House Approves $1.3 Billion for Schools

BY HANNAH FURFARO
Associated Press

BOISE • Public school teachers stand to see state funding restored for salaries as part of a $1.3 billion public schools spending plan passed by the House Friday.

On a 52-16 vote, the House approved the fiscal year 2014 schools budget, by far Idaho's biggest annual budget and accounting for 47 percent of total state spending. The measure now goes to the Senate.

The appropriation for the upcoming fiscal year amounts to a 2.2 percent increase over last year's $1.27 billion budget. It's also the first budget passed since Superintendent of Public Instruction Tom Luna's disputed "Students Come First" education overhaul was defeated last year at the polls by voters.

If approved by senators next week, districts would get $11.3 million to unfreeze the state's "steps and lanes" teacher salary grid that pays educators according to years of service and education level.

The budget increases minimum teacher salaries from $30,500 to $31,000, a 1.6 percent increase, and chips in $21 million for districts to use as a reward for educators who improve student achievement. It also directs $3 million for so-called technology pilot projects, to be awarded to schools or districts on a competitive basis, and provides another $3.75 million to train teachers as Idaho joins 47 other states in adopting "common core" standards for English, language arts and math.

"It provides funding for technology and includes new focus on Idaho core standards," said Rep. Jeff Thompson, R-Idaho Falls and the sponsor.

Not everyone lauded the budget during Friday's debate.

Sixteen Republicans including Rep. Judy Boyle, R-Midvale, voted against the bill, with some voicing long-simmering disgruntlement that the Legislature's budget committee overstepped its mandate to set spending for the state, and went into the realm of setting policy that should be reserved for the House and Senate Education committees.

TF COUNTY MOVES OFFICES

Offices will be closed on their scheduled moving day.

BY KIMBERLEE KRUESI

TWIN FALLS • In less than two weeks, Twin Falls County officials will begin moving into their new home.

Moving into the former St. Luke's Magic Valley Medical Center will take a little less than a month, Commissioner Terry Kramer said. During that time, various county services may be unavailable.

The county chose to move in phases to make sure each department could get settled, rather than try to do it all at once, Kramer said.

"We're not expecting this to be an easy move, but that's why we're doing this in waves," he said. "We're trying to establish some sort of flow."

Most of the moves will take only one day. During its moving day, the scheduled county office will be closed to the public. The

BY ALISON GENE SMITH

MOSCOW • A jury found a Twin Falls man guilty of rape Friday, March 22, after a four-day trial in Moscow.

Jesse Vierstra was arrested in Moscow in early October on a charge of rape after he was accused of raping a woman near the Sigma Chi fraternity house.

The trial started Monday.

According to the Lewiston Tribune, the jury deliberated for four hours over two days and delivered its verdict Friday morning.

According to the Tribune, a sentencing date.

Further details of the trial were not available from Latah County court staff Friday afternoon.

In Idaho, the maximum sentence for rape is life in prison.

Moscow Police Chief David Duke told the Times-News in Second District Judge Carl Kerrick ordered a presentence report and a psycho-sexual evaluation for Vierstra, but did not set

October that the victim told police Vierstra, a former University of Idaho student, asked her to go for a walk outside. She went with him, and they went to a small bench behind the fraternity house, Duke said.

According to Duke, the woman told police the two kissed. After several women walked by, the woman said, Vierstra then forced her to the ground and sexually assaulted her, Duke said.

Duke said the alleged victim said she knew Vierstra from working together at a Twin Falls restaurant.

Lawmakers Won't Tackle Medicaid in 2013 Session

BY JOHN MILLER

Associated Press

BOISE • Expanding Medicaid to cover more low-income Idaho residents could save state and local taxpayers tens of millions over the next decade, according to a state-financed report released this week, but lawmakers won't tackle the issue during the 2013 session due to end next week.

House Speaker Scott Bedke said there isn't enough time left, even though he thinks the potential merits of expansion shouldn't be overlooked. It could mean some $478 million in county property tax reductions for Idaho residents through 2024, according to the report from the Idaho Department of Health and Welfare.

"We are going to be done by Friday," said Bedke, R-Burley. "I don't think we can give that issue the proper vetting it deserves."

Part of the holdup is, Republicans exhausted considerable political capital on another key provision of President Obama's overhaul when they passed a state-based health insurance exchange, after a combined 16 hours of debate in the House and Senate in which backers of the bill were accused by some foes of acquiescing to federal intrusion into Idaho.

Consequently, GOP appetite to tackle Medicaid expansion, a provision of the 2010 federal law that the U.S. Supreme Court left to states to decide, is limited especially given the bruising debate sure to accompany it.

"Politics are what's going to block it," said House Minority Leader John Rusche, D-Lewiston and former insurance executive, favors expansion.

Among other things, Rusche said, expanding Medicaid would move more than 100,000 low-income Idaho residents into a system of medical care that includes mental health services, a departure from the existing program that pays the medical bills of poor patients only after treatment.

Where Is Spring?

When we think of March Madness, it's usually associated with the NCAA basketball tournament. But it can also apply to the weather.

Last weekend we were coming off days in the 70s and 60s, and it felt great. It got people thinking of spring and spring-related activities. One week later, the calendar officially says it is spring, yet we have temperatures in the 40s and 30s with some of you seeing snow.

If it is spring why doesn't the weather reflect the season? The honest answer is that the changing of the seasons is more symbolic when you compare it to actual weather.

Winter arrives in December but our coldest months are January and February. Same goes for the summer: it arrives in June but our hottest months are July and August. There is usually a delay from when a season starts to when we actually get to feel and see the true weather of the season. This is true with spring.

March and April are what I call "transition months" as we go from the cold of winter to the heat of summer. When you have this transition and clash of temperatures you will get a wide variety of weather. That is why it isn't uncommon to have one week mild and nice and another week cold and unpleasant. While the back and forth from cold to warm is not pleasant, it won't be long until warmth wins out and we are truly into spring and summer.

IN BRIEF

Pa. Caretaker Charged with Drinking Old Whiskey

GREENSBURG, Pa. (AP) • Fifty-two bottles of well-aged whiskey disappeared between his lips, police said, and now it's time for a western Pennsylvania man to settle up.

John Saunders, the former live-in caretaker of a Pittsburgh-area mansion, faces criminal charges for allegedly drinking more than $100,000 worth of the owner's whiskey.

Owner Patricia Hill found nine cases of whiskey hidden in the walls and stairwell of the century-old Georgian mansion built by coal and coke industrialist J.P. Brennan after she bought it in 2012. The Old Farm Pure Rye Whiskey was produced in the early 1900s by the nearby West Overton Distilling Co.

"My guess is that Mr. Brennan ordered 10 cases . pre-Prohibition," said Hill, a New Yorker who bought the house to convert it into a bed-and-breakfast. "I was told by his family that family members used to greet him at the door each day with a shot of whiskey."

Scottsdale police told The Pittsburgh Tribune-Review that Saunders drank dozens of bottles of whiskey valued at $102,400 by a New York auction house.

ONLINE: Congressman Simpson Voices Concerns to Outgoing Interior Secretary

On "Untamed Idaho," reporter Kimberlee Kruesi blogs about the state's environmental issues. An excerpt from her latest post:

Ken Salazar.

"Simpson, who chairs the House Interior and Environment Appropriations Subcommittee, said that unnecessary lawsuits are 'siphoning funding away' from priority programs.

"The truth is that there are people on both sides of the issue who, if they don't get their way, will just sue," said Simpson in a news release. 'And as budgets decline, litigation goes up. This is a major challenge that we face: How do we protect the public's ability to have a say in how their public lands are managed while limiting wasteful, frivolous lawsuits?' ..."

exception to that is the Twin Falls' Division of Motor Vehicle's office, which will need two days, Kramer said.

The DMV will move April 10-11. The extra time is needed to connect DMV computers to the state server, Kramer said. The county's Buhl DMV office will remain open during the move.

The final week of the scheduled moves could affect the public the most, Kramer said. The county is moving the treasurer's office, clerk's office and social services.

Despite the lengthy moving process, Kramer said, he expected construction will be finished by the time they move in.

The demolition and rebuilding are complete, and the contractors are focusing on finishing touches like removing paint spots from the carpet.

"This has been a huge undertaking," Kramer said. "We have construction in almost every corner of the building."

Twin Falls County officials have posted moving schedules at their offices and will be posting the moving schedule to its website at twinfallscounty.org.

Boyle didn't like provisions including the plan to award up to $21 million for teacher bonuses, among other things, on grounds it was beyond the Joint Finance-Appropriations Committee's purview.

Supporters including Rep. Reed DeMordaunt, R-Eagle and the Education Committee chairman, said he wasn't overly concerned. There's long been give and take over where budget setting ends and policy making begins. That won't end, he conceded.

"This is an ongoing conversation that's always been had," DeMordaunt said. "I'm not sure we're ever going to come to a conclusion...I'm certainly comfortable with it."

Rep. Grant Burgoyne, D-Boise, voted in favor of the bill, but blasted it for its failure to return state spending for public education to 2009 levels.

State funding for education reached a zenith in 2009, when lawmakers' original budget pumped in $1.4 billion to public schools. The next year legislators reduced those funds by almost $200 million.

"I don't like this budget, I don't like it at all, but I'll vote for it," said Rep. Grant Burgoyne, D-Boise. "We've managed to tread some water with this budget ... (and it) is probably the best that can get through this Legislature."

Despite its imperfections, DeMordaunt said he was still pleased the budget includes more money for technology projects.

Beyond the pilot projects, it includes $2 million to complete work at high schools to equip their buildings with wireless Internet connections, and another $8 million in additional technology funding.

"Our districts are clamoring for the ability to use this utility called technology in whatever way they can," he said. "We're providing the funds so they can."

Bison graze in 2011 near the U.S. Route 89 highway just outside of Gardiner, Mont.

Bison Hunt Largest Since 1989

BILLINGS, Mont. (AP) • Hunters killed more wild bison migrating from Yellowstone National Park this season than they have in decades, with the numbers driven by strong participation from American Indians who harvest the animals under long-standing treaty rights. Roughly 250 bison have been killed this season after leaving Yellowstone for low-elevation winter range in Montana. Combined with a mild winter, the means there's unlikely to be a repeat this year of the wholesale slaughters that have killed thousands of bison in the last two decades in the name of disease control. Tribal and state officials said Friday that should provide some relief for the park's burgeoning bison herds, which leave Yellowstone in fewer number during mild winters. Still, hunting carries its own challenges, beyond criticism from some animal advocates. After scores of gut piles from harvested bison were found outside the park's northern boundary near the town of Gardiner, wildlife officials removed 8,000 pounds of bison waste to avoid a situation in which the waste would attract grizzly bears. In recent years, government agencies that oversee the bison have moved away from their past policy of capturing bison for slaughter or hazing them back into the park as soon as they cross the Montana boundary. As a result, bison can again access tens of thousands of acres of historic grazing areas — and hunters have more chance to shoot them.

GROUP REACHES DEAL WITH OSHA AFTER FIREFIGHTER DEATH

LEWISTON (AP) • Officials from an Idaho firefighting organization reached an agreement with the Occupational Safety and Health Administration over citations and fines levied after a 20-year-old firefighter was struck and killed by a falling tree while working on a wildfire last summer. The Orofino-based Clearwater Potlatch Timber Protective Association has agreed to a $10,500 fine, down from the $14,000 fine that OSHA proposed in February for the death of U.S. Forest Service firefighter Anne Veseth of Moscow. On Thursday, the Idaho Land Board authorized Howard Weeks, the protective association's chief fire warden, to sign the agreement, which also revised the citation, the Lewiston Tribune reported Friday. Idaho Department of Lands spokeswoman Emily Callihan said Thursday the original citation would have made it impossible for firefighters to do their jobs. The Feb. 7 citation said the initial attack team violated eight of the 10 Standing Firefighting Orders and took no action to mitigate 11 of the 18 "Situations That Shout 'Watch Out'" listed in the Interagency Standards for Fire and Fire Aviation Operations, including maintaining proper communications, being aware of weather conditions and ensuring escape routes and safety zones were properly identified. Callihan says the original citation would have required firefighters to leave any fire where standard firefighting orders couldn't be followed or dangerous situations were present. OSHA realized the wording of its initial citation could prevent an initial attack on many fires, allowing them to grow and become more dangerous, Callahan said. The Forest Service's own investigation, released in mid-February, found human error was not responsible for Veseth's death, but that the accident was a tragedy due to the risks inherent in firefighting. Veseth was in her second season as a wildfire fighter and was part of a crew assigned to reinforce a fire line on one perimeter of the 43-acre Steep Corner Fire that burned near Orofino in August when she was struck by the tree and killed. An anonymous federal reporting system for wild-land firefighters indicated that the Montana-based Flathead Hotshots firefighting team declined to join suppression efforts on the Steep Corner Fire the day before Veseth died, citing safety concerns.

Utah Governor Vetoes Concealed Carry Bill

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) • The governor said Friday he vetoed a bill that would have allowed Utah residents to carry a hidden, unloaded gun without a permit. It was one of the more hotly contested measures to come out of the Utah Legislature this year. "As I've said it before, if it ain't broke, don't fix it," Gov. Gary Herbert said, noting the current system has not inhibited the ability of state residents to bear arms. Supporters of the bill say they will urge lawmakers to overturn the veto. Existing laws on the issue work well and provide an important tool for law enforcement agencies, which prefer the permit system, Herbert, a Republican, said. "It does give you a second line of defense for background checks," he said. Herbert's office received thousands of phone calls and letters from supporters and opponents of the bill. Supporters said it would mark a watershed moment for gun rights and legalize an already common practice for farmers and ranchers. Opponents, including the Utah Chiefs of Police Association, Utah League of Cities and Towns, and Catholic leaders, said the bill would present public safety concerns by eliminating the need for classes or background checks involving the possession of firearms. Aides to the governor said a tide of opposition surfaced in March. It marked a change from late February, when public comments to Herbert overwhelmingly supported the measure. Rep. John Mathis, who sponsored the bill, told lawmakers the current law presents a problem for ranchers who inadvertently cover their gun when putting on a jacket in bad weather.

ASK ST. LUKE'S

Exercise, Healthy Diet Key in Preventing Colorectal Cancers

I am concerned about colon health and the risk of colorectal cancer. I would like some tips on how I can improve my health with diet and exercise to keep my colon as healthy as possible.

— Susan, Twin Falls

Answered by Alisa Rawson, MS, RD, LD, Clinical Nutrition, Dietitian, St. Luke's Magic Valley:

There are things that can be done to prevent colorectal cancer through diet and lifestyle choices. Forty-five percent of colorectal cancers in the U.S. are preventable each year through diet, physical activity and maintaining a healthy body weight.

Exercise can be a big benefit in preventing colon cancer. It is recommended that you get 30 minutes of moderate physical activity per day. Maintaining a healthy weight is also important. Excess body fat, particularly belly fat, is linked to increased risk of many types of cancers, including colorectal cancer. Limit high fat foods, added fats, "fast" food and sugar-sweetened beverages.

Eat a healthy, plant-based diet high in fiber, whole grains, fruits and vegetables, including beans/legumes and plant proteins. Limit red meat and alcohol, and avoid processed meats.

Diets high in garlic are also linked to decreased colorectal cancer. Chop fresh garlic and let it sit 10-15 minutes before cooking for the most powerful effect.

Include milk and calcium, choosing low-fat dairy products. Hydration is also key. Aim for 8-10 cups of hydrating fluids per day and choose mostly non-caloric, non-caffeinated beverages.

Chemicals produced when meat is cooked at high temperatures, such as grilling and pan frying, may increase risk for certain cancers, including colorectal cancer. Marinate meat and partially cook it before grilling, cook it at a lower temperature for a longer period of time, turn the meat often, and discard any charred portions to decrease formation of these chemicals.

Probiotics introduce live, healthy bacteria cultures into your digestive tract. These include yogurt, kefir, and fermented vegetables like kimchi (cabbage) and tempeh (soybeans).

In addition to diet and exercise, everyone over age 50 needs to get a colonoscopy. It is important to consult with your primary care provider to determine whether you would need to get a colonoscopy earlier than age 50, based on your family history and other risk factors.

Mom Accused of Tying Daughter to Bed Held on Bond

NORTH LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) • A single mother made an initial court appearance Friday after being arrested and accused of locking her 4-year-old daughter in an apartment bedroom for up to 12 hours a day — tethered by the ankle with a blue terrycloth bathrobe tie to a bedpost, and given a plastic tote bin with a purple lid to use as a toilet.

Laketha Charis Moore, 36, kept her eyes downcast and said nothing as she stood in shackles and an orange jail jumpsuit before North Las Vegas Justice of the Peace Pro-Tem Eugene Martin.

ASSOCIATED PRESS

This image provided by the Las Vegas Metropolitan Police Department shows Laketha Moore, who is being held on felony child abuse and neglect charges.

The judge told Moore that she faces two child abuse and 31 child neglect charges but that formal charges had not been filed.

Martin ruled there was probable cause to keep Moore jailed for up to a week on $620,000 bail while North Las Vegas police and Child Protective Services officials continue to investigate.

A deputy public defender, Xiomara Ferrera, met for the first time with Moore and said outside court that she hadn't seen the evidence in the case. But she said Moore planned to fight the charges.

Moore also faces an eviction hearing Tuesday in a separate court action, a court clerk said.

Moore was arrested Tuesday after apartment managers noticed a tie described as a bathrobe belt stretched from the knob of a closed bedroom door to a bathroom door in the unit where Moore lived alone with the girl, according to a North Las Vegas police report made public Friday.

The apartment officials entered the unit and found the child in the room, the report said.

A downstairs neighbor who told police she knew Moore as Kiki told investigators she hadn't seen the girl in a couple of months and that Moore told her the child was living with her grandmother in California.

Moore was arrested when she returned home as police were investigating, said North Las Vegas Police Officer Chrissie Coon, a department spokeswoman.

Moore later told investigators she didn't have a babysitter, and that she began leaving her daughter alone at home Feb. 5 while she went to work during the week and to church on Sundays, according to the police report.

Moore told police she began tethering her daughter to the bed days later because the girl would ransack the apartment while she was gone.

Moore also told police she sometimes hit the girl with a belt when she was angry, and police reported the girl was treated at a hospital for several scrapes and bruises consistent with beatings.

Coon said the girl was left with little to eat or drink in a room that reeked of human waste.

The police report said officers found no water or food in the bedroom, and several inches of urine and feces in the plastic tote bin.

Miniature Horse Aids Alaska Boy with Special Needs

ANCHORAGE, Alaska (AP) • A young miniature horse in sneakers is helping a 4-year-old special needs child at an Anchorage public elementary school.

Zoe, a black mare, is a service animal for preschooler Zaiden Beattie at Russian Jack Elementary School. It's the only service horse in an Alaska school — and after multiple online searches, the only service horse Principal Elizabeth Hornbuckle could find at any school in the nation.

ASSOCIATED PRESS

Zoe, a 10-month-old miniature horse in training to be a service horse, nuzzles Zaiden Beattie, 4, on Wednesday at Russian Jack Elementary School in Anchorage, Alaska.

Zaiden is one of 300 children in the U.S. diagnosed with A-T, or ataxia-telangiectasia, a genetic disorder that progressively robs children of their ability to coordinate movement such as walking. Zaiden's mother, Lesley Zacharias, a professional horse trainer, is teaching Zoe to help Zaiden walk steadily until the disease inevitably shackles him to a wheelchair.

"He moves around a lot better and has more energy if he's got a hand on someone, either holding someone's hand or a hand on something," Zacharias said. "My personal goal is first grade with a pony instead of a walker."

The head of the 10-month-old horse only rises to an adult's waist and is almost irresistible to touch, though training protocols call for her to be petted on the neck, not the face, and only when given permission. Zoe is calm but playful, eager to play or work, and lets her owners know it by nuzzling their hands.

The sturdy, 150-pound animal began making appearances in Zaiden's preschool classroom in January. Early training began with socialization — exposure to crowds and loud noises such as the school's fire alarm. Now she's learning tasks.

"She's providing balance and mobility, and she's learning how to pick things up and eventually hand things to him," Zacharias said.

Zacharias describes Zaiden's balance as "good to wobbly."

"He trips a fair amount. He falls down a fair amount," she said. "Some days, by the time he gets off the school bus, his legs look like they're going to give out."

Most people with the disease are in a wheelchair by the age of 16. A-T also causes immune system problems and a high rate of cancer, and patients generally die in their 20s., according to the National Cancer Institute.

Helping Obama’s Health Care Law Reduce the Deficit

Republicans in Washington have repeatedly called on President Barack Obama to make changes to the Affordable Care Act as a part of their efforts to deal with long-term budget deficits. Although complete repeal of the law is desirable, such an outcome is impossible in the near-term.

Lanhee Chen
Bloomberg News

This raises two questions: Should changes to the law be part of current budget negotiations? And, more important, what form should these changes take?

The answer to the first question is yes. The law is a budget-buster, adding almost $2 trillion in new spending over the next 10 years. Calculations based on a recent report by the nonpartisan Government Accountability Office show that the Affordable Care Act could add $6.2 trillion to U.S. deficits over the next 75 years. Many liberal commentators have attacked this conclusion, in part because it came from Republican Sen. Jeff Sessions, the ranking member of the Budget Committee.

It’s worth explaining, however, why the GAO report — and the accompanying calculations — are fair assessments of the law’s long-term fiscal impact.

The calculations are based on what the GAO terms an alternative fiscal simulation. This scenario predicts fiscal impacts based on certain reasonable assumptions about the future, such as the likelihood of certain cost-containment measures coming to pass.

As written, for example, the law cuts Medicare payments to physicians in such a draconian fashion that, in 2030, the program would pay doctors 60 percent less than private health-insurance plans. Given that Congress has acted to avert other, similar reductions every year for the past decade, it is only reasonable to expect that these cuts would be averted as well. Drastically reduced Medicare and Medicaid payments to hospitals, which the law also assumes, are similarly unlikely.

And the GAO report is hardly an outlier: It notes that other nonpartisan sources, including the Congressional Budget Office, have questioned the assumption that the Affordable Care Act’s cost-containment mechanisms are sustainable.

All this is cause for concern and a reason to overturn the law. But let’s be realistic: Full repeal isn’t happening as long as Democrats control the White House and Senate. So Republicans should focus instead on deficit-reducing changes that Obama and congressional Democrats might actually consider.

The two most expensive and most politically sensitive elements of the Affordable Care Act are subsidies for the purchase of health insurance ($1.2 trillion over the next 10 years) and funding for the expansion of Medicaid ($638 billion). It is unrealistic to expect either of these to be eliminated, but their cost could be reduced.

The law subsidizes the purchase of health insurance for Americans earning up to 400 percent of the federal poverty level. The benefit is means-tested — that is, the poorest Americans are eligible for the most help. The federal poverty level for a family of four is currently $23,550, so the law would provide subsidies to families with household incomes of more than $94,000 a year. The president and Congress can generate savings by trimming eligibility for the subsidies or putting in place more aggressive means-testing.

Further savings can be had through recapture of any overpayments of subsidies under the law. These overpayments may occur because the subsidies are based on income from a previous year, and a family’s income may rise after it gets a subsidy. The House Ways and Means Committee has already approved provisions requiring the federal government to collect this money, and the president and Congress should do the same.

Another way to extract savings is to delay the law’s full implementation. For example, a delay until 2016 of all its provisions scheduled to take effect in 2014 or 2015 could save taxpayers as much as $200 billion.

Both congressional Republicans and the president can benefit from some delay. For Republicans, delay allows them to keep alive the possibility of full repeal until after the next presidential election. For Obama, a delay would allow more time to set up (and help states set up) health insurance exchanges, the mechanisms through which subsidy recipients would purchase insurance.

Finally, there are several smaller provisions in the law that could be changed to generate savings. A favorite bipartisan target is the law’s Prevention and Public Health Fund, which is nicely named but has paid for seemingly unrelated projects such as the construction of sidewalks and playgrounds. The law originally set aside $15 billion for this fund from 2010 to 2019, but Obama has twice proposed cutting the fund and actually did cut it by $5 billion in 2012.

In short, there are a number of ways the Affordable Care Act can be altered to help with the challenge of deficit reduction. The question is whether President Obama is serious about amending his signature law to help the nation deal with its fiscal challenges.

Lessons From Iraq War There for the Heeding

“Fundamentally, we have no idea what is needed unless and until we get there on the ground.”

That was then-Deputy Defense Secretary Paul D. Wolfowitz three weeks before the Iraq war began a decade ago. He was digressing from his script on what he thought would be positive results from a military action while appearing before the House Budget Committee on Feb. 27, 2003.

Do nations learn from mistakes?

Today the United States is in deep debt, in part from the Iraq war, the continued fighting in Afghanistan and the general fight against terrorism. As the nation slowly recovers, the United States and its allies are trying to prevent Iran from developing nuclear weapons and trying to force North Korea to end its program, which perhaps already includes nuclear devices. There is also a push for the Obama White House to take a more active role in Syria to halt the killing and prevent radical Islamic elements from gaining control.

How much more do Obama policymakers — or those politicians pushing for military action — know about what would happen if the United States were to bomb or initiate military operations in Iran or North Korea, or supply weapons or create a free-fly zone for the

Walter Pincus

The Washington Post

Syrian opposition?

Any of those actions would, in effect, put the U.S. militarily “there on the ground.”

A decade ago the United States and its allies invaded Iraq because the Bush administration wanted to stop Saddam Hussein from building nuclear weapons, prevent the transfer of chemical or biological agents to terrorists, or end general support of terrorists, including al-Qaida. Some officials just thought it was time to end the dictatorial regime. Take your pick.

Economic sanctions had not worked, and the Bush White House had convinced a majority of Americans that Saddam had ties to Osama bin Laden and the attacks of Sept. 11, 2001.

The fact is neither Wolfowitz nor Bush nor other senior policymakers knew much about Iraq’s culture and domestic politics. The result was that they totally underestimated the task being undertaken, which meant the loss of 4,400 U.S. service personnel and 32,000 wounded.

What many forget is that Iraq and Afghanistan also mark the first U.S. wars in which a president, first Bush and now President Obama, has not sought a war tax. The result: nearly $2 trillion in war expenditures put on the nation’s credit card.

Have those pushing for military action against Iran, North Korea or involvement in Syria mentioned asking taxpayers to support paying for such operations?

“There is a lot of money to pay for this that doesn’t have to be U.S. taxpayer money, and it starts with the assets of the Iraqi people. We are talking about a country that can really finance its own reconstruction and relatively soon,” Wolfowitz told the House Appropriations defense subcommittee on March 27, 2003, a week after the invasion began. He certainly was wrong about that.

What about the arguments before the invasion regarding a nuclear-armed Saddam? In his nationally televised speech Oct. 7, 2002, as the U.S. buildup to war was taking place, Bush painted Saddam’s Iraq as having chemical and biological weapons and was “reconstructing its nuclear weapons program.”

With nuclear weapons, Bush said, Saddam “would be in a position to dominate the Middle East. He would be in a position to threaten America.”

Insert Iran’s supreme leader, Ayatollah Ali Khamenei, or President Mahmoud Ahmadinejad and you have the arguments being made for military action against the current Tehran regime. Of course the war on terror goes on, and the argument for military action now sounds much like the argument of a decade ago: Doing something will aid the fight against terrorism.

I take heart that the Obama White House, and even U.S. military leaders, seem to have learned the lessons of Iraq and are cautious about being pushed into new foreign adventures.

When asked about Syria on Monday at the Center for Strategic and International Studies, Gen. Martin Dempsey, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, said, “As a student of that part of the world now for about the last 20 years, I think Syria poses the most complex set of issues that anyone could ever conceive, literally, in every facet.”

He noted humanitarian concerns, but added that over the past six months the questions about who makes up President Bashar Assad’s opposition have become “less clear in some ways.”

“We’re doing planning so that I can provide options, but again ... I don’t think, at this point, I can see a military option that would create an understandable outcome. And until I do, it will be my advice to proceed cautiously.”

That response is evidence of hard lessons learned.

Jerome Man Charged with Child Sex Abuse

BY ALISON GENE SMITH
alismith@magicvalley.com

TWIN FALLS • A Jerome man has been accused of inappropriately touching a 14-year-old girl in Twin Falls County.

Steven R. Chapman, 35, was arraigned on one count of sexual abuse of a minor under 16 on Thursday in Twin Falls County 5th District Court.

According to a police report, Chapman attempted to kiss and touch the girl in a sexual manner.

The report states that during a polygraph test, Chapman allegedly told Idaho State Police he kissed the girl but denied touching her.

The report states that the polygraph examiners determined Chapman was being deceitful in his answers about touching the girl.

"I told Steven he failed the test because in his mind, he knows he touched (the alleged victim's) breast. Steven did not say anything to my statement but began shaking his head up and down indicating the answer was a yes," an officer wrote in the report.

After being told what he was being charged with, Chapman asked for an attorney, the report states.

Thursday, Chapman's bond was set at $5,000 and he posted it the same day. A judge issued a no-contact order with the alleged victim, and a preliminary hearing is scheduled for March 29.

Wise County Sheriff David Walker, left, steps in to help Montague County Sheriff Paul Cunningham answer a question about a deputy who was shot Thursday, at a news conference in Decatur, Texas on Friday.

Texas Shootout May Tie to Colorado Prison Chief Death

DECATUR, Texas (AP) • The black 1991 Cadillac slammed into an 18-wheeler hauling gravel on a rural four-lane road in the North Texas prairie. Its driver, a Colorado parolee and member of a white supremacist prison gang, bailed out and opened fire on the deputies chasing him.

Evan Spencer Ebel, 28, was shot in the head and died.

From the wreckage comes a mix of clues and speculation that tie together two shocking Colorado killings and could shed new light on a third one in Texas.

Although Colorado authorities won't confirm Ebel's gang ties or say whether they have anything to do with the slaying of the state prisons chief, they've locked down prisons, where the white supremacist gang is active, and upped security on state officials.

They say both are general precautions.

The potential ties between Ebel and the slaying of corrections director Tom Clements, 58, became clearer on Friday. The shell casings Texas authorities collected after the shootout are similar to those found at Clements' home. And the Cadillac Ebel drove matched the description of one spotted in the neighborhood that night.

Then, in the trunk of Ebel's car, Texas authorities found a Domino's pizza box and a jacket or shirt from the popular chain. That hardened the apparent connection between Ebel and the slaying of deliveryman Nathan Leon, who delivered a pizza on Sunday and was found dead of multiple gunshot wounds.

The most tenuous connection is to another slaying, that of prosecutor Mark Hasse in rural Kaufman County, 100 miles east of the crash site. Hasse was gunned down as he walked through the courthouse parking lot the morning of Jan. 31. Authorities were already probing whether white supremacists assassinated Hasse.

Now they are starting to question the parallels between the Hasse case and the Clements slaying.

"Everybody is wondering, why did he run to Texas?" Kaufman County Dist. Atty. Mark McLelland said of Ebel in an interview. "Those things happen up there (in Colorado), and all of a sudden he's here where something like that already happened, your imagination runs wild."

A federal law enforcement official confirmed Ebel's white supremacist ties to The Associated Press on condition of anonymity, because he wasn't authorized to speak about the investigation.

House OKs Initiatives Hurdles Bill

BOISE (AP) • Getting referendum measures on the ballot could become more difficult under legislation approved by the Idaho House.

On Friday, the House voted 45-21 to send the bill to the governor's desk. Approval came amid resistance from Republicans and Democrats who argued the bill adds barriers that will make the ballot process cumbersome.

The Idaho Farm Bureau-backed bill requires signatures to be gathered from 6 percent of registered voters in 18 of Idaho's 35 legislative districts to qualify an initiative for the ballot.

Subsidy Debate

$16 billion in ag claims for 2012 has critics calling for changes.

DES MOINES, Iowa • Farmers will be paid a record $16 billion in crop insurance claims for 2012 because of the widespread drought, a staggering amount that has critics calling for changes to what they say is an inefficient taxpayer subsidy the government cannot afford.

While farmers buy crop insurance from private companies, the federal government subsidizes their premiums and picks up the tab for losses over a certain amount. One analyst estimates the federal tab for 2012 will come to about $11 billion.

It is the second year in a row that U.S. farmers have received record crop insurance payments as flooding and drought in 2011 was followed by an even worse drought last year. The $16 billion in payments also comes as lawmakers working on a new farm bill have been considering a shift from disaster relief to crop insurance as a more predictable way of protecting farmers from natural disasters.

Farmers say they must have some kind of protection or a year like the past two could put them out of business.

Ben Steffen, who has crops and livestock near Humboldt, Neb., said he had insurance to cover three-fourths of his losses last year when drought took about a third of his corn and soybeans and two-fifths of his hay. Farmers can buy insurance that covers from 50 percent to 85 percent of the revenue they would have earned and pay premiums based on their coverage.

"It's not a money-making proposition," Steffen said. "It's a way to keep you from getting buried by a disaster."

The most recent report from the Federal Crop Insurance Corp., released Monday, put the total payout so far at $15.91 billion, but some claims for 2012 are still pending. Even so, last year's loss represents at least a 47 percent increase from the $10.8 billion record loss in 2011.

Taxpayers will pick up most of the cost. The program run by the Risk Management Agency in the U.S. Department of Agriculture is a three-way venture in which insurance companies sell farmers policies to cover crop losses. The government subsidizes the program by paying about 62 percent of the cost of insurance premiums and farmers pay about 38 percent.

When losses exceed premiums, the government picks up most of that cost too, said Bruce Babcock, an agricultural economist at Iowa State University. He estimated that between premium subsidies, crop loss payments and administrative costs, U.S. taxpayers will end up paying about $11 billion for 2012. That's too much, he said.

"I believe farmers need the opportunities to have all the tools they could possibly use to manage their risks," Babcock said. "I just don't think they need to be bribed to do so with such high degree of subsidies."

Some agriculture economists think the federal government should set up an emergency fund that sets aside a certain amount of money, perhaps $3 billion a year, to cover unusual disasters.

But crop insurers still say their program is a better bet because approval of emergency aid isn't always certain and crop insurance pays faster. That "stabilizes the supply chain quite a bit" because banks and other companies know farmers will be able to make loan payments and pay their bills even in bad years, said Tom Zacharias, president of National Crop Insurance Services, the nonprofit trade group for insurers that sell policies to farmers.

A similar debate is being heard in Congress, where Republican Sens. Jeff Flake, of Arizona, and John Duncan, of Tennessee, introduced bills early this month to reduce the premium subsidy to pre-2000 levels. Flake said the proposals will save about $40.1 billion over 10 years by cutting the government's portion of insurance premiums to 37 percent from the current 62 percent.

Congress had increased the subsidy to boost participation in the program — a move that was successful in raising the number of insured acres from 215 million acres in 2002 to 282 million acres last year.

Iowa Sen. Charles Grassley, another Republican, said it's better for farmers to buy crop insurance than to go to the federal government for disaster aid every time there's a significant drought or flood.

"It's either going to be disaster assistance or its going to be crop insurance," he said. "Isn't it better for the government to promote risk management and have the farmer plan ahead and probably pay out a lot less taxpayer dollars than you have with disaster assistance?"

In central Illinois near Auburn, Mark Reichert was grateful for crop insurance after his 520 acres of corn produced only one-half to two-thirds of their normal yield during the drought. Reichert, 52, had enough insurance to cover 90 percent of his losses.

He paid $46 to $50 an acre in premiums last year and expects to buy the same amount of protection at about the same cost this year. He said it essentially allows farmers to go on to farm another year and assures banks holding farm loans that there's consistent revenue to make payments.

"It's not meant to be a cash cow," he said of the insurance. "It has performed exactly the way it was meant to perform."

“Bible” TV Series Gets Mixed Reactions

BY COREEN HART
For the Times-News

TWIN FALLS • Does the 1956 film “The 10 Commandments,” starring Charlton Heston, have a successor?

The History Channel’s “The Bible,” a five-part, 10-hour miniseries premiered March 3, drawing 13.1 million viewers.

According to the History Channel 68 million viewers have watched “The Bible” so far, making it the No. 1 cable series of the year.

So, what do Magic Valley residents think of the miniseries?

Crystal Boyd, secretary at Twin Falls Reformed Church, said she watched one episode.

“I thought it was well done, but kind of graphic,” Boyd said.

The producers, husband and wife team Mark Burnett and Roma Downey, said in an interview with CBS that they wanted to make the scriptures more “modern” by employing special effects.

Pastor Deb Seles of the Church of the Ascension in Twin Falls also had reservations.

“To me it was disturbing to see the way people of color were portrayed,” Seles said. “Very stereotypical. For instance, they showed Sampson as a big, hulking black man. And Delilah was portrayed as a very timid, shy woman; not at all what the Scriptures describe.”

Lou Wendling, a member of Ascension, said she has never read the complete Bible but hopes to enjoy the miniseries as “a framework.”

Wendling started watching “The Bible” for the perspective since she is involved in her first Bible study. She is interested in it for the historical value.

“I started watching the series, and it’s not great,” Wendling said. “Even though I am somewhat familiar with the stories, it seems a little choppy. We were discussing it this morning and a couple of the women were totally turned off. Thought it was terrible. I don’t. I think it’s interesting.”

The History Channel has signaled that the series, presented on a secular network, was made with more than one audience in mind. President and manager Nancy Dubuc wrote in her blog, “The faith community is going to sample it, unquestionably. Whether they stay or go remains with the TV gods. Our job has been to present this as an epic tale of adventure.”

Early response from national faith groups was supportive. Several major Christian organizations encouraged viewing parties since not all church-goers have access to the cable network, according to a March 4 Christian Post article.

The series drew political criticism for a perceived resemblance between the character of Satan, played by Mohamen Mehdi Ouazanni of Morocco, and U.S. President Barack Obama.

The History Channel denied the resemblance, issuing a statement saying the network “has the highest respect for President Obama. The series was produced with an international and diverse cast of respected actors. It’s unfortunate that anyone made this false connection. History’s ‘The Bible’ is meant to enlighten people on its rich stories and deep history.”

Burnett and Downey also responded: “This is utter nonsense. The actor who played Satan is a highly acclaimed Moroccan actor. He has previously played parts in several Biblical epics — including Satanic characters long before Barack Obama was elected as our president.”

Whether you tune in or off, “The Bible” miniseries certainly has the nation’s attention. The final two episodes air March 24 and March 31.

According to the History Channel 68 million viewers have watched ‘The Bible’ so far, making it the No. 1 cable series of the year.

Pastor’s Corner: The Nature of Man

The nature of man is a paramount doctrine in the Bible. Without a proper understanding of the nature of man we are at risk of creating a god for ourselves and believing a gospel with no good news at all.

The Bible teaches us that man is an intentional creation of an all-powerful, eternal God. The Bible teaches that man is not an accidental result of some mindless process. The Bible teaches that the first man was intentionally formed from the dust of the ground and that God breathed life into his nostrils and he became a living soul. The Bible is clear on these matters (Genesis 1-3).

The Bible teaches that both man and woman were created by God and for God. This makes humanity unique among all creatures, namely because man and woman were created in the image of God. This is of great importance. This biblical truth teaches us that we are not the authors of our own existence nor have we accidentally evolved. Humanity was brought into existence by the intentional will and power of God.

Paul Thompson

God created man in his image and gave him a righteous law. God warned man that he would die if he broke that righteous law. Man did not live long in this honor. Satan used a cunning serpent to seduce Eve, and Adam who was with her, without any force to violate the law of God. Adam and Eve willfully sinned. God allowed this act of sin with intent to put his glory upon display.

Through this willful sin of Adam and Eve, death came upon all, meaning we all become dead in sin and completely defiled in all parts of soul and body. The guilt of this sin was then imputed, transferred, inherited by all descendants of Adam and Eve.

Because of this, all are conceived in sin and by nature children of wrath, servants of sin. This makes all of humanity at odds with God, unable to do any good and pleasing work unto the Lord and wholly bent to all kinds of evil unless the Lord Jesus (God himself) sets them free.

This is what makes the work at the cross such good news. As you ponder the events of Christ’s death, burial and resurrection this week, don’t miss that unless the Lord saves you, you are in grave danger of facing the full wrath of God’s anger. Christ’s work at the cross was God satisfying the requirement that righteousness be held pure. Unless the Lord Jesus (God himself) sets you free, you will be required to save yourself based on your own righteousness. According to the Bible, you do not possess a saving righteousness.

Be with great joy as the Holy Spirit awakens you to this truth. This biblical truth of man’s need for a redeemer mandates that you repent of your sin-nature.

“Unless you repent, you will likewise perish.” Luke 13:5. Consider joining me this coming Lord’s Day at Eastside Baptist Church.

Paul Thompson, pastor of Eastside Baptist Church in Twin Falls, may be reached at 734-7041 or paul@esbctwinfalls.com.

PRES. OBAMA WARNS OF ‘ENCLAVE FOR EXTREMISM’ IN SYRIA

AMMAN, Jordan (AP) • President Barack Obama warned Friday that an “enclave for extremism” could fill a leadership void in war-torn Syria, a chilling scenario for an already tumultuous region, especially for Jordan, Syria’s neighbor and a nation at the crossroads of the struggle for stability in the Middle East.

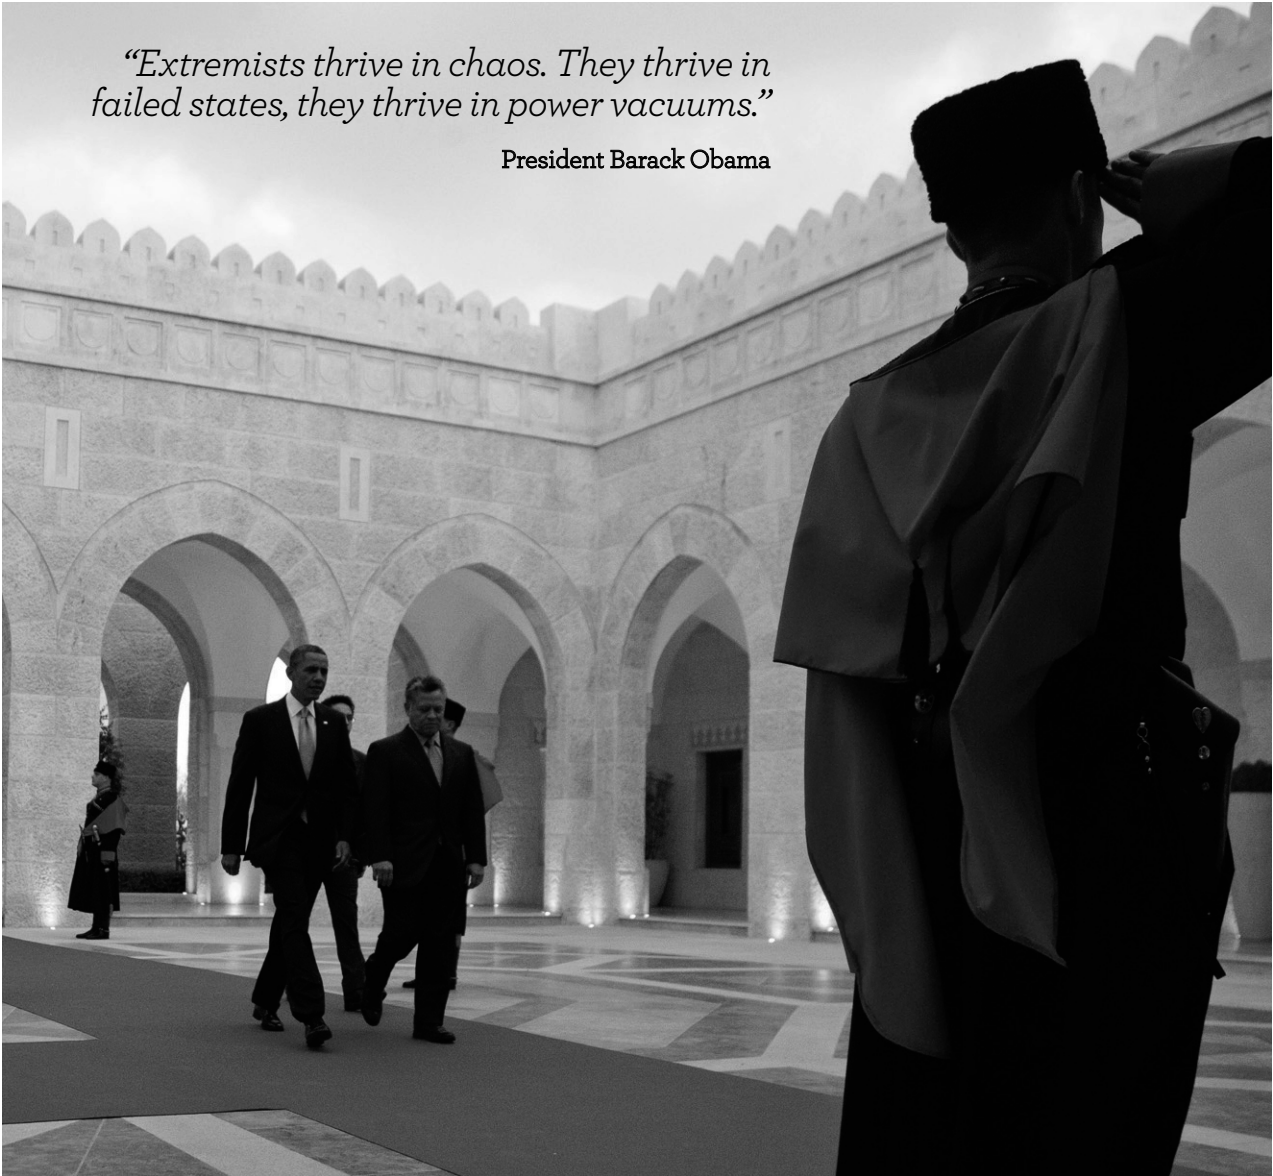

In a significant step toward easing regional tensions, Obama also brokered a phone call between leaders from Israel and Turkey that resulted in an extraordinary apology from Israeli Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu for a deadly 2010 raid on a Gaza-bound Turkish flotilla. The call marked a diplomatic victory for the president and a crucial realignment in the region, given Israel’s and Turkey’s shared interests, in particular the fear that Syria’s civil war could spill over their respective borders.

Obama said he remains confident that embattled Syrian leader Bashar Assad’s government will ultimately collapse. But he warned that when that happens, Syria would not be “put back together perfectly,” and he said he fears the nation could become a hotbed for extremists.

“I am very concerned about Syria becoming an enclave for extremism, because extremists thrive in chaos,” Obama said during a joint news conference with Jordan’s King Abdullah II. “They thrive in failed states, they thrive in power vacuums.”

More than 70,000 people have been killed during the two-year conflict in Syria, making it by far the deadliest of the Arab Spring uprisings that have roiled the region since 2011. Longtime autocrats in Egypt, Tunisia, Yemen and Libya have been ousted, ushering in new governments that are sometimes at odds with the Obama administration and its Mideast allies.

Obama’s 24-hour stop in Jordan marked his first visit to an Arab nation since the 2011 Mideast protests began. Jordan’s monarchy has clung to power in part by enacting political reforms, including parliamentary elections and significant revisions to the country’s 60-year-old constitution. Still, tensions continue to simmer, with the restive population questioning the speed and seriousness of the changes.

3 DEAD, INCLUDING SUSPECT, IN MARINE BASE SHOOTING SPREE

QUANTICO, Va. (AP) • A Marine who worked at a rigorous school that tests Marines who want to become officers fatally shot two of his colleagues before killing himself in a barracks dorm room.

The three Marines — two men and a woman — were part of the staff at the officer candidates school on the sprawling Marine Corps Base Quantico in northern Virginia. Their relationship and whether they knew one another was not clear, though military officials described the shootings as “isolated.” They did not release a motive or the identities of those slain.

Around 10:30 p.m. Thursday, authorities found one Marine dead in the Taylor Hall barracks, base commander Col. David W. Maxwell said. A second victim and the gunman were also located in Taylor Hall, a red brick building that can house about 110 Marines.

Only Marines who work at the school live in Taylor Hall. The candidates for officer live elsewhere on the base.

It wasn’t immediately clear how much time passed between the killings or how far apart the bodies were.

After the first shooting, Marines and their families were told to stay inside over a loudspeaker known as the “giant voice.” The lockdown was lifted about 2:30 a.m. Friday. Base spokesman Lt. Agustin Solivan said everyone else was safe, including the officer candidates.

Officials did not say what the three

Col. David W. Maxwell, commander of Marine Corps Base Quantico, holds a news conference at the National Museum of the Marine Corps in Triangle, Va. on Friday.

Marines did at the school, which is known for its grueling 10-week program that evaluates candidates on physical stamina, intelligence and leadership. The candidates must complete obstacle courses, hikes of up to 12 miles in full combat gear and take classes on navigation and tactics that help them lead in the field, according to the school’s website. Some are sent home. Those that do graduate become second lieutenants. Along with the U.S. Naval Academy, the school is the way most Marines become officers.

“Officer candidates school training will be more demanding than any you’ve experienced before, regardless of commissioning program,” according to the website.

The Corps advises candidates to train by running four to six miles, twice a week, and to have body fat levels that do not exceed 18 percent for men or 26 percent for women.

Police Arrest 2 Teens in Ga. Baby Killing

BRUNSWICK, Ga. (AP) • A pair of teenagers was arrested Friday and accused of fatally shooting a 13-month-old baby in the face and wounding his mother during their morning stroll through a leafy, historic neighborhood.

Sherry West had just been to the post office a few blocks from her apartment Thursday morning and was pushing her son, Antonio, in his stroller while they walked past gnarled oak trees and blooming azaleas in the coastal city of Brunswick. West said a tall, skinny teenager, accompanied by a smaller boy, asked her for money.

“He asked me for money and I said I didn’t have it,” she told The Associated Press Friday from her apartment, which was scattered with her son’s toys and movies.

“When you have a baby, you spend all your money on babies. They’re expensive. And he kept asking and I just said ‘I don’t have it.’ And he said, ‘Do you want me to kill your baby?’ And I said, ‘No, don’t kill my baby!’”

One of the teens fired four shots, grazing West’s ear and striking her in the leg, before he walked around to the stroller and shot the baby in the face. Seventeen-year-old De’Marquis Elkins is charged as an adult with first-degree murder, along with a 14-year-old who was not identified because he is a juvenile, Police Chief Tobe Green said.

In Lavish Reception, Putin Greets China President

MOSCOW (AP) • China’s new president received a lavish welcome Friday as he made Moscow his first foreign destination, joining with Russian President Vladimir Putin in a pointed attempt to counter U.S. influence in Asia.

Xi Jinping, who became president just last week, urged Russia to improve its foreign policy coordination to protect the two neighbors’ joint security interests — comments that appeared to seek Russia’s backing for his eagerness to reduce U.S. influence and challenge Japan over a set of disputed islands. Xi was greeted by Putin at a grandiose reception that saw guards on horseback welcoming a foreign leader for the first time in recent memory. The pomp underlined just how close ties between the two Cold War-era rivals have become thanks to their energy needs and a shared aspiration to curtail U.S. power around the world.

After the talks, Russian and Chinese officials signed agreements on deliveries of Russian oil and gas to China.

Kremlin guards snapped at attention as Xi and his long retinue walked into the gilded, chandeliered Grand Kremlin Palace. The two leaders greeted members of official delegations in the ornate St. George Hall before sitting down for talks.

Putin described the ties between the two countries as an “extremely important factor in global politics” and said Moscow “greatly appreciated” Xi’s decision to make Russia the first country he visited as China’s new leader.

In 1988, he retired from the reserves and teaching to spend the next 20 years traveling the United States with Joan by motor home and taking several tours to foreign countries. Jennie Mae Coppock Smith

Aug. 18, 1919-March 19, 2013

TWIN FALLS • Jennie Mae Coppock Smith, wife, mother, painter, spiritual seeker, age 93, died Tuesday, March 19, 2013.

In these days of high-end lattes, she still took her coffee black. Over many years, Jennie could regularly be seen enjoying her cup of coffee at Barnes and Noble each Sunday morning, greeting family and friends that were also regular patrons.

Jennie was of the “old school” and had little interest in the trappings of modern day electronic mediums. She valued the mysteries of the universe over the material world, and she was curious about all that surrounds us. Heaven was always the ultimate goal, but what the heavens contained fascinated her all her life. Looking toward the night sky, she would be ever watchful for those unexplained objects that seldom, if ever, appeared. But that fascination influenced all who knew her into an understanding that we know only a small part of what we think as true in this world.

She developed a deep spiritual understanding that all living things are interconnected and deserve their rightful place in our world. She deflated many a successful bird hunt when her son would come home with a bag limit by softly saying, “They, too, only wanted to live.” Jennie found peace of mind and soul in the quiet space she set aside for meditation, which gave her an inner strength that carried her throughout her life. She was part of “The Greatest Generation,” surviving the Great Depression, experiencing the pain of a world at war, celebrating a man walking on the moon, and witnessing the social upheaval caused by mind-boggling technological advances.

Jennie spent long and engaging hours in a small room in her converted garage, creating wonderful oil paintings of Idaho’s hills and mountain landscapes. For dear friends, she would create hand-painted greeting cards and present them on special occasions. She could have easily pursued this talent to commercial ends but was content to be creative for the pleasure of it. And she encouraged her children to explore the arts, driving them to ballet and music lessons for many years.

Born in Roberts, Idaho, on Aug. 18, 1919, she was the middle daughter of Alice and Hubert Coppock. She spent her early years around the San Diego, Calif., area and spent many a day with her two sisters scrambling around the rocky ocean shore. She had deep and fond memories of those days and developed a love of the ocean, but after leaving for Boise, Idaho, in her teens, she seldom returned. She graduated from Boise High School in 1937.

She married her high school sweetheart, Edward R. (Ted) Smith in November 1941 in Boise. After living in Georgia during World War II, they moved to Twin Falls and, together with her sister, Thelma and brother-in-law, Ben Mottern, they opened the Rogerson Restaurant on Main Street that was a focal point of family dining in Twin Falls during the early years of the town. That successful business lasted for 32 years. Later in life, she pursued one of her great interests — alternative health care and herbal medicine — by owning a health food store for many years in downtown Twin Falls. Jennie was always ahead of her time, exploring things that today are considered mainstream. She was a way-shower and a courageous person who bravely followed her own path through life. And she inspired many others to do the same.

Jennie is survived by her son, Eddie (Phuong) Smith of Filer; and her daughter, Monie Smith (Michael Johnson) of Jerome. Jennie was very proud of her three grandchildren, Hank (Leigh) Smith of Clarksville, Tenn.; Shelley (Jed) Gregory of Pinedale, Wyo.; and Helen (Ian) LaSpina of Norfolk, Va. She loved her great-grandchildren, Conrad, Olivia and Abigail Smith, Evey Gregory and Eowyn LaSpina. She also loved her nephews and nieces, Jim Mottern, Janis Mottern-High, Joni Mottern and Jerry Mottern and their families. And she was very fond of her longtime friend, Joanna Watson. Jennie is preceded in death by her husband, Ted; her daughter, Holly; and her sisters, Thelma Mottern and Monta Harrington.

The family will conduct a private memorial service. In lieu of flowers, remembrances made to the Smith-Hackney Memorial Scholarship Fund at the College of Southern Idaho Foundation, P.O. Box 1238, Twin Falls, ID 83303, would be appreciated.

Cuban Pianist Bebo Valdes Dies in Sweden

MADRID (AP) • Renowned Cuban pianist Bebo Valdes, a composer and bandleader who recorded with Nat ‘King’ Cole, was musical director at Havana’s legendary Tropicana Club and a key participant in the golden age of Cuban music, has died in Sweden at age 94.

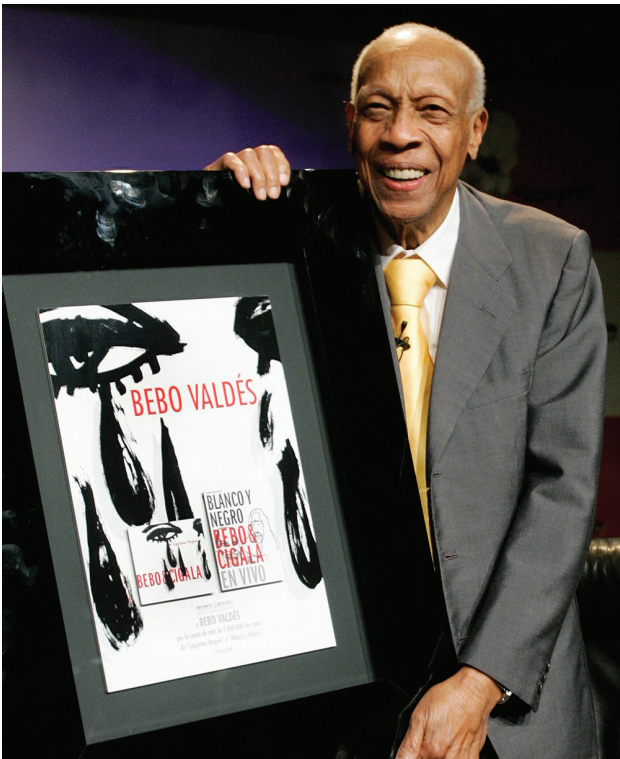

The news of his death was confirmed by Cindy Byram, the agent of Valdes’ son Chucho Valdes, who is a well-known musician in his own right. A cause of death was not given. The senior Valdes studied piano and later taught it to Chucho (Jesus Dionisio Valdes), who went on to become a founding member of the internationally acclaimed Cuban-based jazz band Irakere.

The father began playing accompaniments at Havana’s famous night clubs in the 1940s. He then worked with singer Rita Montaner as her pianist and arranger from 1948 to 1957, when she was the lead cabaret act at the Tropicana. His orchestra Sa-bor de Cuba also accompanied singers Benny More and Pio Leyva at the club. It was during this period that he and rival bandleader Perez Prado developed the mambo, a rhythmic style of dance music that swept the world.

Valdes and his orchestra devised another rhythm called the batanga which he said helped differentiate his sound from Perez Prado’s. The senior Valdes maintained a parallel interest in jazz music and took part in many important sessions, some recorded on Cuba’s renowned Panart label.

“I was a jazz musician from a very young age,” Valdes once said. “I started playing like the first jazz pianist I heard, a guy who was popular when I was a kid: Eddy Duchin.” He said other influences were Fats Waller, Art Tatum, and Bill Evans. In 1958, he worked on Nat ‘King’ Cole’s album ‘Cole Espanol,’ collaborating with arranger Nelson Riddle on the orchestral backing tracks that were all recorded in Havana.

Today is Saturday, March 23, the 82nd day of 2013. There are 283 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight:
On March 23, 1913, five days of heavy rain began falling in the Ohio River Valley; Dayton, Ohio, saw catastrophic flooding as the rising Great Miami River breached its levees. Hundreds of deaths in the region were blamed on the weather.

TODAY IN HISTORY

On this date:
In 1775, Patrick Henry delivered an address to the Virginia Provincial Convention in which he is said to have declared, "Give me liberty, or give me death!"

In 1806, explorers Meriwether Lewis and William Clark, having reached the Pacific coast, began their journey back east.

In 1919, Benito Mussolini founded his Fascist political movement in Milan, Italy.

In 1933, the German Reichstag adopted the Enabling Act, which effectively granted Adolf Hitler dictatorial powers.

In 1942, the first Japanese-Americans evacuated by the U.S. Army during World War II arrived at the internment camp in Manzanar, Calif.

In 1965, America's first two-person space flight began as Gemini 3 blasted off with astronauts Virgil I. Grisom and John W. Young aboard for a nearly 5-hour flight.

In 1973, before sentencing a group of Watergate break-in defendants, Chief U.S. District Judge John J. Sirica read aloud a letter to him from James W. McCord Jr. which said there had been "political pressure" to "plead guilty and remain silent."

In 1983, President Ronald Reagan first proposed developing technology to intercept incoming enemy missiles — an idea that came to be known as the Strategic Defense Initiative.

In 1993, scientists announced they'd found the renegade gene that causes Huntington's disease.

In 2010, President Barack Obama signed a $938 billion health care overhaul, declaring "a new season in America."

In 2011, Academy Award-winning actress Elizabeth Taylor died in Los Angeles at age 79.

Ten years ago: During the Iraq War, a U.S. Army maintenance convoy was ambushed in Nasiriyah; 11 soldiers were killed, including Pfc. Lori Ann Piestewa; six were captured, including Pfc. Jessica Lynch, who was rescued on April 1, 2003. Also in Nasiriyah, 18 U.S. Marines from Charlie Company were killed in the vicinity of the Saddam Canal Bridge. A U.S. Air Force helicopter crashed in Afghanistan, killing all six people on board. Grenades exploded at the 101st Airborne command center in Kuwait, killing two officers; a U.S. soldier, Sgt. Hasan Akbar, was later convicted of murder and sentenced to death.

Five years ago: A roadside bomb killed four U.S. soldiers in Baghdad, pushing the overall American death toll in the five-year war to at least 4,000. Vice President Dick Cheney visited the West Bank, where Palestinian leaders asked him to pressure Israel to halt settlement construction and voiced other complaints. The Seattle-based fishing trawler Alaska Ranger sank in the Bering Sea, killing five crew members; 42 others survived.

One year ago: Urging Americans to "do some soul searching," President Barack Obama injected himself into the emotional debate over the fatal shooting of Trayvon Martin in Florida, saying, "If I had a son, he'd look like Trayvon." The U.S. Army formally charged Staff Sgt. Robert Bales with 17 counts of premeditated murder in the deaths of 17 villagers, more than half of them children, during a shooting rampage in southern Afghanistan. Pope Benedict XVI landed in Mexico to throngs of faithful who gathered at the tarmac and lined more than 20 miles of his route into the city of Leon.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE®

Bobby Wolff

"Heads I win; tails you lose."
— Anon.

In this deal from the final of the Memphis Life Master Pairs, I assume that most of us would fall from grace and open the South hand one heart, thus ending up in four hearts.

At the table, South received a club lead and led a heart to the nine, jack and king. Declarer won the club return, pitching a spade, and played a heart to the ace. He then went to the diamond queen, ruffed a club, and ran the diamonds. West discarded a spade on the fourth diamond, so South simply played for the spade ace to be onside — no dice.

By contrast, Sabine Auken reached four hearts on an auction where East had been able to double an artificial club call. When she got the lead of the club three (third from an even number, low from an odd number), she played for clubs to have been 3-6 originally. After running the diamonds, she exited with the third heart and endplayed West in trumps to lead spades.

Note that East should have put up the heart queen on the first round of the suit. Now declarer could not arrange the endplay no matter what he did.

At another table, when West was stewing over what to lead against four hearts, his opponent asked sympathetically if he would like some help and pulled out a card for him. West accepted the choice — the heart three! This play forced East to put up the heart queen, and now declarer had no chance.

ANSWER: There is no vulnerability where this is an appropriate pre-emptive opening. With so much defense in the majors and such a feeble long suit, discretion is certainly the order of the day. You might tempt me to open three clubs — but only in first seat at favorable vulnerability and if my club two were the 10.

DEAR ABBY: My 25-year-old son, "Mark," lives at home, has a full-time job and dates a girl, "Julia," who is a minister's daughter. He keeps bringing her to our home on occasions when she's "sick" or needs to catch an early flight and he needs to drive her to the airport. They are seeing only each other.

DEAR ABBY
Jeanne Phillips

Julia is in pre-med and Mark thinks she's wonderful and smart. Abby, when she's here, she holes up in his room and never comes out. She's as quiet as a mouse. I am boisterous, and I get the feeling I turn her off.

The last time she stayed over was before an out-of-state interview Mark was driving her to. Abby, she never even said hello or goodbye. He made her breakfast in bed, and they sat there laughing and eating with the door shut.

When she visits she stays down in our den and ignores the rest of us the entire time, as does Mark. After the holidays, she left without wishing us "Happy Holidays" or even giving us a card. I had a present for her, but didn't give it to her because I decided I wouldn't go out of my way for a person who ignores me.

I want my son to move out. I do not want this girl sleeping over or staying under my roof anymore. I don't like her. What should I do? My mother says I should put my foot down and send my grown son out the door. She says I need to grow a spine, but I'm afraid!

— MAMA IN OHIO

DEAR MAMA: You are dealing with two separate issues. Your son is seriously involved with a girl who either never learned basic good manners or who may be pathologically shy. You and your husband should talk privately with Mark and find out exactly what her problem is. You also need to establish some ground rules for when she visits, so you don't feel shut out under your own roof.

Adult "children" live with their parents for various reasons. Some can't afford to live independently; others are trying to save money to buy a home of their own. I don't know Mark's reason and neither will you if you don't address this with him.

Your mother may be right. It may be time for him to move. But what concerns me about what has been going on is the lack of communication and a certain lack of respect. And nothing will change unless you and your husband insist on it.

DEAR ABBY: This year my school started an international program, so we have students from around the world who attend school with us. I'd like to learn about their countries and invite them to the youth group I attend, but I'm nervous about talking to them and don't think I could work up the nerve. I'm also worried about what they will think of me. What should I say and do?

— APPREHENSIVE IN INDIANA

DEAR APPREHENSIVE: Please don't be afraid to reach out. Put yourself in those students' shoes. If you were in a strange school in a foreign country, wouldn't you be glad if someone approached you and introduced himself or herself and invited you to an activity, or to their home for dinner? All you need to do is smile and say, "Hi, I'm —." If you do, you could start a life-long friendship and expand your horizons further than you could ever dream.

DEAR ABBY: Is it acceptable for one adult to correct another's English unless asked to do so?

My sister does it frequently, and I want to know if it's rude so I don't make the same blunder.

— GRAMMATICALLY YOURS IN

NEW ORLEANS

DEAR GRAMMATICAL-LYOURS: It isn't rude if it is done tactfully, in private and in the spirit of being helpful. If it's done as a form of one-upmanship, it is obnoxious.

IF MARCH 23 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: The things closest to your heart are undergoing a shift. You are more concerned with lasting harmony than competition. During the next four to six weeks, focus on spiritual and physical health and sidestep financial or material concerns whenever possible. Wait until June to buckle down to moneymaking activities or job changes. In July, new friends or a chance to participate in group activities can brighten your social life. In November, you might be torn between several factions, so wait until closer to the end of the year to make crucial business or personal decisions.

HOROSCOPE

Jeraldine Saunders

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Someone might urge you to travel to areas outside your usual haunts. Go ahead and let your hair down with trusted companions. You can balance gracefully on the cutting edge of the latest fads and fancies.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Your affection can't be bought or sold, but it can be won. Admirers listen to every word you say, hoping for a chance to compete. Someone may be persistent. Sensuous stars promise tender times tonight.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): If you genuinely believe that honesty is the best policy, then you must go to the trouble to demonstrate it. Loved ones will happily share their affection and money and that is all you need to know.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Every rose has its thorns. Handle thorny problems with kid gloves. Poise and passion make a dynamite combination. Mesmerize your most trusted playmate and toss the ball of love back and forth.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): If you go ahead and participate in spur-of-the-moment activities, you will have a one-of-a-kind experience. Partners or friends may want to experiment with something new or break away from tradition.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Your personal goals and objectives can be of the utmost importance to you. Friends, however, may offer assurances without really taking your needs to heart. A wait-and-see attitude is best.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): New flames can't hold a candle to those thrilling flames of yesteryear. Stick with old flames and dependable friends, rather than lighting new romantic fires that might rage out of control.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): You aren't Jimi Hendrix but new contacts often prompt you to ask the question, "Are you experienced?" If you conduct a first date like a job interview, it probably won't turn out as well as you'd like.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): You usually can't hit two targets with one arrow. Focus and keep your aim steady on what is really a priority. An invitation may prove more troublesome than it is worth and create extra expenses.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): It is tempting to skirt the truth by being vague or telling white lies. An inclination to probe and analyze can cause conflict. Focus instead on spending hours of bliss with a special someone.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): You have a bad case of hospitality and generosity. You are fond of being able to pick up the tab and treat friends, but you should count your pennies in advance. Don't overlook upcoming obligations.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Family members will always have your back. Fascinating new acquaintances can brighten your weekend, but at the end of the day you want someone you can trust and a place where you can relax completely.

CSI ROUNDUP

CSI Baseball Loses Twice to Salt Lake CC

TIMES-NEWS

SALT LAKE CITY • They'd have gladly taken a rain check. The College of Southern Idaho baseball team dropped two games to Salt Lake Community College on Friday, losing 11-1 and 7-5 as the teams were forced to play near Provo, Utah because of snow on the field at SLCC.

"It was the coldest game I can remember in my thirty years at CSI," head coach Boomer Walker said. "We played like we didn't want to be outside."

Box scores were not available afterward, but Walker said that Nathan Ackerman had two hits in the first game, while Tanner Morache and Isaac Anderson each added knocks in the two games. There were few bright spots on the mound.

The Golden Eagles have now dropped six straight and 10 of their last 11.

"It's the third weekend now where everything is snowballing into something worse," Walker said. "We aren't playing great defense or pitching exceptionally well, and that puts pressure on our plate appearances. Our at-bats occur in a very stressed environment. We just aren't playing well at all."

CSI is scheduled to play another doubleheader on Saturday against the Bruins, but there were concerns it would be postponed.

Softball

CARSON CITY, NEV. • The College of Southern Idaho softball team swept Western Nevada College 8-0 and 1-0 on Friday. Box scores were not available; nor was head coach Nick Baumert available for comment. CSI has now won 15 in a row, improving its record to 27-5.

Area Organizers Make Magic Man Disappear

BY RYAN HOWE
rhowe@magicvalley.com

MURTAUGH • Organizers of Magic Man Triathlon have pulled the plug on the annual event after just two years.

Twin Falls County Parks and Waterways launched the race in 2011, with hopes that it would eventually become profitable enough to fund projects to improve parks in the county.

The department partnered with Idaho Falls company Personal Best Performance, which acted as race director and promoter.

According to Twin Falls County Parks and Waterways director Rick Novacek, Personal Best Performance walked away from the race for financial reasons.

An email response from Personal Best Performance owner Michael Hayes said the cause was, "Not enough local interest."

Novacek said the department's advisory board sought another company to run the event, but couldn't come to an agreement on terms.

"We realized it was over our head to take it on and run it ourselves," Novacek said. "I don't have the time to be a race director, and nobody else on the board has the time to do it."

Magic Man experienced a 40-percent increase in registered athletes between years one and two. It attracted about 140 competitors in 2012.

Magic Man received positive response from racers, who enjoyed the venue at Murtagh Lake with its large grassy park.

Gary Azevedo of Idaho Falls, who won the sprint distance race both years, has almost 20 years of triathlon experience. After winning his second Magic Man last June, he told the Times-News: "I definitely think this is going to be the next big race. It's got all the ingredients. When you go to enough triathlons like I do, you see what works."

What didn't work, however, were the financials.

"It takes an awful lot of manpower and capital on our part, and we weren't seeing where we would get a lot of return on our investment," said Novacek.

Twin Falls County Parks and Waterways will find more efficient ways to raise funds for its projects, Novacek said.

'Hawks, Bishop Fly past Bobcats

BY RYAN HOWE

BURLEY • Trae Bishop's assault on Burley pitchers continued on Friday.

After his 3-for-4, four-RBI performance in the series opener on Thursday, Bishop went 2 for 3 with three more RBIs in the Riverhawks' 8-3 win on Friday at Burley High School in the first game of the day's doubleheader.

Game 2 was suspended in the fourth inning due to snow, with Burley leading 4-3.

Canyon Ridge 8, Burley 3

Canyon Ridge	050	030	0	-895
Burley	201	000	0	-362

LEADING HITTERS - Canyon Ridge: Bishop 2-3, 3B, 3 RBI; Burton 2-3; Rosas 2-4, RBI. Burley: Breshears 2-4, 2 2B; Del Bosque 2-3.
PITCHERS - Canyon Ridge: Price (W) 7 IP, 6 H, 3 R, 1 ER, 1 BB, 1 HB, 10 SO. Burley: Darrington (L) 4.1 IP, 7 H, 7 R, 8 ER, 5 BB, 4 HB, 4 SO; Nevarez 2.2 IP, 2 H, 1 R, 0 ER, 1 BB, 3 SO.

Bishop's two-run triple off Burley pitcher Jack Darrington in the second inning gave Canyon Ridge a 3-2 lead. Jon Cron followed with a run-scoring double, and then Jacob Newton hit an RBI triple to put the 'Hawks ahead 5-2.

"We knew they didn't have pitchers, so our bats really stepped it up," said Canyon Ridge's Kaleb Price, the winning pitcher. "So far this season we've only had one game where our bats weren't really alive, and that was (a loss to) Buhl. I think since that happened our bats have come out strong."

Canyon Ridge (6-1, 2-0 Great Basin Conference) hit throughout its lineup, even getting a 2-for-3 and a 2-for-4 performance out of its No. 7

Florida Gulf Coast Stuns Georgetown

ASSOCIATED PRESS

PHILADELPHIA • College basketball, meet Florida Gulf Coast.

Sherwood Brown scored 24 points and Bernard Thompson had 23 to lead FGCU to an incredible NCAA tournament debut.

The Eagles, in their second season of being eligible for Division I postseason, became just the seventh No. 15 seed to beat a No. 2.

FGCU (25-10) will play seventh-seeded San Diego State the third round on Sunday.

A night after America's oldest university, Harvard, pulled off a major upset over fourth-seeded New Mexico, one of its youngest — FGCU's first student was admitted in 1997 — got one that was even bigger.

The Eagles took control with a 21-2 run that gave them a 52-33 lead with 12:28 to play, though the Hoyas used a furious rally to get within 72-68 with 52 seconds left.

It was another disappointing NCAA exit for the Hoyas (25-7), who have lost to a double-digit seed in their last four appearances.

Markel Starks had 23 points for the Hoyas.

While Georgetown came in allowing 55.7 points per game, FGCU beat that number with 9:22 to play when it led 57-40. The Hoyas allowed opponents to shoot 37.6 percent from the field, fourth-best in the country. The Eagles shot 42.9 percent (21 of 49) and they held the Hoyas to 37.5 percent from the field (24 of 64).

Big East Player of the Year Otto Porter Jr. had 13 points on 5-of-17 shooting and 11 rebounds. On this night he couldn't match Brown, the A-Sun's player of the year.

TEMPLE 76, NORTH CAROLINA STATE 72

DAYTON, Ohio • Khalif Wyatt scored 31 points, finishing the game with an injured left thumb that had him grimacing before his clinching free throws, and Temple broke with its one-and-done NCAA tournament trend.

MIAMI 78, PACIFIC 49

AUSTIN, Texas • Durand Scott had 21 points and Miami had a triumphant return to the NCAA tournament.

The Hurricanes (28-6), who may be even better than their No. 2 seed in the East Regional would indicate, put the game out of reach with a 14-0 run midway through the first half of their first NCAA tourney game in five years.

Miami plays Illinois on Sunday.

ILLINOIS 57, COLORADO 49

AUSTIN, Texas • Brandon Paul and D.J. Richardson made consecutive 3-pointers to give Illinois back the lead with 6 minutes left and the seventh-seeded Illini pulled out a tough win over Colorado.

MIDWEST REGIONAL

DUKE 73, ALBANY 61

PHILADELPHIA • Seth Curry scored 26 points, Mason Plumlee had 23 and second-seeded Duke beat Albany.

The Blue Devils (28-5) will meet seventh-seeded Creighton in the third round Sunday.

Duke shot 58.7 percent (27 of 46), just off its season-beat 60.8 percent against Florida State.

CREIGHTON 67, CINCINNATI 63

PHILADELPHIA • Doug McDermott

had 27 points and 11 rebounds, and Gregory Echenique scored 13 points to help Creighton hold on.

Ethan Wragge added 12 for the Blue-jays, who won their NCAA tournament opener for the second straight year.

WEST REGIONAL

KANSAS CITY, Mo. • Marshall Henderson shook out of a shooting slump and scored 17 points in the second half, giving the Rebels their first NCAA tournament win since 2002.

The Rebels will play No. 13 La Salle on Sunday.

LA SALLE 63, KANSAS STATE 61

KANSAS CITY, Mo. • Jerrell Wright made three foul shots in the final 30 seconds, and No. 13 seed La Salle advanced after blowing an 18-point halftime lead to beat fourth-seeded Kansas State.

OHIO STATE 95, IONA 70

DAYTON, Ohio • Sam Thompson had career highs with 20 points and 10 rebounds, part of a dominating performance by Ohio State's front line against Iona.

The second-seeded Buckeyes (27-7) have won nine straight, including their last five games of the regular season and a run to the Big Ten tournament title.

IOWA STATE 76, NOTRE DAME 58

DAYTON, Ohio • Freshman Georges Niang matched a season high with 19 points and Iowa State, showing it can do much more than just fire away from outside the 3-point line, dismantled Notre Dame.

and No. 8 hitters, respectively, Aaron Burton and Tyler Rosas.

Burley's American Legion Baseball team won the Class A state championship last summer. But now the top three pitchers from that team are playing college ball and the Bobcats are a pitcher-by-committee squad without an ace.

"This is one of my favorite teams so far because I really have eight arms," said Burley coach Devin Kunz.

Probably Burley's best arm is Utah Valley University signee Jackson Kunz, who is out for another week rehabbing a knee injury sustained during the football season last fall.

"We're hitting the ball and playing good defense, and once we get the pitching rotation down... we'll be playing pretty good come districts," said Devin Kunz.

Burley (0-2, 0-2) could only muster six hits against Price, however. With good command of his curveball, the Canyon Ridge lefty allowed one earned run and struck out 10 in the complete-game victory.

"It's cold, so you want to throw strikes so you can get back into the dugout as quick as you can," said Price. "We have a lot of room to improve, but we can compete this year in districts."

Hunter Breshears was 2 for 4 with a pair of doubles for Burley.

"We'll get there," said Breshears. "We're hitting it well, the majority of the time. We need to minimize errors and (improve) pitching. We'll get there."
