Humane Society Offers $5,000 Reward for Info on Dog Slaying

TIMES-NEWS

JEROME • The Humane Society of the U.S. announced Monday that it is offering a $5,000 reward for information leading to the identification, arrest and conviction of the person or persons responsible for the death of a dog in Jerome County.

In the statement by the Humane Society, Debbie Blackwood, director of the Twin Falls Animal Shelter, gave the following account: “This dog was found in a remote yet very public area, laid out and draped with a purple blanket. His head was covered by large rocks and his skull appeared to be crushed.”

“The citizens of Jerome County should be very concerned that someone in their community could kill an animal in such an apparently callous manner,” said Lisa Kauffman, Idaho state director for The HSUS. “We are hopeful that anyone with information about this crime will come forward.”

Jerome County Sheriff Doug McFall said on Monday that the sheriff’s office never received a formal complaint about the dog’s death and his office is not currently investigating the matter. McFall said that because the dog’s body was moved and the scene was disturbed, it’s unlikely that evidence would hold up in court.

If someone comes upon a similar scene, McFall said, they should call their local law enforcement immediately.

COULD 2014 ELECTIONS COLOR MEDICAID DEBATE?

BY MELISSA DAVLIN
mdavlin@magicvalley.com

BOISE • House Speaker Scott Bedke, R-Oakley, said last week the 2013 Legislature won’t consider Medicaid this year, but waiting a year will change the politics of the issue entirely. Next year is an election year, and lawmakers could be wary of voting on a controversial Obamacare-related issue in the spring when faced with a May primary challenge from within their own party.

House Minority Leader John Rusche, D-Lewiston, hoped the Legislature would consider expansion this session. In a year, election politics may overwhelm the facts surrounding the issue, he said.

“If you can’t face it this year because of your central committees and your attacks from the right, what about next year when you’re two

T.F. Mom Seeks Apology after Child Boarded Wrong Bus

BY ANDREW WEEKS
aweeks@magicvalley.com

TWIN FALLS • A Twin Falls mom is upset with the Twin Falls School District after her daughter was allegedly put on the wrong school bus by a principal.

Now, Laura Ward said, all she wants is an apology.

One day in early January, Ward was at home waiting for her 7-year-old daughter Nevaeh to arrive from school. When she didn’t show up at the usual time, Ward called Western States Bus Services, the company that runs the district’s buses, to find out when her daughter’s bus would be arriving. She was told the bus had already been to that neighborhood.

Ward next called her daughter’s school, Morningside Elementary, and spoke with Principal Steve Hoy.

The New Building Next Door

A guide to staying informed on zoning and development decisions in your community

BY ALISON GENE SMITH
alismith@magicvalley.com

TWIN FALLS • What’s planned for the empty lot next to your house or your child’s school? More houses? A retirement home? A new mall? How do you find out and can you make a difference?

At a recent public hearing at a Twin Falls City Council meeting, the discussion turned to how the public is notified about development. Several residents said they felt they would be affected by the construction, even though they lived outside the neighborhood that was initially notified about the development. City Council members said the city was working on improving the process.

Here’s the Process Now:

THE MARKET AT A GLANCE

US Stocks Fall on Broad Concern about Europe

NEW YORK • Stocks reversed an early rise on Wall Street on Monday as traders returned to worrying about the European economy.

Optimism about a deal to prevent financial collapse in Cyprus had briefly pushed the Standard & Poor's 500 index to within a quarter-point of its record closing high, but stocks soon turned negative.

The S&P 500 and Nasdaq composite index both closed down 0.3 percent. The Dow Jones industrial average slipped 0.4 percent.

Curious Mind Sinkholes Are Rare on the Basaltic Snake River Plain

By any chance have you heard anything about this area having sinkholes? My husband tells me that his friend has one in his yard and keeps a swing sitting over the top of it.

Kimberly Williams-Brackett
Curious Mind

“Most sinkholes form in areas underlain by limestone, a type of rock that can be dissolved by groundwater and surface water percolating downward,” said Shawn Willsey, College of Southern Idaho professor of geology. “This process eventually forms cavities and cave systems in the rocks. Limestone is common in the southeastern U.S.

“Our area is underlain by basalt lava flows and not limestone. In the Twin Falls region, the basalt dominates with a thin layer of wind-blown silt sitting atop the basalt. Sinkholes in our area may result from the collapse of small or large lava tubes present in the basalt. Another possibility is that the silt above the basalt is either being compacted, possibly by water moving down from above, or is being removed by groundwater erosion. I would expect sinkholes in our area to be relatively rare and small, perhaps up to 20 feet in diameter,” said Willsey.

Earlier this month, a 50-foot sinkhole took the life of a Florida man whose bedroom was swallowed up while he slept.

Willsey said, “The tragic death of a Florida man whose house suddenly collapsed into a sinkhole is a recent example of this; however, most sinkhole collapses are gradual.”

Geologist Art Small said, “I think that the sinkholes in Florida are exacerbated by a large amount of groundwater pumping, which lowers the water table and thus lowers the pressure on the rock and in the sinkholes, which contributes to causing the weaker ones to cave in.

“Sinkholes are almost exclusively found in areas with limestone as the first bedrock unit down from the surface,” Small said.

“Limestone is composed of silt and sand cemented together with calcium carbonate. Calcium carbonate is quite soluble in acidic solutions. Rain and groundwater are usually slightly acidic.

“Over time, many thousands of years, groundwater will seep through fractures and bedding planes in the limestone and create limestone caverns. Eventually, most caverns will erode or break through to the surface and you have a sinkhole. It is usually filled with clay, silt and sand washed into the cavern from the surface,” Small said.

“The surface and subsurface rock for many thousands of feet down in the Snake River Plain is volcanic rock and lake sediments comprised of silt, clay and gravel,” Small said. “There is little chance of a sinkhole here except for the possibility that one of the volcanic tube caves near Shoshone could break through to the surface and cause a sinkhole. There is a little limestone near Nat-Soo-Pah Hot Springs, but I have not heard of any caverns there.”

He said the limestone cliffs at Arco, east of Craters of the Moon, which are probably close to 1,000-feet thick, “contain many caves, and I suppose a few small sinkholes. I do not know of any sinkholes in this area and only a few limestone caverns.”

Small said, “Limestone is common in the central Idaho mountains, South Mountain and the mountain ranges in Nevada. We had a few small sinkholes at the Jerritt Canyon mine north of Elko, Nev. in the limestone terrain there, but they were small and not dangerous.” (South Mountain is on the Oregon border about 10 miles southeast of Jordan Valley.)

Small said, “There is a granitic intrusive there that pushed aside the Paleozoic sedimentary rocks, many of which are thick units of limestone.”

In July 2012, a woman was killed when she crashed into a sinkhole on Butte Road in Melba on her way to work. Irrigation water from a nearby field running through gopher tunnels likely weakened the ground beneath the street.

Is the Groundhog to Blame?

Last week, spring officially arrived in the Northern Hemisphere. For us here in southern Idaho it came a week after we enjoyed some wonderfully warm temperatures.

While the arrival date of any season is more about location of the sun's rays on the earth, many expect as soon as a season arrives the weather will immediately and naturally respond to the date on the calendar. It is our expectation that if it says spring,

Brian Neudorff
Meteorologist

then it should look and feel like spring.

Let's rewind a little back to Feb. 2, Groundhog Day. You may recall the famous Groundhog, Punxsutawney Phil, from Punxsutawney, Penn., predicted an early spring because he didn't see his shadow. Since that day winter has held on tight across most of the country, with late winter storms in the eastern part of the United States, a couple of late-season snowstorms here in Idaho back in February and even a return to cold winter temperatures just last week. But can we really blame a rodent and a German tradition for spring not arriving early? I say no. It's a tradition and an old folklore.

Some just don't see it my way. Whether a joke or for real, an Ohio prosecutor has indicted Punxsutawney Phil for fraud and is seeking the death penalty. While this is a little over the top I think consensus is this, people are tired of the cold and want spring.

Idaho Senate Passes 2 Concealed Carry Bills

BY HANNAH FURFARO
Associated Press

BOISE • The Senate unanimously passed two concealed carry bills on Monday, including one that expands the number of weapons that wouldn't require a permit under Idaho's concealed weapons rules.

Both proposals have already received a nod from the House and were headed to the desk of Gov. C.L. "Butch" Otter for his signature.

One of the bills carves out an exemption in the concealed weapons law for Tasers, pepper spray and knives with blades shorter than 4-inches, including kitchen knives. People who carry the items wouldn't need a permit.

Rep. Pete Nielsen brought the bill after his son was cited during a traffic stop for carrying a 4-inch knife in his car. The exemptions would give Idahoans more latitude to carry non-deadly weapons, Nielsen has said.

The Mountain Home Republican originally wanted to relax the law for knives with longer blades, but he backed off after law enforcement balked at the change.

The measure helps clarify ambiguous sections of the code referring to dangerous and deadly weapons, said Sen. Curt McKenzie, R-Boise. The law now defines four types of knives that require permits, but doesn't mention hunting, utility or cooking blades.

"Something that's inherent in these types of laws, when you have a broad definition like that, it is subject to interpretation and it doesn't give our citizens a good guideline as to what's criminal and what is not,"he said. "(This bill) brings clarity to that and makes it a better law."

A second bill aims to make Idaho's concealed weapons permit more likely to be recognized by other states. It would create a beefed-up, voluntary "enhanced" permit for gun owners. Obtaining it would require an eight-hour class, live fire training and a mental health check.

The legislation doesn't impact current license holders, said the bill's sponsor, Sen. Chuck Winder, R-Boise.

"Idaho's process that we qualify people for does not meet the more stringent standards for training that other (states) require," Winder said. "This bill would get us to where we comply with the state of Michigan, (which is) recognized by most states."

ONLINE: Civil Rights, Racial Analogies in State Debate

On "Capitol Confidential," political reporter Melissa Daylin blogs from the Idaho Statehouse. An excerpt from her latest post:

"A couple of state-based exchange opponents have invoked Rosa Parks as a symbol of protest and resistance against the federal government, and it's raising eyebrows among peers. Sen. Cherie Buckner-Webb, Idaho's only black lawmaker, posted on Facebook and Twitter that she is 'not amused' at the comparison.

"Both House Assistant Majority Leader Brent Crane, R-Nampa, and Sen. Steve Vick, R-Dalton Gardens, have brought up Rosa Parks during floor debates on the exchange.

"Rosa Parks isn't the only racial analogy brought up by opponents during the lengthy House and Senate debates on the exchange..."

months away from the primary?" Rusche said.

Already, the Idaho Freedom Foundation has come out against Medicaid expansion. In a press release, Freedom Foundation executive director Wayne Hoffman called the move a "looming disaster" for Idaho, and encouraged lawmakers to explore other ways to reform indigent medical care that don't rely on taxpayer dollars.

Freshman House members Luke Malek, R-Coeur d'Alene, and Robert Anderst, R-Nampa, said they wouldn't let threats of primary challenges or donations to opponents sway their votes.

"I just assume I'm going to have a primary challenger," Anderst said. But, Malek said, that's how the system works.

Medicaid expansion, an optional provision of the Affordable Care Act, would expand Medicaid eligibility to about 100,000 more Idahoans, taking the burden off counties to care for the indigent population's medical needs. The shift would rely almost entirely on federal dollars, saving the state's property tax payers millions. Opponents argue expansion will still cost taxpayers, and will lead to poor access to medical care and an overburdened system.

It's not the first time a piece of the Affordable Care Act has put lawmakers in a tough spot. In 2012, concerns about pending primary elections played a part in the Legislature not considering legislation to set up a state-based insurance exchange, another optional provision of the Affordable Care Act.

House Health and Welfare Chairman Fred Wood, R-Burley, said that won't be the case next year. If anything, a few extra months will help lawmakers muddle through the facts, said Wood, who supports expansion.

"It's a pure matter of numbers," Wood said. By replacing Idaho's model of indigent care with Medicaid expansion, "there's $478 million in property tax relief. Who's not in favor of that?"

Wood said time will help win the public's favor. He noted that there will be multiple stakeholder and public meetings to educate Idahoans about Medicaid expansion.

"It's just not soup yet," Wood said. "All of the ingredients are in the pot. Now what we have to do is heat it up and simmer it for a number of hours."

Bedke agreed. "This is a little different (than the state exchange)," Bedke said. "This is property tax relief. It will have a different support group and a different constituency."

Rusche said the meetings and education may help, as stakeholders will have a chance to communicate their support to lawmakers.

"The question is can you still break through the fear?" Rusche said. "Can you break through the short-term political concerns that are so prevalent in the majority party to have a longer range view of what's good for the citizens and the pocketbooks of Idahoans?"

Investigation into Gooding Homicide Continues

BY ALISON GENE SMITH
alismith@magicvalley.com

GOODING • The Gooding Police Department is continuing its investigation into the stabbing death of a 24-year-old man who was dropped off at North Canyon Medical Center in early March. An autopsy Monday, March 4, confirmed the man, Alejandro Perez Lopez, died from stab wounds.

In an email to the Times-News on Monday, Gooding Police Chief Jeff Perry said police are still investigating leads as they come in, but no new information can currently be released to the public.

Hugo Mendez Gutierrez, 25, was arrested in Salt Lake City on Monday, March 4, after he was located by officers with the Salt Lake City Police Department.

Another man, Guadalupe Segovia-Torres, 36, is "just a person of interest," according to Perry. Police are still searching for him.

At this time there are no warrants for his arrest, Perry said. Investigators don't believe he's still in Idaho.

Prosecutors are still working on extraditing Gutierrez to Idaho, Perry said.

Both Segovia-Torres and Gutierrez are from Wendell, Perry said.

This case is still under investigation; anyone with information may contact the Gooding City Police Department at 208-934-8436 or dispatchers at 208-934-8435.

Trained Cadaver Dogs Help Families Find Closure

BY LAURIE WELCH
lwelch@magicvalley.com

RUPERT • When 3-year-old border collie Beretta sat down and gave a soft nose touch, its owner-handler, Lynn Porter, knew they'd found human remains last fall at the City of Rocks National Reserve.

Porter said they were searching a remote and rugged area of the park when they found bones, later confirmed to be those of a long-missing Rupert woman, Norine Boyd. "This particular time, I'd spotted something and had her check it out to see if it was human remains," Porter said.

The pair was working with Rupert Detective Jeff McEwen and retired criminal analyst and reserve officer Diane Gines on another search for Boyd.

Boyd went missing from her home shortly before Christmas in 1988. Her car was found in March 1989 at the City of Rocks. In February 2013, DNA taken from the skeletal remains was positively identified as belonging to Boyd. "Beretta is like the Energizer Bunny. She just never stops. The best cadaver dogs have a high drive and are focused," Porter said. "Beretta didn't sleep for the first two and a half years of her life. Border collies just don't seem to have an off switch."

Over the years, she's removed a few dogs from the training program because they "liked to chase critters or showed aggression," Porter said.

Porter, who is a Rupert reserve police officer, started training dogs in 1991 for Civil Air Patrol search and rescue. Her dogs are trained to detect the scent of human remains on land or submerged in water.

Over the years, Porter and her dogs have helped with many recoveries, including five drowning victims.

"To train them as cadaver dogs you have to have some of the real stuff," said Porter, who explained that she has some human bones used in training. But other materials work well, like children's baby teeth and placenta from a newborn baby. "The placenta is a human part no one needs. It's like gold and makes good training material."

be notified by mail at least 15 days before the hearing. Legal notices must also be placed in the local newspaper — in this case, the Times-News — at least 15 days prior to the meeting. The distances can differ: In Jerome property owners who live between 500 and 1,500 feet from land proposed for development might be notified depending on the type of zoning, according to city code.

"The law requires that they're notified by mail," Carraway said. "It can't just be a little flyer."

Carraway said the city provides a letter with information about where and when meetings about the request will be held, but the developer is responsible for sending the notices. If they're not sent out in a timely manner, Carraway said, the public hearings will be canceled or rescheduled.

"Unfortunately it happens," she said.

Again, the recipients can differ. According to Jerome city code, if that mailing list would include more than 200 people, the notice can just be published in any daily or weekly newspaper.

Chuck Hardin, who lives near the corner of North College Road and Fieldstream Way, said he went out of town for a week and when he returned construction on a Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints building had begun. Hardin said he moved in two years ago and never knew what was slated to be built across the street. Carraway said the P&Z granted a special-use permit for the construction in July 2008.

Seven days before the public hearing, signs must be posted on the proposed development site.

A public hearing is held at the P&Z meeting. If the P&Z approves the request it will move on to the city council, or the county commission if the property is outside the city limits but in the area of impact.

There is a period of time to allow appeals of the decision. In Twin Falls, it's 15 days, Carraway said. In Burley, the appeal period is 30 days, according to Burley city code.

After the appeal period the council or commission holds another public hearing before its decision.

Then, there's another 15-day appeal period.

If the council approves and there are no appeals the developer can begin the building permit process.

If a plot of land is already zoned for commercial use and a developer wants to use the land for commercial development, there are no public hearings. As long as the developer follows codes and make the improvements they are required to like sewer, water and electricity, the construction most likely won't show up on the agenda at a public meeting, Carraway said. But, she said, the public should be involved and informed at every point they can.

"It is the city's policy to include the public at every opportunity," she said. "They're a huge asset to any public meeting. They see this property every day and they know what's there. Their input is very important."

The city is also looking at expanding its list of who is notified about a development in certain cases. Mayor Greg Lanting said the City Council asked city staff to go through city codes to see if there was any way to improve the notification process for people who leave near areas that will potentially be developed.

Lanting said a portion of city code that already exists will allow staff to notify a larger area of people if they deem it necessary. State code says that anyone within 300 feet of the proposed development must be notified by mail. Lanting said city staff will look at a map and decide if any neighborhoods will be left out if only those in the 300-foot radius are notified.

"If the 300 feet just bare-

Twin Falls to Stream Public Meetings Online

Starting soon, anyone will be able to watch all public meetings held in the Twin Falls City Council Chambers even if they can't make it in person. Joshua Palmer, Twin Falls city spokesman, said the city installed a video camera that will show the meetings live on the city's website. The videos of each meeting will be archived online as well, Palmer said.

If a certain agenda item piques someone's interest, Palmer said they'll be able to pick the item they want to learn about and watch just that portion of the meeting.

Right now, just two meetings a month are broadcast on cable channel 17 for CableOne customers. Palmer said soon, every city council meeting will soon be shown on TV.

ly misses a neighborhood, we'll ask the developer or whoever it is to notify that neighborhood," he said.

Councilwoman Rebecca Mills-Sojka said the council doesn't want to overburden applicants with lots of mailings, but nearby residents deserve to be informed.

"I think that it's OK to go above and beyond the requirements," she said.

"She doesn't want to go back to school," Ward said. "As a mother, I think she needs that socialization, but on the other hand I don't want her to be scared of going to school."

School district officials, for their part, say they still need more information — especially from Ward — before they can determine what happened and if an apology should be issued.

District spokeswoman Beth Pendergrass hadn't heard about the incident until a call from the Times-News. She said later that after the first call, she spoke with Hoy and the school district's transportation director. But Ward needs to next contact the district's director of elementary schools if she is not satisfied with how the incident was handled, Pendergrass said. The next step after that would be to talk with the district superintendent

He told her that he personally put Nevaeh on the bus, Ward told the Times-News Thursday, but that she must have gotten off at the wrong stop.

Ward hung up and called the police. They found Ward's daughter at another location about a mile away, still sitting on a bus.

"When I got there, I just started breaking down, crying," she said.

Ward said no harm was done to her daughter — except that Nevaeh was frightened — but she'd like an apology from the principal or district.

"They said that's not going to happen, that they did nothing wrong," Ward said. "It's just that we try to teach children to take responsibility when they make mistakes. Well, adults should do the same thing. But that's not happening. All I want is an apology letter."

Ward said she has since removed her daughter from Morningside and began home-schooling her.

and then the Twin Falls School Board.

"They don't rise up to the district level unless a parent brings it to the district level," Pendergrass said of incidents or complaints.

Teachers monitor students as they get on buses, she said, especially at the beginning of the year when students are learning which bus is theirs. Each bus has a name to make it easier for students to find the right bus, she said, and it's not often that a student gets on the wrong one.

Teachers, let alone principals, don't usually put students on buses themselves, she said. Bus drivers usually know which students ride their buses, but that becomes difficult when a substitute driver is aboard, which Pendergrass said is what happened the day Ward's daughter was lost.

"The district would certainly apologize for any incidents of this nature and work to resolve concerns and ensure it doesn't happen again," Pendergrass wrote to the Times-News.

South-central Idaho Leads State in Recession Rebound

BY JOE CADOTTE
jcadotte@magicvalley.com

TWIN FALLS • The unemployment rate in Idaho is lower than it has been in more than four years, according to the Idaho Department of Labor’s preliminary February report.

The report shows 14,000 jobs gained from January, with many of those hires made in southern counties. The seasonally adjusted rate fell a tenth of a percentage point to 6.2 percent in February.

Despite having a jobless rate well below the national average of 7.7 percent, Idaho has a ways to go to catch up to pre-recession numbers, regional economist Jan Roeser says.

“We’re on a road to recovery but we’re still on it,” she said. “We’re still down almost 50 percent.”

According to Roeser, south-central Idaho is weathering the recession better than any other portion of the state. She attributes that to the opening of Chobani and the increase in agricultural and medical jobs in the region.

“Homes are being purchased and rental homes are being filled.”

So far south-central Idaho has gained back 40 percent of the 6,500 jobs it lost during the economic downturn. The southwestern part of the state comes in second, regaining 36 percent of the jobs lost in that region. Statewide, Idaho picked up only 20 percent of the jobs it lost since 2008.

While Roeser expects things to continue to get better, she says a lot of people probably won’t get their jobs back and will need to adapt to an ever-changing job market.

“A lot of those high-paying, low-training construction jobs just aren’t coming back. (They will) have to take some time and research the labor market and hear what employers are saying, and what they need is high-skilled individuals,” she said.

There were a few counties that had an increase in joblessness last month. Blaine County added half a percent to its unemployment rate. Roeser attributes that to the skiing season winding down.

By the Numbers

Here’s how preliminary county unemployment data changed:

County	Jan.	Feb.
Blaine	5.7	6.3
Camas	6.6	5.8
Cassia	5.4	5.2
Gooding	4.6	4.4
Jerome	5.6	5.8
Lincoln	8.3	8.4
Minidoka	5.9	5.9
Twin Falls	6.4	6.1

Tax Commission Encourages Idaho Residents to Tally Use Tax

TIMES-NEWS

BOISE • If you’re gathering information to file your Idaho individual income tax return, you might not realize that if you don’t pay sales tax when you buy merchandise, you probably owe a “use tax” to the state. That’s true in every state that has a sales tax, according to the Idaho State Tax Commission.

The commission suggests you check your invoices to see whether sales tax was collected on the following purchases, which may require a use tax payment:

- Magazine subscriptions.
- Book and record clubs.
- Out-of-state catalog purchases.
- Merchandise bought over the Internet (including digital music, movies, books, games, etc.).
- Purchases in a state where no sales tax is charged.
- Untaxed purchases of merchandise from Idaho vendors.

If sales tax was not collected, Idaho makes it easy for taxpayers to pay their use tax when they file their annual income tax return, which is due by April 15. Simply total your untaxed purchases, multiply that total by .06, and enter that amount, rounded to the nearest dollar, on the appropriate line of your income tax return.

For more information about use tax, visit tax.idaho.gov and enter “use tax” in the search box on the home page. You can also get help by calling the Idaho State Tax Commission at (800) 972-7660 toll free or 334-7660 in the Boise area.

Small Business Loan Helps T.F. Beauty School Thrive

BY KIMBERLY WILLIAMS-BRACKETT

For the Times-News

TWIN FALLS • A Twin Falls cosmetology school has transformed with help from a small business loan.

Nathan and Ren Shaw bought Mr. Juan’s College of Hair Design in August 2012 and changed the name to Joseph Charles Institute of Cosmetology. The business was relocated in mid-October near Costco at 837 Pole Line Road in Twin Falls.

The Shaw brothers wanted to expand their operations from Boise. Nathan Shaw said with the growth in the Twin Falls market he felt it was a good location to open another school.

Originally from Burley, the entrepreneurs needed an up-to-date modern facility to compete in the marketplace. “It’s worked out well for us there,” he said.

The current facility boasts a state-of-the-art shampoo area, nail room and massage chairs. Student enrollment has increased and they have added three employees.

The Shaws leveraged a Small Business Administration loan from Zions Bank to build the business.

“We’ve used the SBA three times, and it has been great for what it’s helped us accomplish,” Nathan Shaw said. “I’ve always felt like it’s proof that there’s still a lot of great opportunity in this country for people who want to put the work in and get what they want. It’s definitely a good tool to help do that. If you’ve got the drive and the passion for something, this can help you meet that.”

Ben Chaney, Zions Bank vice president branch manager in Boise, said the Shaws do a nice job running their business and they manage the school from a student perspective, which is not an easy thing to do. “They’ve done a nice job balancing that.”

“Despite the sluggish economy, they continue to grow and serve a need to the community. They also hire individuals in the community as well,” said Chaney.

“I’ve always felt like it’s proof that there’s still a lot of great opportunity in this country for people who want to put the work in and get what they want.”

The makers of the video that receives the most votes will win the $1,000 cash prize, plus a $1,000 matching award for their school. Second- and third-place winners will receive $500 and $250, respectively, plus matching awards for their schools.

The 60-second video was created by Katie Clark, Kelsi Cox and Anthony Carr, and was filmed entirely at the school. The three students stress the importance of learning how to budget and save prior to adulthood, and they encourage their peers to lean on their parents for financial advice.

Voting is open until March 31 on Zions Bank’s Facebook page at www.facebook.com/zions -

Pepsi Franchises Swap, Including in Idaho

NEW YORK • Seeking to drive growth locally, Pepsi Bottling Ventures LLC and the Honickman Group’s Pepsi-Cola Bottling Company of New York have announced their intent to transfer certain franchise ownerships in New York, North Carolina, Idaho and Vermont.

PepsiCo has agreed to swap five counties of its company-owned North Carolina territory to PBV in exchange for PBV’s 11 counties in Vermont and 18 counties in Idaho, which are contiguous to other PepsiCo-owned bottling territories. PBV in turn has agreed to sell its Long Island, N.Y., territory, including Nassau and Suffolk counties, to the Honickman Group’s PCNY, which already operates in each of New York City’s five boroughs and New York’s Westchester County.

“This is an exciting time for all of us. We look forward to welcoming Pepsi Charlotte into the PBV family and serving consumers and trade customers in North Carolina’s largest city. This acquisition will allow us to significantly expand our footprint in the Carolinas while adding scale and leveraging our operating capability across PBV’s regional core,” said PBV President Paul Finney.

State Keeps Blue Cross as Insurer

BOISE • The state of Idaho will keep Blue Cross of Idaho as its health benefits provider for more than 19,000 state employees and their dependents.

The state recently announced its decision to remain with Blue Cross of Idaho for its medical, pharmacy, vision, EAP and dental coverage.

The state selected Blue Cross after reviewing the qualifications and pricing of several insurance companies during an extensive bid process.

“We had been with Blue Cross of Idaho for eight years and while we were pleased with their service, we wanted to see what our options were like with other carriers in the market,” Teresa Luna, director of the Department of Administration, said in a press release. “After an in-depth review process it was clear that the best choice for the State and our employees was to remain with Blue Cross.”

The new contract begins July 1.

Accident Cuts Power in Jerome, Gooding Counties

TIMES-NEWS

JEROME • A power pole accident caused power to be cut for about 1,600 Idaho Power customers Monday afternoon, according to the utility.

At about 3 p.m., Idaho Power reported that power was out in Gooding County from 2300 East to 2400 East and from 3700 South to 3800 South.

Power was out in Jerome County from 200 South to 625 South and from 400 East to 500 West.

Crews went to the site and restored power by about 5:30 p.m.

Deputy Rick Maltos with the Jerome County Sheriff’s Office said a homeowner who lives near the intersection of 500 South and 200 East in Jerome County was re-graveling his driveway. Somehow the dump truck caught a power line on the homeowner’s property. The truck pulled the lines down and caused the pole to snap in half, Maltos said.

Maltos said there were no injuries.

$1.7 Million Penalty Proposed in Exxon Spill

BY MATTHEW BROWN
Associated Press

BILLINGS, Mont. • Federal regulators proposed $1.7 million in civil penalties against Exxon Mobil Corp. on Monday for safety violations linked to a pipeline rupture that spilled an estimated 63,000 gallons of crude oil into Montana’s scenic Yellowstone River.

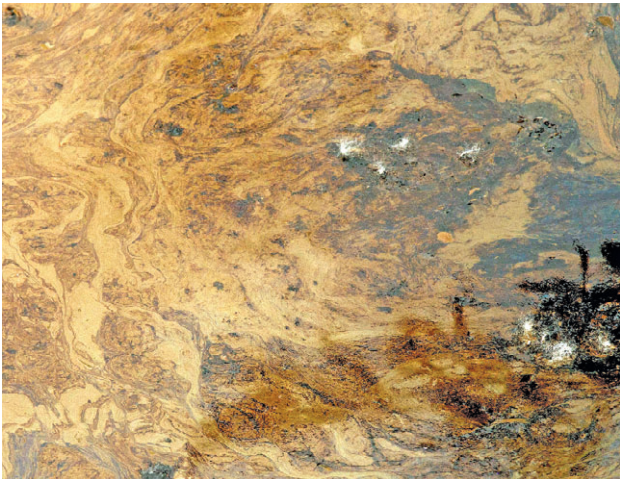

In a notice sent to the company, U.S. Department of Transportation regulators alleged a chain of bad decisions by Exxon leading up to the spill and in its immediate aftermath. That included Exxon employees’ failure to close an upstream safety valve, which could have significantly reduced the size of the spill after it was first detected.

As a result, the agency said, oil continued gushing into the flooding river for almost an hour after the break was noticed by pipeline controllers in Houston.

The agency also faulted the company for not addressing flood risks and not taking adequate measures to prevent a spill.

The July 2011 rupture of the 12-inch pipeline under the river near Laurel fouled 70 miles of the Yellowstone River’s banks, killing fish and wildlife and prompting a massive, months-long cleanup.

Investigators chalked up the immediate cause to floodwaters that damaged the line and left it exposed. It ruptured under pressure from debris washing downriver.

Exxon spokesman Patrick Henretty said the company was disappointed in the government’s findings, which he said appeared to contradict an investigative report released in December that said Exxon took “reasonable precautions to address the flooding.”

Henretty added that Exxon was still reviewing Monday’s notice. He said the Irving, Texas-based company has already altered its training program and procedures on the use of remote-control valves that can be used to shut down pipelines quickly when accidents occur.

Investigators previously said the size of the spill could have been reduced by about two-thirds if pipeline controllers had acted more quickly.

In Monday’s notice, the agency said there had been “numerous indications” that the 20-year-old Silvertip pipeline had been installed in an area prone to seasonal flooding and erosion.

Nevertheless, when the Yellowstone was flooding in 2011, Exxon chose to keep its pipeline operating even as at least one other company decided to shut down another line in the same area, the agency said.

Exxon’s “failure over an extended period of time to recognize those threats ... was a major cause of the failure,” Transportation officials said in Monday’s notice.

Survey: Many Utah Scouts against Lifting Ban on Gays

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) •

More than four out of five Boy Scout leaders in the Salt Lake City area say they are opposed to Boy Scouts of America lifting its ban on gays, a new survey shows.

Nearly half said they would quit the Boy Scouts if the ban on gays is lifted, according to results of a survey of 4,700 adults involved in the Boy Scouts' Great Salt Lake Council. The respondents included leaders and parents.

The council is one of the largest in the country, with 5,500 troops and 73,400 youth members. Nearly all of the troops, 99 percent to be exact, are sponsored by The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints. Scouts are celebrating 100 years in Utah this year.

"We just want to be what we've always been," said Rick Barnes, executive of the Boy Scouts' Great Salt Lake Council. "That's what the people in Utah are saying: stick to the traditional family values. It's a pretty clear message."

The Boy Scouts national executive board is currently mulling a proposal to move away from its no-gays membership policy or create a local option that would give the decision to the individual troops.

Man Dies Swinging from Rock Arch

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) • A

22-year-old Utah man was killed trying to swing through the opening of a 110-foot-tall sandstone arch in a stunt made so popular on YouTube that state authorities recently banned the daredevil activity by commercial outfitters.

Kyle Lee Stocking, of West Jordan, left too much slack in the rope he was using, and it sent him crashing into the sandstone base of Corona Arch near Moab, Grand County sheriff's officials said.

Viral videos have bolstered the activity, which involves swinging wildly from ropes through arch and canyon openings. One video titled "World's Largest Rope Swing" has racked up more than 17 million views on YouTube since it was posted in February.

"Pendulum" swinging is a relatively new form of recreation in Utah's canyon lands, which see plenty of injuries and deaths from rock climbing and BASE jumping, which involves leaping from a fixed object with a parachute. On March 13, another man, Zachery Taylor, was killed rappelling at Tear Drop Arch in Utah's Monument Valley.

It's part of the recreational "craziness" sweeping the Moab area, where the annual Jeep Safari week got started Saturday, another potentially dangerous activity that involves rock crawling in modified vehicles, said John Weisheit, of Living Rivers, a local environmental group.

"People aren't accepting nature for what it is. They have to put an element of excitement into it," said Weisheit, a longtime rafting guide. "People see it on YouTube and then say, 'That looks like fun.'"

Man Gets 18 Years in Seattle Terror Plot

who plotted to attack a Seattle military complex with machine guns and grenades was sentenced on Monday to 18 years in prison.

Abu Khalid Abdul-Latif, 35, also was ordered by U.S. District Court Judge James L. Robart to be supervised for 10 years after his release.

Abdul-Latif, also known as Joseph Anthony Davis, pleaded guilty last December to conspiracy to murder U.S. officers and conspiracy to use weapons of mass destruction.

Prosecutors argued for a 19-year prison sentence with lifetime supervision following his release, saying Abdul-Latif directed major aspects of the planned attack, including picking the Military Entrance Processing Station in south Seattle as a target.

"This was a real attack plot," said Assistant U.S. Attorney Todd Greenberg, who prosecuted the case with Assistant U.S. Attorney Michael Dion.

Greenberg countered assertions by the defense that Abdul-Latif was a passive contributor to the plot, noting the defendant had been eager to take possession of machine guns and didn't back out of the plan.

MARINE BASE SHOOTING VICTIM WAS 'FULL OF DREAMS'

OAKLEY, Calif. (AP) • A

Marine from Northern California who was shot and killed at a base in Virginia was remembered by loved ones as a brave woman who was full of dreams.

Lance Cpl. Sara Castromata, 19, of Oakley joined the Marines because she believed it was the toughest military branch and she was a tough girl, her family told reporters on Sunday.

Now, devastated loved ones are making arrangements to bring her body back home to prepare for a funeral.

"I cannot believe it, you don't want to believe it," her older sister, Gabriela Castro, 30, told KGO-TV.

Officials say Castromata was killed Thursday by Sgt. Eusebio Lopez of Pacifica, Calif., at the Marine Corps Base in Quantico in northern Virginia.

Lopez also fatally shot Jacob Wooley of Guntown, Miss., a field radio operator, before killing himself, officials said.

The three people worked at a school that tests Marines who want to become officers, but officials have not released their relationship or a motive for the shooting. Their bodies were found in Taylor Hall barracks, where those who work at the school live.

The candidates for officer live elsewhere on base.

On Sunday, Castromata's family struggled to make sense of the shooting as they gathered at her home, lighting candles around her military portrait and a bouquet of yellow roses.

"She knew how to comfort people," Gabriela Castro said. "She was brave ... full of dreams."

Castromata's stunned family told the Bay Area News Group that she was friends with Lopez, 25, but they had not heard of Wooley, who was 23.

Castromata enlisted in the Marines in 2011, the same year she graduated from high school with honors.

She joined the military so she could pay her own way through college, even though her father wanted to pay for it, her family said.

After completing boot camp in South Carolina, Castromata was stationed at Quantico.

Although she had not been deployed, Castromata — whose last name is combination of her parents' surnames — had been awarded the National Defense Service Medal, the Global War on Terrorism Service Medal and a Good Conduct Medal.

School Officials Oppose Campus Carry Bill

CARSON CITY, Nev. (AP)

• Supporters of a bill to allow employees of school districts and Nevada's higher education system to carry guns on campus if they have a concealed weapon permit said Monday the issue is about responding quickly to imminent threats.

But opponents countered that having more guns would make campuses less safe, and that there are already procedures for employees with permits to ask permission of administrators to carry guns under special circumstances.

Sen. Joe Hardy, the sponsor of SB223, said that when it comes to mass shootings, "we know that 30 seconds is fatal."

"This is not about the Second Amendment rights, this is about the reality of how long it takes to respond," said Hardy, R-Boulder City.

Other supporters echoed Hardy's reasoning.

"It allows citizens to be the first line of defense for school shootings," said Matthew Yealy, a citizen.

"The police cannot be everywhere."

Added Greg Ross, "I think a shootout is far preferable than a massacre."

But police, school administrators and officials with the Nevada System of Higher Education opposed the bill, which would allow employees with permits to carry their weapons on school grounds provided they tell the campus president or school principal that they are armed.

Dan Klaich, chancellor of Nevada's higher education system, said there have been relatively few requests from people asking permission to carry weapons on campus. He added most are denied because no direct threat was identified.

"We ask a lot of our faculty," Klaich said. "We don't ask them to patrol our streets. We ask them to teach."

Joyce Haldeman, with the Clark County School District, also spoke against the bill. She said despite recent shootings, schools remain safe places for children.

Mont. Agency Called Dysfunctional, Divisive

HELENA, Mont. (AP) •

The Montana agency that responds to natural disasters and emergencies is a divisive, dysfunctional workplace with a climate of fear and the perception of bullying by some managers, according to an internal report conducted last year.

The three-page report by independent communications consultant Julie Benson-Rosston outlines employee fears of retaliation, sexual discrimination and possible theft and mismanagement within the state Disaster and Emergency Services, a division of the Department of Military Affairs. But it does not qualify as a hostile work environment, the April 2012 report concludes.

"The workplace does NOT appear to qualify as a 'hostile work environment' as it is defined legally. The workplace does, however, greatly lack civility and teamwork," the report says.

The report was made public Feb. 27 after a legislative panel threatened to subpoena the department and the report's author to produce the study. Members of the appropriations subcommittee expressed disbelief at the report's conclusion.

"My first thought was, I'm not sure what a hostile work environment looks like if this is not one," Rep. Champ Edmunds, R-Missoula, said Monday. "I believe it's probably still a mess over there."

Sen. Alan Olson, R-

Roundup, another member of the panel, said he is concerned the strife may be hurting the state's ability to respond to emergencies.

"My major concern is if this office is as dysfunctional as what we're hearing, are they going to be able to respond to a real disaster or is everything just going to fall apart due to internal conflict?" Olson said.

DES director Ed Tinsley did not respond to a call and email request for comment.

PET DEER ATTACKS MAN IN NORTHERN UTAH

OGDEN, Utah (AP) •

Wildlife officials say a deer that attacked a Weber River fisherman last month was territorial and did not fear people because it had been raised as a pet.

A Utah Division of Wildlife Resources spokesman says tests show the mule deer did not have a degenerative brain disease.

The fisherman, Kevin Bybee of North Ogden, was wading in the river on Feb. 2 when the buck approached him. Bybee says the animal reeled up on its hind legs and attacked Bybee's back with its hooves. Bybee wrestled with the deer in the river as it repeatedly attacked him. Bybee escaped with a black eye and climbed a nearby tree to call for help.

The Standard-Examiner reports Morgan County Sheriff's deputies shot and killed the deer when it started to attack rescuers.

Clare Bodensteiner Minico — 2002

As a senior, Bodensteiner averaged 20 points, five rebounds and 3.4 assists per game while leading Minico to the 5A consolation trophy. She played her college ball at Stanford University. She was also a member of the New Zealand women's national team that competed in the 2008 Summer Olympics in Beijing. Later, she worked as an assistant coach at Loyola University.

Jenna Peterson Oakley — 2006

Peterson led Oakley to three consecutive state tournament appearances. As a senior, she averaged 19.7 points, 10.3 rebounds and 4.4 steals per game. She went on to play four years of Division-I basketball at University of Hartford.

Aubree Callen Jerome — 2010

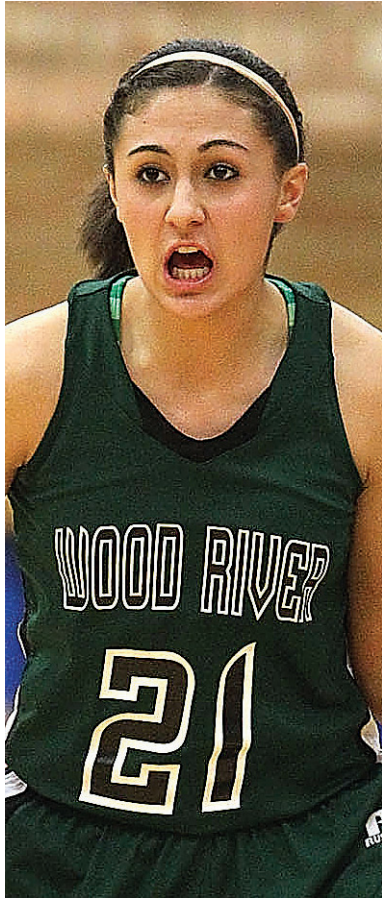

Jerome's record from Callen's sophomore year to senior year was 70-10, and she's the biggest reason why. Callen was a three-time first-team All-Idaho player, plus 4A Player of the Year in 2010. She led the Tigers to a pair of state third-place trophies in 2009 and 2010. She is currently playing college ball at Seattle Pacific University.

Whitney Clark Jerome — 2004

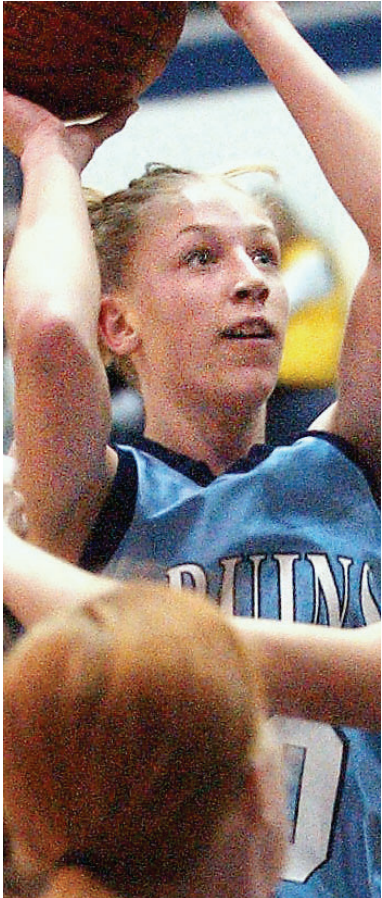

Clark was a four-year varsity player and three-year starter. During that span, Jerome won 85 games, going 48-3 over the last two seasons. Clark led the Tigers to the state championship game in three out of her four years. She was the 4A Idaho Player of the Year her senior season, averaging 16 points per game (including 42 percent 3-point shooting) as Jerome went undefeated, 25-0, and won the state championship. Clark went on to star at College of Idaho.

Jessica Brice Burley — 2007

Brice was a four-year starter for the Bobcats. She helped Burley take third at state as a junior and then led the school to its first-ever girls state basketball championship as a senior, averaging 11 points and three assists per game. Leadership, intelligence (she was her class valedictorian), clutch shooting and defense elevated Brice to 4A's Idaho Player of the Year. She went on to play three years at Whitman College.

Kaitana Martinez Wood River — 2012

One of the purest point guards this area has ever seen, Martinez averaged 14 points and six rebounds per game as a senior while leading Wood River to back-to-back 4A District IV championships. Who knows what she could have accomplished had it not been for a knee injury that stole most of her senior season. She led the Wolverines to a 4A state runner-up finish in 2011 and a third-place trophy in 2012. A four-sport athlete, Martinez probably could have earned an NCAA Division-I scholarship in any of them, but chose to play hoops at Dartmouth, where she averaged 22 minutes per game as a freshman this winter.

Amy Bratvold Twin Falls — 2005

Bratvold was the 5A Player of the Year in 2005 while leading Twin Falls to a third-place state trophy, which is the Bruin program's best-ever finish. She averaged 15.3 points, 6.7 rebounds and two assists per game her senior year. After high school, she played at College of Southern Idaho and Eastern Washington.

Katie Strunk Shoshone — 2006

Strunk was a four-year starter, scoring 1,142 points and grabbing 782 rebounds over her career. As a senior, she averaged 15.8 points, 7.4 rebounds, 3 steals and 3 assists per game. The 2005 1A Idaho Player of the Year, Strunk led Shoshone to a state championship, a state runner-up and two state third-place trophies. At 5-foot-9, Strunk was asked to play in the post, but had the quickness and skills to play anywhere. She played two years at Walla Walla and finished her college career at College of Idaho.

Haylee Thompson Wood River — 2012

Paired with point guard Kaitana Martinez, Thompson was unstoppable inside. The 6-foot-1 post averaged 16 points and eight rebounds per game her senior year. She was instrumental in Wood River's back-to-back 4A District IV titles, state runner-up and state third-place trophies in 2011 and 2012. She now plays Division-I basketball at Utah State, where she contributes about 12 minutes per game this season as a true freshman.

Vanessa West Jerome — 2004

A 6-foot center, West helped Jerome make the state championship three out of four years and win the 2004 4A title. As a senior, she averaged 12.5 points and seven rebounds per game, and was nominated as a McDonald's High School All-American. She earned a basketball scholarship to Lewis-Clark State College.

Heat Win 27th Straight Game

ASSOCIATED PRESS

ORLANDO, Fla. • Late in the third quarter, the game was tied and the Miami Heat winning streak seemed to be in jeopardy.

Then LeBron James got mad.

And then the Orlando Magic had no chance.

James finished with 24 points, 11 assists and nine rebounds, throwing down a dunk to start a huge, swift run that decided everything and the Heat won their 27th straight game by topping the Magic 108-94 on Monday night.

“We are not taking this team for granted,” James said. “I continue to always say that in professional sports, wins are hard to come by and teams like this are really rare. To be part of a team like this, we do not take it for granted.”

That dunk — which came one possession after James badly missed a layup and got frustrated — started what became a 20-2 run over merely a 4½-minute portion of the third and fourth quarters, and it put the Heat in control for good.

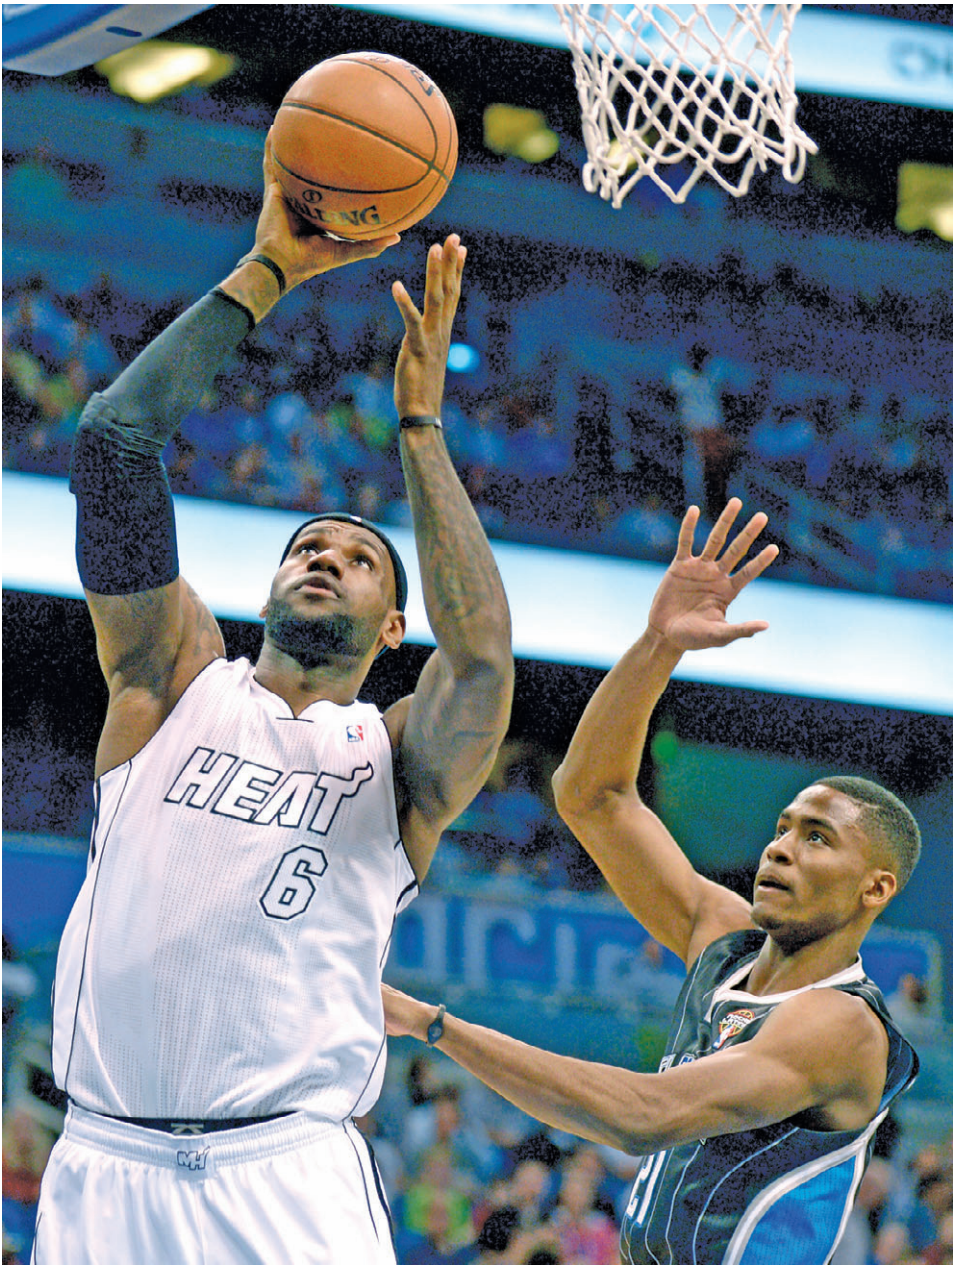

He left one rebound shy of a triple-double, feigning disappointment. That’s about all the Heat could complain about afterward.

Mario Chalmers scored 17, and Chris Bosh and Ray Allen each added 12 for Miami, giving Heat coach Erik Spoelstra his 250th win and bringing the reigning NBA champions within six games of matching the Lakers for the longest winning streak in league history, a 33-game run.

“We did enough late in the third quarter and in the fourth quarter to come away with this win,” Spoelstra said. “That was some of our best in that fourth quarter on both ends of the court. ... Before that, it was a little bit of a sleepwalk.”

Jameer Nelson had 27 points and 12 assists for the Magic, who got 20 points from Tobias Harris. And Magic coach Jacques Vaughn didn’t exactly seem to think after the game that Miami’s winning streak will end anytime soon.

withstand the perils of a long NBA season.

On Monday night, they showed why depth matters.

With Indiana playing without four key contributors because of injuries, Gerald Green scored 17 of his 19 points in the second half, including a game-saving 3-pointer in the final minute, to help the Pacers fend off Atlanta’s furious fourth-quarter rally for a 100-94 victory.

“I feel good about our depth,” coach Frank Vogel said. “If a guy goes down, it won’t be the end of the world for us.”

WASHINGTON • John Wall scored a career-high 47 points and added eight assists, Emeka Okafor had 21 points and nine rebounds, and the undermanned Washington Wizards beat the Memphis Grizzlies, 107-94 Monday night.

Wall shot 13 of 22 from the field and made a career-high 19 free throws on 24 attempts.

Mike Conley led Memphis with 23 points.

It was Washington’s sixth straight home win, while Memphis dropped its fourth straight road game.

Already without guard Bradley Beal (sprained left ankle), guard A.J. Price (groin) and forward Trevor Ariza (flu), Wizards coach Randy Wittman announced before the game that forwards Nene (sore right knee) and Martell Webster (abdomen strain) were also out.

Memphis center Marc Gasol missed his second straight game after aggravating an abdominal tear Friday at New Orleans.

NUGGETS 86

NEW ORLEANS • Ryan Anderson scored 23 points, Brian Roberts doubled his career high with 18 assists and the short-handed New Orleans Hornets beat Denver 110-86 on Monday night, ending the Nuggets’ 15-game win streak.

New Orleans, playing without its starting backcourt of Eric Gordon and Greivis Vasquez, won its third in a row and was in control all the way. The Hornets led by nine at the end of the first quarter, by 21 at the half and by 18 entering the fourth.

The federation also urged FIFA to punish match officials, including referee Joel Aguilar of El Salvador, for allowing the match to proceed.

For the protest to have a chance of succeeding, it must meet specific requirements stated in the 2014 World Cup Regulations.

One clause says that when a field becomes unplayable, the protesting team’s captain “shall immediately lodge a protest with the referee in the presence of the captain of the opposing team.”

Woods Back On Top in Golf

ORLANDO, Fla. • The moment was vintage Tiger Woods, and so was his reaction.

Seconds after Rickie Fowler made a 40-foot birdie putt on the 12th hole to pull within two shots of the lead, Woods posed over his 25-foot birdie putt until he swept the putter upward in his left hand and marched toward the cup as it dropped for a birdie.

Fowler, standing on the edge of the green, turned with a slight smile as if to say, “What else can I do?”

Woods won the Arnold Palmer Invitational on Monday and returned to No. 1 in the world for the first time since October 2010, the longest spell of his career. After all that time, after so much turmoil with his personal life and his health, Woods looks as good as ever. Maybe better.

“It’s a byproduct of hard work, patience and getting back to winning golf tournaments,” Woods said.

He essentially wrapped up his eighth title at Bay Hill with an 8-iron out of a fairway bunker on the par-5 16th that easily cleared the water and landed safely on the green for a two-putt birdie. Woods dangled his tongue out of his mouth as the ball was in the air, another sign of his swagger.

FIFA Gets Costa Rica Protest over WCup Loss to US

ZURICH • FIFA is studying a protest from the Costa Rica soccer federation, which wants a World Cup qualifier against the United States replayed after losing 1-0 in a snowstorm.

“FIFA will now analyze the content of the letter and next steps will be determined in due course,” the governing body said Monday in a statement.

The Costa Rican federation said Sunday that the “physical integrity” of players and officials was affected, “ball movement became impossible” and field markings were not visible in Friday’s match played in Commerce City, Colo.

CLEANING

Question:

Being the only female in my home, (I have a husband and 3 sons, even my dog is a male), I’ve decided that in my next house I’m having urinals installed instead of toilets! I thought guys are just naturally good shots, and you would think a toilet bowl is a big enough target. Not for my men! What should I use Lori, to clean up all the over spray on my bathroom floors. “Poor shots, can’t hit pots!”

Answer:

I’ll tell you what to use...use THEM! They should clean up after themselves, and I have the perfect products to put in their hands. SAFETY FOAM BOWL CLEANER for the toilet and DIGESTER to eliminate odor and bacteria on the surrounding floor. Tell them that a clean man is a manly man! And another helpful hint...until you get urinals, make your men sit! All the males in my household have been trained to be squatters.

Howland Bids Farewell to UCLA after Firing

ASSOCIATED PRESS

LOS ANGELES • Ben Howland kept it classy in departing as UCLA's basketball coach on Monday, thanking the athletic director who fired him a day earlier while noting the high expectations that come with running a program that owns a record 11 national championships. Howland was applauded by supporters as he walked into a news conference at Pauley Pavilion for the last time. The 55-year-old coach expressed gratitude for his 10-year run in Westwood, the longest tenure since John Wooden retired in 1975 after 27 years on the sideline. Howland had a 233-107 record that included three consecutive Final Four appearances and four Pac-12 titles, including this season, when the Bruins were 25-10. Their season ended with a 20-point loss to Minnesota in the second round of the NCAA tournament. "As a coach, you always remember the losses way better than the wins," he said. Howland said he's excited about his future and wants to coach again, although he doesn't know where or when that will happen. "It's where the best opportunity is," he said afterward.

"I can live anywhere. I want to compete at the highest level." He said he took the unusual step of meeting the media after his firing because he wanted to publicly thank his current and former players and staff. He recited a laundry list of names, including his wife, Kim, who kissed him after he finished. No senior athletic department officials attended, including athletic director Dan Guerrero, who fired Howland in a meeting on Sunday. Howland declined to discuss details of what was said. "I enjoyed our working relationship, his support and his regard for all we accomplished," Howland said, reading from a prepared statement he had worked on after being dismissed. Howland sidestepped a question on whether he was treated fairly, considering the Bruins won the league's regular-season title and lost in its tournament title game playing without freshman Jordan Adams, who broke his foot in the semifinals. Howland's four league titles were the most by any UCLA coach since Wooden. "We had a great year. I was so proud of our players and coaches to win the Pac-12 championship," he said. "I feel very good about leaving here with a good nucleus." However, Guerrero cited "a depleted roster" as one of the reasons he let Howland go. Attendance lagged at games this season despite a $138 million renovation of Pauley Pavilion, and UCLA missed the NCAA tournament twice in Howland's last four seasons. The Bruins haven't reached the final 16 since 2008.

High Court Takes On a New Affirmative Action Case

WASHINGTON • The Supreme Court's decision to hear a new case from Michigan on the politically charged issue of affirmative action offers an intriguing hint that the justices will not use a separate challenge already pending from Texas for a broad ruling bringing an end to the consideration of race in college admissions.

To be sure, the two cases involve different legal issues. The University of Texas dispute, with arguments already completed and a ruling possible soon, centers on the use of race to fill some slots in the school's freshman classes. The Michigan case asks whether a voter-approved ban on affirmative action in college admissions can itself violate the Constitution.

But the broadest possible outcome in the current Texas case — overruling the court's 2003 decision that allows race as a factor in college admissions — would mean an end to affirmative action in higher education and render the new Michigan lawsuit irrelevant.

Obama to Congress: 'Finish The Job' on Immigration

WASHINGTON • President Barack Obama helped swear in 28 new U.S. citizens at the White House on Monday, hailing them as examples of the nation's strong immigrant history and demanding that Congress "finish the job" on a comprehensive overhaul of immigration laws.

"Immigration makes us stronger — it keeps us vibrant, it keeps us hungry, it keeps us prosperous," Obama said during a ceremony in the East Room that included 13 immigrants who are members of the U.S. military.

"We need to do a better job welcoming them," the president continued. "We've known for years that our immigration system is broken. . . . After avoiding the problem for years, the time has come to fix it once and for all."

Syrian Rebels Advance, Oblivious to Infighting

BEIRUT • A dual picture of Syria's rebellion is emerging: Fighters on the ground make advances, seizing territory in the south and even firing one of the heaviest mortar volleys yet into the heart of Damascus on Monday. But at the same time, the would-be opposition leadership is falling deeper into disarray.

The dichotomy underlines the difficulties as the U.S. and its allies try to shape the course of the fight to oust President Bashar Assad — and, more importantly, avert chaos in the event the regime is toppled.

As the Syrian civil war enters its third year, hopes that the perpetually fragmented opposition would coalesce to form a real leadership for the fighters on the ground seem more elusive than ever.

Supreme Court Tickets Won't Come Cheap for Gay Marriage Hearing

WASHINGTON • The most expensive ticket to "The Book of Mormon" on Broadway: $477. The face value of a great seat for this year's Super Bowl: $1,250. Guaranteed seats to watch the U.S. Supreme Court hear this week's gay marriage cases: about $6,000.

Tickets to the two arguments that begin Tuesday are technically free. But getting them requires lining up days or hours ahead, or paying someone else to. The first people got in line Thursday, bringing the price of saving a seat to around $6,000.

Storm Dumps Snow on Eastern US

HAMBURG, Pa. • Five days into spring, warm weather and budding flowers were just a rumor Monday as the East Coast endured another blast of winter.

A wide-ranging storm that buried parts of the Midwest weakened as it moved east but still managed to carpet lawns and fields in a fresh layer of white. Many schools opened late or closed early, and hundreds of flights were canceled.

The cold temperatures and miserable mixture of snow and rain had people longing for more agreeable weather.

"I'm ready for flip flops," said Jessica Cunitz, 24 of Westchester County, N.Y., who stopped at a gas station along Interstate 78 in Pennsylvania to fill her overheating car with antifreeze. "It's supposed to be spring."

Baiju Amin hands lottery tickets to a customer Sunday at Union Food Store in Totowa, N.J.

Powerball Winner Validates Ticket

PASSAIC, N.J. (AP) • The lone winning ticket for a $338.3 million Powerball jackpot was validated Monday at the liquor store where it was purchased, but lottery officials said they don't yet know the winner's name.

The ticket holder went to Eagle Liquors in Passaic and had the ticket validated at around 4:30 p.m. for the fourth-largest jackpot in Powerball history, the New Jersey Lottery said.

The numbers drawn Saturday were 17, 29, 31, 52, 53 and Powerball 31. A lump sum cash payout would be $221 million, or about $152 million after taxes.

Liquor store employee Pravin Mankodia, 67, who has worked at Eagle for seven years, sold the ticket. "It feels awesome. We feel so lucky," he said.

The store will get $10,000. The owner said he'll probably use some of the money to fix up the store and also share some with employees.

As word spread that Eagle had sold the ticket, some patrons continued to dream about what could have been.

James Brown, 56, of Passaic, who described himself as a scrap man, as in scrap metal, said he would have returned to his home state if he had scored the big jackpot.

"I like it here, but I'd be back in South Carolina by now if I had won. I would like to go back home and retire," he said.

Brown buys lottery tickets twice a day and said he will keep doing so.

Secretary of State John Kerry and Afghan President Hamid Karzai leave their bilateral meeting before a news conference Monday at the presidential palace in Kabul.

Kerry, Karzai Bury Hatchet

KABUL (AP) • Eager to overcome a bout of bickering, U.S. Secretary of State John Kerry and Afghan President Hamid Karzai made a show of unusual unity between their two nations on Monday. The friendly display came as the U.S. military ceded control of its last detention facility in Afghanistan, ending a longstanding irritant in relations.

Kerry arrived in the Afghan capital of Kabul on an unannounced visit amid concerns that Karzai may be jeopardizing progress in the war against extremism with anti-American rhetoric. After a private meeting, Kerry said he and Karzai were "on the same page" on security and reconciliation issues and brushed aside suggestions that relations were in peril.

Karzai infuriated U.S. officials earlier this month by accusing Washington of colluding with Taliban insurgents to keep Afghanistan weak even as the Obama administration pressed ahead with plans to hand off security responsibility to Afghan forces and end NATO's combat mission by the end of next year.

At a joint news conference after their talks, Karzai told reporters that his comments in a nationally televised speech had been misinterpreted by the media.

Kerry demurred on that point but said people sometimes say things in public that reflect ideas they have heard from others but don't necessarily agree with.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE®

Bobby Wolff

“A mortified appetite is never a wise companion.”
— Robert Louis Stevenson

Today's contract of three no-trump sees West lead the spade jack, and — following general principles — you duck the trick. Spades appear to be the only danger suit, and ducking starts to cut the defenders' communications.

East overtakes with the queen and advances the spade king, which you duck again. If the defenders continued with a third spade, you would knock out the diamond queen, knowing that there is no danger from the spades. But as the cards lie, East cannot continue with a third spade. Instead, he shifts to the heart 10, and now you appear to be home free.

But beware! If you win the first heart and play three rounds of diamonds, West will win and exit with a spade, locking you in dummy and cutting you off from your second heart winner. And if you cash the second top heart, West will unblock the queen and you are again doomed to go down.

Having identified the problem, no doubt you will have spotted the solution. After winning the heart king at trick three, simply play the diamond ace and then lead a low diamond. When West wins the queen (and he might well duck!) he cannot simultaneously dislodge dummy's spade and club aces. The best he can do is clear the spades, but you can arrange to cross back to hand with the diamond king, cash your heart winner, and go back over to dummy with the club ace to run the diamonds.

ANSWER: If you have a transfer to diamonds, make the call, planning to follow up with three hearts. This, by partnership agreement, should suggest a singleton heart, letting partner choose which game he wants to play. (With long diamonds and four hearts you would start with Stayman, of course.) If you don't play this, simply bid three no-trump directly, as in our 52-card diagram today.

Available for Adoptions:
"Austin" Young adult male Aussie & Wirehaired Pointer mix. He is a tan merle & has a docked tail. This is a really cute dog! He has a great face with his wirehaired whiskers! Knows some commands. Come meet him today.

"Archie" Male Black Labrador. He is a shorter and stockier Lab. He is likely under a year old. He is a little timid, but once he gets to know you he is full of kisses.

"Chip" is a young adult male Border Collie & Akita mix. He is black and white and has one blue eye. He is very outgoing and gets along with our other dogs.

"Lacey" Female adult Black Labrador & Aussie mix with a docked tail. She is really sweet and has lots of energy. She came in with her buddy "Cassie". These dogs were abandoned in their backyard with no food or water.

"Cassie" is also a adult female Black Labrador mix. She is still on the shy side, but with lots of TLC, I am sure she will be a wonderful companion as well.

If someone would be willing to just foster a dog if they are unable to adopt, it would really help us out when the shelter is full.
We also have a Facebook Page.
Adoption fee is $75, incl spaying/neutering & first set of vaccinations.

DEAR ABBY: "Rita" and I have been together three years and are getting ready to make the final commitment of marriage. My problem is that she's a slob. Rita isn't a "hoarder," but she does things like take the plastic off a package and drop it on the floor. (Don't get me started on the mess she leaves in the bathroom.)

DEAR ABBY
Jeanne Phillips

I love her and would be willing to have separate bathrooms if that's what it takes. But I don't want to spend the rest of my life in a house that looks the way hers does right now. The thought of raising kids in that kind of atmosphere chills me.

I'm no neat freak, but at least I put my trash in the wastebasket. Rita gets offended if I raise the issue. I have offered to help her clean her house, but I don't want to nag because her mother already does, and it makes Rita respond like a defiant child.

Have you any ideas about what I can do to keep our relationship — and hopefully our future — intact?

— WHATEVER

RITA WANTS

DEAR WHATEVER: It appears your girlfriend wants to continue living exactly the way she is. Because she becomes defensive at the suggestion that she make a better effort, accept that you are not going to change her. She obviously has many good qualities or your relationship would not have made it this far.

There is help for people who are disorganized and sloppy, but only if they are willing to accept that they need it. Some people have successfully used a system originated by Marla Cilley, aka the FlyLady. ("Fly" stands for "Finally Loving Yourself.") To find out more about her system, visit www.flylady.net and click on "Get Started."

DEAR ABBY: I'm stuck in a dead-end job that doesn't pay much money, so I have to rely on help from my parents. I'd like to return to school for my master's, but a lack of funds and mild depression keep pulling me back.

I told my mother about how I have been feeling, hoping for reassurance — just a general, "Everything is going to get better." This is a woman who has longed for me to get married and have children, which I thought was no different than most mothers. I now realize I was wrong. Her motivation speech was: "You have always been beautiful and I want you to see it. Don't you know that you're good enough to become a rich man's wife?"

Now I realize that being a rich man's wife is what she always wanted for me. I always thought I could be more than that and support myself without the need of a man. I also believed I could one day be a writer.

Independence has always been important to me, and I would never marry unless I was. Now, however, my self-esteem is shot, and since I can't afford therapy, I feel my mother's plan is probably the only thing I can hope for. How can I improve my self-esteem so I can make the right decision?

— DEPRESSED IN

LEWISVILLE, TEXAS

DEAR DEPRESSED: A good first step would be to stop listening to your mother. Live your own life, and now that you know what poor judgment she has, make your own decisions about the path you will follow.

A suggestion: Write the story down and be sure to mention how you persisted in spite of your mother's advice. You may find inspiration in your own words. And if it's published, so might others.

Dear Abby is written by Abigail Van Buren, also known as Jeanne Phillips, and was founded by her mother, Pauline Phillips. Write Dear Abby at www.DearAbby.com or P.O. Box 69440, Los Angeles, CA 90069.

IF MARCH 26 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: The upcoming year may bring you answers to your prayers as well as some crossroads. For the next three weeks, you may ride high on a wave of popularity, so this is a good time to meet new people, apply for jobs or develop a romantic relationship. Lay low in late April and throughout May when your business judgment is off center and problems from the past can crop up. In July and August, two contrasting paths may be presented. The right choice might not be clearly seen. Ask for advice from loved ones to guide your choices — but for the best results, wait until September to make key changes, crucial decisions and new starts.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): It's tempting to try to shoehorn your way into someone's good graces. Being overly competitive may be perceived as a threat. Right now, your burgeoning energy is best used to prepare for contingencies.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): More money may mean more problems. It might seem as though everyone wants a handout or that more expenses arise. Avoid extravagances and use a common sense approach to claims upon your generosity.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Receive rewards for becoming a referee. It may be up to you to be the interpreter for people who can't put their thoughts into words but are on the same mental wavelength with others. Give good guidance.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Be sure to put your heart into your work. Expand your horizons through learning or by going somewhere completely new. Then break one small habit and you will realize that you can change anything.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Don't let fears take control — they are most likely groundless. Cooperative efforts yield the best results. If you want to be a winner quit competing with others and start competing with yourself.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Steer clear of power struggles. Those in authority could be in the mood to throw their weight around and you don't want to be in the way when it lands. Avoid making changes or starting new projects.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): A significant other or a business contact may try to persuade you into doing something that on second thought might not be as wise to do as it seems on the surface. Hold off on crucial decisions.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): The harder the struggle, the more enjoyable the victory. If you buy into criticism, or act on impulse, you might go from hero to zero. Remain objective and keep on plugging away despite opposition.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Rather than running away from something, you should be running toward something. Financial upsets might occur, or unexpected bills might arrive, but you can still achieve your objectives.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Adversity doesn't build character, it reveals it. When you are challenged to meet deadlines, tempted to stretch the budget, or faced with the unexpected, prove how much fortitude is at your disposal.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Rest on your laurels for a few days. Put new agreements and deals on the back burner and let them simmer. This is a poor day to initiate crucial new projects or enter into important commitments.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Tomorrow's full moon might bring a financial or business matter to a head. Harvest may take the form of monetary rewards or reaching a stable plateau in an intimate relationship.
