Gooding Police Release Name of 'Person of Interest' in Homicide

TIMES-NEWS

GOODING • Police on Tuesday released the name of a suspect arrested in connection with a Gooding homicide, and by 5 p.m. they were still on the lookout for another man.

Gutierrez

Hugo Mendez Gutierrez, 25, was arrested in Salt Lake City on Monday, March 4, after he was located by officers with the Salt Lake City Police Department, according to a Gooding police statement on Tuesday morning.

"Several members of the community have come forward with information that helped lead to the capture of Gutierrez. A warrant for first-degree murder was issued for Gutierrez," the statement said.

The other man, Guadalupe Segovia-Torres, is "just a person of interest," Gooding Police Chief Jeff Perry said in an email to the Times-News on Tuesday afternoon.

Segovia-Torres is about 36 years old, Perry said. At this time there are no warrants for his arrest, Perry said. Investigators don't believe he's still in Idaho.

Prosecutors are still working on extraditing Gutierrez to Idaho, Perry said.

Gutierrez is a suspect in the killing of 24-year-old Alejandro Perez Lopez, who died from stab wounds after he was dropped off at Gooding's hospital early Sunday by two adult males in a black Toyota pickup, police say. Lopez succumbed to his wounds at the hospital.

Police said security footage at North Canyon Medical Center helped them locate the pickup.

Perry said police are working on several leads as to the motive of the stabbing.

Both Segovia-Torres and Gutierrez are from Wendell, Perry said.

This case is still under investigation; anyone with information may contact the Gooding City Police Department at 208-934-8436 or dispatchers at 208-934-8435.

'SURVIVAL LEVIES'

On March 12, several Magic Valley school districts will ask voters for help surviving in tough economic times.

TWIN FALLS • More than 80 of Idaho's 115 school districts operate on a supplemental levy — or what the Twin Falls School District calls a "survival levy."

On March 12, several Magic Valley school districts will ask voters for a little help surviving.

"Levies really aren't supplemental anymore, they're not additional money," said Twin Falls School District Superintendent Wiley Dobbs. "It's survival money."

He echoed what other superintendents have said: supplemental levies help districts maintain current programs and resources, not expand upon them. And without them cuts of one kind or another — in some instances including staff — would have to be made.

Below is a list of schools seeking voters' approval in March — a month that is not always the best time to ask for more money, said Valerie Varadi, elections director for Twin Falls County.

"A lot of the older folks go out of town for the winter and when they return they say they didn't know a vote was taking place," she said. "They come back to find out a levy has been passed. It's something we deal with regularly."

that expires at the end of this school year. Dobbs said his district this time around has asked taxpayers to approve a two-year, $9 million supplemental levy issue.

The proposed new levy — $4.5 million each year — would cover the cost of maintaining and operating the district's schools through 2014-15, not expand the schools' functions, said district spokeswoman Beth Pendergrass.

"We won't be where we were before 2009," she said, "but it allows us to maintain operations, to keep doing what we're doing now."

Based on the taxable value of their homes, taxpayers would commit to $2.24 per every $100,000 — what Dobbs called a

Where Do I Vote?

To find out where to vote in your district, visit idahovotes.gov or call your county clerk's office.

Absentee voting ahead of the election will run until 5 p.m. Friday, March 8. Mailed ballots must be returned to county clerk's offices by 8 p.m. Tuesday, March 12.

Not registered to vote? It's not too late. Idaho allows same-day voter registration on Election Day at the polls.

All voters must provide personal identification or sign an affidavit as to their identity at the polls.

minimal amount to support education.

If the levy fails to pass, the district would have to consider increasing classroom sizes, implementing additional furloughs for its staff, and eliminating programs, activities and positions.

Voters passed the 2011 levy issue by 56 percent.

CRHS Girls Basketball Coach Resigns

Weaver says she was pressured to resign; Officials decline to comment.

BY NICK RULAND

nruland@magicvalley.com

TWIN FALLS • Second year Canyon Ridge High School girls head basketball coach Trudy Weaver resigned Monday afternoon, more than a month after the Riverhawks season ended in the District IV tournament.

Weaver claims it was a forced resignation.

"I was handed my evaluation and then told to resign (last Wednesday)," Weaver said. "I never knew that they had a problem with my coaching until Wednesday. I never had a conversation with anyone. I've never been written up and never had a meeting. I had no clue. I was shocked."

When reached for comment Tuesday morning, neither Principal Brady Dickinson or activities director Kim Wray would give a reason for Weaver's resignation. They also declined to comment on their coaching evaluation of Weaver.

"We aren't going to speak on behalf of Trudy," Dickinson said. "We accepted her resignation and are moving forward."

After winning four games and graduating seven seniors in 2011-12, the Riverhawks won three games this year, but lost key players Zoe Strauss and Lacy Teske to anterior cruciate tears in the second half of the season.

"I think we win more than three games if they are both healthy," Weaver said in early February.

Weaver said she was led to believe that the reason for her dismissal was that the team had not met Canyon Ridge's performance standards.

"Do I feel it was fair and just?" Weaver said. "No, I don't. I felt like the program was headed in the right direction. My issue is that they didn't give me a reason for asking me to resign. They said that my girls didn't perform up to expectations, but my question was, what program at Canyon Ridge has?"

Weaver said that question did not receive a response from Wray or Dickinson.

In a Times-News story on Canyon Ridge athletic programs in February, Dickinson and Wray both emphasized the need for program stability, allowing coaches the time to implement their systems and see them

THE MARKET AT A GLANCE

Dow Surges to Record... and Keeps Going

NEW YORK (AP) • The Dow Jones industrial average closed at an all-time high Tuesday, beating the previous record it set in October 2007, before the financial crisis and Great Recession.

The Dow rose 125.95 points to 14,253.77, an increase of 0.89 percent. The index jumped from the opening bell, climbed as much as 158 points early and peaked at 14,286. The Dow surpassed its previous record close of 14,164.53 from Oct. 9, 2007. Tuesday's record represents a remarkable comeback for the stock market. The Dow has more than doubled since falling to a low of 6,547 in March 9, 2009, following the financial crisis and the onset of the Great Recession.

Filer's Beard brothers pose for a photo after defeating Fruitland at the state basketball championships Saturday at Meridian High School in Meridian.

I was in unfamiliar territory. I settled in on the baseline and tried adjusting to the dim gymnasium. This wasn't the Idaho Center and these weren't championship games but the intensity was still there in full force. Over the past few days, I had photographed far more dejection than jubilation and I was ready for some smiles. That finally came when the Filer boys defeated Fruitland for some green (third place) hardware.

It was quite the ride for District IV teams this year

Weather Remains Unsettled

A storm system off the Pacific coast will keep our weather unsettled through Friday. When I say unsettled, I mean we will see higher chances of precipitation over the next few days. Most will be rain but some places could see snow, especially in the north-central mountains.

at the low 50s for the valleys and low 40s for the mountains. Scattered rain showers are possible for the valleys, especially during the late morning and afternoon. There could even be a rumble of thunder with some of these showers. In the mountains around Hailey, Sun Valley and even Fairfield, some needed snow will fall. Locations above 5,000 to 5,500 feet will see two to four inches of snow.

Total snow could be from four to eight inches when all is said and done. Temperatures will get cooler for Thursday and Friday, falling back into the mid-40s. There will also be scattered areas of rain and snow showers. We should finally dry out and warm back up by the weekend with temperatures getting into the 50s.

Payday Loan Bill Won't Be Introduced This Year

BY MELISSA DAVLIN

mdavlin@magicvalley.com

BOISE • A bill to cap payday loan interest rates won't get a hearing this session.

In January, Sen. Lee Heider, R-Twin Falls, held a joint press conference with the Idaho Community Action Network to announce he would sponsor legislation to cap payday loan rates at 36 percent. At the press conference, one of Heider's constituents, Roxy Carr of Twin Falls, told a story of how she struggled to repay a payday loan.

Heider said in January some interest rates can inflate to as high as 500 percent.

"That's absolutely, totally ridiculous," he said.

But on Tuesday, Heider said he wouldn't introduce bill until at least next session. Since the press conference, Heider learned that in Idaho, fees assessed by payday loan companies are included in the interest rate. If the loan rate is capped at 36 percent, many companies won't make much profit on the loans, Heider said.

"We'd have to revamp the way we calculate the interest rate," he said.

Heider said he still wants to work on capping the rates, and plans to work with groups and state agencies to restructure interest rate calculations.

"We're all in agreement that something needs to get done," Heider said.

A call to ICAN wasn't returned by deadline.

A bill to license online-based payday loan lenders passed both the House and Senate. Heider was the Senate sponsor for that legislation.

Sentence for Man in Child Porn Case Will Depend on Evaluation

BY ALISON GENE SMITH

alismith@magicvalley.com

TWIN FALLS • A sentencing hearing for a man originally charged with 13 counts of possessing child pornography has been delayed for two weeks.

Daniel Roach, 29, of Filer, was scheduled to be sentenced Monday in Twin Falls County 5th District Court.

The delay in sentencing is so Roach can take a polygraph test as part of a pre-sentence psychosexual evaluation.

In December, 12 of the 13 charges were dismissed by prosecutors, and Roach changed his plea to guilty on the remaining count of possession of child pornography as part of a plea agreement.

In the agreement, prosecutors ask for a two- to 10-year prison sentence for Roach. If the psychosexual evaluation concludes a low to moderate risk of Roach offending again, prosecutors plan to ask for probation. If the risk is moderate to high, prosecutors will ask for Roach to be placed in a retained jurisdiction program – an initial period of imprisonment and treatment that, if successfully completed, can lead to probation time rather than prison.

A high risk of reoffending will lead prosecutors to ask for Roach to serve the two- to 10-year prison sentence right away.

Police originally investigated Roach in 2010 and 2011. In November 2010, Twin Falls police received a tip from the Utah Attorney General's Office about a Twin Falls area-based email address whose user uploaded six images of naked or partially clothed girls between the ages of 12 and 15. Eventually, police connected the email to Roach, a police report states.

While police were waiting for forensic examination results in order to file charges, police lost contact with Roach, the report states.

Then in August 2012, a woman who knew Roach called police after she spotted him with a young child and an adult woman, the report states. On Aug. 24, police arrested Roach at his home in the 800 block of West Midway Street in Filer.

He's now scheduled to be sentenced March 18.

House Approves Charter School Funding Legislation

BY HANNAH FURFARO
Associated Press

BOISE • Idaho charter schools scored a victory Tuesday when the House approved legislation to give the nontraditional schools an additional shot of general fund revenue to help cover building and maintenance costs.

The House capped more than an hour of debate by voting 42-27 to support a bill that would send up to $1.4 million next year to the 40 nontraditional schools operating across the state.

That amount, which comes off the top of the general fund allocation to state public schools, could increase to $2.1 million in the second year and even more in subsequent years, according to the bill.

It now goes to the Senate.

In some ways, the vote was historic, marking the first time a legislative body has agreed to use general fund revenue for charter school facilities costs.

Proponents say the funding is needed for charter schools to survive and helps level the financial playing field with traditional schools.

Under Idaho statute, charter schools get a share of tax dollars to help with general operating budgets based on student enrollment.

But unlike traditional schools, charters don't have the authority to ask local voters to approve bond levies to offset other expenses, build new schools or pay for remodels — an option used often by public schools in districts big and small.

Rep. Reed DeMordaunt, R-Eagle, said charters have been hit hard by state funding cuts since 2009 because they can't fall back on bond levies for additional revenue. This bill gives alternative schools a helping hand, he said.

"Over the years these folks have taken a dramatic hit, and in spite of that, they have continued to outperform their traditional school cousins," said DeMordaunt, the chairman of the House Education Committee.

All House Democrats voted against the bill, and were joined by some Republicans who criticized sending money to charters when traditional schools are in just as much need.

"I think this is a situation where the enthusiasm for an idea has exceeded or gotten ahead of the sound management of public funds and the needs of the vast, vast majority of the students who sit in traditional classrooms," said Rep. Grant Burgoyne, D-Boise.

Rep. Lenore Barrett, R-Challis, acknowledged the good intentions of the measure, but she said it's the wrong time for lawmakers to approve of new ways to spend money.

"This is a spending bill no matter how 'bleedy' you are in the heart," Barrett said. "We are still in a recession. We still have people out of work and the taxpayers are still picking up the tab."

School Boards Agree to Sunsets on 4 Teacher Bills

BY HANNAH FURFARO
Associated Press

BOISE • After a bold start the 2013 Legislature, the Idaho School Board Association, the group spearheading legislation to give districts more leverage in teacher contract talks, is now opting for a softer approach with its highly prized legislative priorities.

Despite criticism from the state teacher's union for bringing back ideas rejected by voters last fall, the school board group has consistently made its case the last two months for more flexibility and muscle during annual contract negotiations with teachers.

This week, as the association prepares to make another push through the House and Senate, top officials now say they are willing to limit the political shelf-life of four of its most controversial proposals.

Two measures revised to include one-year sunset clauses were introduced in the House Education Committee on Tuesday, one dealing with rules for laying off teachers and the other giving school boards authority to impose a "last, best offer" if contract talks stall.

On Monday, two other revised bills, each with one-year expiration dates, re-emerged in the Senate Education Committee. One bill gives school boards permission to reduce teacher salaries, while the other covers details in negotiating the master teacher contracts.

Idaho School Board Association Executive Director

Karen Echeverria said the sunset provisions give her group and the Idaho Education Association a fixed timeframe to study the effectiveness of the proposed changes and the opportunity to cooperate on long-term changes for 2014.

"(Teacher) negotiations will be done pretty soon, so the intent was to try and collect the data this spring when negotiations were going on and report back to the legislature next January," Echeverria told The Associated Press.

The revisions mark a significant concession for the school board association, which set out earlier this year to resurrect ideas that were components of the 2011 Students Come First overhaul but overwhelmingly repealed by voters last fall.

Despite drawing flak from the teachers group and others for pushing ideas rejected at the ballot box, Echeverria has defended the proposals, saying they would provide districts operating on shoestring budgets — or in some cases with deficits — more flexibility and precision to manage and balance finances.

Robin Nettinga, executive director of the education association, said the teachers union will now support the measure giving school districts more power to layoff teachers. But she said the union remains opposed on principle to the "last best offer" proposal.

Nettinga says she's disappointed original drafts of the legislation were brought forward in late January without more input from her group. But hours of discussions in the last few weeks has improved the teacher union's relationship with the school boards, she said.

"I would say through the process of having detailed and long-term conversations we were able to find ways to come together on certain issues," she said. "I don't see them as concessions or compromises; I see them as reasonable discussions."

She was known as Virginia through high school and then as Pearlless for many of her adult years until she once again became Virginia when the family moved to Blackfoot. She remained Pearlless to her close friends and family.

Pearless was born Feb. 24, 1924, in Rupert, Idaho, the daughter of Millard Franklin and Ida Bailey Culley. She received her education in Rupert and graduated from Rupert High School. She married J. Grant Fillmore on Feb. 6, 1945, in Cheyenne, Wyo., while he was in the Army. Mom and Dad were later sealed for time and all eternity in the Salt Lake LDS Temple in October 1990. Their first home was in Twin Falls, Idaho, where they lived until the early 1950s when they moved to Burley. In 1973, they moved to Blackfoot and then returned to Burley in 1988. Mom appreciated loving friendships with many people and especially loved family parties.

Pearless worked in doctors' offices from the time she was in high school until she went to LPN school at the age of 52. She worked at Bingham Memorial and Cassia Memorial hospitals in the geriatrics department and then at Parke View Rehabilitation and Care Center until she retired at the age of 77. She loved working with older people and never considered herself one of them! Pearlless loved to stay busy. She enjoyed painting and won ribbons at the fair. She also kept her hands busy with crocheting and quilting.

Pearless was preceded in death by her parents; her husband, J. Grant Fillmore; and a baby daughter, Virginia Rae Fillmore; as well as her brothers and sisters, Leland Culley, Thelma Culley Anderson, Lester Culley, Wilma Culley Badger, Charlotte Culley Manning and a baby brother, Lowell. Twin Falls’ Sonic Drive-In Robber Sentenced to Prison

alismith@magicvalley.com

TWIN FALLS • The man who admitted to robbing the Sonic Drive-In on Blue Lakes Boulevard could spend up to 15 years in prison for his crime.

Christopher Cole, 29, was sentenced Monday, March 4, to spend five to 15 years in prison for a charge of robbery and sentenced to two to five years in prison on an aggravated battery charge also related to the robbery.

When Cole changed his plea to guilty in January, prosecutors dropped a charge of being a felon in possession of a firearm and also dropped a deadly weapons enhancement on the robbery charge.

At 10:14 p.m. on Oct. 15, Twin Falls police were dispatched to the Sonic restaurant for a call about a robbery.

When officers arrived at

Sonic, an employee said a male subject, later identified as Cole, entered the restaurant through an unlocked door, held the employees at gunpoint and told them to lie on the ground before demanding money, Twin Falls city spokesman Joshua Palmer said.

Employees handed the man an undisclosed amount of cash before he fled, Palmer said. According to Palmer, one of the employees recognized the man as a former employee of Sonic. Palmer said police learned Cole frequented the Signature Bar at 717 Main Ave. They went to the bar where they found the vehicle matching the description from a citizen, Palmer said.

Police found Cole in the back passenger seat. Once officers searched the car, they discovered a large amount of cash and a handgun, Palmer said.

Levies

Dobbs said. “People realize that strong schools help to economically stabilize the area.”

The district has kept its promise that it would spend down two-thirds of its contingency reserve fund, he said, which in 2009 was $3.2 million. By the end of this school year the amount will be around $1 million.

“We’re not a Cadillac,” Dobbs said. “We’re a reliable, dependable Chevy that gets good gas mileage.”

Gooding

The Gooding School District seeks a two-year, $510,000 supplement levy, said Superintendent Heather Williams, up from the last levy of $325,000.

“We really should have increased it last time, but we felt that we couldn’t do that,” she said. “We’ve been having to draw down our reserve fund last year and this year ... so we’re probably closer to needing around $750,000.”

Williams said the money would be used to maintain teachers’ salaries and resources.

If the levy does not pass, the district will have to consider making cuts that are “pretty severe,” she said. That’s because her district already has made serious decisions, including staffing cuts and furloughs. The district started four-day weeks in 2009.

She’s afraid any potential cuts would have to come from staffing — anything from janitorial to district administration.

“We’re optimistic, however, that the future looks brighter than the past,” Williams said. “The community of Gooding has been very supportive.”

Hansen

The Hansen School District wants voters to approve a $190,000 supplement levy, which would help the school maintain its staff, salary and benefits.

“We need it just to maintain day-to-day operations, to maintain our teachers and resources,” said Superintendent Susan Scherz. “We’ve taken a large hit on our revenue ... there are no extras.”

The district has 29 teachers and around 370 students.

The levy’s cost to taxpayers would be $17.60 per year for every $10,000 in home value, she said.

Voters passed a one-year levy of the same amount last year, Scherz said, but this year the district is asking for a two-year cycle on the levy.

The response from the community, she said, has been mixed.

“We have some great people in the community who are supportive,” she said, “but there also are people who are very conscientious of taxes and the economic times that we’re in and the resources that they have.”

If the levy does not pass? “It’ll be concerning at best,” Scherz said. “We’d have to take a close look to see if we could survive by attrition, do without some positions, limit supplies such as textbooks. It’s not a good picture. ... We just don’t have anything left in our system.”

Jerome

The Jerome School District is asking voters to pass a $1.3 million supplemental levy — but it’s essentially the same $650,000 a year residents signed off on last year.

The only difference this time, said Superintendent Dale Layne, is that officials are asking for a two-year levy — $650,000 each year — instead of a one-year levy.

“There is no increase (to taxpayers) over the current amount that has been in place for the last 10 years,” Layne said. “A homeowner with a house valued at $100,000 with the homeowner’s exemption pays approximately $2.50 per month. A $150,000 home would be $3.75 per month.”

The levy would be used to maintain existing programs — “staff, utilities, student transportation, supplies, equipment, textbook replacement,” he said. “We have not purchased a newly adopted textbook in over six years; we only have been able to replace damaged or lost books.”

“Maintaining current programs pretty much means just continuing our academic classrooms.”

The community has been supportive in the past, but Layne’s concerned this time around because both the city and county of Jerome in May will ask voters for help with their wastewater and jail bond proposals, respectively.

“If we have to reduce the $650,000 it’s going to end up being personnel because we don’t have any other places the budget can go at this point,” Layne said. “Our class sizes are already too high right now ... so we really need to add teachers, not be losing teachers.”

Camas County

The Camas County School District seeks a $250,000 supplement levy — the same amount it has asked voters to approve for the past eight years.

“We’ve never increased the amount even though we receive less money from the state,” said Superintendent Jim Cobble. “Instead we’ve tightened our belts internally and have done without, which reflects the challenge across the state. ... We still have an obligation to our students.”

The district currently has 152 students.

On Tuesday, Cobble said he did not have numbers on what the levy would cost taxpayers monthly.

“It should be the same because we’re not asking for more money,” he said.

Jerome Council Discusses Cheese Producer, Tech Park

A study of the effects of Jerome Cheese pulling out of the city’s wastewater facility could be complete in two weeks.

BY KIMBERLEE KRUESI
kkruesi@magicvalley.com

JEROME • Jerome City Council members don’t know the full impacts of Jerome Cheese Co. pulling out of the city’s wastewater treatment facility, but they know it could be huge.

The city’s largest wastewater contributor has requested that it no longer send its wastewater to the city. Instead, the company would build its own treatment facility. The project would require de-annexing from the city.

During Tuesday’s meeting, Mayor John Shine requested that city staff continue working on a study that would analyze the financial, community and infrastructure impacts of the cheese producer’s move.

Jerome Cheese Co. representatives argue that pulling out of the city’s facility reduces the need for a $48 million bond to help pay for wastewater improvements. Currently, a bond issue is planned for the May ballot.

Shine said that he doubted that would solve the problem.

“In my mind, that’s not a comprehensive plan but we need to see what city staff find out,” he said.

City Administrator Polly Hulsey said the study could be ready in two weeks, at the next council meeting.

Council members also voted Tuesday to approve a $165,000 purchase and sales agreement with Jerome Development Co. for land in the Jerome Butte Tech Park.

The city has been working to complete the tech park for the past eight years. The purpose of the park is to develop technology-related industries in the east part of Jerome.

However, acquiring finances and materials have set the project back, Shine said.

“We want to see this happen soon,” he said.

Finally, the council also unanimously voted to pay $111,716 to Idaho State Insurance for worker’s compensation premiums.

Coach

through over multiple seasons. Weaver said she was under the impression she was in the midst of a five-year plan.

“To build long-term, long-standing successful programs, you need to get a long-term coach,” Dickinson said in a story that appeared in the Times-News on Feb. 11. “You don’t completely start over when you bring in a new coach, but in some ways you do. If we let coaches go based on wins and losses like they do in college, we would be turning over coaches quite frequently.”

Three Coaches in Five Seasons

When asked about hiring a third basketball coach in what will be the program’s fifth season, Dickinson said that stability “is important, but it’s not the only thing.”

“It’s also important that you get the right people in place,” Dickinson said. “(Stability) is certainly an ideal.”

In the Times-News’ four-part series on Canyon Ridge athletics printed in February, both Wray and Dickinson said that wins and losses weren’t the primary factor in coach evaluations.

“We have different goals for each program, but overall we expect steady growth in participation and kids that are working hard and having a good time,” Wray said. “Yes, we want to win games, but is that all that these sports are measured on? I don’t think so.”

According to Weaver, a health and physical education teacher at Vera C. O’Leary Middle School (Twin Falls feeder school), she was doing all the things the administration asked her to do, including working with the middle school teams at Robert Stuart, emphasizing basic skills with the Riverhawks freshman, junior varsity and varsity teams and organizing off-season camps.

“They can go back and look at the film of my practices,” said Weaver, practices she claims the administration never watched. “I spent hours and hours working on fundamentals. I also would take a car full of my kids to camps and tournaments over the summer, missing a lot of time away from my family.”

Seven Riverhawks players attended a $400 Gonzaga basketball camp last summer and seven were expected to attend this summer.

Weaver, who took over for Wray as girls basketball coach when she was promoted to activities director in 2011, said she felt that support from the administration waned greatly in her second season. So much so, Weaver claims, that her coaching tenure was “unintentionally sabotaged.” She said that on more than one occasion she walked in on her players (who previously played under Wray) meeting with Wray in Wray’s office, and that because of conversations outside her purview and knowledge had trouble establishing trust with some of her upperclassmen.

“I don’t feel like any (coach) will be supported there until that line is drawn (between coaches and administration),” Weaver said. “I don’t think (the administration) would talk to football players about football games without the football coach knowing.”

Weaver claims she received high marks — all but a few above satisfactory — in her first year performance evaluation.

“So it’s pretty odd that all of a sudden I’m totally unsatisfactory,” said Weaver, who was an assistant on Nancy Jones’ staff at Twin Falls. “I’ve coached for nine years, played at a college program, studied basketball in college, ran a million camps. I started a traveling camp. I’m not new to the world of basketball.”

Speaking Her Mind

Weaver also said she was criticized for her remarks in the Times-News series.

“They said they never would have said those things in the paper,” Weaver said.

The following passage comes from Part II of the Times-News Canyon Ridge series:

Girls basketball coach Trudy Weaver was an assistant with Twin Falls under Nancy Jones. Weaver took over for Kim Wray when she was promoted athletic director in 2011.

The girls team forged a connection with Wray, who had a vision and plan for building the program.

“With a first-year coach there is always going to be some reservation of, ‘Do I like them and does this work?’ And so that was a big thing for us that first year, especially with as many seniors as I had,” Weaver said. “They just didn’t really know me, and maybe they thought I came off as from across town and as a Twin (Falls High) person.”

Weaver brought a motion system, taught different tactics and had a different personality than Wray.

“I think it is a five-year plan,” Weaver said. “My group of girls, this group of juniors, will not have played in Kim’s program. (The graduated classes) just didn’t have my philosophies, and I had to reteach and rework them.”

Weaver’s assistant, Tia Killoy, said she was more shocked by Weaver’s resignation than Weaver.

“I was definitely blown away,” Killoy said. “I think it’s going to be really tough on the seniors who will have to start over with a new coach again. I definitely don’t think there was enough time for her to show how great of a coach she is and can be, and I think she could have been great asset at Canyon Ridge because she was on her way to building a great program. I wish she was given a chance.”

Search for New Coach

Killoy said she had not had any conversations with the administration about Weaver’s performance or the performance of the coaching staff.

“The only person I’ve talked to is Trudy, no one else has said anything about it,” Killoy said. “I am surprised, there are obviously a lot of questions. I was thinking that they just needed time, but I’m just curious what the next step is going to be.”

Dickinson said the school is accepting applications and will form a selection/search committee composed of students, parents, administration and teachers. Dickinson said the search could take more than six weeks, but that there is no “rush to find the right coach.”

“We are casting a big net to find the best replacement for the school,” Dickinson said. “We are looking for a coach that can really focus on building a program from the middle school up. Someone who can reach down into the feeder elementary schools to create a program that is cohesive, starting with incoming sixth and seventh graders and making sure kids in those feeder schools are getting the skills and working towards establishing a program of excellence at the high school.”

Riverhawks junior varsity coaches A.J. Tackett and Nate Losser both resigned prior to Weaver’s resignation.

Budget Cuts and Bombs

General belt-tightening, followed by more belt-tightening with sequestration, is forcing the nation's multibillion-dollar nuclear weapons complex to realize that the free-spending days of the Cold War are over.

“The job of delivering nuclear defense was a job everybody took seriously ... And in a given year we spent our time concerned with achieving that and less with, I would argue, understanding the cost of things because of the imperative to deliver during the Cold War.”

That’s how Neile Miller, acting administrator of the National Nuclear Security Administration, explained the almost cavalier attitude over the past 20 years toward spending on nuclear weapons during her appearance at a Feb. 14 hearing of the House Appropriations energy and water development subcommittee.

Miller told the panel: “So you might rightly ask, ‘It’s been a long time since the end of the Cold War. What gives?’”

What gives is that for the most part the NNSA, and to a degree the Defense Department, must get serious about how they look at the nuclear threat since they are not going to have unlimited cash for nuclear deterrence. It’s not just that money for nukes is no longer unlimited — it’s also that policymakers are realizing the nation doesn’t need as many nuclear weapons as it has.

In the crazy Cold War days, we and the Soviets made it a numbers game, both sides building up to some 30,000 bombs and warheads for intercontinental strategic delivery systems and shorter-range weapons, supposedly for the tactical battlefield. Bilateral treaties between Washington and Moscow have lowered both nations’ stockpiles by more than 85 percent. But as Don Cook, NNSA deputy administrator for defense programs, told the Exchange Monitor’s Fifth Annual Nuclear Deterrence Summit on Feb. 21, the last official number released by the U.S. government in 2009 was still 5,113 warheads and bombs.

Cook said that the U.S. total has dropped to “a bit under 5,000 warheads” as the nation works toward the limit set by the New Strategic Arms Reduction Treaty of 1,550 deployed warheads by 2018. The treaty sets no limit on non-deployed warheads. Remember, 68 years ago just two very low-yield — by today’s standards — atomic bombs all but destroyed two Japanese cities and ended a war.

At the Exchange Monitor session, Ellen Tauscher, former undersecretary of state for arms control and international security affairs, said her opinion was that 1,000 deployed warheads and an additional 1,500 as a hedge would be “enough for deterrence or threats.” But she said she had been out of government for a year and did not know what President Obama has approved in his as-yet unreleased interagency study, completed last fall. One thing she said she was certain of, given the atmosphere here and abroad: “No reductions with Russia at least through 2014.”

Another Exchange Monitor speaker, retired Gen. Larry D. Welch, former Air Force chief of staff, explained how the number of nuclear warheads needed for deterrence has gone down over the years because of “smarter targeting.” Welch said at one time four nuclear bombs or warheads were aimed at one target, what he called “overkill.” Now it is two weapons to one target.

Welch also said the 12 types of older warheads and bombs are being reduced to five as part of the stockpile’s life extension program (LEP). Most of today’s nuclear weapons were designed in the 1970s and produced in the 1980s. Some are being retired and eventually will be dismantled. Those that go through the LEP have non-nuclear components tested; in some cases, modernized parts will be added while the nuclear package remains untested.

The same facility that assembles weapons, the Pantex plant in Texas, also dismantles most of the old ones. Safety and security require a slow process in which only 100 warheads or bombs go through the system in a year. For example, Miller noted that warheads retired as of fiscal 2009 will not all be dismantled until fiscal 2022.

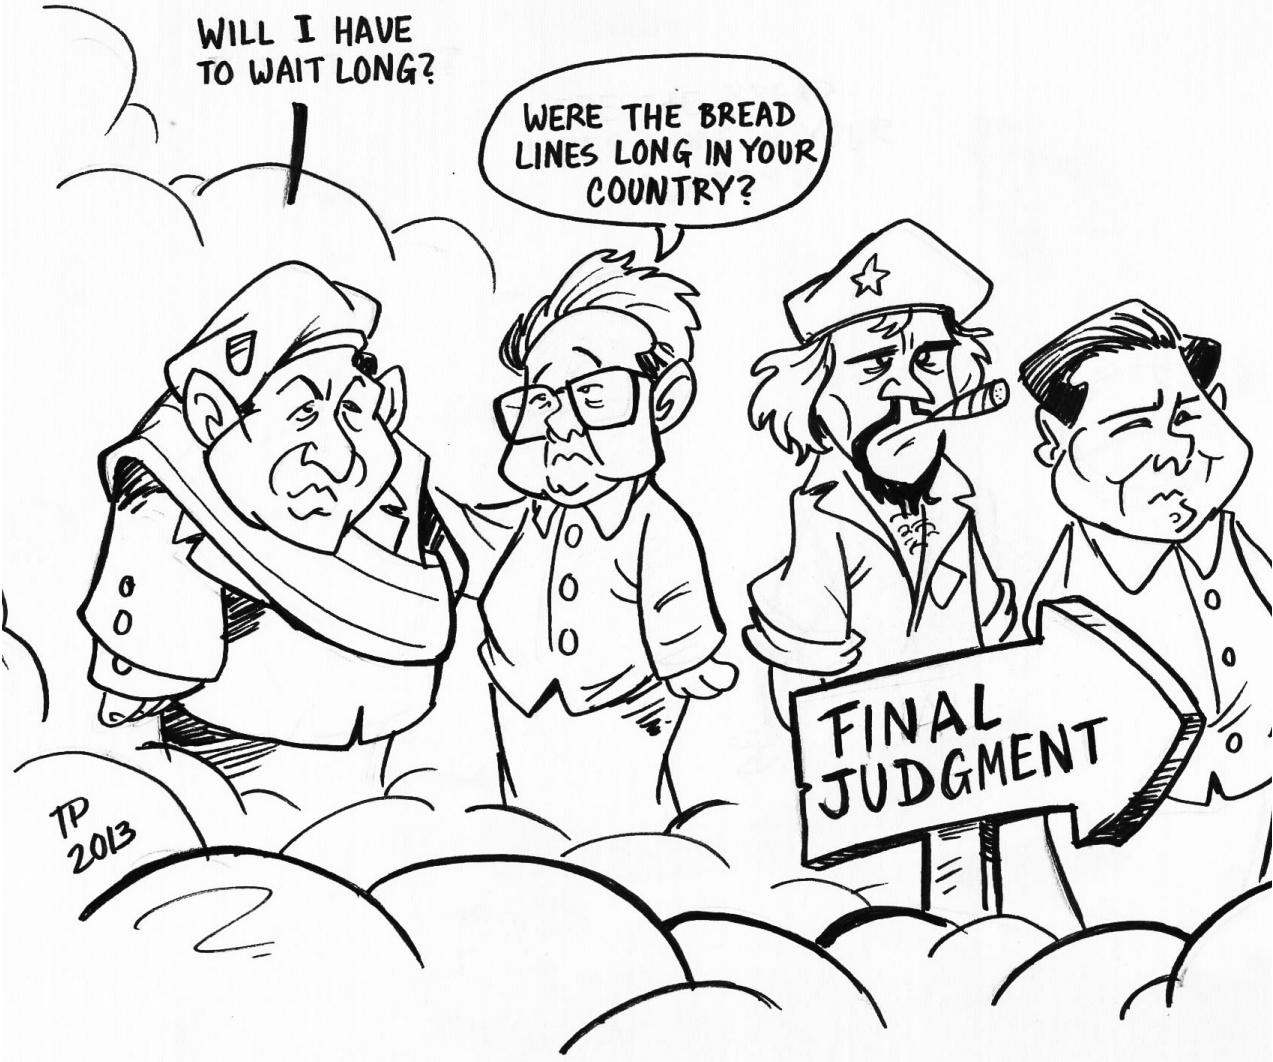

Speaking of safety, Cook made a point of telling the Monitor Exchange that by a “presidential directive” made before the Obama administration, the NNSA is undertaking research that pursues “technologies that render their nuclear weapons’ unauthorized use impossible without their remanufacture.” Many nuclear weapons have locks to prevent them from being armed without a code, but given terrorist threats, this study appears to be a remote way to make them useless if stolen.

The NNSA’s overspending has been criticized for years. Its major capital construction projects traditionally have cost multiples of original estimates. The new uranium-processing facility at Oak Ridge, Tenn., whose design is nearing conclusion, has estimates that range from $4.2 billion to $6.5 billion, according to Cook, because of the scientific unknowns that remain. It needs $120 million reprogrammed from fiscal 2012 funds to make up for delaying a new plutonium facility and faces the need for $100 million to store uranium from retired Navy propulsion reactors.

For the first time, according to the NNSA’s Miller, “we are maturing the budget processes and the programming and planning processes,” but they won’t be ready until the fiscal 2016 budget.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

It’s Time for Banks to Be More Accountable

While Idahoans’ attention is focused elsewhere, our own Sen. Crapo’s attention is focused on protecting the “too big to fail” megabanking industry from increased regulation at the expense of Idahoans.

Sen. Crapo wants the Consumer Financial Protection Bureau’s powers reduced, the agency charged with stopping “unfair, deceptive and abusive practices.” These are the practices that lead to crippling interest rates, outrageous penalties on credit cards, loan-servicing errors and unnecessary home loan foreclosures.

A national poll of small-business owners revealed that 84 percent favor the increased powers of the new agency. In 2010, Idaho was eighth in the nation in foreclosures and that doesn’t include those traumatized by loan-servicing errors.

We may have not forgotten, but apparently Sen. Crapo has. The Consumer Financial Protection Bureau was designed to curtail abusive financial practices. Banks are again making record profits. Isn’t it time that they were required to be more accountable? Sen. Crapo should be on our side, not theirs.

A Few Things of Note to Share from Jerome

Hi, Dave; what is new in Jerome?

Well, I have this young fellow with me who is staying at my house who is turning out to be a brilliant artist. In the daytime, he works on my rental properties, but at night he does his pencil art. His work can be viewed at Jensen Jewellers in Twin Falls.

He has obtained work as an illustrator for several magazines as his specialty is nature, animals and portraits. He is being commissioned locally to do portraits. His name is Bryan Richardson, and he is quite interesting as he is self-taught.

Speaking of rental properties, I have discovered a wonderful property management company in Twin Falls, the Brawley Property Management Agency. Recently transferring my rental properties to its care, I see some of my rentals being rented in super quick time, and I am impressed with its business acumen and integrity. The most impressive thing occurred when, six weeks back, I had opportunity to talk with one of the gals at the desk for a few minutes. Then six weeks later, when coming in she remembered me, my name and my business. As it has a large clientele, I was impressed.

However, lately I have not been impressed with the integrity of our federal government, which continues to rack up horrific debt that will someday be borne by younger generations. I won’t speak much on this subject as much has already been said.

Our local government in Jerome is working on plans to expand our wastewater system, along with hopefully obtaining the go-ahead from voters on a new jail. In Jerome, we have a wonderful library, a wonderful community recreation building; now we may need a new jail. I am thinking about our Jerome Sheriff’s Department, which does such a good job.

Our Elected Officials in Washington Are Acting like Children

Well, March 1 came and went with no agreement by Congress to tackle our mounting debt. It’s like watching little kids pass blame. “It’s your fault; no it’s your fault.”

This whole thing is sad and pathetic. This lack of action will negatively impact all of us, but no one in Congress seems to care. They voted for this sequester in 2011 and now they don’t want to take credit for that vote.

Is this what we elected Mike Simpson and Mike Crapo to do? It’s time we elect people that truly care about us and our children. We need people in Congress that that can put aside political differences and focus on the best interest of all Americans, not just special interests and the rich.

NICOLAS MADURO NAMED SUCCESSOR FOR HUGO CHAVEZ

CARACAS, Venezuela (AP) • Vice President Nicolas Maduro is taking over leadership of Hugo Chavez's political movement after the socialist leader died Tuesday at age 58 after a nearly two-year bout with cancer. Maduro now faces the daunting task of rallying support in a deeply divided country while maintaining unity within his party's ranks.

Maduro decidedly lacks the vibrant personality that made Chavez a one-man political phenomenon in Venezuela, but he has the advantage of being Chavez's hand-picked successor.

The mustachioed 50-year-old former bus driver won Chavez's trust as a loyal spokesman who echoed the president's stances. How Maduro will lead in Chavez's absence remains to be seen, although he's widely known as both a skilled negotiator and a leader who views upholding his mentor's legacy as his personal crusade and responsibility. One of the biggest tasks Maduro will likely face is attempting to hold together a diverse movement that includes radical leftists, moderates and many current and former military officers.

Analysts have speculated that differences might emerge between factions led by Maduro and Diosdado Cabello, the influential National Assembly president who is thought to wield power within the military. But thus far both men have denied such divisions and vowed to remain united.

After Chavez's Dec. 11 cancer surgery, Maduro stepped up his public appearances to fill the void, providing regular updates on the president's condition, calling for unity among allies and lambasting the opposition.

Maduro also showed how he could attempt to continue Chavez's socialist-inspired project. Speaking at one December rally, he vowed in vague terms to maintain policies that have angered the country's leading business federation, Fedecamaras, which was long at odds with the president.

"We aren't going to give dollars to Fedecamaras. What we're going to give them is pains, headaches with this Bolivarian Revolution," Maduro shouted, his voice hoarse. "I swear to you ... we're never going to betray the people of Venezuela!"

Chavez's deteriorating health led him on Dec. 8 to announce Maduro as his chosen successor. He said that if his illness prevented him from being sworn in on Jan. 10, government supporters should rally around Maduro and elect him president.

Maduro is expected to keep promoting programs such as free medical clinics staffed by Cuban doctors and subsidized food stores, which have endeared the president with the country's vast numbers of poor. Maduro has vowed to block a return to past policies that he said had benefited the wealthy. That loyalty made Maduro a logical choice, political observers said.

"Maduro combines two characteristics that influenced Chavez in his decision to designate him as successor: first, his loyalty to the party leadership, and second, his positions in favor of popular measures," such as social programs for the poor, said Steve Ellner, a political scientist at Venezuela's University of Oriente.

Chavez Death: Venezuelans in US Hopeful of Change

DORAL, Fla. (AP) • Many Venezuelans living in the U.S. celebrated and expressed optimism Tuesday that change would come to their homeland after the death of populist President Hugo Chavez.

Venezuelans watched on TV in suburban Miami as their country's vice president announced the 58-year-old leftist head of the oil-rich Latin American nation had died. Chavez, though cancer-stricken in recent years, had led Venezuela for more than 14 years, espousing his brand of socialism while battling what he called U.S. hegemony in the region.

Many in Florida's large Venezuelan community are stridently anti-Chavez. At El Arepazo, a popular Venezuelan restaurant in the Miami suburb of Doral, one person cheered, but the rest watched quietly and refrained from any celebration. An hour later, people began arriving with Venezuelan flags, cheering and crying out joyfully. Beneath the jubilation, though, was worry about what happens next. Though Chavez left a socialist movement in firm control in Venezuela, some question how new leadership will be formed there.

"Although we might all be united here celebration today, we don't know what the future holds," said Francisco Gamez, 18, who showed up at El Arepazo in a track suit adorned with the Venezuelan flag.

Montague Yudelman, World Bank Official, Dies

BY BART BARNES
The Washington Post

Montague Yudelman, who grew up on a farm in South Africa and became a leading specialist in agricultural development at the Organization for Economic Co-operation and Development and the World Bank, died Jan. 22 after choking on food at a Washington restaurant. He was 90.

His son John Yudelman confirmed the death. From 1972 until his retirement in 1984, Yudelman was the World Bank's director of agriculture and rural development. He worked under bank president Robert McNamara to help alleviate hunger and poverty in developing countries through new agricultural strategies.

Foremost among them, they de-emphasized loans to larger-scale commercial agricultural projects in favor of a rural development approach with a focus on poor small farmers.

Yudelman oversaw the bank's drastic increase in loans to small farmers worldwide. In 1978 alone, the amount was $3.3 billion, reportedly four times the amount from just a few years earlier.

"We are finding out in reality that food production requires more and more capital and that low-cost means of agricultural production are very difficult to find," he said at the time. The price tag for long-range irrigation planning alone exceeded $100 billion, he added.

ALBION • Chad Manderscheid has a saying that sums up his style of baking. “If your food goes bad, it’s good for you,” Manderscheid said as he kneaded wheat rolls Feb. 28 inside the Albion Schoolhouse Bakery’s kitchen. That’s because he makes his breads with all natural ingredients, no preservatives or artificial flavors. The ingredients are short and sweet: 100 percent whole wheat flour, water, oil, molasses

A GOOD OLD FASHIONED RECIPE SWAP

Minidoka County cooks gather to share their tastiest creations.

BY TETONA DUNLAP

RUPERT • They came to the meeting carrying their most beloved. Cookbooks — broken spines, pages spilling out when opened — and recipes scrawled in cursive across yellowing notecards, the edges rounded and limp. Every ingredient and measurement was a taste of the rich history and cooking tradition of Minidoka County. And soon, they’ll be available in a cookbook celebrating Minidoka County’s 100th anniversary. On Feb. 27, nine Rupert residents gathered at the DeMary Memorial Library to share family recipes, old and new, to fill the pages of the cookbook project the library is sponsoring. When finally compiled, the cookbook will preserve a century of Minidoka County cooking. “I use these all the time because they are tested and true,” said Roberta Christiansen of Rupert. Christiansen held two binders full of handwritten family recipes, family history, photographs and tips for substitutions. Inside were notes for things that had nothing to do with cooking, like what products to use when your children write on the walls. Jean Ryan of Rupert brought her mother-in-law’s Lowney’s Cook Book from 1908. The front cover unhinged when opened as the first five pages clung to the back of the book.

After remodeling, part of the building now fills with the sweet smell of freshly baked breads.

"I've been doing bread on and off for 35 years," Manderscheid said.

His hands formed pillowy mounds of wheat dough into loaves and rolls. He talked as he shaped the bread, his voice low and rich like a bass guitar.

Early afternoon light spilled into the kitchen from a wall of windows, through which you could see and hear children from a neighboring school running outside during their recess.

Manderscheid, 59, estimates he has baked around 1.3 million loaves of bread in his lifetime.

"My thumbs are kind of worn out wrestling the bread, and I was a massage therapist," he said. "I've learned how to roll bread without my thumbs, and if I do, they start complaining."

Manderscheid is originally from Mesa, Ariz., and learned how to bake from his father, who was a farmer. Manderscheid said he comes from a long line of farmers, bakers and teachers, which makes his current location on the campus of a former Normal School so ironic. His mother and grandmother were teachers who graduated from a Normal School in Tempe, Ariz.

After growing up in Arizona, Manderscheid moved to the Bay Area in California where he started and worked at several bakeries. He also worked as a high school counselor for troubled teenagers.

It was in California that Manderscheid met his wife, Susan, a clinical psychologist. The two moved back to her home country of Holland where they lived for 12 years and had two children. Manderscheid worked in Holland as a teacher and a massage therapist.

Chad Manderscheid kneads the dough before placing it inside the proof box, a device that allows a baker to control temperature and humidity while proofing doughs.

"I was the second fattest man in Amsterdam," he said. "People always asked, 'Why are Americans all so fat?' Because the food tastes so good."

Manderscheid's wife and two children currently live in Holland. Manderscheid said the rest of his family remains in Holland because his wife has a good job with benefits and his children are in school. But they often take turns visiting each other.

They are working toward the day when they can all be under the same roof in Idaho. Until then, Manderscheid remains in Idaho — heading up the family business of hospitality and baking.

The bed and breakfast often hosts family reunions and retreats in addition to long-term tenants. Each room is unique with old maps, original chalkboards and concrete-topped desks decorating the inside.

Most of Manderscheid's bread is made for private or ders and weddings. He also delivers the bread himself to some grocers in Burley. He doesn't deliver to more because of the high price of gas, he said, and the need to go back often because the bread goes bad more quickly without any preservatives.

"See that stretch on the side?" Manderscheid said pointing to some rolls he took out of the oven. "It's an indication I didn't make any mistakes because the cells holding the gas expanded."

He said if you want spongy bread, you need those fine bubbles that hold the gases the yeast give off.

Manderscheid often holds classes for people who want to learn how to perfect their bread-baking techniques.

"Any Saturday there's room for a baker's dozen," he said. "Bring your own mixers and ingredients and if they want, they show me what they do and I show them different types of flour and the mixing process."

Manderscheid said the biggest mistake people make is scorching their flour when they grind it, which makes it lose nutrients and flavor. That is why he prefers stone grinding.

"Often recipes suggest warm water, but if it's a cold room, warm water is good but you can overdo it easily," he said.

Manderscheid turned to take out a batch of bread from the oven behind him. The golden tops glistened in the afternoon light and he cut one in half, adding a pat of butter.

He threw another batch from the proofing into the oven. Then he took a break to call his family on Skype, just as he does every day.

Chad Manderscheid, baker and owner of Albion Schoolhouse Bakery, pulls loaves from the proof box and places them in the oven.

Perk Up St. Patrick’s Day with Perfect Irish Coffee

BY MICHELLE LOCKE
Associated Press

Coffee, Irish whiskey and cream.

Taken separately they’re a tasty trio. But combine them just the right way and in just the right proportions and they get even better, transforming into a drink that can perk up the grayest day.

We’re talking Irish coffee, of course, a drink that’s especially popular around St. Patrick’s Day, but good any time you want to add some zing to your caffeine.

The secret, says Larry Silva, general manager of the Buena Vista Cafe in San Francisco — which serves up 2,000 Irish coffees a day — is how you put the drink together.

At the Buena Vista — the original source of the drink in the U.S. — Irish coffee starts with a stemmed, 6-ounce glass that’s been preheated with hot water. And both of those elements are critical. A bigger or smaller glass would throw off the coffee-booze balance. A cold glass results in a tepid cocktail. There was a bit of a hitch a few years back when Libbey Glass stopped making the type the Buena Vista uses. Silva had to scramble to find another source but, happily, Libbey has since reinstated the product.

For a touch of sweetness, the Buena Vista recipe adds two cubes of sugar, though other recipes call for brown sugar. The cream, meanwhile, should be fresh and just slightly whipped — nothing from an aerosol can.

As for the whiskey, the Buena Vista is currently using Tullamore Dew. In general, what you are seeking is a smooth whiskey that won’t fight with the other flavors, says Silva. This isn’t the time to pull out that peaty Scotch. But don’t be afraid to use something good.

“Using a premium spirit elevates any cocktail,” says John Concannon, a California vintner who has teamed with Ireland’s Cooley Distillery to develop Concannon Irish Whiskey, which also makes a good Irish coffee.

The whiskey, made and aged in Ireland, is matured in bourbon barrels, then finished off with some time in wine barrels that have been used to age Concannon Vineyard’s flagship petite sirah wine. “Because of the unique barrel finishing in the distilling process, Concannon has a complexity and character all its own, making for a one-of-a-kind Irish coffee experience,” Concannon said via email.

Though it seems likely that people have been introducing a drop or two of whiskey into coffee for a while, the drink as a cocktail was popularized in Ireland at the Foynes port, precursor to Shannon Airport, in the 1940s when chef Joe Sheridan decided to pep up some coffee with Irish whiskey to cheer chilly travelers. The drink was much appreciated and one of the passengers is said to have asked, “Was that Brazilian coffee?” Sheridan jokingly answered, “No, that was Irish Coffee,” and a tradition was born.

San Francisco newspaperman Stanton Delaplane tried the coffee while flying from Shannon Airport in 1952 and on his return got together with Jack Koeppler, then-owner of the Buena Vista, to recreate the drink. The trickiest part was getting the cream to float on top, something that was solved by whipping the cream just a bit, then pouring it carefully over the back of a spoon into the cup.

St. Patrick’s Day has a special resonance for Concannon since his great-grandfather and winery founder, James Concannon, was born on March 17 in the Aran islands off the coast of Ireland. The winery, based in the Livermore Valley region east of San Francisco, will be celebrating this year with traditional, live Irish music and a toast (with wine) to their founder.

And they’ll be busy at the Buena Vista, too. Last year, thirsty revelers sucked down 3,640 Irish coffees.

Take that, green beer.

Looking to brew a little Irish cheer yourself this St. Patrick’s Day? Try this classic recipe, or the chocolate-laced variation.

Irish Coffee

Depending on which version of the “original” Irish coffee you subscribe to, it is sweetened with either 2 sugar cubes or 1 teaspoon brown sugar. For a rich and chocolaty take on Irish coffee, stir 2 tablespoons of milk chocolate bits into the coffee at the same time as the sugar. Once the chocolate bits have melted, proceed with the recipe. Start to finish: 5 minutes. Servings: 1

Boiling water
Hot coffee
2 sugar cubes or
1 teaspoon brown sugar
1 1/2 ounces Irish whiskey
1/4 cup heavy or whipping cream, lightly beaten (but still pourable)

Fill a large coffee cup with boiling water to preheat it. Let it stand for about 1 minute, then empty the glass.

Fill the glass three-quarters full with hot coffee. Add the sugar, then stir until dissolved. Stir in the whiskey.

Top the coffee-whiskey blend with the lightly whipped cream. To do this, hold an overturned spoon over the coffee, then slowly pour the cream over it. The goal is for the cream to float on top of the coffee; do not mix it in. Part of the Irish coffee experience is drinking the hot coffee through a layer of cool cream. (Recipe adapted from The Buena Vista Cafe, San Francisco)

China Destroys Ikea Cake, Nestle Chocolate

BEIJING (AP) • Chinese authorities say they have destroyed nearly two tons of chocolate cake imported by Sweden’s Ikea for violating food quality standards.

The Shanghai quarantine bureau said this week that Kraft cream cheese and 2.7 tons of Nestle chocolate bars also were among dozens of imported products destroyed in its latest round of quality inspections.

Chinese authorities have stepped up food inspections in recent years after a series of scandals over fake or shoddy goods.

The disclosure in December that suppliers of KFC violated rules on drugs use in poultry caused sales for the restaurant chain to plunge. KFC estimated sales in January dropped 37 percent and the company announced tighter quality control measures in an effort to win back customers.

The Shanghai quarantine bureau said it destroyed 4,100 pounds of chocolate almond cake imported by Ikea that it said had excessive levels of coliform bacteria.

Ikea spokeswoman Ylva Magnusson said the cakes were destroyed in November and December but the company’s head office had only found out about it on Monday.

“The product was stopped and destroyed. So none of the cakes made it to our restaurants,” she said.

The cake made by a Swedish supplier is sold in Ikea stores in a majority of the countries where it operates. Magnusson said the company is looking into whether the cake should be withdrawn from sale elsewhere.

The Nestle chocolate contained too much sorbitol, a sweetener that in large amounts can cause bowel problems, the agency said in a statement. Phone calls to representatives for Nestle were not answered.

In an emailed statement, Kraft Foods China said it imported a batch of cheese products from the U.S. to be used only as internal samples. The company, which is part of Mondelez International Inc., said the products didn’t receive certification by the expiration date.

“We hereby sincerely apologize for all the concerns and doubts brought to consumers by this incident,” the statement said.

Dinner in 40 Minutes: Meatball and Yogurt Chowder

BY BONNIE S. BENWICK
The Washington Post.

Oh, dear. I wish this dish looked better. But what can you do? Greek-style yogurt stirred with tender meatballs might not blend in quite so smoothly. But it comes together easily — in one pot! — and tastes good. Promise.

Serve with warm pita bread.

Meatball and Yogurt Chowder

Adapted from “One-Pot Wonders,” by Clifford A. Wright (Wiley and Sons, 2013).
About 10 cups (4 to 5 servings)

- 15 ounces canned no-salt-added chickpeas
- 5 cups water
- 1 medium onion
- 1/4 cup dried brown lentils
- 2 1/2 teaspoons kosher salt, or more to taste
- 1 pound lean ground beef (90-10 percent)
- 1/2 cup packed fresh dill fronds
- 10 ounces fresh baby spinach
- 3 cups whole-milk plain yogurt, preferably Greek-style

Drain and rinse the chickpeas; place them in large saute pan along with the water. Bring to a boil over high heat. Meanwhile, finely chop the onion.

Once the water comes to a boil, add the lentils and 2 teaspoons of the salt. Reduce the heat to medium-high; cook, covered, for 10 minutes.

While the lentil mixture cooks, combine the onion, the ground beef and the remaining 1/2 teaspoon of salt in a mixing bowl. Use all of the mixture to form about thirty 1 1/2-inch meatballs.

Uncover the saucepan and carefully add the meatballs, making sure they are just covered by the liquid. Cook uncovered for 15 minutes, turning them a few times to ensure even cooking.

Finely chop the dill.

Reduce the heat to medium-low. Add the dill, then add the spinach in two or three additions, allowing each addition to wilt a bit before stirring it in. Cook for about 3 minutes, then stir in the yogurt, being careful not to break up the meatballs. Cook just until warmed through. Taste, and add salt as needed.

Divide among individual bowls. Serve hot.

Recipe Swap

Katie Tatton of Rupert brought her favorite recipe.

"I love this recipe. Some people's comfort food is macaroni and cheese, mine is pecan pie. There's nothing special about it, it just turns out every time," Tatton said.

Sharon Kimber, director of the library, said the Magic Valley has always been full of good cooks.

But sometimes that doesn't always translate into a complete recipe.

"This one was my mother's, but I have to add to it because back then they didn't believe in directions," Kimber said, holding up a recipe she brought.

Some of the older recipes people brought in didn't use typical units of measurement. The group discussed how certain recipes often called for a teacup of sugar or a handful of flour.

"That's how my mom cooks," said Mandi Foote, 12, of Rupert. "One thing I'm trying to get is my grandmother's upside down pineapple cake, but she doesn't write it down."

Instead, Foote shared her recipe for strawberry cheesecake.

Christiansen said one particular recipe she's tried making out of her family's cookbook never turns out. She said that's because it calls for pure cream, an ingredient Christiansen can't find.

Gary Schorzman of Rupert brought a couple of family recipes for red beet pickles and a German pie. The old recipes were always made to serve 14 people and the dough was never rolled with a rolling pin, but by hand. Often, he said, there was more pie crust to eat than filling because the dough

From the 2000 Spingold, Joey Silver of Canada found a nice line in defense.

He led a top club against four hearts, and his partner, Debbie Rosenberg, followed high. With dummy having a singleton, this was an extension of the Obvious Shift principle. Since a diamond would have been West's logical switch, her encouragement in clubs showed no great interest in his switching to diamonds if he regained the lead.

Declarer won the club ace and deceptively returned the heart queen at trick two. Silver took the ace and accurately shifted to a spade. When declarer finessed, Rosenberg won her king and shifted to a diamond. Now declarer had no chance, since whatever he did, he would be left with two diamond losers.

At the other table, West ducked declarer's play of the heart queen, for fear of crashing the heart king in his partner's hand. That allowed South to take the spade finesse next, with his endplay chances intact. East won the spade king and shifted to the diamond 10, but declarer could take this with the ace and eliminate the spades by ruffing out the suit. When West was thrown in with the heart ace, he had to offer a ruff and discard or give South a trick in either minor, while South still had a heart entry back to hand. (It is curious that both the winning line for declarer and the winning line for the defense both involve playing spades at trick three.)

ANSWER: It might look sensible to bid hearts, but in fact, with spade support this good, you should simply raise to two spades. The problem with bidding hearts is that it will tend to deny spade support. Additionally, if you do bid hearts and hear the opponents raise clubs, you may feel obliged to bid spades later, to prevent partner from leading a heart.

Today is Wednesday, March 6, the 65th day of 2013. There are 300 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight:
On March 6, 1933, a national bank holiday declared by President Franklin D. Roosevelt aimed at calming panicked depositors went in-to effect. (The holiday was supposed to last four days, but was extended until it was gradually lifted starting March 13.)

TODAY IN HISTORY

On this date:
In 1836, the Alamo in San Antonio, Texas, fell to Mexican forces after a 13-day siege.
In 1853, Verdi's opera "La Traviata" premiered in Venice, Italy.
In 1857, the U.S. Supreme Court ruled in Dred Scott v. Sandford that Scott, a slave, was not an American citizen and could not sue for his freedom in federal court.

In 1912, Oreos sandwich cookies were first introduced by the National Biscuit Co.
In 1933, Chicago Mayor Anton Cermak, wounded in an attempt on then-President-elect Franklin D. Roosevelt's life the previous month, died at a Miami hospital at age 59.

In 1944, U.S. heavy bombers staged the first full-scale American raid on Berlin during World War II.
In 1953, Georgy Malenkov was named premier of the Soviet Union a day after the death of Josef Stalin.
In 1967, the daughter of Josef Stalin, Svetlana Alliluyeva, appeared at the U.S. Embassy in New Delhi and declared her intention to defect to the West.
In 1970, a bomb being built inside a Greenwich Village townhouse by the radical Weathermen accidentally went off, destroying the house and killing three group members.

In 1973, Nobel Prize-winning author Pearl S. Buck, 80, died in Danby, Vt.
In 1983, in a case that drew much notoriety, a woman was gang-raped at a pool table in a tavern in New Bedford, Mass., called Big Dan's; four men were later convicted of the attack.
In 1988, the board of trustees at Gallaudet University in Washington, D.C., a liberal arts college for the deaf, selected Elisabeth Zinser, a hearing woman, to be school president. (Outraged students shut down the campus, forcing selection of a deaf president, I. King Jordan, instead.)

Ten years ago: A somber President George W. Bush readied the nation for war against Saddam Hussein, hurling some of his harshest invectives yet at the Iraqi leader during a prime-time news conference. The United States ratified a treaty on cutting active U.S. and Russian long-range nuclear warheads by two-thirds. Democrats blocked President Bush's nomination of Miguel Estrada to a federal appeals court.
Five years ago: A Palestinian killed eight students at a Jewish seminary in Jerusalem before he was slain. Twin bombings in a shopping district in Baghdad killed at least 68 people and wounded 130 others.
One year ago: In Super Tuesday contests, Republican Mitt Romney narrowly won in pivotal Ohio, seized a home-state victory in Massachusetts, triumphed in Idaho, Vermont and Alaska, and won easily in Virginia — where neither Rick Santorum nor Newt Gingrich was on the ballot. Santorum won contests in Oklahoma, Tennessee and North Dakota, while Gingrich won in Georgia. Former Texas tycoon R. Allen Stanford was convicted in Houston of bilking his investors out of more than $7 billion through a Ponzi scheme he'd operated for 20 years. (Stanford was sentenced to 110 years in prison.) Six British soldiers patrolling near the border between Helmand and Kandahar provinces in Afghanistan were killed by a bomb.

Today is Wednesday, March 6, the 65th day of 2013. There are 300 days left in the year.

DEAR ABBY: While cleaning out my attic yesterday, I found a letter that my daughter wrote to you a few years ago when she was 13. She was responding to a poem that had appeared in your column, "Legacy of an Adopted Child."

DEAR ABBY
Jeanne Phillips

She was going through a very trying time and was being bullied because she was adopted and looked very different from her parents.

My daughter is grown now and is a delightful, successful young woman. That poem helped her greatly. Can you reprint it for others?

— PROUD MOM IN GREENVILLE, S.C.

DEAR PROUD MOM: With pleasure. The poem is part of my "Keepers" booklet.

LEGACY OF AN ADOPTED CHILD
(Author Unknown)

Once there were two women
Who never knew each other.
One you do not remember,
The other you call mother.
Two different lives
Shaped to make yours one.
One became your guiding star,
The other became your sun.
The first gave you life
And the second taught you to live it.
The first gave you a need for love
And the second was there to give it.
One gave you a nationality,
The other gave you a name.
One gave you a seed of talent,
The other gave you an aim.
One gave you emotions,
The other calmed your fears.
One saw your first sweet smile,
The other dried your tears.
One gave you up —
It was all that she could do.
The other prayed for a child
And God led her straight to you.
And now you ask me
Through your tears,
The age-old question
Through the years:
Hereditry or environment
Which are you the product of?
Neither, my darling —
neither,
Just two different kinds of love.

This poem is part of a collection of poems and essays that readers have repeatedly asked to be re-run because they hold special meaning for them. Some of the items had been saved and re-read so many times that they had fallen apart. Many readers suggested that the special column items be compiled into a booklet, and what resulted is "Keepers." It can be ordered by sending your name and mailing address, plus check or money order for $7 (U.S. funds) to: Dear Abby Keepers Booklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, IL 61054-0447. Shipping and handling are included in the price. It's a quick and easy read for anyone who needs a lift, and is filled with down-to-earth nuggets of wisdom, both witty and philosophical. The "Keepers" touch on a variety of subjects and are a welcome gift for newlyweds, new parents, pet lovers or anyone recovering from an illness.

Dear Abby is written by Abigail Van Buren, also known as Jeanne Phillips, and was founded by her mother, Pauline Phillips. Write Dear Abby at www.DearAbby.com or P.O. Box 69440, Los Angeles, CA 90069.

TIMES-NEWS

IF MARCH 6 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: The rock and the hard place have turned into marshmallows. During the next four to six weeks, you are rolling in clover and can safely take a vacation or embark on a romantic week-end with a special someone. May is an excellent month to buckle down to work, when your business sense is at its best and when you can make smart decisions about financial affairs. The cosmic weather will dramatically improve by September when you can take important steps that will enrich your life. That is a great time to put crucial plans into motion. Supportive, truly helpful people will appear who could offer you assistance and wise advice.

HOROSCOPE

Jeraldine Saunders

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Cover ground. You can put your energies to good use when working in a team. Your interests are broad and wide in scope, and it is easy to tap into information. Unlock the love in a key relationship.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): You are considered a rock of reliability by your partner or a significant other. Unconditional love means going ahead and doing whatever needs to be done without quibbling or hesitating.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Naked truths are never a pretty sight, but can be improved with an airbrush of flattery. Sweeten criticism by balancing it with praise. Present an apt metaphor or offer examples to improve a situation.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): There is no such thing as a saint without a past, or a sinner without a future. You need to wrap up current projects before beginning new ones. Taking good care of the past can lead to a more fruitful future.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Play patty-cake with a philosophical viewpoint. You might be forced to walk the straight and narrow, but you can still turn your head and take in all the sights. Let your love light shine this evening.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Your limbic mind is limber enough to perform the limbo. You understand the body language of others and when motivated to create an emotional bond can create a desired affect through sheer magnetism.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Love is like a martini and better if stirred, not shaken. Let your desires stir you to show affection, but don't shake things up by being impetuous. A significant other might give you a good idea or valuable advice.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): You are able to successfully navigate more tight corners than a feather duster. You not only have the precision to get right to the point, but the faith in your own abilities that pays dividends in the end.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): You have learned that you will reap what you sow, so it pays to be generous and conscientious. You have a flair for organization and can make a valuable contribution to family events.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): When your passions are aroused, you can become immersed in a subject like a stone in water. Work hard to remain above reproach and responsible; others will expect you to live up to expectations.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Be your best by developing a balanced outlook. Play hard, but remember to work just as diligently. A significant other can provide a priceless sense of purpose and steer you in the right direction.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Dress for success. You can reach your ambitions by letting people meet you for the first time when you are looking your best. Even a quick trip to the store might entail meeting someone of significance.

OAKLEY'S GERRIT WYBENGA CHOOSES DORDT COLLEGE

BY RYAN HOWE
rhowe@magicvalley.com

OAKLEY • When Gerrit Wybenga packs his bags and travels across the country to play football at Dordt College this fall, he'll be far away from home, but will see a familiar face.

Wybenga will join his sister Sabrina Wybenga, who is a sophomore in the Dordt College women's basketball program, at the college located in Sioux Center, Iowa.

"I didn't really know for sure before this year (if I wanted to attend Dordt), but this year I started talking with the football coach and I just decided to go there," said Wybenga.

An all-Canyon Conference selection in 2012, Wybenga played running back and linebacker for Oakley. Wybenga rushed for just under 600 yards and compiled 75 tackles during his senior season.

He is the son of Rob and Greta Wybenga, who both attended

Dordt College.

Dordt is a member of the National Association of Intercollegiate Athletics (NAIA) and competes in the Great Plains Athletic Conference. The De-fenders finished the 2012 season with a 1-10 record.

Wybenga, who carries a 3.7 GPA, plans to study agriculture and business. "It's exciting to go there, but I'm kind of nervous," said Wybenga. "It's a step up from high school, but it should be good."

TWIN FALLS • It's not always easy to get up for midweek nonconference games, even on the rare occasions the wind's carrying balls out of Skip Walker Field.

After a four game home sweep of Colorado Northwestern Community College last week, the College of Southern Idaho baseball team split a doubleheader against the Idaho-native-laden roster of Treasure Valley Community College (Ore.), winning the first game 4-2 and losing the second 12-6.

"Especially with our freshmen, we get to see what they're made of in these kinds of games," manager

Boomer Walker said. "Treasure Valley was playing their opening day and they were pretty fired up. We've played two straight weeks of conference games and you come out of conference and kind of take a deep breath, relax a little bit."

The Golden Eagles got a well-pitched game on the front end, as Dillon Dove, normally a reliever in conference play, made his second start, going five innings and allowing just four hits and two runs.

"He pitched great for us," Walker said.

Walker said Tuesday's games were an opportunity to take a look at his pitching depth, a chance to evaluate who could help solidify the end of his bullpen behind freshman Kolton Brost, Dove and freshman Eli Davidann.

Isaac Anderson made a good case, closing out the game one win after a no-wind-needed blast to left-field from Nathan Ackerman gave CSI a two-run cushion going into the seventh.

"Moving forward, he is a guy we will look to save some games for us," Walker said.

Gonzaga Goes back to Work as No. 1

ASSOCIATED PRESS

SPOKANE, Wash. • Gonzaga is the first team outside of the six major conferences to be ranked No. 1 since Memphis in 2007-08.

You wouldn't guess that was the case as the Bulldogs prepared to practice Tuesday for the first time since making program history a day earlier with its first No. 1 ranking in The Associated Press' Top 25.

The players casually shot around. No special banners hung in The Kennel. There was no flood of extra media, no glad-handing boosters.

It was business as usual for a program that has won 80 percent of its games since the turn of the century.

"This team's pretty grounded," coach Mark Few said. "We all understand we've got a lot of work left to do. We've had some fun with it, but the ranking is not going to score any baskets or block any shots."

"Our greatest motivator is we want to keep playing together as long as we can."

Few tried to keep things normal when the poll came out Monday. He gave his team the day off and went fishing. He declined to say if he caught anything.

"We hadn't had one in forever," Few said of the day off. "Everybody needed to get away from basketball."

There was some news Tuesday.

Center Kelly Olynyk was named the West Coast Conference player of the year, after averaging 17 points and nearly 7 rebounds per game.

"It's a huge honor," said Olynyk, a junior who took a rare mid-career red-shirt season last year to improve his body and his game.

A 7-footer from Kamloops, British Columbia, Olynyk is a major reason the Zags have the nation's best Division I record (29-2) and won all 16 games in the WCC.

"It's more of a team thing for us," Olynyk said after becoming the 11th Gonzaga player to win the award. "They could have picked anybody."

"He's really made huge strides physically and mentally," Few said of Olynyk, who shot 66 percent from the field in conference games.

Forward Elias Harris and guard Kevin Pangos joined Olynyk on the all-conference team. Guard Mike Hart was selected the league's defender of the year and Few was named coach of the year for the ninth time in 14 seasons.

By winning the WCC regular season title, Gonzaga earned a bye into Saturday's semifinals of the league tournament in Las Vegas.

The Zags aren't taking the conference championships lightly, especially after losing the title game last year to Saint Mary's. And they hear the critics who contend the Zags don't deserve a top ranking because of their soft conference schedule.

"We know our league is tough," Hart said. "The upper half is very solid."

"If we're No. 1 for a week and lose it in the (conference) tournament, nobody is going to remember that," guard Gary Bell Jr. said. "We've got to maintain No. 1."

"We have a mature team," Bell added. "We're ready for this."

Harris, the senior forward who averaged more than 14 points and 7 rebounds per game, believes Gonzaga still has to earn national respect.

"Deep inside we have to keep in mind we're still going to be the underdog," Harris said after the Zags beat Portland last Saturday. "People aren't going to look at us like a Duke or North Carolina or a Kentucky."

New Fox Sports Network to Debut in August

ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK • For anyone who thinks TV is already saturated with sports of every stripe, stay tuned.

Here comes Fox with an in-your-face challenge to ESPN a 24-hour sports cable network called Fox Sports 1, set to launch Aug. 17.

"ESPN, quite frankly, is a machine," Fox Sports executive vice president Bill Wanger said Tuesday in announcing the venture. "They have very consistent ratings, obviously huge revenue. We're coming in trying to take on the establishment. It's no different than Fox News or Fox Broadcasting back in the '80s. We're going to have to scratch and claw our way all the way to the top."

To do that, Fox executives are confident they have enough live events, with rights to college basketball and football, NASCAR, soccer and UFC fights. In its first year, the new network will broadcast nearly 5,000 hours of live competition and news.

Fox owns rights to many Big 12, Pac-12 and Conference USA basketball and football games. Its soccer deals include UEFA Champions League and the men's and women's World Cups from 2015-22.

Starting in 2014, FS1 will start broadcasting Major League Baseball games, including part of the post-season. It will show some NASCAR Sprint Cup Series races as early as 2015, with other NASCAR events on the air from the startup.

"We believe we've amassed enough live events and can package and put programming around it where we can have scale," Fox Sports co-President Randy Freer said. "We can have significance. We can be a major player in the market."

However, unlike ESPN's lineup, there's no NBA, no SEC football, no ACC basketball and, the biggest attraction of all, no NFL games. On that last point, Wanger was quick to add: "Yet."

Still to be determined is whether the NFL sells some Thursday night games separately from its NFL Network package. If it does, everyone will try to buy a piece of the action.

That will be the case for any rights deals that come along soon; there aren't many, with long-term pacts now the norm. NBC and CBS already have their own cable sports networks, and Turner is also a factor. Fox Sports co-President Eric Shanks mentioned the NBA, Big Ten and U.S. Open tennis as appealing properties whose contracts expire in the next several years.

Blackhawks Extend Points Streak with Win over Wild

ASSOCIATED PRESS

CHICAGO • The Chicago Blackhawks set a franchise record with their 10th consecutive victory and extended their points streak to 29 games with a 5-3 win against the Minnesota Wild on Tuesday night.

Bryan Bickell scored twice in the first period and Patrick Kane added a big goal in the third as Chicago (20-0-3) remained the only team in the NHL without a regulation loss. It also snapped a tie with the 1977-78 Montreal

Canadiens for the second-longest points streak in league history.

Ryan Suter scored his first goal with Minnesota, sending a power-play slap shot past a screened Corey Crawford in the third period. Kyle Brodziak then poked his own rebound to get the Wild within one at 10:32. But Kane beat Darcy Kuemper just 61 seconds later. Brandon Saad had a goal and two assists for the Blackhawks, who host the Colorado Avalanche on Wednesday night.

CSI Baseball

It was a much different story in the second game, however. Grant Kukuk sailed through the first two innings of his third start of the year before a series of seeing-eye hits seemingly caused him to lose his focus, making two consecutive throwing errors, as Treasure Valley went on to score three runs.

It was even less sightly from there, as CSI relievers yielded nine runs and seven walks in the final three innings.

Still, CSI players got live repetitions instead of shoveling snow.

"It can be a bit of grind coming back from a weekend, but it's a lot better than practicing and at least we're at home," said sophomore Kendal Maier, who had two home runs on the day, giving him five on the year.

CSI hit five bombs in the 13 innings of at-bats, many of them wind-aided, a few of them opposite-field shots.

"I've only seen a few days like this," Walker said.

Walker was also looking for some freshman protection for the sophomore-heavy top of his lineup. Walker said that Ackerman — a player without a true position — will continue to get in the lineup so long as he produces similarly to his first 50 or so at-bats, where he is hitting around .370 with five long-balls.

"At any level, you find places on the field to play great hitters," Walker said.

Ackerman played first base and was the designated hitter on Tuesday.

"He has been hitting the crap out of the ball," Maier said.

Two local talents started opening day for TVCC. Buhl product Markus Liveley pitched into the sixth inning of the first game, giving up four runs. Glenns Ferry graduate Adrian Martinez started the second, giving up four earned runs in five innings. Buhl native Matt Hamilton had two hits and two RBIs in the second game.

CSI sophomore Tanner Morache was out with a thumb contusion but could be ready to return this weekend when the team plays in Treasure Valley's home tournament.

Real Madrid Eliminates Manchester United in Champions League

ASSOCIATED PRESS

MANCHESTER, England • Just like 10 years ago, Ronaldo scored at Old Trafford to advance Real Madrid in the Champions League and eliminate Manchester United.

Back then it was the Brazilian Ronaldo, who scored a memorable hat trick.

This time it was Cristiano Ronaldo, back at United for the first time since leaving four years ago. The Portuguese forward opted not to celebrate the goal that gave the nine-time champions a 2-1 victory Tuesday night and their third straight quarterfinals berth.

"I am happy inside because Madrid got through," Ronaldo said after the 3-2 aggregate win. "But on the other hand, I feel a little bit sad because of Manchester United."

United took a 2-1 lead in the total-goal series when Nani's cross in the 48th minute deflected in off a leg of Sergio Ramos for an own goal. The game started to turn when Nani received a red card from Turkish referee Cuneyt Cakir in the 56th minute for a studs-up, flying challenge on Alvaro Arbeloa. United manager Alex Ferguson charged out of his seat and down to the sideline to vent his anger.

Luka Modric cut to his right across the top of the penalty area in the 66th and tied the game and the aggregate with a 25-yard shot that eluded the left hand of diving goalkeeper David De Gea and went in off a post. It was just the second goal for Modric since Real Madrid bought him from Tottenham last summer.

Ronaldo scored three minutes later, getting past Rafael da Silva and sliding to tap in a cross from Gonzalo Higuain. Ronaldo reached 40 goals for the third consecutive season.

"Mentally it was not easy for Ronaldo," Madrid coach Jose Mourinho said.

Ferguson was so angered by the decision to eject Nani that he skipped the post-match news conference and sent assistant Mike Phelan.

"Everyone is wondering what had happened and why it happened," Phelan said of the red card. "We had a very distraught dressing room and a very distraught manager — and that's why I'm sat here in front of you now."

Ryan Giggs, the 39-year-old midfielder making his 1,000th senior competitive appearance for Manchester

United, Wales and the British Olympic team, angrily pointed at Cakir after the final whistle. Rio Ferdinand sarcastically clapped in his face.

Mourinho, viewed as a possible future replacement for the 71-year-old Ferguson, walked off the field early without celebrating the end of the match — a stark contrast to his famous run when his Porto team scored in the 90th minute to eliminate United in 2004.

"We didn't play well. We didn't deserve to win," Mourinho said. "I doubt that 11 against 11 we can win that match."

"Independent of that," he said of the red card, "the best team lost."

Ronaldo starred for United from 2003-09, winning the FIFA Player of the Year award in 2008. United sold him to Real Madrid in June 2009 for 80 million pounds (then $131 million).

In addition to the Ronaldos, there were other similarities to the last meeting of the clubs at Old Trafford, in the second leg of the quarterfinals in 2003. A decade ago, Ferguson dropped David Beckham from his starting lineup and brought the midfielder on in the 63rd minute of the 6-5 aggregate loss. This time, Ferguson started Wayne Rooney on the bench, inserting England's star forward only in the 73rd minute.

"Can't believe (at) Wayne Rooney isn't starting tonight!!!" wife Coleen Rooney tweeted.

Even Mourinho defended Ferguson's tactics.

"Sir Alex won the right to have every decision acknowledged as correct and every decision should have no question mark," Mourinho told reporters. "He is the best. He has created history. You are nobody and I am nobody to put a question mark in front. His team was very well organized."

With Arsenal trailing Bayern Munich 3-1 going into the second leg in Germany next week, England is in danger of having no teams in the quarterfinals for the first time since 1995-96. Defending champion Chelsea and Manchester City were eliminated in the group stage.

In the night's other match, Borussia Dortmund defeated Ukraine's Shakhtar Donetsk 3-0 to advance on 5-2 aggregate, getting goals from Felipe Santana in the 31st, Mario Goetze in the 37th and Jakub Blaszczykowski in the 59th.

Rory McIlroy's Way Out of Mess Is to Be Like Woods

The statement released by his handlers was almost as bad as the kid's decision to walk out on the tournament.

It was the first big mistake of his career, at a time when the golf world was enthralled by such a young talent. He was criticized by the press and by his peers for his selfish behavior, though there was hope that he at least would learn from his mistake.

Doug Ferguson
Associated Press

This was Tiger Woods, 1996.

In his fourth straight PGA Tour event since turning pro, the 20-year-old Woods effectively locked up a spot on tour with his tie for third in the B.C. Open. The next week he had another sponsor's exemption to the Buick Challenge. Woods showed up at Callaway Gardens before abruptly leaving town, and IMG released a statement that he was exhausted. It looked even worse when Woods didn't even stick around for the Fred Haskins Award dinner to honor him as college player of the year.

Eleven days later, Woods won in Las Vegas and all was forgotten.

That's the best way out for Rory McIlroy. Good golf goes a long way.

McIlroy laid the foundation for seeking forgiveness in a 25-minute telephone interview Sunday night with Sports Illustrated. He said what everyone else suspected: It was frustration over his game and not pain from his wisdom tooth that led him to walk out on the Honda Classic just eight holes into his second round. He was 7-over par, and with his second shot in the water on No. 18, it was about to get worse.

So he turned in his scorecard and bolted for the parking lot.

"What I should have done is take my drop, chip it on, try to make a 5 and play my hardest on the back nine, even if I shot 85," McIlroy told the magazine. "What I did was not good for the tournament, not good for the kids and the fans who were out there watching me. It was not the right thing to do."

Rory McIlroy, of Northern Ireland, watches his tee shot on the 10th hole during the first round of the Honda Classic golf tournament on Thursday in Palm Beach Gardens, Fla.

Expect to hear much of the same when he speaks Wednesday at Doral.

He was practicing at The Bear's Club just hours after he withdrew from the Honda Classic. Ernie Els saw him "practicing his tail off" all weekend, and then McIlroy played Monday afternoon in the Pro-Member tournament at Seminole. They spoke privately. That's all the Big Easy would share.

"We'll see what he says tomorrow," Els said.

It really doesn't matter.

Most reasonable people know by now that Boy Wonder made a boyish blunder. Jack Nicklaus weighed in by saying if only McIlroy had waited five more minutes, he would have thought the better of leaving. There's nothing McIlroy can do to change that now, and nothing he can say that will change anyone's opinion.

"When it comes to being where he's at, you've got to maybe think a little bit more than two minutes," Els said. "In a couple of years' time, he won't even think about this or talk about this. If he wins this week, it will be the last thing we talk about. It will be history, and that's what it should be. It's something that's happened and we should move on from that. He's a great kid. He's a great player. And if he admits he's made a mistake, then that's that, and let's move on."

The 23-year-old from Northern Ireland won his second major last year, captured the money title on the two biggest tours, swept all the important awards and established himself as No. 1 way out of trouble a lot quicker when you're No. 1 in the world," Rose said. "Facing a little bit of pressure and expectation that's on Rory right now, he has the skill set and the talent to possibly turn it around a lot quicker."

The sooner the better.

McIlroy has played only 80 holes in three tournaments this year — a missed cut, a first-round loss in the Match Play Championship, and a withdrawal. He has gone through rough patches before. It was only 10 months ago that he missed four cuts in five tournaments. His shoulders sagged. He threw a few clubs.

But he never walked off the course without finishing, and that makes you wonder if his psyche is really that fragile.

He has two more tournaments on his schedule before the Masters, and the good news about Doral is that it's a World Golf Championship with no cut. McIlroy is guaranteed four rounds for the first time this year. The first step is his press conference today.

For McIlroy, honesty will go a long way toward putting this behind him.

Winning will go even further.

BIG EAST FOOTBALL KEEPS $100M IN SPLIT

NEW YORK • Big East football schools will get almost all of a $110 million pot in a deal that will allow seven departing basketball schools to keep the name Big East and start playing in their own conference next season, a person familiar with the negotiations says.

The person spoke to The Associated Press on condition of anonymity because the separation agreement has not yet been finalized. That is likely to happen by the end of the week. The football schools will receive approximately $100 million under the agreement, most of which will go to holdover members Connecticut, South Florida and Cincinnati.

The basketball schools will receive $10 million, the Big East name and the right to play their conference tournament at Madison Square Garden.

The Big East's stash of cash has built up in recent years through a combination of exit fees, entry fees and money the league's members earned in the NCAA men's basketball tournament. Since 2011, the Big East has lost 16 schools that were either members or dropped out before playing a game. That figure includes the seven Catholic basketball schools.

The so-called Catholic 7, which is expected to add at least two more members before it begins competition in the 2013-14 school year, is made up of Georgetown, St. John's, Villanova, Seton Hall, Providence, Marquette and DePaul. The new Big East has a television deal from Fox waiting for it, though it still needs to hire a commissioner and set up a league office.

Joining South Florida, Connecticut, Cincinnati and Temple, which rejoined the Big East last year for football, in the to-be-named-later conference in 2013 will be Memphis, Central Florida, SMU and Houston. East Carolina and Tulane are set to join in 2014 and Navy is scheduled to join for football in 2015. Commissioner Mike Aresco has said the conference is looking at adding another member to give it an even 12. It would then break into two divisions of six and play a football championship game.
