Jessica Guevara, a senior deputy in the Twin Falls County Sheriff's Office, returned in September 2011 from a year's deployment as a National Guard truck commander in Iraq. Guevara has been with the sheriff's office for six years.

National Guard employers say the investment is worthwhile, though it comes with several requirements.

TWIN FALLS • After nine months in Afghanistan operating Black Hawk helicopters, about 60 soldiers with the Idaho National Guard returned to sacred soil last week when they touched down in Fort Hood, Texas.

And though the members of Company A, 1-168 General Support Aviation Battalion, were no doubt thrilled to return to loved ones and familiar surroundings after supporting Operation Enduring Freedom, some may face challenges readjusting to their stateside lives.

Over the years, the approximately 350 National Guard members in the Magic Valley have faced similar hurdles, which for the most part have nothing to do with battle fatigue or stress-related anxiety. They have simply tried to get back their old jobs or find new ones, and occasionally — even in Idaho, where military support is strong — they run into roadblocks.

Lynn Dunlap, a Twin Falls attorney and retired lieutenant colonel in the Army National Guard, spent the past decade assisting National Guard members and dependents with a litany of personal issues, some involving employment.

Guard members typically perform one weekend of drill per month, two weeks of active duty per summer and may be deployed full-time for up to a year depending

BILL WOULD BOOST GUN TRAINING

BOISE (AP) • Idaho residents with concealed weapons permits could soon carry their guns in more states, under a plan to allow them to get additional training.

Currently, most states don't recognize Idaho concealed weapons permits, because they require little instruction.

Rep. Joe Palmer of Caldwell aims for Idaho to offer a new, voluntary enhanced permit that includes an eight-hour class with live fire training.

The Republican lawmaker says holders of one of these new permits would likely be eligible to carry a concealed weapon in about three dozen states.

Rep. Judy Boyle, a Midvale Republican, said last week she's also hopeful an enhanced permit like Palmer proposes could convince Idaho school boards to allow people to carry concealed weapons in schools.

Palmer's bill won introduction in the House State Affairs Committee on Monday.

Just a Reminder: It's Still Winter

BRIAN NEUDORFF
Chief Meteorologist

Saturday was a super nice day as the high temperature got into the low 50s. As I drove around Saturday afternoon, I saw many adults and children out enjoying the day in short sleeves and even saw a few shorts. That nice day was more the exception than the rule because, well, it's still winter.

We will be tracking another winter storm today into Wednesday. This storm will move from California, through Nevada and into Utah by Wednesday. Unlike the storm on Feb. 8 and Feb. 9 that brought us several inches of snow to the southern Magic Valley, this system will stay farther south and limit us on the amount of moisture available for snow. The moisture may be limited, but we do expect to see some snow across parts of the Magic Valley.

Light snow is expected today through tonight and into Wednesday. Current thinking in the Idaho's First News Weather Center is that one to three inches are possible for Twin Falls, Jerome over to Burley and southward as the South Hills, Albion Mountains and down along the Idaho, Nevada and Utah borders see more snow ranging from 4 to 8 inches with isolated locations and higher elevations seeing 10 to possibly a foot of snow. Places like Shoshone northward probably won't see much accumulating snow. This system is just the beginning of a stormy, wintery pattern over the next few days.

Brian Neudorff is the Chief Meteorologist for KMVT-TV and KTWT FOX 14. You can reach him by email at Brian.Neudorff@neuhoffmedia.com or call 208.733.1100 x3047.

Curious Mind Blaine County's Complicated History of Boundary Changes

Why on earth does Blaine County have that little tail on it? What is down there that the folks who set the boundaries wanted to include?

present-day Elmore County and now a ghost town, and in 1881 it was moved to Hailey.

Alturas was the greatest and wealthiest, and had the largest representation at all political conventions. The county's wealth resulted from its mining economy, and access to railroad and telegraph lines.

Between 1881-89, portions of Alturas County were divided to create new counties. There followed an unsuccessful attempt to prove the act was unconstitutional. The cost of the suit, which was finally carried to the U.S. Supreme Court, and the loss of the territory left Alturas County almost negligible. Alturas faced bankruptcy.

The Legislature in 1891 passed an act to create Alta and Lincoln counties and to apportion the debt of Logan County. Three months later, the Supreme Court of Idaho, however, held the act unconstitutional because it had not been submitted to a vote of the people in the segregated part.

On March 5, 1895, Blaine County was organized to circumvent a state Supreme Court decision striking down an earlier county reorganization. This time it abolished the counties of Alturas and Logan and created Blaine.

Less than two weeks later, Lincoln County was created, which was later partitioned into Gooding, Minidoka and Jerome counties.

In January 1899, another suit attacking the constitutionality of creating Blaine County was presented to the state Supreme Court. The decision was that the act was constitutional on a rule of estoppel.

In 1913, Power County was created followed by Butte County in 1917. Blaine County was further reduced in the same year when Camas County was formed. This left Blaine with an area of 2,797 square miles.

Alturas County at the date of its creation embraced all of the area of the present counties of Blaine, Camas, Elmore, Gooding, Lincoln, Jerome, Minidoka, the greater part of Butte, and parts of Custer, Bingham and Power, according to "History of Alturas and Blaine Counties, Idaho" by George A. McLeod.

Although the counties increased rapidly by legislative action from statehood in 1890 until the present number of 44 counties were reached in 1919, the constitution makes it difficult to eliminate or consolidate counties.

The constitution provides no new counties shall be established within an area of less than 400 square miles and a valuation of taxable property of less than $1 million, according to "Idaho Almanac." Population is not a factor in establishing new counties.

Minidoka County Historical Society Museum's Treasurer Audrey Neiwerth said Blaine County wanted to be able to reach the river, so part of the county reaches the Snake River.

The southern boundary of Blaine County is about 36 miles north of the Snake River, a strip of its eastern area about 8 miles wide extends to the Snake River to include a number of miles of railroad for the purpose of taxation.

There are no rivers and no mountains, but there are large lava fields and old craters. The southern boundary of the panhandle is Lake Walcott Reservoir, which separates Blaine from Cassia County.

The county's southeastern panhandle, known locally as the Yale area, is very sparsely populated. Rural students attend schools in neighboring Minidoka County.

AT THE LEGISLATURE

Teen Mental Health Bill Introduced

BOISE • Mentally unstable teens who pose a serious threat to themselves or others could be ordered into temporary protective custody by their doctor under a bill introduced in the House.

The House Health and Welfare Committee voted Monday to debate a measure that would allow medical practitioners to hospitalize mentally ill juveniles for up to 24 hours. Under existing statute, only law enforcement officials can detain potentially teens.

Idaho Medical Association Lobbyist Ken McClure said the bill puts provisions dealing with young people in line with a similar state law covering mentally ill adults.

McClure said the measure is designed to protect teenagers and those around them from imminent harm. He said the proposal would also give health providers more tools to deal with an emergency.

Proposed Teen Tanning Ban Returns

BOISE • A bill that would ban teens younger than 16 from using tanning beds is back in the Idaho Legislature.

On Monday, the House Health and Welfare committee introduced the measure, which would also require parental consent for 16 and 17-year-olds.

Idaho Medical Association lobbyist Ken McClure says tanning poses a serious health concern to young people and heightens risk for skin cancer. Under the bill, violators would be charged with a misdemeanor and fined up to $100.

A similar proposal that barred anyone under 15 from tanning and required parental consent for older teens died in the Senate last year.

That legislation had support from medical professionals but was panned by tanning industry representatives who argued parents — not the government — should regulate their children's behavior.

House Panel: Bad Idea to Tax Indian Land

BOISE • The House Revenue and Taxation Committee unanimously passed a bill that would forbid counties from taxing tribal government land on the state's reservations.

Monday's vote sends the measure to the House floor.

Helo Hancock, the lobbyist for the Coeur d'Alene Tribe in northern Idaho, says the issue first arose in 2006.

That's when Idaho tribes received a "flurry of assessments" on land that had once been homesteaded, but later re-acquired by tribal governments.

The total at stake is about $303,000 in assessments annually, for all five Idaho tribes.

Hancock said that tribes already contribute significantly to the communities where their reservations are located, including to schools.

He says the Coeur d'Alenes' government wants the same treatment that's afforded other state and local governments on taxation issues.

Senate Panel Backs Rodeo Liquor Bill

BOISE • The Caldwell Night Rodeo could continue its tradition of booze and bucking broncos, under a measure working through the Senate.

The Senate State Affairs Committee backed the plan 6-3 Monday.

For years, hard liquor has been served at the 78-year-old event, using a catering permit from a local restaurant.

But the state liquor regulator said last year that was actually illegal.

Consequently, event organizers now want an exemption.

Sen. Chuck Winder of Boise concedes he remembers alcohol-fueled fights at rodeos in Caldwell, but said he supported the plan as an important part of the city's economy.

Sen. Bart Davis of Idaho Falls countered he was opposed to making it easier to drink at family events, pointing out the bill could expand cocktail drinking to rodeos in other communities, too.

Environmental Study Last Hurdle for Buhl Boys and Girls Club

BY KIMBERLEE KRUESI
kkruesi@magicvalley.com

BUHL • In just a few weeks, Buhl city officials expect to start construction on a permanent location for its Boys and Girl Club.

Currently, the organization offers after-school programming at the Buhl Middle School. When it was first implemented in 2009, plans for an actual clubhouse took a backseat due to a troubled economy.

The club has since secured funds with the help of a $150,000 grant. The only remaining hurdle completing and submitting an environmental study for federal government approval before construction can begin, said Mayor Tom McCauley in an email.

“We are excited to see this very valuable asset to our community come to fruition after years of hard work by many people,” he said.

The clubhouse will still be located at the Buhl Middle School, said Steve Kaatz, a longtime volunteer with the Boys and Girls Club who has helped find a permanent location.

Through a land-use agreement, the city purchased a piece of property from the school and will lease it out to the Boys and Girls Club for $1 a month, he said.

Both McCauley and Kaatz expected the building will be fast tracked for completion. The environmental study began in mid-January and is expected to be finished soon, Kaatz said.

“We’re ready to start construction,” he said. “The drawings have been made. We’re ready to start the bidding process.”

The club provides activities for almost 60 children, Kaatz said. A new building will expand the program’s activities to serve more than 120 children.

“The impact a program like this can have in our community is huge,” he said. “We have volunteers who don’t have children in the program but know what this will do to our size of town. The interest is there to get this done.”

Committee Advances Endangered Species Bill

BOISE (AP) • A bill giving Idaho more decision-making power over endangered species is headed to the full Senate for a vote.

The Senate Resources and Environment Committee on Monday voted in favor of legislation that would give the state final say on whether an endangered plant or animal is reintroduced into the state. Current law already requires the legislature to approve reintroducing rare species.

Rogerson Republican Sen. Bert Brackett said the measure will help the state to manage wildlife.

But Ketchum Democrat Sen. Michelle Stennett questioned whether the bill would have any teeth when matched against federal authority.

High Stakes Fight over Seed Rights at Supreme Court

WASHINGTON (AP) • Vernon Hugh Bowman seems comfortable with the old way of doing things, right down to the rotary-dial telephone he said he was using in a conference call with reporters.

But the 75-year-old Indiana farmer figured out a way to benefit from a high-technology product, soybeans that are resistant to weed-killers, without always paying the high price that such genetically engineered seeds typically bring. In so doing, he ignited a legal fight with seed-giant Monsanto Co. that has now come before the Supreme Court, with argument taking place Tuesday.

The court case poses the question of whether Bowman's actions violated the patent rights held by Monsanto, which developed soybean and other seeds that survive when farmers spray their fields with the company's Roundup brand weed-killer. The seeds dominate American agriculture, including in Indiana where more than 90 percent of soybeans are Roundup Ready.

Monsanto has attracted a bushel of researchers, universities and other agribusiness concerns to its side because they fear a decision in favor of Bowman would leave their own technological innovations open to poaching. The company's allies even include a company that is embroiled in a separate legal battle with Monsanto over one of the patents at issue in the Bowman case.

ASSOCIATED PRESS

A farmer holds Monsanto's Roundup Ready seeds.

The Obama administration also backs Monsanto, having earlier urged the court to stay out of the case because of the potential for far-reaching implications for patents involving DNA molecules, nanotechnologies and other self-replicating technologies. Herbicide-resistant soybean seeds first hit the market in 1996. To protect its investment in their development, Monsanto has a policy that prohibits farmers from saving or reusing the seeds once the crop is grown. Farmers must buy new seeds every year. Like almost every other farmer in Indiana, Bowman used the patented seeds for his main crop. But for a risky, late season crop on his 300 acres in Sandborn, about 100 miles southwest of Indianapolis, Bowman said, "I wanted a cheap source of seed."

He couldn't reuse his own beans or buy seeds from other farmers who had similar agreements with Monsanto and other companies licensed to sell genetically engineered seeds. And dealers he used to buy cheap seed from no longer carry the unmodified seeds.

So Bowman found what looked like a loophole and went to a grain elevator that held soybeans it typically sells for feed, milling and other uses, but not as seed.

Bowman reasoned that most of those soybeans also would be resistant to weed killers, as they initially came from herbicide-resistant seeds, too. He was right, and he repeated the practice over eight years.

He didn't try to keep it a secret from Monsanto and in October 2007, the company sued him for violating its patent.

A federal court in Indiana sided with Monsanto and awarded the company $84,456 for Bowman's unlicensed use of Monsanto's technology. The federal appeals court in Washington that handles all appeals in patent cases, upheld the award. The appeals court said that farmers may never replant Roundup Ready seeds without running afoul of Monsanto's patents.

OBITUARIES

Patsy Jo Payne Whitby

Oct. 1, 1948-Feb. 16, 2013

JEROME • Patsy Jo Payne Whitby, 64, of Jerome, passed away Saturday, Feb. 16, 2013.

Patsy was born Oct. 1, 1948, in Wendell, Idaho, the daughter of Carl Henry Payne and Velda Baumgartner Payne. She attended school in Carey, Idaho, and went on to graduate from Rick's College. She married her sweetheart and eternal companion, Alfred Marion Whitby, in the Idaho Falls LDS Temple on Aug. 13, 1968, two weeks before his two-year deployment to Vietnam. She lived to love and serve their four children, Tami, Layne, Valerie and Danny.

Patsy was a beacon on the hill for everyone and the rock of our family. She was a whirlwind of energy and fun with her bubbly personality and contagious laugh. Her favorite things to do included visiting grandkids, gardening and planting flowers, camping, shopping with friends and daughters; and she always looked forward to those little getaways to Hawaii or the Oregon Coast. She loved life.

She was an active member of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, having served in many capacities including Relief Society president, Young Women president, temple ordinance worker and various other callings. The importance of visiting teaching was instilled in her heart at a young age, and she never missed an opportunity to serve with her dear friend, Joy Matthews. She was a remarkable example who truly exemplified the savior in the way she loved and cared for everyone.

Patsy is survived by her loving husband of 44 years, Alfred Marion Whitby of Jerome; their four children, Tami (Chuck) Riddle of Meridian, Layne (Amy) of Jerome, Valerie of Jerome and Danny (Kristen) of Meridian; and nine grandchildren, Brittnei, Ashtin, Trey, Lori, Ryker, Xander, Quentin, Jordan and Ella. She is also survived by one brother, Monte Roesbery (Shannon, MG); and many other beloved aunts, uncles, cousins, nieces, nephews and friends.

A visitation will be held Wednesday evening, Feb. 20, at Farnsworth Mortuary, 1343 S. Lincoln in Jerome, where family and friends may call from 6 to 8 p.m. The funeral will be conducted at 11 a.m. Thursday, Feb. 21, at the Jerome LDS Stake Center, 26 N. Tiger Drive in Jerome, with President Paul Tateoka presiding and Bishop Norman Kump conducting. Interment will follow at the Jerome Cemetery.

Lillie (Lily) Lou McNish

Jan. 14, 1934-Feb. 6, 2013

TWIN FALLS • Lillie (Lily) Lou McNish, 79, passed away Wednesday, Feb. 6, 2013, at St. Luke's Magic Valley Medical Center in Twin Falls. During her last days she was surrounded by loved ones. Her oldest son, Jim, was by her side reading her Psalm 23 as she passed. Her struggle with cancer over, she now resides in the home prepared for her by her loving Savior.

Lily was born Jan. 14, 1934, in Wendell, Idaho, the third of four children of Frank and Lillie (Barton) Garrison and the only daughter. Lily grew up in Wendell, Idaho, on her parents' farm and graduated from Wendell High School. After graduation, she moved to Twin Falls and worked 10 years as a telephone operator for Mountain Bell. Lily met the love of her life, Joel McNish, at Skateland on Main Street in 1960. On Jan. 14, 1961, Lily and Joel were married in Twin Falls, Idaho.

Lily raised her four children with steadfast character and love. She rose early to see them off to school, provided delicious meals and, throughout her life, patiently listened to them. She loved to hear them tell her about their lives. She celebrated at each graduation, sporting event and concert. She loved to hear her son, Mark, sing and was the biggest fan of all her children. Seeing them grow and thrive brought joy to her heart, and she expressed it through her eyes, smile and jubilant applause.

Lily and Joel enjoyed bowling and took part in many tournaments in Idaho. She was an excellent bowler and was an asset to any team she joined. She loved camping with her family and with her older brother, Don and his wife, Doris, whom she loved as a sister. Lily loved flower and vegetable gardening and brought in many flavorful foods for her family to enjoy. Her roses brought her special enjoyment. She and Joel spent each spring preparing them to bring forth the beautiful blossoms all summer.

When her daughter, Terisa, moved to Oregon, Lily made every effort to vacation along the beaches and rocky shorelines of Oregon. She walked along the beaches collecting shells, listened to the waves roll along the shorelines and took in the beauty of the Pacific beaches. She collected many treasures there that decorate her home and reminded her of Terisa and her family. Out of the many gifts Lily provided, the quilts she fashioned are the gifts most cherished. She spent many hours creating quilts for her children, grandchildren and friends. She will long be remembered for these gifts of warmth and color she took such care to create.

Lily was preceded in death by her parents, Frank and Lillie; and her brothers, Harold and Don. Lily is survived by her husband, Joel; a brother, Frank of Twin Falls, Idaho; her four children, Jim McNish of Twin Falls, Idaho, Terisa Crane of Eugene, Ore., Mark McNish of Meridian, Idaho, and Joeline Hutchison of Twin Falls, Idaho. She is also survived by nine grandchildren, Ryan, Renee, Terry, Savannah, Steffen, Elijah, Weston, Tucker and Ariana; and two great-grandchildren, Charlotte and Riley.

The family offers their special thanks to Lily's son-in-law, Jerry, who was strong when she was weak; her son-in-law, Robert, who was so nice to her during her visits to Oregon; and her daughter-in-law, Britta, for the long conversations about anything.

Lily's spirit of service to others, affection and endurance in the face of difficulty will be dearly missed. A celebration of Lily's life will be planned at a future date along the Oregon Coast at the places she found joy and treasured memories.

In lieu of flowers, memorial contributions can be made in Lily's name to the public garden of your choice.

WSJ: OfficeMax, Office Depot in Merger Talks

NEW YORK (AP) • The Wall Street Journal is reporting that OfficeMax Inc. and Office Depot Inc. are talking about combining their companies.

The newspaper, citing unidentified people familiar with the matter, said Monday that talks are at an advanced stage, and an announcement could come as early as this week.

OfficeMax reports its fourth-quarter results on Thursday, while Office Depot is expected to report results next week. Representatives of both companies declined to comment on merger talks.

The office supply business is very competitive. Staples is a big player, along with Amazon and big discount stores such as Costco and Wal-Mart.

Boca Raton, Fla.-based Office Depot has about 1,675 stores worldwide, mostly in the U.S. and Canada. OfficeMax, based in Naperville, Ill., has about 900 stores in the U.S. and Mexico. If the two companies merged, they could close stores that compete against each other, as well as reduce costs.

BUSINESS LEADERS KEEP THEIR EYES ON THE STATEHOUSE

BY ERYN SHAY JOHNSON

Times-News

TWIN FALLS • As legislators gather in Boise, a separate meeting of business leaders happens each week in Twin Falls.

At 7 a.m. every Friday morning during the legislative session, sleepy eyes sit around a table in the basement of the Twin Falls Area Chamber of Commerce. The Chamber's public policy committee discusses issues important to Twin Falls citizens and the surrounding area, such as urban renewal, personal property tax and state-based health insurance exchanges.

The committee is intended to offer local businesses "a voice, vision and focused leadership to enhance the economic vitality and quality of life in our community," according to its mission statement. It's also meant to be an avenue for Chamber members and other businesses to push on issues important to them.

"One of the key parts is to advocate issues connected to wave-makers," said Shawn Barigar, Chamber president and CEO. "It doesn't harm but helps engage our members in important communication with the legislators. It helps us connect."

"There are roughly 15 regulars," said Dan Olmstead, a Chamber member and presiding chairman of the Friday meetings. "But the meetings are open to all Chamber members."

They're also open to the public — not to participate in conversation, but to observe the discussion around the table.

Barigar, Olmstead and the rest of the committee actually start their meetings in the fall, prior to each session's January start.

"Through the fall we get an idea of the issues that we want to bring up," said Barigar. "These last few weeks we talk about them, and a lot of them have been combined. They all get intertwined."

The main topic of the Friday, Feb. 15, meeting was the proposed repeal of the personal property tax on Idaho businesses.

"I think the personal property tax issue not only impacts businesses but has a tremendous effect on the community," said Barigar. "The government goal is to repeal the personal property tax and do no harm. They will try to get as close to that as possible."

The policy committee's next meeting is 7 a.m. this Friday, Feb. 22. The Chamber office is at 858 Blue Lakes Blvd. N. in Twin Falls.

"We're just trying to preserve the quality of life," Barigar said.

Fishing's Decline Looms; Will Fish Eaters Notice?

BY JAY LINDSAY

Associated Press

GLOUCESTER, Mass. • His city's best fishing days are long past it, but lifelong Gloucester resident Ron Gilson still sees what once was when he drives past what remains.

There's the waterfront lot, littered with discarded fishing nets and lobster pots, where vessels in the famed fishing fleet once docked. The clatter and grit of a top maritime machine shop downtown has been replaced by a banquet hall. On the state fish pier, where Gilson briefly parks, the sounds of year-round work have given way to the quiet whirr of his idling Prius.

To the 79-year-old, the decline of the industry has stolen jobs, community spirit and opportunity. And it's not over, Gilson said.

"This is the lowest point," he declared on a February day. "Tomorrow will be lower."

In May, New England's fishermen will again see a cut to the number of fish they can catch, this time so deeply that the historic industry's existence is threatened from Rhode Island to Maine. But as hard as the cuts are likely to hit fishing communities, local seafood eaters may not notice at all. In the region's markets, grocery stores and restaurants, imported fish dominate, and the cuts make that less likely to change.

The cuts will shrink the catch limit 77 percent for cod in the Gulf of Maine and 61 percent for cod in Georges Bank, off southeastern Massachusetts. That's the worst of a series of reductions to the catch of bottom-dwelling groundfish, such as haddock and flounder, that many fear could be fatal to the industry.

Ron Gilson, a 79-year-old lifelong Gloucester native, walks along the fish pier on Feb. 13 in Gloucester, Mass.

"They're going to wipe it out!" said Gilson. "The only thing that's going to be the same is the ocean you're looking at."

For fish consumers, a sharp drop in the local groundfish catch may jar a select group of diners who seek fish caught that day. But the cut's effects may not ripple further than that.

Just 9 percent of the seafood eaten in the United States is domestically caught, the federal government estimates. In New England, locally caught cod was just a slightly larger fraction of all cod eaten, 12 percent, according to fisheries economist Jenny Sun of the Portland, Maine-based Gulf of Maine Research Institute. And she estimates that could drop to 4 percent after the coming cuts.

Much of the imported cod is caught and frozen in Norway and cut in China, and there's plenty of it, Sun said. If the local cod catch dips to near nothing, fish processors "could easily fill in with imports," Sun said.

In fact, the biggest issue for one Maine seafood processing executive has been the perception that the New England industry's troubles mean he won't have fish.

But prices will likely change little after the cuts because substitutes are plentiful, said Chris Fream, senior sales executive at North Atlantic Inc., a processor in Portland, Maine.

"The sky certainly isn't falling because a) we knew it was coming and b) we've prepared for it and there's other species that are around," he said.

The remaining fishermen have limited options. The Northeast's groundfish fleet had 420 boats in 2011, a drop of 150 in just two years, and many of those who continue to fish do so because they have no choice.

Scituate fisherman Frank Mirarchi noted wryly that, at 69, he has few employment options. The fishermen he cooperates with, pooling quota and resources, have discussed taking even more boats out of the water and trying to hang in with whatever they can catch.

"This is not a long-term strategy," Mirarchi said. "Something needs to happen before 2014 or we all go down the tubes."

US about to Sacrifice One Generation for Another

I was struck by one particular moment during President Barack Obama's State of the Union address. The president proposed a $1 billion investment to build a new National Network for Manufacturing Innovation to spur high-tech manufacturing in America. I'm sure that would be helpful, and I'm sure the president will have to beg to get any such funding out of Congress.

Yet sitting up there in the balcony listening to the president's speech was the chief executive of Apple, Tim Cook. Apple is currently sitting on $137 billion of cash in the bank. There are many reasons Apple has not spent its cash hoard, but I'll bet anything that one of them is the uncertain economic and tax environment in this country. Think about how much better we'd all be if Apple, and the many other companies sitting on cash, felt confident enough in the future to spend it. These are the most dynamic companies in the world. They don't need any government help to innovate.

Message: There is no doubt our economy is primarily being held back by the deleveraging and drop in demand that resulted from the 2008 financial crisis. But they are being reinforced today by uncertainty and worry that we do not have our political house in order.

So businesses, investors and consumers all hold back just enough for us not to be able to move the growth and employment meters with any robust momentum. Sure, we'll throw money into the stock market if the only alternative is zero interest from bonds or banks, but it is not being recirculated with confidence in the long term.

The latest Wall Street Journal/NBC News poll found that Americans see some signs of improvement but that "just over half of those surveyed said they were less confident about the economy as a result of the budget negotiations."

Richard Curtin, who directs the Thomson Reuters/University of Michigan index of consumer sentiment, told me that his team regularly asks the consumers who are polled whether they've heard of any events affecting the economy without giving them any choices. Since August, the index has seen record numbers citing government paralysis as contributing negatively to the economy, including in the survey released Friday.

"People's incomes are so stretched," said Curtin, "that any additional uncertainty about how taxes or government spending might affect them has a big impact on their situation and how they plan for the future. ... There is real economic uncertainty out there." In addition, he said, historically, "people have always turned to Washington in times of economic crisis, but now they're losing confidence in the government's ability to reshape the economy, and that affects their buying and investing habits."

What to do? To be sure, the GOP's lurch to the far right has been more responsible for this paralysis than the Democrats, but Obama is president. He wants to succeed. The country needs him to succeed. Therefore, he owes it to himself and the country to make one more good shot at a Grand Bargain on spending, investment and tax reform before he opts for a strategy of trying to pummel the Republican Party. To have any effect, though, the president can't just say he is ready for "tough" decisions. He has to lead with his chin and put a concrete, comprehensive package on the table, encompassing three areas. First, new investments that would combine immediate jobs in infrastructure with some long-term growth-enablers like a massive build-out in the nation's high-speed broadband capabilities. That would have to be married with a long-term fiscal restructuring, written into law, that slows the growth of both Social Security and Medicare entitlements, along with individual and corporate tax reform.

Our choice today is not "austerity" versus "no austerity." That is a straw man argument offered by both extremes. It's about whether we phase in a long-term plan that balances our need to protect the most vulnerable in this generation while funding the most opportunities for the next generation, and still creating growth. We can't protect both generations in full anymore, but we must not sacrifice one for the other — favoring nursing homes over nursery schools — and that's what we're on track to do.

A Grand Bargain now, rather than a meat-ax sequester, would offer stability for the long-term and maybe even a boost for the short term.

After the whipping the GOP took in the election, I believe there is now a group of Republican politicians and CEOs who would meet Obama in the middle, if the president showed he was ready to take on some of his base as well. If the president tries, and I am wrong, well, he'll have a few bad weeks. If I am right and enough Republicans meet Obama on a Grand Bargain, it would both split the GOP between the sane conservatives and the certifiable crazies and give the president a real foundation for a truly significant second term.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

State Exchange: Federal Control, Idaho Footing the Bill

Idaho will not be in control of the state exchange. The essential health benefits for a health plan, the coverage levels set for that plan and the rating system that helps determine the premiums people pay are based on federal rules.

Control over governance — choosing the executive board, voting on bylaws, etc., are well and good — but what matters is the rules over the buying and selling of health insurance. And those rules are federal. Maybe that's why Wisconsin Gov. Scott Walker said, "No matter which option is chosen, Wisconsin taxpayers will not have meaningful control over the health care policies and services sold to Wisconsin residents." Wisconsin said no to a state exchange.

Moreover, Section 1311 of the Affordable Care Act says no state legislature may pass a law that "conflicts or prevents" the application of regulations from the Secretary (of Health and Human Services)." So, if you're not happy turning over your personal information, don't call your state legislator. They will have no power and you will have no recourse.

Sixteen House freshmen legislators are now supporting a bill to put two legislators on the state exchange's board. The problem is, they'll be non-voting members. What power will they have over things like fees if they're non-voting members?

Most egregious, Idaho must pay to administer and enforce those federal rules under a state exchange. If Idaho allowed a federal exchange like Arkansas, Maine and Utah on its individual market, Idaho could avoid paying these costs. Moreover, if Idaho goes with a federal exchange, it prevents the imposition of the federal tax mandates on businesses and citizens.

This is why I do not support Senate Bill 1042. We need to protect Idaho's people and Idaho's economy. Thank you.

Obama Continues His Socialist / Marxist Agenda

The Idaho Legislature is trying to make a silk purse out of a sow's ear if they pass a state Obamacare health exchange. Twenty-eight states have opposed a state exchange. Idaho should do the same!

Obama's State of the Union speech can be summarized with the cartoon caption in the Times-News, "Before I start talking about future promises that I have no intention of keeping, let's review the promises of the past that I completely ignored and broke." He is a pathological liar!

Obama hates America and is destroying our economy and job creation with his anti-free enterprise, anti-energy, anti-private property Socialist/Marxist agenda.

He wants gun registration which will lead to confiscation; complete amnesty for illegal aliens that will destroy jobs and bankrupt our economy; cap and trade carbon restrictions based on the global warming hoax (see www.petition-project.org) which under new EPA regulations will reduce electricity generation nationwide by 10 percent; supports wasting money on unsustainable green energy; increased taxes for everyone with socialist wealth redistribution; favors the United Nations Small Arms Treaty which will disarm Americans; desires that U.S. laws conform to foreign laws written by U.N. bureaucrats; and has bypassed Congress using unconstitutional executive orders (including drones to spy on and kill American citizens) to implement "laws" despite Article I of the Constitution that grants "all legislative power" to Congress.

The latest unconstitutional executive order titled "Improving Critical Infrastructure Cybersecurity" gives expansive Executive Branch agencies control over Internet traffic and access to our personal data. We will be watched without a constitutional warrant.

Hear Dinesh D'Souza: author/director of the movie: "2016: Obama's America" that revealed Obama's anti-colonial Socialist/Marxist associates and agenda. He is featured speaker at the Lincoln Day Celebration, March 2, at Canyon Crest at 6 p.m.

on the military needs of the country. This has been where job issues sometimes arise.

Ready to Work

On the surface, the issue seems clear-cut. According to the federal Uniform Services Employment Rights Act (USERRA), National Guard members and other military branch reservists are entitled to resume their jobs following deployment.

Explained Dunlap: “If they had a job when they went, they’re to have that job when they get back.”

But it doesn’t always work that way.

“The Guard members and other reservists come back and say, ‘I’m ready to work,’ but a lot of employers have made other accommodations while they’ve been gone,” Dunlap said.

And that can put employers and soldiers in unenviable positions.

“Employers will either have to terminate the hire they made when the Guard member was gone or move the Guard member into another job with comparable duties and pay,” Dunlap said.

In another complicated twist, employers can’t refuse to hire potential workers merely because they are in the military.

“You have some employers who don’t want to hire military personnel because they may be deployed,” Dunlap said. “And then some employers will fire them (Guard members and reservists) when they know there’s a deployment coming or hire them back, then fire them.”

All of this is illegal, Dunlap said, and can get employers in trouble — though in Idaho it doesn’t happen very often and is usually the result of ignorance, not malice. Since he began receiving complaints about Guard employment issues in 2005, Dunlap has averaged an estimated three to five complaints a year but has only had to file one suit. He knows of only one current pending case, in which the Jerome County Sheriff’s Office is accused of improperly treating and firing a Guardsman. The sheriff’s office has denied any wrongdoing. (Dunlap is not representing the plaintiff in that case.)

“Usually when employers are informed of the law, they apologize and hire the military members back,” Dunlap said. “If they don’t, I tell them that they will hire them back or I will see that they are sued.”

The Long Wait

At the Buhl Police Department, the hiring manager is himself in the National Guard.

Police Chief Eric Foster has been in the Guard for four and a half years and was deployed to Iraq for a year in 2010-11. At the time of his deployment, Foster was told he would replace the retiring police chief upon his return from Iraq. The city was true to its word; Foster was promoted to chief on Oct. 1, 2011.

“Before I left, we studied what my rights were under the law and what the city’s rights were, and they have been fabulous,” said Foster, 43. “The city of Buhl is very supportive of the Guard and reserve, and they follow the USERRA laws to a T.”

Foster is the only Guard member on the police force, but would have no qualms hiring other Guard members or reservists.

“They pride themselves on the highest level of professionalism, and they have all the great qualities you look for in an employee,” Foster said.

At the Twin Falls County Sheriff’s Office, Capt. Doug Hughes supervises several National Guard employees in the 42-person Security Services Division. Over his 23 years at the sheriff’s office, Hughes has witnessed the deployment of several Guard members, the latest for a year. And though long deployments can cause logistical challenges for the department, Hughes understands and supports their missions and military responsibilities.

“It can be difficult to lose someone for that length of time, and we run a little bit of a staff shortage,” said Hughes, 42. “But we are able to maintain our ability to operate, and we have never run into a situation where we couldn’t.”

Hughes added that his department tries to hold open positions for deployed Guard members and reservists without temporarily filling the spots.

“We just don’t feel it’s right to put someone through all that training to be a deputy and then have to let them go,” Hughes said. “So we just leave the position open until they (Guard/reservists) get back from active duty.”

Hughes lauds the attributes Guard members and reservists bring to the job.

“Most of them come with a military background and understand that regulations have to be followed to work in a law enforcement environment,” Hughes said. “They also have knowledge of stressful situations that you won’t get from civilian employees and are able to adapt to changing situations. And that’s a leg up in this type of profession.”

Structure and Discipline

Jessica Guevara has two legs up.

The senior deputy in Hughes’ Security Services Division was active-duty Army for five years before joining the Twin Falls County Sheriff’s Office. As she raised a son and performed a myriad of duties in the sheriff’s office, memories of her military service stayed with her. So about a year and a half after she became a deputy, Guevara enlisted in the National Guard.

“I just missed the structure and discipline in the Army,” she said. “I thought that being in the National Guard would cure that want and allow me to raise my son in a stable environment.”

And it has — for the most part.

As a sergeant responsible for inspecting mobile dining facilities in National Guard Charley Company 145th BSB out of Boise, Guevara relishes the goal of her job — keeping soldiers from getting sick. But there are aspects of the Army she still misses.

“Active duty was easier for me, because now I have this life here, but on my weekend duty I have to completely change gears and it’s a little weird sometimes,” she said.

About a year and a half ago, Guevara shifted from first gear to autobahn. Following weeks of intense drilling, she and her comrades shipped out to Iraq for what would be a year’s active duty. Was she worried her job would disappear while she was away?

No.

“I talked to the captain before I left, and he assured me that I would have a job when I got back,” she recalled.

Pride is evident as Hughes talks about his military employees.

“People should know that the National Guard and reservists are working for us, and they have obligated their lives to serving this country,” he said. “We miss them dearly when they are not here, but employers should make things right for them when they get back (from deployment). There are no two ways about that.”

Jerome Commission to Reverse Concession Requirements

BY KIMBERLEE KRUESI

kkruesi@magicvalley.com

JEROME • After spending months trying to fix a definition within the county ordinances, Jerome County commissioners have decided it wasn’t that broken to begin with.

The commissioners will meet today during a public hearing to remove “concession” from the list of required special-use permits needed in a public assembly in the county.

The requirement was added after the county’s Planning and Zoning Commission received an application last summer requesting approval to host concerts and sell T-shirts at a private location in the county, said Charlie Howell, chairman of the county commissioners.

If You Go

The Jerome County commissioners will begin today’s public hearing at 9:30 a.m. at 300 North Lincoln Ave., Jerome.

However, concerned that the “concession” definition was too broad for this particular use, the P&Z attempted to change the definition. The issue then moved to the county commissioners for further review, according to county documents.

“We originally said ‘Let’s leave it as is,’” Howell said. “But what the guy said he was going to do wasn’t defined the way the ordinance had it. So we said, ‘Let’s narrow it.’ But it got so messed up the more we tried to define it.”

With no consensus that changing the definition would benefit the county or reduce unnecessary regulation, the commissioners are looking to go back to the original wording, he said.

“At one point, our definition would have required a family wanting to celebrate Fourth of July at their house to get a permit,” Howell said. “It was a mess.”

holes at the site now called “Mineral Gulch” since 2011.

Monday, Feb. 18, spokeswoman Erin Ostrom said the company’s plan is to evaluate the economics of putting the heap leach tailings from the old Pegasus Gold mine back into production.

“The market is not spreading any joy these days for exploration companies,” Ostrom said. “We like all the others just burn money. We have no source of revenue at this point. We feel the best way forward is to reach the quickest path to production, hence the studies being done on the old heap.”

The Black Pine Mine was operated by Pegasus Gold from 1990 to 1997 on the Black Pine Division of the Sawtooth National Forest.

Cassia County Commissioner Paul Christensen said during a commission meeting earlier this month that the county’s stance has always favored multiple-use on public lands, including gold mining.

Western Pacific Resource Corp. is based in Vancouver, B.C., with an office in Elko, Nev. It staked a mining claim through the U.S. Bureau of Reclamation on the old mine site, now called Mineral Gulch.

After the test holes, the company received a five-year drill permit in June 2012.

The Pegasus operation extracted gold using a cyanide heap leach operation and removed 500,000 ounces from the mine. At the time, gold was worth about $200 an ounce. Gold currently trades at more than $1,600 an ounce.

Ostrom said the Pegasus gold was produced from five open pits and there could be around 200,000 ounces of gold left in the heap leach tailings.

It will likely cost the company $650,000 to $700,000 to get to the feasibility stage, Ostrom said.

This year, if all the permits are in place, she said, the company will sample, test, and drill six holes and then “make a going forward decision” on the pre-feasibility and feasibility of mining at Mineral Gulch.

According to a press release issued by Western Pacific, the company hired Tetra Tech Inc. to help evaluate the heap leach process at Mineral Gulch.

Western Pacific’s website credits company president Eric Saderholm’s contacts and knowledge for its acquisition of the Mineral Gulch claim. Saderholm worked for 12 years in northern Nevada for Newmont Mining before joining Western Pacific.

Others involved with the company’s Cassia County operations include CEO Warwick Smith, geologists and advisers Brent Cook and Ron Parratt, and company directors Ralph Rushton and Mike Williams.

Bruin LB Byce Signs with College of Idaho

BY DAVID BASHORE
dbashore@magicvalley.com

TWIN FALLS • Aug. 30, 2014, can't come quickly enough for Jason Byce.

That's the date for his first college football game, after the Twin Falls linebacker signed a letter of intent Monday to join the recently reinstated College of Idaho program.

"I'll circle that date on the calendar and get ready," said the soft-spoken Byce, who had more than 100 tackles in each of the last two seasons. "I'm really excited and relieved. I'll sleep well tonight. ... It's an honor just to have them interested in me as one of those foundation guys."

Byce was the second player to commit to the Yotes, C of I head coach Mike Moroski said. His signing brings the school's 2013 recruiting class, the first since the school dropped the sport after the 1977 season, to nine.

Byce

Moroski said he expects Byce, who also spent time at running back as a Bruin, to play either outside linebacker or one of the safety positions in his collegiate career.

"He's clearly got really good instincts and a knack for getting to the ball. He looks comfortable in space and looks like he can cover," Moroski said. "He's a relentless kind of guy, and you like that on the defensive side — funny how it comes in packages that are quiet and fairly subdued, but then he gets on the field."

Byce isn't the first player in head coach Allyn Reynolds' six seasons at the helm to leave Twin Falls and play in college. But he's the first to sign, according to Reynolds.

That, combined with the newness and proximity of the College of Idaho's football program, has some excitement building about a tangible reward.

DECLO • It's been seven long, cold winters in Declo.

But on Monday evening, the Hornets boys basketball team finally broke through, beating Valley 46-29 to win the District IV tournament and earn a state berth for the first time since 2005.

"It's been a long time, and that's one of the reasons I went back and took the job," said Declo coach Val Christensen, in his second year back on the sideline. "It's not for me. These are great kids and I just wanted to help them have success."

Declo advances to the Class 2A state tournament, Feb. 28-March 2 at Capital High School in Boise.

"They're capable of a lot more," Christensen said. "If we play like we can, we can make some noise at state."

Sophomore Kyle Heward had eight points and nine rebounds for the Hornets, who had six players score six points or more. Senior guard Kai Garner had eight points and four assists, while junior forward Hayden Hanson scored nine points with four assists.

Declo (17-6) dethroned two-time defending District IV champ Valley, holding Justin Johnson — the 2012 Times-News Player of the Year for small schools — to zero points in the first half and seven points total.

"We tried to shut him down, there's no doubt about it," Christensen said of Johnson, "and we needed to rebound and play solid defense everywhere else. Overall, we did that."

NBA to Resume, with Lakers in Funk and Heat on Top

HOUSTON • Kobe Bryant and the Los Angeles Lakers turned their attention Monday from bad basketball and trade talk to more somber matters.

The death of Jerry Buss, their longtime owner, was a blow for a franchise that was so often in championship chase under his leadership. With Magic Johnson and Kareem Abdul-Jabbar, Bryant and Shaquille O’Neal, and finally Bryant and Pau Gasol, the Lakers won 10 titles under since Buss became owner in 1979.

The Bryant-Gasol-Dwight Howard-Steve Nash combination wasn’t working nearly as well.

The Lakers are 25-29, currently in 10th place in the Western Conference, miles behind the Clippers in their division and their own building, and out of the playoff race. Gasol is hurt and Howard has been unhappy, leading to speculation he could be dealt before Thursday’s trade deadline even though the Lakers have said otherwise.

Yet Bryant spoke confidently of a turnaround Sunday after the All-Star game, just hours before Buss’ death at 80.

“I think we’ve been playing pretty well coming into the break,” Bryant said. “We laid a couple of eggs there against the Celtics and the Clippers, but all in all we’ve been playing pretty well, much better than we have been. We just have to continue to improve and we’ll do much better in the second half.”

It starts Tuesday, with the Lakers looking to get back on track, the Miami Heat in command in the East and LeBron James in command of everyone.

Bryant blocked James’ shots twice in the final minutes of the West’s 143-138 victory over the East on Sunday in the All-Star game. It was a rare failure for James, who has been sensational all season and whose Heat have hit their stride. Miami ran off seven straight victories going into the break and starting to build a comfortable lead in the conference.

“We just want to play our game,” he said. “We want to continue to get better each and every game. Not waste an opportunity when we get on the floor. Play as a team and if we do that, we’ll be fine.

The Heat overwhelmed the Thunder in Oklahoma City on Thursday in an NBA Finals rematch, improving to just 13-11 on the road. All-Star forward Chris Bosh said Miami is only a 7 on a scale of 1 to 10, believing the Heat still have to put together a string of road victories to prove they are really in championship form.

“Just the fact that we had room to improve, we can play better on the road and we’re still first in the East, that means a lot to us and that means we can get a lot better,” Bosh said.

New York is the closest challenger in the standings, while Indiana and Chicago have already beaten Miami this season and could become stronger with Danny Granger soon returning to the Pacers and perhaps Derrick Rose coming back to the Bulls at some point.

San Antonio, with the league’s best record, Oklahoma City and the Clippers are the teams in best position to face the Heat if they reach their third straight finals.

The Lakers were considered a candidate, but that was long ago.

The summer acquisitions of Howard and Nash were supposed to get the Lakers right back to the top. But Nash was hurt early and Howard has never fully recovered from back surgery, adding a torn labrum in his right shoulder to his problems.

He has not fit well in Mike D’Antoni’s offense and has acknowledged not always having fun this season. What’s more, he has given the Lakers no guarantee he will return when he becomes a free agent in July. But would they really deal a player who was the NBA’s dominant big man before his injuries?

“I don’t know what they are going to do. But at this point, it doesn’t matter,” Bryant said. “What matters to us is what we do on Wednesday and go from there. That’s the most important thing. That’s my message to the team, is that you can’t worry about the future, you can’t worry about the past. You just have to focus on the present.”

Chris Paul will also be a free agent in July, yet the Clippers have far less reason to think he would bolt. They have built a team that’s been as good as any when healthy, a deep group led by Paul, the MVP of the All-Star game after finishing with 20 points and 15 assists.

Four games behind the Spurs, the Clippers will have plenty of eyes on them heading in Thursday’s 3 p.m. EST deadline to see if they think there’s a move out there that would solidify them as a championship contender. Paul believes they already are.

“Whatever we have out there, we’re going to fight with. I don’t care what it is, either. We’re like brothers,” Paul said. “I love our team and what we’re doing and we’re going to keep moving forward.”

So, says Bryant, will the Lakers. An NBA Finals duel like the one he had with James down the stretch of the All-Star game seems out of reach this season. Yet the way Bryant defended shows he’s ready for the challenge.

“My switch never went off. It was on all weekend,” he said. “It was good to see the guys but at the same time there was an undercurrent that went on during the first half of the season that I won’t let go. Come Wednesday, we have to be ready to go.”

Byce

“I’m tired of seeing them go off to Carroll and go off to Dillon (Montana Western). If we can keep them in our state, that’s great,” Reynolds said about players in the Magic Valley. “This helps us because they can see the payoff. Not that we didn’t have a lot of guys buying in, but there’s the reward. I’m ecstatic.

“If (Byce) would have come and told me he was going to sign at Alabama, I’d still be more excited about him going to (College of) Idaho, because he’s here and he’s going to play.”

Coming off week-long layoff since its semifinal victory, Declo was sluggish out of the gate. The Hornets trailed 10-8 after the first quarter, but Hanson and Zac Mangum sparked a second quarter rally that put Declo ahead 20-17 at halftime.

In the second half, Declo’s size and speed advantage wore down the Vikings.

“They’re a tough matchup for us, and I’m sure they are for other teams, too,” said Valley coach Brian Hardy. “They have quickness that gets you on your heels and they’ve got good size inside.”

It would be undue for Valley to hang its head on a 19-5 season — with four of those losses against Declo — and the Vikings aren’t finished yet. They still have an opportunity to make the state tournament, but need two play-in wins to do so.

Valley will play the District V runner-up, either Soda Springs or West Side, Thursday at American Falls. That winner will move on to play District VI’s runner-up, either Firth or Salmon, Saturday at Highland High School in Pocatello for the final state berth.

“It will be tough. Those teams are quality teams this time of year, regardless,” Hardy said. “I do like the fact that maybe if they scouted us, they won’t have everything we do down like our conference teams. I think it’s good to get a fresh look at somebody.”

Jerry Buss, Lakers' Flamboyant Owner, Dies at 80

ASSOCIATED PRESS

Jerry Buss built a glittering life at the intersection of sports and Hollywood.

After growing up in poverty in Wyoming, he earned success in academia, aerospace and real estate before discovering his favorite vocation when he bought the Los Angeles Lakers in 1979. While Buss wrote the checks and fostered partnerships with two generations of basketball greats, the Lakers won 10 NBA titles and became a glamorous global brand.

With a scientist's analytical skills, a playboy's flair, a businessman's money-making savvy and a die-hard hoops fan's heart, Buss fashioned the Lakers into a remarkable sports entity. They became a nightly happening, often defined by just one word coined by Buss: Showtime.

"His impact is felt worldwide," said Kobe Bryant, who has spent nearly half his life working for Buss.

Buss, who shepherded his NBA team from the Showtime dynasty of the 1980s to the current Bryant era while becoming one of the most important and successful owners in pro sports, died Monday. He was 80.

"Think about the impact that he's had on the game and the decisions he's made, and the brand of basketball he brought here with Showtime and the impact that had on the sport as a whole," Bryant said a few days ago. "Those vibrations were felt to a kid all the way in Italy who was 6 years old, before basketball was even global."

Under Buss' leadership, the star-studded, trophy-winning Lakers became Southern California's most beloved sports franchise and a signature cultural representation of Los Angeles. Buss acquired, nurtured and befriended a staggering array of talented players and basketball minds during his Hall of Fame tenure, from Magic Johnson, Kareem Abdul-Jabbar and James Worthy to Bryant, Shaquille O'Neal and Dwight Howard.

Few owners in sports history can approach Buss' accomplishments with the Lakers, who made the NBA Finals 16 times during his nearly 34 years in charge, winning 10 titles between 1980 and 2010. Whatever the Lakers did under Buss' watch, they did it big — with marquee players, eye-popping style and a relentless pursuit of success with little regard to its financial cost.

"His incredible commitment and desire to build a championship-caliber team that could sustain success over a long period of time has been unmatched," said Jerry West, Buss' longtime general manager and now a consultant with the Golden State Warriors. "With all of his achievements, Jerry was without a doubt one of the most humble men I've ever been around. His vision was second to none; he wanted an NBA franchise brand that represented the very best and went to every extreme to accomplish his goals."

Buss died at Cedars-Sinai Medical Center in Los Angeles, said Bob Steiner, his assistant and longtime friend. Buss had been hospitalized for most of the past 18 months while undergoing cancer treatment, but the cause of death was kidney failure, Steiner said.

"When someone as celebrated and charismatic as Jerry Buss dies, we are reminded of two things," said Abdul-Jabbar, the leading scorer in NBA history. "First, just how much one person with vision and strength of will can accomplish. Second, how fragile each of us is, regardless of how powerful we were. Those two things combine to inspire us to reach for the stars, but also to remain with our feet firmly on the ground among our loved ones. ... The man may be gone, but he has made us all better people for knowing him."

Copy Editor

Times-News/Twin Falls, Idaho Wanted: One Copy Editor who can whip up graphics and maps, read copy, write headlines and design pages on a universal desk. But you'll need to do more than that. You'll need to create visual stories that can be read in two seconds. You'll need to understand people are attracted to small things, like the closing of a theater curtain, the pause in a musical score, the darkness between the fireflies. You'll need to create a masterpiece.

If you're up for it, we have your canvas. The Times-News is searching for a creative copy editor who can do it all.

The Times-News is a 17,500-circulation daily newspaper (21,500 on Sundays) owned by Lee Enterprises. It offers a competitive salary, medical, dental, vision, and life insurance benefits, vacation, sick, holiday pay and 401K-retirement plan.

To apply, log on to www.magicvalley.com/workwhere. Portfolios of all shapes, sizes and sounds can be sent to News Editor Robert Monteith at rmonteith@magicvalley.com. Show us you're a human being, rather than an "applicant," and you'll be on the right track.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE®

Bobby Wolff

"Credulity is the man's weakness, but the child's strength."

— Charles Lamb

Sometimes the most difficult hands are ones where you appear to have an embarrassment of riches, with numerous ways to take or develop tricks.

Looking for the safest way to achieve your goal is complicated by the fact that when you believe your chances appear very good, it is easy to relax and take your eye off the ball.

Consider today's deal, where at one table in a team game the defenders led and continued spades against three no-trump. South made the apparently natural move of ducking the spade ace until the third round. Then he tested the red suits and had no joy there, falling back on the club finesse. West (who had pitched clubs on the third round of the red suits) had two spades ready to cash when he won his club king, and that meant down one.

In the other room, when West led the spade six, declarer ducked East's king. East could see no reason to do anything but continue with the spade two. (Yes, a club shift would have worked better, but that is far from obvious.)

South rose with the spade ace and tested the red suits. When East proved to guard both of these suits, declarer put West on play with a spade. That player could cash two spade winners but then had to lead from his club king into South's ace-queen. This line is guaranteed to succeed if East has length in both red suits.

ANSWER: Your approach here may depend on the form of scoring and the vulnerability. I tend rarely to save at rubber bridge. At pairs or teams I think you should pass if vulnerable: A sacrifice rates to cost at least 500 (even if facing a decent hand such as six good diamonds and four clubs to the queen). Nonvulnerable, I bid five diamonds first and count the cost later; let the opponents make the last mistake.

IF FEBRUARY 19 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: Relax and enjoy the next four weeks. This could be a great time for a midwinter vacation or to be inspired by beautiful surroundings. Expect to move into high gear with your job, career or business during April, when much may be expected of you. Bide your time and work hard, because late June is the ideal time to make key changes or decisions. That is when you will be wiser and luckier than usual; whatever you begin is most likely to succeed and promises made will be kept.

HOROSCOPE

Jeraldine Saunders

ARIES (March 21-April 19): You win a few, you lose a few. Higher-ups might notice your hard-nosed work ethic. At the same time, your newfound success may spark a touch of jealousy or envy in certain colleagues.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): You don't need drama. Unless you belong to the Screen Actors Guild, you'd do well to stay out of the latest crisis and avoid the ensuing melodrama altogether. Stay focused on constructive goals to reap rewards.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): You never know until you ask. If you aren't sure how to proceed, don't just sit there and hope no one notices. Seek assistance. Don't let pride make you look foolish when a simple question can yield answers.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Lighten the load. Leave transgressions in the past, as dwelling over mistakes can make you start second-guessing yourself. You have more than enough to lug around today without adding excess baggage.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Stare down your fears. Your mental approach will be the key to success; if you feel confident that you will succeed, you will. If you doubt that your chances are good, then you are likely to fail.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Look at the bigger picture. Be wary of giving into whims, as what may seem essential in the heat of the moment is really not worth your time. Think things through before reaching final decisions.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Carve out your private niche. Social activities are likely to seem flat to you today. You're best suited to more cerebral endeavors that you can undertake on your own. Treating yourself to a pretty bauble makes you feel better.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Trust your own judgment. Others have their own opinions of how you should proceed, but the final say falls ultimately to you. Do what you feel is right, no matter whose toes are stepped on in the process.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Keep spirits high. Your positive energy can do wonders to improve the morale of those around you. Offer advice rather than criticism, and lighten the mood with some words of wit and wisdom.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): What goes around, comes around. Your social life may revolve around business, but business can be a social event. Exert some kindness toward colleagues and it will come back to you later.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Take a rain check. Find polite ways of wiggling out of social commitments; free time should be devoted to personal endeavors today. Focus energy on seeing that latest project through to completion.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Dreams may seem a much more pleasant realm than reality — but, unfortunately, we all live in reality and that means getting back to work. Try to come up with time-saving methods that will make life easier.

It's easy to advertise in classified. 733.0931 ext. 2

DEAR ABBY: While I always enjoy your column, I thought your advice to “Wants My Space” (Dec. 14), whose son “Dustin” moved away five years ago and expects her to keep his room as he left it, was off the mark. I would have told Dustin what I have told both of my daughters several times: It is not “your” room; I merely let you use it.

DEAR ABBY
Jeanne Phillips

Not only is “Wants” not obligated to use her home as a storage facility, she’s doing her son a disservice by doing it under these circumstances. At 24, he needs to learn that if he wants a service, it’s his obligation to procure it. There are plenty of businesses that can fulfill his needs at a reasonable price.

— MATTIN PROVIDENCE FORGE, VA.

DEARMATT: For the most part, readers agreed with you, and they offered their own “take” on how to accomplish the removal of the young man’s belongings:

DEAR ABBY: An acquaintance of mine had a similar problem with his son. The son expected his dad to provide storage space at no charge for an indefinite length of time. My friend told his son: “No way! You get it out of here within six months, or I’ll sell it and keep the money for storage fees.”

He didn’t think his father would actually do it. Well, he was wrong. And now the younger siblings don’t even think of leaving any of their stuff at the father’s house.

— SHIRLEY IN CHULA VISTA, CALIF.

DEAR ABBY: My parents, while not upset with still having their four adult children’s belongings in their home, solved their dilemma in a unique way. One Christmas we all gathered at their house and were delighted to find heaps of presents under the tree. Concerned that our folks had way overspent, imagine our surprise when we unwrapped the packages and found all of our own belongings! It was an inventive and effective way to clear out the attic and basement. We still talk about it to this day — a warm Christmas memory.

— KATIE IN NEWARK, DEL.

DEAR ABBY: “Wants” is blessed that Dustin voiced his desire for his mom to keep his stuff. My mother continued asking me if I wanted my stuff for years. I said no, until one day, yes, I did. My parents are no longer alive, and I treasure the little stuffed dog that was my very first Christmas present.

I’d advise “Wants” to return some of the items to her son from time to time in the form of gifts. To him, they are treasures, and they can be returned in a way that won’t make him feel betrayed.

— IRENE IN OWOSSO, MICH.

DEAR ABBY: Dustin should either pay rent to his mother or move his stuff out. If he doesn’t, he has abandoned it and she can dispose of it as she sees fit, since it’s her house to do with as she pleases. In all fairness, a deadline is reasonable, but it’s been five YEARS — why give him six more months? Enough mollycoddling.

— ENOUGH IS ENOUGH

DEAR ABBY: Dustin may be lucky his mom wants his stuff out. My mom insisted on keeping my room exactly as I had left it as a shrine. I was glad not to have to move all my coin, toy and stamp collections and the other things from my first 18 years.

However, subsequently Mom allowed a young male relative to use my room, and he lost, stole or destroyed all of my memories. I was and am still sad, but I never told my mom ‘cause “that’s life.”
