20 Years for Man behind Machete Attack

BY ALISON GENE SMITH
alismith@magicvalley.com

TWIN FALLS • A Twin Falls judge had harsh words for a man convicted of attacking another man with a machete during his sentencing hearing Monday.

“This is one of the worst aggravated battery cases I’ve seen in my time as a judge in this community.”

Twin Falls County 5th District Judge Randy Stoker

continues to deny his guilt and has a right to do so, said Twin Falls County 5th District Judge Randy Stoker. But Hernandez-Vargas minimized his crime and flat-out attempted to deceive the court during sentencing and the jury during the trial, Stoker said.

Stoker also said it is clear Hernandez-Vargas has problems with violence and alcohol.

“This is one of the worst aggravated battery cases I’ve seen in my time as a judge in this community,” Stoker said. Stoker said he wanted to send a message to Hernandez-Vargas and the community, sentencing him to eight to 20 years in prison.

Making Homework Meaningful

TWIN FALLS • Homework. It’s a word that makes many students cringe, but educators are looking for ways to make it more relevant. Brady Dickinson, principal at Canyon Ridge High School in Twin Falls, said the quality of homework assignments is more important than the quantity. “The focus is more on making homework meaningful,” he said. Canyon Ridge doesn’t have a policy about how much homework should be assigned. And Melissa McGrath, spokeswoman for the Idaho State Department of Education, said that’s the case at the statewide level, too. “It is completely up to local school boards to regulate this if they so desire,” she wrote in an email to the Times-News. “In most cases, the school board does not even get involved and leaves it to the individual school administrator or classroom teacher to regulate.” In Blaine County, for example, some

School District to Bring 2-year Levy Measure to Voters

Jerome residents have supported a supplemental levy for about 13 years. The amount has stayed the same for 10 years.

BY JULIE WOOTTON
jwootton@magicvalley.com

JEROME • The Jerome School District will take a supplemental levy renewal measure to voters in March. The amount — $650,000 each year — won’t change. The school board voted unanimously Tuesday night to pursue a two-year measure.

In the past, the school district went to voters with a ballot measure each year.

Superintendent Dale Layne said the board talked about pursuing a higher amount for the levy, but decided against it.

“We did look at raising it, but also understand the economic conditions right now,” he said.

Jerome voters have supported a supplemental levy for about 13 years. The amount has stayed the same for 10 years.

One of the driving factors behind seeking the same amount in March, Layne said, is the way this year’s budget is looking.

The school district was originally slated to spend $750,000 in fund balance this year on operating expenses.

Layne said the district probably won’t have to spend that much anymore. That’s because it will receive a little more state funding than anticipated due to an enrollment increase.

The school district does have expenses this year that weren’t originally included in the budget. Those support new classified positions and additional bus routes.

SHOSHONE FALLS • It was raised in the name of progress.

And soon, the first hydroelectric power house at Shoshone Falls, built by Twin Falls founder I.B. Perrine, could be razed in the name of progress.

“Most visitors to Shoshone Falls don’t even notice the original gray building built by Perrine,” Idaho Power Co. spokesman Dan Olmstead said. The power company purchased Perrine’s plant in 1916 and built another power house next to the original in 1927. Dwarfed in size and production by its successor, the first power plant still produces electricity.

Idaho Power plans to salvage the historic turbines and demolish the Perrine building in order to build a 60 megawatt facility. The 1927 power plant will remain.

The two power plants stand side by side, on the north side of the river at the base of Shoshone Falls. Water is piped from the top of the falls, through the rock to the power houses below. The falling water turns large turbines in the power houses to generate electricity.

The power plants generate a total of 12 megawatts.

Perrine first talked about building a power plant at Shoshone Falls in 1900, when he persuaded Harry Hollister, from Chicago, to invest in the hydroelectric project. Perrine then filed a claim for 3,000 cubic feet per second of water from each side of the Snake River. The claims were first intended for irrigation water, then later used for the plant.

Construction of the tunnel for the pipe, or penstock, began the following year. Crews blasted rock from the base of the canyon and tunneled upward.

In August 1907, water was released into the penstock, and 500 kilowatts of electricity were produced by the power plant. A second generator was installed in 1909, increasing production to three megawatts, the same as it produces today.

“The huge turbine wheel and the massive generator revolve at top speed with a sound like the purr of a satisfied tomcat,” wrote the Twin Falls Times when the Perrine plant came on line.

Increasing Chance of Snow This Weekend

Meteorologist

A slow warm-up will take place for the rest of the week and into the first half of the weekend. Temperatures will be more seasonal for this time of year — to even a few degrees warmer than average — as they reach the upper 30s and even near 40 by Saturday. Our weather will remain dry over this period with the exception of a few light snow showers in the Wood River region Thursday night into Friday.

Skies will become cloudier as well over the next few days as a few weak systems move across the northern part of the state for the end of the week. Our next big winter system to impact the region will arrive Sunday into Christmas Eve. This storm system has the potential to cause some travel issues right before Christmas.

Most locations in the Magic Valley and Mini-

Cassia will see anywhere from a coating to maybe 2 inches. Higher amounts will occur as you move into the South Hills, Albion Mountains and Wood River region. Even Jerome and Shoshone could potentially see around 2 to 4 inches with this system by Monday evening. There’s still a lot of time between now and then, but it appears the forecast models are starting to come together on what we should see by Christmas Eve.

Attack

Hernandez-Vargas was first charged after Twin Falls County sheriff's deputies responded in May to a call about a disturbance at an address south of Kimberly. They found a 53-year-old man with traumatic injuries to his head and face. According to their report, the victim's injuries — including an apparent broken jaw and a large cut — appeared to be caused by a sharp weapon.

The victim in the case was forced to stop working at the dairy where he was employed for more than 15 years and move to Arizona to live with family. That's because it became too difficult to manage his injuries and diabetes on his own, Twin Falls County Senior Deputy Prosecutor Stan Holloway said during Monday's hearing.

Holloway said the victim's injuries were so bad that the prosecutor's office arranged to have an autopsy done, but was able to cancel after the victim's "miraculous" recovery.

Holloway suggested that Hernandez-Vargas spend 12 to 30 years in prison and pay a substantial amount of restitution.

"This defendant blames anyone and everyone other than himself for the injuries suffered by (the victim)," Holloway said.

Defense attorney Ben Andersen argued that Hernandez-Vargas should serve three to 12 years in prison and be recommended for the therapeutic community program. He also asked Stoker to consider retaining jurisdiction in the case for a year while Hernandez-Vargas participated in a therapeutic community program to see if he would be a candidate for probation in a year.

Andersen said he recognized the sentence should not be too short, but said it should also not be too long.

"In looking at retribution, the harsher punishment is more appropriate where the victim is vulnerable and totally innocent," he said.

Andersen pointed out that the victim admitted to pushing Hernandez-Vargas first during their fight, that neither man clearly remembered what happened that night, and that both were intoxicated.

Hernandez-Vargas spoke at the hearing. He repeatedly said he never planned nor expected the incident to happen or to escalate.

"I started praying every single day asking to God to please allow me to remember what happened," he said.

Hernandez-Vargas told the court Monday that he began to remember more details after the trial was over, and proceeded to tell a different story of the events than he testified to in court.

"Right now I feel so confused because I don't understand how it's possible everyone believed him and not me," he said. "I understand he got injured but I am telling the truth. I want to believe in truth and justice."

After Hernandez-Vargas spoke, Stoker said he did not believe the entire truth about what happened during the May incident came out during the trial, but that he believed the evidence in the case supports the guilty verdict.

"I'm convinced it wasn't a self-defense case by any stretch of the imagination," he said.

teachers assign homework and others don't.

But that could change in the future. The school district's policy committee is talking about coming up with more specific guidance, but hasn't taken action.

District spokeswoman Heather Crocker said the main focus of discussions is how to make homework relevant and meaningful.

Dickinson said teachers try not to overwhelm students and are more aware than in the past of how much work goes home.

He estimated that Canyon Ridge students have 1 1/2 to 2 hours of homework each night.

That depends on the rigor of their class schedule, though. Students taking Advanced Placement and dual-credit classes will generally put in more time outside of class.

"They're going to have significantly more home-

What You Said

We asked via Facebook how much homework your children have each night. Here are a few of the responses.

Lacey Swainston Loughmiller: "It depends. He has to read for 30 minutes every night and study his spelling words. Outside of that it depends on how much he got done at school. Usually no more than an hour though."

Brittnee Turner Horting: "My son is in kindergarten and usually has 1-2 pages each night, usually simple pages like tracing the letter they learned that day, or coloring."

Angel Din: "Reading 30 minutes, spelling, and 50 math problems Monday-Thursday for my 4th grader!"

Angela Egbert Ryerse: "My 1st and 7th graders have very minimal homework — reading, mostly, but my poor 5th grader has 2-3 hours of homework a night. They all go to Xavier Charter School."

Heidi Hurtado: "All day... we homeschool."

Alyson Roskelley Christianson: "My 2nd grader has about 30 min. She had more last year in 1st grade. At first, I thought it was ridiculous, but after buckling down and doing it I could see so much growth! My kindergartener goes to all day kindergarten and still brings home about 1 sheet every night. It's a reasonable amount but he struggles with some concepts so sometimes it takes a long time."

work," Dickinson said.

At Robert Stuart Middle School, principal Kasey Teske said teachers are reasonable with the homework load and realize that students have seven different classes to manage.

"Most teachers try to design their classes so there's no homework if kids work really hard during class," he said.

Robert Stuart has a 30-minute homework period built into the school day. There's even longer — an hour — available for students who are falling behind.

The school also offers after-school tutoring twice a week.

"We provide a variety of homework time so kids can keep their grades up," Teske said.

At Jerome Middle School, Principal Janet Avery said students have time in class to start practicing what they've learned. If they don't finish an assignment during class, it becomes homework.

She said parents should ask their children if they have any homework.

If they say no, then follow up and ask "What did you learn in school today?" Then, ask children to pull out notes they took during class or practice assignments they completed.

"I think with the follow-up questions, I think they'll find out that their students actually do have homework," Avery said.

Burley Grapples with Health Insurance Decision

BY LAURIE WELCH

lwelch@magicvalley.com

BURLEY • The choices look pretty grim for Burley officials who may face a $1 million penalty if they decide to pull the city out of the Idaho Independent Intergovernmental Authority, a program that pools cities' monthly premiums in a health insurance fund.

If the city stays in the pool, it will face a 36 percent increase in premiums in January, which officials say they can't afford.

"It needs to fold because it's not what it was suppose to be," City Councilman Russ Malloory said during a Tuesday discussion on the matter.

The council made no decision regarding the insurance program Tuesday.

The cost of the additional pool premium is $188,251.

Officials sent a letter to the pool's board of directors stating the city could not meet the additional premium. The IIIA board includes Mark Mitton, city administrator for Burley.

The IIIA has ordered actuarial studies on what would

At a Glance: Self-Insurance

What is it?

A city that becomes self-insured acts as its own insurer for its employee health benefits. The benefits are funded through the city, and the city manages and pays out any claims made by its workers.

Why do it?

Supporters cite several advantages. Self-insurance allows cities to oversee what types of claims are being made and thus base their deductibles, rates and preventative health care on those claims. If cities band together to buy insurance, they're more likely to get a more affordable plan.

What are the risks?

Most self-insurers tend to have a small employee pool, thus limiting the cash they have available to cover claims — especially expensive ones. High-risk claims are unpredictable, and one year of expensive claims could severely set back a self-insured city and drive costs back up.

happen to the fund if certain entities pull out instead of pony up.

The IIIA board will meet in January and likely make a decision about whether to continue operating the pool.

Mitton said the state insurance department could find the pool insolvent and shut it down.

He said he told the board that Burley does not have the money budgeted to pay the increase in premiums.

"To amend your budget you have to have extra revenues. We're not the federal government; we can't just turn on the printing presses," Mitton said.

After the increase the city would be paying 65 percent more for health insurance premiums than it did 13 months ago.

The city's second option is to pull out of the pool and face the penalty, which includes an additional cost of $85,050 to put the city's 75 employees on a traditional health insurance plan, based on a recent quote.

The rub there is the quote could expire before the city makes a decision and there is risk the cost could go up on that plan as well.

City Attorney Dave Shirley said he has been in contact with legal counsel from the insurance pool's other cities and no one has made decisions yet.

Thirty-nine cities across the state, including Burley, Paul, Oakley, Jerome, Shoshone, Ketchum and Hailey, joined the program after leaving more traditional insurers like Blue Cross to save money.

The group was hit with 11 claims in its first 40 days of operation. As a result, pool members have to kick in extra to shore up the account.

Snowstorm Causes Problems for Rockies

DENVER (AP) • A storm that has dumped more than a foot of snow in the Rocky Mountains was causing problems for travelers as it spread across the Plains on Wednesday.

The main east-west route across Colorado, Interstate 70, was closed from east of Denver to the Kansas line because of poor visibility due to blowing snow. Smaller highways were also closed in eastern Colorado.

Drivers in Iowa and Nebraska were warned to be careful or stop driving altogether starting Wednesday evening as the Plains gets its first major winter storm of the season.

Light snow is also expected at Chicago's O'Hare International Airport on Thursday, and strong winds could make visibility poor. That, combined with low clouds, could cause delays at the nation's second-busiest airport, National Weather Service forecaster Jamie Enderlen said.

Iowa officials advised drivers to avoid most roads from Wednesday night through noon Thursday, but native Laurie Harry, a manager at a Casey's General Store, expects to drive to work Thursday morning.

"If I need to get into work, I'll be here," she said. "We've had snow before. Iowans know what to expect. We're used to it."

The snow moved out of

A cow's black fur is dusted with snow Wednesday on a ranch in Superior, Colo.

Denver by midday Wednesday. At the height of the storm, Denver's airport, the nation's fifth-busiest, reported delays averaging 30 minutes because of snow and ice, but operations have since returned to normal.

The snow is a gift for ski resorts in Colorado, Utah and Arizona right before the busy holiday week. The snow might also tempt backcountry skiers, but it prompted some avalanche warnings in Colorado and Utah.

The moisture is also a relief after an extended wildfire season in Colorado. Drought conditions persist especially in the mainly agricultural eastern half of the state.

Farmer Fred Midcap welcomed the snow even though 25 mph winds were blowing some of it away from his land near Hudson in northeastern Colorado.

"The snowflakes are mostly going sideways," he said.

Midcap doesn't plow his land, a move intended to help improve the soil, and said the stubble left over from this year's weak millet crop will help hold some of the snow in place, hopefully setting up for a better growing season next year. If the snow keeps coming, it will also provide some welcome insulation to his winter wheat crop before the coldest weather of the season.

In Arizona, two recent storms had combined to blanket the mountains north of Flagstaff with 2 feet of snow, and about 20 inches in Flagstaff and along the Mogollon Rim.

Sun Valley Mayor Unhappy with Firehouse Break-in Probe

SUN VALLEY (AP) • The mayor of Idaho's best-known resort town is unhappy with an investigation into a break-in at the local firehouse.

Sun Valley Mayor Dwayne Briscoe said the break-in that was discovered earlier this year when documents went missing was never fully investigated.

The Idaho Mountain Express reported there's a difference of opinion over why the probe was halted.

Sun Valley Police Chief Cam Daggett says he thought somebody else would pursue the matter after the mayor's office asked his department to hand over evidence to the Blaine County Sheriff's Office.

But Briscoe says he never directed Daggett to end his probe.

According to police reports, fire department officials believe documents went missing sometime in February when they noticed emails had been deleted and paperwork listing uncompensated work hours had disappeared.

Teen Arrested in Oct. Stabbing

BY ALISON GENE SMITH
alismith@magievalley.com

TWIN FALLS • Another teenager has been arrested in an October attack that injured two people.

According to court documents, the 17-year-old allegedly helped Nicholas Gray, 20, attack another man with a knife.

Arraigned Monday, the teen was charged with aggravated battery and conspiracy to commit aggravated battery. He was held on $5,000 bond, and a preliminary hearing is scheduled for Dec. 28.

Jeffrey W. Allred, 23, and Roberto Garza Jr., 20, were also charged with one count of aggravated battery with use of a deadly weapon or instrument for the alleged attack. And another 17-year-old boy has been charged with aggravated battery and criminal conspiracy in the case.

Besides the knife, rocks were thrown at one point during the fight, and a female was hit in the head and began bleeding profusely, police concluded.

The male victim underwent emergency surgery for a stab wound. Upon waking, he identified Allred and one of the 17-year-olds as two of his attackers, according to police. The man said he thought four people attacked him, but told police he lost consciousness fairly quickly during the fight.

Gray and Garza Jr. are scheduled to be arraigned in Twin Falls County 5th District Court on Jan. 2. Allred and the first 17-year-old to be charged are scheduled to be arraigned on Jan. 7.

An anti-ballistic insert for a children's backpack pierced by .40 cal., left, and .357 mag. rounds is seen at the Amendment II manufacturing facility in Salt Lake City. Anxious parents reeling in the wake the Connecticut school shooting are fueling sales of armored backpacks for children.

RUSH ON GUNS, ARMORED BACKPACKS FOLLOWS SHOOTING

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) • The reaction to the Connecticut school shooting can be seen in gun stores and self-defense retailers across the nation: Anxious parents are fueling sales of armored backpacks for children while firearms enthusiasts are stocking up on assault rifles in anticipation of tighter gun control measures.

A spike in gun sales is common after a mass shooting, but the Connecticut tragedy has generated record sales in many states. Colorado set a single-day record for gun background check requests the day after the Connecticut mass shootings, and some online retailers are removing assault rifles from websites in part because of diminishing supplies.

Nevada saw more requests for background checks in the days after the shooting than any other weekend this year. Some gun shop owners are even holding back on sales, anticipating only more interest and value after President Barack Obama on Wednesday tasked his administration with creating concrete proposals to reduce gun violence.

Robert Akers, a Rapid

City, S.D., gun seller specializing in assault-style rifles, said he has about 50 of the weapons in stock but he's not actively trying to sell them and has even turned off his phone.

"It's a madhouse," said Akers, owner of Rapid Fire Firearms. "Any time they have one of these shootings or an election, it gets that way. I don't even want to sell them right now because I won't be able to replace them for probably six months. ... The price is only going to go up higher."

At least three companies that make armored backpacks designed to shield children caught in a shooting also are reporting a large spike in sales and interest.

The body armor inserts fit into the back panel of a child's backpack, and they sell for about $150 to $300, depending on the company.

The armor is designed to stop bullets from handguns, not assault rifles like the one used by the Connecticut shooter. The manufacturers and some parents say that while they don't guarantee children won't be killed, they could still be used as shields.

"Just like a seatbelt increases your odds of surviving in a car crash, these increase your odds of surviving being shot," said Kerry Clark, president of Texas-based Backpackshield.com.

Ken Larson, 41, of Denver, already had an armored backpack for himself and convinced his wife to buy one for their 1-year-old after the Connecticut shooting on Friday, when a gunman stormed Sandy Hook Elementary in Newtown and massacred 20 first-graders and six adults.

"It's a no brainer. My son's life is invaluable," Larson said. "If I can get him a backpack for $200 that makes him safer, I don't even have to think about that. Where is my credit card?"

Though Larson knows the backpack won't guarantee his son's safety when he starts school, he says it's a worthy precaution.

"Kids already carry backpacks. When there is a shooting, you run for your life," he said. "Having it right there and on when he runs for his life gives him more safety."

Elmar Uy, vice president of operations at Bullet Blocker, a Massachusetts-based company that has sold the backpack armor since 2007, says the company's sales have tripled since last week.

At Amendment II in Salt Lake City, sales of children's backpacks and armored inserts are up 300 percent.

"The incident last week highlights the need to protect our children," said co-owner Derek Williams. "We didn't get in this business to do this. But the fact that is that our armor can help children just as it can help soldiers."

Amendment II was founded about two years ago using a new lightweight nanotechnology to make body armor products for soldiers and law enforcement less cumbersome. They began making the backpack inserts about six months ago, and also sell child-sized bulletproof vests.

Pot Provider Reaches Post-conviction Plea Deal

HELENA, Mont. (AP) • A medical marijuana provider who had vowed to fight his convictions on federal drug charges, even as he faced more than 80 years in prison, has reached a post-conviction plea agreement that could mean he spends as little as five years behind bars.

The agreement filed in U.S. District Court in Helena dismisses six of eight drug-related convictions against Chris Williams, as long as he waives his right to appeal his conviction and sentence.

"With the rest of my life literally hanging in the balance, I simply could not withstand the pressure any longer," Williams said in a statement.

Under the agreement filed Tuesday, Williams remains convicted of possessing a firearm in connection with drug trafficking and possession with intent to distribute marijuana. The firearm charge carries a mandatory minimum five-year sentence, while the distribution charge calls for a sentence of up to five years. The agreement also calls for prosecutors to ask U.S. District Judge Dana Christensen to dismiss a $1.7 million forfeiture requirement.

Nevada Near Bottom of Survey on Emergency Readiness

LAS VEGAS (AP) • Nevada scores near the bottom of a national survey looking at public health and emergency preparedness.

The nonpartisan Trust for America's Health and the Robert Wood Johnson Foundation released their annual "Ready or Not?" report on Wednesday.

Kansas and Montana scored lowest on a 10-point scale measuring preparation for diseases, disasters, bioterrorism and extreme weather.

Nevada tied with Colorado, Georgia, Hawaii and New Jersey for next-lowest in their ability to respond.

Maryland, Mississippi, North Carolina, Vermont and Wisconsin scored highest.

The report says that in the years since Sept. 11, 2001, preparedness has improved.

But it points to gaps in readiness for health and extreme weather emergencies, bioterrorist threats and serious disease outbreaks.

Sarah Wolsey Harper

Jan. 15, 1921-Dec. 15, 2012

OREM, Utah • Sarah Wolsey Harper, 91, died in Orem, Utah, on Saturday, Dec. 15, 2012.

She was born Jan. 15, 1921, in Cardston, Alberta, Canada, to Luther Justin Wolsey and Mary Eliza Spence Wolsey. She was one of 13 children and the only daughter to survive past infancy. She was raised with six brothers and was the second youngest child to live to adulthood. Two brothers and four sisters died in infancy. When she was a small child, her family lived on a ranch in southern Alberta. Later they moved back to Cardston, where she grew up and attended public school.

On her first day of Grade 1, she decided that she wanted to be a school teacher. That desire never left her. By age 16, she had earned teaching credits and began assisting a teacher in Grade 1. Sarah later attended Normal School in Calgary, Alberta, to receive her teaching credentials qualifying her to teach in the Alberta public schools and began her teaching career in a one-room school house in southern Alberta with students from Grades 2 to 11.

She moved to Provo, Utah, during the summer of 1940 and attended Brigham Young University, graduating in 1942 with a bachelor’s degree in education. Sarah also earned a master’s degree in education from Brigham Young University in 1963. During the ensuing years, she taught English in junior high and senior high schools in the following locations: Idaho, Utah, Alaska, California, Newfoundland and England. She was a loving disciplinarian, and her students loved her. She married Rawlins Joseph Harper on Sept. 23, 1972, in the Provo Utah LDS Temple. On that day, she became a wife, mother, grandmother and great-grandmother. She moved to Malta, Idaho, with Rawlins and went from her career as an English teacher to being the wife of a cattle rancher. She even raised her own bulls.

She served a full-time mission for The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints in the Eastern States Mission in 1948 to 1949. After her marriage to Rawlins, they served two missions together, in the Delaware/Maryland Mission and at the Washington D.C. Temple Visitor Center. Rawlins died on Christmas Day 1990. Sarah left a year later for another full-time mission, this time to South Carolina. She left for the mission field in December 1991 and returned home 18 months later. She was preceded in death by her husband, her parents, seven brothers, four sisters, three children and two grandchildren. She is survived by a sister-in-law, Evelyn H. Wolsey of Springville, Utah; a brother, Heber G. Wolsey of California; three children, Jay (Janet) Harper of Malta, Idaho, Kay (Vickie) Harper of Mesa, Ariz., and Roberta (Ike) Christiansen of Rupert, Idaho; and a daughter-in-law, Donna Harper of Burley, Idaho. She is also survived by 29 grandchildren, 102 great-grandchildren, 79 great-great-grandchildren and nine great-great-great-grandchildren. Many nephews and nieces and other extended family whom she loved and who loved her also survive her.

Sarah loved her teaching career and missionary service. She has also served teaching assignments and other callings in the various auxiliaries of the LDS Church in the local wards and stakes where she has lived. Ever the teacher, she has taught the restored gospel and literature to many people throughout the earth.

Sarah loved and was loved by everyone who has had the privilege of knowing and associating with her. Quoting from her personal history: “I have to confess that I have a sincere hope that when I return to my Father, He will put His arm around me and say, ‘Well done, thou good and faithful servant.’ And I pray we may all be there together.”

The funeral will be held at 10:30 a.m. Saturday, Dec. 22, at the Walker Sanderson Tribute Center, 85 E. 300 S. in Provo, Utah. Family and friends may call from 9:30 to 10:15 a.m. prior to the service Saturday at the Tribute Center. Burial will be at 3 p.m. the same day in the Valley View Cemetery in Malta, Idaho, under the direction of the Walker Sanderson Tribute Center in Provo, Utah. # State Dept. Security Chief Resigns After Benghazi Report

WASHINGTON (AP) • Three State Department officials resigned under pressure Wednesday, less than a day after a damning report blamed management failures for a lack of security at the U.S. diplomatic mission in Benghazi, Libya, where militants killed the U.S. ambassador and three other Americans on Sept. 11.

The resignations came as lawmakers expressed anger and frustration over the findings of an independent review panel, and the State Department struggled to find a balance between protecting its diplomats while allowing them to do their jobs connecting with people in high-risk posts.

Obama administration officials said those who had stepped down were Eric Boswell, the assistant secretary of state for diplomatic security, Charlene Lamb, the deputy assistant secretary responsible for embassy security, and Raymond Maxwell, the deputy assistant secretary of state who oversees the Maghreb nations of Libya, Algeria, Tunisia and Morocco. The officials spoke on condition of anonymity because they weren't authorized to discuss personnel matters publicly. Some of the three may have the option of being re-assigned to other duties, the officials said.

The department declined immediate comment on the resignation of the officials whose decisions had been criticized in the unclassified version of the Accountability Review Board's report that was released late Tuesday.

The board's co-chairman, retired Adm. Mike Mullen, told reporters that the board had not determined that any officials had "engaged in willful misconduct or knowingly ignored his or her responsibilities," But Mullen, a former Joint Chiefs of Staff chairman, added, "We did conclude that certain State Department bureau level senior officials in critical levels of authority and responsibility in Washington demonstrated a lack of leadership and management ability appropriate for senior ranks in their responses to security concerns posed by the special mission." Mullen said the mission's security fell through bureaucratic cracks caused in part because buildings were categorized as temporary. The report said that budget constraints had caused some officials to be more concerned with saving scarce money than in security.

Co-chairman Thomas Pickering, a retired ambassador, said the personnel on the ground in Benghazi had reacted to the attack with bravery and professionalism. But, he said, the security precautions were "grossly inadequate" and the contingent was overwhelmed by the heavily armed militants.

"They did the best they possibly could with what they had but what they had wasn't enough," Pickering said.

Pickering and Mullen spoke shortly after briefing members of Congress in private. Lawmakers from both parties emerged from the sessions with harsh words for the State Department. "They failed to anticipate what was coming because of how bad the security risk already was there. ... They failed to connect the dots," he said. "They didn't have adequate security leading up to the attack and once the attack occurred, the security was woefully inadequate."

Obama to Send Congress Gun Proposals in January

WASHINGTON (AP) • Declaring the time for action overdue, President Barack Obama promised on Wednesday to send Congress broad proposals in January for tightening gun laws and curbing violence after last week's schoolhouse massacre in Connecticut.

Even before those proposals are drafted, Obama pressed lawmakers to reinstate a ban on military-style assault weapons, close loopholes that allow gun buyers to skirt background checks and restrict high-capacity ammunition clips.

"The fact that this problem is complex can no longer be an excuse for doing nothing," Obama said in his most detailed comments on guns since Friday's killing of 20 schoolchildren and six adults in Newtown, Conn. "The fact that we can't prevent every act of violence doesn't mean we can't steadily reduce the violence."

Gun control measures have faced fierce resistance in Congress for years but that may be changing now because of last week's violence. Since then, Obama has signaled for the first time in his presidency that he's willing to spend political capital on the issue and some prominent gun-rights advocates on Capitol Hill — Democrats and Republicans alike — have expressed willingness to consider new measures.

Still, given the long history of opposition to tighter gun laws, there is no certainty the legislation Obama backed Wednesday or the proposals he will send to Congress next month will become law. Obama tasked Vice President Joe Biden, a longtime-gun control advocate, with overseeing the administration-wide process to create those proposals. Beyond firearms' restrictions, officials will also look for ways to increase mental health resources and consider steps to keep society from glamorizing guns and violence.

Obama's January deadline underscores the desire among White House officials to respond swiftly to the Newtown shooting. Obama aides worry that as the shock of the shooting fades, so, too, will the prospects that pro-gun lawmakers will work with the White House to tighten restrictions. Emphasizing the need to take action, Obama said eight people have been killed by guns across the U.S. since the Newtown shooting.

The president has called for a national dialogue on gun violence before, after other mass shootings during his presidency. But his rhetoric has not been backed up with concrete action. And some of the gun measures Obama has signed lessened restrictions on guns, allowing people to carry concealed weapons in national parks and in checked bags on Amtrak trains. The president bristled at suggestions that he had been silent on gun issues during his four years in office.

FBI: Escaped Inmates Took Cab Near Chicago Jail

CHICAGO (AP) • Two convicted bank robbers who pulled off a daring overnight escape from a high-rise Chicago jail had changed from their prison garb by the time they hopped into a cab outside the lock-up, investigators said Wednesday as they expanded their manhunt for the men.

Authorities were raiding houses and combing through records looking for anybody with ties to the inmates who climbed out a jail window and descended 20 stories using a makeshift rope.

The FBI said surveillance footage from a camera near the Metropolitan Correctional Center shows Kenneth Conley and Joseph Banks getting into a cab at about 2:45 a.m. Thursday — about two hours after guards were supposed to do a bed check and four hours before workers spotted the rope dangling from the jail. The pair had changed from their orange jail-issued jumpsuits into light-colored pants and light-colored shirts, the FBI said.

The FBI was offering a $50,000 reward for information leading to the apprehension of Conley and Banks, with the manhunt focused mainly on Chicago and its suburbs.

Law enforcement officials said at least three homes in the suburbs south of Chicago where one of the inmates once lived were searched Tuesday, and a suburban strip club where Conley worked confirmed that investigators had visited.

Investigators believe the men had been at a home in Tinley Park, 25 miles southwest of Chicago, just hours before police SWAT teams stormed it. A law enforcement official said the home was that of Conley's mother and that after the woman refused to let the escapees in, the men used a rock to break a window.

Many questions remained about how the two managed to pull off such an escape from the federal prison in the heart of downtown Chicago. At the top of the list is how they could have smashed a gaping hole into the wall at the bottom of a 6-inch-wide window without being heard or seen by correctional officers. Another question is why, in the federal facility that houses some 700 inmates, the correctional officers apparently did not check on the two men between the 10 p.m. headcount and one at 5 a.m. And what was done between the 5 a.m. headcount and 7 a.m. when the rope was spotted?

US Army Seeks Death Penalty in 16 Afghan Killings

SEATTLE (AP) • The U.S. Army said Wednesday it will seek the death penalty against the soldier accused of killing 16 Afghan villagers in a predawn rampage in March, a decision his lawyer called "totally irresponsible."

The announcement followed a pre-trial hearing last month for Staff Sgt. Robert Bales, 39, who faces premeditated murder and other charges in the attack on two villages in southern Afghanistan. Prosecutors said Bales left his remote southern Afghanistan base early on March 11, attacked one village and returned to the base, then slipped away again to attack another nearby compound. Of the 16 people killed, nine were children.

No date has been set for Bales' court martial, which will be held at Joint Base Lewis-McChord south of Seattle. His civilian lawyer, John Henry Browne, told The Associated Press he met with Army officials last week to argue his client shouldn't face the possibility of the death penalty, given that Bales was serving his fourth deployment in a war zone when the killings occurred.

"The Army is not taking responsibility for Sgt. Bales and other soldiers that the Army knowingly sends into combat situations with diagnosed PTSD, concussive head injuries and other injuries," Browne said. "The Army is trying to take the focus off the failure of its decisions, and the failure of the war itself, and making Sgt. Bales out to be a rogue soldier."

Bales' wife, Kari Bales, said in a statement Wednesday that she and their children have been enjoying their weekend visits with Bales at Joint Base Lewis-McChord, and she hopes he receives an impartial trial. "I no longer know if a fair trial for Bob is possible, but it very much is my hope, and I will have faith," she said.

An Army criminal investigations command special agent testified earlier that Bales tested positive for steroids three days after the killings, and other soldiers testified that Bales had been drinking the evening of the massacre.

Prosecutors, in asking for a court-martial trial, have pointed to statements Bales made after he was apprehended, saying his comments demonstrated a "clear memory of what he had done, and consciousness of wrongdoing."

OPINION

“Systematic failures and leadership and management deficiencies at senior levels within two bureaus of the State Department resulted in a Special Mission security posture that was inadequate for Benghazi and grossly inadequate to deal with the attack that took place.”

An independent panel charged with investigating the deadly Sept. 11 attack on Libya that killed a U.S. ambassador and three other Americans.

Mountain Out of a Molehill

The poet Carl Sandburg supposedly was asked by a young playwright to attend a rehearsal. Sandburg did but fell asleep. The playwright exclaimed, “How could you sleep when you knew I wanted your opinion?” Sandburg replied, “Sleep is an opinion.”

So is nonvoting. Remember this as the Obama administration mounts a drive to federalize voter registration, a step toward making voting mandatory. Attorney General Eric Holder considers it self-evidently alarming that 60 million adult citizens were not registered in 2008. He wants Washington to register everyone automatically. “The arc of American history,” he says, “has bent towards expanding the franchise.” But the fact many people do not register to vote is not evidence that the franchise is restricted other than by voters’ inertia.

Holder’s argument for trusting Washington, which does so many things badly, to superintend elections capably should be judged against this loopy statement by him: “We should rethink this whole notion that voting only occurs on Tuesday.” This year, voting began in some states in September; as much as 40 percent of votes were cast before Election Day; 12 states allow on-line registration. Assistant Attorney General Thomas Perez, head of Holder’s civil rights division, rightly says that voting too often is “an endurance contest” involving a long wait in line, frequently because of questions about voters’ registrations. But the Heritage Foundation’s Hans von Spakovsky, a former member of the Federal Election Commission, says:

“One of the reasons that state voter registration rolls are in such poor shape today — with large numbers of voters who are dead, have moved or are noncitizens — is because of the restrictive standards imposed by the federal government in 1993 by the National Voter Registration Act. That law made it very difficult to remove ineligible voters. Local jurisdictions were sued so often by the Justice Department when they tried to remove ineligible voters, many stopped trying to clean up their lists at all. That is why there are many places around the country where the number of registered voters is greater than the Census says there are individuals of voting age.”

Notice the perverse dialectic by which Washington aggrandizes its power: It promises to ameliorate problems exacerbated by its supposedly ameliorative policies. Notice, too, the logic of Perez’s thesis that “our democracy is stronger when more people have a say in electing their leaders.” Therefore the public good would be served by penalizing nonvoting, as Australia, Belgium and at least 10 other countries do. Liberals love mandates (e.g., health insurance). Why not mandatory voting? In 1960, 62.8 percent of age-eligible citizens voted. In the 13 subsequent presidential elections, lower turnouts than this have coincided with the removal of impediments to voting (poll taxes, literacy tests, burdensome registration and residency requirements). Turnout has not increased as the electorate has become more educated and affluent and as government has become more involved in Americans’ lives. There are four obvious reasons for nonvoting.

One is contentment. Americans are voluble complainers but are mostly comfortable. Second, the stakes of politics are agreeably low because constitutional rights and other essential elements of happiness are not menaced by elections. Those who think high voter turnout indicates civic health should note that in three German elections, 1932-33, turnout averaged more than 86 percent, reflecting the terrible stakes: The elections decided which mobs would rule the streets and who would inhabit concentration camps.

Third, the winner-take-all allocation of electoral votes in 48 states — an excellent idea, for many reasons — means many state races without suspense. (After their conventions, Barack Obama and Mitt Romney campaigned in just eight and 10 battleground states, respectively.) Fourth, gerrymandered federal and state legislative districts reduce competitive races.

Because the likelihood of any individual’s vote mattering is infinitesimal, and because the effort required to be an informed voter can be substantial, ignorance and abstention are rational, unless voting is cathartic or otherwise satisfying. A small voting requirement such as registration, which calls for the individual voter’s initiative, acts to filter potential voters with the weakest motivations.

It has been said that for every complex problem there is a solution that is clear, simple and wrong. Washington soon may seek a complex “solution” — pre-emption of states’ responsibilities; federal micromanagement of elections; eventual coercion of lackadaisical citizens — to the non-problem of people choosing not to vote.

The letter to the editor, “Arm School Staff with Guns,” sparked some debate online:

platts: Mass killings of this type were more prevalent in past decades. In fact, more happened during the ’90s when the last so-called assault weapons ban was in effect.

A child is more likely to be die in school due to traffic issues or health problems and many times more likely for sports deaths. This discussion should continue, but put in perspective along with mental health issues that lead to these horrendous tragedies.

spoppino: This is an irresponsible suggestion, especially coming from a teacher. Arming school personnel would only increase the risk of accidents and injuries to school children. Where and how would teachers’ guns be stored? How would teachers, who already work long hours, make time for the necessary training in both gun handling and the ethical use of lethal force? What horrifies me is the vision of trigger-happy Rambo-wannabes just itching for a chance to blow away a bad guy. That’s Hollywood fantasy. Let’s leave the job of taking out the perps to law enforcement. Since we as a nation are unwilling to address the ease with which anyone can buy any gun, let us concentrate instead on improving mental health care for all, so that future shooters might be helped before they act out their delusions.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Children Need to Know They are Important, Meaningful

I am a first semester student at the College of Southern Idaho for early childhood education. The topic of this letter is early childhood education and the importance of family involvement. I feel the need to reach out to the community about this.

Children ages birth through age 8 are learning at an accelerated rate. During these ages, children’s brains are like little sponges. Everything they see and hear in their environment will be taken in and stored for the rest of their lives.

Knowing this, children need positive reinforcement by the adults around them. They need to be talked to, even infants. They need to know they are important and meaningful. Positive and negative influences are very strong at this point in their lives. Read to your children, be involved in their schooling. Tell them they mean something. These small things can really influence who and what your child will become.

I was unaware at how much infants and toddlers obtain. They need to be held, loved and respected. These are the most important years of their development. Children who are ignored or neglected are at high risk for severe emotional consequences in their adult lives. They feel no sense of self, no self-worth. They seek out unhealthy relationships to fill the voids from their young lives.

Please, hold your children. Let them know they are loved. As parents, you are their first teachers. They are our future; please let them know they are important. Think of what the world would be like if everyone knew this. Thank you.

Water Quality Trading has No History of Success

In a recent article (“Officials Promote Water Quality Trading to Reduce Pollution,” Dec. 14, 2012), you reported that James Werntz of the Environmental Protection Agency supported the use of water quality trading to reduce pollution. Mr. Werntz is quoted as saying that the idea “doesn’t have that kind of wild success yet. But it has potential.”

In fact, trading has no history of success, and its potential is dubious at best. There is not a single documented case of water quality improvements resulting from nonpoint-to-point source pollution trading. A Rutgers University study listed as a success for a program that “No actual trades occurred.”

The idea behind water quality trading is misguided. While the Clean Water Act, which has led to impressive gains in water quality, makes it illegal to pollute our waterways, water quality trading merely auctions off the right to pollute to the highest bidder.

This is not a way to clean our rivers, but to turn Idaho’s waterways into the next market for Wall Street traders.

Innocence of Our World Changed with Today’s Technology

The recent events in Newtown, Conn. were shocking enough, and I’ve yet to wrap my mind around it. But the actions of the news media were worse.

There should be a law that you cannot be so close to a crime scene or reporting on said scene until that crime scene is completed. To see you crawling all over each other to get not only false information but stepping into already shocked and terrified crime/rescue personnel, and who were personally involved in that crime scene.

I know it’s important to report news and it’s your job, but you all should have some job ethics as well as compassion for those involved. I’m positive that had you of stepped back and given it some time, you would have got the correct information and details to do your reports. Instead you all needed to force the cameras and microphones into those already in trauma.

Shame on you! There is a time and a place!

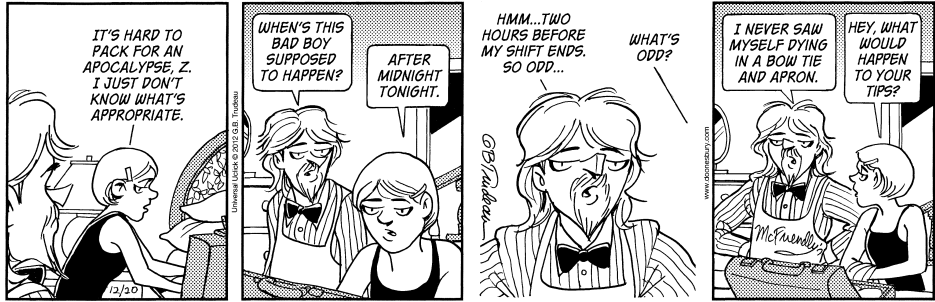

The innocence of our world has changed with today’s technology. It’s all on the television/movies for us to see. And it seems a competition for all media/video games to see who has the most violence, sex and gore. What is it that as humans we must have all the awful details?

I grew up with guns and I know that guns do not kill; it’s the one who pulls the trigger. Controlling guns will not stop the crimes; there are too many illegal ones out there all ready. Do we also start to control knives, cars, airplanes, poisons, etc.? And it seems to me that many of these crimes are targeted at mass deaths so then when do we start control on bombs as well? Weapons do kill, but it’s the human mentality that must be changed.

Please let’s all regain our innocence; take a good look within ourselves and make changes.

This exclusive photo is a clear depiction of how hard the Amish are willing to work when Heat Surge just can't keep up. Since they're already buried in mail, the U.S. Zip Code Coupons issued by Heat Surge can only be cashed in by calling the special Toll Free Hotlines at 1-888-414-4671 beginning at 8:30am this morning. But only Twin Falls area residents who find their zip code on the distribution list below are getting the new Heat Surge EV.2 fireplace by cashing in the coupons printed in today's publication before they expire in just 2 days.

Consumers bury Amish with orders for new heating miracle

So many consumers are cashing in coupons to get the inventions patented by the U.S. Gov't with advanced Hybrid-Thermic heat technology that incredibly heats for just pennies an hour to drastically lower natural gas, electric, propane and heating oil bills that special Toll Free Hotlines had to be set up so Twin Falls area residents can cash in the U.S. Zip Code Coupons before they expire in just 2 days

IDAHO - The U.S. Zip Code Distribution Hotlines are ringing off the hook.

That's because Twin Falls area residents who find their zip code listed in today's publication are cashing in U.S. Zip Code Coupons and getting the new heating miracle that heats for just pennies an hour to drastically lower home heat bills.

Twin Falls area residents who get the new Heat Surge® EV.2 Roll-n-Glow fireplace with Hybrid-Thermic heat technology by calling the U.S. Zip Code Hotlines before the coupons expire in just 2 days will never have to pay high heat bills again.

"Everyone's trying to get the new Heat Surge EV.2 series because it combines advanced Hybrid-Thermic heat technology with a free on-board micro-allergen filter system that automatically cleans and purifies the air as it heats for just pennies an hour to drastically lower heat bills," said Jacob Drakenbrod, Amish Carpentry Shop Manager.

This announcement is being so widely advertised because demand for Heat Surge Hybrid-Thermic heaters has skyrocketed ever since reports surfaced from Heat Surge analysts showing just how much money zone heating with the EV.2 series saves people on heat bills.

According to the avalanche of consumer reviews, people absolutely swear by them, repeatedly saying, "It saves money," "looks beautiful," and "keeps you warm from head to toe, floor to ceiling." That's why Twin Falls area residents will be scrambling to cash in the U.S. Zip Code Coupons reprinted in today's publication starting at precisely 8:30am this morning.

But there is one catch. Only Twin Falls area residents who find their zip code on the Distribution List and immediately call the U.S. Zip Code Distribution Hotlines are authorized to cash in the coupons reprinted in today's publication to get the new Heat Surge EV.2, just as long as they do it before the coupons expire in 2 days.

"Everyone who gets the new EV.2 Roll-n-Glow® fireplace says it feels like getting an extra paycheck every month. That's because it pays for itself in just weeks and then it keeps putting money in your pocket every month after that," said Drakenbrod.

In fact, it gives you 74° of bone-soothing room heat even when the home thermostat is turned down to 59°. That means you can zone heat and never be cold again. And since it only uses about the same energy per hour as a coffee maker you'll save a ton on your heat bills.

The new Heat Surge EV.2 Roll-n-Glow fireplace combines an on-board air purifier with Hybrid-Thermic™ heat technology that acts like the rays of the sun to heat you, the kids, the pets and everything else evenly from head to toe.

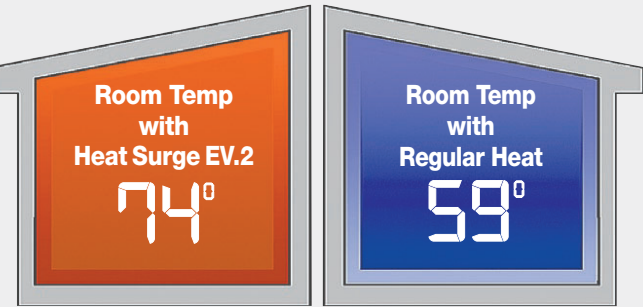

The good news is, the new EV.2 is virtually maintenance free, so all you have to do is plug it in and relax in front of the Fireless Flame®.

Kimberly Woman Finds the Power and Healing of the Rock

BY MARY KEATING
Special to the Times-News

KIMBERLY

Nearly four years ago at the base of a magnificent granite formation, Diana Lincoln-Haye of Kimberly strapped on a helmet, gazed up the rock face and reached out to begin a quest to reach the top of the mountain.

Her journey has taken her as far away as Romania, and up icy rock formations as a part of Chicks with Picks ice climbing, and has etched a path toward healing, renewal and giving back.

"After the loss of my 19-year-old daughter, Lacey, I was really struggling," Haye said. "A good friend, looking to help and support me, invited me to go rock climbing with her at Castle Rocks State Park. I found that climbing was quite grounding and forced me to really focus on the present. The concentration, the beauty and friendship are just a few of the reasons why I climb each week."

Rock climbing requires intense focus and can be a stress reliever. As a climber starts to ascend, he or she must pay keen attention to each movement and really focus on the moment. As a climber continues, other mental challenges and burdens have to be put out of the mind in order to successfully and safely reach the top.

"Climbing is both physically and mentally challenging," Haye said. "It is an exercise in problem solving. You must make a decision with each move. You check your balance. You are both thoughtful and patient. You live in the moment. In fact, I strongly encourage others to look at rock climbing as a way to help cope with life's challenges."

With the surge in rock climbing walls, instructional programs, adaptive equipment and adaptive organizations, rock climbing is accessible to people of all ages and abilities.

Apart from her many roles — candidate for a master's degree in counseling, former diagnostic sleep center owner, respiratory therapist, grandmother — Haye is a rock climbing instructor. She looks forward

Ski Like Santa at Pomerelle

ALBION • Pomerelle Mountain Resort picked up 30 inches of snow in the past 30 hours, spokeswoman Gretchen Anderson said Tuesday afternoon.

"Boy did we get dumped on! We've spent the better part of the day moving 30 inches of fresh powder so guests can make it to and from the mountain," she said. "This will make conditions sweet for our upcoming Santa day on Monday."

For Pomerelle's Santa Competition & Costume Party on Dec. 24, deck yourself out in Santa style for the costume parade and a Ho! Ho! Ho! contest. Anyone dressed head-to-toe like the jolly man gets a free lift ticket for the day. And the Santa with the best and most Ho! Ho! Ho-ing will win two adult full-day lift tickets to use later; secret skiers and elves will watch throughout the day and keep a tally.

Awards will follow the Santa parade, which is 2 p.m. on the Magic Carpet.

The HOT GEAR for COLD IDAHO Adventures

BY PAUL DUNN
pdunn@magicvalley.com

Consider this scenario: You're anticipating a winter hiking trip to the woods, so you pull out the trusty snow boots that have served you well over the years. They're still in virtually perfect condition, so you figure they'll handle the hilly terrain you're about to encounter even though they've been in a closet for half a decade or so.

Well, they do — for three of the four hours you're out. The last hour is a big fat bummer.

Why? Because as you're hiking down the last hill, the darn boots fall apart. They split like a faultline in an earthquake.

This incident, which happened to a certain embarrassed features reporter we won't name, didn't especially surprise Ryan Kober. He manages Elevation Sports in Twin Falls.

"You know," he said recently, "a lot of winter boots don't have a lot of stability."

So given that, what sorts of boots and other winter recreational apparel should Idahoans buy? We asked Kober and other employees at Magic Valley businesses, and here's what they advised:

Boots

Kober, 37, said people sometimes mistakenly assume their apparel is still functional even though they haven't worn the clothing for a long time.

"If you have a big trip coming up, test your gear first," he said. "Go out, try it, wear it and come back home within a reasonable distance."

That's especially critical for hiking and snow boots, he said.

"That footwear that felt good five years ago may not feel good now, because your feet may have changed," he said.

He said the newest in snow boot technology — developed in the past two years and redesigned yearly for the fashion conscious — is called Chilcat from The North Face. The boots use "icepick" technology,

Soldier Mountain Sets Opening Day

FAIRFIELD • Soldier Mountain Ski Area will open for business Dec. 26 — launching the first ski season since actor Bruce Willis gifted the more-than-60-year-old ski area to a local nonprofit earlier this year.

Under the new nonprofit's stewardship, Soldier has already begun to renovate facilities at the mountain: new facades for the ski patrol buildings, improvements to the lodge, installation of a new drive system in its main lift and installation of a "magic carpet" on the beginners hill.

Day passes are $19 for children and $35 for adults.

"Soldier is a fundamental piece of southwest Idaho, and we couldn't be more excited to welcome our friends, family and neighbors back to the mountain," Will Varin, president of Soldier Mountain Ski Area Inc., said Wednesday.

Lower Limits on Trout Take Effect Jan. 1

JEROME • The limit on trout will go down to two per day in some streams and urban ponds on Jan. 1, the Idaho Department of Fish and Game said.

The Idaho Fish and Game Commission adopted the rule in November. The goal is to increase opportunity for more anglers to catch stocked fish and to reduce the boom-and-bust cycle with the stocking program, a department release said.

Affected waters are Big Elk Creek, Crooked Creek and Red River in the Clearwater Region; Parkcenter Pond, Weiser Community Pond, McDevitt Pond and Wilson Ponds in the Southwest Region; Edson Fichter Pond in the Southeast Region; and Becker Pond in the Upper Snake Region.

In addition, in the Magic Valley Region the length limit is removed on small-mouth bass in Magic Reservoir; and in the Southeast Region the bass limit is removed in the Treasureton Reservoir.

In the Upper Snake Region the limit is removed on rainbow trout and hybrid trout in the South Fork Snake River tributaries. The limit on brown trout is two, with none under 16 inches. In Henrys Lake Outlet, the 400-yard section from the USGS gauge to the Henrys Lake Dam opens to fishing.

These changes take effect Jan. 1.

New fishing seasons and rules brochures for 2013-15 are now available at all license vendors, Fish and Game offices and on the Fish and Game website: fishandgame.idaho.gov/public/fish/rules/.

to sharing her climbing expertise and experience with returning veterans in an upcoming Wounded Warrior rock-climbing event.

"Our vets have sacrificed so much," Haye said. "Recreational activities improve mental wellness, and climbing is one path they can follow on their way to recovery. Through Wounded Warrior programs, we can encourage and help rebuild confidence for those who have served this country."

In the past year, Haye bolted a climb in Castle Rocks State Park near Almo. The climb is intended to be used, as well as named, during the first Wounded Warrior Climbing Event to be held in the fall of 2013; organizers intend the event to become annual.

"Anybody can climb," Haye said. "We each can find inner strength and courage to work through challenges, even those related to combat stress, and I am so honored to be a part of this great opportunity."

Climbers test themselves against the rock. For many, the rocks are more than just mountains; they are the mirror that allows them to see inside and continue to reach.

If the magic of the rocks is calling, Haye suggests trying the climbs, ranging from novice to expert, at either the City of Rocks National Reserve or Castle Rocks State Park. Climbers from all over the world come to the City of Rocks for the chance to take on its monoliths with names like Bread Loaves and Elephant Rock.

"I learned here on these rocks," Haye said. "These rocks are like home to me, and they are unique in their own way."

For information about City of Rocks or Castle Rocks, visit www.climbcityofrocks.com. If coming from out of town, Haye suggests staying at the Outpost Inn, soaking at Durfee Hot Springs and eating "the best steak in Idaho, at the Outpost Inn restaurant."

Late-Season Gun Prep to Avoid that Embarrassing Moment

Rich Simpson
Shooting the Bull

Hours of slogging through knee-deep — and at times waist-deep — snow finally put us into position above and downwind from the bedded 4-point buck.

After settling his frosted Ruger 7mm Mauser into the shooting sticks, my brother Bob slipped off his heavy woolen mitten, set the crosshairs on the buck's chest, snicked the tang safety forward, drew in and then gently exhaled a lung full of sub-zero air, and began his trigger press. But instead of the snow-muffled blast and wok of a solid hit, only the sickening click of a misfire reached our ears and those of the now alerted buck. A hastily chambered second round also failed to fire.

Whispering over his shoulder, Bob told me to hand over my frigid Model 70 7x57 Featherweight. His quickly aimed shot dropped the startled buck back into its bed.

The next day — after thawing out and disassembling Bob's rifle — we uncovered the reason for its failure: Never a stickler for firearms maintenance, he had never bothered to remove the original factory packing grease from the trigger mechanism or the rifle's bolt. Exposed to the subzero temperatures of our morning hunt, it had congealed into a solid mass around and within the firing pin spring. The softened primer strike was not sufficient to ignite the rounds.

Though this incident occurred more than 30 years ago, it forever fixed in our minds the importance of preparing our firearms for the frigid conditions that we all experience during those late-season big-game and waterfowl hunts. Now, in addition to the customary pre-season regimen, each of our guns undergoes a late-season lubrication tune-up, as well.

When the mercury dips toward the single digits, many subscribe to the minimalist philosophy: If a little is good, less might be even better. While some knowledgeable shooters "go dry" and completely remove all lubricants from the firing mechanisms of their weapons, my hunting buddies and I have found several products that when used appropriately work wonders at all temperature extremes. We are particularly fond of Remington's DriLube aerosol and of U.S. military-approved Break-free CLP.

Here's how we prep our weapons for the "cold and nasty":

- To protect wooden-stocked weapons, remove their furniture and buff in several coats of Johnson paste wax. Synthetic stocks can be cleaned and reconditioned with a good wipe-down using Armor All or similar protectant.
- Next, disassemble the firing mechanism to expose all critical operating parts and surfaces. For general cleanup, scrub down these areas with aromatic Hoppes No. 9, or hose them down with a quality aerosol cleaner. Birchwood Casey's Cleaner-Degreaser and their Synthetic-Safe Gun Scrubber perform yeoman service on grungy guns and are safe for most finishes.

- After the parts have been carefully cleaned and dried, apply very modest amounts of the above-mentioned lubricants and reassemble. I function test my conditioned firearms after letting them "chill out" overnight in a secured location of my unheated, locked garage.

This is a great time to be afield. With a little forethought and preparation, your firearms will perform like champs no matter what Mother Nature decides to send your way. And as my wife is quick to remind me these days: "Baby, it's cold outside" ... and it's only going to get colder!

Kober explained.

"The middle lugs on the sole get harder in cold weather and grip the ice better," he said. "At the same time, the outer lugs stay soft and are able to grip uneven terrain or rock."

This particular boot, Kober said, is good for "anything snow-related if you're hiking or just playing in the snow."

Outerwear

Over in Burley at Idaho Water Sports, thin is in, explained sales associate Connor Young, who has worked at the store for five years.

"Nowadays, winter coat technology has advanced so that coats are now warm but thinner," he said. "People will pick up the coats and realize that they are not bulky. The coats have become lighter and thinner, but just as warm in a lot of cases."

But the key to staying warm is layering, he stressed.

"A lot of the new technology involves outerwear, but the base layers beneath are just as important," he said.

Consider such base-layer materials as Gore-Tex, Thinsulate and PrimaLoft, which all wick excess moisture and keep warmth in, Young advised.

At Big 5 Sporting Goods in Twin Falls, manager Rachael McGilvrey is hot on layers, too.

"Layers are a great idea, because people are not going to want a huge, bulky jacket to keep warm," she said. "The technology of clothing has advanced over the years so that you can now get a lot more warmth in lighter-weight garments."

At sportsman's Warehouse in Twin Falls, sales associate Amanda Bibby touted the latest and greatest base layer called Red Ram, fashioned from 100 percent merino wool.

"It's really soft and lightweight and extremely warm, and a lot of people look for wool for the outdoors," she said.

But even more exciting, perhaps, is new technology from Columbia Sportswear called Omni-Heat. Bibby compared it to blankets that astronauts use in space to protect them from fire.

"It's designed to keep the body heat in by reflecting your own body warmth back to you," she said. "The inside of the material almost looks like a disco ball, and it comes in different colors and styles."

A typical Omni-Heat jacket costs about $250, "and that's for a good, heavy-weight coat. It's suitable for the climate in southern Idaho, especially when the wind blows," Bibby said.

Back at Elevation Sports, Kober said customers have sought goosedown jackets and "super-light, insulated active wear" the past few years.

"And," he added with a grin, "customers want to look good. You can't forget the fashion side of it."

Over at Wal-Mart in Jerome, zone merchandise supervisor Patty Phillips said customers prefer snow bibs, bubble coats and three-in-one coats. Snow bibs, she said, are combinations of chest-high snow pants and suspenders that offer great protection for skiers, snowmobilers and snowboarders.

And then there are those puffy, air-filled bubble coats that offer added warmth and won't squash your pocketbook. They typically sell for about $20.

"Bubble coats are really light and warm, and are a cheaper brand that more people can afford," Phillips said.

Three-in-one coats are a good choice, too, Phillips said. They typically have inner and outer layers that zip together to accommodate changing weather conditions and temperatures. Some also have vests.

But before you invest in any outerwear, get some thermal underwear, Phillips suggested. And augment all of the clothing with hats and gloves, which brings us to our next category ...

The Little Stuff

Back at Big 5, McGilvrey ticked off the most critical apparel for enjoying time in the snow.

"Definitely hats and gloves are needed to enjoy the outdoors," she said. "Hats and gloves will keep the heat in, because you don't want heat escaping from the top of your head or the tips of your fingers, and they both keep you warm and dry."

Young seconded the statement.

"If your feet are cold, put on a hat," he said. "Seventy percent of your body heat is lost through your head, hands and feet. Keeping your noggin warm allows you to keep the rest of your body warm."

At Elevation Sports, Kober pointed to $25 fleece-lined wool caps as most popular, but not necessarily because of their warmth and comfort.

"Most people just want the caps to look good on them," he said.

To keep hands nice and comfy, he suggested down gloves "because they are light and still very warm." At $47 a pair, Manzella-brand down gloves are the most popular, he said.

And don't forget your feet, Kober added.

"A good pair of socks is priceless," he said. "Wool socks are especially good because they wick away moisture, regulate temperature, don't bunch up and don't build up odor."

And now, before we go out and buy a bunch of stuff, here's how to avoid some mistakes ...

Avoiding Mistakes

First off, Kober stressed, make sure everything fits.

That means, for instance, purchasing base-layer underwear that hugs the skin.

Or so advised Bibby at Sportsman's Warehouse: "You really want those base layers to fit close to the skin, or they won't do their job. You can fit coats a bit bigger, but the base layers have to be snug."

Then there's your waterproof clothing — essential, Kober said, to enjoying most snow-related activity.

"People really need to keep their gear (including apparel) working well every year, because most people don't buy new items every year," he said.

Kober suggested periodically applying water repellent such as Nikwax to water-resistant clothing and drying those garments in the dryer.

"You should dry your water-resistant clothing in a heat source like a clothes dryer to help reactivate the water repellency," he said, explaining that typical laundry detergent degrades the effectiveness of water-repellent fabric.

Mountain Photos, New Trail Guidebook Benefit Sawtooth Society

KETCHUM • James Bourret Fine Art Photography, based in Ketchum, is launching a series of limited-edition Sawtooth National Recreation Area images commemorating the 40th anniversary of the SNRA.

Prints are available in two sizes, and a donation will be made from the sale of each print to help fund the nonprofit Sawtooth Society (www.sawtooth-society.org), committed to enhancing everyone's SNRA experience.

The 10 prints are each limited to 250 photographs. Each image is signed and numbered and contains the society's goat watermark in the lower left corner.

"My love of this rare place of quiet, peace and beauty motivates me as a photographer," Bourret said in a Sawtooth Society release. "The work of the Sawtooth Society is incredibly important in preserving these qualities, which we so direly need now and in the future. The work to protect natural and wilderness environments is not done. It did not end with the Wilderness Act or the creation of specific wilderness areas or national recreation areas."

ries.

And a book: Another offer benefitting the Sawtooth Society is by Matt Leidecker, the author of several Idaho hiking guides including his latest, "Exploring the Sawtooths: A Comprehensive Hiking Guide." Sponsored by the Sawtooth Society, Leidecker's new waterproof guidebook attempts to cover every trail in the Sawtooth range and includes information on mountain biking, scrambling, climbing, history, geology and wildflowers.

Leidecker created a Sawtooth Society ordering webpage, and he will autograph each book and donate 20 percent of all sales from the site (www.mattphoto.com/ss.html).

Sawtooth National Recreation Area Offers Family Snowshoe Tours

KETCHUM • The Sawtooth National Recreation Area headquarters will offer Saturday snowshoe treks for the whole family on Jan. 19, Jan. 26, Feb. 9, Feb. 23, March 2 and March 9.

The 11 a.m. treks will meet at 10:45 a.m. inside the SNRA visitor center, nine miles north of Ketchum on Idaho Highway 75.

"We will learn about winter ecology and animal tracking, enjoy fun snow activities, and explore at a slower pace," said Susan Kranz, SNRA visitor center manager. "Using snowshoes will give kids a chance to investigate snowy habitats and discover what animals do in winter. We might find tracks leading to a home under a log, or witness a chickadee nesting in a tree."

The tours are free to children 12 and younger, and a limited number of adult's and children's snowshoes will be available. A Blaine County Recreation District snowshoe pass of $5 may apply. Register as soon as possible and reserve your snowshoes if needed to ensure a spot on the tour. Children 8 and younger must be accompanied by an adult.

Tours will be guided by SNRA employees and community volunteers who are knowledgeable about winter habitats and animal tracks. "The most important part will be to have fun in this beautiful environment, since the most recent storm left us with spectacular snow conditions at North Fork," Kranz said.

The tours will last about one hour and go for about 3/4 to 1 mile. Dress appropriately and bring waterproof boots.

Historic Redfish Cabin Available for Overnight Stays

KETCHUM • The Sawtooth National Recreation Area is making the Redfish Cabin available to the public for overnight stays as part of the Forest Service's cabin rental program.

Built by the Civilian Conservation Corps in the 1930s and renovated in 2010, the cabin is on the northern shore of Redfish Lake between the visitor center and the water.

The cabin is rustic (think: gas stove but no running water). It can accommodate three people and is wheelchair accessible. The front porch offers stunning views of Redfish Lake and the Sawtooth wilderness.

Nightly rentals are available Oct. 15 through April 14. After Nov. 30, access is by skis, snowshoes or snowmobile. Cost is $65 per night, and a reservation fee may be applicable. Reservations can be made up to six months in advance through www.recreation.gov or by calling 877-444-6777 and inquiring about the "Redfish Cabin."

Comment on Proposed Moose, Sheep and Goat Changes

JEROME • The Idaho Department of Fish and Game wants to hear from hunters about proposed changes to moose, bighorn sheep and mountain goat seasons and rules for 2013-14.

Proposed changes in moose tags are in response to hunters' decreased success rates in past years and fewer moose, a department release said. Fish and Game biologists are proposing an increase in tags and new hunts where moose are doing better.

Proposed changes will be posted on the Fish and Game website for review and comment. And they will be submitted along with public comments to the Idaho Fish and Game Commission for consideration during the annual meeting Jan. 17.

Government Says Wood Storks No Longer Endangered

BY MATT SEDENSKY

Associated Press

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla.

• Federal officials say the population of wood storks has rebounded to the point that they can be classified as threatened instead of endangered, but some environmentalists object to the proposed new status.

The U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service plans to list its proposal for wood storks in the federal registry next week, pointing to marked improvement since the species was listed as endangered in 1984.

"This is a good day for the wood stork, and a good day for conservation," Dan Ashe, director of the Fish and Wildlife Service, said in a written statement. "Thanks to great efforts from our conservation partners, the species is making real progress toward recovery."

Changing the storks' status to threatened is largely a symbolic move. No conservation or protection measures for the species would be removed. But opponents of the change, who will be able to offer comments and data to support their case, say it is a step toward a full delisting.

No one doubts that biologists' counts of wood storks mean there has been a resurgence of the birds, which have white feathers and a long bill. In 1984, an estimated 4,742 pairs of the birds were counted; today the population range is believed to be 7,086 to 8,996 pairs. But much of the return of the birds has come outside South Florida, where they once thrived.

"We're not diminishing the gains that are made in north Florida, Georgia and South Carolina. Storks are nesting there in greater numbers than in the past," said Jason Lauritsen, director of Audubon's Corkscrew Swamp Sanctuary. "But there is a reverse side to the coin, that they're not mating in South Florida like they were in the past." In 1984, more than 90 percent of the wood storks believed to be in the southeastern U.S. were in South Florida. That ratio has decreased as the birds migrated elsewhere. In the Corkscrew sanctuary outside Naples, for example, Lauritsen said there were estimates that a colony of wood storks in the 1910s numbered 100,000 and that in the 1960s, there were believed to be around 12,000 of the birds.

In five of the past six years, though, none have been recorded there.

"The threats are still there. They're not recovering in their historic range, they're going somewhere else because they haven't fixed it," said Lauritsen, an animal ecologist. "It's not a good time to start looking at writing off South Florida as an essential element for recovery of the species."

Besides Florida, Georgia and South Carolina, wood storks also are found in North Carolina and Mississippi.

Chuck Underwood, a spokesman for the Fish and Wildlife Service, said he didn't disagree with environmentalists who say there is more work to be done to protect the species. He said the proposal is simply an acknowledgement that progress has been made.

Environmental Resource Center Offers Winter Tracking Workshops

KETCHUM • This winter, the Environmental Resource Center in Ketchum will offer a series of tracking workshops centering on the winter world.

The Wood River Valley's Ann Christensen will lay out some basics about tracks, then lead participants on a snowshoe tracking adventure through the fields and woods north of Ketchum.

There are five tracking dates: Dec. 30, Jan. 5, Jan. 19, Feb. 2 and Feb. 16. All run from noon to 3 p.m. and meet at the ERC, 471 N. Washington Ave. in Ketchum, for a short introduction before heading north.

Christensen, who studied with famous tracker and author James Halpenny, has been introducing south-central Idaho residents to the secret stories left in the snow for decades.

The workshops are open to all ages — but no dogs. You'll need your own snowshoes, water and a lunch or snack.

Today is Thursday, Dec. 20, the 355th day of 2012. There are 11 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight:
On Dec. 20, 1812, German authors Jacob and Wilhelm Grimm published the first volume of the first edition of their collection of folk stories, titled "Children's and Household Tales."

TODAY IN HISTORY

On this date:
In 1790, the first successful cotton mill in the United States began operating at Pawtucket, R.I.

In 1803, the Louisiana Purchase was completed as ownership of the territory was formally transferred from France to the United States.

In 1860, South Carolina became the first state to secede from the Union as all 169 delegates to a special convention in Charleston voted in favor of separation.

In 1864, Confederate forces evacuated Savannah, Ga., as Union Gen. William T. Sherman continued his "March to the Sea."

In 1912, the play "Peg O' My Heart," a "comedy of youth" by John Hartley Manners starring his wife, actress Laurette Taylor, opened on Broadway.

In 1945, the Office of Price Administration announced the end of tire rationing, effective Jan. 1, 1946.

In 1963, the Berlin Wall was opened for the first time to West Berliners, who were allowed one-day visits to relatives in the Eastern sector for the holidays.

In 1972, the Neil Simon play "The Sunshine Boys" opened on Broadway.

In 1978, former White House chief of staff H.R. Haldeman was released from prison after serving 18 months for his role in the Watergate cover-up.

In 1987, more than 4,300 people were killed when the Dona Paz, a Philippine passenger ship, collided with the tanker Vector off Mindoro island.

In 1989, the United States launched Operation Just Cause, sending troops into Panama to topple the government of Gen. Manuel Noriega.

In 1999, the Vermont Supreme Court ruled that homosexual couples were entitled to the same benefits and protections as wedded couples of the opposite sex.

Ten years ago: Trent Lott resigned as Senate Republican leader two weeks after igniting a political firestorm with racially charged remarks. The nation's ten biggest brokerages agreed to pay $1.44 billion and fundamentally change the way they did business to settle allegations they'd misled investors by hyping certain companies' stocks. Ted Williams' eldest daughter, Bobby-Jo Williams Ferrell, dropped her objections to her siblings' decision to have the Hall of Famer's body frozen at a cryonics lab in Arizona.

Five years ago: Police used chemical spray and stun guns on protesters outside a New Orleans City Council meeting where members unanimously supported demolition of 4,500 public housing units for redevelopment. Thieves broke into the Sao Paulo Museum of Art in Brazil and made off with paintings by Pablo Picasso and Candido Portinari. (The works were recovered in Jan. 2008.) A British judge acquitted the only man charged with murder in Northern Ireland's deadliest terror attack: the 1998 car bombing that killed 29 people in the town of Omagh. Utah opened the bowl season with a wild 35-32 victory over the Navy Midshipmen in the Poinsettia Bowl.

One year ago: Lori Berenson, an American paroled after 15 years behind bars in Peru for aiding leftist guerrillas, arrived at Newark Liberty International Airport for her first visit home since her arrest in 1995. (After a 17-day visit, Berenson returned to Peru to serve out the rest of her parole.) LSU's Les Miles was selected The Associated Press college football coach of the year. Soccer player Abby Wambach was voted the AP Female Athlete of the Year.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE®

Bobby Wolff

*"Beauty is but a flower
Which wrinkles will devour;
Brightness falls from the air;
Queens have died young and fair."
— Thomas Nash*

In this deal, from the 2002 European Championships, Peter Schaltz, South for Denmark, ended in four hearts on the auction shown.

After the lead of the diamond king, taken by dummy's ace, declarer played a trump to the jack and ace. Norberto Bocchi cashed his diamond queen and continued with a third, letting East ruff in with the heart queen to promote the setting trick in trumps via an uppercut.

In the other room, after the same opening, although the Italian North-South identified their heart fit, the Italians chose three no-trump as their final contract, played by North, Lorenzo Lauria.

East led the diamond 10, West played the queen and Lauria ducked. North won the diamond continuation and played a heart to the jack and ace. He won the third diamond and led another heart, allowing East's queen to hold. As East had no diamond to return, Lauria ended with 10 tricks. The critical moment in the defense was that on the third diamond, East had to discard his heart queen, and that would have left declarer without resource.

Curiously, if West ducks the first diamond (normally sound technique in these positions), Lauria can always make the hand. He wins cheaply, leads a heart up, and East cannot unblock his queen — or West later gets end-played in diamonds to concede a second heart trick. And if East plays low on the first heart, declarer puts in the jack, wins the second diamond, and ducks a heart to East's bare queen, as happened at the table.

ANSWER: The aggressive two-no-trump call is my choice, while the rebid in diamonds would be an underbid, but both are better than rebidding the hearts, which would guarantee six or a better suit than this.

DEAR ABBY: I confess, I can be a procrastinator. Last year, my holiday cards sat on my desk, blank and undressed until almost Easter, when it was far too late to send them. This year, I figured brevity was better than not getting them sent, so I had photo cards made and wrote short notes on each before mailing them.

DEAR ABBY
Jeanne Phillips

Several of my relatives have now told me they felt "snubbed and offended" by my short notes. One aunt is particularly upset and said (via my mother) that my cards "clearly showed I don't care about people, and I should have written proper letters or sent nothing."

Was I wrong to think "some" card was better than no card at all? Also, how should I appease the aunt who is not speaking to me over this?

— HOLIDAY CARD WRITER, AKRON, OHIO
DEAR HOLIDAY CARD WRITER: I don't think you were wrong. As to appeasing your aunt, who appears to be one of those individuals who hang onto imagined slights and delivers her messages via other people, perhaps you should consider leaving her off your Christmas card list from now on for fear of offending her further. Some people are just not "pleasable," and your aunt may be one of them.

DEAR ABBY: My 20-year-old son, "P.J.," dresses in Army fatigues when he goes out. His clothes and boots — including name patches — make him look like a soldier. Because he seems so fascinated with the outfit, I asked him if he wants to consider joining the military. He said he's not interested, he just likes "the look."

I'm embarrassed when we're out together. Friends have commented, "I didn't know P.J. enlisted." My response is, "He's not in the military. He just likes to dress the part." When strangers have approached him and thanked him for his service and for protecting our country, he actually says, "You're welcome!"

When I try to talk to him about it, he gets angry and tells me to mind my own business. I feel he's representing himself as someone he's not. He does have a job. He buys his military gear online and at military shops.

How am I supposed to respond when people ask me obvious questions? Isn't it illegal to dress in Army attire when you're not affiliated with the military?

— MOM OF A CIVILIAN IN WEST VIRGINIA

DEAR MOM: I can see why you are embarrassed. You should be. What your son is doing may not be illegal, but it IS dishonest.

When you are asked if he is in the military, you should continue to tell the truth. Because your son doesn't set people straight when he is thanked for his service, what he's doing is disrespectful, unethical and unfair to anyone who actually HAS served.

DEAR ABBY: I live in a small rural town with lots of nice neighbors. During the holidays, I receive a variety of delicious homemade gifts — jams, cookies, breads and other specialties.

I am careful about my diet and consume no white flour or sugar. This means I must thank the person for the gifts, then figure out what to do with them. I hate throwing them out, and I don't know how to stop the practice. What's the best way to handle this annual dilemma?

— UNSURE IN NEW ENGLAND

DEAR UNSURE: If you work, consider bringing the goodies with you and sharing them with your co-workers. Or, donate them to a shelter or senior center where they might be enjoyed and appreciated.

IF DECEMBER 20 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: There may be changes in what you consider most important during the year ahead. Your aptitude for business and invigorated ambitions may throw you into contact with groups of people who gather for networking purposes during the next six to ten weeks. Since you cannot control the situations that affect your life in March and early April, it is best to initiate no changes of your own and wait to see where the cards fall. June can be very beneficial months for your career and love life, as you may be given a once in a lifetime opportunity, or find ideal conditions in which to launch something of crucial importance.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): You can be witty, winning and wise. With the holidays just around the corner, there's much to do and you are just the person to do it. You can remain poised and avoid ruffling anyone's sensitive feathers.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Take off the sunglasses. Remain aware of high expectations and avoid offering slipshod work. Showing off like a movie star without producing something concrete might cause you to lose respect.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Although it is tempting to seal a deal, it is better to hold off. The desire to achieve a commitment may be compelling, but it may lock you into something that restricts your freedoms or ties up cash.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Party animals need their naps. Lay out a reasonable activity schedule that offers plenty of down time. Your sense of purpose may waver or energy could falter if you do not give yourself a few breaks.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): There is no such thing as an impossible dream. Some people might think you are tilting at windmills, but the fact that you are pursuing something lofty and fine will encourage you to be a better person.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Share a favorite fantasy with someone you love and you will feel like you are walking on air all day long. Come back to earth when using your credit card; watch out for an extra charge or undisclosed penalty.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Have a backup plan on hand. Back up your attractive and personable ways with demonstrations of experience and expertise. Prove your merit by showing off a resume or a list of accomplishments.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Where there is a will, there is a way. Don't let past obstacles prevent you making future plans. The path to success will be found by implementing creative ideas and gaining cooperation from others.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Fun and games can wait. Remain on your toes and don't be fooled by a charming stranger or unbelievable offer. Avoid anything that isn't outlined in writing; insist on honesty and straightforwardness.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Financial incentives may be the carrot that drives you to do your best. Anticipate upcoming bills and obligations. You may need to act as a restraint to keep a partner from spending money freely.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Don't settle for anything but the real thing. What seems like a budding romantic link could turn out to be a friendship in disguise. Be businesslike and professional in work-related conditions.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Expand your sphere of influence and round you're your experience. Networking could be the best way to advance your ambitions today, so pick up the phone or open up your email program.

TODAY'S NATIONAL MAP

Seattle on Cusp of Playoffs, Not Talking About It

BY TIM BOOTH
Associated Press

RENTON, Wash. • It's not hard to get Pete Carroll talking. Getting him to speak about the postseason is another matter.

All the Seattle coach wants to focus on is the importance of beating San Francisco on Sunday night. The byproduct of getting a victory over the 49ers would be the Seahawks getting to 10 wins for the first time since 2007, earning at least a wild-card berth in the NFC playoffs, and keeping alive the slim hopes of winning the NFC West.

There is a lot of good that could come Seattle's way with a victory. But you won't find Carroll or his players speaking much about what lies ahead.

"You don't bring up the playoffs until the playoffs get here," Seattle cornerback Richard Sherman said. "You're still in the regular season and we're playing trying to win the rest of these games and see where the chips fall."

If Seattle (9-5) can get a victory over the 49ers on Sunday or in the season finale against St. Louis, it would be its second playoff appearance in Carroll's three seasons. Yet this one would be far more deserved.

When the Seahawks won the NFC West in 2010, they became the first division champion with a losing record at 7-9. It took a victory over St. Louis in the finale that season for the Seahawks to win the division on a tiebreaker, but Seattle at least justified its spot in the playoffs by upsetting then-Super Bowl champion New Orleans in the wild-card round.

But that playoff trips was at the infancy of Seattle's roster remodel that Carroll and general manager John Schneider have been constructing. It was a mix of new faces and what the duo inherited that won the division in 2010.

This group that's pushing for a playoff spot has all been molded under the watch of Seattle's decision-making duo.

"I think we're playing so much better in so many areas. We're taking care of the ball the way we want to, and we're getting after the football well now that we're in the latter part of the season," Carroll said. "We're running the football with consistency and we're keeping the scores down defensively, and the kicking game is solid. These are all of the elements that make us team with not many holes right now."

While that 2010 team made the postseason, they were still flawed. The offense still had Matt Hasselbeck at quarterback, but his long-term future with the team was in doubt. The defense still relied on experienced veterans that were not getting any younger.

Seattle had yet to find its unique, long cornerbacks in Sherman and Brandon Browner that make the rest of its defense work. They hadn't given fifth-round pick Kam Chancellor an opportunity to be a starting safety. Golden Tate was inconsistent at wide receiver and the Seahawks had not found a plan that worked to best use running back Marshawn Lynch.

Those problems are now solved as is the biggest question, the quarterback. Russell Wilson has been the best quarterback by passer rating in the NFL since Seattle's Week 7 loss at San Francisco. Lynch is second in the NFL in yards rushing behind only Minnesota's Adrian Peterson and the Seahawks have the second-best scoring defense in the league.

"It all begins with the quarterback. Russell is playing an extremely high level right now and it's just the maturity and growth that we've all come to grow with him in this offense as a whole and rally behind the things that he does well," Seattle receiver Doug Baldwin said. "At the beginning of the season we were kind of searching for that and now that we're putting it together you've been able to see it the past two games with us putting up 50 points."

Denver Broncos running back Knowshon Moreno leaps into the air to celebrate his touchdown during the second half of an NFL football game against the Baltimore Ravens in Baltimore Sunday.

Health, Depth Both Key to Denver's Success

BY EDDIE PELLIS
Associated Press

ENGLEWOOD, Colo. • On almost a daily basis, John Fox needs about as little time to roll through the Broncos injury report as it takes cornerback Chris Harris to return an interception 98 yards for a touchdown.

In a league where injuries can make or break a team's season, it's Denver's lack of them, along with its ability to replace the few players who do go out, that has turned the Broncos into legitimate Super Bowl contenders with a nine-game winning streak.

Led by starting-caliber performances from Harris and running back Knowshon Moreno, Denver (11-3) heads into the final stretch of the season looking pretty much the way the front office envisioned the roster on opening day.

"All in all, I'd say our personnel department's done an outstanding job," Fox said. "You try to pick your best 53 and have confidence that all of them can play when called upon."

Moreno ran for 118 yards on 22 carries against the Ravens last Sunday. He has rushed for 391 yards since filling in for one of Denver's few injured stars, Willis McGahee, who went down with a knee injury on Nov. 18.

On the other side of the ball, Harris had the longest interception return for a touchdown in Denver's regular-season history on Sunday. His 98-yard return down the sideline was his second score this year. Both have come since he replaced Tracy Porter at cornerback opposite Champ Bailey.

"He's a tough cover guy in practice, whether he's going against (Brandon) Stokley, (Eric) Decker, or (Demaryius) Thomas, it's been that way all season," said Peyton Manning, whose own health, top on Denver's list of preseason concerns, has held up so far this year. "With our secondary, there have been some good challenges."

Moreno was a first-round draft pick who lost his job and was working on the scout team as recently as four weeks ago. Harris was an undrafted free agent from Kansas.

Mix in 10-year veteran Dan Koppen at center and 15-year veteran Keith Brooking at linebacker and the picture is clear: By staying patient with the players they have and keeping a sharp eye on who's available in the free agent market, the Broncos haven't gone backward on the few occasions when they've lost starters.

"There's never a week you can let up, never a day you can ease up," said the team's leading tackler, Wesley Woodyard, whose linebacker position has endured the most flux this year, with an injury to Joe Mays and the nine-game suspension of D.J. Williams.

Woodyard said having depth isn't only a help when players go down.

"You've always got to be at your best because the guy behind you is just as good as you, and everyone wants to be in there," he said. "They can make plays, too. You've got to be focused and be on your game every week."

Nobody personified that idea better than Moreno. The fourth-year veteran was relegated to the scout team, set back by the lingering effects of a knee injury and a lost fumble during Week 2, which sent him to the bottom of the depth chart.

Only when McGahee got injured did Moreno get another chance.

Growing more confident with each week he's in the lineup, Moreno is finding and moving toward the holes more quickly. Last week, he had his second straight 100-yard game, the highlight of which came when he hurled Ravens safety Ed Reed.

"Just being prepared and working," Moreno said when asked how he handled the eight straight weeks he was inactive on game day. "Just basically playing my role. Also, if I wasn't going to play on Sundays, I was going to give it my all in practice. It was just having faith that maybe down the road I'd get my chance again."

Harris was also just a guy looking for a chance.

A starter for most of his four years at Kansas, he spent three long days during the draft and his phone never rang.

Only when the draft was over did he get a call from the Broncos, asking him to come to camp as a free agent. He was a long shot to make the roster, but quickly showed he can play. He has also shown a knack for the ball: Harris' 98-yard pick and return against Joe Flacco adds to a 46-yard interception return for a score Oct. 15 against San Diego.

Harris has cemented himself in the starting job that initially belonged to Porter, who hasn't been active since Oct. 7, shortly before doctors began trying to regulate the medicine he uses to control seizures. Porter returned to practice Nov. 22.
