In November 2011, the Burley City Council voted to stream its meetings live.

While most Magic Valley cities don't stream council meetings, other mid- to large-size Idaho cities do.

Pocatello archives footage of its City Council meetings and makes those videos available on its

THE MARKET AT A GLANCE

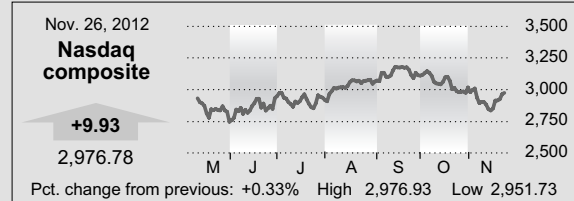

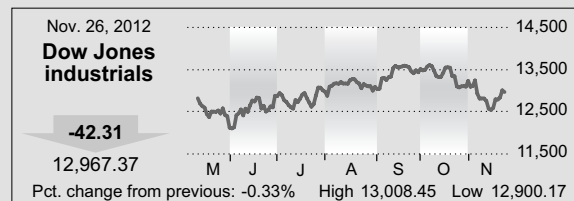

Stocks End Lower after a Strong Week

NEW YORK (AP) • Wall Street came back to work after the Thanksgiving weekend and faced leftover worries about the "fiscal cliff" and the European debt crisis. Stocks retreated after one of their best weeks of the year.

The Dow Jones industrial average fell 42.31 points to 12,967.37. The Standard & Poor's 500 index declined 2.86 to 1,406.29. And the Nasdaq composite index managed a 9.93-point increase to 2,976.78.

Utility stocks rose the most, while telecommunications companies fell the most.

The major U.S. economic reports were not due until later in the week, leaving investors to rehash the European debt crisis and talks in Washington over the "cliff" of tax increases and government spending cuts set to take effect Jan. 1.

Former CSI Player Pleads Guilty to Steroid Distribution

BY ALISON GENE SMITH alismith@magicvalley.com

TWIN FALLS • A former College of Southern Idaho baseball player has pleaded guilty to selling anabolic steroids.

William Robert "Billy Bob" Ward, 21, pleaded guilty Nov. 19 to three counts of delivery of a controlled substance. Three other charges were dropped: two charges of delivery of a controlled substance and one count of conspiracy to manufacture, deliver or possess a controlled substance.

Ward is scheduled to be sentenced on Jan. 7. Prosecutors are recommending a three- to nine-year prison sentence, which Ward could shorten with a successful stint in the state's retained-jurisdiction program.

A substance abuse assessment has also been ordered at Ward's expense.

In court documents, Ward wrote he was pleading guilty "because on Feb. 29, April 3 and May 14 I delivered testosterone propionate to a confidential informant in violation of Idaho law."

According to the plea agreement, Ward will not request a withheld judgment and must serve a mandatory 100 hours of community service if he is sentenced to probation.

Ward was arrested in May after a lengthy investigation by Idaho State Police into the sale of anabolic steroids by Ward to several of his Golden Eagles teammates.

Court records detail how police used a confidential informant, one who told detectives the names of four other baseball players who allegedly purchased steroids from Ward - whose supplier was located in his hometown of Las Vegas.

There is no testing for steroids at the junior college level, although athletes are tested routinely for drugs common in recreational usage.

First Half of Week Features Nice Weather

After the chilly start to the week, temperatures will be warming back up into the low 50s. These temperatures will be 10 degrees above average. Our weather will remain nice through the middle of the week before the high pressure breaks down and a series of storm systems begin to come in off the Pacific.

It will be nice today, with lots of sunshine and temperatures near 50 degrees. Our nice weather trend will continue one more day into Wednesday, but with more clouds and even warmer temperatures into the low to mid-50s.

An active weather pattern sets up from Wednesday night into the weekend. We will see our pattern change allowing more moisture and stormy weather across the region. The first wave arrives Wednesday night into Thursday with a chance of mostly rain showers. The next potent shot of rain should work across the region on Friday, with another system followed behind that for the weekend.

As for snow, if you are a snow lover don't get too excited across the valley. It appears snow levels will be between 5500 to 6500 feet during this active weather pattern. Great news for local ski resorts - not great news if you are looking for snow in the valleys.

Curious Mind Irrigation Tech, Climate Cause Springs' Decline

Why is Thousand Springs no longer made of 1,000 springs and where does the water originate from?

Curious Mind

South of Hagerman, Thousand Springs is clearly visible from the Thousand Springs Scenic Byway. Thousand Springs is renowned for its many fresh natural underground springs emerging from the Eastern Snake Plain Aquifer, a Lake Erie-sized underground reservoir. Its water erupts from the nearby steep, rocky canyon walls and cascades into the Snake River below. Other springs bubble up from deep within the riverbed.

"The Thousand Springs region is a major discharge point for water in the Snake River Plain Aquifer," said Shawn Willsey, College of Southern Idaho professor of geology.

"The aquifer is contained within basalt lava flows that erupted from various volcanic vents over the past 3 million years. The basalt has fractures, pore spaces, rubble zones, and other characteristics that provide conduits for the water to travel through.

"The decrease in spring discharge over the past hundred or so years is undoubtedly the product of using water from the aquifer for aquaculture and power along with irrigation wells which tap the aquifer upgradient from Thousand Springs," Willsey said.

In the early 1900s, irrigators started diverting water from the Snake River into canals.

"Surface irrigating raises the water table which causes more flow coming out of the spring. We reached the maximum discharge in the 1950s. It has come down since then," said Sean Vincent, hydrology section manager for the Idaho Department of Water Resources.

He said the decline in aquifer water levels is due to groundwater pumping for agricultural purposes, the conversion from flood irrigation to sprinkler irrigation, and climate.

"The discharge decreased because pump technology increased. Flood to sprinkler irrigation was a big move because although it was more efficient because you don't use as much water, it's a double-edged sword because there is less of it," said Vincent. He said flood irrigation applied more water than crops actually used, but it percolated into the ground and recharged the aquifer - and the springs.

The springs and the quality of their water have drawn attention since the area was first settled. The Valley of the Thousand Springs had many developers and owners, but it wasn't until 1912 that power was first generated by the Thousand Springs Power Co. Idaho Power took over production in the area starting in 1916.

Mild winters and clean, oxygenated spring water with a consistent temperature also drew fish producers, making the region the current center of trout production in the U.S.

"The water in the aquifer comes from many sources including the mountains around the Lost River Valley and the Lost River itself," Willsey said. "One reason why there are so many springs in the Thousand Springs region is that the Snake River takes a northward turn and intercepts water in the aquifer which generally travels from northeast to southwest.

Groundwater in the aquifer moves fairly slowly at rates ranging from 0.5 to 20 feet a day."

The Big and Little Lost rivers disappear into sinks, a depression where the water flows into the ground, Vincent said. The lost rivers do not reach any larger river, but vanish into the aquifer, giving the rivers their name. The sinks of both rivers are near the Idaho National Laboratory, northeast of Craters of the Moon. Water from both rivers emerges about 100 miles away at Thousand Springs and Devil's Washbowl.

The larger canyon springs have gauges, providing good measurements, Vincent said. "We look at the total discharge rate because it's hard to count the number of springs." Currently there are 100 springs.

Several processes still recharge the aquifer, Vincent said, including surface irrigation, tributary underflow, precipitation, and losses from streams, rivers and canals that leak to some degree.

But discharge levels at Thousand Springs continue to decline. "We're approaching the levels of where we were in 1900 but we're still above it," Vincent said.

Three Injured in Saturday Crash

TIMES-NEWS

WENDELL • Three people were injured Saturday evening when the vehicle they were in struck a dead deer on the roadway.

Idaho State Police investigated the rollover crash at about 10:55 p.m. Saturday on Interstate 84 about six miles northwest of Wendell.

Judy Randles, 53, of Boise, was driving a 2005 Ford Focus west on I-84 when the vehicle struck the dead deer. Randles lost control of the vehicle and swerved off the north shoulder of the road. The vehicle then rolled and landed on its top.

Randles and her passengers - Robert Eglinton, 31, of Kuna, and Tyler Eglinton, 10, of Kuna - were taken by ground ambulance to North Canyon Medical Center in Gooding.

Randles and Tyler Eglinton wore seatbelts, but Robert Eglinton did not, according to ISP.

The westbound right lane of Interstate 84 was blocked for about 1 1/2 hours. ISP was assisted at the scene by the Gooding County Sheriff's Office and the Jerome County Sheriff's Office.

Counterfeiting Charges Dropped against T.F. Man

BY ALISON GENE SMITH
alismith@magicvalley.com

TWIN FALLS • Charges against a Twin Falls man accused of producing nearly $1,500 in counterfeit money have been dropped.

Matthew T. Harrington, was arrested in December 2011 on two counts of forgery and one count of committing fraud with a computer.

According to court documents, on Nov. 19 prosecutors asked the court to dismiss the case because they could not prove the charges beyond a reasonable doubt.

The order was signed on Nov. 21.

According to online court records, Harrington's $10,000 surety bond was exonerated.

Harrington was charged after deputies reportedly found three large bags filled with copies of currency that had been shredded. Over the next few days, according to court documents, they examined the paper and pieced together more than 100 examples of 10- and 20-dollar denominations of money that had been copied.

Later, detectives said they determined the counterfeit money had been printed on resume paper purchased at Walmart.

Two other men were arrested and found with counterfeit bills believed related to the case, including Carlos Paladini, who told police he carried counterfeit $20s in his wallet because he would rather spend time in federal prison than state prison for his crimes. Paladini was sentenced to more than three years in federal prison on an unrelated charge of unlawful possession of a firearm in June.

Lottery Urges Responsible Play for Record Jackpot

TIMES-NEWS

BOISE • With a $425 million estimated jackpot for Wednesday night's Powerball, the Idaho Lottery is reminding players to be responsible.

The Idaho Lottery is preparing retailers for an increase in player traffic over the next three days.

"When the jackpot reaches a level this high, we want to remind everyone who participates to take part in the excitement but to do so responsibly," Director Jeff Anderson said in a press release.

He encourages community members to play what they can afford, but "do not go overboard."

The jackpot amount is a new record for Powerball and the second-largest amount ever offered worldwide, according to Anderson.

If a winner chooses not to take the sum over 30 yearly payments, the lump-sum cash value is estimated at $278.3 million. Retailers around the state have already seen an increase in player participation.

The last time players can buy a ticket is 7:55 p.m. Wednesday. Anderson recommends players shouldn't wait until the last minute to purchase tickets.

Xavier Plans Meeting about School Finances

BY JULIE WOOTTON
jwootton@magicvalley.com

TWIN FALLS • Xavier Charter School will host a public meeting Friday to talk about school finances.

In a Monday email to parents, Xavier's school board provided an update on the school's financial situation.

Xavier Charter School and its landlord — Twin Falls School Development LLC — have negotiated a lower lease price for the school building this fiscal year.

And school officials are in negotiations about possibly buying the school building.

Head of Schools Thad Biggers said that would provide a long-term solution to financial issues.

"The lease reduction is a significant step forward and will ensure that Xavier is able to operate for the remainder of this fiscal year," Biggers wrote in an email to the Times-News.

A public meeting is scheduled for 6:30 p.m. Friday to talk about the proposed purchase of the school building, as well as the school's debt capacity.

In September, the school received a notice of defect from the Idaho Public Charter School Commission for "failure to demonstrate fiscal soundness."

The commission will review Xavier's corrective action plan during a Dec. 4 meeting in Boise.

2nd Laughlin-Bullhead City Bridge Not Forgotten

BULLHEAD CITY, Ariz. (AP) • Officials on both sides of the Colorado River say the idea of building a second bridge between Bullhead City and Laughlin, Nev., remains alive despite little to show for years of discussion and debate.

However, the proposed second bridge may shrink to fit available funding amid some continued grumbling about the likely site.

Many residents of Bullhead City work in casino-resorts in Laughlin. The two towns are now linked by only one bridge.

Prominent Laughlin developer Bob Bilbray says he remains skeptical about the chosen site, but Bullhead City Manager Toby Cotter says he and Laughlin Town Manager Jackie Brady confirm there's agreement about the site.

That site has cleared environmental reviews and Brady says it wouldn't make sense to move the project to another location and start the process over again.

The Mohave Daily News reports that the option currently under consideration is to scale down the project from four lanes to two lanes for cost reasons.

Bullhead City Public Works Director Pawan Agrawal said he believes the bridge and its approaches can be built for the $18.5 million on hand.

Cotter said he'd like to ask the federal government for more money but that doesn't appear realistic because of Washington's budget problems.

"That $18 million is not going to sit there forever, and somebody's got to move and start something and it's got to be on their side of the river," said Bullhead City Mayor Jack Hakim, referring to Nevada.

Even Bilbray said he doesn't think he doesn't think the site decision will be revisited.

"I don't think the city council over there has any appetite at all to open up this site issue again," he said. "I really don't. And if I were them, I wouldn't either. It was just too hot an issue and I don't think it's going to be any less now."

Nonprofit Group Aims to Help Idaho Students

BY JULIE WOOTTON
jwootton@magicvalley.com

TWIN FALLS • A nonprofit group of business leaders is focusing on better education in Idaho. Executive Director Diana Lachiondo said Idaho Business for Education was formed with the idea that businesses have “an altruistic and economic interest” in seeing a strong education system for students. “From a business perspective, we communicate that education is really the best economic driver,” she said.

Statewide, about 80 CEOs, company presidents, managing partners and retired executives are involved. “The idea (is) that we really wanted to have folks that have executive power” and who make decisions on behalf of their company, Lachiondo said. The group met last week in Twin Falls. Regional Chairman Curtis Eaton said the group wanted to see if any local businesspeople would be interested in supporting the organization’s goals and vision. On Wednesday night, leaders met with 10 to 12 business executives to talk more in depth. When it comes to goals, Idaho Business for Education is focusing on increasing the number of adults who continue their education after high school.

“I think it’s fairly well accepted around the state that in order for people to have a productive job or career, it’s just absolutely imperative these days to continue their education beyond high school,” Eaton said. Lachiondo said they’re aligning with the Idaho State Board of Education’s goal that by 2020, 60 percent of the state’s 25 to 34-year-olds will have a postsecondary degree or certificate. Lachiondo said Idaho’s economy will require more highly-trained workers in the coming years. “There are a number of member businesses who are starting to see the impact,” she said. Eaton said one area of emphasis is increasing the number of people with a four-year degree in a science, technology, engineering or math field. Businesses need to be part of the conversation and solution, Lachiondo said. After this month’s Students Come First election, she said education topics are high on the radar statewide. “We hope to use that energy to come together and move forward on our goals,” she said.

Schapiro’s SEC Successor Likely to Follow Her Lead

Schapiro will step down as chair of the SEC next month after a tumultuous tenure in which she helped lead the U.S. government’s regulatory response to the 2008 financial crisis.

BY MARCY GORDON
Associated Press

WASHINGTON • The leadership of the Securities and Exchange Commission will change next month. Its approach to regulation probably won’t. Mary Schapiro will step down as chairman after a tumultuous tenure in which she helped lead the government’s regulatory response to the 2008 financial crisis. Replacing her will be Elisse Walter, one of five SEC commissioners, whose career path has tracked Schapiro’s for nearly three decades. Walter served under Schapiro at both the SEC and the Financial Industry Regulatory Authority, the securities industry’s self-policing organization. Both women worked at the SEC in the 1980s. Walter was also general counsel of the Commodity Futures Trading Commission when Schapiro led that agency in the mid-1990s.

Walter

She’s expected to follow the approach Schapiro took at the SEC over nearly four years. President Barack Obama on Monday announced his choice of Walter, who will take over at a critical time for the SEC, which is seeking stricter rules for money-market mutual funds and must get into shape the so-called Volcker Rule, which would bar banks from making certain trades for their own profit. The agency is also pursuing enforcement actions against banks over their sales of risky mortgage securities before the housing bust. Obama can fill the SEC chairman’s job without Senate approval because Walter has already been confirmed through 2013. That means Obama can avoid a potential confirmation fight until after the White House and Congress address the package of tax increases and spending cuts set to kick in next year. The president will need to nominate a permanent successor before Walter’s term ends in December 2013. At FINRA, Walter was Schapiro’s “right-hand person,” said James Cox, a Duke University law professor and expert on securities law. As an SEC commissioner, Walter consistently voted with Schapiro on rule making and other initiatives. Cox said he wasn’t surprised that both of Obama’s choices to lead the SEC have come from an industry self-regulatory organization. The Obama administration “is not an eager regulator of the securities markets,” he said.

John Coffee, a professor of securities law at Columbia University, said Walter’s leadership would likely resemble Schapiro’s. She was Schapiro’s “close assistant” and “has positions almost identical with Schapiro,” Coffee noted. Walter, a 62-year-old Democrat, was appointed to the SEC in 2008 by President George W. Bush. Earlier, she was a senior official at FINRA, which Schapiro led before becoming SEC chairman in January 2009. “I’m confident that Elisse’s years of experience will serve her well in her new position,” Obama said in a statement.

Cyber Monday Likely To Be Busiest Online Sales Day

BY MAE ANDERSON
Associated Press

NEW YORK • Americans clicked away on their computers and smartphones for deals on Cyber Monday, which is expected to be the biggest online shopping day in history.

Shoppers are expected to spend $1.5 billion on Cyber Monday, up 20 percent from last year, according to research firm comScore. That would not only make it the biggest online shopping day of the year, but the biggest since comScore started tracking shoppers' online buying habits in 2001.

Online shopping was up 25.6 percent on Cyber Monday compared with the same time period a year ago, according to figures released Monday afternoon by IBM Benchmark, which tracks online sales. Sales from mobile devices, which include tablets, rose 10.9 percent. The group does not track dollar amount sales.

The strong start to Cyber Monday, a term coined in 2005 by a shopping trade group that noticed people were doing a lot of shopping on their work computers on the Monday following Thanksgiving, comes after overall online sales rose significantly during the four-day holiday shopping weekend that began on Thanksgiving.

"Online's piece of the holiday pie is growing every day, and all the key dates are growing with it," said Forrester Research analyst Sucharita Mulpuru. "The Web is becoming a more significant part of the traditional brick-and-mortar holiday shopping season."

It's the latest sign that Americans are responding to the convenience of the Web. With the growth in smartphones and tablet computers, shoppers can buy what they want, whenever they want, wherever they want. As a result, retailers have ramped up the deals they're offering on their websites during the holiday shopping season, a time when stores can make up to 40 percent of their annual revenue.

Amazon.com, which started its Cyber Monday deals at 12:01 a.m. Monday, is offering as much as 60 percent off a Panasonic VIERA 55-inch TV that's usually priced higher than $1,000. Sears is offering $430 off a Maytag washer and dryer, each on sale for $399. And Kmart is offering 75 percent off all of its diamond earrings and $60 off a 12-in-1 multigame table on sale for $89.99.

Delisa O'Brien, 24, took advantage of some of the deals on Monday. O'Brien, who said she would rather shop online than deal with the crowds in stores, bought an H-P Notebook for $399 on Hewlett Packard's website for her mother. The company threw in a free Nook e-book reader with her purchase. "When it comes to Black Friday, I'm a tiny, 5'1" woman and the thought of having to push and shove my way through hoards of people just to get cheap merchandise is kind of a nightmare to me," said O'Brien, a Brooklyn, N.Y. resident. "My mom gets a new laptop, I get an e-reader, and all without spending too much money ... Everybody wins."

a 2011 food safety law. FDA officials found salmonella all over Sunland Inc.'s New Mexico processing plant after 41 people in 20 states, most of them children, were sickened by peanut butter manufactured at the Sunland plant and sold at Trader Joe's. Man Choked to Death in Roach-eating Contest

MIAMI (AP) • A Florida man choked to death after downing dozens of live roaches to win a contest earlier this year in which the grand prize was a python, according to an autopsy released Monday.

Edward Archbold, 32, of West Palm Beach died as a result of “asphyxia due to choking and aspiration of gastric contents,” according to the report released by the Broward County medical examiner’s office. It said his airway was obstructed by the roach body parts, which caused him to not be able to breathe.

“There is a flap called the epiglottis that is supposed to stop objects from going into the lungs,” medical examiner Craig T. Mallak wrote in an email to the AP. “Unfortunately, it doesn’t always work. In the video you could see him trying to swallow and breathe at the same time. We can’t do both simultaneously.”

Lab tests for drugs came back negative.

The death has been ruled an accident.

“It’s hard to even think about it,” said Kim Crawford, co-owner of Busch Canvas & Interiors where Archbold worked for four years. “It does bring a little closure because not knowing always puts that question mark out there.”

Crawford described Archbold as a “smart, good guy” who was “really good friends to people.” She said a photo of Archbold and news clippings of the accident still hang in the main office.

Anti-tax activist Grover Norquist, president of Americans for Tax Reform, addresses the Conservative Political Action Conference on Feb. 11 in Washington.

GOP Lawmakers Shy Away from Tax Pledge

WASHINGTON (AP) • For decades, conservative lobbyist Grover Norquist vowed to drive Republicans out of office if they didn’t pledge to oppose tax increases. Many lawmakers signed on.

But now, several senior Republicans are breaking ranks, willing to consider raising more money through taxes as part of a deal with Democrats to avoid a catastrophic budget meltdown.

Tennessee Sen. Bob Corker says the only pledge he will keep is his oath of office. House Majority Leader Eric Cantor says no one in his home state of Virginia is talking about what leaders in Washington refer to simply as “The Pledge,” a Norquist invention that dates to 1986. Georgia Sen. Saxby Chambliss says he cares more about his country than sticking to Norquist’s pledge.

It’s quite an about-face for senior members of a party that long has stood firmly against almost any notion of tax increases. And while GOP leaders insist they still don’t want to see taxes go up, the reality of a nation in a debt crisis is forcing some to moderate their opposition to any movement on how much Americans pay to fund their government. Republican legislators and Democratic President Barack Obama’s White House are haggling vigorously as they look for ways to reach agreement on detailed tax adjustments and spending cuts before automatic, blunt-force changes occur at the new year.

“Oh, I signed it,” Sen. Jeff Sessions said on Fox News about Norquist’s pledge. “But we’ve got to deal with the crisis we face. We’ve got to deal with the political reality of the president’s victory.”

The naysaying about the pledge is raising the question of whether Norquist — a little-known Republican outside of Washington — is losing his position of power within the GOP. It’s a notion that he calls ridiculous.

“The fantasy is that the Republicans would cave on marginal tax rates,” Norquist said recently. “They’re non-negotiable.”

At the White House, spokesman Jay Carney said Monday that the shifting away from Norquist signaled an opportunity for Republicans to work with President Obama.

Egypt’s President Stands by Decree

CAIRO (AP) • Egypt’s president told the country’s top judges Monday that he did not infringe on their authority when he seized near absolute powers, setting up a prolonged showdown on the eve of a mass protest planned by opponents of the Islamist leader.

An aide to President Mohammed Morsi said the decree was limited to “sovereignty-related issues,” but that did not satisfy his critics.

The uncompromising stance came during a meeting between Morsi and members of the Supreme Judiciary Council in a bid to resolve a four-day crisis that has plunged the country into a new round of turmoil with clashes between the two sides that have left one protester dead and hundreds wounded.

The judiciary, the main target of Morsi’s edicts, also has pushed back, calling the decrees a power grab and an “assault” on the branch’s independence. Judges and prosecutors stayed away from many courts in Cairo and other cities on Sunday and Monday.

A spokesman said Morsi told the judges that he acted within his right as the nation’s sole source of legislation when he issued decrees putting himself above judicial oversight. The president also extended the same immunity to two bodies dominated by his Islamist allies — a panel drafting a new constitution and parliament’s mostly toothless upper chamber.

The spokesman, Yasser Ali, also told reporters that Morsi assured the judges that the decrees did not in any way “infringe” on the judiciary and that they were “temporary” and limited only to “sovereignty-related issues.”

Two prominent rights lawyers — Gamal Eid and Ahmed Ragheb — dismissed Ali’s remarks.

Eid said they were designed to keep “Morsi above the law,” while Ragheb said they amounted to “playing with words.”

Millions Chase Powerball Jackpot

CHICAGO (AP) • Eight months after a trio of ticket buyers split a $656 million Mega Millions jackpot to set a world lottery record, Powerball is offering up a prize that would be the second-highest.

The $425 million jackpot, the largest in Powerball’s history, represents a potential life-changing fortune. But before shelling out $2 for a ticket, here are some things to consider:

It’s the gambler’s mantra: Somebody’s gotta win, so why not me?

The first part is true; somebody will win the Powerball jackpot.

Chuck Strutt, executive director of Multi-State Lottery Association, predicts there’s about a 60 percent chance it’ll happen Wednesday — maybe better if there’s a flurry of last-minute ticket purchasers picking unique numbers.

The jackpot already has defied long odds by rolling over 16 consecutive times without anyone hitting the big prize, which now stands at $425 million ($278.3 million cash value). Strutt puts the odds at around 5 percent there would be no winner in the entire run, including Wednesday.

It’s true to say that you have a better chance of being struck by lightning than winning the Powerball. But that woefully understates the danger of lightning.

Tim Norfolk, a University of Akron mathematics professor who teaches a course on gambling, puts the odds of a lightning strike in a person’s lifetime at 1 in 5,000. The odds of winning the Powerball jackpot: 1 in 175 million.

Wal-Mart Distances Itself from Factory Fire

DHAKA, Bangladesh (AP) • The garment factory in Bangladesh where a weekend fire killed at least 112 people had been making clothes for Wal-Mart without the giant U.S. retailer’s knowledge, Wal-Mart said Monday.

In a statement, Wal-Mart said that the Tazreen Fashions Ltd. factory was no longer authorized to produce merchandise for Wal-Mart, but that a supplier subcontracted work to it “in direct violation of our policies.”

“Today, we have terminated the relationship with that supplier,” America’s biggest retailer said. “The fact that this occurred is extremely troubling to us, and we will continue to work across the apparel industry to improve fire safety education and training in Bangladesh.”

The blaze on Saturday was one of the deadliest fires of its kind in Bangladesh and threw a spotlight on the way the country’s garment factories often ignore safety in the rush to supply major retailers in the U.S. and Europe.

Kill the 401(k)?

SLATE.COM

As America hurtles toward the fiscal cliff, there's an increasingly frantic search for ways to shore up the country's deteriorating balance sheet. Republicans want to cut spending; Democrats would prefer to raise taxes on the wealthy. But a paper released this week by Harvard and Danish researchers highlights just how much room there could be to generate more government revenue without sacrificing economic efficiency — in other words, the type of policies that both parties could conceivably learn to love. The study analyzes the responses of Danish taxpayers to savings incentives and also behavioral “nudges” that automatically deduct retirement savings from workers' paychecks. It turns out that savings incentives had scarcely any impact on the rate at which Danes accumulated nest eggs, while the nudges were very effective in making people save. These findings suggest that 401(k) plans and their brethren — which cost the U.S. government as much as $100 billion a year in lost revenue — don't do much to further their stated objective of boosting retirement savings.

The reason we have tax shelters like the 401(k) is to change the relative cost of spending money today versus saving for tomorrow. Exempting retirement investments from taxation increases the saver's return on his investment, so a rational cost-benefit calculation should lead most people to put something away for the future. In theory, such tax shelters should go some way toward correcting Americans' problem of undersaving.

But these policies assume that, despite being impulsive spenders, we will respond like textbook economic agents by saving more when tax exemptions make saving cheaper — an unlikely proposition. Even if savers do put more money in a 401(k) as a result of tax incentives, they might simply do so by reducing their investments in other non-exempt accounts, rather than saving more overall. Whether tax shelters actually encourage higher savings is a matter for the data to decide.

The lack of necessary data on Americans' incomes and savings is what motivated Harvard economists Raj Chetty and John Friedman to partner with researchers in Copenhagen, who had access to the complete tax records of every Danish citizen over the past couple of decades.

The study focuses on a Danish tax reform in 1999 that, for taxpayers in the highest tax bracket, reduced the subsidy for pension contributions by 13 cents on the dollar. As a result, saving got more expensive for earners above the top bracket cutoff of about $41,000, while remaining unchanged for those earning under the threshold.

It turns out that a little less than 85 percent of Danes affected by the change did nothing to respond to the shift in savings incentives — they put money in their pensions at about the same rate in 1999 as they did the year before.

The fact that most people are too distracted from their finances to respond to any shift in incentives opens the door for a different approach to promoting savings — by simply taking advantage of the incredible inertia that seems inherent in the human condition. By putting in place high default contribution rates to pension plans, we might get people to save more simply because they never get around to changing the amount of their monthly payments.

It's unlikely that Republicans would agree to a national “nudge” like a default pension contribution that could be changed only through deliberate action. It would strike libertarians as another case of heavy-handed government treading on individual liberty. And they may have a point — as Glenn Hubbard, the dean of Columbia Business School and economic adviser to the Romney campaign points out, who is to say what the “right” level of default savings should be?

But getting rid of the tax shelters that burn a $100 billion hole in the government balance sheet might be one reform both sides can get behind. In a recent conversation with me, Hubbard echoed the study's sentiments that 401(k)s and IRAs are essentially subsidies to relatively wealthy households that are well-informed enough to take advantage of them. Or, in Hubbard's words, these types of programs act as “a tax on the unaware.”

If we decide it is a national priority to promote savings, maybe there's a middle ground that would at least partially satisfy both sides. For example, the government could provide tax incentives to companies — who presumably are sophisticated about their tax bills — to provide savings “nudges” to their workers, perhaps choosing the default that best suits their employees. That way, at least the decision is made by a local manager rather than a Washington bureaucrat.

What Should the Feds Do about Pot?

THE WASHINGTON POST

Small-time marijuana use will soon be legal in Colorado and Washington state. Sort of. This month voters in those states approved ballot measures permitting possession of up to an ounce of pot. But the federal government has not changed its policy. Members of Congress introduced legislation Nov. 16 that would allow state marijuana rules to preempt federal ones. But that, in effect, would resemble federal legalization, and it's unlikely to pass soon.

So the states' leaders are asking for guidance from President Obama's Justice Department, which, NPR's Carrie Johnson reports, has a few options. It could enhance its own anti-marijuana enforcement in the states. It could sue to halt the laws' application.

Or the Justice Department could keep its hands off, perhaps continuing the approach the feds have largely taken for some time — focusing scarce resources on major violators, such as big growers that might serve multi-state markets, cultivators using public lands or dispensaries near schools. The last option is clearly best.

There is reason for caution about ditching federal pot restrictions. Marijuana can be harmful, and the Drug Enforcement Administration reports that potency levels are higher than ever. The possibly major effects on public health of more driving under the influence of marijuana is a particular concern. If the federal government removed its restrictions, other states would find it easier to follow Colorado and Washington's path. Dismantling current federal law, meanwhile, could have a range of effects on the U.S. relationship with Mexico that lawmakers should take time to consider fully, as drug cartels' involvement in U.S. medical marijuana markets indicates.

But it's unrealistic and unwise to expect federal officials to pick up the slack left by state law-enforcement officers who used to enforce marijuana prohibitions against pot users and small-time growers. Unrealistic, because it would require lots more resources. Unwise, because filling prisons with users, each given a criminal stain on his or her record, has long been irrational. For the latter reason, we favor decriminalizing possession of small amounts of pot, assessing civil fines instead of locking people up. Also, the Justice Department should hold its fire on a lawsuit challenging Colorado and Washington's decision to behave more leniently. And state officials involved in good-faith efforts to regulate marijuana production and distribution according to state laws should be explicitly excused from federal targeting.

It's not yet clear how a quasi-legal pot industry might operate in Colorado and Washington or what its public-health effects will be. It could be that these states are harbingers of a slow, national reassessment of marijuana policy. Or their experiment could serve as warning for the other 48 states.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Mystery Driver, Please Contact ISP

On Sunday, Nov. 4, around 4:30 p.m., my wife, Pat, and my daughter, Marcy Makay, were seriously injured in a rollover accident on I-84 near mile post 161. The accident was caused by a car that made an illegal turn around in front of them, then continued to drive off after the accident happened. I was in my truck following them home. When you cut out in front of them, my daughter swerved to avoid hitting your vehicle.

As I watched, my daughter's vehicle lost control and rolled three or four times before coming to rest in the median. I thought I had just watched my wife and daughter die right before my eyes. God was watching over them that day, and their lives were spared. My daughter has a serious head injury and a broken left shoulder. My wife has two broken ribs, and her right side and shoulder were injured. She also has a broken left wrist. They both have severe bruising and many cuts from the broken glass. They are now recovering, and it looks like they will both fully recover, but it's going to take some time.

You should know something about these two wonderful women. Marcy is a single mom of three children who went back to college to realize her dream of becoming a school teacher. This is her second year, and she is presently a third-grade school teacher at Gooding Elementary. My wife is a nurse who is gifted with caring for those who are sick or suffering. She really loves her job and is very good at it.

My daughter's car insurance will cover her car and my wife's medical expense but not her own medical expense.

If you were the driver of the car that turned around and pulled out in front of my daughter's car, I'm asking you to please do the right thing: Call the Idaho State Police, turn yourself in and take responsibility for what happened.

This could have ended much worse. It could have ended in two funerals or even some permanent disability. To witness this horrific accident has been very difficult. I know God allowed this to happen, and I also know God will use this accident for a greater good. Thank you all who have offered your prayers for their recovery and healing.

Thank You for Being Courteous

My wife and I operate the concession stand, Snack O's, at the Sunway Soccer Complex in Twin Falls, which we lease from the city. This is our second year of operation. During the time frame of April through the middle of October, we come in contact with parents, grandparents, friends, players of all ages, including high school teams and coaches. The programs at Sunway involve everything from club soccer, city recreation soccer and city recreation “T” baseball, as well as some Hispanic junior and senior league soccer programs.

One would think dealing with such a diverse group from different walks of life and children of all ages this might be an insurmountable task. Wrong! The groups of people, from the youngest to the oldest, have done a great job teaching their children manners such as saying thank you when being waited on. Sayings such as “May I have,” “Could I please get a ...” are just some of the courtesy sayings that have and are being taught by these parents.

It is extremely gratifying to see these actions taking place in today's world when families are going in many directions and people, in many cases, are working more than one job. Adults as well as youth are taking pride in the area by depositing trash rather than drop a bottle or paper on the ground. Yes, not everyone does this; however, seeing others do the right thing often shames others into doing the right thing.

Not all is bad with the “younger generation” and their children. The ones we come in contact with have done and are doing a great job of teaching manners and courtesy to others.

We would like to say thank you to all of you for being such great customers and allowing us to serve you.

Supreme Court Rejects Insanity Defense Appeal

WASHINGTON (AP) • The Supreme Court has refused to consider whether a criminal defendant has a constitutional right to plead not guilty by reason of insanity.

The justices on Monday rejected an appeal from convicted killer John Joseph Delling of Idaho, one of four states that bar defendants from claiming that they were legally insane, or unable to appreciate that what they did was wrong. The other states are Kansas, Montana and Utah.

Delling pleaded guilty in the slayings of two college students during a trip across the West in 2007. Delling suffers from acute paranoid schizophrenia and says he was in the grip of severe delusions when he killed the two men and wounded a third.

He was sentenced to spend the rest of his life in prison without the possibility of parole. His lawyers say he would have received treatment and a more lenient sentence with an insanity plea.

Justices Stephen Breyer, Ruth Bader Ginsburg and Sonia Sotomayor were in the minority in saying they would have heard the case. Attorneys with the Constitutional Accountability Center, which filed a friend-of-the-court brief supporting the notion that defendants have a constitutional right to plead not guilty by reason of insanity, said they were disappointed by the high court's decision not to hear Delling's case.

Courts dating from ancient Greece have held that the integrity of the criminal justice system requires an insanity defense, Constitutional Accountability Center attorney Elizabeth Wydra said in a prepared statement.

"The court should have taken Mr. Delling's case to make sure that every state in the nation respects this long history of legal and moral tradition and provides constitutionally-mandated due process of law," Wydra said.

During Delling's trial, medical experts and his mother said he had lived with mental illness since childhood and that his adolescence and adulthood were punctuated by violence and bizarre delusions.

7-year-old Gets Medical Marijuana

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) • A 7-year-old girl suffering from leukemia is one of Oregon's youngest medical marijuana patients.

Her mother says she gives her daughter marijuana pills to combat the effects of chemotherapy, but her father, who lives in North Dakota, worries about the effects of the drug on her brain development.

Mykayla Comstock was diagnosed with leukemia last spring. Her mother treats her with a gram of cannabis oil daily, The Oregonian reported.

Mykayla's mother credits the drug for the leukemia's remission. "As a mother, I am going to try anything before she can potentially fall on the other side," said Erin Purchase, 25, who with her boyfriend administers Mykayla's cannabis.

The girl says the drug helps her eat and sleep but also makes her feel "funny"

"It helps me eat and sleep," Mykayla said. "The chemotherapy makes you feel like you want to stay up all night long."

Mykayla's father, who is divorced from the girl's mother, was so disturbed by his daughter's marijuana use that he contacted child welfare officials, police and her oncologist. The father, Jesse Comstock, said his concerns were prompted by a visit with Mykayla in August.

"She was stoned out of her mind," said Comstock, 26. "All she wanted to do was lay on the bed and play video games."

Comstock, who works in the North Dakota oil field, pays child support to Purchase and covers Mykayla's health insurance. He said he observed strange behavior during an August visit and took Mykayla to a private lab, where technicians detected THC levels of an adult daily marijuana user.

Gladstone police contacted the girl's mother, examined Mykayla's medical marijuana paperwork, then told Comstock there was little they could do.

Idaho Frets over Rise in Deer, Car Collisions

BOISE (AP) • Idaho's wildlife managers are starting to worry about the growing number of collisions involving motorists and deer, elk and moose.

Studies show more than 5,000 of the animals were killed by vehicles on Idaho roadways last year, and that total could be higher since many collisions aren't reported to law enforcement or insurance companies.

Now, Idaho Fish and Game Department managers say it's time to ramp up monitoring and wildlife crossing programs.

"Right now, we think we're losing the same number of deer that we harvest in our biggest deer (hunting) unit every year, so that is significant," Gregg Servheen, the agency's wildlife program coordinator, told the Spokesman-Review in a story Monday. "As we try to maintain deer harvest and sportsman interest and opportunity, that becomes key."

Wildlife crossings, which are showing positive results in other states, might become more commonplace along known animal migration corridors in Idaho.

A new section of U.S. Highway 95 being built north of Coeur d'Alene features a $1 million wildlife underpass, designed to allow deer, elk, moose, bears and other species to cross freely, without endangering themselves.

Community Mourns Family Swept out to Sea

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) • Howard Kuljian and his family were out for a walk on a damp, overcast morning at Big Lagoon beach, playing fetch with their dog Fran as 10-foot surf churned the water just feet away like a washing machine.

Signs near the beach warned of "sneaker waves," the kind that suddenly roar ashore.

Kuljian tossed a stick that took the dog down to the water's edge, and in an instant, authorities said, a wave swallowed it, setting off a nightmarish scramble.

"Everything kind of snowballed from there," Coast Guard Lt. Bernie Garrigan said.

Kuljian's 16-year-old son, Gregory, ran to save the dog, only to be captured by the surging surf himself.

Kuljian, 54, followed, and then his wife, Mary Scott, 57. On shore, their 18-year-old daughter, Olivia, and Gregory's girlfriend could only watch.

Both parents' bodies were later recovered, but the boy — presumed dead — is still missing.

The dog eventually made it back to shore.

News of Saturday's tragedy shocked many in the small college town of Arcata on the rough Northern California coastline about 280 miles north of San Francisco.

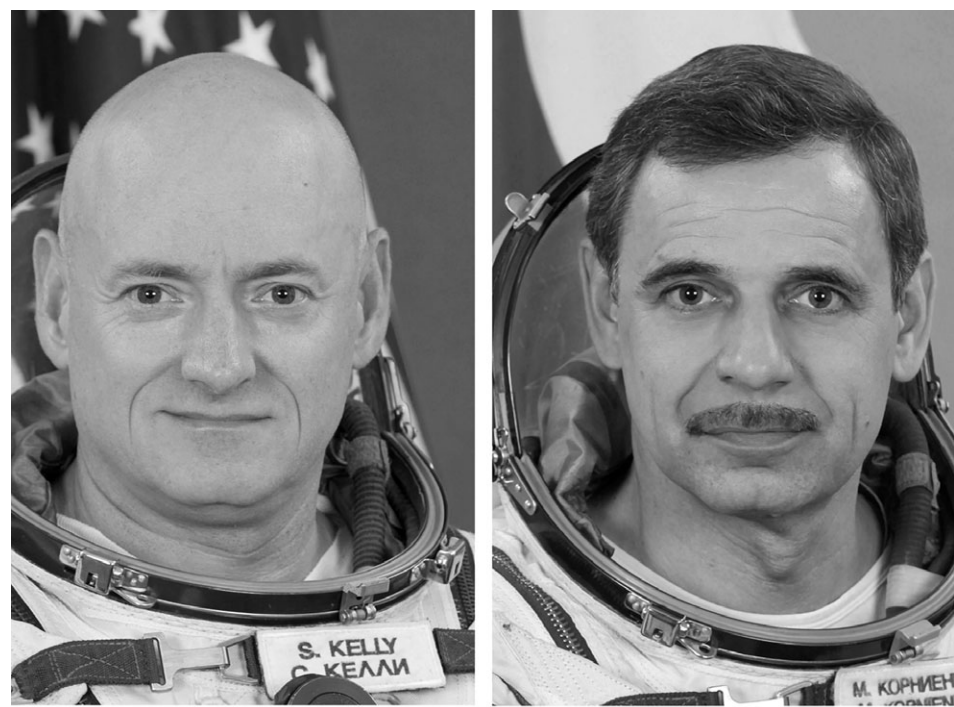

Students at Gregory's high school wore green in his memory Monday.

By late afternoon, more than 1,300 people "liked" a Facebook page set up by the teenager's friends called "Wear Green for Geddie" — using his nickname. Dozens tweeted tributes with the hash-tag #WearGreenForGeddie.

"I will always remember him no matter how long," wrote Emmalaya Owen on the Facebook page. "Especially how he was such an upbeat happy person or how he tried to put up 'Be Happy' propaganda posters he drew around school."

Others were trying to come to terms with the deaths. His sister graduated last year.

"He was just a friendly guy, and everyone who knew him liked him, and his family was very close," said Day Robins, a high school senior. She said Gregory and his family were active in school athletics and sailing.

Astronauts to Spend Year in Space

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) • A former space shuttle commander whose twin brother is married to former Rep. Gabrielle Giffords will attempt the longest spaceflight ever by an American.

NASA astronaut Scott Kelly and Russian cosmonaut Mikhail Kornienko will spend an entire year aboard the International Space Station beginning in 2015.

Both countries' space agencies announced the names of the two veteran spacefliers on Monday. The extended mission was approved almost two months ago to provide a medical foundation for future missions around the moon, as well as far-flung trips to asteroids and Mars.

Both men already have lived aboard the space station for six months. NASA wanted experienced space station astronauts to streamline the amount of training necessary for a one-year stint. Officials had said the list of candidates was very short. They will begin training next year.

"Their skills and previous experience aboard the space station align with the mission's requirements," Bill Gerstenmaier, head of human exploration for NASA, said in a statement. "The one-year increment will expand the bounds of how we live and work in space and will increase our knowledge regarding the effects of microgravity on humans as we prepare for future missions beyond low-Earth orbit."

Kelly's identical twin brother, Mark Kelly, retired from the astronaut corps last year and moved to Tucson, Ariz., his wife's hometown. The former congresswoman was critically wounded in an assassination attempt in January 2011, while Scott Kelly was living aboard the space station.

Astronauts normally spend about four to six months aboard the space station. The longest an American lived there was seven months, several years back.

Russia, though, will continue to hold the world space endurance record.

Three cosmonauts spent at least a year aboard the old Mir space station. A Russian physician, Valery Polyakov, logged nearly 15 continuous months there in the mid-1990s.

Boris Morukov, head of the Moscow-based Institute for Medical and Biological Problems, Russia's main space medicine research center, told the Interfax news agency that communications and food rations for Kelly and Kornienko may be limited during their yearlong mission to better simulate interplanetary travel.

POSSIBLE BOMB FOUND INSIDE BURLEY HOME

BY LAURIE WELCH
lwelch@magicvalley.com

BURLEY • The Cassia County Sheriff's Office will find out this week if a suspected bomb found Friday night at a Burley home contained explosives.

Cassia County Undersheriff George Warrell said the Twin Falls explosive ordinance disposal team took possession of the device and investigators expect to find out if it was a bomb on Thursday.

According to a Cassia County sheriff's report, a Burley resident reported she found a black backpack left by a man who had been staying in her home. It contained a cylinder-shaped object about four to six inches long and three-quarters of an inch around, wrapped in duct tape with what looked like a green fuse coming out of it.

The resident allowed a neighbor to move the object to just inside the front door of her home before police arrived.

According to the report the device "appeared to be a homemade explosive device."

Deputies evacuated the resident from her home and the Twin Falls explosives team was called in to take possession of the device.

The resident told deputies that the man was always bringing home "strange items" and sometimes disappeared for days at a time.

She said he had not been following her house rules and she had taken him to his sister's house. Since then he had been coming back to her residence and "bothering" her at all hours of the day, according to the report.

Quilts Blanket Prison Inmates with Hope

BY KATHY HEDBERG
Lewiston Tribune

COTTONWOOD • If not for the high chain-link fences topped with concertina wire, the guards and the multiple locks one must pass through to get anywhere, this might look like any ordinary home economics classroom.

A couple of gigantic clothes dryers tumble loudly in the prison's laundry, warming the room to a homey ambiance. Inmates, some perched at sewing machines, others spread-eagle over a long table cutting denim fabric into squares, put together pieces of several quilts that will soon be delivered far beyond these prison walls.

In the two years inmates at North Idaho Correctional Institution have been making quilts as part of a service learning project, about 75 have been distributed to St. Vincent de Paul, YWCA, Project Hope in Moscow and the Region II Juvenile Detention Center in Lewiston.

"We try to give enough to them each year that when a kid leaves he can take a quilt with him," said Emmett Wilson, a prison staff member who is in charge of the quilt project. "We can get rid of them as fast as we can get them made. So it's just to help people."

Two of the quilts designed with the mascots of University of Idaho and Boise State University are being raffled off to raise money for Project Compassion — an employee organization at the prison aimed at raising money to help out fellow employees in times of need. Tickets for the raffle cost $1 each, and Wilson said the drawing will take place Friday.

There is no colorful patchwork or fancy stitching on these quilts. All of them are made from recycled jeans, coats and other clothing used by the inmates or donated by the organizations the quilts help support.

The Best Western hotel in Moscow donated old white tablecloths the inmates will use for Christmas stockings and other projects.

And the quilts are unfilled. Wilson said there is no money for expensive batting.

But perhaps the greatest benefit of the project is in the way it helps these inmates — most of whom are being incarcerated for three to six months — gain a different perspective on themselves and what they want in life.

"It just gives you a sense of worth, doing something worthwhile," said 39-year-old Titus Smith of Lewiston. He is near completion of a term for felony injury to a child and intimidating a witness and is also the team leader of the other inmates for the quilt project.

"These quilts are going to help somebody," he said. "They're going to a good cause. They're going to be used by people who need them."

Smith said many of the inmates who work on the quilt project have no sewing background, but often possess other skills, such as drawing or design that can be utilized in the final product.

The team gets together to develop a theme for the quilts and then each member is assigned a task, which they work on throughout the day. Smith said there have been times he's worked 10 to 11 hours a day to finish a quilt for which there is an immediate demand.

In the meantime, as inmates cycle out of prison, new ones take their place and Smith helps train them for the project. Since he plans to be paroled soon, he is in the process of training other inmates to take his place.

"Prison diverts your life, it really does," Smith said. "This is a big timeout for me."

"I don't know if I'll be a sewer when I get out, but there's definitely something like a Zen to be had in running a sewing machine," he added. "It really helps the time go by."

Cole Berry, 33, of Nezperce, is one of the few inmates who have experience making quilts. It was something he did as a kid, he said, growing up in Nezperce and helping the ladies of St. John's Lutheran Church with their projects.

"It's relaxing. It's a stress reliever," Berry said "It's just brushing up on sewing I've been doing my whole life."

Woman Attacked Near Massacre Rocks

TIMES-NEWS

AMERICAN FALLS • Idaho State Police say they intervened in an alleged attack on a woman Sunday near the entrance to Massacre Rocks State Park.

At about 4:15 p.m., according to ISP, troopers investigated a report of a woman who was allegedly attacked by two men on Interstate 86 at milepost 28.

According to ISP, troopers initiated a "high-risk" traffic stop westbound on Interstate 86 near milepost 8 in Cassia County. Two male suspects were detained but the woman was not located in the vehicle.

Due to the nature of the alleged crime and the weather and temperature at the time, the Power County Search and Rescue team responded to help locate the woman. She was later found in her Pocatello home with visible injuries, according to ISP.

The Power County Sheriff's Office also assisted in the investigation. The names of the people involved have not been released.

In addition to HIV testing, Whitney Holman-Ginder — a board member for the Idaho Advisory Council on HIV and AIDS — is scheduled to speak at noon Wednesday.

She'll talk about how HIV is transmitted, as well as resources for people who have HIV/AIDS.

"There tends to be a lot of fear and stereotypes about how it's transmitted," she said.

Although there's no cure for AIDS, it can be treated. But Holman-Ginder said people won't know they're HIV-positive until they're tested.

One in five people who are HIV positive aren't aware they're living with the virus, according to the CDC.

Early detection can prevent a person from transmitting the virus to others.

And for people living with HIV/AIDS, Holman-Ginder said the earlier they start treatment, the better the results.

Petersen Bats Away Latest Links to Coaching Jobs

ASSOCIATED PRESS

BOISE • Chris Petersen is taking a different approach to the series of annual questions and speculation linking him to nearly every available head coaching job in college football.

This year, at least at the outset, Petersen is resorting to humor.

When asked Monday about his name being mentioned in the search for the bevy of new coaching vacancies, Petersen simply looked at his watch, noted the time and chided reporters for taking so long to once again bring up the subject.

“Twenty-two minutes, that’s better than I thought,” Petersen said. “It’s just rumors. That’s all I really want to say about this, and I say it every year.”

While Petersen’s tone publicly may be different, the message — at least right now — is the same: He has no intention to leave the Broncos.

Bruins Reloading for Another State Run

BY DAVID BASHORE
dbashore@magicvalley.com

TWIN FALLS • Asked what’s different between last season’s Twin Falls boys basketball team and this one, senior Damon Jones paused for thought.

“I don’t know, to be honest,” he said.

On paper there’s a ton different, but in essence the 6-foot-4 forward is dead-on.

The Bruins, who earned a state trophy for the fourth straight season in March, lost three key cogs in their machine — guards Eric Harr and Robert Sanchez, and forward Jared Allen — but like any quality program, the faces change but the collective remains largely unchanged.

This year’s edition is a junior-heavy squad that’s got senior leadership sprinkled in. There are 3-point marksmen, defensive specialists, grinders and athletes. It’s not the most talented team Matt Harr has ever coached, but it’s as hard-working as any you’ll find.

One thing that may set this squad apart is a willingness to run and attack the basket. In the past the Bruins won games by grinding defensively and riding hot 3-point shooting. This year they could try to push scores into the 60s and 70s with aggressiveness and athleticism.

“We want to attack, use our athletes,” said junior guard Connor Meyerhoeffer.

“Last year we relied on the 3-pointer too much — that can win you games, but we learned you’re not going to win a championship unless you do everything, including being aggressive and attack the basket.”

Connor Meyerhoeffer, twin brother Alec and cousin Kade Meyerhoeffer are just three of the 15 players on the varsity roster who could see extensive playing time in the first few games of the season — the Bruins are at Century on Wednesday, vs. Idaho Falls on Saturday and at Madison next Tuesday.

“We’ll probably all play in the first couple of games at least, but I think by the end we’ll have 10, 12 guys who can contribute without losing anything,” Connor Meyerhoeffer said.

Texas A&M quarterback Johnny Manziel (2) gets a lift from Luke Joeckel (76) after running 18 yards for a touchdown during the third quarter of Saturday's college football game against Missouri in College Station, Texas.

Heisman Hopeful Manziel Addresses the Media for First Time

ASSOCIATED PRESS

COLLEGE STATION, Texas • The legend of Johnny Football has grown all season while Johnny Manziel piled up yards and the Texas A&M Aggies piled up wins.

On Monday, the freshman quarterback finally weighed in on his catchy nickname as he spoke to the media for the first time all season.

"I think a lot of people here in Aggieland enjoy it," he said. "But I find it extremely funny."

The success of Manziel and the Aggies is no joke. His 4,600 yards of total offense have helped No. 10 A&M to its first 10-win season since 1998, and has him among the top contenders for the Heisman Trophy.

Manziel said he respected coach Kevin Sumlin's decision for him not to speak to the media this season because he's a freshman. But says he's happy to have a chance to talk about this season.

"It's kind of nice now to be able to kind of let you guys know how I am a little bit more," he said. "There's so many question marks out there."

Sumlin, who is in his first year at A&M after four seasons at Houston, raved about Manziel and said he was a catalyst for what his team was able to do in its first season in the Southeastern Conference.

"He's a tremendous competitor and a tremendous leader, and that's something that you really don't see in a player as a redshirt freshman," Sumlin said. "His leadership on and off the field throughout the season has made our season a real successful one."

Manziel has thrown for 3,419 yards and 24 touchdowns and ran for 1,181 yards and 19 more scores in a regular-season the Aggies capped with five straight wins including an upset of then top-ranked Alabama. He is second in the nation in total offense and broke Cam Newton's SEC record for total offense in a season on Saturday.

The quarterback is a bit surprised at how well Texas A&M did in its transition from the Big 12.

"I don't think I ever really envisioned how big this season would be for us," he said. "I don't really think anybody envisioned that we would win 10 games at the beginning of this season and that we would all have so much success as a team."

The celebrity status has been shocking to Manziel, who will turn 20 two days before the Dec. 8 Heisman announcement. He's still surprised when people approach him at restaurants and other places around College Station to ask for photos and autographs, even though it's become a daily occurrence.

"I'm a small-town kid," he said. "I come from Kerrville, Texas and I still see myself that way. I don't see myself as Johnny Football, I still see myself as Jonathan Manziel, a small town guy from Kerrville who is extremely fortunate and extremely blessed to be able to play football here at A&M."

He seemed amused by the attention given to some on-line photos of him at a Halloween party dressed as Scooby Doo alongside some beautiful and scantily-clad young women.

"That Halloween night was something where a lot of guys on the team dressed up and kind of just wanted to get away from all the seriousness and the grind that is college football season and go out and be kids again and dress up and just have fun," he said, without specifically addressing the pictures.

Manziel said winning the Heisman is something he dreamed about as a child, but that he hasn't spent a lot of time worrying about it or any other awards. No freshman has ever won the award given to college football's most outstanding player.

"I feel like that situation will play itself out, and whatever's meant to be will happen," he said. "I'm just doing whatever coach Sumlin and them ask me to do ... so we can take care of things in a bowl game."

But Manziel did admit that when he was younger he'd play college football video games and build a quarterback that would win the award as a freshman. Funny thing is, the players he made rarely resembled his 6-foot-1, 200-pound frame.

"When I created a video game player I probably made him 6-6, probably 230 pounds," he said. "I definitely didn't make him my size. But I've played so many video games maybe a few times I did. But typically I would have made him look something like Cam Newton."

Newton was the last SEC winner of the Heisman, picking it up in 2010. If Manziel comes away with the award, maybe somewhere in a small Texas town like the one he grew up in, a young boy will build a football player on his video game that does look like the A&M star.

NFL Playoffs Taking Shape, Still a Month To Go

ASSOCIATED PRESS

Start the playoffs now.

Well, just about.

More than a month from the end of the NFL season, and nearly every division race is decided. Atlanta and Denver have four-game leads and can earn titles with victories Sunday, although the Falcons also need Tampa Bay to lose — coincidentally, to the Broncos, who don't need any help if they win to walk off with the AFC West.

The Falcons (10-1) get an early start by hosting New Orleans on Thursday night. Considering the rivalry, and that Atlanta's only defeat this season has been to the Saints, taking the NFC South crown merely adds to the team's already soaring incentives.

"Ten and one is great, but I'll tell you what I've said since the beginning of the season: We're just jockeying for position," star tight end Tony Gonzalez said. "We just want to put ourselves in the best position, playing the best football. Right around this time is when you want to start jelling as a team and take it on into the playoffs because that's the most important thing."

Denver (8-3) already has swept San Diego, so one more victory puts Peyton Manning back in the playoffs with his new team. Oddly, Manning's Colts didn't always fare so well after early clinchings, but every coach, including his latest one, John Fox, will say that owning a postseason berth overrides any potential negatives.

"We can't influence what everyone else does over the last five games," Fox said. "We know we have to take care of this week and that'll be our mindset."

Manning's mindset is to keep the foot on the accelerator regardless of the standings.

"You certainly always want to get better late in the

Matt Ryan (2) and the Atlanta Falcons are one of five teams that can clinch a playoff berth this week.

season," he said. "You either get better, or you get worse and our goal is to get better every week."

Baltimore (9-2) can grab the AFC North crown by beating visiting Pittsburgh and having Cincinnati lose at San Diego. A division race that most projected to go down to the wire barely will get into December if that happens.

The Ravens should be thankful if that occurs, because they are as banged-up as anybody and they wouldn't need to rush defensive leader Ray Lewis back onto the field.

Baltimore also would like nothing more than to spend the entire playoffs at home, where it is 5-0 — especially if it can avoid a trip to Houston, where the Texans routed the Ravens 43-13 last month.

Houston (10-1) is in the unusual position of owning the AFC's best record, yet not being in line for an immediate clinching. Even if the Texans win at Tennessee on Sunday and the AFC South runner-up, the Colts, fall at Detroit, the division remains unsolved because Indianapolis and Houston meet twice in the final three weeks.

A wild-card berth is within reach for the Texans, but that's hardly what they're aiming for.

No team wants to trek to Foxborough in the playoffs, even if the Patriots have been eliminated from the Super Bowl chase at home in two of the last three years. New England (8-3) can wrap up the AFC East by beating Miami on Sunday because the Patriots would own all the necessary tiebreakers in the division.

Bill Belichick is not likely to let up a bit even when that happens. Did anyone notice how long Tom Brady was on the field during the 49-19 romp over the Jets on Thanksgiving night, a game decided in the second period?

The only truly close division through 11 games is the NFC North, where Chicago (8-3) has a one-game edge on Green Bay, but has lost to the Packers. The Bears also lost a handful of starters to injuries Sunday, so holding off the Packers could be problematic. Of course, Green Bay also is plagued by injuries to stars such as Clay Matthews, Greg Jennings and Charles Woodson.

That one could go down to the season finales, when the Bears are at Detroit and the Packers visit the Vikings, who are in the wild-card derby. Green Bay is at Chicago on Dec. 16.

Both of last season's NFC championship game teams are in good shape in their divisions, but could be tested before clinching. The Super Bowl champion Giants are two games up on Washington and Dallas, and they are at the Redskins on Monday night. The Skins have a better record within the NFC East and might push New York to the limit if they can win in prime time.

The 49ers' rare tie has not hurt their standing in the standings. At 8-2-1, they lead Seattle by 2 1-2 games, and the Seahawks have dropped all three NFC West contests. The teams meet Dec. 23 at Seattle, but by then it could be too late to make any difference.

Auburn and Tennessee, plus Boston College and Purdue.

But he's also hard to ignore as a prime candidate, especially since the Broncos have been wildly successful during his seven-year tenure in Boise. Since taking over, Petersen has compiled a record of 82-8 and a winning percentage of .911, the best at the FBS level.

During his time, Boise State has jumped conferences, getting more competitive along the way, played in two BCS bowls and earned respect nationally as a small-school program all too capable of beating teams from the biggest and best conferences.

But at the same time, it's Boise State's size — or lack thereof — that fuels rumors that he's interested in coaching elsewhere, whether it's the small capacity of Bronco Stadium, inferior team facilities or the hassles and uncertainty caused by conference realignment and landing in a conference that automatically qualifies for the BCS.

"It is what it is," Petersen joked about the latest series of stories. "It means zero here. We don't even pay attention to it."

Petersen acknowledged the rumor mill has in the past confounded recruiting efforts, then he quickly directed the press conference back to football questions and the 25th-ranked Broncos' upcoming game with Nevada.

Earlier this year, Petersen signed a contract extension that pays him more than $2 million per year. The deal keeps him under contract through January 2017.

In today's deal from the Seattle Nationals last year, South reached three no-trump after his vulnerable opponents had done a lot of bidding. So it was fair to assume suits wouldn't split.

The heart queen held the trick on opening lead. A second heart to the ace was followed by a third heart, on which declarer had to discard from dummy. Name your poison!

South erred in practice — and maybe in theory as well — by pitching a spade. He then crossed to the club king to play a diamond to his ace (hoping East had a doubleton queen or jack, in which case the suit might be set up without letting West on lead).

The 4-1 break in diamonds — disappointing, but hardly surprising — brought South up short. East discarded a spade, and the best declarer could do was to finesse in spades against East and hope for the clubs to break. That chance failed, but declarer had already given up his best play for the ninth trick.

Had he pitched a club from dummy at trick three, play would have continued precisely as before. But after a spade to the jack holds, declarer cashes his spade king and plays three rounds of clubs. Because the spade A-10 remains in dummy, declarer would have been able to endplay East in clubs to lead a spade into dummy's A-10 at the end for his ninth trick.

ANSWER: The choices are to jump to five diamonds (don't even think of just bidding four diamonds) or to bid three no-trump. The upside of bidding five diamonds is that it might get you to slam — you'd be delighted if partner raised you. The downside is that nine tricks at no-trump may be easier to attain. Put me down as an unconvinced three-no-trump bidder; partner doesn't often have the perfect hand.

Today is Tuesday, Nov. 27, the 332nd day of 2012. There are 34 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight:
On Nov. 27, 1942, during World War II, the Vichy French navy at Toulon scuttled its ships and submarines to keep them out of the hands of German troops.

TODAY IN HISTORY

On this date:
In 1839, the American Statistical Association was founded in Boston.
In 1901, the U.S. Army War College was established in Washington, D.C.
In 1910, New York's Pennsylvania Station officially opened.
In 1911, the stage comedy "The Playboy of the Western World" by J.M. Synge received a hostile reception in New York because of its portrayal of Irish characters. Theatrical producer David Merrick was born in St. Louis.
In 1937, the musical revue "Pins and Needles," produced by the International Ladies Garment Workers Union, opened in New York.
In 1939, the play "Key Largo," by Maxwell Anderson, opened at the Ethel Barrymore Theater in New York.

In 1962, the first Boeing 727 was rolled out at the company's Renton Plant.
In 1970, Pope Paul VI, visiting the Philippines, was slightly wounded at the Manila airport by a dagger-wielding Bolivian painter disguised as a priest.
In 1973, the Senate voted 92-3 to confirm Gerald R. Ford as vice president, succeeding Spiro T. Agnew, who'd resigned.

In 1978, San Francisco Mayor George Moscone and City Supervisor Harvey Milk, a gay-rights activist, were shot to death inside City Hall by former supervisor Dan White.
In 1983, 181 people were killed when a Colombian Avianca Airlines Boeing 747 crashed near Madrid's Barajas airport.

In 1989, a bomb blamed on drug traffickers destroyed a Colombian Avianca Boeing 727, killing all 107 people on board and three people on the ground.
Ten years ago: U.N. specialists began a new round of weapons inspections in Iraq. President George W. Bush appointed former Secretary of State Henry Kissinger to lead an investigation into why the government had failed to foil the September 11 attacks. (The following month, Kissinger stepped down, citing controversy over potential conflicts of interest with his business clients.) President Bush gave the go-ahead to open U.S. highways to Mexican trucks.

Five years ago: Israeli and Palestinian leaders at a Mideast conference in Annapolis, Md., agreed to formally restart peace talks. A Somali immigrant (Nuradin Abdi) was sentenced to 10 years in prison for plotting to blow up an Ohio shopping mall. Washington Redskins safety Sean Taylor died after being shot in his Florida home by an intruder. Bill Willis, a Hall of Fame guard with the Cleveland Browns and Ohio State's first black football All-American, died in Columbus, Ohio, at age 86. Dr. J. Robert Cade, inventor of Gatorade, died at age 80.

DEAR ABBY: I am writing to you in response to "Not on My Watch" (Sept. 19), about the little boy who repeatedly exposes himself to other children.

DEAR ABBY Jeanne Phillips

There are several issues happening with this boy that bother me. The repeated exposure of his private parts to others is the first.

Young children who are sexually abused may not have the developmental or verbal capabilities to disclose what is happening.

While it is important to protect the children this boy interacts with, the more appropriate response to this situation would be to calmly explain to him why his behavior is inappropriate.

If he discloses something during the discussion, it should be immediately reported to the local child protective services and/or police.

DEAR JUDY: Your letter echoes the sentiments of the majority of responses I received about 5-year-old "Billy." Thank you for articulating it so clearly.

DEAR ABBY: My wife witnessed a similar scenario last year during a play date. A 4-year-old girl was observed putting her hands down the pants of boys her age.

The fact that he wants to keep it "secret" indicates that it is a learned behavior. That his parents are "burying their heads in the sand" may indicate that they know about the abuse or are the abusers themselves.

That boy should be taken to see a doctor for a full evaluation, and a call to social services is in order.

Dear Abby is written by Abigail Van Buren, also known as Jeanne Phillips, and was founded by her mother, Pauline Phillips.

To order "How to Write Letters for All Occasions," send your name and mailing address, plus check or money order for $7 (U.S. funds) to: Dear Abby - Letter Booklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, IL 61054-0447.

IF NOVEMBER 27 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: Life is good. During the next few weeks, you personify the holiday spirit and may find that others are supportive of everything you do. This is a good time to ask for favors or advice. As the beginning of the year arrives, the social whirl might go to your head and you might expect more than your fair share of the spotlight. If you aren't in a committed relationship, hold out for something better, as your priorities could change in the new year. Late February and early March is the best time to put crucial plans into motion or to make a binding promise.

HOROSCOPE
Jeraldine Saunders

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Finish what you start. Don't harm your reputation by shirking responsibilities. See your current project through to the end no matter how difficult it may be. Hold off on spending except for absolutely essential items

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Enjoy it while it lasts. Expect a blissful evening with the object of your affection when all the romantic signals are green. In business matters, it will be to your benefit to adopt a wait and see approach.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Speak your mind. Others may wonder what side you are on until you make your position known. Clear the air by having candid and open conversations with colleagues. You'll fare better running with the pack.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Don't press the issue. If someone isn't coming around to your way of thinking, just let it slide for now. Additional pressure may create a greater rift than before. Patience and restraint will yield dividends.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): If you want to get anything done, then do it yourself. You could be waiting for quite some time if you expect someone to come help you out. That means simply rolling up your sleeves and getting your hands dirty.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Face the challenge. A monumental task that lies before you may be more of a test than you realize. Whether you complete the task is unimportant; it's the way you approach the problem that will be under the microscope.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Socializing is relatively unimportant when compared to business matters, so don't slack off on work just for the sake of a good time. Spending a few bucks on a tantalizing treasure won't hurt if the price is within reason.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Cupid's arrow finds its mark. You'll find yourself a magnet for romance and the flames of passion will erupt into a full-blown inferno tonight. Let business matters slide for the moment.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Feel the love, as your significant other may be set on lavishing you with gifts and attention. Don't let financial matters distract you from what truly counts. Delay making decisions until tomorrow.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Keep it to yourself. You may have a long list of grievances to share with the world, but the world has its own problems to deal with. Focus on making improvements rather than being critical.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): What failed in the past will most likely fail in the future. Don't repeat mistakes when they can easily be corrected with a new strategy. Thinking outside the box may ruffle some feathers, but will get the job done.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Sometimes, things just don't go your way. Adversity is a part of life, but it is how you deal with a pitfall that makes all the difference. Quick thinking can turn a negative into a positive.
