Newer Cars, TOUGHER CHALLENGES

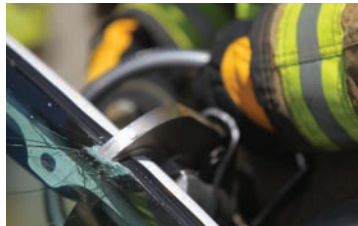

“These cars have completely changed. It’s a whole different ball game.”

TWIN FALLS • New cars are often safer for drivers but can lead to added challenges for first responders at the scene of an accident.

On Saturday afternoon, 23 area firefighters participated in hands-on exercises at Magic Valley Towing as part of a one-day extrication clinic.

Firefighters used power tools to practice taking apart two old cars, such as removing the driver's side door, car hood and windshield.

It's the same kind of scenario they could encounter as first responders at the scene of an accident if a victim is trapped inside a vehicle.

Janet Haddon, administrator for Five Star Fire Training, said cars made before 2000 are generally "cookie cutter," but that's not the case with more recent models.

"These cars have completely changed," she said. "It's a whole different ball game."

The extrication process takes longer on newer vehicles, she said, because the metals are tougher.

Janet's husband, Carl, led the clinic. Their company is based in North Fork and Carl has taught around the United States as well as China a couple of years ago.

The Twin Falls Rural Fire Protection District sponsored the second annual clinic in honor of Jim Berry.

Online Giving Day Planned for Idaho Nonprofits

BY JULIE WOOTTON
jwootton@magicvalley.com

TWIN FALLS • Nonprofit organizations around the state are getting ready for a one-day online giving campaign next month.

Idaho Nonprofit Center is launching Idaho Gives Day, planned for May 2.

Executive director Lynn Hoffmann said the event is an opportunity to bring in new donors, as well as to reach out to young adults and others who are comfortable with online giving.

The campaign is like "a big party to celebrate the work of nonprofits around the state," she said.

Hoffmann expects about 25 to 30 Magic Valley nonprofit organizations to participate.

Community members will be able to search the Idaho Gives website to find nonprofit organizations by geographic area or by what services they provide.

"They can search for organizations according to their interest," Hoffmann said.

All the money that's donated May 2 will go to the organizations directly.

Also, the giving campaign will feature added incentives for participating nonprofit organizations. The Idaho Nonprofit Center will track the number of donors and how much each nonprofit receives.

The five organizations statewide with the largest number of donors will receive a grant from the nonprofit center, Hoffmann said.

And throughout the day, the Idaho Nonprofit Center will randomly draw a donor's name and give $1,000 in funding to the charity they chose.

College of Southern Idaho Tech Learning Expands

CSI Plans to Open a New Applied Technology and Innovation Center in 2014.

BY ANDREW WEEKS
aweeks@magicvalley.com

TWIN FALLS • Technology students at the College of Southern Idaho will have a new place to learn once a new Applied Technology and Innovation Center opens on campus next year.

Construction of the $8.5 million facility already is underway. It is expected to open in May 2014.

"I think it's going to be a major addition to our programs," said Mike Mason, CSI's vice president of administration. "Bringing some of our technology classes back on campus I think is a positive move, as well as having additional equipment and having it all in one spot."

Some technology classes currently are hosted off-campus, such as Kip Morris's wind energy program which he conducts in a building near Harmon Park.

"We've got a nice facility where we're at now, but I think having a little more space will definitely help," Morris said. "And being on campus close to similar programs that use a lot

The Measure for Success

“Success means doing the best we can with what we have. Success is in the doing, not the getting — in the trying, not the triumph.”
— Wynn Davis

Two strong indicators for success are a sense of inner peace and a feeling of self-worth. It is finding the strength to face our own difficulties and challenges. We devote ourselves to a purpose of high calling, accept our own responsibilities and stop blaming others or making excuses when we come up short.

It makes all the difference in the world when we climb out of bed in the morning with gratitude and a resounding “YES” to life in spite of our circumstances and have the intent of making the most of the new day. We choose to live life to the full.

Over the years, I’ve watched how successful people handle life and have been encouraged to take similar steps:

1. A positive attitude must be developed and maintained. That’s how we sweep away discouragement and failure. We explore our possibilities. We construct bridges and tear down walls to establish relationships. Enthusiasm is contagious.
2. Success requires discipline to stay the course of one’s dream and purpose as though it were the sole reason for being. The important is distinguished from the unimportant to eliminate all distractions and needless activity. Priority takes first place, and heart and soul are engaged in doing the right thing.
3. We look inside for the resources we need and seek to develop them into the useful tools they are. If we don’t, they will remain hidden. I’ve discovered that we can be more and do more if we believe we can. Throughout life we continue to train our abilities to achieve greater effectiveness.

4. It takes passion and hard work to get things done, and that doesn’t include watching the world go by and wondering why we’re not part of it. We fully engage life in all our pursuits with genuine excitement and joy.

5. We must make good use of our time and not allow it to be wasted. We consider how we might be more constructive in its use.

6. We don’t have to compromise our integrity to succeed. Hal Urban said, “Honesty is the main ingredient in the character of a good person.” Let’s strive at all times to be truthful in both our private and public lives.

There are other observations which we might make, but keep in mind that we define life through character and mission. The key ingredient is our own commitment to live life well and find the meaning and happiness it brings.

Robert Lewis Stevenson said, “The only end of life is to be what we are and become what we are capable of becoming.” Our success is up to us and no one else.

Let’s take the raw materials life gives us and shape them into a legacy that will go on speaking long after we are gone. That is our real measure for success.

Gun Show Accident Injures 2

GARDEN CITY (AP) • Authorities in southwestern Idaho say the accidental discharge of a large-caliber handgun at a gun show in Garden City injured two people.

Ada County Sheriff’s Office spokeswoman Andrea Dearden says someone attending the Fort Boise Gun Show at Expo Idaho on Saturday picked up a gun that was part of a vendor’s display and it discharged into a display case, the bullet striking two other guns.

Dearden says bullet fragments or other fragments caused a serious eye injury to a 23-year-old Mountain Home man who was transported to a hospital with injuries not believed to be life threatening.

Dearden says another person received minor injuries to his arm and was treated at the scene.

T.F. Council to Discuss City Grant Application Process

BY KIMBERLEE KRUESI
kkruesi@magicvalley.com

TWIN FALLS • During tonight’s meeting, Twin Falls City Council members will discuss the application process for a grant that funds services the city could provide but doesn’t.

Over the past two fiscal years, council members have discussed changing how or organizations apply for the Municipal Powers Outsource

Grant, but staff is looking for a better direction for next year.

In the past, the council has struggled to determine what organizations receive funding because of several members’ conflicts of interest. Last year, the council decided to open the MPOG to all nonprofits within the city limits instead of distributing it to the same six organizations each year.

The council will also listen to a presentation of the Road Scholar Level 1 Awards to Chris Westburg and Cody Brown.

It will also consider a request to award $1,316,545 to Knife River of Boise for the 2013 Auger Falls Pipeline Project.

Idaho Officials Release Names of Fire Victims

OROFINO (AP) • Authorities in northern Idaho have released the names of five people they believe died in a house fire Saturday morning in Orofino pending positive identifications through autopsies.

The Orofino Police Department on Sunday identified the victims as 39-year-old Rosemary Wooster, 31-year-old Allen West, 17-year-old Trevor Wiley, 13-year-old Zachary Wooster, and 13-year-old Colby Stedman. Four of the victims lived at the home, while Stedman was staying overnight as a friend of Zachary Wooster. The boys shared a birthday several days earlier.

Investigators say all five likely died in their sleep from smoke inhalation, and none attempted to flee the fire and the bodies were badly burned.

Fire investigators say an overloaded extension cord on the porch likely caused the fire.

Yellowstone Gets Donations

BOZEMAN, Mont. (AP) • The Yellowstone Park Foundation is donating $600,000 for projects in Yellowstone National Park. The Bozeman Daily Chronicle reports the money will be used for 12 projects selected for this spring's grant cycle. Yellowstone National Park saw its budget cut by $1.75 million due to across-the-board federal budget cuts, commonly known as sequestration. "These grants from the Yellowstone Park Foundation will help us maximize our resources that are even more limited than before sequestration, so that these important projects can move forward," said Yellowstone Superintendent Dan Wenk. He said the park without the donation would have to end some projects to pay bills.

The projects being paid for with the donation include $100,000 for the Slough Creek Native Trout project to determine how rainbow trout are invading Slough Creek, a famed cut-throat trout stream in the northeast part of the park. Another $85,000 will be used for the Yellowstone Raptor Initiative. The five-year project is in its third year of studying raptors in the park.

Giving

United Way of South Central Idaho is one of the Magic Valley nonprofit organizations registered for Idaho Gives Day. Executive director Bill Knopp said United Way is getting involved in order to support its partner agencies and other nonprofit organizations. "Ultimately, any money and funds we receive we'll be distributing in future grants," he said. In conjunction with Idaho Gives Day on May 2, representatives from some nonprofit organizations will be at the Magic Valley Mall. Knopp said it's a chance for community members to learn more about different organizations. And there will also be laptops at the event so people can give on the spot to their favorite charity. There are similar events planned for May 2 in the Wood River Valley at the Ketchum Town Square and Visitor's Center in Ketchum. Knopp said he's excited about the giving campaign and hopes those who don't normally give or don't know how to go about donating "might be willing to see what kinds of agencies are out there."

Extrication

Berry, who died in 2011, created the fire protection district. Participants paid $20 for the all-day clinic, which included a classroom session in the morning. The Twin Falls Rural Fire Protection District picked up the rest of the cost. Members of fire departments and rural fire protection districts from around south-central Idaho attended Saturday's clinic. Jim Olson, chairman of the Twin Falls Rural Fire Protection District, said the clinic was designed to help firefighters learn about what kinds of tools they'll need to safely perform extrications when there's a newer car model involved. "These cars are now everywhere," she said. "Firefighters need to know how to get into them." Haddon said firefighters also need to be aware of other challenges, such as newer vehicles that have air bags in different locations inside the car that can deploy more than once.

She said firefighters need to be aware of their level of fatigue while working to get a victim out of a car. First responders, she said, are selfless people who put their lives out there, but they sometimes forget to take care of themselves.

of the same equipment will be good.”

The future facility, which is being built west of the Herrett Center for Arts and Science, will be 41,630 square feet and LEED certified, Mason said. It will include five classrooms, three large labs, one climbing tower lab, eight offices and one conference room.

Cost to fund the building, he said, comes from an economic development grant ($4,400,000) and from CSI funds ($4,119,800). The college began receiving bids to construct the building in January, with construction starting just a few weeks ago.

Mason said the future building will provide a home for the college’s environmental technology program. Others that will use the facility include Morris’s wind energy program, heating and air condition, manufacturing technology and drafting. It will have a general education classroom and one undesignated lab.

“We’ll move drafting over there because of its related functions,” Mason said. “And we’ll be able to free up a couple of classrooms in the Canyon Building.”

The college is studying the possibility of starting a food processing program that would train students for many of the area’s companies such as Amalgamated Sugar, Con Agra and Chobani, as well as work in the aquaculture industry, said Public Relations Director Doug Maughan. If that happens, those students might also use the facility.

Once complete, visitors can learn more about the center. In a bulleted list about the building, Maughan wrote, “The ATIC will feature an interactive display that allows visitors to see the mix of sources from which it will get its energy, including a solar array, wind energy and from the regular grid.”

Limited Activity Resumes at Utah Mine after Massive Slide

BINGHAM CANYON, Utah (AP) • For the first time since a massive landslide Wednesday night, limited activity has resumed at the Bingham Canyon Mine about 20 miles southwest of Salt Lake City.

But Kennecott Utah Copper spokesman Justin Jones says the activity involving “waste rock” is confined to an area that wasn’t affected by the slide and has nothing to do with the actual mining of ore.

He told the Deseret News that while the company is unsure when regular mining might resume, all employees have been instructed to show up for work as normal.

The open-pit copper mine closes for upgrades a couple of times of year, and employees are being assigned other duties as the mine now goes ahead with upgrades.

No one was injured in the slide that covered roughly two-thirds of the mile-deep pit’s floor.

Writer Who Covered Vietnam War Dies at 88

ASSOCIATED PRESS

Former Associated Press writer George McArthur, who was the quintessential foreign correspondent as he reported from the boulevards of Paris to the sands of the Middle East and jungles of Vietnam, has died. He was 88. His wife, Eva Kim McArthur said he died Friday night in a hospice in Fairfax County, Va., of complications from a stroke 17 days earlier. Born in the Deep South and caught up in the romance of journalism at an early age, McArthur was not one to let social taboos or politics interfere with a good story. As a campus reporter for the local newspaper, covering civil rights and racial tensions at the University of Georgia, he was called a "communist" by the state's segregationist governor, Herman Talmadge. McArthur replied, with typical sarcasm, that he felt honored. Later, while reporting for The Associated Press from Seoul during the Korean War, and from the Arab world and Indochina, McArthur cultivated Soviet and other communist-state reporters as friends, and the trust paid off with exclusive bits of inside information from the ongoing peace talks at Panmunjom. In one case, McArthur recalled recently, his source made the deal in exchange for a box of condoms from the PX. When Australian journalist Wilfred Burchett, an avowed communist, hosted American anti-war advocate Tom Hayden at his home in Cambodia, his friend McArthur was the only western reporter invited to their news conference.

Vaccine Developer Dies in Pa.

PHILADELPHIA (AP) • Dr. Hilary Koprowski, a pioneering virologist who developed the first successful oral vaccination for polio, has died. He was 96. Although not as well-known as fellow researchers Jonas Salk and Albert Sabin, Koprowski in 1950 became the first to show it was possible to vaccinate against polio, the crippling and sometimes fatal disease that's now all but eradicated. Koprowski's son, Christopher, said Saturday that his father liked the scientific recognition his work received without the celebrity of Salk and Sabin. "He enjoyed not having his scientific work disrupted," said Christopher Koprowski, chief of radiation oncology at Christiana Care Health System in Wilmington, Del. "Not that he was a modest individual, mind you."

Koprowski

Koprowski said his father had been sick for several months before dying Thursday in the same Wynnewood home he'd lived in since 1957. Hilary Koprowski self-administered the live-virus oral vaccine he developed before the 1950 clinical trial — about two years before Salk's injectable version using a dead form of the virus began testing with the backing of the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis, now the March of Dimes.

George W. Bush Becomes Grandfather

DALLAS (AP) • Former President George W. Bush has become a grandfather. His twin daughter Jenna Bush Hager gave birth to her first child, a daughter, on Saturday night in New York City. The former president announced the birth in a statement Sunday. The baby's name is Margaret Laura "Mila" Hager. Jenna Bush Hager is a contributing correspondent for the "Today" show. She's married to Henry Hager. The former president says the baby was named for her grandmothers. He says he and former first lady Laura Bush met their "beautiful granddaughter today," adding, "Jenna and Mila are healthy. And our family is elated." This is a big month for the family. The George W. Bush Presidential Center will be dedicated April 25 on the campus of Southern Methodist University in Dallas.

Pope Tells Priests To Practice What They Preach

ROME (AP) • Pope Francis has told priests to practice what they preach, saying the church's credibility is on the line. During a Mass Sunday to formally take possession of one of the Vatican basilicas in Rome, Francis said ordinary Catholics need to "see in our actions what they hear from our lips." Francis has made himself an example of a more humble and frugal church by refusing many of the trappings of the papacy, living in the Vatican hotel rather than the Apostolic Palace and wearing a simple white cassock of the papacy rather than fancy vestments and capes for formal occasions. Francis said: "Inconsistency on the part of pastors and the faithful between what they say and what they do, between word and manner of life, is undermining the church's credibility."

US Talks Up Diplomacy with Korea

North Korean officials take a hard line.

TOKYO (AP) • The United States and Japan opened the door Sunday to new nuclear talks with North Korea if the saber-rattling country lowered tensions and honored past agreements, even as it rejected South Korea's latest offer of dialogue as a "crafty trick."

U.S. Secretary of State John Kerry told reporters in Tokyo that North Korea would find "ready partners" in the United States if it began abandoning its nuclear program.

Japan's foreign minister, Fumio Kishida, also demanded a resolution to a dispute concerning Japanese citizens abducted decades ago by North Korean officials.

The diplomats seemed to point the way for a possible revival of the six-nation talks that have been suspended for four years.

China long pushed has for the process to resume without conditions. But the U.S. and allies South Korea and Japan fear rewarding North Korea for its belligerence and endless repetition of a cycle of tensions and failed talks that have prolonged the crisis.

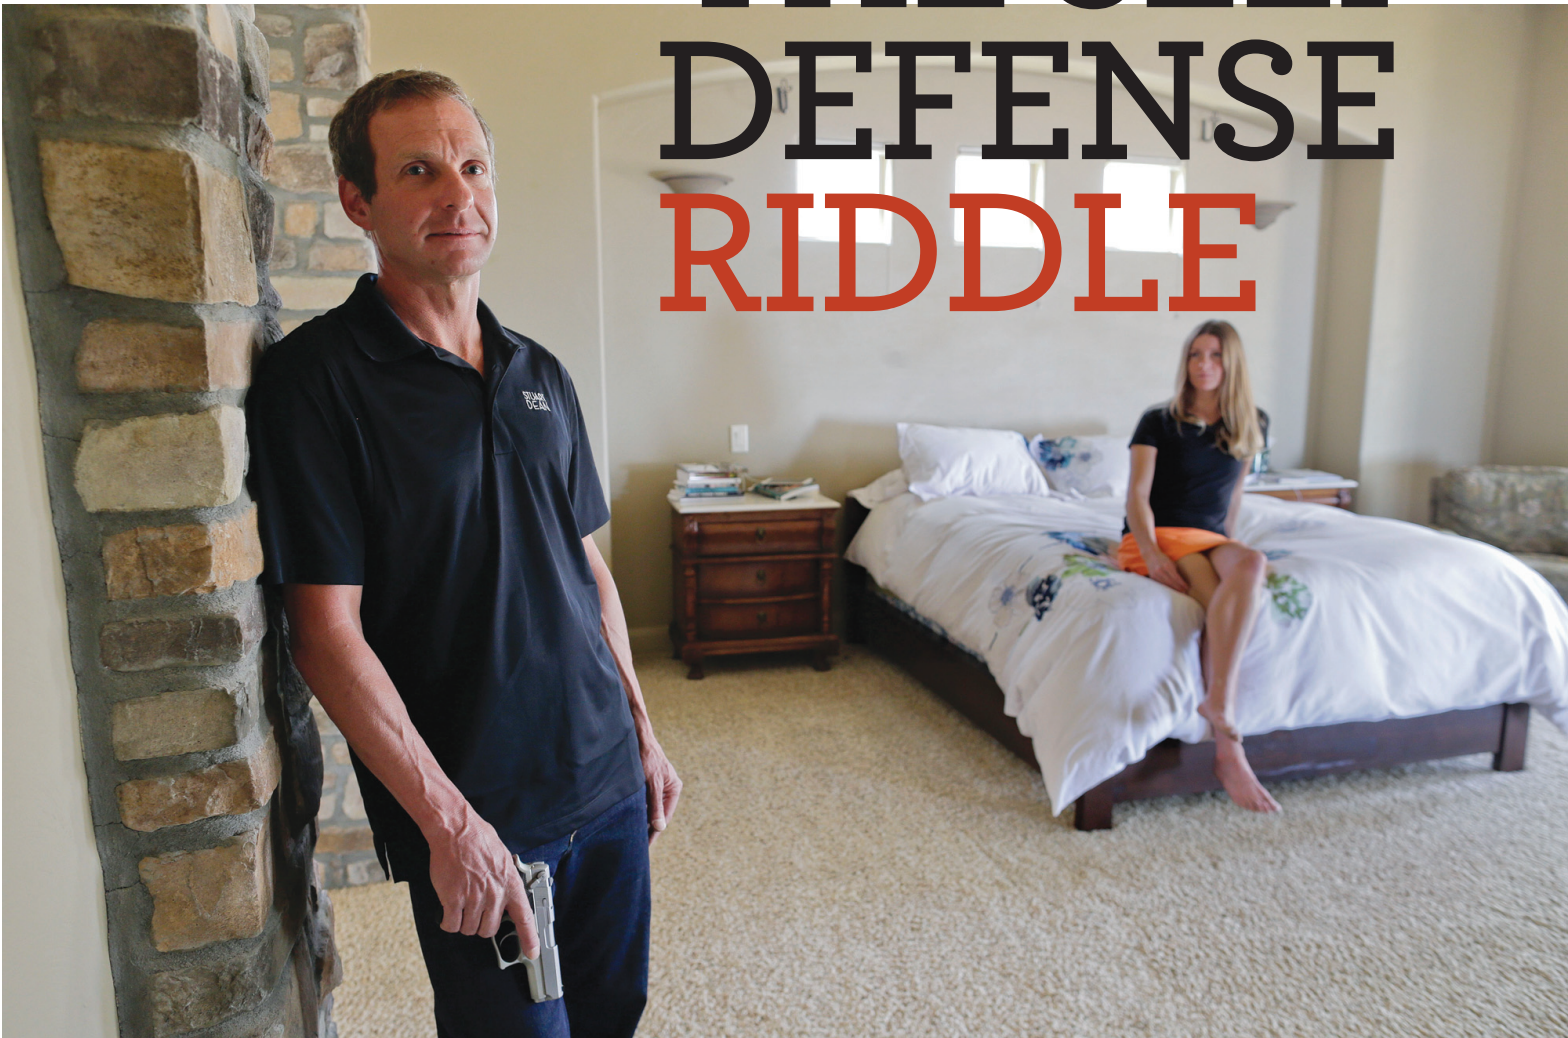

Kerry's message of openness to diplomacy was clear, however unlikely the chances appeared that North Korean leader Kim Jong Un's government would meet the American's conditions.

How do you keep guns from criminals without infringing on the ability of lawful gun owners?

THE SELF DEFENSE RIDDLE

ASSOCIATED PRESS
Eric Martin poses for a photo with his fiancée, Rachel Cieslewicz, at their home in St. George, Utah. In late March 2013, Martin chased down an intruder to their home and held him at gunpoint with the 9-mm Smith & Wesson handgun that he keeps in his bedside night stand, until the police arrived.

There is little clarity on how, exactly, Americans use guns to protect themselves in moments of jeopardy.

BY ADAM GELLER
Associated Press

The beam from the intruder's flashlight pierced the blackness of the bedroom at 4:45 a.m., sweeping across the down comforter and into Eric Martin's eyes. Outside, the streets of his Utah subdivision lay still and silent.

But as Martin rolled to the floor, reached into the nightstand drawer and drew out his 9 mm pistol, the 46-year-old executive's mind raced with calculation: Would this man harm Martin's fiancée or her son? Was an accomplice outside waiting? What if he pulled the trigger and hit the sleeping 8-year-old across the hall?

In the weeks since the Connecticut school massacre, some of the most intense debate has swirled around how to keep guns from criminals without infringing on the ability of lawful gun owners, like Martin, to protect themselves and their families.

Indeed, self-defense is now the top reason gun owners cite for having a firearm, a new survey shows, a figure that has nearly doubled since 1999.

But even after years of study, there is little clarity on how, exactly, Americans use guns to protect themselves in moments of jeopardy — or how often. Researchers known for sharp disagreement on the self-defense riddle say the answers may be shifting dramatically because of a steep drop in crime, an increase in guns and state laws giving owners more leeway to wield them.

Determining the absolute value of guns for self-defense is clouded by that complex dynamic of policy, judgment and circumstance. Still, both advocates of gun rights and of gun control understand the issue's importance in shaping the debate.

"When there's a threat outside your door, the police aren't going to be there ... the guys trained to save lives aren't going to be there," said Dom Raso, a commentator for the National Rifle Association's online news channel, in a video posted recently by the gun rights group.

And even while calling for new gun laws, President Barack Obama, too, acknowledged the legitimacy of self-defense in an April 8 speech in Hartford, Conn., when he recounted a conversation with his wife, Michelle, after campaigning in rural Iowa.

"Sometimes it would be miles between farms, let alone towns," Obama said. "And she said, 'You know, coming back, I can understand why somebody would want a gun for protection. If somebody drove up into the driveway and, Barack, you weren't home, the sheriff lived miles away, I might want that security.'"

With Americans split over whether guns more often save lives or jeopardize them, researchers have long parsed surveys of crime victims done in the 1990s, arguing over what the numbers mean.

But since then, crime has plummeted in the U.S. The rate of violent crimes including murder and assault fell by nearly half from 1992 to 2011, while the rate of reported property crime dropped 41 percent, data compiled by the Federal Bureau of Investigation show.

That drop has researchers considering the possibility, even the likelihood, that many fewer Americans are drawing firearms to protect themselves.

"I'm pretty confident that whatever the number is, it did go down ... because overall crime went down," said Gary Kleck, a Florida State University criminologist whose 1990s research, widely cited by gun rights activists, concluded that Americans drew their firearms in self-defense up to 2.5 million times a year. That translates to about 3 percent of all gun owners during the course of a single year.

But the drop in crime means there are far fewer occasions now for Americans to use guns for self-protection, Kleck said, making it likely that the number of annual self-defense usages of guns "should be about half as big now as they were back then, 20 years ago."

Even if such a drop were documented, it would still leave a scenario of relatively widespread use of guns for self-defense suggested by Kleck far at odds with research done by his critics.

The most outspoken has long been David Hemenway, director of the Harvard University Injury Control Research Center.

Likely Tax Cheats Flock to South, West

Study shows clusters of potential tax cheats in 5 metropolitan areas.

WASHINGTON (AP) • Worried the Internal Revenue Service might target you for an audit? You probably should be if you own a small business in one of the wealthy suburbs of Los Angeles.

You might also be wary if you're a small-business owner in one of dozens of communities near San Francisco, Houston, Atlanta or the District of Columbia.

A new study by the National Taxpayer Advocate used confidential IRS data to show large clusters of potential tax cheats in these five metropolitan areas. The IRS uses the information to target taxpayers for audits.

The taxpayer advocate, Nina Olsen, runs an independent office within the IRS. She got access to the data as part of an effort to learn more about why some taxpayers are more likely to cheat than others.

The study also looked at tax compliance in different industries, and found that people who own construction companies or real estate rental firms may be more likely to fudge their taxes than business owners in other fields.

Many of the communities identified by the study are very wealthy, including Beverly Hills and Newport Beach in California. Others are more middle class, such as New Carrollton, Md., a Washington suburb, and College Park, Ga., home to a section of Atlanta's massive airport.

Steve Rosansky, president and CEO of the Newport Beach Chamber of Commerce, said business owners in his city are probably targeted because many have high incomes. The likelihood of an audit does increase with income, according to IRS data.

"I imagine it's just a matter of them going where they think the money's at," Rosansky said in an interview. "I guess if I was running the IRS I'd probably do the same thing."

The study focused on small-business owners — sole proprietorships, to be specific — because they have more opportunity than the typical individual to cheat on their taxes. Many small businesses deal in cash while most individuals get paid in wages that are reported to the IRS.

The IRS only audits about 1 percent of tax returns each year, so the agency tries to pick returns that are most likely to yield additional tax money.

Rubio Says Immigration Deal Needs Tough Terms

WASHINGTON (AP) • A bipartisan deal on immigration legislation would need tough enforcement and even stricter penalties for those who came to the United States illegally, a leading Republican at the center of negotiations said Sunday.

Sen. Marco Rubio, who's among the eight senators writing a plan that's expected to come out Tuesday, tried to promote the framework for the emerging overhaul that would provide a path toward citizenship for those who came to the country illegally or overstayed their visit.

While the deal does include a long and difficult process for the 11 million individuals in question, Rubio insisted the proposal does not include an "amnesty" provision that fellow conservatives have called a deal-breaker.

"We're not awarding anybody anything. All we're doing is giving people the opportunity to eventually earn access to our new, improved and modernized legal immigration system," said Rubio. But even among his fellow Republicans, there are serious doubts.

"I'm not convinced," said Sen. Jeff Sessions, R-Ala. "I know Sen. Rubio's heart is exactly right. And I really respect the work of the 'Gang of Eight.' But they have produced legislation ... that will give amnesty now, legalize everyone that's here effectively today and then there's a promise of enforcement in the future."

Dog Fighting Ring, Deaths in Holbrook Damage Us All

If the poet John Donne and the novelist Ernest Hemingway were right, that “no man is an island,” that we should “send not to know/For whom the bell tolls/It tolls for thee,” then we all are damaged by the carnage at Holbrook.

The case has gotten some attention, but so horrific is it that national viral status would almost be expected. It was a case of terror on so many levels.

In Holbrook. Probably not many Idahoans easily could place Holbrook on a map. It is located about 10 miles east of Malad, in high open field country surrounded by mountains, country well away from population centers. I have driven through it a few times, but never had occasion to stop, partly because there was nothing to stop for, no visible commercial or public activity. It once was a true small town, but not an incorporated city, something places with as few as a dozen people have founded, and for decades has been more a clustering of houses. Population for the area is reported as 400; if you drive through, you may suspect that seems high.

Such places may be remote from metro areas, but the people there are not remote from each other. This isn't a matter of the vaunted small-town snoopiness, but the reality that with fewer people around, with fewer activities and distractions and less traffic, you see what goes on around you.

That's part of what makes the events there so disturbing.

The people who lived at the crime scene were not entirely distant from their community. On March 31, law enforcement officials said, the people in the house that became a crime scene hosted an Easter party. (As of last week, investigators were seeking out anyone who attended.) They might have seen something reportable.

There was plenty to see. A big pack of dogs was housed there — 64 pit pulls were found there about a week ago, with clear indications that at least many of them were being used for dog fighting. That activity, thanks to a recent change in Idaho law, is now a felony, and the reasons for that are not just because of the horrific effects on the dogs: It is often a good indicator that something has gone deeply wrong with the people involved, too. That was outside the house. Inside, investigators found 38 marijuana plants and enough cash to indicate significant trafficking was under way, another indicator of trouble.

What investigators also found, when they were called to the house a week ago, was the dead bodies of a father and son (Brent L. and Trent Jon Christensen), both formerly of Brigham City, Utah, and the girlfriend of the son. Two daughters of the girlfriend, the elder being 2 years old, fortunately were found uninjured.

That's how far it went before law enforcement was called in.

You can understand the holding off, the staying apart, to a point. People don't live in places like Holbrook if they want to be in an urban center and be tightly hamstrung by social rules. People in places like that want to be left alone.

But there comes a point when intervention really is needed. Even in Holbrook.

Five Myths about Taxes

“I paid my income tax today!” So went one of Irving Berlin's lesser-known patriotic jingles. “I never felt so proud before/To be right there with the millions more/Who paid their income tax today!” Few share Berlin's enthusiasm, as grumbling about the income tax reaches a crescendo on April 15. Let's topple some tall tales about taxes before writing checks to — or getting checks from — the dreaded Internal Revenue Service.

1. The income tax is a big-government Democratic scheme.

The first income tax in the United States was enacted under the first Republican president, Abraham Lincoln. Before the Civil War, Republicans were the party of big government, supporting high tariffs, infrastructure spending and centralized bank regulations. Once the war began, Treasury Secretary Salmon Chase feared that mounting deficits would spur inflation. Banks, which were funding the war, demanded action to ensure U.S. solvency, and tariffs, the country's main source of revenue, had reached a peak. “Chase has no money, and he tells me he can raise no more,” Lincoln complained in 1862.

Initially 3 percent on incomes above $600 and 5 percent on incomes above $10,000, the income tax was intended to assuage class resentment of industrialists getting rich by supplying the Union. The tax was repealed after the Civil War, reenacted in 1894, declared unconstitutional in 1895, then reinstated with Theodore Roosevelt's support. Republican William Howard Taft backed the ratification process that led to the Sixteenth Amendment, adopted in 1913. Democrat Woodrow Wilson signed the tax into law that year — and Democrats have been more inclined than Republicans to raise rates since.

Steven Weisman

The Washington Post

2. The income tax dampens work and entrepreneurship.

In his 1990 autobiography, Ronald Reagan recalled that his longtime obsession with cutting taxes began in the 1940s, when he would stop making movies each year when his soaring marginal tax rate made it not worth the effort. Most economists agree that for many individuals and businesses, extremely high taxes discourage some economic activities. But how high must taxes be to have that effect? Liberal economists argue that taxes don't discourage work until marginal rates reach 60 percent or 70 percent. Conservatives disagree, saying that taxes must fall for the economy to rise.

Whether tax cuts generally spur economic growth and tax increases generally dampen it is debatable, however. Economic expansion was significant in the 1950s, when tax rates were at historic highs. Tax cuts signed by John F. Kennedy and Reagan were followed by sustained growth. But growth that followed tax increases under Presidents George H.W. Bush and Bill Clinton was greater than after George W. Bush's tax cuts.

The nonpartisan Congressional Research Service reported in December that, for upper-income taxpayers, at least — “job creators” — cutting taxes has “little association with saving, investment, or productivity growth.” That report was revised after Republicans attacked an earlier version, but its conclusion was unchanged.

3. Taxes became less progressive because of the Bush and Reagan tax cuts.

The tax code is indeed less progressive at the top because of falling rates for the wealthy. The top marginal rate fell from 91 percent in the 1950s to 70 percent in the 1960s and 1970s, and again in the Reagan era to a low of 28 percent. It went back up to 39.6 percent in the 1990s, down to 35 percent after tax cuts under George W. Bush, and is now back up to 39.6 percent for families making more than $450,000.

But whether the tax code as a whole is less progressive is unclear. That is because the drop in the rate paid by those at the top is offset by dramatic declines in taxes paid by lower-income households. Many low-income families receive income supplements from the Earned Income Tax Credit, the child credit and other targeted benefits.

“Advocates of progressive taxes have both lost and won recent tax battles,” Eugene Steuerle, co-founder of Urban Institute-Brookings Tax Policy Center, told me. “Middle- and lower-income classes always get some share of tax cuts but little or no share of tax increases, helping to maintain roughly the same progressivity in the federal tax system throughout most of the post-1980 period.”

4. The U.S. corporate tax — the highest in the world — makes the United States less competitive.

The U.S. corporate tax rate is 35 percent. When added to state and local corporate taxes, this is indeed the highest in the world. But the effective rate, or the rate corporations pay after taking advantage of loopholes, is lower — 27.1 percent, or about the same as other advanced economies, according to the Congressional Research Service.

Deficit Simpson-Bowles commission said last year that the tax “hurts America's ability to compete.” (A study by my colleagues at the Peterson Institute for International Economics uses a different calculation to make the same point.) But the taxes paid by U.S. corporations are tiny compared with their peers around the world — only 1.9 percent of the national economy, compared with an average of 2.8 percent for other advanced countries — partly because of the proliferation of limited partnerships and other businesses not subject to the tax. In fact, less than half of U.S. business income is generated by corporations subject to the tax, down from 80 percent in 1980.

5. Forty-seven percent of Americans pay no taxes.

The Tax Policy Center's estimate that 46.4 percent of households pay no federal income tax blew up in the face of 2012 GOP presidential contender Mitt Romney after he cited it in a talk to donors. But the center also noted that nearly two-thirds of households that paid no income tax did pay federal payroll taxes for Social Security and Medicare. In addition, more than half of those who paid neither income nor payroll taxes are elderly; more than a third have an income under $20,000; and everyone who drives, smokes or drinks pays federal taxes on gasoline, cigarettes or beer.

Citizens for Tax Justice, an advocacy group, found that if all federal, state and local taxes are accounted for, the poorest 20 percent of Americans pays 17.4 percent of its income in taxes while the wealthiest 20 percent pays about 30 percent. Given Romney's disdain for the 47 percent, it's ironic that one reason poorer Americans pay fewer taxes is that Republicans added tax credits for them in order to get Democratic votes for overall tax cuts of 2001 and 2003.

Chevron Slapped with Violation Notice over Diesel Spill

ASSOCIATED PRESS

SALT LAKE CITY • State regulators have slapped Chevron with a violation notice over a March fuel spill near a northern Utah bird refuge.

The Utah Division of Water Quality is asking Chevron to provide a report on cleanup operations and a response plan for the pipeline rupture that leaked about 21,000 gallons of diesel fuel.

The split in the pipeline running between Salt Lake City and Spokane, Wash., spilled diesel at Willard Bay State Park and near the Bear River Migratory Bird Refuge.

Division Director Walt Baker said his agency is working with the Attorney General's Office to ensure Chevron is held accountable for the spill and its impacts.

"This release has had a significant effect on a fragile ecosystem," he said. "The popular bird-watching and recreational area has been closed because of this spill."

State law gives the company 30 days to respond to the violation notice and 60 days to address the compliance requirements. Water quality officials then would determine any state fines.

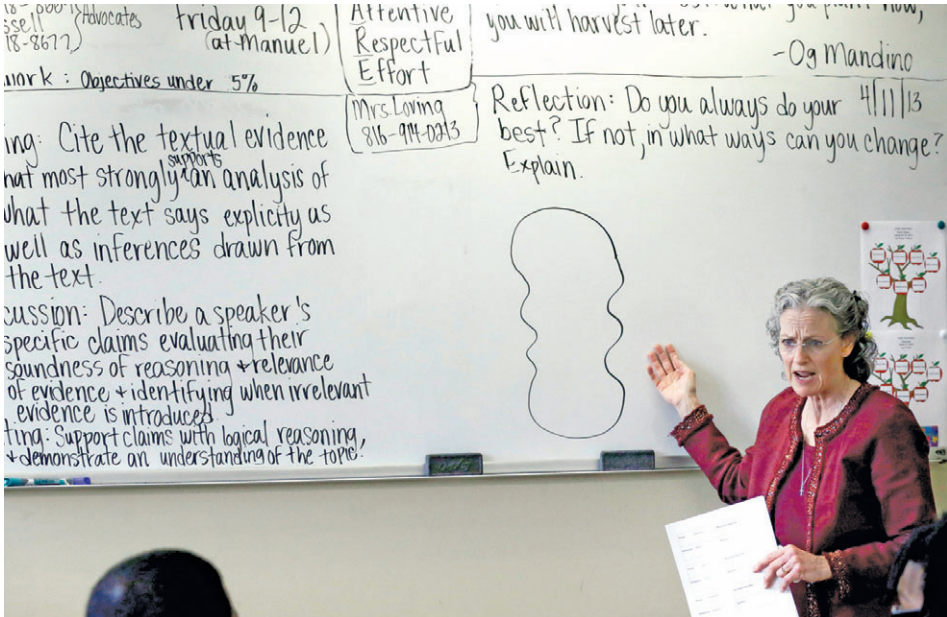

"We are committed to cooperating with the Utah Division of Water Quality and responding to the notice in the required time frame," Chevron spokesman Gareth Johnstone said in an email.

Federal regulators, who fined Chevron nearly $500,000 for two Utah spills in 2010, haven't determined penalties for the company's latest petroleum leak.

The 8-inch-diameter pipeline failed March 18, spilling fuel in the marshes. State officials credit a beaver dam for holding back much of the fuel, although it left a family of beavers with petroleum burns. The beavers are being nursed back to health at a wildlife rehabilitation center.

The spill also has been blamed for the deaths of a pair of wood ducks as well as some frogs and minnow-like fish, The Salt Lake Tribune reported. Migratory birds have been scared away from the area by the presence of more than 100 cleanup workers.

State officials said some of the spilled fuel is seeping into groundwater and making its way beyond containment booms at Willard Bay State Park. They have said a cleanup could take months instead of weeks as originally thought, leaving the park indefinitely closed.

Some States Dropping GED as Test Price Spikes

BY HEATHER HOLLINGSWORTH

Associated Press

KANSAS CITY, Mo. • Several dozen states are looking for an alternative to the GED high school equivalency test because of concerns that a new version coming out next year is more costly and will no longer be offered in a pencil and paper format.

The responsibility for issuing high school equivalency certificates or diplomas rests with states, and they've relied on the General Education Development exam since soon after the test was created to help returning World War II veterans.

But now 40 states and the District of Columbia are participating in a working group that's considering what's available besides the GED, and two test makers are hawking new exams.

"It's a complete paradigm shift because the GED has been the monopoly. It's been the only thing in town for high school equivalency testing. It's kind of like Kleenex at this point," said Amy Riker, director of high school equivalency testing for Educational Testing Service, which developed one of the alternative tests.

Last month, New York, Montana and New Hampshire announced they were switching to a new high school equivalency exam, and California officials began looking into amending regulations to drop the requirement that the state only use the GED test. Missouri has requested bids from test makers and plans to make a decision this month. Several others states, including Massachusetts, Maine, Indiana and Iowa, are making plans to request information about alternative exams.

Meanwhile, Tennessee and New Jersey are exploring offering more than one test.

Amy Riker, director of high school equivalency testing for Educational Testing Service, which developed one of the alternative tests

"The national situation is definitely fluid," said Tom Robbins, Missouri's director of adult education and high school equivalency, noting that other states plan to use the GED for now and bid later.

The pushback comes as GED Testing Service prepares to introduce a new version of the exam in January. In the first revamp since for-profit Pearson Vue Testing acquired a joint ownership interest in the nonprofit Washington-based GED Testing Service, the cost of the test is doubling to $120. That's led to a case of sticker shock for test takers, nonprofits and states. Some states subsidize some or all of the expense of the exam, while others add an administrative fee. The new GED test would cost $140 to take in Missouri if the state sticks with it.

Kirk Proctor, of the Missouri Career Center, said the organization is looking for a way to cover the increased test cost for students participating in a GED preparation and job training program he oversees. He said his students can't come up with $140, noting they need help paying for the current, cheaper test.

"A lot of them are just barely making it," he said. "Transportation is a challenge. Eating is a challenge. For them, coming up with $140 for an assessment, it's basically telling them, 'Forget about ever getting this part of your life complete.'"

One program participant, Nicole Williams, a 21-year-old Kansas City mother of three, said she was hopeful she'd pass the GED test soon so she could avoid the electronic version. With it, she said, "you've got to learn how to type, use the computer, plus your GED. That's three things instead of just trying to focus all on your GED test."

Body of Missing Fisherman Recovered from Utah Lake

ASSOCIATED PRESS

LONDON, Utah • The body of a fisherman who had been missing for two weeks has been recovered from Utah Lake.

Utah County sheriff's deputies say the body of 37-year-old Tam Huynh of West Valley City was found Saturday floating in the lake some 300 yards west of the Linden marina.

His brother was at the marina Saturday morning when he saw what appeared to be a body in the water. He called authorities, who retrieved the body.

Investigators say it appears that Huynh drowned, but it'll take several weeks for a medical examiner to pinpoint the cause of death.

Authorities say there was no sign of foul play.

A search for Huynh began after his boat was found empty in shallow water March 30. His truck was also found near the lake.

Guns

He contends Kleck's survey vastly overinflates the number of times people use guns to defend themselves — for example, by estimating thousands during the course of break-ins, though many of those homeowners either didn't own guns or remained asleep during the crime. Kleck, in turn, says Hemenway and others depend on surveys that significantly undercount self-defense gun use.

Hemenway, also relying on 1990s surveys, concluded Americans were then wielding guns for self-defense about 200,000 times annually.

Others researchers, analyzing the federal government's National Crime Victimization Survey, say the number of times guns were drawn for self-defense was even lower, about 80,000 times a year.

But Hemenway, too, is rethinking his estimate. If declining crime was the only change, he said, it would be reasonable to expect a parallel decrease in the number of times Americans use guns to defend themselves.

"You certainly have less opportunities to use a gun in self-defense appropriately," he said. "The problem is, over long periods of time, so many other things may be changing."

Since the 1990s, 18 states have passed stand-your-ground laws. At the same time, many more states eased the ability of gun owners to legally carry concealed weapons. The number of guns Americans own has also jumped to about 300 million, although researchers say the percentage of households with guns has declined.

Today, more gun owners than ever — 48 percent according to a March poll by the Pew Research Center — cite self-protection as their primary reason for having a firearm. That has nearly doubled since 1999, and now far surpasses the declining number of gun owners who say they own a firearm primarily for hunting.

The figure confirms personal security as a major concern for most Americans, reflected in attitudes about guns, said Michael Dimock, director of Pew's political polling unit.

"On both sides of this, the safety issue is front and center," he said. "For most people, this is not a casual choice. There's a sense of safety that gun owners associate with having that gun and there's a clear sense of risk that non-gun owners associate with guns."

Demands for gun control have led many gun owners to point to the value firearms play in allowing Americans to protect themselves, a position Martin, the Utah homeowner, agrees with based on first-hand experience.

When a robber broke into his home in St. George before dawn in late March, he and fiancée Rachel Cieslewicz were in bed. Her son, Canyon, was asleep in a room across from their doorway.

Martin says he trained to use a gun when he was in his early 20s and has long kept one for protection. Before the break-in, he had thought carefully many times about how, precisely, he would react in such a situation.

But in the dark, gun in hand, judgment and action were instantaneous. Even with the intruder directly in front of him, Martin says he realized he could not fire because of the chance the bullet might pierce the wall and hit the sleeping 8-year-old.

"I knew I needed to protect Rachel. I knew I needed to protect Canyon," he says.

When Martin pulled back on the gun's slide to load a bullet into the chamber, the man in the doorway bolted and Martin gave chase. Seconds later they were outside, but as the robber tried to escape, he tripped and fell. Martin, taking position behind a wall, trained his gun on him and ordered him to stay down, threatening to shoot when the man moved. That's where they were when police cruisers arrived.

In the days since, scores of people, including police, have commended Martin for his cool-headed reaction. Martin and Cieslewicz say they have no doubt about the gun's self-defense value. But he acknowledges the complexity of the calculus.

"What would have happened if the guy hadn't fallen, tripped over the stuff he was stealing, and I hadn't gotten him pinned down?" he said. "Or if he'd run down the street 50 feet in front of me?" and Martin had opened fire?

"Is that self-defense or is that me just trying to let off a little bit of steam at that point? That changes the whole dynamic of everything"

Boy Feared Dead after Falling in Glacier Crevasse

FAIRBANKS, Alaska (AP) • A 9-year-old boy on a snowmobile is feared dead after falling an estimated 200 feet into a crevasse on an Alaskan glacier.

Climbers descended into the hole and spotted the snowmobile driven by Shjon Brown of Fairbanks.

The Fairbanks Daily News-Miner reported that the boy was with his father Saturday riding in the Hoodoo Mountains off the Richardson Highway between Delta Junction and Glennallen.

They were about five miles northwest of the Arctic Man Classic, a race involving snowmobiles and skiers or snowboarders.

The boy was riding with his father and others at about 3:30 p.m. and his father took a break to watch from a hillside.

He told troopers that Shjon, pronounced Shawn, rode around a small mound and did not reappear. His father went to investigate and saw the crevasse.

The hole was reported as a "moulin," a hole formed when water of the glacier surface erodes the ice.

The boy was wearing a helmet and goggles.

Climbers from North American Outdoor Institute and an emergency room doctor reached the bottom of the crevasse.

Elk Group Donates to Survival Study

HAMILTON, Mont. (AP) • The Rocky Mountain Elk Foundation is donating $38,000 to help with an elk survival study in the southern portion of the Bitterroot Valley.

The Ravalli Republic reports the Missoula-based nonprofit conservation organization announced the donation Friday.

The elk survival study now in its third and final year is a partnership between Montana Fish, Wildlife and Parks and the University of Montana.

Researchers hope to determine why there is a low elk calf survival rate in the region and what is killing them.

Death Toll from China's New Strain of Bird Flu Rises to 13

ASSOCIATED PRESS

BEIJING • Two more people have died in China from a new strain of bird flu, raising the death toll from the virus to 13, state media reported Sunday.

The official Xinhua News Agency said the two deaths were reported in Shanghai and that three new cases were also confirmed in the financial hub. A total of 11 new cases were reported Sunday — including two in a central province that previously had been unaffected. In all, 60 cases of the virus, known as H7N9, have been reported in China.

The two cases reported Sunday in central Henan province, which is next to Beijing, followed an announcement Saturday that a 7-year-old girl had become the first person in the capital to be infected with the virus. All previous reported cases were in Shanghai and other eastern areas of China.

A World Health Organization official said Sunday that it wasn't surprising that the virus had spread to Beijing.

How to Survive Tax Day

BY MELISSA DAVLIN
mdavlin@magicvalley.com

TWIN FALLS • Tax day has arrived.

Caught off-guard? Here's what you need to know.

If I'm Filing My Taxes Myself, Where Can I Go with Questions?

Visit irs.gov, or head to the Idaho State Tax Commission Twin Falls Office at 440 Falls Ave. They're open 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. You can also give them a call at 800-972-7660.

Is It Too Late to Get Help Filing My Taxes?

No. If you're an individual or small business owner with a fairly straight-forward tax return, you can go to a tax preparer, said Sarah Krause, manager at Liberty Tax Services in Twin Falls. If you have a more complex tax filing, such as multiple exemptions, Krause recommends heading to an accountant. Accountants are better equipped to navigate things like exemptions and sorting through multiple receipts, she said. (If you have to go to an accountant this late, you'll likely have to file for an extension, said Deborah Silver of Hayes & Silver CPAs in Twin Falls. Most accountants are booked solid right now.)

How Much Time Should I Plan to Wait in Line at the Post Office?

If recent years give any indication, don't worry about the long lines that used to define tax day. In April 2012, then-postmaster Bill Reese told the Times-News the post office has seen a decrease in tax day traffic, largely because of online filing and professional tax filing services.

What Happens if I Can't File By Today?

You can file for an extension. Go to irs.gov and look for Form 4868. That gives you until Oct. 15 to file, though you must still estimate the amount you owe and pay that amount on time.

What Happens if I Don't Have the Money to Pay My Taxes?

File an extension, said Deborah Silver of Hayes & Silver CPAs in Twin Falls. The penalty for not filing at all is higher than the penalty for filing for an extension and not paying on time.

What Are the Post Office Hours?

Magic Valley post offices aren't open late. But if you can't get there before close, don't worry. While Twin Falls doesn't have extended post office hours, the lobby at the Fairfield Street office will be open after the post office closes, said postmaster John Wiest. In the lobby, you'll find an automated postal center with everything you need to file taxes. As long as it's in by midnight Monday, you're in good shape. To look up your local post office hours, visit usps.com.

Los Angeles Priest Ministered Despite Abuse Conviction

BY GILLIAN FLACCUS
Associated Press

LOS ANGELES • When the Rev. John Anthony Salazar arrived in Tulia, Texas, in 1991, he was warmly welcomed by the Roman Catholic community tucked in the Texas Panhandle. What his new parishioners didn't know was he'd been hired out of a treatment program for pedophile priests — and that he'd been convicted for child molestation and banned from the Archdiocese of Los Angeles for life.

Over the next 11 years, Salazar would be accused of abusing four more children and young men in Texas, including an 18-year-old parishioner who suffered teeth marks on his genitals. Today he awaits trial on one molestation charge, while his accusers and former followers seek a way to move forward.

Many details of Salazar's past are contained in a confidential personnel file that was among 120 such files the Archdiocese of Los Angeles made public this year after a legal battle with abuse victims. But those records tell only part of the story.

On Tuesday, attorneys return to court to argue over the release of records for about 80 priests, including Salazar, who belonged to Roman Catholic religious orders that kept their own personnel files on accused clergymen. The hearing will address in what form and when those files will be made public, and involves orders such as the Jesuits, Salesians, Vincentians and Dominicans.

The documents are critical to understanding the full scope of the clergy abuse scandal, said Ray Boucher, who represents Los Angeles-area victims.

As part of a separate settlement, the Franciscans were forced last year to release confidential records on their members who'd been accused of molestation. The papers revealed a culture of abuse that affected generations of students at the seminary dedicated to training future Franciscans. Among the documents was a "sexual autobiography" penned by one priest as part of a therapy assignment that spelled out how he groomed children for molestation from a boys' choir that he founded.

"These orders really have a primary role and responsibility in the transfer of pedophile priests," Boucher said. About 25 percent of priests accused of abuse in Los Angeles belonged to religious orders. Many had been loaned out to the archdiocese to help with a perpetual shortage of priests. In some cases, Boucher said, the orders may have sent known pedophiles to work in the archdiocese in the same way that the larger church has been accused of shuffling around problem priests.

J. Michael Hennigan, an archdiocese attorney representing more than a dozen orders involved in Tuesday's hearing, said the orders operate as separate entities from the archdiocese in financial and disciplinary matters.

"I don't think even practicing Catholics have a very clear understanding of where the lines of authority are drawn," he said.

Salazar belonged to the Piarist Fathers, a tiny order that focuses on educating poor children and administers several parishes in East Los Angeles. The order, Boucher said, still has records on Salazar that could fill in holes in his archdiocese file, which begins in 1986 when Salazar first was charged with abuse. The priest was assigned to work in the archdiocese two years earlier.

Salazar was accused of molesting children from East LA parishes, sometimes during camping trips and at a Piarist residential house, according to notes in his archdiocese file. After Salazar was arrested, the Piarists solicited character letters from his fellow priests and contacted an attorney who had helped another accused priest strike a deal to serve part of his sentence in a residential facility.

The Piarists did not return calls and emails to their LA parish or their headquarters in Miami.

Salazar pleaded guilty in 1987 to one count of oral copulation and one count of lewd or lascivious acts with a child for molesting two altar boys, ages 13 and 14. He served three years of a six-year prison term before being sent in 1990 to a residential program in New Mexico that treated pedophile priests. He was also required to register as a sex offender.

One year later, the Diocese of Amarillo hired Salazar and assigned him to a vast, rural parish in the Panhandle while he was still on parole.

Los Angeles Cardinal Roger Mahony, who has been criticized for not doing more to stop abuse when he led the archdiocese, acted swiftly with Salazar. He revoked the priest's right to work within the archdiocese in 1986, the same day he learned of molestation accusations.

However, Mahony was unable to prevent Salazar's transfer to Texas because he belonged to the Piarists and ultimately fell outside of the cardinal's authority. Mahony did write Bishop Leroy Matthiesen in Amarillo to warn him of Salazar's conviction but couldn't dissuade his colleague.

Space Mountain Closed as Disney Reviews Safety

ASSOCIATED PRESS

ANAHEIM, Calif. • Three rides at Disneyland, including the famous Space Mountain roller coaster, were temporarily closed over the weekend as the company reviewed its employee safety protocols after citations from state regulators.

The citations were received Friday from the California Division of Occupational Safety and Health, according to Disneyland Resorts spokeswoman Suzi Brown.

The closures Saturday of Space Mountain, the Matterhorn Bobsleds and Soarin' Over California were voluntary and were made out of an abundance of caution, Brown said Sunday.

"We constantly strive to maintain a safe work environment for our cast members and contractors — and we are reviewing certain protocols," she said.

The citations were related to an incident in November when a contracted worker was injured while performing maintenance on the exterior of the Space Mountain attraction.

Disneyland failed to adequately correct "known fall hazards" that existed on the exterior of Space Mountain, according to a description of the citation on the Cal/OSHA website.

"Furthermore, Disneyland Resort failed to have approved anchorages or approved tie-backs for contract employees to attach to when performing scheduled exterior building maintenance," the description reads.

McReynolds, Bennett Start Off Strong in District V Rodeo

BY DIANE PHILBIN
dphilbin@magicvalley.com

GLENNS FERRY • Led by a strong showing by the Gooding cowboys and cowgirls, District V kicked off the season in Glenns Ferry.

Kortney McReynolds set the tone, posting wins in barrels and goats, a second in breakaway and goats, and a fourth and fifth in poles vaulting her to the top of the girls overall standings and first in goats.

On the boys side, Brogan Bennett had a pair of wins in steer wrestling, a second in team roping with partner Wyatt Williams and a ninth in calf roping to move to the top of the boys overall standing. He also leads the steer wrestling.

Cassie Bahe had three wins with two coming in breakaway and another in team roping with Cody Ruby from Valley. Bailey Gough recorded two firsts in poles. Ruby was the only successful cowboy to secure a score in the rough stock events with a 57-point ride in saddle bronc.

District V moves to Gooding next weekend for performances at 7 p.m. on Friday and 2 p.m. on Saturday.

Smith, Bench Top Point Gainers at District VI Rodeo

BY DIANE PHILBIN
dphilbin@magicvalley.com

RUPERT • Cara Vierstra from Filer and Coy Surret from Castleford remained at the top of the overall standings in District VI after two rodeos in Rupert, but it was a couple of “Bailey’s” that were the top point gainers over the weekend.

For the cowgirls, Bailey Smith from Oakley had the best overall weekend, gathering 52 points. Smith started out strong on Friday with a first in breakaway, a third in goats and a fourth in barrels. On Saturday, the Oakley senior won the barrels, placed second in breakaway, ninth in goats and fifth in team roping with Kelsey Wright from Kimberly. Smith sits third in the overall standings and is tied for first with Raylee Reeves from Minico in barrels.

Bailey Bench from Oakley added points in each of his five events, totaling 51 without a first place finish. The senior was second and third in bareback, added two second places in steer wrestling, a third in tie down and teamed with sister, Saige, for a third in team roping. Bench is second in the overall standings and tops bareback and saddle bronc riding.

CSI Pitcher Nolan Stouder sits for a portrait on Saturday in Twin Falls.

‘I Came Here to Win’

Former Wendell star Nolan Stouder uses his disciplined work ethic he developed while working on his family’s farm when he was younger to help elevate his fellow Golden Eagles while on the mound.

BY NICK RULAND
nruland@magicvalley.com

TWIN FALLS • Only former three-sport Wendell star Nolan Stouder knows where his mind took him, or perhaps more appropriately, where he took his mind in the fifth inning on the afternoon of March 29th.

The College of Southern Idaho sophomore was on what he calls the “lonely island” – the pitching mound, where he was turning a mole-hill into a mountain.

Two walks were piled on an error. The three-batter sequence that followed may be the turning point in the Golden Eagles season. CSI had lost 12 of 14 games. It had lost that day to Western Nevada and was trailing 1-0 in game two.

“I think at that point we were so sick of losing,” Stouder said.

The bases were loaded. No one was out. Coach Boomer Walker was “one pitch away” from relieving Stouder, he revealed afterward.

Stouder’s not used to getting pulled off a task, work unfinished.

Growing up as a farm hand on his father and uncles’ 3,000 cattle dairy during the summer, Stouder “would do all the work no one else wanted to do,” he said of his decade of labor.

His dad, Gary Stouder, became a partner in the farm at 25, joining his two brothers, and his father, who established it. Gary Stouder was once a high school baseball player who regrets not pursuing his baseball dream. He long ago planted the wisdom that had been sprouting in son’s mind for years.

The Golden Eagles were going to reap a bit of the harvest.

“Any time he gets into a jam, I have a lot of confidence he will get out of it,” said Gary Stouder, who was an assistant pitching coach for Wendell from Nolan Stouder’s sophomore through senior seasons. “He is extremely mentally tough. He holds his emotions in, because you never know who is watching. So control your emotions out there.”

“A kid like Nolan has come from a situation where (he) has had to work his whole life out there on the farm,” Walker said. “For kids, it helps build some toughness, and Nolan, for sure, is always a very competitive, tough kid.”

CSI Coach Boomer Walker

Creating a scene, maybe teammates would lose their focus; maybe the opponent would be emboldened, like carnivore to weakened prey.

Perhaps there is something to the masculine ideal – maybe by holding his emotions in he could channel them.

“I was upset that inning after getting the bases loaded,” Stouder said. “I was frustrated after my last start against (Salt Lake Community College). I want to give my team the best chance to win. I had to buckle down and make some good pitches I guess. That situation slowed me down more. I think that inning was the best I could have reacted.”

Stouder, a devastating two-seam sinker-ball when he is in the strike zone, went to his off-speed pitches and with a little luck, he said, struck out the side.

“The mood in our dugout really changed after that,” Stouder.

CSI would walk off Western Nevada twice in the next 24 hours. They haven’t lost a game since the start.

“A kid like Nolan has come from a situation where (he) has had to work his whole life out there on the farm,” Walker said. “For kids, it helps build some toughness, and Nolan, for sure, is always a very competitive, tough kid.”

Stouder transferred from Point Loma Nazarene University in San Diego. He liked it there. He had friends.

But Stouder was coming out of the bullpen. He only made 10 appearances last season.

Stouder wants a chance to make baseball a living. He needed to pitch.

He came back home and threw a bullpen session for CSI assistant coach Nick Aiello.

It was a wrap. He signed shortly after.

If Stouder can cut down on his walks – he’s averaging more than one for every two innings pitched – he’d have a chance to play professional baseball, he and his coach said.

“Not a lot of guys can make the ball sink like he does,” Walker said. “With that, it’s harder to

Coy Surrett from Castleford netted 37 points that was good enough to strengthen his position at the top with a win and second in tie down and a first in team roping with brother, Cody.

Double winners were Reeves who posted first-place times in barrels and poles and Bandee Tubbs from Filer finishing first in goats and breakaway.

Tegan Alger from Filer took the win in tie down on Saturday and added two second place finishes in team roping with partner Jaylee Stimpson from Minico.

After a weekend break, District VI returns to action in Burley on April 26-27.

THE MASTERS

ASSOCIATED PRESS

Adam Scott, of Australia, celebrates after making a birdie putt on the second playoff hole to win the Masters golf tournament on Sunday in Augusta, Ga.

Australian Adam Scott beats Angel Cabrera in playoff at Augusta.

ASSOCIATED PRESS

AUGUSTA, Ga. • Adam Scott finished the job this time, and put an end to more than a half-century of Australian misery at the Masters.

With the two biggest putts of his career, Scott holed a 20-footer for birdie on the 18th hole of regulation that put him into a playoff with Angel Cabrera, and then won his first major championship Sunday with a 12-footer for birdie on the second extra hole.

“We like to think we’re the best at everything. Golf is a big sport at home, and this is the one thing in golf we hadn’t been able to achieve,” Scott said. “It’s amazing that it’s my destiny to be the first Australian to win. It’s incredible.”

Scott leaned back and thrust his arms in the air after the putt dropped on the 10th hole, a celebration for all of Australia and personal redemption for himself.

It was only last summer when Scott threw away the British Open by bogeying on his last four holes to lose by one shot to Ernie Els. The 32-year-old handled that crushing defeat with dignity and pledged to finish stronger given another chance. “Next time — I’m sure there will be a next time — I can do a better job of it,” he said that day.

Scott was close to perfect, and he had to be with Cabrera delivering some brilliance of his own.

Moments after Scott made his 20-foot birdie putt on the 18th hole for a 3-under 69 to take a one-shot lead — “C”- mon, Aussie!” he screamed — Cabrera answered with an approach that plopped down 3 feet from the cup, one of the greatest shots under the circumstances. That gave him an easy birdie and a 2-under 70. They finished at 9-under 279.

They both chipped close for par on the 18th in the first playoff hole, and Cabrera’s 15-foot birdie putt on the 10th grazed the right side of the cup.

With his long putter anchored against his chest, Scott’s putt was true all the way. The Masters had been the only major that never had a champion use a long putter. Scott’s win means four of the last six major champions used a putter pressed against their belly or chest, a stroke that might be banned in 2016.

What mattered more to Scott was that the Masters had been the only major an Australian had never won. He was among dozens of golfers who routinely rose in the early hours of Monday morning for the telecast, only to watch a horror show. The leading character was Greg Norman, who had four good chances to win, none better than when he blew a six-shot lead on the last day to Nick Faldo in 1996.

There was Jim Ferrier in 1952 and Bruce Crampton 20 years later. Scott and Jason Day tied for second just two years ago. Norman, though, was the face of Aussie failures at the Masters, and Scott paid him tribute in Butler Cabin before he slipped on that beautiful green jacket.

“Australian is a proud sporting nation, and this is one notch in the belt we never got,” Scott said. “It’s amazing that it came down to me today. But there’s one guy who inspired a nation of golfers, and that’s Greg Norman. He’s been incredible to me and all the great golfers. Part of this belongs to him.”

Scott was just as gracious in victory as he was last summer at Royal Lytham & St. Annes. He and Cabrera flashed a thumbs-up to each other after their shots into the 10th hole in the playoff, and they walked off the 10th green with their arms around each other when it was over.

“Such is golf,” Cabrera said. “Adam is a good winner.”

MLB ROUNDUP

Buchholz No-hit Bid Ends in 8th, Sox top Rays 5-0

ASSOCIATED PRESS

BOSTON • Clay Buchholz didn’t allow a hit until Kelly Johnson’s broken-bat single leading off the eighth inning, and the Boston Red Sox beat the Tampa Bay Rays 5-0 on Sunday.

Buchholz, who threw a no-hitter in just his second career start in 2007, allowed two hits and four walks in eight innings and struck out a career-high 11.

Johnson singled with an 0-1 count on Buchholz’s 101st pitch, sending the ball over first baseman Mike Napoli while the top part of the bat landed near the front edge of the infield between first and second.

Buchholz (3-0) lowered his ERA to 0.41, allowing one earned run in 22 innings. He left after 109 pitches, and Andrew Miller finished with a one-hit ninth.

Alex Cobb (1-1) allowed four runs — three earned — and seven hits in 6 2-3 innings, and Tampa Bay lost for the fifth time in six games. The Rays have eight runs in their last six games.

MARINERS 4, RANGERS 3 SEATTLE

Dustin Ackley snapped a sixth-inning tie with a single for his first RBI this season, and rookie Brandon Maurer (1-2) rebounded from a horrible start to allow three runs — two earned — and five hits in six innings.

Raul Ibanez added a solo homer as Seattle split the four-game series, and Tom Wilhelmson pitched the ninth for his fifth save.

Nick Tepesch (1-1) made his second big league start and gave up four runs and nine hits in 5 2-3 innings.

TIGERS 10, ATHLETICS 1 OAKLAND, Calif.

Austin Jackson had four hits, homered and drove in three runs, Torii Hunter added two doubles and a triple, and the Tigers routed the Athletics.

Boston Red Sox starting pitcher Clay Buchholz delivers against the Tampa Bay Rays during the first inning of a baseball game at Fenway Park in Boston on Sunday.

WHITE SOX 3, INDIANS 1 CLEVELAND

Jake Peavy struck out 11 in seven innings, Paul Konerko homered and the Chicago White Sox broke a five-game losing streak.

The White Sox went into the game as the majors’ only winless team on the road. Chicago was swept three games in Washington before dropping the first two against the Indians.

Peavy (2-1) gave up a home run to Michael Bourn on his first pitch of the game but held the Indians to five hits overall and didn’t walk a batter.

Addison Reed pitched the ninth for his fourth save, retiring Jason Giambi with a runner on to end the game.

Konerko’s two-run homer ruined a solid effort from Brett Myers (0-2), who took a shutout into the sixth.

ROYALS 3, BLUE JAYS 2 KANSAS CITY, Mo.

Alex Gordon drove home Chris Getz with a single in the ninth inning, and the Royals beat the Blue Jays to avoid a series sweep.

ANGELS 4, ASTROS 1 ANAHEIM, Calif.

Mike Trout hit his first home run of the season and Josh Hamilton also connected, leading C.J. Wilson and the Angels over Houston.

YANKEES 3, ORIOLES 0 NEW YORK

Hiroki Kuroda (2-1) pitched a five-hitter for his fifth major league shutout and Brett Gardner hit his first home run off a left-handed pitcher since July 2010.

National League BRAVES 9, NATIONALS 0

Justin Upton and Andreton Simmons homered and the Atlanta Braves won their ninth in row as Paul Maholm beat the Washington Nationals 9-0 Sunday to complete a three-game sweep.

Upton hit his seventh home run of the season. Chris Johnson had four hits and two RBIs for the Braves, who took a 7-0 lead in the third inning against Gio Gonzalez (1-1).

In sweeping their NL East rivals and compiling the best record in the major leagues, Atlanta (11-1) has outscored the opposition 62-23.

ROCKIES 2, PADRES 1 SAN DIEGO

Todd Helton had a pinch-hit, two-run homer in the seventh inning and Jorge De La Rosa and three relievers combined on a two-hitter to carry the Colorado Rockies over San Diego. Colorado also swept San Diego at Coors Field last weekend.

Helton’s homer off Dale

Thayer (0-1) broke a scoreless tie. It was Helton’s first homer this season and his third career pinch homer.

De La Rosa (1-1) held the Padres scoreless on two hits in six innings. Rafael Betancourt gave up a run in the ninth before getting his fifth save.

PHILLIES 2, MARLINS 1 MIAMI

Roy Halladay earned his 200th career victory, bouncing back from consecutive poor outings to pitch eight innings and help the Philadelphia Phillies beat the Miami Marlins 2-1.

DIAMONDBACKS 1, DODGERS 0 PHOENIX

Paul Goldschmidt hit a game-winning single off Josh Beckett with one out in the ninth inning, lifting the Arizona Diamondbacks over the Los Angeles Dodgers.

BREWERS 4, CARDINALS 3, 10 INNINGS ST. LOUIS

Jonathan Lucroy hit a solo home run in the 10th inning as the Milwaukee Brewers rallied past the St. Louis Cardinals and avoided a sweep.

GIANTS 10, CUBS 7, 10 INNINGS CHICAGO

Edwin Jackson and Michael Bowden tied a major league record by combining to throw five wild pitches in an inning, and the San Francisco Giants beat the Chicago Cubs in the 10th.

The Cubs matched the record for wild pitches by a team in an inning during a four-run sixth.

PIRATES 10, REDS 7 PITTSBURGH

Backup catcher Michael McKenry had the first two-homer game of his four-year major league career, Starling Marte hit a tiebreaking two-run drive in a six-run eighth inning and the Pittsburgh Pirates sent Cincinnati to its fifth straight loss.

NCAA Lashes Back at Miami, Citing Personal Attacks

ASSOCIATED PRESS

CORAL GABLES, Fla.

The interim leader of the NCAA office that conducted the investigation of Miami’s athletic department believes the Hurricanes are “grasping at straws” such as making personal attacks against investigators in their efforts to get the case against them dismissed.

That claim, and others, are part of the response that was signed by Jonathan F. Duncan, the NCAA’s Interim Vice President of Enforcement, in response to a motion Miami filed with the association’s Committee on Infractions to have the case brought to an immediate conclusion.

The Associated Press obtained a copy of the enforcement staff’s response to that motion Sunday night.

“Overall, the enforcement staff believes that the institution is again grasping at straws in an attempt to disqualify members of the enforcement team with the most knowledge about the case,” Duncan wrote.

In late March, citing impropriety by the NCAA and how it handled the investigation, the Hurricanes asked the Committee on Infractions — a group that is separate from the association’s investigative arm — to throw the case out altogether. Four former Miami coaches, including current Missouri basketball coach Frank Haith, also filed similar motions.

In his response, Duncan wrote that the NCAA’s enforcement staff “believes that the majority of the parties’ assertions in their motions to dismiss are largely based on assumptions, false accusations, misleading statements and meritless claims.”

Said sale will be made without covenant or warranty regarding title, possession or encumbrances to satisfy the obligation secured by and pursuant to the power of sale conferred in the deed of trust executed by Duane Hayes, Unmarried, as grantors to U.S. Bank Turst Company, National Association, as trustee, for the benefit and security of U.S. Bank National Association ND, recorded February 18, 2009, as Instrument No. 2009-003342 Mortgage Records of Twin Falls County, Idaho.
THE ABOVE GRANTORS ARE NAMED TO COMPLY WITH SECTION 45-1506(4)(A), IDAHO CODE. NO REPRESENTATION IS MADE THAT THEY ARE, OR ARE NOT, PRESENTLY RESPONSIBLE FOR THE OBLIGATION.
The default(s) for which this sale is to be made is the failure to pay when due, under the Deed of Trust note, the following:
The monthly payments for Principal and Interest Due from 5/22/2012 through 1/22/2013; and all subsequent payments until the date of sale or reinstatement
These payments include interest at a fixed rate. The current rate is 5.75%
Total: $2,158.11
Accrued Late Charges $174.00
Lender's Other Fees $165.00
TOTAL DEFAULT $2,497.11
The sum owing on the obligation secured by the said trust deed consists of the principal balance of $29,501.06, together with any advances plus foreclosure fees and costs. All delinquent amounts are now due, together with accruing late charges and interest, unpaid and accruing taxes, assessments, trustee's fees, attorney's fees, and any amounts advanced to protect the security associated with this foreclosure.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE®

Bobby Wolff

"I let my golden chances pass me by."
— Oscar Hammerstein

Today's deal comes from a correspondent, more in sorrow than anger, who has asked me not to name him — or his errant partner. The opportunity for a "free finesse" seemed too good to miss for South on this deal. He had been given a far better chance of making our game than he deserved!

When West opened three clubs and East raised to five clubs, South should have doubled, after which North would have bid five hearts and might have struggled after a club lead.

But instead of doubling, South made the undisciplined bid of five hearts and everybody passed. West led the spade two and, rather naively, declarer tried dummy's jack. He won East's queen with the ace and drew trump, but there was no way for him to avoid the loss of a spade and two diamonds when the spades broke badly.

As North subsequently indicated, West had surely not made an opening lead from queen-third of spades. If you assume that the lead rates to be from shortage, the rest of the play is easy. You play low from dummy, win with the ace, ruff the two losing clubs in dummy while drawing trump, then get off lead with ace and another diamond. The defenders can take their two diamond tricks, but if West is left on lead, he has to concede a ruff and discard; and, if East wins the third diamond, he can do no better than lead a spade into dummy's tenace.

ANSWER: While a heart lead is highly unlikely to be necessary, a case could be made for any of the other three suits. A club lead is the most passive, a spade lead the most active, while your diamond sequence suggests it is the one lead that combines aggression and safety. So I would lead a diamond honor, probably the king, unless our partnership defined that as promising three of the five top honors.

Today is Monday, April 15, the 105th day of 2013. There are 260 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight:

On April 15, 1912, the British luxury liner RMS Titanic sank in the North Atlantic off Newfoundland at 2:20 a.m. ship's time, more than 2½ hours after striking an iceberg; 1,514 people died, while less than half as many survived.

TODAY IN HISTORY

On this date:

In 1850, the city of San Francisco was incorporated.

In 1865, President Abraham Lincoln died, nine hours after being shot the night before by John Wilkes Booth at Ford's Theater in Washington. Andrew Johnson became the nation's 17th president.

In 1874, an exhibition of paintings by 30 artists, including Claude Monet, Edgar Degas, Pierre-Auguste Renoir and Paul Cezanne, opened in Paris. (A critic derisively referred to the painters as "Impressionists," a name which stuck.)

In 1942, Britain's King George VI awarded the George Cross to Malta for its heroism in the early days of World War II.

In 1943, the Ayn Rand novel "The Fountainhead" was first published by Bobbs-Merrill Co.

In 1945, during World War II, British and Canadian troops liberated the Nazi concentration camp Bergen-Belsen.

In 1947, Jackie Robinson, baseball's first black major league player, made his official debut with the Brooklyn Dodgers on opening day. (The Dodgers defeated the Boston Braves, 5-3.)

In 1959, Cuban leader Fidel Castro arrived in Washington to begin a goodwill tour of the United States. Secretary of State John Foster Dulles resigned for health reasons (he was succeeded by Christian A. Herter).

In 1960, a three-day conference to form the Student Nonviolent Coordinating Committee (SNCC) began at Shaw University in Raleigh, N.C. (The group's first chairman was Marion Barry.)

In 1986, the United States launched an air raid against Libya in response to the bombing of a discotheque in Berlin on April 5; Libya said 37 people, mostly civilians, were killed.

In 1989, 96 people died in a crush of soccer fans at Hillsborough Stadium in Sheffield, England. Students in Beijing launched a series of pro-democracy protests; the demonstrations culminated in a government crackdown at Tiananmen Square.

In 1998, Pol Pot, the notorious leader of the Khmer Rouge, died at age 73, evading prosecution for the deaths of two million Cambodians.

Ten years ago: Looters and arsonists ransacked Iraq's National Library, as well as Iraq's principal Islamic library. In the Netherlands, Volkert van der Graaf, the killer of politician Pim Fortuyn, was sentenced to 18 years in prison. Umpire Laz Diaz was attacked by a fan during a game between the Kansas City Royals and Chicago White Sox; the fan, Eric Dybas, was later sentenced to six months in jail and 30 months' probation.

Five years ago: Pope Benedict XVI stepped onto U.S. soil for the first time as pontiff as he was greeted at Andrews Air Force Base outside Washington by President George W. Bush, first lady Laura Bush and their daughter Jenna. Bombings blamed on al-Qaida in Iraq tore through market areas in Baghdad and outside the capital, killing nearly 60 people. Actress Hazel Court, who'd costarred with Boris Karloff and Vincent Price in horror movies of the 1950s and '60s, died near Lake Tahoe, Calif., at age 82.

One year ago: Five people were killed by a tornado in Woodward, Okla. Taliban insurgents struck the heart of the Afghan capital and three eastern cities. North Korea's new leader, Kim Jong Un, gave his first public speech since taking power, portraying himself as a strong military chief unafraid of foreign powers. Passengers and crew of the cruise ship MS Balmoral said prayers at the spot in the North Atlantic where the Titanic had sunk 100 years earlier.

This year will be our best. Classifieds • 733.0931 ext.2

DEAR ABBY: My daughter died in a car accident two years ago. She and her boyfriend, "Reed," had a 4-month-old daughter, "Angela." Since then, Reed has been very understanding and liberal with visitations. However, it didn't take him long to find another girlfriend, who has a 4-year-old daughter I'll call Madison.

DEAR ABBY
Jeanne Phillips

The first time I went to pick up Angela, the new girlfriend hinted strongly that I should also take Madison. I didn't like it, but I took her. Abby, Madison is the meanest, rudest child I have ever met. She called my dad ugly, my daughter ugly and my house "stinky." I saw her push Angela down and laugh. Then she tried to smother my granddaughter by sitting on her head on the couch. The last time I brought Angela home, Madison told me that everything I bought for Angela I had to buy for her, too.

I don't want to take Madison anymore. It has been difficult losing my daughter, seeing her replaced with a new girlfriend and now being expected to include an unpleasant "step-granddaughter" in everything. But if I don't take her, I'm afraid they won't let me visit Angela. Do you have any advice?

— ANGIE'S GRAM IN MISSOURI

DEAR GRAM: If you haven't already spoken to Reed and the girl's mother about her behavior, you should. Madison may act out because she's jealous of Angela and, among other things, she needs to learn better manners before she's included in any more visits. If she had pulled the shenanigans with me that she has with you, I would have taken her home immediately.

This is not to say that Madison should be permanently excluded, but you should have time with your granddaughter one-on-one. The same is true for Madison and her grandparents. You are not a built-in baby sitter, which appears to be how you have been made to feel, but nothing will change until you broach the subject.

DEAR ABBY: I feel fortunate to find myself with the love of my life at 24. "Josh" is charming, intelligent, a hard worker and a wonderful partner. I know we can achieve all the things we hope for. We have discussed where we stand on issues such as children, family, finances, living arrangements, etc. We are mostly compatible, and where there is tension, we work it through and compromise.

We are clearly headed toward engagement. He has picked out a ring and I want it badly, but I am hesitant. I am afraid I won't give him what he deserves.

I dated a man in college for three years. We talked about our future, made plans, and then I changed my mind. The pain I caused was terrible. I still regret hurting him, although I don't regret leaving. I'm afraid I will do it again. I'm so anxious I sometimes think I should bail now and cut his losses just in case. I don't think I will, but who can see the future?

My mother says I have always been obsessed with making the right choice. Am I being foolish and letting my anxieties run away with me?

— SUSAN IN CONNECTICUT

DEAR SUSAN: There are better ways to cope with your anxiety than "throwing the baby out with the bathwater." You are not the same person you were in college. You have grown and are obviously more aware of the consequences of your actions.

Because you are anxious about making a commitment to "the love or your life" — someone with whom you have many things in common — it's time to schedule an appointment with a licensed counselor to discuss it. It will be time and money well spent.

IF APRIL 15 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: Your business plans could fall through if you put them into motion before the end of the month. Wait a few short weeks and you will be blessed by much better planetary alignments. During May, you enjoy a favorable time to put important plans into action. Bad relationships fall away and good relationships echo with trust and sincerity. Bind an old love tighter or make a firm commitment to a new love. Benefit from someone's generosity, ask for favors or receive an unexpected chance to make huge improvements in your life. Use this time wisely to interview for a new job or to make crucial changes. Plan ahead, so you are able to take a romantic and pleasurable vacation in late September or early October.

HOROSCOPE

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Never settle for second best. People may actually welcome your competitive spirit, since you balance it with a sensitivity that is usually lacking. Tame a desire to win at all costs when you want to get ahead.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Everything may not be perfect, but that shouldn't stop you from having a good time. Concentrate on achieving your objectives and your intuition will lead you to the people and things that will help.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Wise up. You are as young as you feel, but you have never been as old and as wise as you are now. You know yourself better than anyone else does, so it is your job to make your own decisions.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Home is where you hang your hat. Find ways to create a harmonious atmosphere within your own personal castle during the upcoming week. Subtle alterations can result in a comfortable environment.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Boost your confidence. Situations where your lack of talent shows may put you into a funk today, so you should make a conscious effort to do something at which you are an expert.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): If you set your sights too low, you will never climb the ladder of success because you will be stuck at the bottom rung. This is a good day to make a purchase that shows your good taste and discrimination.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Exercise is the keyword for cooperation. Stretch muscles at the gym with a special someone or give your mind a workout with a new book. Exercise impeccable taste when choosing new possessions.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Playing at ways to shirk your duties is a game you can never win. Stand out in the crowd by giving the appearance of self-assurance and accountability and even your harshest critic will be won over.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Make progress while you are bursting with inspired energy. Impress others with your can-do attitude. You could meet someone who is impressed by your deep commitment to a cause.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): A situation you face can be resolved if you will simply change your attitude. No one is an island and even you need others. Align yourself with people who can help you reach your goals swiftly.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Disclose your skills. Don't pose as a person of mystery when questioned or tested by a situation. You will get your fair share of respect and rewards by playing the game in an above board manner.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Many things you can count, don't count. You might have dollars in the bank, an music collection that rocks or more than one car, but at the end of the day, it's whom you share them with that matters most.

Sudoku is a number-placing puzzle based on a 9x9 grid with several given numbers. The object is to place the numbers 1 to 9 in the empty squares so that each row, each column and each 3x3 box contains the same number only once. The difficulty level of the Conceptis Sudoku increases from Monday to Sunday.
