Chobani to Start Production by Dec. 17

BY MELISSA DAVLIN

TWIN FALLS • Yogurt fans: It's time to celebrate.

Chobani is hosting a grand opening celebration on Dec. 17.

According to an invitation to Twin Falls city staff obtained by the Times-News, the ceremony begins at 3 p.m. Dec. 17 at the Chobani site.

The grand opening ceremony takes place almost exactly a year after Chobani's Dec. 19, 2011, groundbreaking ceremony. Since then, contractors have built the approximately 950,000-square-foot production facility in southeast Twin Falls. It's the company's second facility in the U.S.

Melissa Stagnaro, Chobani's corporate communications director, said Chobani will be producing yogurt by the grand opening.

"Our plan is to ramp up production over a period of time," she wrote in an email to the Times-News.

When the factory is at full capacity, it will produce as many as 4.2 million cases of yogurt per week, according to a Nov. 5 presentation to the Twin Falls City Council by John Winnie, project manager for Chobani's Twin Falls plant.

At that meeting, Winnie indicated there are plans for future growth at Chobani Idaho, but declined to elaborate.

The company is still planning the grand opening event, Stagnaro said, and has yet to decide if it will be open to the general public or by invitation only.

Xavier Mulls Lower Building Lease Price

BY JULIE WOOTTON
jwootton@magicvalley.com

TWIN FALLS • Xavier Charter School and its landlord have negotiated a lower lease price for the school building.

Head of Schools Thad Biggers said school officials are encouraged by the agreement with Twin Falls School Development LLC.

The agreement is for this fiscal year, which ends June 30, 2013.

"The lease reduction is a significant step forward and will ensure that Xavier is able to operate for the remainder of this fiscal year," Biggers wrote in an email to the Times-News.

Before a lower lease price was negotiated, Xavier was slated to pay nearly $810,000 in rent this fiscal year.

That made up about 30 percent of the school's operating budget, Biggers said in September.

Biggers declined to provide details about the new lease amount or school finances Tuesday. He said he's waiting until a Friday public meeting so the school board can talk directly with stakeholders.

"Our big thing is that we want people to come," he said.

A lot of rumors are circulating, Biggers said, and the meeting will be a chance to dispel them.

The meeting, open to community members, is scheduled for 6:30 p.m. Friday at Xavier.

Topics of discussion will include the proposed purchase of the school building on North College Road, as well as the school's current and future debt capacity.

Notice of Defect

In September, the school received a notice of defect by the Idaho Public Charter School Commission for "failure to demonstrate fiscal soundness."

"What's going on at Xavier is that there are a few items of pretty significant concern with regard to their finances," commission director Tamara Baysinger told the Times-News in September.

The commission will review Xavier's corrective action plan during a Dec. 4 meeting in Boise.

Over the past four years, there have been about 60 notices of defect issued to Idaho public charter schools. Xavier received notices in 2007 and 2009.

Issues were resolved, or plans are in the works, in all but one case statewide.

Where is Patrick Beavers?

Fifteen years after man disappeared, Jerome family holds out hope he will be found.

JEROME • Every time a body is found, Barbara Zysett waits for a call. Is it her son Patrick, or will this body be ruled out too - by a different shoe size, mismatched dental records or a scar that's too long or too short?

Patrick Beavers disappeared from his Jerome home the night of April 3, 1997 when he was 24 years old. He cut up his identification card, left his wallet, rifle, coat and tax forms, along with a note.

"My Will," he wrote at the top. "Mom gets everything. Sorry but my time here is up. Love you all, no blame. Exsept [sic] my own. P Beavers."

Fifteen years later, the family is still hoping someone knows something or remembers seeing Beavers, a large bearded man, walking that night.

The night he left, Zysett said she and her husband Merle Zysett

Stocks Slide On 'Fiscal Cliff' Warning

NEW YORK (AP) • Stocks slumped on Wall Street Tuesday after Senate Majority Leader Harry Reid said he was frustrated by the lack of progress in talks over the U.S. budget impasse in Washington.

The Dow Jones industrial average closed down 89.24 points to 12,878.13. The Dow and other indexes had been moving between small gains and losses for most of the day, then turned lower after Reid's comments in the early afternoon.

Wendy's Robber Gets Prison Sentence

BY ALISON GENE SMITH
alismith@magicvalley.com

JEROME • A Jerome man will spend about two more years in prison for robbing the Jerome Wendy's.

Taylor Cnossen, who pleaded guilty to the January robbery in April, was originally sentenced to complete a retained-jurisdiction program with an underlying prison sentence of 15-30 years.

At the time, Jerome County District Judge John Butler recommended

Cnossen for a therapeutic community program, but when he was admitted to the Idaho Department of Correction, he was placed in a 90-day drug and alcohol problem instead, said Tracy Brandeborg, Butler's law clerk.

After Cnossen completed the program, he was recommended for probation, but Butler felt Cnossen needed more time in the system.

"He kind of felt it minimized what happened," Brandeborg said. "He didn't believe this was a drug and alcohol related crime."

Instead, Butler sent Cnossen back to prison with a much shorter minimum time.

Cnossen's modified sentence is 2.5 to 20 years in prison with credit for 230 days already served. Butler recommended that Cnossen spend the time in a therapeutic community.

Cnossen must also pay $7,510 in court costs and fines along with $1,041 in restitution to Wendy's.

Nikolas Maria, who also pleaded guilty to robbing the restaurant, was sentenced to a traditional 180-day rider program to determine if probation was appropriate for him. If he doesn't successfully complete the program, he could spend 10 to 25 years in prison.

Jorge Banuelos, Branden Galbreath and Cesar Granados were charged in the robbery and accused of waiting in a vehicle for Maria and Cnossen. Banuelos and Galbreath both received a minimum of two years in prison while Granados is believed to have fled the state.

A Unique Angle

During a windy afternoon this month, I had a chance to cover the Twin Falls Fire Department and Magic Valley Paramedics Special Operations Rescue Team train on a 40-foot rock wall in Rock Creek Park.

Smith

The teams spend a lot of time preparing to rescue people on the rock faces and canyons in southern Idaho. It sounded like a locksmith convention at this training as the climbers' carabineers clinked together on their harnesses. One by one, they filed down the wall practicing scenarios, which included helping stranded rock climbers who get stuck on a vertical rock face.

I asked members of the fire department if I could throw on a harness and belay down the wall. Before I descended the rock face, I spent time photographing the training along the edge of the wall. It really helped to move around and photograph without worrying about falling 40 feet as I was tied in. Of course, without the proper equipment the rescue personnel would not have allowed me to get so close to the edge.

I was so excited to go down the wall - this is one of the best parts of the job. As I climbed over the edge, one of the trainers looked at me and asked if I were ready. I paused for a moment, thought about it and then pushed back, allowing all of my weight to rest in the harness. I got some great angles during the descent and had a lot of fun.

The Need Remains

A few hours before The Salvation Army's Thanksgiving meal last week, there was a flurry of activity in the building.

Volunteers unloaded boxes of food, while others were in the kitchen finishing up the cooking.

Business manager Nicki Kroese told me that getting ready to serve a Thanksgiving meal to those in need is a weeklong process. Volunteers worked from 8 a.m. - 8 p.m. every day leading up to Wednesday's event.

Though Thanksgiving is over now, The Salvation Army is still seeking donations of turkeys and other food for Christmas food boxes for those in need.

Kroese said she encourages community members to think outside the box. She said the organization would greatly appreciate any donation, such as people picking up a few extra items that are on sale at the grocery store.

Black Friday Creeps Up

Some company officials claim the decision was made to help ease the frenzy induced by

I think there's irony in the fact the event is now encroaching on the one holiday designed to encourage us to spend time with family and friends and reflect on all we have. Many people are rushing to get through the meal so they can chase down the next purchase. Lots of professions require working on holidays: doctors, firefighters, police and sometimes journalists. I dashed around the mall making pictures of the scenes unfolding around me. I looked for the quiet amid the bells and the chaos. I saw delight, frustration and exhaustion among the throngs of shoppers surrounding me.

I suppose Black Friday is something different for everyone; for me, it's people-watching and picture-making. See ya next year.

A Traveler Who Found Home

Last week I have the opportunity to write about the heroic story of Idaho National Guard Sgt. Jesus "Jesse" Gonzalez and his role in saving Shaunna Coit's life, after she had a seizure while driving.

Smith

Just as fascinating as the story of that day is Gonzalez's background. Gonzalez was born in California to a rural migrant worker family. His family traveled throughout California, Oregon, Washington and Idaho.

"We followed the crops around," he said. "My dad decided that Idaho was the best place to raise his kids."

His family bought a small house in Wilder where Gonzalez graduated from high school. Just after high school graduation in 1985, Gonzalez joined the United States Navy. Like most small-town kids, Gonzalez said he just wanted to get out and see the world. He served in several conflicts including Operation Iraqi Freedom.

"After my first war, I was like 'Idaho ain't so bad,'" he said.

After nine years he got out but soon joined the Army National Guard and became a recruiter. Now, he's raising his own children in Idaho as well.

Meteorologist

Preparing For Wet Weather

A series of storms will begin to work through the region starting this evening and continue into the weekend. Some estimates of rain could range from three quarters of an inch to one inch by the end of the weekend. With this system, the valleys will see mostly rain. Elevations above 6,000 feet could see several inches of snow.

Clouds will be on the increase as we go throughout the day as the next storm system approaches. Rain should arrive as we go into Wednesday evening and early Thursday morning. Temperatures will remain above average by nearly ten degrees. The average high for Twin Falls is around 42 degrees, and we should see highs in the low 50s for the next several days.

There will be a lull or break in the rain during the day on Thursday, before the next stronger batch of rain arrives Friday. This rain will continue through the day and into the weekend. Winds will increase as the storms systems move through. Some gusts could reach 30 to 40 mph on Friday and through the weekend. Mountain locations could see a foot or more of snow above 6,000 feet by the end of the weekend. That's great news for local ski resorts like Pomerelle and Magic Mountain.

Fewer T.F. Students Seek Early Graduation

BY JULIE WOOTTON
jwootton@magicvalley.com

TWIN FALLS • Though graduating early might sound appealing, fewer Twin Falls high-schoolers this year are going that route.

So far this school year, 13 students have applied to graduate early.

Six of those requests haven't been approved, but are on the school board's agenda for later this month.

Twin Falls School District spokeswoman Beth Pendergrass said more early graduation requests could come in before the Dec. 10 meeting.

Twin Falls High Principal Ben Allen said numbers are down a little this year, but fluctuate year-to-year depending on the group of students.

By this time last school year, 21 students in the Twin Falls School District had applied to graduate early.

At Twin Falls High alone, there were 11 early graduates last school year. And six of them finished a full year ahead of schedule.

"Up until two years ago, it was a rarity to have someone who wanted to graduate a year early," Allen said.

One common thread he has noticed is that the vast majority of early graduates are girls.

Allen said he doesn't know the reasons why students pursue early graduation, but there are a lot of opportunities out there.

There are both pros and cons that come with graduating early, he said.

Many high-schoolers are involved in activities and aren't ready to leave yet.

"They still have a big tie to their high school," Allen said.

Also, the Dual Credit for Early Completers Program no longer exists, since it was part of the Students Come First laws that were overturned earlier this month.

The program paid for students to earn up to 36 college credits during their senior year of high school if they met state graduation requirements early.

In the Minidoka County School Dis-

Semi Driver Cited for I-84 Crash

TIMES-NEWS

BLISS • A semitrailer driver was cited Tuesday after a crash that blocked a segment of Interstate 84.

ISP was called at about 12:45 p.m. to the crash, at milepost 142 about one mile east of the Bliss exit.

According to a press release, William Maroon, 68, of Harrisburg, Ore., was headed east in a 2012 Freightliner when he drove off of the right shoulder and overcorrected. The semi tipped onto its side and slid to a halt, blocking the median and both east-bound lanes.

Maroon, who was taken to North Canyon Medical Center, was cited for inattentive driving, according to ISP. He was wearing a seatbelt.

The crash blocked the eastbound lanes for about 1 1/2 hours. The left lane was blocked until approximately 3:40 p.m.

Feds Scale Back Proposed N. Idaho Caribou Habitat

BOISE (AP) • The U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service is scaling back the acreage it wants in northern Idaho and eastern Washington as critical habitat for woodland caribou.

The agency announced Tuesday it will set aside a little more than 30,000 acres in the southern Selkirk Mountains in Boundary County in Idaho and Washington's Pend Oreille County.

The service initially proposed more than 375,500 acres for caribou, but modified its plans after taking public comment and reviewing species population data.

The decision was cheered by Idaho's congressional delegation, which criticized the agency's original plan as overreaching and an infringement on human activities in the backcountry.

Republican U.S. Rep. Raul Labrador says the agency deserves praise for listening to the public's concerns and adjusting its plans.

ISP Still Investigating Fatal Crash

TIMES-NEWS

HANSEN • Idaho State Police continued to investigate a Sunday crash that killed one person and left another injured at the Hansen Bridge.

The preliminary investigation shows the driver who was killed, Jeffrey Evans, 53, of California, was at fault in the crash for making an unsafe U-turn, ISP Lt. Kevin Haight said.

Haight said investigators are still looking at why Evans made the turn and if there's any culpability for the other driver, Shane Scott, 40, of Filer. Investigators are also identifying the cause of the crash, but Haight said it appears Scott did not have enough time to avoid Evans.

ISP responded to the crash near milepost 4 of Idaho Highway 50 shortly after 5:30 p.m. Sunday. According to a press release, Jeffrey Evans, 53, and passenger Susan Evans, 59, both of Grass Valley, Calif., were in a vehicle on the highway's shoulder. Shane Scott, 40, of Filer, was driving west in a 2002

GMC Sierra with passengers Diana Scott, 40, and Trevor Scott, 14, also of Filer.

Jeffrey Evans succumbed to his injuries at the scene of the crash. Diana Scott was also injured, according to ISP. She was flown to St. Luke's Magic Valley Medical Center in Twin Falls. Officials said Monday she is in good condition.

Jerome Officer Cited in Crash

TIMES-NEWS

JEROME • A Jerome police officer was cited Tuesday for his part in a Saturday crash.

At about 6:30 p.m. Saturday, Idaho State Police investigated the crash. According to ISP, Officer Ed Gates, 32, of Jerome, was southbound on South Lincoln Avenue in a Dodge Charger police car. At the same time, Travis Mesheski, 32, of Twin Falls, traveled northbound on the same road in a Nissan Versa.

According to ISP, Gates turned in front of Mesheski's vehicle at a green light and struck the Versa.

On Tuesday, Gates was issued a citation for failure to yield from a left hand turn, ISP Lt. Kevin Haight said. Haight said the citation is an infraction penalty, not a criminal charge.

"It's just like a speeding ticket," he said.

Jerome Police Chief Dan Hall said he will review ISP's final report and then do an administrative review. The review is to see if any department policies were violated, he said. After that, some personnel action could be taken, he said.

Hall said Gates was on duty doing a traffic emphasis patrol at the time of the crash.

Beavers

night, in bad weather. According to almanac.com, an online weather almanac, the low temperature the night of April 3, 1997 was 21 degrees. Van Zant-Lewis said she remembers it was snowing hard.

According to a Times-News article from April 13, 1997, about 40 people, including members of the Jerome County Search and Rescue, Jerome County sheriff's deputies and Jerome police officers, searched an area south of Jerome, including the north rim of the Snake River Canyon. One boat on the river and a light airplane were also used in the search.

At the time, Beavers had no physical or mental health problems, Zyssett said. Because of that, if a police officer believed if they found him safe they could take little action.

"It's a wellness check," Zyssett said. "If they stop him somewhere, they can ask him to call home."

Not Giving Up

Jerome Police Sgt. Duane Rubnik has been working on the case since about 2003, he said. Three or four times a year, he gets a tip about someone who might be Beavers and follows up.

Rubnik said the case is unusual, especially for a small town like Jerome. Usually, if someone decides they want to leave town, there are clues, he said.

"The case tends to point that way, to suicide, but I don't have anything to prove or disprove that," he said. "We just have to keep going."

Although the initial Canyon search didn't turn anything up, Rubnik said Beavers could still be close to home.

"They did a search of the canyon, but it's so expansive you could search every day for a year and not find anything," he said.

A Curious Mind

Missing persons reports on several missing person websites noted Beavers left after having an argument with his step-father about his unemployment.

Zyssett said Beavers had a habit of working seven days a week with 12-hour shifts for a year or two, saving his money, then taking several months off. During his time off, he would read and study subjects he was interested in.

"He was offered a promotion at Cactus Petes," she said. "He said, 'No. I don't want to wear a suit.'"

At work, the family said Beavers grabbed the attention of the casino floor, with groups of people gathering around him as he shouted like a carnival barker for people to play the game Hot Button.

At home, he was much quieter.

"Not necessarily anti-social," Zyssett said. "He'd join in the conversation and say what he wanted and then start reading."

Zyssett described her son as something of a homebody.

"He was a reader," she said.

Beavers read so much and so widely he sometimes fooled people into thinking he'd worked on a cattle ranch or as a cook, or lived in Chicago, Los Angeles or another city when he'd simply read a book about it.

"He was always in the gifted programs at school," Barbara said. "But he was an underachiever. If he wasn't interested he didn't do the work."

Many Theories

At first, when her brother went missing, Van Zant-Lewis said her mind jumped to suicide. Her own father killed himself nearly 30 years to the day of Patrick's disappearance and her grandfather also committed suicide.

Since then, Van Zant-Lewis said she's considered a dozen scenarios of what happened to her brother.

"Suicide; he could be here and we don't know; he could be living another life with a wife and kids. Foul play crossed my mind," she said.

According to his family, Beavers loved to walk. After the family was in a terrible car accident near Kings Canyon he never drove again, Barbara said. He'd often walk from their Jerome home to Twin Falls, or take an hours-long hike at Massacre Rocks State Park or to Balanced Rock without a second thought, she said.

"A few years before he disappeared he wanted to hitchhike across the country and try other jobs," Zyssett said.

Zyssett said he got the idea from one of her husband's employees who had traveled the country for years.

"I vetoed it," she said. "I said, 'Did you notice that he doesn't have any teeth?'"

When he disappeared,

ASHLEY SMITH • TIMES-NEWS

Barbara Zyssett talks about her son Patrick Beavers who has been missing since 1997.

Zyssett said that's what she assumed he did, but as the years went on with no contact, she's had her doubts.

While Beavers never disappeared before, he loved reading about mysteries and even came up with his own.

When they lived in the San Francisco Bay area, Merle Zyssett said Beavers and he worked at different 7-11 stores across town.

"He'd call me and say 'I have a plan,'" Merle Zyssett said.

Then Beavers would share a plot he came up with for how to rob a convenience store and get away with it or how to disappear without a trace.

"He loved reading books about the perfect crime," Barbara Zyssett said.

It's also possible Beavers wanted to go to Texas, where his father lived, Van Zant-Lewis said.

Beavers sometimes talked about making the trip to find his father there. After he disappeared, Van Zant-Lewis said she found the father, but no sign of Beavers.

Zyssett has retinitis pigmentosa, which left her legally blind since she was 15. The disease slowly narrows the field of vision as time progresses. Van Zant-Lewis said Beavers had gone to an eye doctor who said he may have inherited the disease shortly before he disappeared. For a while, he wore dark wrap-around glasses because his eyes were sensitive to light

Still Searching

In the last 15 years, Van Zant-Lewis has spent countless hours of research trying to find what could have happened to her brother. She said at times she'll spend weeks poring over missing person websites, matching up missing people to death records and ruling out her brother.

The whole family sent DNA to investigators, and recently, Rubnik said he sent DNA from Beavers' father and half-brother to the University of Texas' research lab.

Every sheriff's office in the continental United States received fliers, Van Zant-Lewis said.

Zyssett said she gave stacks of fliers to truck drivers who were heading to Canada to pass out fliers there.

For years, the family spent weekends driving around leaving fliers with Patrick's picture at rest stops, diners and every telephone pole in the towns they'd visit.

By the time Beavers would have been in his 30s, police told the family their photos were beginning to be too outdated to make a match.

"We have no idea what he'd look like now," Van Zant-Lewis said.

Starr Corp. Wins Cassia Courts Contract

BY LAURIE WELCH
lwelch@magicvalley.com

BURLEY • Cassia County officials awarded the construction contract bid for the county's new judicial building to Starr Corp. on Monday.

The company submitted the second-lowest bid at $1.7 million.

The county received 10 construction bids on the renovation project that will move the county's courts to the new complex, located a block south of the courthouse.

Cassia County Clerk Joe Larsen said the lowest bidder, Harris General

Contractor at $1,684,000, failed to complete all the necessary documents and was disqualified.

The bids included several alternatives for up-grades.

But, Larsen said the commissioners did not make any further decisions on Monday.

The contract calls for work to begin in January with a completion date in late summer.

The building at the corner of Overland Avenue and 16th Street used to be an old grocery store and will be retrofitted to suit the county courts' needs.

Search on for Wash. Rafter Missing on Snake River

GRANGEVILLE, Idaho (AP) • The Idaho County sheriff's office in Grangeville, Idaho, has begun a search for a 54-year-old Seattle man who had planned a rafting trip on the Snake River.

KHQ-TV of Spokane, Wash., reports that Alexander Belyaev left the Hells Canyon Dam area last Friday, planning to raft to Pittsburg Landing where he had left his vehicle. Belyaev was reported overdue when he did not return to work on Tuesday.

The sheriff's office found the man's vehicle at Pittsburg Landing and searched the river by boat until dark.

Search crews planned to resume their efforts Wednesday.

Search in Central Utah for Missing Gillette Plane

GLENROCK, Wyo. (AP) • Searchers in central Utah are looking for a missing plane from Gillette, Wyo.

The plane disappeared from radar on Sunday shortly after making a refueling stop in Fillmore, Utah. It was heading from Bakersfield, Calif., back to Gillette.

The Glenrock Bird reports that four planes helped search for the missing plane around Fillmore on Tuesday.

The wing chaplain of the Civil Air Patrol in Utah, Stu Boyd, says no transmitter signals from the plane have been detected.

The Gillette News Record reports the plane was carrying pilot Matthew Ahrens, passenger Trista Meyer and her 9-year-old daughter, Shyann Lenz. Meyer's mother, Myra Fees, tells the newspaper Ahrens is an experienced pilot, and Meyer has been working toward her pilot's license.

Second Coalition Challenges Wyoming Wolf Delisting

BY BEN NEARY
Associated Press

CHEYENNE, Wyo. • A second coalition of environmental groups has filed a federal lawsuit against the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service claiming it violated the Endangered Species Act by ending federal protections for wolves in Wyoming this fall.

The eight groups filed a lawsuit Tuesday in federal court in Denver. They say Wyoming's management plan classifying wolves as predators that can be shot on sight in most of the state is inadequate.

As of early this week, more than 50 wolves have been killed in Wyoming since the state took over their management Oct. 1. Of that number, Wyoming hunters have killed a few dozen wolves in a designated trophy hunting zone outside Yellowstone National Park, while most of the rest have been killed in other areas of the state where wolves are unprotected.

"The current hunting regulations and wolf management policy in Wyoming that basically leaves wolves vulnerable in 85 percent of the state year-round, I think are almost a dereliction of duty, or a form of negligence on the part of the state in terms of wolf management," said Duane Short, wild species program director at the Biodiversity Conservation Alliance in Laramie.

The groups that filed Tuesday's lawsuit are Alliance for the Wild Rockies, Biodiversity Conservation Alliance, Conservation Congress, Friends of Animals, Friends of the Clearwater, National Wolfwatcher Coalition, Western Watersheds Project and WildEarth Guardians.

Steve Segin, spokesman for the Fish and Wildlife Service in Colorado, said Tuesday the agency had no comment on pending litigation.

Wyoming has committed to maintaining at least 10 breeding pairs of wolves and at least 100 individual animals outside of Yellowstone and the Wind River Indian Reservation, in the central part of the state. Wildlife managers estimated there were roughly 300 wolves outside of Yellowstone, where no hunting is allowed, when the state took over.

Wolves were largely killed off in the West by early last century. The federal government reintroduced wolves to Yellowstone in the mid-1990s. Wyoming has fought for years to gain management of the wolves, which some hunters and ranchers in the state believe take an unacceptable toll on other game and livestock.

Montana and Idaho gained control of their own wolf populations earlier than Wyoming, and both have allowed hunting. Although Congress has acted to bar lawsuits challenging wolf delisting in Montana and Idaho, it hasn't granted Wyoming similar protection.

Tuesday's lawsuit follows a federal suit filed by another coalition earlier this month in Washington, D.C. Both suits seek to force the Fish and Wildlife Service to rescind its transfer of wolf management authority to Wyoming and protect them again under the federal Endangered Species Act.

Both lawsuits also generally charge that Wyoming's approach to wolf management won't allow wolves to expand their numbers substantially beyond the borders of Yellowstone, where hunting is prohibited. The groups maintain that the Wyoming wolves won't be free to mingle with other wolf populations, making their prospects for long term survival dim.

"After delisting, the wolf population will no longer be growing and will likely be reduced to a lower level," the lawsuit filed Tuesday claims. "State management will also likely result in higher mortality rates for both dispersing wolves and resident wolves."

The federal government has sought to have the first lawsuit filed in Washington, D.C., this month moved to Wyoming. In papers filed last week, lawyers for Fish and Wildlife Service say a Wyoming court would be more appropriate in hearing the case.

Wyoming Gov. Matt Mead has said he's confident the state's plan offers adequate protection for wolves. He has emphasized that after pushing for years to get state control of wolves, the state has no interest in seeing the population fall low enough to trigger a return to federal control.

Renny MacKay, spokesman for Mead, said Tuesday the governor believes both lawsuits challenging wolf delisting should be filed in Wyoming.

"This lawsuit really is about Wyoming and what happens in Wyoming and the lawsuit, the arguments and the decision should take place in Wyoming, not in Washington, D.C., or Denver, Colo.," MacKay said Tuesday.

Fourth Person Dies in Calif. of Mushroom Poisoning

LOOMIS, Calif. (AP) • A Northern California sheriff says a fourth person has died from eating a soup made with poisonous mushrooms earlier this month at senior care facility.

The Placer County Sheriff's Department said Tuesday that it had been notified by a mortuary of the death, but did not yet know the identity of the victim.

Three others at the Gold Age Villa in Loomis died from eating the mushrooms in what sheriff's investigators have previously characterized as an accident.

All of the victims were sickened on Nov. 8, including the caretaker who made it.

The other people who have died were identified as 86-year-old Barbara Lopes; 73-year-old Teresa Olesniewicz and 90-year-old Frank Warren Blodgett.

Workers pack a shipping truck on 'Cyber Monday' at the Amazon.com 1.2 million-square-foot fulfillment center on Monday in Phoenix. Americans clicked away on their computers and smartphones for deals on Cyber Monday, which is expected to be the biggest online shopping day in history. Shoppers are expected to spend $1.5 billion on Cyber Monday, up 20 percent from last year, according to research firm comScore. Calif. Addiction Counselor Charged with Murder in DUI

BY GILLIAN FLACCUS AND LINDA DEUTSCH

TORRANCE, Calif. • The convertible hit Phillip Moreno so hard it knocked him out of his shoes and lodged him in the windshield.

ASSOCIATED PRESS

Sherri Wilkins, a substance abuse counselor, appears in Los Angeles Superior Court in Torrance, Calif., on Tuesday.

As he lay dying on the hood, police said, Sherri Lynn Wilkins kept going another two miles until other motorists swarmed her car at a traffic light and grabbed her keys.

Wilkins, who was charged Tuesday with murder and driving drunk, told police she struck the man after leaving work and panicked. Police said her blood alcohol level was more than double the legal limit.

Her arrest on a street corner between home and her job as a drug and alcohol counselor seemed to be a return to a dark past that Wilkins once celebrated leaving behind. The convict and recovering addict had recently gone back to school, gotten a job and was reuniting with her family, including a new grandchild.

"It's a really tragic situation for both parties," said her neighbor, Crystal Witherspoon. "I'm trying to understand it myself, because from what I knew of her, she was a kind-hearted person. She was trying very hard."

Tami Jimenez, a recovering alcoholic who worked with Wilkins, said the case serves as a bitter reminder for all addicts about the dangers of relapse.

"I'm headed for a meeting tonight," she said. "It's unfortunate and it's tragic and it's sad, but it's a reminder that the disease of addiction can take you out at any time."

Wilkins' arraignment was postponed until next month at a brief court hearing Tuesday. She was ordered held on $2.25 million bail.

Twenty members of Moreno's extended family attended the hearing and spoke afterward of the loving man who adored the Lakers and the Raiders and was a whiz at remembering sports statistics. Moreno was nicknamed "Chud" because of his love of Budweiser beer and spent his last day watching college football with friends.

"We thank the citizens who stopped Wilkins and gave him some peace in his waning moments," family attorney Kevin Danesh said outside court. "Anyone who would dare to drink and drive, let this be a lesson to them."

Danesh said the family is also seeking answers about where Wilkins was before the accident. Her boss has said it was unlikely she was coming from work, as she told police, so late on a Saturday.

Moreno had three beers at a bar called The Branch Office just a half-block from the accident scene on Saturday and left around 11 p.m. to walk home, said bartender Virginia Zarate. Less than an hour later, police swarmed the streets, tracing their way back to the initial impact, she said.

"We started seeing a bunch of lights and we went out and the cops said it was a hit-and-run, but we had no clue who it was," she said as a memorial of balloons, flowers and candles sprouted up down the street.

Wilkins' arrest shocked friends, who said she was working to rebuild her life after a criminal record stretching back more than 20 years.

She attended Loyola Marymount University where she was enrolled in an alcohol and drug counseling certification program and was hired by Twin Town Treatment Centers a year ago to work with other addicts in a group setting, said David Lisonbee, the company CEO.

Zip Line to Zing Tourists Through Downtown Vegas

BY HANNAH DREIER
Associated Press

LAS VEGAS • Tourists will soon have a new way to see the lights of Las Vegas: By being spit out of the mouth of an 11-story slot machine and zinged down a five-block zip line past some of the city's oldest casinos.

Officials on Tuesday unveiled plans for a permanent zip line on the downtown Las Vegas promenade known as the Fremont Street Experience.

Las Vegas Mayor Carolyn Goodman said the thrill ride dubbed SlotZilla was destined to become an iconic city landmark.

"This is going to be known around the world: Come ride our Slotzilla," she said, standing beside showgirls and a scale model at the unveiling.

The monster zip line will cost $11 million to build and between $20 and $30 to ride. Construction is expected to start in January.

The attraction, expected to open in June, is an expansion of a much smaller, temporary zip line that has for two years scooted families, newlyweds and Elvis impersonators beneath a long metal canopy that displays an hourly light show.

That ride was intended to be a 30-day novelty, but it proved such a crowd pleaser the business community began working to make it permanent.

Currently, riders launch four at a time from a 67-foot metal scaffolding and land 800 feet away near the Four Queens casino, halfway across the pedestrian mall that features the world's largest video screen.

The new tower will be twice as tall, feature twice as many lines, and will look like a giant slot machine spitting out disoriented tourists.

With each new batch of zip-liners, the handle will dip, the wheels will spin, and the doors will open, revealing the course to the tourists on top.

"If you're going to do something here, you have to do it bigger and better than anywhere else," said Fremont Street Experience marketing director Thomas Bruney.

Officials are betting the new attraction will lure more visitors to the downtown area, which has struggled to compete with the flashier

Strip three miles away.

It is intended to reflect the "vintage Vegas" vibe that characterizes the promenade, nicknamed "Glitter Gulch" for the classic casino signs that glow amid the souvenir shops and buffet signs.

Riders will be able to stop halfway, or continue to the end of the 1,700 course, landing near the Golden Gate casino. They will have the option of flying along the lines in a horizontal "superman" position, and accelerating their ride using a new "power launch" system.

Bootleg Canyon Flightlines operates the current ride. The new structure will be built by the Hawaii-based company Skyline, better known for zip lines that span waterfalls and forests.

'Two and a Half Men' Actor Apologizes

NEW YORK (AP) • Teenage actor Angus T. Jones of the comedy "Two and a Half Men" apologized Tuesday for a series of interviews denouncing his own show, an episode that has rivaled former colleague Charlie Sheen's meltdown as an off-screen oddity.

Speaking to religious media outlets, the 19-year-old Jones has called the CBS comedy "filth" and "very inappropriate" and talked about how his religious awakening has affected his attitude toward life and work.

"Two and a Half Men," television's third most popular comedy, remains heavy on sexual innuendo, even with Ashton Kutcher replacing bad-boy

Sheen following his firing for drug use and a subsequent public meltdown. Jones, who started on the show when he was 10, plays Jake Harper, son of the uptight character portrayed by Jon Cryer.

In a statement issued late Tuesday, Jones said he had the highest regard for all of the people he has worked with on the comedy, including creator Chuck Lorre and Warner Bros. studio chief Peter Roth.

"I apologize if my remarks reflect me showing indifference to and disrespect of my colleagues and a lack of appreciation of the extraordinary opportunity of which I have been blessed," said Jones.

Morsi's Moment

BY CREATORS.COM
© 2012

BOKBUSTER.COM

The Israeli-Hamas miniwar last week was the first test of the post-Arab awakening order in the Middle East. Hamas, by getting embroiled in a missile duel with Israel and then calling on Arab countries for support, particularly Egypt, was testing Cairo as much as Israel. And the question Hamas was posing to Egyptians was simple: Did Egypt have a democratic revolution last year to become more like Iran or more like China? In other words, is Egypt ready to sacrifice the Camp David peace, U.S. aid and economic development to support Hamas's radical, pro-Iranian agenda, or not?

The answer from Cairo was no. President Mohammed Morsi of the Muslim Brotherhood's party did not want to get dragged into a total breach with Israel on behalf of Hamas, and instead threw Egypt's weight into mediating a cease-fire. But that raises an even more intriguing question going forward – whether Morsi, having shown himself, for the moment, to prefer being more Deng Xiaoping than Ayatollah Khomeini, has any inclination to also be Anwar Sadat, that is, to use his clout to forge an Israeli-Palestinian breakthrough so that Egypt isn't caught in this vice again.

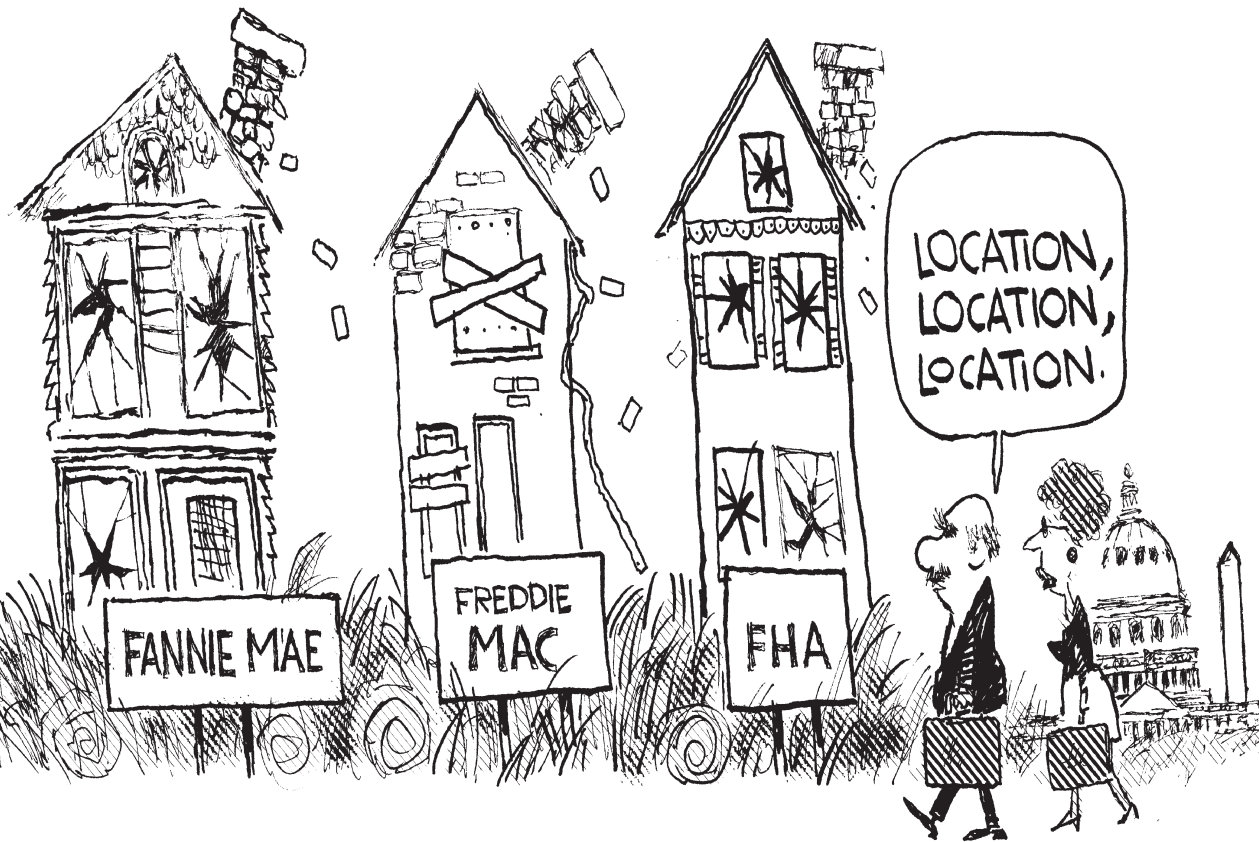

It is impossible not to be tantalized by how much leverage Morsi could wield in the peace process, if he ever chose to engage Israel. Precisely because he represents the Muslim Brotherhood, the vanguard of Arab Islam, and precisely because he was democratically elected, if Morsi threw his weight behind an Israeli-Palestinian peace deal, it would be so much more valuable to Israel than the cold peace that Sadat delivered and Hosni Mubarak maintained. Sadat offered Israelis peace with the Egyptian state. Morsi could offer Israel peace with the Egyptian people and, through them, with the Muslim world beyond.

Ironically, though, all of this would depend on Morsi not becoming a dictator like Mubarak, but on him remaining a legitimately elected president, truly representing the Egyptian people. That is now in doubt given Morsi's very troubling power grab last week and the violent response from the Egyptian street. President Barack Obama has to be careful not to sell out Egyptian democracy for quiet between Israel and Egypt and Hamas. We tried that under Mubarak. It didn't end well. No doubt Morsi's price for engaging with Israel would be the Arab Peace Initiative – full Israeli withdrawal from the West Bank and Arab East Jerusalem, save for mutually agreed-upon land swaps, and some return of refugees, in return for full normalized relations. If Morsi advanced such a proposal in direct talks with Israelis, he could single-handedly revive the Israeli peace camp.

Do I expect that? No more than I expect to win the lottery. The Muslim Brotherhood has long hated the Jewish state, as well as political and religious pluralism and feminism. Therefore, here's what I do expect: More trouble between Israel and Hamas that will constantly threaten to drag in Egypt. Hamas is a shameful organization. It subordinates the interests of the Palestinian people to Iran (and earlier to Syria), which wants Hamas to do everything it can to make a two-state solution impossible, because that will lock Israel into a permanent death grip on the West Bank, which will be the undoing of the Jewish democracy and will distract the world from Iran's and Syria's murderous behaviors. Israel left all of Gaza in 2005, and Hamas had a choice: It could recognize Israel, have an open border and import computers, or it could continue to deny Israel's existence, keep the border sealed, and smuggle in rockets. It chose rockets over computers. With each rocket that lands near Tel Aviv or Jerusalem, another Israeli says, "How can we possibly let go of the West Bank and risk our airport being shut down?" That is just what Hamas and Iran want – a permanent, grinding, democracy-eroding, legitimacy-destroying, globally isolating Israeli occupation of the West Bank – and they are very happy to use the Palestinian people as a human sacrifice for that goal.

The best way for Israel to undercut Hamas is by empowering the secular Palestinian Authority, led by Mahmoud Abbas, in the West Bank to gain greater independence and build a thriving economy, so every Palestinian can compare which strategy works best: working with Israel or against Israel. This Israeli government has failed to do that. It is so shortsighted. But Hamas makes it easy for Israel to get away with that by ignoring what we know from history: that whoever makes the Israeli silent majority feel morally insecure about occupation, but strategically secure in Israel, wins. After Sadat flew to Jerusalem, Israelis knew there was no way morally that they could hold onto the Sinai and strategically they no longer felt the need. When King Hussein of Jordan and Yasser Arafat did the same, they each got land back. Today, nothing makes Israelis feel more strategically insecure and morally secure with occupation than Hamas' stupid rocket attacks, even after Israel has withdrawn.

So, as you can see, the unresolved Israeli-Palestinian conflict, the future of Egyptian democracy and the U.S.-Israel-Arab struggle with Iran and Syria are now all intertwined. Smart, courageous leadership today could defuse the Israeli-Palestinian conflict, advance Egyptian democracy and isolate the Iranian, Syrian and Hamas regimes. Weak or reckless leadership will empower all three. This is a big moment.

The debate continues online in response to the article, "Declo Teacher Allows Students to Draw on Faces as Reading 'Incentive':"

jmejean: "I think the only bullying going on here is the parents that have made this a national issue. I'm sorry that the parents here were unable to help their kids reach their reading goal. A student that is not a strong reader is not going to set a goal that he sees as impossible. I know for a fact that the schools are big on reading. My daughter is in second grade and reads every night. Parents need to work harder with their kids instead of letting the teachers do it all at school. Kids not meeting the goals is a reflection on the bad parents who don't take the time to help the kids. This whole thing is bullying but not the way everyone is looking at it. The parents are teaching the kids that its okay to bully the teacher. By making this such a huge deal, kids are taught that if you don't like what happens then you can bully those authority figures ... Money and social status are not an excuse for bullying. ..."

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Social Security is Not an Entitlement for Those Who Paid

A couple of comments from Sunday's (Nov. 25) paper:

From the front page on entitlement reform: A term that describes reforms that affect benefits such as Social Security and Medicare. I do not believe that these are entitlements. I am 75 years old and have paid for these benefits since I started working at age 12. I know that there are people who never paid into these programs and are receiving benefits from them, but for the majority of us, we paid for these benefits and we do not consider them an entitlement. If the government wants to cut entitlements, then let it cut out the people who have never paid for them. They could cut the salary of the senators, representatives, the president and his cabinet, since they haven't done their job in many years. Most of them couldn't hold a job in the real world.

Opinion letter to the editor, "Teacher Deserves

Chance to Fix Situation": The writer feels bad about the way the teacher is being treated because she made a mistake. She didn't make a mistake, she made a choice that humiliated several children. One should never humiliate anyone in front of their peers; that is one of the first things that a good teacher learns. She not only humiliated these children in front of their class but in front of the whole town. She also encouraged the other kids to participate in this bullying process. Frankly, if it was my child or grandchild, I would be at the head of the line to get rid of this person as a teacher.

Times-News Editorial Cartoon Mis-represented the Truth

When I moved to Idaho from a blue state (Illinois), I anticipated some bias in the newspaper reporting, but the bias in editorial cartoons (a picture speaks 1,000 words) has been shocking. Where is reasoning here?

Where is an attempt to present a balanced approach?

I cite the example in today's (Nov. 22) paper: the Twinkie in the unemployment line with a bite taken out of it by the evil baker's union. This presents the erroneous narrative that the beloved snack cake's demise can be laid at the feet of those socialistic union workers.

The facts of Hostess' failure are considerably more complex. The facts: The current chief executive officer is the sixth in 10 years. He is a "restructuring" expert – that is a venture capitalist who makes money for stockholders by taking over the management of distressed firms (Hostess has filed for bankruptcy twice and has been sold three times since 1980.) Look at the reasons for this and you will see some real culprits, not the average Joe Baker.

Furthermore, the average bakery worker was asked to take an 8 percent cut from approximately 25K/year – at a time when the company awarded 19 senior managers $1,750,000 in bonuses. It's the newest American myth: award top execs inflated bonuses while you run a company into the ground and blame the workers for its demise.

Rayburn declared that the company would be more attractive to investors. I suppose so and I suppose it would be more attractive with slave labor: Think of all the money the company could save then. "Restructuring" involves venture capital firms raiding a company with tiny initial investments, awarding top execs rich bonuses to come in, then saddling the company with large debts it is impossible to pay. Then outside investors can swoop in and pick up the company at a reduced cost. That's how venture capitalists make money. If you get to blame a $30,000/year worker, so much the better.

The editorial cartoon could have remained the same but a more accurate portrayal would have had a venture capitalist firm taking the real bite out of Twinkies. But maybe that wouldn't sell. Still, it would have represented the truth much better.

Pocatello Leaders Draft Anti-discrimination Rule

POCATELLO (AP) • City leaders in Pocatello are joining a handful of other Idaho cities pursuing anti-discrimination safeguards based on a person's sexual identity.

Pocatello City Councilman Roger Bray said city officials are in the process of drafting an anti-discrimination ordinance that could be ready for public review and debate next spring. The decision to pursue legal protections for the city's gays, bisexual and transgender community comes just months after the city council rejected a resolution condemning discrimination.

Bray says an ordinance makes more sense because it carries more clout than a resolution.

"It serves as a standard rather than a suggestion," Bray told the Idaho State Journal in a story published Tuesday.

City officials have asked their legal counsel to check with the Idaho Attorney General's office to avoid any complications with state law. Idaho law now forbids workplace and housing discrimination based on race, sex, religion, color, national origin and mental or physical disabilities.

Earlier this year, the Legislature ignored calls to add sexual identity to state law. Republican lawmakers balked at even holding a hearing considering a bill to add discrimination protections for gays, lesbians, bisexuals and transgender individuals to the Idaho Human Rights Act.

The lack of action at the state level has prompted cities like Pocatello and Boise to take action at the local level. Leaders in Boise are working on a final draft of an anti-discrimination ordinance. Sandpoint already has a similar ordinance on the books.

Despite Pocatello's work, some local supporters are urging leaders in the eastern Idaho city to speed up the process, fearing that delays create more opportunities for discrimination.

"We've got to keep this in the forefront," said Muriel Roberts, who is part of the League of Women Voters, Too Great for Hate and the Pocatello Unitarian Universalist Fellowship — all groups that support the ordinance.

Roberts said those organizations have received testimonies from people who have been discriminated against based on actual or perceived sexual orientation or gender identity. Some have been evicted from their homes, while others have lost their jobs, she said.

"Nobody should be in fear of losing their home or their job or being denied services in Pocatello," she said.

Utah U. Lets Missionaries Delay College

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) • Utah's flagship university will allow students to delay enrollment up to two years in the latest reaction to the lowering of the minimum age for missionaries by the Mormon church.

The University of Utah's new deferment program gives students who have been accepted the option of waiting up to seven semesters, slightly more than two years, to start college, said Matthew Lopez, director of admissions at the university.

Students previously had to complete one semester to get a leave of absence.

The move came on the heels of an October announcement by the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints that it was lowering the minimum age to 18 for men and 19 for women to go on missions.

The minimum age had been 19 for men and 21 for women.

University of Utah officials had been discussing the possibility of a deferment program for several years, but the announcement by the Mormon church "put a spark to the conversation," Lopez said.

An estimated one-third of students at the University of Utah are members of the Mormon church, Lopez said.

"It was important that we scramble really quickly," said Lopez, referring to a Dec. 1 application deadline for freshmen for fall 2013.

Deferment requests will be reviewed on a case-by-case basis. The delays can be requested for Mormon missions, military service, humanitarian missions and illness, among other things.

Mormon church spokesman Dale Jones said the move was appreciated and benefits students and the university.

The creation of the program puts the University of Utah in line with other state universities with policies to accommodate students going on missions out of high school.

4th Wash. State Student Falls from Building

PULLMAN, Wash. (AP)

• A 19-year-old man is at least the fourth Washington State University student to fall out of a Pullman building this school year.

Police said alcohol likely played a role in three of the falls.

The latest accident occurred early Sunday morning when a student who had been drinking fell from a fraternity house balcony. The Moscow-Pullman Daily News reported that Griffin Healey was in a Spokane hospital with head injuries.

Pullman police were dispatched around 1 a.m. Sunday to the Lambda Chi Alpha fraternity and found Healey on the ground behind the house, Cmdr. Chris Tennant said.

Witnesses told officers that Healey had tried to sit on the waist-high railing of a balcony on the frat's second story but toppled backward and fell.

"The ground there has a brick retaining wall and also a bunch of rocks, and it appears as if he received a head injury from hitting one of those, either the wall or the rocks," Tennant said.

He said Healey was unconscious but breathing when officers arrived.

Witnesses said Healey had been drinking alcohol earlier in the evening. Tennant said the police department isn't planning a criminal investigation.

Washington State University administrators have created an alcohol and drug task force in response to three other recent cases.

CALIFORNIA BRACES FOR STORMS

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) • Northern California residents are bracing for gusty winds, rain and snow at higher elevations, as a series of storms gets set to touch down.

The rain and snow should begin falling Wednesday and continue through Sunday, according to the National Weather Service. Wind gusts could reach as high as 70 mph in coastal areas.

"There's an atmospheric river coming directly toward the coast," National Weather Service meteorologist Charles Bell told the San Francisco Chronicle.

A flood watch has been issued for the Sacramento Valley, where areas that were burned in recent wildfires are particularly vulnerable to mudslides. There is also the potential for urban and small stream flooding along the North Coast, where meteorologists say some areas could see as much as 12 inches of rain over the five-day period.

In eastern Butte and western Plumas counties, rainfall could exceed 20 inches, according to the National Weather Service. The Sierras could see as much as 2 feet of snow.

California's Emergency Management Agency warned of potential power outages from downed trees and encouraged residents to make preparations, including clearing rain gutters and trimming tree branches.

Officials: Lack of Pipelines Threatens N. Dakota Wildlife

BISMARCK, N.D. (AP) •

Too few pipelines moving crude to market is the biggest threat to wildlife in western North Dakota's booming oil patch at present, an industry official said Tuesday.

About half of North Dakota's record oil production is being shipped by rail and truck because of lack of pipeline infrastructure. Obtaining easements from landowners, acquiring permits and building a sufficient pipeline network "is a huge issue to the state of North Dakota and a huge issue to wildlife," said Ron Ness, president of the North Dakota Petroleum Council.

But a spokesman for the state chapter of The Wildlife Society said after the meeting that oil development in general is damaging wildlife and its habitat.

Ness told a gathering of oil industry officials and wildlife and conservation representatives Tuesday that heavy truck traffic causes safety issues, more road wear and creates "safety issues," and that building more pipelines would reduce traffic and cut the number of animal-vehicle collisions in the oil patch.

Encouraging the movement of oil by pipeline was among a list of recommendations presented Tuesday by those gathered, the volunteer group that's looking at how to reduce impacts on North Dakota's land and wildlife. Other voluntary measures included locating oil wells, related facilities and roads in "clustered configurations" outside of wildlife sensitive areas to lessen disturbance to animals and curb the amount of habitat lost to oil exploration.

Michael McEnroe, The Wildlife Society spokesman and a retired U.S. Fish and Wildlife biologist, attended the event Tuesday. Although he is a member of the so-called Sporting and Oil Industry Forum, he was not one of its invited speakers.

"You can't put that kind of industry in the entire western part of the state and not have an impact," he told The Associated Press. "People think that wildlife will just go over the hill. Except that over the hill in western North Dakota, there is another oil well."

McEnroe said he would like to see more stringent regulations in place to protect the state's wildlife and land.

"Volunteer guidelines are like putting a Gideons Bible in a motel room nightstand," McEnroe said.

ConAgra Gobbles Up Store Brand Maker

NEW YORK (AP) • ConAgra Foods is set to become the nation's biggest maker of store-brand foods, with a $5 billion purchase of Ralcorp that expands its stake in the growing market for cereals, crackers and packaged foods sold under private labels.

The deal announced Tuesday caps a year of acquisitions for ConAgra, which makes brands including Banquet, Chef Boyardee and Marie Callender's. The company, based in Omaha, Neb., also made multiple attempts to buy Ralcorp last year.

The latest bid for Ralcorp comes at a time when private-label brands — also known as store brands or house brands — are gaining popularity with price-conscious shoppers. Supermarkets and drug stores have also been working to improve the image of their brands as a way to control the rising costs for name brands.

In a conference call with analysts, ConAgra CEO Gary Rodkin noted that private-label products are growing at twice the rate of name brands and now account for 18 percent of the overall packaged food market.

In a new report this week, however, market researcher SymphonyIRI wrote that the growth of private label products has ebbed and "hit a proverbial glass ceiling." It also said that the private-label market has entered a phase of "pockets of growth" among categories, rather than a general expansion. Separately on Tuesday, Ralcorp attributed an 8 percent increase in net sales to acquisitions and higher prices, which offset lower volumes.

Like many other packaged food companies, ConAgra already made private-label products along with name-brand foods that include Slim Jim,

Healthy Choice and Hebrew National. With the Ralcorp purchase, about a quarter of the combined company's $18 billion in sales will now come from private labels. Ralcorp, based in St. Louis, makes products for a wide range of companies including Wal-Mart Stores Inc., Kroger Co. and McDonald's Corp.

Idaho Power Plays Hardball with Biogas Developer

BOISE (AP) • Idaho's renewable energy landscape is strewn with failed projects, but more casualties may soon be added to the list after Idaho Power Co. demanded state regulators cancel the utility's contracts to buy electricity from two proposed dairy manure digesters.

Idaho Power says Boise-based Exergy Development Group's two biogas-to-power projects near Twin Falls have missed or will miss deadlines to deliver electricity to the state's biggest utility, according to filings with the Idaho Public Utilities Commission.

Exergy counters that circumstances beyond its control — in this case, pending rules governing small renewable projects still being hammered out by the IPUC — have scared off its financiers, making such developments impossible.

Among other things, Idaho Power is asking the Idaho Public Utilities Commission for permission to pursue Exergy for undisclosed damages for not delivering electricity when it said it would.

"We're just looking at enforcing the terms of the contract," Brad Bowlin, an Idaho Power spokesman, said Monday.

Once one of Idaho's biggest renewable energy developers, Exergy has been beset by bad news for months.

The Boise-based company suspended $323 million in Idaho wind projects in August.

It's also fighting at least two federal lawsuits over wind turbines in Pennsylvania it wanted but didn't pay for and over ownership of a Minnesota wind farm where it's accused of defaulting on a loan and giving up its stake.

Now, its proposed digesters — at the Double B Dairy in Murtaugh and Swager Farms, in Buhl — appear to be in jeopardy, despite a pledge just three months ago from Exergy CEO James Carkulis that they were on schedule.

"We will commence construction of two dairy digesters in Twin Falls County later this year," Carkulis said in August, in a statement stressing Exergy's financial health, despite a wave of bad news.

Carkulis didn't immediately return a request for comment Monday.

Gertrude McKinley Garey Ellis

Aug. 28, 1921-Nov. 25, 2012

Our beloved Mom and Grandma passed away peacefully Sunday, Nov. 25, 2012, with her loving husband and family by her side.

Gertie was born Aug. 28, 1921, in Filer, Idaho, to Clinton and Emma McKinley. She was raised in Filer, where she met Earl Garey. The two were married Oct. 31, 1937. To this loving union of more than 50 years, four children were born. Gertie worked with her husband for many years in carpentry and designed all of the house blueprints. She was Earl's secretary and right-hand man. Together they built many custom homes in the Filer and the Twin Falls areas. Gertie had a warm and vivacious personality that made her a natural in her positions working for the Kmart and Magic Valley Memorial Hospital deli counters.

Gertie loved to garden, sew and raise flowers. She loved watching Boise State football games and was an avid supporter. After Earl's death, she met Robert Ellis Sr. at the Twin Falls Senior Citizens Center. She and Bob were active members of the senior center, where they treasured their many years of dancing, poker games and socializing.

Gertie is survived by her husband, Bob of Twin Falls; a daughter, Judy Parker (George) of Twin Falls; two sons, Ray Garey (Melinda) of Jerome and Loyd Garey (Marge) of Twin Falls; a sister, Katherine Lively of Twin Falls; daughter-in-law, Kathy Garey of Boise; and multiple generations of grandchildren. She was preceded in death by a son, Ron Garey; her brother, John D McKinley; and by her parents.

Gertie lived her life to the fullest with a smile and joke for everyone she blessed. "... let us run with endurance the race God has set before us" (Hebrews 12:1). She will be in our hearts forever.

The family suggests in lieu of flowers, a memorial contribution be given to the Twin Falls Senior Citizens Center.

A celebration of life will take place at 2 p.m. Monday, Dec. 3, at Parke's Magic Valley Funeral Home, 2551 Kimberly Road in Twin Falls.

Syrian Rebels Seize Two Bases after Heavy Fighting

BEIRUT • Rebel fighters took over two military bases in Syria after heavy fighting Tuesday, an additional sign that the ragtag force may finally be breaking a weeks-long stalemate and making progress in its battle against the government of President Bashar Assad.

In the past week alone, rebels have taken control of about a half-dozen military bases across the country as well as the Tishreen hydroelectric dam near the Turkish border.

Both of the bases taken Tuesday were used by the Syrian air force, one of the deadliest threats to rebel fighters, according to opposition groups. The Syrian military has regularly blasted rebel positions, as well as residential neighborhoods, with jets and helicopters in recent months, killing thousands.

The deadliness of the Syrian military's air power was on bloody display Tuesday after an air raid on an olive press in Idlib province killed at least 20 people and wounded dozens of others, according to the Local Coordination Committees, an activist network.

The second base, southeast of Aleppo, was overrun by fighters from Ahrar al-Sham and Jabhat al-Nusra, according to the Britain-based Syrian Observatory for Human Rights. Both are religious extremist groups suspected of having ties to al-Qaida.

That the two air bases were taken over by such radically different groups among the opposition indicates that the recent rebel gains may not have been coordinated by any sort of unified leadership. It also hints at potential problems ahead if Islamist and secular groups begin to fight one another for control of territory.

Some observers note that while rebel fighters have been successful in taking over military bases, it is much less certain how long they will be able to hold them. Rebel groups have been losing territory to the Syrian military at the same time that they have been making gains.

Douglas Anderson

June 21, 1942-Nov. 27, 2012

HEYBURN • Douglas Anderson, age 70, died at his home and passed on to his Lord on Tuesday, Nov. 27, 2012.

Doug was born June 21, 1942, in Rupert, Idaho, the son of Dean Oscar and Lula Harris Anderson. He spent his childhood fishing and hunting with his father and, in his teenage years, spent many hours on Mount Harrison helping his dad develop the Pomerelle ski area. He was an avid skier and continued to enjoy downhill and cross-country skiing until his health started to fail. Through his father's influence, he learned the ethics of hard work, spending his summers moving wheel lines on the north side farms and building fence on the Laidlaw Sheep Ranch in Muldoon.

He married Bonnie Workman of Rupert in 1961 and together, they raised three daughters. He graduated from Minico High School and attended Utah State University graduating with a Bachelor of Science degree in finance in 1964. He was then employed by the mutual fund investment firm, John Nuveen and Co. of Chicago, Ill., and continued his education at the Wharton School of Finance at Northwestern University. He served John Nuveen and Co. in the Chicago, Minneapolis and New York City offices. In 1969, he moved his family to the west, joining the investment firm of Boettcher and Company of Denver, Colo., and later the investment department at United Bank of Denver.

Once back in the Mountain West, he continued his skiing and taught Bonnie and his girls to love the sport as well. There were many fun family outings on the Rocky Mountain slopes. In 1973, he moved his family back to Rupert to join his brother-in-law, John Workman, in partnership of Workman Pontiac/Cadillac. They have had a wonderful and successful business for the past 40 years.

Back in his home territory, he and Bonnie began to tent camp at his favorite places in the Sawtooth Mountains and then graduated to RV camping. His fondest memories were camping with dear old friends and making new ones — exploring the back trails with anyone who would join him.

Doug felt an obligation to give back to the community in which he lived. He was active in the Rupert Fourth of July celebrations and took charge of the horse racing event for many years. He joined the Idaho Horse Racing Association working to improve the sport. He was a charter member of the Rupert Renaissance Committee, where he worked to help the Hispanic community develop its own celebrations.

It was a challenge for Doug to raise three daughters, but they were his pride and joy. His two grown grandsons and young granddaughters were his extra special blessing. Doug loved his family, and they always came first. However, his friends gave him a great deal of happiness and he was loyal to them. He had a generous heart with his family and his friends. For the past several years, he and Bonnie have enjoyed numerous trips with their dear friends to Mexico, Costa Rica and Jamaica. He will be greatly missed, but he lives on in our hearts and, through our faith, we wait for the time we can join him in the Light of the Lord.

Doug is survived by his loving wife, Bonnie Anderson of Heyburn; his children, Teresa Wardhaugh (Curt) of Boise, Catherine Reno (Scott) of Idaho Falls and Christy Wingate (John) of Boise; his grandchildren, Gavin Haley (Andrea) of Boise, Gabe Haley (Kara) of Norfolk, Va., Hannah Wardhaugh and Madeleine Wingate; two great-grandchildren, Asher Haley and Lennon Haley; two sisters, LuDean Smith (Bill) of Bountiful, Utah, and Sharon Smith of Burley; his in-laws, John and Anna Workman of Rupert, Louise Weathers of Seattle, Wash., and Linda and Tom Turpin of Salt Lake City, Utah; and many nieces and nephews. He was preceded in death by his parents; a brother-in-law, J.B. Smith; and his nephew, Chris Workman.

A funeral Mass will be celebrated at noon Saturday, Dec. 1, at the St. Nicholas Catholic Church, 802 F St. in Rupert, with the Rev. Father Justin Brady as celebrant. Friends may call from 6 until 8 p.m. Friday, Nov. 30, at St. Nicholas Catholic Church, where a vigil service will be held at 7 p.m. In lieu of flowers, Doug requested memorials in his memory be made to the Sgt. Chris Workman Memorial Scholarship Fund in care of First Federal Savings Bank or to the St. Nicholas Catholic School.

Arrangements have been entrusted to the care of the Rasmussen Funeral Home of Burley.

Wendell Lyman Schenk

Sept. 13, 1925-Nov. 24, 2012

TWIN FALLS • On Nov. 24, 2012, Wendell Lyman Schenk, 87, returned home to the loving arms of his Savior and his beloved heavenly family. He passed away peacefully at Bridgeview Estates of natural causes.

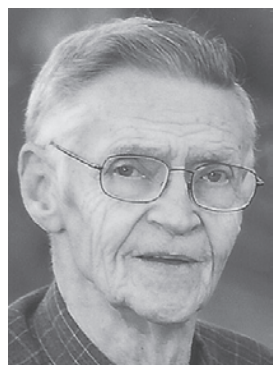

He was born Sept. 13, 1925, in Paul, Idaho, to Frederick Lyman Schenk and Mabel Reddish. He married his sweet wife, Pearl Afton Babel, on Sept. 2, 1948, in the Salt Lake Temple. They are the loving parents of 11 children. Wendell was a faithful member of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints all his life and served a mission to Atlanta, Ga., with his wife.

He is survived by his wife, Pearl; his children, Norman (Claudia) Schenk of Idaho Falls, Idaho, Renae (Rodger) McDonald of Rocklin, Calif., Jenene Eggleston of Idaho Falls, Lynda (Denny) Christensen of Ririe, Idaho, Paul (Robin) Schenk of Twin Falls, Roger (Maura) Schenk of Twin Falls, Susan (Scott) Pickup of Heyburn, Idaho, Vicki (Reed) Ellsworth of Lindon, Utah, Alan (Patrice) Schenk of Pleasant View, Utah, Trudy (Marc) Hauver of Lehi, Utah, and Torye Schenk of Idaho Falls; as well as 53 grandchildren and 31 great-grandchildren.

Wendell was an Army veteran serving in the 86th Infantry Division during World War II. He always maintained a deep love for this country. Having attended Twin Falls High School, he continued his education at Idaho State University in pharmacy and worked for more than 40 years in that profession.

He is fondly remembered for his sense of humor and always had a joke to share. He was a friend to all. Wendell had a love for flying, music and magic. He gathered an extensive collection of hats and guns. However, despite his various interests, he felt his greatest blessing was his family. As his family, we feel he was one of our greatest blessings. We love him and will greatly miss him.

The funeral for Wendell will be conducted at 1 p.m. Saturday, Dec. 1, at the Twin Falls 17th Ward LDS Chapel, 2680 Elizabeth Blvd. in Twin Falls, with Bishop Wade Pettingill conducting. Military honors will be by the Magic Valley Honor Guard and Idaho National Guard. Burial will follow the service at Sunset Memorial Park. A viewing will be held for family and friends from 11:30 a.m. to 12:45 p.m. Saturday at the church.

Services are under the direction of Trent Stimpson and the staff at White Mortuary "Chapel by the Park." Condolences may be left for the family by visiting www.whitemortuary.com.

NATE'S PICKS

Three Winter Beers to Gift

BY NATE POPPINO
npoppino@magicvalley.com

TWIN FALLS • Odds are, you know at least one fan of craft beer. And, you've just realized you have less than a month for that holiday shopping. Good news! Today's breweries like to make holiday beer, in styles that even the pickiest of beer snobs should like. For a bottle to fill a stocking — as a gift or for yourself — try these three options:

For Those Who Like Warm and Comfy

Deschutes Brewery in Bend, Ore., marks 25 years of Jubelale this season. Every season, the beer's been just a bit different — and this year, Deschutes couldn't have picked a better version for its milestone. Light in color and lightly spiced, it remains the flagship Northwest winter ale and one that always finds a home in my fridge. Jubelale is available at a whole host of local stores; expect around $7 to $8 per six-pack.

ASHLEY SMITH • TIMES-NEWS

For Those Who Love Chocolate

Back in Idaho, Garden City's Crooked Fence Brewing has offered up its idea of a winter seasonal. Augustus Chocolate Black Ale is about as described: a thick, dark beer with a fair amount of bitter chocolate flavor. This beer is definitely for the malt crowd, downplaying any sign of hops. And don't expect a lot of sweet — this is more in the Rogue school of bitter chocolate beers, and it's well worth it. You'll find it for $5.49 for 22 ounces at Rudy's — A Cook's Paradise in Twin Falls.

DREW NASH • TIMES-NEWS

For the Friend Who Wants It All

Maybe you want more hops? How about just more of everything? For Barrel Aged Brrrrbon, Portland, Ore.'s Widmer Brothers took their Brrr winter warmer and aged it in Kentucky bourbon barrels. The result is a nose full of piney hops and alcohol on a deep amber beer. On the tongue, the hops mingle primarily with syrupy caramel, though several other flavors all dance throughout the mix. This one's also at Rudy's for a slightly larger investment: $12.99 for 22 ounces.

Richard Feucht, who moved with his wife from Ohio in 2008, raises heritage turkeys as well as pigs, rabbits and chickens at his home east of Fairfield.

GROW YOUR OWN: TURKEY DINNER

BY TETONA DUNLAP
tdunlap@magicvalley.com

FAIRFIELD • Four and a half years ago, Richard and Cheryl Feucht moved from Ohio to Idaho — and into a new philosophy on food.

"We just came out for an adventure," Richard said. The couple's sons were already living out West, and the Feuchts moved a little closer to them.

But with the change in location also came a change in the way they viewed their food and living a life of sustainability.

"We wanted to see where our food comes from and raise our own food," Richard said.

On Nov. 16, Richard walked on his pathway that separates pens holding nine heritage turkeys of five breeds such as the Royal Palm and the Bourbon Red. Heritage turkeys are a little different than the common broad-breasted white turkey, which Richard said is the turkey of choice for corporations in the turkey production business because of its high breast-meat production and short growth period. Heritage turkeys, he said, produce about equal amounts of white and dark

City Folk, Country Ways

These would-be urban homesteaders were so determined they bartered for land.

BY TETONA DUNLAP
tdunlap@magicvalley.com

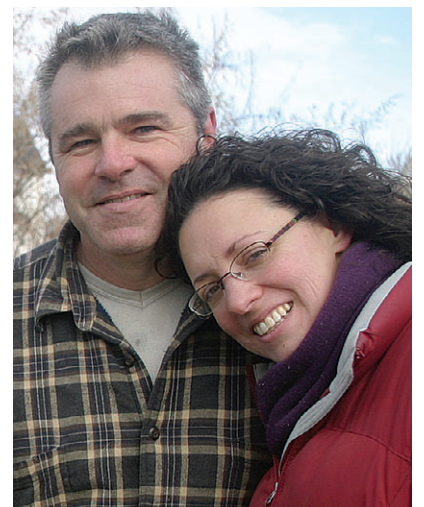

FILER • It all started with the documentary "Food, Inc." Havilah Lyon and her fiancé, Hunter Rowland, said this film opened their eyes and sparked an interest in growing and raising their own food.

They decided to start small, raising hens. But before they even purchased one, Lyon and Rowland received a letter from the city of Twin Falls saying they needed to get all their neighbors within 300 yards of their home to sign a petition for a permit to keep chickens within city limits.

Lyon said she went to the courthouse to get the proper paperwork and discovered that not only did she need the signatures of her neighbors, but there were corporations on the list as well. Instead, the couple gave up the idea of hens and purchased three rabbits, the city's maximum.

meat and don't get as big as the ones grown for breast meat.

The Feuchts raised the turkeys from eggs they bought from a woman in Twin Falls. The eggs were tended to by broody hens, which have a natural instinct to incubate eggs by sitting on them.

"We buy them young so we know what they are fed, make sure it's all natural feed," said Richard, an Idaho Transportation Department employee who has an associate's degree in agriculture from Ohio State University.

In the field behind the Feuchts' house, up a slight hill, sit the pens of their turkeys, chickens, rabbits and pigs. The brick-red chicken coop with the white door is the only bit of color surrounded by wire and boards. Richard can walk straight down the middle of their pens, turkeys on side and chickens on the other.

Richard raised his own Thanksgiving turkey and paid a Wendell man $10 to process it.

Meat and Eggs

The Feuchts eat turkey eggs, too, and said that as long as the turkeys are still laying eggs they will stay in their pens.

"They are just as good as chicken eggs, a little bit bigger, but I can't tell the difference," Richard said.

But the only turkey that will not be sent to the processor eventually is a small brown turkey he's had for almost four years.

"She's my favorite, she's my chocolate girl," Richard said. Because most of the turkeys will end up on his dinner table, Richard does not name them.

Besides freezing, Cheryl also cans the meat of the turkeys and other animals they raise, including chickens, pigs and rabbits.

Also on the Feucht Place

This was the first year Richard raised Red Wattle heritage pigs. The two pigs have already been processed before winter and provided his family with 360 pounds of meat in the form of sausage, bacon and ham. To have the two pigs butchered and the meat wrapped for the freezer cost him less than $300.

Richard said the chickens, turkeys and rabbits are better at handling cold weather. This winter he is moving his four meat rabbits, Flemish Giants and Satins, into what used to be the henhouse.

"They fared well, but it's just too much on them," Richard said.

A tip Richard shared for someone raising chickens and rabbits is that chicken manure is bad for rabbits. To keep the chickens out of their area, he put up an extra piece of chicken wire on top of the rabbit pen.

Often Richard lets the chickens roam free, but once the sun sets they know to go back to their henhouse.

Because he raises his own meat, Richard has four freezers and two refrigerator-freezers. Richard and Cheryl often take meat to their sons whenever they go to visit, or ship it when they can't.

"Our kids wish we would have done this sooner," Richard said.

The Benefits

Since the Feuchts began raising their own food, Richard's high blood pressure, which used to be a concern, is now great, he said.

"I've lost weight," Richard said. "I don't feel like I'm 58."

He estimated that their total food bill went from $100 or $200 a week to just $50 every two weeks. Richard said grocery store trips are rare and are usually to buy paper products and cleaning supplies.

"We're pretty much self-sufficient," he said.

Costs of Turkey Care

Richard and Cheryl also have a small greenhouse where they grow plants such as radishes, garlic, watermelons, peas, beets and tomatoes. They can feed these vegetables to their animals as well.

"We feed the broccoli plant (leaves) to the turkeys," Richard said.

They also buy feed for the turkeys; Richard doesn't keep tabs on the per-bird cost, but he said the feed and other costs are more expensive than buying meat would be. "You aren't going to make money?"

To house the turkeys, Richard built seven turkey huts which cost about $100 each. Flight netting overhead keeps them from flying out; this cost about $400.

"Unless you trim back the feathers of a turkey, they will fly," he said.

Inside each hut, to keep the turkeys warm during cold nights, is a heat lamp that kicks on when the temperature hits below zero and an electric heated water bowl. The heater for the water cost $50; Richard said you can buy one at a store selling livestock supplies.

Country Ways

"Chickens are a lot less noisy than a dog," Lyon said. "I can understand if we wanted to have a rooster, but we just wanted three hens. Twin Falls is not hobby-farming friendly!"

Undeterred, Lyon posted on Craigslist that they were looking to use someone's land in exchange for eggs and meat. Three people responded to her ad. Lyon and Rowland decided to work with a Filer man who owned 10 acres overgrown with Russian olives.

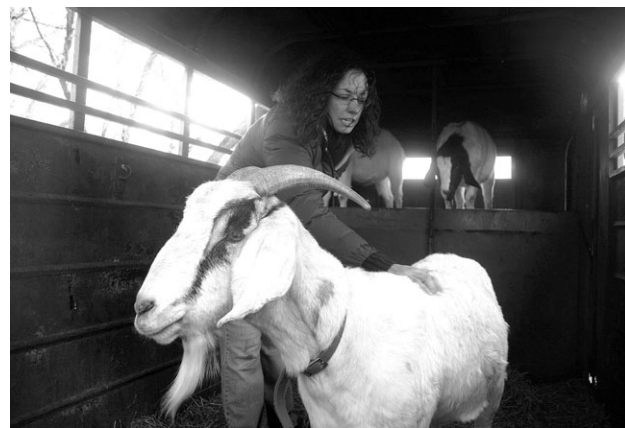

Now, the project that started with the idea of three hens has multiplied to 75 chickens.

On Nov. 25, the Twin Falls couple was in Filer taking care of their animals and preparing winter quarters for them. When the weather is nice they are often out tending to their animals until dark.

"This is our life," Lyon said. "We make jokes that this is our Saturday night, honey."

In addition to the chickens there are three goats — all pregnant — a sheep and three rabbits. They also have three pigs that they are splitting with a farmer friend who is raising the animals; Lyon and Rowland help pay for the cost of pig feed.

To keep their chickens in one area and predators out, they installed an electric fence. It doesn't work flawlessly. Three chickens like to range and are often found outside the fence, leaving peach-colored eggs in various places.

All of the chickens are raised for eggs, and only the roosters are slaughtered. The goats are also used for meat, and the sheep for its wool.

All of the buildings used to house the animals are built with recycled materials. For now the chickens lay their eggs in the box of an old truck, and the goats and sheep take refuge inside a horse trailer when they are not walking about their pen. All the housing for the animals is made to be mobile, so it can be rotated about the land.

Lyon and Rowland said that when they have questions about slaughtering or anything else concerning the animals, they read books or watch YouTube videos by Joel Salatin, owner of Polyface Farm based in Virginia. Salatin is an activist, author and leading spokesman for local, sustainable food systems and has been featured in films such as "Food, Inc." and "Fresh."

The Twin Falls couple has also turned to Rowland's parents, who own a farm in Bliss, for advice.

Recently Rowland, who works for Charmac Trailer in Twin Falls, helped a co-worker slaughter a pig, just to learn how.

Hunter Rowland and Havilah Lyon of Twin Falls stand on 10 acres owned by a Filer man. They use the land for their chickens, rabbits, goats and a sheep in exchange for eggs and meat.

"You can learn the basics from YouTube or books," Rowland said. "When you're with a librarian, she'll say, 'We have a book on that!'"

Lyon works at the Twin Falls Public Library, but in about a month the couple will move to American Falls and a more rural setting.

It's a welcomed change for the couple.

"If you go walking out my front door and look to the left, you'll see Fred Meyer's — you really can't get any more 'city' than that," Lyon said.

And of course, all the animals are coming too.

"There are city people and there are country people, and we are country people," Lyon said.

Soon they won't have to drive 20 miles round-trip to visit their animals, because they will be right outside the door.

"It's our lifestyle now and everything we want to do," Rowland said.

Pressure Cooker Speeds Up a Classic Sandwich

BY J.M. HIRSCH

Associated Press

The nice thing about cooking a monster brisket — aside, of course, from the fact that the meat can be mouth-meltingly delicious — is that it is a dish you can mostly ignore as it cooks.

Season a massive hunk of brisket, toss it in a Dutch oven with some liquid, then pop it in a 275 degree oven for the better part of a day. Done. And delicious.

And that's what I planned to do for this recipe. Until I realized that while that approach does leave the cook free to do other things, it also monopolizes the oven. And it does so at such a low temperature that it becomes difficult to share the space with other dishes you might want to prepare.

So instead, I turned to that most terrifying — and misunderstood — of kitchen tools, the pressure cooker. Modern pressure cookers are quite safe. Basically, they lock in moisture and — thanks to the pressure seal — are able to cook at a higher temperature. The result is fast, even cooking that won't dry out your food.

Which means my sweet-and-tangy barbecue brisket sliders cook in about 1 1/2 hours instead of all day. And the hands-on time is the same.

Sweet-and-Tangy Barbecue Brisket Sliders

Start to finish: 1 hour 45 minutes (15 minutes active).
Servings: 10.

4-pound brisket, trimmed of fat, cut into 3 or 4 pieces

Kosher salt and ground black pepper
2 tablespoons canola or vegetable oil
2 cups water

15-ounce can tomato sauce
1/2 cup ketchup
1/2 cup packed brown sugar
1/2 cup apricot preserves
1/4 cup cider vinegar
1 teaspoon cumin
1 teaspoon mustard powder
1 teaspoon smoked paprika
1 teaspoon garlic powder
Slider buns

Season the brisket on all sides with salt and pepper.

In a large pressure cooker over medium-high, heat the oil. When the oil is hot, add the brisket and sear for 2 to 3 minutes per side, or until well browned.

Meanwhile, in a medium bowl, whisk together the water, tomato sauce, ketchup, brown sugar, apricot preserves, vinegar, cumin, mustard powder, paprika and garlic powder. Once the brisket has been seared, add the tomato sauce mixture to the pressure cooker. Move the brisket pieces around to ensure the liquid is both under and over it.

Attach the cover of the pressure cooker and seal according to manufacturer directions. Bring up to pressure, then adjust the burner temperature to maintain medium-high pressure. Cook for 1 1/2 hours.

Remove the pressure cooker from the heat and place in the sink under cool running water. Once the pressure cooker has cooled enough to open, remove the lid. Test the meat; it should be fork tender. Carefully transfer the meat to a platter and use 2 forks to pull it apart into bite-size chunks.

Meanwhile, return the cooker to the heat and simmer, uncovered, until the liquid has reduced and thickened. Return the shredded brisket to the cooker and toss well. Serve with slider buns.

Turn Chia Seeds into a Pet or a Pudding

BY J.M. HIRSCH

Associated Press

The trouble with this under-appreciated ingredient is that for the next few days you're going to have its only-available-on-TV jingle stuck in your head.

Ch-ch-ch-chia! That's right, we've wandered into the Chia Pet aisle. Because the same seeds used to grow fluffy green pets also happen to be delicious and nutritious.

First, the basics.

Chia seeds — which are a relative of sage — resemble poppy seeds, but with a nuttier, less assertive flavor. They have gobs of fiber and a fair amount of protein. The seeds were a staple of the Aztecs, who roasted and ground them, then mixed them with water to form a porridge or meal for making cakes.

Chia seeds' reputation for providing sustained energy — as well as plenty of nutrients — more recently have turned them into the darling of the fitness world. They also have shown up in a growing number of products in natural foods shops, from protein bars and baked goods to drinks such as kombucha.

That last one deserves special attention. When mixed with water (as well as some other liquids), chia seeds plump up and develop a pleasantly tender, gelatinous quality, similar to cooked tapioca pearls. Drinks to which chia seeds have been added resemble Japanese bubble tea (teas and juices to which tapioca pearls have been added) — thick and studded with slightly chewy rounds.

To make your own, soak a tablespoon or two of the seeds in 1/4 cup of water until thick and tender. Then mix in the fruit juice (even some hard stuff) and drink.

That thickening power also can be harnessed in smoothies. Blending in a tablespoon or two is a great way to add fiber and body to your fruity-yogurt drink. And because the seeds don't need to be ground before eating, they also can be tossed into baked goods, such as cookies, bars and multi-grain breads.

Why would you? In addition to adding protein, fiber and calcium, the seeds add a deliciously crunchy-nutty flavor without overwhelming. If you're the type who likes making yogurt at home (admittedly, we are few in number), chia seeds are a great addition there, too. You'll need a yogurt maker (basically, a device that holds the milk at a set temperature so the live cultures can do their job), but it's stupidly simple.

I combine 1 1/2 tablespoons of chia seed with 2 cups of milk and 1 tablespoon of yogurt (make sure it is labeled as having live culture). Then let it sit a few hours in the yogurt maker and you're done. And it's delicious.

Even easier? Make a tapioca-like pudding. All you need to do is mix and refrigerate overnight. My 8-year-old son loves this stuff.

Chia-Almond Pudding

Top this pudding with whipped cream and a sprinkle of chia seeds. Or drizzle it with a bit of honey or agave syrup. Start to finish: Overnight (5 minutes active). Servings: 4.

2 cups vanilla almond milk
1 1/2 tablespoons chia seeds
Zest of 1 lemon
1/2 teaspoon cinnamon
Pinch of salt

In a medium bowl, combine all ingredients. Stir well. Leave the bowl on the counter and stir once a minute for about 10 minutes. This prevents the seeds from clumping as they absorb liquid. Cover and refrigerate the bowl for at least 6 hours, or ideally overnight. When you think of it, give the pudding a stir.

Cornish Hen: A Small-Scale, Grand Christmas Roast

BY SARA MOULTON
Associated Press

My family has always insisted that the centerpiece of our Christmas feast be some kind of show-stopping roast. We're talking a standing rib roast or whole beef tenderloin. And, as if these prizes were not already rich enough in themselves, we tend to pair them with an extravagant sauce, usually bearnaise. Hey, it's Christmas.

My challenge here was to come up with a Christmas dinner showstopper just as glamorous as the usual stars, but somehow leaner. It couldn't be pork because my parents don't love pork. It might've been turkey, but we just featured it at Thanksgiving. And roast chicken — much as I love it — just seemed too prosaic for a once-a-year holiday feast.

Then it occurred to me that Cornish game hens might fit the bill. You can say that they're small, or at least small-ish, but I prefer to think about them as individual. They were created during the '50s, after all, by a French couple in Connecticut who wanted something that didn't exist at the time — a succulent bird suitable for a single serving.

They realized their dream by crossing a Cornish game chicken with a White Rock (or Plymouth) chicken. Despite the name, there is nothing gamy about this bird. On the contrary, it tastes like what it is — really moist and delicious chicken that is sized just right to serve one per customer.

To make sure the white meat stays moist, I pre-seasoned the birds with some salt. Then I flavored the little guys by stuffing some of everyone's favorite poultry herbs — thyme and sage — under the skin. They're plenty delicious as is, straight out of the oven, so don't fret if you don't have time to make the sauce.

Then again, it is Christmas dinner, so you might want to budget the time to do it up right. This particular sauce is based on an ingredient I wish I always had on hand — a brown poultry stock. It's a happy cross between a chicken stock and a beef stock, boasting a much deeper flavor than the former, but taking less time to make than the latter.

You can make a regular chicken stock from any part of the chicken. Typically, the necks and backs are recruited, but I prefer to base mine on the wings, which boast the ideal ratio of bone (which provides gelatin) to meat and skin (both of which provide flavor). The wings get browned first, as do the vegetables, which is the key to deep flavor. I then simmer the ingredients for several hours, strain the stock, and boil.

Still, how to make the sauce creamy without cream? By reaching for evaporated skim milk, which is low in fat but thick in texture. Add a little Dijon mustard and you've masked any persistent skim milk taste.

I tested this recipe on The Husband and our kids, and none of them could even tell that it was low-fat. As far as they knew, it was a full-fat, full-flavor French mustard sauce.

Herb Roasted Cornish Game Hens with Creamy Mustard Sauce

Start to finish: 3 hours 20 minutes (30 minutes active). Servings: 4.

- 1/4 cup finely chopped fresh sage, plus extra to garnish
- 1/4 cup finely chopped fresh thyme leaves, plus 1 large sprig for the stock, and extra to garnish
- 1 tablespoon plus 1 teaspoon lemon zest
- 1 1/2 teaspoons salt
- Four 1 1/4-pound Cornish game hens
- 1 pound chicken wings, separated into joints
- 1 cup coarsely chopped yellow onion

- 1/2 cup coarsely chopped carrot
- 2 garlic cloves, smashed
- 1 tablespoon tomato paste
- 1/2 cup red wine
- 1 1/2 cups low-sodium chicken broth
- 1 tablespoon cornstarch
- 1/2 cup evaporated skim milk
- 2 tablespoons Dijon mustard
- Ground black pepper

Heat the oven to 400 degrees.

In a small bowl, combine the sage, thyme leaves, lemon zest and salt.

Very carefully separate the skin from the meat on the breast and thighs of each hen, lifting it lightly from the meat without removing it. Rub a quarter of the herb blend directly onto the breast and thigh meat (under the skin) of each hen. Cover and chill the hens. This step can be done up to 8 hours ahead.

Meanwhile, in a large saucepan or Dutch oven arrange the chicken wings in a single layer. Roast the wings on the oven's middle rack for 15 minutes, then turn them and roast for another 15 minutes, or until they are golden. Add the onion, carrot, garlic, tomato paste and the thyme sprig, then roast for another 15 minutes, or until the vegetables are slightly caramelized. Turn off the oven.

Set the pan of wings and vegetables over medium heat on the stovetop. Add the wine and bring to a simmer, scraping the bottom to release the browned bits. Simmer until the wine is reduced by half. Add the chicken broth and enough cold water to cover the wings by 1 inch. Bring the liquid to a boil and simmer for 2 hours, adding water as necessary to keep the wings covered.

After the liquid has simmered for 1 1/2 hours, heat the oven to 475 degrees.

Remove the hens from the refrigerator and use paper towels to pat them dry. Coat them lightly with olive oil cooking spray, then use cooking twine to tie the legs together.

Arrange the hens on a rack in a shallow roasting pan. Roast them in the middle of the oven for 30 minutes, or until a thermometer inserted at the leg thigh joint registers 165 degrees.

Transfer the hens to a platter, and let them rest, loosely covered with foil, for 10 minutes.

Meanwhile, when the chicken stock has simmered for 2 hours, strain the mixture into a large bowl, discarding the solids. Skim off and discard any fat on top of the stock. Wipe clean the pot used to make the stock, then pour the stock back into it. Return it to the stovetop over high heat and boil until reduced to 1 cup, about 10 minutes.

In a small cup, whisk together the cornstarch and the evaporated skim milk. While whisking constantly, add the cornstarch mixture to the simmering stock. Continue whisking until thickened, then whisk in the mustard. Season with salt and pepper. Add the juices from the resting hens to the sauce. Transfer the hens to plates and pour some of the sauce over each one. Garnish with fresh thyme and sage.

Eggnog and Snickerdoodles ... Together at Last

BY J.M. HIRSCH
Associated Press

You can keep your decorated, stained glass, death-by-chocolate, triple-dunked biscotti bombs, or whatever this holiday season's must-bake cookie will be.

Any time of year — and especially this time of year — I'll take the delicious simplicity and vanilla-ness (no, probably not a real word) of a chewy, soft and sweet snickerdoodle over just about any fancy, overwrought confection. Even better is to pair that simple, underappreciated cookie with the most perfect of holiday beverages — eggnog.

So this year, I wondered what would happen if I blended these two classic treats. That's right... An eggnog snickerdoodle. It totally makes sense. Though overtly rich and creamy, at heart eggnog is about clean vanilla creaminess with just a hint of holiday spice. You could easily say the same of snickerdoodles, which are a rich, buttery cookie with a clean vanilla taste and a light dusting of cinnamon-sugar on the outside.

Eggnog Snickerdoodle Cookies

Start to finish: 1 1/2 hours (1/2 hour active). Makes 36 cookies.

3 cups all-purpose flour
2 teaspoons cream of tartar

1 teaspoon baking soda
1/2 teaspoon salt
3/4 cup (1 1/2 sticks) butter
2 cups sugar, divided
1/4 cup plain eggnog
1 tablespoon dark rum or brandy
1 teaspoon vanilla extract
2 large eggs

2 teaspoons cinnamon
1/2 teaspoon grated nutmeg

In a medium bowl, whisk together the flour, cream of tartar, baking soda and salt. Set aside.

In a large bowl, use an electric mixer on high to beat the butter and 1 1/2 cups of the sugar until light and fluffy. Reduce the mixer speed to low and slowly drizzle in the eggnog, rum and vanilla, mixing until completely incorporated. Add the eggs, then beat until well mixed.

Add the dry ingredients and mix thoroughly. Cover the bowl and refrigerate for 1 hour.

When ready to bake, heat the oven to 350 degrees. Line a baking sheet with parchment paper.

In a small bowl, mix together the remaining 1/2 cup of sugar, the cinnamon and nutmeg.

Working with 1 tablespoon of dough at a time, roll the dough between your hands to form balls. Roll each ball in the sugar mixture to coat evenly, then arrange on the prepared baking sheet. Leaving 2 inches between the cookies on all sides. Bake for 8 to 10 minutes, or until lightly golden, but still soft at the center. Transfer to a rack to cool.

A Rich, Moist Gingerbread Cake for Christmas

BY ALISON LADMAN
Associated Press

There is no subtle way to say this. This cake screams Christmas.

To start with, it's gingerbread, the aroma alone of which is embedded in the definition of this holiday. That aroma, of course, is paired with an ultra-rich, moist cake that is at once dense, but also light. Then there is the sugar crisp caramelized sides of the cake, which only build to the tender, sweet lemony pear slices that crown the cake.

Pair this cake with a mug of hot cocoa, coffee or (to be totally indulgent) a frothy glass of eggnog.

Lemon Pear Upside-Down Gingerbread Cake

Start to finish: 1 hour 20 minutes (40 minutes active). Servings: 16.

Zest and juice of 2 lemons
1/2 cup white wine
3/4 cup packed light brown sugar, divided
3 large pears, peeled, cored and sliced
1/2 cup golden raisins
3/4 cup (1 1/2 sticks) unsalted butter
3/4 cup granulated sugar
1/3 cup molasses
1 tablespoon dry ground ginger
1 teaspoon cinnamon
1/4 teaspoon ground cardamom
1/2 teaspoon ground allspice
1 teaspoon baking powder
1/4 teaspoon baking soda
1/4 teaspoon salt
2 eggs
1/2 cup milk
2 2/3 cups all-purpose flour

In a skillet over low heat, combine the lemon juice and zest with the wine and 1/2 cup of the brown sugar. Add the pears and bring to a slow simmer. Cook for 10 minutes, or until the pears are just tender. Remove from the heat and gently stir in the raisins.

Heat the oven to 350 degrees. Spray a tube pan with baking spray. Sprinkle the remaining 1/4 cup brown sugar in the bottom of the pan. Arrange the pears, slightly overlapping, over the sugar.

In a medium bowl, use an electric mixer to beat together the butter, granulated sugar, molasses, ginger, cinnamon, cardamom, allspice, baking powder, baking soda and salt. Add the eggs, one at a time, scraping the bowl between additions. Add half the milk followed by half of the flour, mixing before adding the remaining half the milk and flour. Spoon into the prepared pan over the pears. Bake for 35 to 40 minutes, or until a toothpick inserted at the center comes out clean. Allow to cool for 15 minutes in the pan, then place a large overturned plate or platter over the cake. Invert the cake so it is standing on the plate. If any of the pears stick to the pan, carefully remove them and return them to their place on the cake.

Per serving: 300 calories; 90 calories from fat (30 percent of total calories); 10 g fat (6 g saturated); 0 g trans fats; 45 mg cholesterol; 50 g carbohydrate; 2 g fiber; 29 g sugar; 4 g protein; 105 mg sodium.

Ask Yourself: What Would Nathan Myhrvold Gift?

BY MICHELE KAYAL
Associated Press

Anybody can giftwrap a matching apron and oven mitts. But if you really want to impress the foodie in your life, give the gift of kitchen tech.

To suss out which gizmos are worth giving, we went to the master himself, Nathan Myhrvold, the former Microsoft executive turned high priest of modernist cuisine. Myhrvold spent hundreds of thousands of dollars decking out his Bellevue, Wash., kitchen-lab, outfitting it with texture analyzers that determine meat's doneness, a laser that precision cuts pasta shapes and microns-thin daikon slices, even a centrifuge that separates peas and other matter into their component parts.

Admittedly, most of that won't land under the tree this year. But we walked the lab with Myhrvold to get ideas for outfitting a modernist kitchen on any budget. Here are the basics:

Under $100

Digital thermometer ($10 to $60). Start with a really good digital thermometer. "The texture and taste of food changes with temperature," Myhrvold says, so it's important to measure accurately. Digital thermometers also are fast, giving accurate readings in just seconds.

Digital scale ($15 to $40). A reliable scale is a must. "We weigh rather than using teaspoons and cups," Myhrvold says. "It's more accurate."

This is true if you're measuring flour for bread or if you're measuring xanthan gum to thicken a sauce. Myhrvold recommends a scale for ordinary weights up to a couple of kilos, and, if you're serious about pursuing modernist techniques, a second model that measures tiny quantities — hundredths of a gram — for gums and gelling agents.

Lab sieves ($35 to $75). Similar to what you might see used by a kid on the beach, except lab sieves have very tiny openings — think less than 1/100th of an inch. In labs, they separate different sized particles. In the kitchen, Myhrvold uses them to create super-silky sauces, jams and stocks, with every last bit of sediment removed.

Blow torch ($50 to $65). "We like the Home Depot ones," Myhrvold says. "They're simple, they're reliable, and when you want to make something hot — really hot — there's nothing like it."

Use a blow torch to sear a steak or brown a chicken while still preserving the perfect doneness of the item in question.

$100 to $200

Whipping siphon ($120 to $150). Normal people use this to make whipped cream. Myhrvold uses it to serve scrambled eggs in foamy little dollops or to lighten sauces and soups. It also can be used to vacuum marinate meat, a process that uses pressure to create more flavor.

Pressure cooker ($50 to $200). Besides cooking things quickly, a pressure cooker also cooks them better. "It's the best possible way to make stock," Myhrvold says, explaining that the high heat in the pressure cooker does a better job of extracting flavor than the traditional long, slow simmer method. The pressure cooker also can reduce vegetables such as carrots to soup with a little help from baking soda to foster caramelization.

More than $200

Sous vide machine ($329 to $499). The granddaddy of hipster kitchen appliances. Myhrvold is unrelenting in his devotion to sous vide, the water bath method used by chefs to cook items to an exact doneness. "It gives you exquisite control over temperature," Myhrvold says, eliminating the need to pinch and poke your meat.

Plus, he adds, "You can do really, really cool things." Like cook scrambled eggs and dispense them from your whipping siphon (see above). The truth is, you can make a sous vide cooker with a cooler and some plastic bags. But if you want the real deal, maybe splurge on the machine and cut back somewhere else.

Countertop induction burner ($75 to $250). Powered by magnets, these energy efficient burners heat food more quickly than ordinary stoves, but leave your pot handles cool. Plus, it lets you use inexpensive steel pans to achieve the same results as the priciest copperware used on gas burners.

Dehydrator ($50 to $325). Tell me again why I want this? "It's cheap and it's fun," Myhrvold says with a twinkle. "And there's a lot of cool stuff you can do with it." Witness, candied rose petals. Cocktail sauce leather — think fruit leather made from cocktail sauce (Duh! You wrap it around shrimp!).

Blendtec or Vitamix blender ($350 to $900). These super fancy blenders have more power and better blade contact with the food than your average wedding gift, transforming chunky items into silky smooth purees. They make one heck of a smoothie (or, you know, other stuff).

A Breakfast Showdown: Which Rice Cereal Is Tops?

BY J.M. HIRSCH
Associated Press

Snap!, Crackle! and Pop! are proud to be loud at the breakfast table, but do they fizzle or sizzle in the cereal bowl? And how about in that most ubiquitous of bake sale items — Rice Krispies Treats?

Like so many popular breakfast cereals, Kellogg's Rice Krispies has spawned numerous knockoffs, from gluten-free variants to cocoa-infused crackles. Which got me wondering: Is the mother brand — long pimped by those impish elves named for the noises made by their cereal — still the best choice when filling your bowl and making those bars?

To find out, AP's food team crunched its way through too many boxes of the leading — and some not so — brands of puffy rice cereal. And we were surprised by the results.

But first, a puffed rice cereal primer.

Puffed rice cereals generally are made one of two ways — pressure-expelling or toasting. In the former method, grains of rice are moistened, then cooked in a pressurized device that flash heats them, a process that causes the liquid in them to rapidly expand, creating crunchy, puffy oblongs of rice. You know those giant bags of tasteless puffed cereal sold in natural foods stores? That's this stuff.

When most people think of puffed rice cereal, they think of the stuff made using the toasting method. This involves cooking the rice (often with a sweetener, such as malt flavoring), then partly drying and lightly rolling it. The rice then is toasted somewhere around 650 degrees, creating porous, crunchy grains that make crackling noises when wet. Variations of this technique are used to make Rice Krispies and its many knockoffs.

In one form or another, puffed rice cereal has been around since the turn of the 20th century. But standard-bearer Rice Krispies wasn't launched until 1928, and Snap! didn't join the marketing team until 1933 (and at the time he resembled a rather scary gnome with a long nose and ears). Within a few years, Crackle! and Pop! joined the effort to push the puff.

While the elves (known as Piff!, Paff! and Puff! in Norway and Sweden, in case you wondered) certainly helped bring Rice Krispies to the American table, it was the popularity of Rice Krispies Treats that transformed the cereal from just another morning carb to a full-blown American culinary icon.

According to company lore, the sticky, chewy bars were first created by Kellogg's employee Mildred Day, supposedly to be sold as a fundraiser for a Camp Fire Girls group. The recipe — cereal, marshmallow and butter — was introduced on cereal boxes in 1940 and has gone pretty much unchanged since then.

What has changed is the number of off-brand variations of the basic cereal. We counted close to a dozen across a handful of grocers in the Northeast. That's a lot of choices for how to make music in your cereal bowl.

Able to ingest only so much crackle, we purchased six of the most common brands, including an organic brown rice version, an organic cocoa-spiked variant, two store brands, the original Rice Krispies and Kellogg's own alternative, Gluten-Free Rice Krispies. We then tried all of them, first in a bowl with whole milk, then in a treat bar (all made using Kellogg's tried and true recipe).

We noticed one thing right off. Three of the six cereals were touted as being gluten-free — Kellogg's Gluten-Free Rice Krispies, Erewhon Crispy Brown Rice (organic) and EnviroKidz Organic Koala Crisp Cereal — and all three of those were made with brown rice, a whole grain. The other three more traditional varieties — which were not gluten-free — were made with white rice, a refined grain.

Turns out, this makes a difference.

Rice Krispies Treats from top: My Essentials Crispy Rice Toasted Rice Cereal, Erewhon Crispy Brown Rice, Market Basket Crispy Rice Cereal, Kellogg's Gluten-Free Rice Krispies, EnviroKidz Organic Koala Crisp Cereal and Kellogg's Rice Krispies.

Breakfast

Eaten in a bowl of milk, the clear winner was Kellogg's Gluten-Free Rice Krispies. It was pleasantly — but not overbearingly — sweet, with a consistent and lasting crunch with minimal sog-factor. It also snapped and cracked and popped for a solid 40 seconds (yes, we timed it). And parents will appreciate that it has just 1 gram of sugar per 1 cup serving (the original Rice Krispies has 4 grams).

Coming in at No. 2 in the cereal bowl test was the Erewhon entrant, also made from brown rice and with less than 1 gram of sugar per serving. It had a pleasantly nutty flavor, a solid crunch that lasted several minutes after the milk was poured. It lost points, however, for making little noise in the bowl and for the occasional overcrunchy grain (they tasted as though they'd been toasted a bit too long).

And Kellogg's original? It came in at No. 3. While a solid contender with the greatest noise factor, it got soggy after just 1 1/2 minutes in milk and didn't have as assertive a crunch as the brown rice versions.

Treats

We got similar results in the Rice Krispies Treats test. And yes, we all felt a little sick by the end.

This time, it was a tie for first place. We liked Kellogg's Gluten-Free Rice Krispies and Erewhon Crispy Brown Rice equally well. Both gave the bars a deliciously nutty flavor that paired well with — but didn't overshadow — the sweetness of the marshmallow. The cereals gave the bars a lasting crunch that was a wonderful contrast to the overall chewy texture of the treats. These were what Rice Krispies Treats should be.

Once again in third — but this time a distant third — was Kellogg's original Rice Krispies. Though the taste was fine, the texture was mushy, lacking even a modest crunch.

As for the other three contenders ... I'll spare them the humiliation of tallying their weaknesses. Suffice to say, the store brands and the shockingly high-sugar Koala Crisp (11 grams per 3/4 cup serving) were not just disappointing, but in the latter case actually unpleasant.

Our conclusion — For reliably good bars and breakfasts, Kellogg's Gluten-Free Rice Krispies are the way to go. If you are looking for an organic option, Erewhon Crispy Brown Rice is an excellent second choice.

Which means that even after more than 80 years, Kellogg's still has a winner. It's just not the winner the company might have expected.

Bruin Girls Top Filer

BY NICK RULAND

FILER • Kaitlyn Merritt and Mikayla Harris were too much this time.

In a rematch from Filer's early season win in Twin Falls, the Bruins came out on top in Filer 59-51 in nonconference girls basketball play.

The Bruins looked much improved from the first match, outscoring the Wildcats by 17 in the last three quarters.

"We've had a lot of practices but not a lot of time to get real repetitions," Twin Falls coach Nancy Jones said. "(After the first loss to Filer) I challenged the girls. We did our homework. After that first quarter, we were ready."

Harris and Merritt combined for 36 points, but may have had just as big of an impact on defense.

Burley's Chelsee Baker is fouled going to the basket during the Bobcats' basketball game against Pocatello Tuesday at Burley High School.

Defense Keys Burley Win

BURLEY • Burley played well enough defensively to overcome a cold shooting night as the Bobcats broke a two-game losing streak with a 42-23 nonconference home girls basketball victory over Pocatello.

"I thought our defense was tremendous. That's what kept us in the game," said Burley coach Roger Caresia.

Burley (4-2) held Pocatello (1-3) to 10 points through three quarters, and stifled Indians leading scorer Carly Parker to four points.

Chelsee Baker added nine points and four rebounds, and Brooke Bowers had five points and seven boards.

The Bobcats' defense had to carry them, given they shot just 32 percent from the field (15 of 47). Burley earned twice as many trips to the foul line as Pocatello, but converted only 12 of 25 free throws.

"We definitely have some things to fix. We're working on our foul shots and putting in easy shots," said junior AnnGee Wayment, who led Burley with 11 points and five rebounds. "But we worked really hard on the defensive end and that's where it paid off."

Wayment added that with practice and confidence, the shots will start to fall. Caresia noted this is the third game in a row Burley has struggled shooting.

"It isn't that we're not getting the shots. Offensively we're just not cashing in," Caresia said. "I'm East Carolina running back Vintavious Cooper celebrates after scoring a touchdown to secure the team's 42-35 win over UAB during an Oct. 20 college football game in Birmingham, Ala. Tulane University is joining the Big East as a full member in 2014 and East Carolina will be joining as a football-only member.

Tulane, ECU to Join Big East in '14

The Big East moved quickly to replace Rutgers and braced for more possible departures, getting Tulane and East Carolina to agree to join the re-invented conference in 2014.

"I would go as far to say as this is a historic day for Tulane University ... the Big East is coming to the Big East," school President Scott Cowen said Tuesday.

Tulane, in New Orleans, and East Carolina, in Greenville, N.C., will make it six Conference USA schools to join the Big East in the last two years.

Rutgers announced a week ago that it would leave the Big East for the Big Ten. Cowen and athletic director Rick Dickson said serious talks with the Big East began about a week ago.

"This is an unprecedented opportunity to join a national conference," Dickson said.

ECU athletic director Terry Holland said an offer to join the Big East came Sunday.

"It was a quick turnaround," he said.

Rutgers would like to join the Big Ten by 2014, along with Maryland, but the Scarlet Knights have left their departure date from the Big East ambiguous. Conference bylaws require members to give the league notification of two years and three months before departing, but the Big East has negotiated early exits for Syracuse, Pittsburgh and West Virginia in the past year.

West Virginia joined the Big 12 this year. Syracuse and Pitt will begin play in the Atlantic Coast Conference in September.

With Maryland leaving the ACC, there has been strong speculation that Connecticut or Louisville will be the next to leave the Big East as the Terps' replacement.

If either does, the conference is still on target to have 12 football members in 2014, just not the same ones it will have in 2013 when the new Big East debuts.

"We're not finished," Big East Commissioner Mike Aresco said. "We obviously have some other plans for expansion."

Troubled WAC Loses Denver, Adds Grand Canyon University

ASSOCIATED PRESS

DENVER • The troubled Western Athletic Conference is adding Grand Canyon University to replace the University of Denver, which is bolting for the Summit League after just one year in the WAC.

But the WAC must find another school — and quickly — in order to keep its automatic qualifying berths in the NCAA men's and women's basketball tournaments.

Grand Canyon University President Brian Mueller called Tuesday a historic day.

"We have made a commitment to excellence in athletics, just as we have academically, and that commitment has been recognized by the invitation to join the Western Athletic Conference, a conference with a storied past," Mueller said in a statement.

He predicted Division I status will raise the university's profile.

Grand Canyon, located in Phoenix with an enrollment of 6,500, would join Cal

State-Bakersfield, Idaho, New Mexico State, Seattle and Utah Valley in the WAC starting in the 2013-14 academic year.

Keith Baker, the director of athletics at Grand Canyon, said Tuesday the school has already started the division transition process, which takes four years. Following the transition period, Grand Canyon will become a full Division I member provided that it meets all NCAA standards.

For the rest of the 2012-13 season, the university said its teams will remain eligible for all Pacific West Conference Championships as well as NCAA Division II postseason play.

WAC Interim Commissioner Jeff Hurd said the conference will help Grand Canyon as it makes the transition to the competitive Division I.

"This is another important step in the rebuilding process of the WAC as we continue to strengthen the conference," Hurd said.

to run. Twin Falls became the aggressor.

But the final quarter was the decider just like the first game — and it was a back-and-forth fourth quarter with five ties. But then the Bruins pulled away in the last two minutes with their defense, seemingly deflecting at least one pass in Filer's final possessions, creating wild shots, turnovers and jump ball possessions.

The Wildcats jumped out to a 19-10 first quarter lead, as Sierra Koyle set up many of her teammates' baskets with expert passes in transition. Filer shot the ball well from the perimeter, especially Hughes and Alyssa Case, who each knocked down jumpers without hesitation.

The Bruins buckled down in the second quarter, first speeding the game up with an abbreviated press, and the turning up their energy in the half-court. While Merritt and Harris kept Twin Falls from getting blown out early, the Bruins found balance in the second quarter, with many of its baskets coming off turnovers. The Wildcats' Meg Jeffries three-point play against a rotating defender bumped Filer's lead back to four after it had nearly slipped away. Harris answered with an early post-up before halftime to cut the Wildcats lead to one.

Filer struggled to maintain an offensive flow after the first quarter. Twin Falls' Maddie Watkins and Merritt were adhesives to the Wildcats' offensive focal point — Koyle, who, because of their pressure, had to focus more on simply maintaining possession as opposed to playmaking and scoring.

Filer also struggled to get the ball inside, as the Bruins fronted Filer's formidable frontcourt of Sarah Sharp, Cassidy Ferrell and Jenna Jarolimek, using Haley Hutchinson and Harris to deny entry passes, contest and block shots when Filer managed to get them the ball.

not going to dwell on it. We're getting shots, we just have to finish."

Burley will play its first Great Basin Conference game of the season Thursday at Minico. The last time the Bobcats made that trip, they upset their rivals in the 2012 4A District IV tournament, ending the Spartans' season and state tournament aspirations.

"We're excited. We're ready to bring it, but anything can happen," Wayment said. "It's intense, there's nothing like it. You play your guts out and put it all on the floor."

Rivera: Newton Right Where He Should Be in Year Two

ASSOCIATED PRESS

CHARLOTTE, N.C. • Coach Ron Rivera said despite some growing pains he believes Cam Newton is improving and is "right where you want a second-year quarterback to be."

Newton's overall record as an NFL starter is just 9-18 and he hasn't come close this year to matching the numbers he put up as a rookie, leaving Rivera to answer repeated questions about a possible sophomore slump.

Still, Rivera said Carolina's 30-22 victory Monday night over Philadelphia only reaffirms his belief Newton is making steady strides. Newton threw for 306 yards and had four touchdowns — two passing and two rushing — in the victory.

The Panthers expected more of those types of performances this season from Newton, last year's AP Offensive Rookie of the Year. But sometimes it takes time for young quarterbacks to learn and develop, Rivera said.

"People are throwing different things at him now," Rivera said. "They're trying to throw things that have worked against him at him, and he's learning those things and understanding them."

Rivera said the coaching staff's decision to "take things off his plate" midway through the season has been instrumental in Newton's increased production in recent weeks.

The Panthers added several new twists in the playbook during the offseason figuring opposing defenses would be better prepared to stop Newton after getting months to study him on tape.

But midway through the season, with Newton struggling to produce, Rivera and his staff decided to scale back the playbook and simplify a few things for him.

"I think the thing is we put a lot on his plate earlier in the year," Rivera said. "We've taken some of it back and he has reacted to that very well now, and I think we are starting to find the balance that we need with him. The last few weeks he has been outstanding and he has given us chances to win, and this is the first time that we as a team took advantage of it."

Carolina Panthers quarterback Cam Newton (1) reacts after scoring a touchdown in the second half of Monday's football game against the Philadelphia Eagles in Philadelphia.

In the past few four games Newton has thrown for six touchdown passes and only two interceptions. In the previous seven games he had five TDs and eight picks. He has six rushing TDs this season, three of those in the past four weeks.

One of the things the Panthers did to help Newton was reduce the number of zone read option plays — ones where Newton has to make a split-second decision on whether to run or handoff.

Instead the Panthers have gone to more traditional running plays and tried to give more carries to running backs Jonathan Stewart and DeAngelo Williams.

"We are really trying to balance it out and spread it among the other players," Rivera said. "He has really responded very well to those things and it is funny because he did not want us to take anything off, he wanted more, and I think we had to give him an opportunity to take a breath once in a while."

Rivera said Newton has responded well.

"These last few weeks he has played like the guy that we believe he can become," Rivera said.

Another sign of Newton's developing maturation is his ability to change plays at the line of scrimmage, something he did with greater frequency in the win against the Eagles.

"I think he's starting to get comfortable with those things and really as he improves and learns those things he's getting better and better at it," Rivera said.

Teammates also see Newton getting more comfortable in a leadership role as he nears the end of his second season.

Newton was careful not to step on the toes of veteran players last season as a rookie. At times this season teammates have questioned his leadership ability, but veteran offensive tackle Jordan Gross said he sees the former Heisman Trophy winner making steady progress in that area.

"The last two weeks I have seen it," Gross said. "He played well last week (in a 27-21 overtime loss to Tampa Bay) and we were not able to win. But he's leading the team. He's on the sidelines talking to the o-line, talking to the receivers, doing everything we all wanted him to do. In the huddle, he's saying the right things. If he can continue to play this way and lead this way, the sky is the limit for him."

Newton said his biggest challenge this year has been consistency.

"It's been a rollercoaster season with a good game followed by a bad one, something he's desperately trying to change.

"I know personally, I feel like with the throws it was kind of high, kind of low, kind of everywhere," Newton said after Carolina's win over the Eagles. "I just want to focus on being more consistent."

Statistically, the Philadelphia game was Newton's best performance of the season.

Just don't try telling him that. "Absolutely not," he said. "I think my best game is still yet to come."

Former Baseball Union Head Miller Dead at 95

ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK • Marvin Miller was a labor economist who never played a day of organized baseball. He preferred tennis. Yet he transformed the national pastime as surely as Babe Ruth, Jackie Robinson, television and night games.

Miller

Miller, the union boss who won free agency for baseball players in 1975, ushering in an era of multimillion-dollar contracts and athletes who switch teams at the drop of a batting helmet, died Tuesday at 95. He had been diagnosed with liver cancer in August.

"I think he's the most important baseball figure of the last 50 years," former baseball Commissioner Fay Vincent said. "He changed not just the sport but the business of the sport permanently, and he truly emancipated the baseball player — and in the process all professional athletes. Prior to his time, they had few rights. At the moment, they control the games."

In his 16 1/2 years as executive director of the Major League Players Association, starting in 1966, Miller fought owners on many fronts, not only achieving free agency but making the word "strike" stand for something other than a pitched ball.

Over the years, his influence was widely acknowledged if not always honored. Baseball fans argue over whether he made the game fairer or more nakedly mercenary, and the Hall of Fame repeatedly rejected him in what was attributed to lingering resentment among team owners.

Players attending the union's annual executive board meeting in New York said their professional lives are Miller's legacy.

"Anyone who's ever played modern professional sports owes a debt of gratitude to Marvin Miller," Los Angeles Dodgers pitcher Chris Capuano said. "He empowered us as players. He gave us ownership of the game we play. Anyone who steps on a field in any sport, they have a voice because of him."

Today's Highlight:
On Nov. 28, 1942, nearly 500 people died in a fire that destroyed the Coconut Grove nightclub in Boston.

TODAY IN HISTORY

On this date:
In 1520, Portuguese navigator Ferdinand Magellan reached the Pacific Ocean after passing through the South American strait that now bears his name.

In 1861, the Confederate Congress admitted Missouri as the 12th state of the Confederacy after Missouri's disputed secession from the Union.

In 1885, at the end of the Third Anglo-Burmese War, British troops occupied Mandalay.

In 1905, Sinn Fein was founded in Dublin.

In 1912, Albania proclaimed its independence from the Ottoman Empire.

In 1922, Captain Cyril Turner of the Royal Air Force gave the first public skywriting exhibition, spelling out, "Hello USA. Call Vanderbilt 7200" over New York's Times Square; about 47,000 calls in less than three hours resulted.

In 1958, Chad, Gabon and Middle Congo became autonomous republics within the French community.

In 1961, President John F. Kennedy dedicated the original permanent headquarters of the Central Intelligence Agency in Langley, Va. Ernie Davis of Syracuse University became the first African-American to be named winner of the Heisman Trophy.

In 1962, Princess Wilhelmina, the onetime Queen of the Netherlands, died at age 82.

In 1964, the United States launched the space probe Mariner 4 on a course to Mars.

In 1979, an Air New Zealand DC-10 en route to the South Pole crashed into a mountain in Antarctica, killing all 257 people aboard.

Ten years ago: In twin attacks in Kenya, three suicide bombers killed 14 people at an Israeli-owned hotel, while at least two missiles were fired at — but missed — an Israeli jetliner taking off from Mombasa airport.

Five years ago: A day after an international Mideast peace conference in Annapolis, Md., President George W. Bush told Israeli and Palestinian leaders he was personally committed to their mission of peace. Republican presidential rivals Rudy Giuliani and Mitt Romney clashed over immigration in a provocative, no-holds-barred CNN/YouTube debate. O.J. Simpson pleaded not guilty in Las Vegas to charges of kidnapping and armed robbery stemming from a confrontation with sports memorabilia dealers. (Simpson and a co-defendant were later convicted.) Broadway stagehands and theater producers reached a tentative agreement on ending a crippling 19-day-old strike.

One year ago: Egyptians, despite a recent wave of unrest, waited peacefully in long lines to vote in the first parliamentary elections since the ouster of Hosni Mubarak; Islamist parties were the big winners. Occupy Wall Street protesters defied a deadline to remove their weeks-old encampment on the Los Angeles City Hall lawn.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE®

Bobby Wolff

"I stayed in a really old hotel last night. They sent me a wake-up letter."

— Steve Wright

The general rule about signaling is that you encourage to get a suit continued, and discourage to get the obvious shift. Occasionally, though, an unusual card should wake partner up to making a counterintuitive play.

In today's deal from the Seattle Board-a-Match, Sid Brownstein, South, bravely balanced into his opponents' suit, and his partner took him seriously. Against three spades doubled, the low heart lead went to the king and East's ace, and East cashed the diamond ace, West signaling with a middle diamond. East now played back the heart jack, on which Brownstein carefully discarded his diamond king, eliminating the threat of the diamond ruff. When declarer subsequently located the club queen, he was able to wrap up 730.

In my opinion, both defenders were responsible for the poor result. East really should have shifted to a low spade at trick three — what high card other than the spade king could his partner hold that would set the contract, and without that card how could West have doubled three spades? Equally, West might well have dropped the diamond jack on his partner's play of the ace. This would have been an "odd-ball" signal to wake up partner to the need to play the unusual suit to get his ruff — in this case, a trump!

Here, by contrast, the diamond queen would simply show the queen and jack and suggest to East that he could continue the suit if he wanted to, or was able to.

ANSWER: Your partner's cuebid is Michaels, showing 5-5 or more in hearts and a minor. If you were asked to guess, you would assume that your easiest game would be four hearts, so bid it. But if the opponents bid on to four spades, you should not sell out. Instead, compete with four no-trump to find partner's minor.

— BLISSFUL IN FLORIDA

DEAR BLISSFUL: Rather than become engaged with no intention of formalizing your union, why not have a commitment ceremony and invite friends and family to celebrate your love for each other with you? Ask a member of the clergy to bless your union. I'm sure one would oblige because it has been done before.

— DEVASTATED IN THE U.S.A.

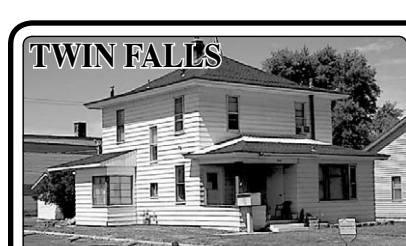

DEAR DEVASTATED: A giant step in the right direction would be to accept that you BOTH had a history before you married each other, and you both have done things you aren't proud of. Then make a list of all the GOOD things you have together, and forgive your wife for making some painful mistakes in the past that she was too ashamed to tell you. It certainly beats divorcing a woman you love over something she can't change. If that doesn't work, then you'd be wise to seek marriage counseling.

DEAR ABBY: My wife verbally abuses me constantly. We have an 11-month-old child, which is the only reason I tolerate it. While I try hard not to curse back, once in a while I end up doing so.

I have sought professional help to cope with her behavior, but the suggestions haven't helped much. The situation is becoming unbearable, and I don't see it changing any time soon. What should I do?

DEAR ABBY: My wife and I have been married for five years. I recently discovered that she made between 10 and 20 porn videos when she was 19. We got married when she was 27. We have four kids from two previous marriages.

I am devastated. When I confronted her about it, she cried harder than I had ever seen. She said she was lost, and it's the biggest regret of her entire life.

IF NOVEMBER 28 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: You've got a tiger by the tail during the next six to eight weeks. Your enthusiasm is contagious and friends will flock to your side. Once the holidays are over, you might feel a bit let down when you are no longer the center of everyone's attention, but at least one person will find you appealing even when the mistletoe has been put away. Your priorities might change in February and it is a great time to meet the general public, but hold off on making irrevocable changes until after March, when taking on extra obligations could hold you back

HOROSCOPE

Jeraldine Saunders

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Ease your mind. Constantly attacking a problem may just make the task much more difficult. You may need to find a diversion to clear your head and gain a fresh perspective. There's no shame in taking a break.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Don't dive in before you know how deep the water is. Plunging into a task you're not prepared for may get you in over your head. Know the ins and outs of a job before accepting responsibility for it.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Read between the lines. Don't accept anyone's words at face value. What is 90 percent true is by definition 10 percent false. Get your information from trusted sources to avoid foolish errors and mistakes.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Money isn't everything, but it sure does help. Finances can be improved by tightening the proverbial belt and sticking religiously to the budget. Remember that even minor expenditures add up over time.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Say it like you mean it. Prove your worth to friends and colleagues by honoring commitments and being known for reliability. Bend rules to appease the demands of others, but don't break them.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Don't change horses in midstream. Even if they don't agree with you, people will still admire you for your convictions. Backing off now could make people doubt your sincerity. Stick to your guns.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Stay within your means. You may have champagne taste but your budget is beer all the way. Don't compromise your financial future for the sake of a little status boost. Find a quiet diversion with an amorous friend.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Roll with the punches. Life seems determined to knock you down today, but by staying alert and nimble you can remain standing. Your mantra for the day should be "adapt and overcome."

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Find common ground. A situation may initially seem impossible to resolve — but if one side is willing to compromise, the other will likely fall into line. You may have to give a little to get a little.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Stick with what works. There's no need to adopt new routines when you've had success with current methods. To keep finances rosy, remember the great man's advice: Neither a borrower nor a lender be.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Telling tall tales could leave you short on credibility. Don't embellish the truth when discussing your abilities, as you may bite off more than you can chew. Know your limits and stay within them.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Nobody's perfect, but today you can come close. You are equipped to handle any task that comes your way as you are in tune with your surroundings and able to analyze situations a bit quicker than usual.
