“We’re treating it as a suspicious incident. That doesn’t rule anything out.”

Joshua Palmer,

According to police, the last contact they've had with a caller was at 5:51 p.m. Police could not determine from where the call came.

Police searched residences on Maurice Street, Gimlet Drive and Honey Locust Lane and found no problems.

Palmer said police stopped their search and handed the case over to detectives.

Palmer said police haven't ruled out that the call was a prank.

"We're treating it as a suspicious incident. That doesn't rule anything out," he said.

WATERTOWN, Mass. • Lifting days of anxiety for a city and a nation on edge, police captured the surviving Boston Marathon bombing suspect, found bloodied in a backyard boat Friday night less than 24 hours after a wild car chase and gun battle that left his older brother dead and Boston and its suburbs sealed in an extraordinary dragnet.

"We got him," Boston Mayor Tom Menino tweeted. A cheer erupted from a crowd gathered near the scene.

"CAPTURED!!!" police added later. "The hunt is over. The search is done. The terror is over. And justice has won. Suspect in custody."

During a long night of violence Thursday and into Friday, brothers Dzhokhar and Tamerlan Tsarnaev killed an MIT police officer, severely wounded another lawman and hurled explosives at police in a desperate getaway attempt, authorities said.

Late Friday, less than an hour after authorities said the search for Dzhokhar had proved fruitless, they tracked down the 19-year-old college student holed up in the boat, weakened by a gunshot wound after fleeing on foot from the overnight shootout with police that left 200 spent rounds behind.

He was hospitalized in serious condition, unable to be questioned about his motives.

Tamerlan Tsarnaev, 26, died in the shootout early in the day. At one point, he was run over by his younger brother in a car as he lay wounded, according to investigators.

THE AMERICAN LEGEND

THE MARKET AT A GLANCE

Stocks Recover Slightly, Ending Tough Week

NEW YORK (AP) • Strong earnings from a pair of technology giants helped the stock market recover some of its losses Friday, a positive end to Wall Street's worst week in five months.

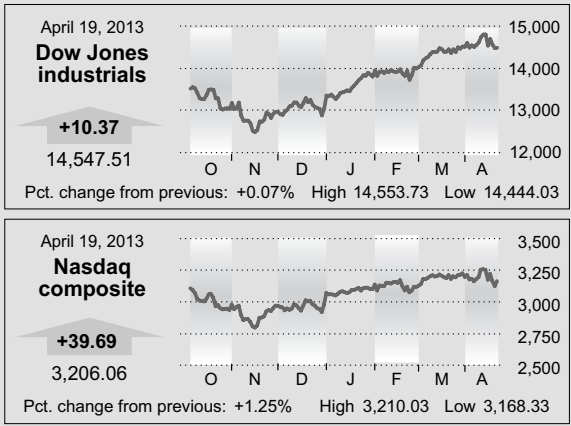

Microsoft and Google both beat earnings expectations, yields of government bonds ticked up and copper — a key industrial metal — continued its fall, losing 2 percent.

Microsoft gained 3 percent to $29.77, leading the Dow Jones industrial average higher. The software giant reported earnings late Thursday that beat analysts' forecasts and showed solid results from its Office, software tools and Xbox divisions.

Google's stock climbed 3 percent to $799.87. The leader in Internet search boosted prices for ads distributed to smartphones and tablet computers.

The Standard & Poor's 500 index rose 13.64 points to 1,555.25, an increase of 0.9 percent. The Dow rose 10.37 points to 14,547.51, a gain of 0.1 percent. The Dow spent most of the day down, pulled lower by disappointing results from IBM.

Traders, like everyone else, were following the news out of Boston, where police were hunting for one of two brothers suspected to be behind Monday's Boston Marathon bombings. One brother was killed in a gun battle with police overnight. But the news had no impact on markets, traders said.

Police: Man Flashed Gun at T.F. Walmart

BY ALISON GENE SMITH
alismith@magicvalley.com

TWIN FALLS • Shoppers on Wednesday evening got a scare when police say a man flashed a gun in the parking lot of the Twin Falls Walmart.

Police responded at 7:05 p.m. to Walmart, at 252 Cheney Drive West in Twin Falls.

According to a police report, witnesses told officers that the man, identified as Emmanuel Alvarez, flashed the gun, then he and another man got out of a silver Dodge pickup and went inside the store.

When police arrived, they found the truck with Oregon plates nearby in the 400 block of Robbins Avenue and made a traffic stop, the report states.

Officers ordered the two men to get out of the vehicle and they were detained.

Police reported finding a Smith and Wesson 9 mm handgun under the center console and a magazine with 14 rounds in a glove box.

Other officers stayed at Walmart to speak to the witnesses. According to the report, the witnesses said they were loading groceries and their five children into their vehicle when two men pulled up in the truck and were playing loud music.

The witnesses said they looked up for a moment, then returned to loading groceries.

According to the report, the two men got out of the truck and confronted the man for “staring them down.” After a verbal exchange, the report states, Alvarez told the man he was lucky and pulled his shirt up, exposing a handgun tucked in his waistband. Alvarez then pointed to the gun and made a motion with his hand like he was going to grab the gun.

The couple said they were afraid for their lives and believed the man would start shooting.

Police say in their report that Alvarez was not immediately forthcoming, but then became very cooperative. The report states that Alvarez said the man loading groceries told Alvarez he was lucky first, so Alvarez responded that the man was lucky and pulled up his shirt to show him the gun.

“He later shared with me that it was a bad choice on his part,” the officer wrote in the report.

According to the report, Alvarez said the gun was never loaded. Police could not confirm that.

Alvarez was taken to the Twin Falls County Jail and booked on a count of aggravated assault. A preliminary hearing is scheduled for April 26.

Spring Makes a Comeback

The transition from winter to summer can be volatile. We saw that this week. Highs from Sunday to Wednesday were in the mid- to upper 40s. It wasn't until Thursday that we got temperatures back into the 50s. Temperatures Friday had a hard time reaching the 50s thanks to showers and cloud cover. The good news is it looks like spring wins going into next week.

For the weekend we will remain a couple degrees shy of average. Instead of being in the low 60s, temperatures will remain in the mid- to upper 50s. Our weather pattern is stuck with a northwest flow in the higher altitudes, keeping us cool and bringing a few disturbances to the north central mountains and far eastern Idaho. Southern Idaho will experience breezy to windy conditions this weekend. Gusts today and Sunday could reach 30-35 mph. With the exception of possible rain and snow showers above 5,500 feet in the Wood River region, we should be dry this weekend.

Next week starts cool, thanks to a passing cold front Sunday and into Monday with highs in the low 50s. By Wednesday and into Friday, highs will be back into the upper 60s to near 70 degrees. We will remain dry through the week with mostly sunny to partly sunny skies.

Police: T.F. Woman Tried to Strangle Man

BY ALISON GENE SMITH
alismith@magicvalley.com

TWIN FALLS • Twin Falls police say they arrested a woman after a man said she hit him with a scented glass jar and attempted to strangle him.

At about 1:22 a.m. Wednesday, police responded to the 400 block of Third Avenue West in Twin Falls after a man called 911.

When police arrived, they said they found a man who was extremely upset. The man told officers a woman, identified as Apryl Preacher Ricaldi, 26, got angry and began beating him.

Ricaldi

Police said the man had a large bump on the back of his head and a laceration that was bleeding.

According to the police report, the man also had abrasions on his neck, bite marks on his arm and additional injuries to one of his legs.

According to the report, the man told police Ricaldi hit him in the head with a scented candle in a glass jar and attempted to strangle him with a space heater cord, a cellphone charger cord and a necklace. The man also said Ricaldi pushed him into a closet door, causing the door to break, the report states.

According to the report, a 6-month-old baby was in the house at the time.

Police charged Ricaldi with attempted strangulation and domestic battery with traumatic injury. She was arraigned in Twin Falls County Fifth District Court on Thursday and her bond was set at $50,000. She has an additional misdemeanor domestic battery charge from November, 2012, according to on-line court records.

A preliminary hearing is scheduled for April 26.

$300,000 Grant to Fund Patient-centered Care at Health Clinics

BY JULIE WOOTTON
jwootton@magicvalley.com

TWIN FALLS • Idaho Primary Care Association was awarded a grant to help community health clinics become a “patient-centered medical home.”

The nonprofit organization received a three-year, $300,000 grant from Cambia Health Foundation.

IPCA will work with 20 community health clinics, including Family Health Services in Twin Falls.

Teri Barker, director of clinical quality for IPCA, said the medical home concept is a way to deliver evidence-based primary care to patients.

Barker said it's impossible for doctors and nurses to monitor all patient conditions themselves, so this model includes a clinical team approach.

Another component: Getting patients involved in their own care.

Through the Idaho Medical Home Collaborative, she said a goal is to monitor and improve patient outcomes. That could be ensuring a patient's diabetes is under control, for instance, or lowering their blood pressure.

Gov. C.L. “Butch” Otter created the Idaho Medical Home Collaborative — which includes primary care physicians, insurance companies and organizations — in 2010.

The model aims to improve the quality of care for patients while reducing health care costs.

Barker said the three-year grant from Cambia Health Foundation will allow IPCA to continue work already in progress.

Family Health Services' administration office in Twin Falls didn't have information Friday to provide about the grant.

Barker said IPCA is working with clinics to help them improve their health information technology infrastructure. That includes electronic medical records and using data for quality improvement.

“There's a lot of things

we're doing with this grant,” she said.

Through the new funding, IPCA will also provide resources to community health clinics to help them gain recognition by the National Committee for Quality Assurance as a patient-centered medical home.

Throughout Idaho, there are currently 16 clinics who have gained recognition, Barker said.

Barker said a lot of other clinics have been working on their application for a year or more. It's generally a two or three-year process.

Within the next six months, a few more clinics should be submitting applications, she said.

TWIN FALLS • A Twin Falls County sheriff's deputy, who was charged with several counts of domestic battery in Twin Falls County, was arraigned Friday on one count of domestic violence stemming from an alleged Camas

Cooper

County incident. The hearing was in Twin Falls County in front of Camas County Magistrate Judge Jason Walker. Camas County Prosecutor Matthew Pember was also present. Because of Michael Cooper's ties, a special prosecutor out of Ada County for the case will be appointed. Cooper posted $100,000 bond in each of the two cases and Walker left the terms of Cooper's release the same. Cooper may not have guns or alcohol and must have an ankle monitor. Mark Guerry, Cooper's defense attorney, said he was present at Cooper's home when all firearms and alcohol were removed. The Twin Falls County Sheriff's Office is storing the firearms during the case. Pember asked that Walker add the alleged victim's two daughters to a no-contact order. Cooper, a 15-year member of the sheriff's office, was arraigned on the three Twin Falls County charges on Wednesday.

Ore. Juror Jailed for Texting

SALEM, Ore. (AP) • A judge in Oregon noticed an unexpected glow on a juror's chest while the courtroom lights were dimmed during video evidence in an armed-robbery trial. The juror, it seemed, was texting. Marion County Circuit Judge Dennis Graves cleared the courtroom and excused all jurors except 26-year-old Benjamin Kohler.

According to a news release from the Marion County Sheriff's Office, Kohler had no explanation for his actions. Jurors in Oregon are given explicit instructions at the outset of each trial not to use cellphones in court. Graves held Kohler in contempt, and Kohler spent most of Tuesday and Wednesday in the county jail. He was released Wednesday night.

Mormon Church to Review New Boy Scouts Proposal

BY BRADY MCCOMBS
Associated Press

SALT LAKE CITY • Mormon Church leaders plan to carefully review the Boy Scouts of America's new proposal on the organization's longstanding ban on gays before it takes a position. The Scouts on Friday announced a proposal to lift the gay ban for youth members but continue to exclude gays as adult leaders. The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints spokesman Michael Purdy said the church is looking closely at the proposal's language and studying its implications. He notes that the church still has time, since the Scouts plan to submit the proposal to its National Council at a meeting in Texas the week of May 20. The Mormon church has more Scouting troops than any other religious denomination, so there is widespread interest about what it will say about the proposal. Nationally, the Mormon Church has 37,000 troops and 420,000 youth members, as figures from the Boy Scouts of America show. In the Boy Scouts' Great Salt Lake Council — one of the largest in the country with 5,500 troops and 73,400 youth — 99 percent of the troops are sponsored by the Mormon church. The LDS church still teaches its members that marriage is between a man and a woman and that same-sex relationships are sinful. In December, however, the LDS church launched a website encouraging members to be more compassionate in discussions about homosexuality. In making its announcement, Boy Scouts of America estimated that easing the ban on gay adults could cause widespread defections that cost the organization 100,000 to 350,000 members. Utah was likely included in that estimate. Four out of five Scout leaders and parents in the Boy Scouts' Great Salt Lake Council said they are opposed to lifting the ban on gays, according to results of a survey completed by 4,700 adults. Nearly half said they would quit the Boy Scouts if the ban on gays is lifted.

Knowing When a Patient Is Ready for Hospice Care

Q. My mom has been receiving home care for the past year, but has taken a turn for the worse. How do I know if she is ready for hospice services or if she qualifies?
Mary, Twin Falls

First, you would want to talk with your mother and see what she is comfortable doing. If your mother wants to continue to do treatments for her diagnosis, she may not be ready for hospice care. Also, talk to her physician, and see if your mother qualifies for hospice criteria, which are very specific. Your mother's physician would need to certify that she has six months or less to live and that she has a life limiting terminal illness. This is called a certificate of terminal illness.

Your mother's physician will be following your mother through the hospice care process.

Hospice care is a resource for the end of life stage, enabling you and your family to let your mom live her remaining days to their fullest.

With hospice care, an interdisciplinary team of professionals would be brought in to care for your mother in her final days. This team includes nurses, therapists, social services, nutritionists, chaplain services and volunteers. Hospice care offers emotional and other supports for the patient, but sometimes more importantly, the family. It's a time where families can get the emotional support they may need from a team of professionals who are educated in all aspects of the death and dying process. Even after the passing, hospice also comes to your home every other week to ensure that you and your family get the emotional support they need, especially those first few months after a loss. There is also the opportunity to get involved in a support group through hospice care. Ultimately, talk to your mother and respect her wishes, if she able to communicate them. Also, talking to her physician is the best way to begin navigating the hospice process.

The violent endgame unfolded four days after the bombing and just a day after the FBI released surveillance-camera images of two young men suspected of planting the pressure-cooker explosives that ripped through the crowd at the marathon finish line, killing three people and wounding more than 180.

The two men were identified by authorities and relatives as ethnic Chechens from southern Russia who had been in the U.S. for about a decade and were believed to be living in Cambridge, Mass. But investigators gave no details on the motive for the attack.

President Barack Obama said the nation owes a debt of gratitude to law enforcement officials and the people of Boston for their help in the search. But he said there are many unanswered questions about the Boston bombings, including whether the two men had help from others. He urged people not to rush to judgment about their motivations.

The breakthrough came when a man in a Watertown neighborhood saw blood on a boat parked in a yard and pulled back the tarp to see a man covered in blood, authorities said. The resident called 911 and when police arrived, they tried to talk the suspect into getting out of the boat, said Boston Police Commissioner Ed Davis.

“He was not communicative,” Davis said.

Instead, he said, there was an exchange of gunfire — the final volley of one of the biggest manhunts in American history.

Watertown residents, who had been told in the morning to stay inside behind locked doors, poured out of their homes and lined the streets to cheer police vehicles as they rolled away from the scene.

Celebratory bells rang from a church tower. Teenagers waved American flags. Drivers honked. Every time an emergency vehicle went by, people cheered loudly.

“They finally caught the jerk,” said nurse Cindy Boyle. “It was scary. It was tense.”

a half hour and then released unharmed at a gas station on Memorial Drive in Cambridge.

- Police soon pursue the carjacked vehicle in Watertown, just west of Cambridge.
- Some kind of explosive devices are thrown from the vehicle in an apparent attempt to stop police. The carjackers and police exchange gunfire. A transit police officer is seriously injured. One suspect, later identified as Suspect No. 1 in the marathon bombings, is critically injured and later pronounced dead.
- Authorities launch a manhunt for the other suspect.
- Around 1 a.m. Friday, gunshots and explosions are heard in Watertown. Dozens of police officers and FBI agents converge on a Watertown neighborhood. A helicopter circles overhead.
- Around 4:30 a.m., Massachusetts state and Boston police tell people living in that section of eastern Watertown to stay in their homes. They identify the carjackers as the same men suspected in the marathon bombings. Overnight, police also release a photograph of a man believed to be Suspect No. 2 wearing a gray hoodie-style sweatshirt. The image apparently is from surveillance video taken at a gas station.
- Around 5:50 a.m. authorities urge residents in Watertown, Newton, Waltham, Belmont, Cambridge, Arlington and the Allston-Brighton neighborhoods of Boston to stay indoors. All mass transit is shut down.
- Around 6:35 a.m., The Associated Press reports that the bomb suspects are from a Russian region near Chechnya and lived in the United States for at least a year.
- Around 6:45 a.m., The Associated Press identifies the surviving Boston bomb suspect as Dzhokhar A. Tsarnaev, 19, who has been living in Cambridge.
- Around 8 a.m., Boston’s police commissioner says all of Boston must stay in their homes as the search for the surviving suspect in the bombings continues.
- Around 8:40 a.m., a U.S. law enforcement official and the uncle of the suspects confirm that the name of the slain suspect is Tamerlan Tsarnaev, Dzhokhar Tsarnaev’s older brother.
- Around 10:20 a.m., Connecticut State Police say a car believed to be linked to Dzhokhar Tsarnaev has been recovered in Boston. They initially call it a Honda CRV, but authorities later say it was a Honda Civic.
- Around 10:35 a.m., the University of Massachusetts Dartmouth says it closed its campus and ordered an evacuation after confirming that Dzhokhar Tsarnaev is registered there. The school says it closed the campus “out of an abundance of caution” as the search continued.

- Around 11:30 a.m., Massachusetts State Police explain that the brothers suspected in the bombings were in the Honda when they carjacked the Mercedes SUV. For a while, each drove one of the two vehicles, but then ditched the Honda and reunited in the Mercedes.
- Around 12:35 p.m., state police in Watertown say officers are searching door-to-door but still have not found the bombing suspect.
- Around 6:30 p.m., Massachusetts Gov. Patrick Deval announces that mass transit is resuming and the “stay indoors” order is being lifted even though one suspect remains on the lam. State police say that suspect, Dzhokhar Tsarnaev, fled on foot and there is indication he has a vehicle. They believe he is still in the state because of his ties to the area.
- Around the time the order is lifted, a flurry of gunfire breaks out in the same community that was being searched. Law enforcement officials locate Dzhokhar Tsarnaev in a boat parked behind a home.
- Dzhokhar Tsarnaev is taken into custody by police at approximately 8:45 p.m. Spontaneous applause breaks out among police and onlookers surrounding the scene and residents take to the streets to cheer police.

Community Honors Sgt. Workman

BY LAURIE WELCH
lwelch@magicvalley.com

RUPERT • A crowd gathered Friday at Minico High School to honor the legacy of a soldier on the one-year anniversary of his death.

A wooden display case was unveiled in the school’s front hallway featuring Sgt. Chris J. Workman’s Army medals, plaques and a drawing of Workman and his crewmembers.

“This is really a bitter-sweet moment,” said Suzette Miller, principal of Minico High School. “This is a special honor that makes me very sad for the family and the community.”

Workman and his crewmembers were killed April 19, 2012, when their Blackhawk helicopter went down during a mission in Afghanistan.

Workman’s mother and father, Anna and John Workman, unveiled the case located near the front office and across the hallway from a similar case displaying memorabilia from fallen Army Sgt. Andrew Moller, who died in 1991 in Desert Storm.

“Everybody sort of pitched in putting this together,” said Anna Workman, who teaches art at MHS. “I’d rather have this kind of a memorial rather than going out to the cemetery.”

Sen. Dean Cameron, R-Rupert, said it was great to see the community come out to support the Workman family.

“I think this is one of the great things about living in a smaller community,” Cameron said.

Cameron said he recalls when Workman was brought home to Rupert for the funeral. People lined up along the roadside holding American flags with their hands over their hearts and tears streaming down their faces.

“On one hand I’m so proud of this community, and on the other hand it is such a somber occasion,” Cameron said.

Cinthya Guerrero, president of Minico High School’s Business Professionals of America, presented a $500 check to the Sgt. Chris Workman Scholarship fund.

“I’m very humbled to be here today and extremely emotional,” Guerrero said.

Cameron said the next time people want to carry a gun, check a box in a voting booth or start a business, they should stop and thank Sgt. Workman and his family, along with all of the veterans who have served their country.

“Honor Sgt. Workman by being kind, serving one an-

TEXAS TOWN GRIEVES FOR DEAD FIRST-RESPONDERS

WEST, Texas (AP) • Buck Uptmor didn’t have to go to West Fertilizer Co. when the fire started. He wasn’t a fire-fighter like his brother and cousin, who raced toward the plant. But a ranch of horses next to the flames needed to be moved to safety.

“He went to help a friend,” said Joyce Marek, Uptmor’s aunt. “And then it blew.”

Two days after the fertil-izer facility exploded in a blind-ing fireball, authorities an-nounced that they had recov-ered 14 bodies, confirming for the first time an exact number of people killed. Grieving families quickly started planning burials.

At least three of those killed in Wednesday’s blast were firefighters, according to fam-ily members. The dead in-cluded Uptmor and Joey Pustejovsky, the city secretary who doubled as a member of the West Volunteer Fire De-partment, as well as a captain of the Dallas Fire Department who was off-duty at the time but responded to the fire to help.

The explosion was strong enough to register as a small earthquake and could be heard for many miles across the Texas prairie. It demol-ished nearly everything for several blocks around the plant. More than 200 people were hurt.

Texas Department of Pub-lic Safety Sgt. Jason Reyes said he could not confirm how many first-responders had been killed. Efforts to search devastated buildings in a four-block radius around the blast site continued Friday.

“They knew it was danger-ous. They knew that thing could go up at any time,” said Ronnie Sykora, who was Pustejovsky’s deacon at St. Mary of the Assumption Catholic Church. “But they also knew that if they could extinguish that fire before it went up, that they could save tens of lives, hundreds of lives. That’s why they were in there.”

Edward Smith, a volunteer chaplain for the Dallas Police Department, counseled fire-fighters at West’s fire station Friday morning. Outside, fire-fighters from nearby Alvarado washed a truck that was used after the blast to put out the fires started by the explosion.

“Right now, the general public might be saying, ‘Well, why aren’t they talking about this?’” Smith said of the fire-fighters. “They don’t neces-sarily even want to talk about it. They’re holding out hope.”

In a town of just 2,800 people, everyone here knew someone affected by the explosion.

Plant owner Donald Adair released a statement saying he would never forget the “self-less sacrifice of first-respon-ders who died trying to pro-protect all of us.”

One of the plant employees was also killed responding to the fire, Adair said.

Federal investigators and the state fire marshal’s office planned to begin inspecting about the explosion before evidence that may point to a cause.

Franceska Perot, a spokeswoman for the Bureau of Al-cohol, Tobacco, Firearms and Explosives, said investigators would begin at the perimeter of the explosion and work in-ward toward the destroyed fertilizer company.

The fertilizer facility stores and distributes anhydrous ammonia, a fertilizer that can be injected into soil. It also mixes other fertilizers.

Texas Sens. John Cornyn and Ted Cruz, who toured the town Friday, said they would wait for more information about the explosion before considering whether there should be more regulation of anhydrous ammonia.

GUN VOTES CARRY BIG RISKS FOR DEMS IN RURAL STATES

WASHINGTON (AP) • There is little mystery, from a campaign viewpoint, at least, about the eight senators who crossed party lines in Wednesday’s showdown vote on background checks for gun buyers.

The four Democrats who voted against broader back-ground checks are from largely rural states that voted heavily against President Barack Obama last fall. Three of the four Republicans who voted in favor of the measure are from states Obama car-ried easily. The exception is John McCain of Arizona.

The four Democrats — Max Baucus of Montana, Mark Begich of Alaska, Heidi Heitkamp of North Dakota and Mark Pryor of Arkansas — could cite a stack of prag-matic reasons for opposing the gun measure. The four Democrats’ states have deep traditions of hunting and gun ownership. They lack large cities, where persistent shootings can build momen-tum for gun control.

None of that saved the four Democrats from Obama’s wrath after the measure fell five votes short of the 60 needed to overcome a fili-buster, a crushing defeat for Obama and others who want stronger measures to detect ineligible gun buyers.

In an emotional speech soon after the vote, the presi-dent — without naming names — said of the mea-sure’s opponents: “Most of these senators could not offer any good reason why we wouldn’t want to make it harder for criminals and those with severe mental ill-nesses to buy a gun...It came down to politics,” Obama said.

Besides McCain, the four Republicans who voted for the bill are Sens. Susan Collins of Maine, Mark Kirk of Illinois, Obama’s home state, and Pat Toomey of Pennsylvania.

The four Democrats played down the unusual rebuke from their party’s president.

Baucus brushed off Oba-ma’s comments, telling re-porters, “He can say what he wants to say.” Baucus said he is comfortable with his vote, adding: “That’s my state.”

Russia’s Chechnya Has Seen Decades of War, Terror

MAKHACHKALA, Russia (AP) • The two brothers suspected in the Boston Marathon bombings have their ethnic roots in Chech-nya, a part of the Caucasus Mountains that has spawned decades of vio-lence — from separatist wars to suicide attacks, blood feuds and hostage sieges.

Authorities have not linked Tamerlan and Dzhokhar Tsarnaev to any insurgent groups, and the Kremlin-backed strongman who now leads Chechnya says the brothers got their in-spiration in the U.S., not the troubled region in southern Russia. “They weren’t living here. They were living, studying and growing up in America,” Chechen leader Ramzan Kadyrov said in an interview on Russian televi-sion. “They have been edu-cated there, not here.”

The families of Tamerlan Tsarnaev, the 26-year-old killed in a gun battle with police in Massachusetts overnight, and his 19-year-old brother, Dzhokhar, left Chechnya long ago and moved to Central Asia, ac-cording to the Chechen government. Before arriving in the United States a decade ago, the brothers lived briefly in Makhachkala, the capital of Dagestan, a neighboring, violence-wracked Russian province where their father resides.

The conflict in Chechnya began in 1994 as a separatist war, but became an Islamic insurgency dedicated to forming an Islamic state in the Caucasus. Dagestan has since become the epicenter of the insurgency.

Russian troops withdrew from Chechnya in 1996 after the first Chechen war, leav-ing it de-facto independent and largely lawless, but then rolled back three years later following apartment build-ing explosions in Moscow and other cities blamed on the rebels. Kadyrov has Moscow’s carte blanche to stabilize Chechnya with his feared security services, which are accused of killings, torture and other rampant human rights abuses.

The Tsarnaev brothers lived in the region only briefly as children, but appeared to have maintained a strong Chechen identity. Dzhokhar Tsarnaev’s first name is the same as Chechnya’s first separatist president, who was killed in a Russian airstrike. The suspects’ un-cle, Ruslan Tsarni of Mont-gomery Village, Md., had been urging Dzhokhar Tsar-naev to turn himself in, say-ing: “He put a shame on our family, the Tsarnaev family. He put a shame on the entire Chechen ethnicity.”

French Family Taken Hostage in Cameroon Freed

A French family with four young children kidnapped at gunpoint by Islamic extrem-ists in northern Cameroon was freed after two months of captivity in what the fa-ther described as especially harsh conditions following the group’s return Friday to safety in the Cameroonian capital.

Cameroonian television showed the family of seven — four children, their par-ents and their uncle — step-ping off an airplane, a man who had grown a thick beard carrying the smallest child. All appeared thin, but walked steadily. Officials from France and Cameroon offered no details on how the family was freed overnight, nor whether there were con-cessions to the kidnappers.

Floodwaters Rising after Storms Deluge Heartland

Floodwaters are rising throughout the nation’s midsection after powerful storms brought heavy spring rains. Volunteers worked into the night to stack sandbags and to evacuate residents in the path of flooding — or to rescue those who already were trapped.

The National Weather Service says rivers across Illi-nois, Iowa and Missouri will rise for days as the water moves downstream and contributes to flooding on the Mississippi River be-tween Davenport, Iowa, and Chester, Ill. Rivers were ris-ing in Indiana and Michigan, while areas of Minnesota, the Dakotas dug out from a snowstorm.

How Vladimir Putin Could Help Boston

Just hours after the Boston Marathon bombings, Russian President Vladimir Putin condemned the act as a “disgusting” crime and offered to help in any way he could. Now’s his chance.

Fred Kaplan

Slate

The Tsarnaev brothers appear to have Chechen roots; the older, now-deceased brother, Tamerlan Tsarnaev, may have touted radical Islamists on his YouTube site. (The only question is whether the site’s holder is the same Tamerlan Tsarnaev.) There is no doubt, then, that Putin has a big interest in helping out with the FBI’s investigation — a much bigger interest than he did on Monday, before the Chechen link was suspected. More to the point, there is very little doubt that he also has the means to help out.

Putin’s popularity, in the early years of his presidency, stemmed largely from his hard-line tactics against the Chechen rebels, who were waging a separatist insurgency in their southern province and, to that end, launching terrorist attacks in Moscow. During that era, in the mid-to-late 1990s, the rebels, though mainly Muslim, were motivated largely by nationalism — as were the leaders of Chechen rebellions dating back to the 19th century. But as Putin put down the insurgency with increasing force, the survivors grew more and more radical, and in the past few years, the movement has taken on explicitly Islamic colors, including an alliance with al-Qaida. This has only hardened Putin’s determination to defeat them.

One result of this: Russian intelligence services are all over Chechen radicals. That means that if — and this is a very big if — the Tsarnaevs had ever been in touch with Chechen radicals or with Islamists elsewhere who have ever been in touch with Chechen radicals, then Putin’s spy agencies have a record of it.

Putin has another reason for getting engaged in this probe. The 2014 Winter Olympics are taking place in Russia — specifically in Sochi, near the Black Sea and the Caucasus Mountains, only 300 miles from Chechnya. Putin’s biggest political and public relations nightmare is a terrorist attack disrupting his Olympics, his grand moment on the world stage. U.S. and Russian counterterrorism agencies already have a history of cooperating in tracking common enemies. If a joint effort plays some role in shining light on the Boston bombers’ motives or wider networks (if there are wider networks), that would strengthen these ties considerably — and possibly enhance the safety of the coming Olympics.

President Barack Obama has been exploring avenues for another “reset” of Russian-American relations. At least when it comes to counterterrorist operations, Putin is too. Depending on how the next few hours or days go, Boston may serve as an opportunity for these two powers to start over.

Fred Kaplan is author of the book “The Insurgents: David Petraeus and the Plot to Change the American Way of War.”

The kid was the real deal.”

Breaking News Is Broken

Inspired by the events of the past week, here’s a handy guide for anyone looking to figure out what exactly is going during a breaking news event.

When you first hear about a big story in progress, run to your television. Make sure it’s securely turned off.

Next, pull out your phone, delete your Twitter app, shut off your email, and perhaps cancel your service plan. Unplug your PC.

Now go outside and take a walk for an hour or two. Maybe find a park and sit on a bench, reading an old novel. Winter is just half a year away — have you started cleaning out your rain gutters? This might be a good time to start. Whatever you do, remember to stay hydrated. Have a sensible dinner. Get a good night’s rest. In the morning, don’t rush out of bed. Take in the bird-song. Brew a pot of coffee.

Finally, load up your favorite newspaper’s home page. Spend about 10 minutes reading a couple of in-depth news stories about the events of the day. And that’s it: You’ve now caught up with all your friends who spent the past day and a half going out of their minds following cable and Twitter. In fact, you’re now better informed than they are, because during your self-imposed exile from the news, you didn’t stumble into the many cul-de-sacs and dark alleys of misinformation that consumed their lives. You’re less frazzled, better rested, and your rain gutters are clear.

Breaking news is broken. That’s the clearest lesson you can draw about the media from the last week, when both old- and new-media outlets fell down on the job. By now you’ve likely heard the lowlights. CNN and the AP incorrectly reported on Wednesday that a Boston Marathon suspect had been arrested. People on Reddit and editors at the New York Post wrongly fingered innocent kids as bombing suspects. Redditors also pushed the theory that a Brown University student who has been missing for more than a month was one of the bombers — a story that gained steam on Twitter Thursday when people listening to police scanners heard the cops repeat the student’s name. Though everyone should have been careful to dismiss chatter heard over the scanner, few did. Caught up in the excitement of breaking news, I was one of many journalists who retweeted news that the Brown student was one of the suspects — a fact that, in the morning, I feel absolutely terrible about. People on Reddit feel terrible about it too, though now the damage to his reputation has been done. (Although I’m choosing not to mention his name here, that’s not going to accomplish very much — it’s already been stained.)

Twitter’s comeuppance could not have come soon enough. Earlier in the week, many social-media tough guys were calling CNN’s failing a sign of the times — proof that cable news couldn’t keep up with the Web. CNN was criticized for not taking the time to check its sources’ claims that the cops had arrested a “dark-skinned” suspect. The failure seemed in keeping with cable news’ inherent weaknesses. News takes time to develop, but because cable anchors have to fill up air-time and want to scoop their rivals, they’re eager to speculate and grab at any halfway credible sounding story they hear from their sources. Twitter, everyone on Twitter agreed, was better than that.

Then, a day later, people on Twitter made exactly the same mistakes. Besides the mistaken identification of the Brown student, Thursday night’s tweeters — including many local reporters covering the manhunt — couldn’t get straight whether one or two suspects had been arrested, whether the suspects were dead or alive, and whether they were light- or dark-skinned. Even more weirdly, many on Twitter were now making fun of CNN for being behind — for not following the news in the same slipshod manner as Twitter. By staying behind, though, CNN avoided the Web’s embarrassment. For all its mistakes, the network at least didn’t falsely identify anyone.

The useful distinction here isn’t by medium. It’s silly to say that Twitter is a better way to follow breaking news than CNN, or vice versa. The real problem is that both Twitter and CNN now depend on technologies that make it possible to follow breaking news too closely.

We get stories much faster than we can make sense of them, informed by cellphone pictures and eyewitnesses found on social networks and dubious official sources like police scanner streams. Real life moves much slower than these technologies. There’s a gap between facts and comprehension, between finding some pictures online and making sense of how they fit into a story. What ends up filling that gap is speculation.

Thank You to Good Samaritan at Twin Falls High School

On Monday afternoon, April 15, I had to conduct some business at Twin Falls High School. They are renovating the front entrance; therefore, I had to walk a long distance to get to the office. It was difficult for me.

One lone student — I wish I had gotten his name — asked me, first, if he could carry my heavy handbag, then offered to help me to my car. I declined his help, but I want to commend that young man and his parents (for their obvious good parenting), for his consideration and the offer of assistance.

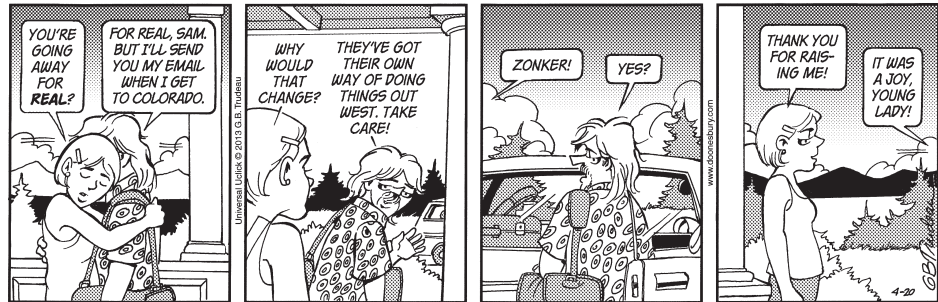

Whoever you are, thank you!

NEW APPROACH TO DIVORCE

Startup business strives to avoid costly, bitter court battles.

BOISE (AP) • Michelle Crosby was 9 years old when she was put on the witness stand in a custody hearing between her divorced par-ents.

“The question posed to me was, ‘If you were stranded on a desert island, which parent would you choose to live with?’” Crosby recalls.

She was crushed. She loved them both.

“At 9, you know the sys-tem is broken if you have to answer that question,” she said.

In that moment, Crosby says, she decided to be a lawyer. That journey led her to seek a better way for cou-ples to divorce that would ease pain and emotional wreckage.

The result, 28 years later, is Wevorce, a Boise startup Crosby co-founded in De-cember with Boisean Jeff Reynolds that combines technology and profession-als like counselors and ac-countants for mediated-di-vice settlements aimed at keeping people out of pro-tracted, expensive and bitter courtroom fights.

The cost: an average flat rate of $7,500.

Last fall, Crosby and Reynolds put their idea in front of Y Combinator, a venture capital firm recog-nized by Forbes magazine in 2012 as the country’s top business incubator. Y Com-binator put up $100,000 to help the company grow. From Y Combinator’s of-fices in Mountain View, Calif., Crosby and Reynolds have pushed hard to expand Wevorce beyond its original location in Boise. Within two months, Wevorce had offices in San Francisco, Portland, Seattle and Asheville, N.C. The Ashe-ville office is meant to plant Wevorce in the eastern half of the United States so it can start growing in that region, Crosby said.

DARIN OSWALD • IDAHO STATESMAN

Lawyer Michelle Crosby founded Wevorce with the idea that a mediated divorce service can be less costly and more sensitive than going to court and wading through the conventional legal system.

The company has 28 pro-fessional independent con-tractors who help deliver its services.

Crosby won’t say how much revenue Wevorce brings in. She set a goal to increase revenue by 10 per-cent each week, but Wevorce lately has been chalking up 14 percent in-creases, she said.

On Tuesday, Crosby and Reynolds will go before 400 more venture capitalists in a demonstration day spon-sored by Y Combinator to raise money to help Wevorce open in every state. About 80 percent of those who make presentations come away with additional mon-ey, said Garry Tan, a Y Com-binator partner.

Wevorce was one of 46 startups chosen by Y Com-binator — from 3,000 appli-cants — to receive funding. Wevorce’s melding of medi-ation and technology appealed to the firm, Tan said.

Wevorce’s software helps the company establish be-haviorial expectations of clients, provides ways for them to fill out legal forms that aren’t intimidating and offers tutorial programs on issues facing divorced cou-ples. For example, the soft-ware shows Wevorce how each spouse may be at a dif-ferent stage of grief over the pending divorce.

Wevorce is unique in the tech space where it is oper-ating, Tan said.

“We look for things that change the world,” he said.

Crosby struggled with family law at the beginning of her career.

After graduating with a law degree from Gonzaga University in Spokane, she tried family law but found that the adversarial system between parties in a divorce — fueled by their lawyers — had not changed since the day she’d been asked that terrible question.

“I can’t be part of this problem,” she thought.

So she switched to securi-ties law. She married an Ida-hoan, and they moved to Boise seven years ago. They eventually divorced, amica-bly, Crosby said.

But Crosby couldn’t see herself as a securities lawyer for the next 30 years. She dabbled in an approach to divorce that would take dueling lawyers out of the center of the dis-pute. She opened a busi-ness called Family Archi-tects in Boise a couple of years ago that laid the groundwork for what would become Wevorce.

Crosby saw divorces as conflicts with legal implica-tions. “I did not see them as legal problems,” she said. “We the lawyers were driv-ing them into legal problems.”

Bodies Recovered from Plane

MINDEN, Nev. (AP) • A sheriff’s official says it’ll take time to identify two bodies recovered from the wreckage of a small plane found in the mountains about 20 miles southeast of the Minden-Tahoe Airport.

Douglas County sher-iff’s Sgt. Pat Brooks said Friday it will be up to medical examiners in Washoe County to deter-mine if the bodies are missing pilot Cory Mar-ble from Reno and his missing 21-year-old girl-friend from Minden.

The wrecked Cessna 182 was discovered Thursday afternoon in the Pine Nut Mountains.

Pocatello City Council Rejects Protection for Gays, Lesbians

POCATELLO (AP) • The Pocatello City Council on Thursday narrowly rejected an ordinance intended to protect gay, lesbian, bisexu-al and transgender people from discrimination, buck-ing the direction set by three other Idaho cities that have recently passed antidiscrim-ination ordinances for sexu-al orientation.

The ordinance, which mirrors protections passed in Sandpoint, Boise and Moscow in the last 15 months, would have crimi-nalized discrimination in cases of housing, employ-ment and use of public ser-vices.

The Idaho State Journal reports that Mayor Brian

Blad cast the deciding vote breaking a 3-3 tie.

The ordinance would have made discrimination based on sexual orientation a mis-demeanor, punishable with fines up to $1,000 and six months in jail. State law al-ready makes it illegal for em-ployers to discriminate based on other factors including race, gender and religion.

But the plan faced resist-ance from council members who argued making dis-crimination a crime goes too far.

City councilman Craig Cooper said he objects to discrimination in all forms, but said imposing civil penalties would be a more appropriate punishment.

“My vote last night was not in favor of discrimina-tion, my vote last night was in opposition to the way the ordinance was written,” he told The Associated Press Friday. “I think there are people who are unaware of what’s going on and it’s just not a healthy thing to crimi-nalize in my mind.”

Thursday’s vote comes a month after state lawmakers denied a formal hearing on a proposal to add the words “sexual orientation” and “gender identity” to the state’s Human Rights Act. Supporters, however, were given the chance to make their case to lawmakers dur-ing an informal listening session in March.

AT A GLANCE

Idaho Unemployment Rate Holds at 6.2 percent; Camas Co. Lowest

BOISE • New figures show Idaho’s adjusted unemploy-ment rate held steady at 6.2 percent from February to March.

The Department of Labor report released Friday shows Camas County has the lowest rate at 3.7 percent, while northern Idaho counties like Benewah, Clearwater and Shoshone all have rates higher than 10 percent.

While jobs have been generated faster in Idaho than the national average, the report shows labor numbers still re-main at 2011 levels when few employers were creating new positions.

Overall, the report shows employers hired 13,000 peo-ple for new and replacement jobs in March — 500 fewer than companies hired in March 2012.

The number of new hires represents twice Idaho’s five-year average, since the economy began to tumble in 2008. About 1,400 people left the workforce in March.

Board Elects New Leadership Team

MOSCOW • Members of the board that governs Idaho public schools and universities have elected a new leader-ship team.

Trustee Don Soltman of Twin Lakes was picked as the new president Thursday at the board’s meeting at the University of Idaho.

Soltman was first appointed to the board in 2009 by Gov. C.L. “Butch” Otter and had held the position of vice president. He previously served in the U.S. Air Force and at various health care facilities across the United States and Europe.

He recently retired from his position at Kootenai Med-ical Center in Coeur d’Alene.

Soltman replaces Ken Edmunds, a businessman from Twin Falls.

Trustees also voted to elect Emma Atchley, a business-woman from Ashton, as the new vice president. Rod Lewis, of Boise, was selected board secretary.

Yellowstone West Entrance Opens

YELLOWSTONE NATIONAL PARK, Wyo. • Yellow-stone National Park’s West Entrance opened to vehicles as originally planned Friday before budget cuts threatened to push back the date a week.

People now can drive from West Yellowstone, Mont., to Old Faithful or north to Mammoth Hot Springs.

The park’s East and South entrances remain closed but plowing funded in part by the towns of Cody and Jackson and area businesses is making progress.

Those entrances also are on track to open on time, or May 3 for the East Entrance and May 10 for the South En-trance.

The Jackson Hole News & Guide reports good weather helped Yellowstone crews open the West gate.

Budget cuts threatened to delay the opening until April 26 while keeping the East and South gates closed un-til May 17 and 24.

Man Charged with Sexual Abuse

BOISE • A southwest Idaho man who police say had sex-ual contact with a 14-year-old girl he met on a social me-dia website has been taken into custody.

Authorities say Luke Allen Inman of Nampa was taken into custody Tuesday and faces felony charges of child en-ticement and sexual abuse of a minor under 16.

Ada County Sheriff’s investigators say he arranged to meet the girl on the grounds of a high school before class-es Tuesday.

The Idaho Internet Crimes Against Children Task Force says Inman attempted to contact nearly 200 girls ages 14 to 16 through the website since mid-March.

He was being held in the Ada County Jail on $250,000 bond.

Montana Resident Attacked by Bear

POLSON, Mont. • Lake County authorities say a Pablo man suffered injuries to his head and arms after a bear at-tacked him in his yard.

Undersheriff Dan Yonkin says the man got between a sow and her two cubs Friday morning. The man said he was not aware the animals were in his yard.

Authorities have not confirmed what kind of bear it was, but the man believed it was a grizzly.

Sheriff’s department spokeswoman Karen Sargeant says the man was hospitalized in Kalispell. His name was not released.

Yonkin says officers went door-to-door in the area near the attack to warn residents of the potential danger.

Billings Man Convicted of 13th DUI

BILLINGS, Mont. • A 54-year-old Billings man has been convicted of his 13th instance of driving under the influ-ence after jurors rejected his argument that he drove away from his house last summer because he felt threatened by a neighbor.

The Billings Gazette reports jurors convicted John Har-vey Hoots on Thursday. His attorney argued state law al-lows a person to commit a crime to avoid serious injury or death. Hoots testified he feared his neighbor.

The neighbor testified he called 911 on July 31 to report Hoots had dropped his pants. A short time later, the neigh-bor’s mother called to report Hoots indicated he had a gun.

Hoots was driving away as officers arrived. His blood-alcohol level was 0.20 percent. Hoots had been released from prison six weeks earlier on his 12th DUI.

Nevada Gay Marriage Bill Amended to Protect Churches

CARSON CITY, Nev. (AP) • A proposal seeking to clear the way for gay marriage in Nevada was amended Friday by the state Senate in a move designed to make it more acceptable to some lawmak-ers who struggled with their religious convictions.

The amendment offered by Sen. Pat Spearman, a les-bian minister, states: “Reli-gious organizations and clergy have the right to re-fuse to solemnize a marriage and no person has the right to make any claim against a religious organization or clergy for such a refusal.”

Spearman, D-North Las Vegas, said she hoped the amendment would ease concerns and ensure colleagues that religious pro-tections “would not be denied.”

The amendment was ap-proved on an 11-10 party-line vote with Democrats in favor. Senate Joint Resolu-tion 13 now goes to the Sen-ate floor for a vote early next week.

Senate Majority Leader Mo Denis, D-Las Vegas, was one lawmaker who grappled with the proposal. Denis is a member of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

After the vote, Denis said he believes the amendment addresses concerns raised by a number of groups about protecting religious cov-enants.

Nevada Sen. Pat Spearman, D-North Las Vegas, speaks on the Senate floor in Carson City, Nev., on Friday. The Senate approved Spearman’s amendment on gay marriage.

Family members react before four bodies are removed from a home in Lockwood, near Billings, Mont., after a fire started in the home on Thursday.

Records: Two Men Accused in Fatal Montana Fire Lit Apron

BILLINGS, Mont. (AP) • A Montana mobile home fire that left four people dead began when two men lit an apron on fire in the kitchen while the victims slept following a party, according to court documents filed Friday.

Preliminary autopsy results showed all four victims died of smoke inhalation, authorities said. Three bodies were found in bedrooms and one in the mobile home's dining room.

Yellowstone County Sheriff Mike Linder identified the victims as Donovan Fogle, 25, Troy Saylor, 28, Brandi Hansen Moats, 25, and Amber Marie Beyers, 33. All four were from Billings.

Two men arrested on Thursday night in the case each face four counts of negligent homicide and one count of felony arson.

The suspects — Zaccary John Kern and Robert Eric Bottenhagen, both 21 and from Billings — were being held at the Yellowstone County Jail. It was uncertain if they had retained attorneys.

Probable cause affidavits filed by Yellowstone County Attorney Scott Twito said both men admitted during interviews with investigators to being at a party at the residence earlier in the night. Kern denied further involvement, according to the documents.

But a female witness who picked up the two suspects said that after leaving the party, the men discussed having lit an apron on fire after the others at the home went to sleep, the affidavits said.

“Both stated to this witness that they thought they had put the apron out before leaving the residence,” the affidavit said. “At one point (they) drove back to the residence and observed the fire and the emergency vehicles. Both of them panicked and stated that they could not believe this was happening.”

Linder said further tests will be done to confirm the cause of death. There were no signs of trauma or bodily injuries to the victims, the affidavits said.

Firefighters were called to the mobile home in Lockwood, just northeast of Billings, shortly after 4 a.m. on Thursday. They arrived as smoke and flames came from what appeared to be the kitchen area, The Billings Gazette reported.

Crews entered the residence and got the fire under control in about 10 minutes, Lockwood Fire Chief Bill Rash said.

Deputies later obtained a search warrant and removed the four bodies found in the home Thursday afternoon. The Federal Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco, Firearms and Explosives joined the investigation, and friends and family of the victims gathered near the scene throughout the day.

Linder said detectives still were trying to piece together the relationship between the suspects and victims.

Elko County Nets $450,000 From Delinquent Land Sales

ELKO, Nev. (AP) • Elko County has raised nearly a half million dollars by auctioning off more than 150 pieces of land where county property taxes were delinquent.

More than 100 bidders turned out at the treasurer's office this week to snatch up a piece of northeast Nevada real estate. Treasurer Rebecca Erickson said $450,000 was collected — almost double what the county raised at auctions in recent years.

Many of the bidders return to Elko every year to buy property, she said.

“It's the cheapest land money can buy,” said Charlotte Abbott, who traveled from Lynden, Wash., where she owns a wholesale land company, Smile4U Inc. She bought about 25 parcels on Tuesday, some in the Montello area.

“I really hope someday to build a home here myself,” she told the Elko Daily Free Press. “I love it here. It's a special place.”

Ashley Baxter, of California, attended with Jesse Marshall, of Calgary, Canada, who's been coming for a decade and now owns about 70 properties in Nevada. They bought 19 parcels on Tuesday in Montello, along U.S. Highway 93 near Jackpot.

“Many people go to the beach for a vacation, but we go to Elko,” Baxter joked.

“It's fun to go see the property afterward,” said Baxter, whose personal tradition is to take lawn chairs and a bottle of champagne out to their new properties to celebrate. “There's a couple that you take a gamble on, obviously.”

Property owners who were delinquent on their taxes have up to one year to reclaim what is left of their property sales revenue after taxes, fees and a percentage that goes to the county.

This year was the first time the auction took place in the spring and the first time the county accepted credit cards for the purchases.

“I think allowing credit cards brought the prices up a bit,” Erickson said. Organizers decided to make the move in part because the auction came the day after federal income taxes were due, she said.

Filer Softball Player Signs with College of Idaho

BY NICK RULAND
nruland@magicvalley.com

FILER • Coming off the best basketball season in school history, with academics, the Filer softball season in full swing and going through the college recruiting process, Wildcats’ first baseman and senior Cassidy Ferrell’s been through a whirlwind the last few months.

Ferrell forgets exactly which schools offered her both a basketball and softball scholarship, but she had no problem filling in the details on her school of choice – College of Idaho, where she signed on Friday.

Ferrell will be awarded both an academic and athletic (softball) scholarship at the private liberal arts school in Caldwell.

“I was pretty sure early on that was going to my choice,” Ferrell said. “I like the school and the academics. I think I’m going to study chemistry and go for a minor in engineering.”

Ferrell was an integral part of Wildcats’ basketball team, which lost to Snake River in the 3A state championship.

And while Ferrell intrigued schools with her size and athletic ability as a basketball player, Ferrell was most concerned with academics.

Besides, softball is her favorite sport. The Wildcats are 14-2.

“I have five home runs this year, it’s been a great season,” Ferrell said. “We’re having fun.”

Ferrell said she enjoyed her visit to the campus, where the Coyotes have won nearly 60 percent of their games under head coach Al Mendiola.

“I really liked it,” Ferrell said. “They seemed like a family and the girls welcomed me right in. I’m going to live in the dorms. I’m just super excited.”

TWIN FALLS • Ryan Johnson wasn’t exactly lit up by the College of Southern Nevada lineup in his first two starts against the No. 4 Coyotes, both losses.

In fact, he gave up a combined five hits in the previous two.

The difference in his third start wasn’t the hits – 5 – he allowed.

Johnson, who struck out six in six innings of work Friday, walked just one batter while his teammates, both offensively and defensively, had his back.

“I just feel like we were close the first two times and when we faced them,” Johnson said. “But now we are just playing so much better.”

Pro Trucks Weigh in at Magic Valley Speedway

BY LINDA BRITTSAN
For the Times-News

The American Speed Association Intermountain Pro Trucks roll into Magic Valley Speedway Saturday night to start off the first of 12 events scheduled for the traveling series in the 2013 season.

Judging by the number of drivers signed up to compete in the series this year, race director Randy Kerr says there will be plenty of door-to-door action in the division.

“We are expecting right at 14 trucks for this first race and a total of more than 20 different trucks over the course of the season. We have a great group returning along with several new drivers who I am excited to have joining the series.”

Scott Luttmner will be back to defend his 2012 championship and two-time title holder in the series Jerry Rice, one of the most intense racers on any track, is once again ready for the challenge.

“Johnny Pierre, Alan Larson and Dan Doan; they’re all very tough competitors and we’re very happy to them back,” Kerr added. “Drew Reitsma, Please see SPEEDWAY, S4

BOSTON BLASTS

ASSOCIATED PRESS
Police clear the area at the finish line of the 2013 Boston Marathon following an explosion in Boston, Monday. Two explosions shattered the euphoria of the Boston Marathon finish line on Monday, sending authorities out on the course to carry off the injured while the stragglers were rerouted away from the smoking site of the blasts.

Local Runners Reflect on Boston Bombings

BY RYAN HOWE
rhowe@magicvalley.com

On early Monday morning, the Boston Marathon was already on Rupert resident Terry Evans’ mind. Her daughter-in-law was running it this year, and Evans had already qualified and planned to run it in 2014.

When news of the bombings reached Evans in Idaho, her first concern was for her family. It took an hour before she received word that everyone was OK. Her daughter-in-law had finished 10 minutes before the explosions.

“I was devastated,” Evans said. “When I heard about the bombing I thought of all those marathoners in a once-in-a-lifetime opportunity, this dream they’d had was going to be marred by this (tragedy).”

Evans, who says she’s a “middle-of-the-pack plodder who qualifies in the grandma division,” ran Boston in 2011. The race is like the Super Bowl of marathons, and Evans says it lived up to the hype and exceeded her expectations.

“Bostonians love their marathon and they really roll out the red carpet for marathoners,” Evans said.

Shari Hart of Filer, who ran the marathon in 1996 for its 100th anniversary, said having been there before gave her a unique perspective on the bombings.

“You could experience it more realistically; it’s not just something you see on the news,” Hart said. “You’ve been there. You’ve been on that street. It brought it closer to home.”

Hart and Evans both said they weren’t surprised by the heroic and inspirational stories coming out of Boston in the aftermath, as marathoners and spectators ran to the aid of the victims.

“That’s what marathoners do,” Evans said.

Everyone in the global running community was affected, said Rupert resident and three-time Boston Marathon finisher Alice Schenk.

“In a very real sense, athletes have a connection,” Schenk said. “Even if we don’t know everybody, we’re still connected and they’re still, in a way, like family.”

Schenk had just registered for her 10th St. George (Utah) marathon on Sunday night, with the intention of qualifying there for the 2014 Boston Marathon.

Local Runner Hopes to Return to Boston Marathon Next Year

BY ALICE SCHENK
For the Times-News

I first became a dreamer in college when I decided that I would try and run a marathon to qualify for Boston. I would need to drop 12 minutes off my previous best of 3:32.56 and run a 3:20 to qualify. A part of me was not sure I could.

But I knew then that faith can move mountains, and I really do serve a giant God, and He and I make a pretty good team. I ran and won (by God’s grace) the May 1980 Great Potato Marathon in 3:12.22 setting a new record for women marathoners in Idaho. I was Boston bound!

I was also a very poor college student working my way through college, and many friends rallied to raise money for me to go.

Boston was my first big “dream come true,” my best ever marathon finish time, cruising the 26.2 miles in a little over seven minutes a mile. I rode to the start with a former state senator and a current newscaster of 26 years (it was another God appointment), and I stayed in a house less than five blocks from the start of the race with noted author and speaker George Sheehan. I ran the 100th Boston in 1996, and again in 2000 I ran it with a group of friends from the Magic Valley.

I celebrate everyone who runs and dreams of crossing that finish line. And it is more than just getting to toe the line of that prestigious event because you qualified. It is the culmination of months of training, and hoping and praying and laying it all out on the line, fearful you won’t make it and yet so hopeful you can. And what you get when you cross that line and finish means the world to you, but not nearly as much as what you became through the process of putting yourself out there and following your dream.

The bombings at the finish line destroyed the beauty of that moment for so many. It destroyed the lives of so many, and it took away so much from the hearts of those who have lost loved ones or limbs.

I signed up for the 2013 St. George Marathon the night before the running of the 117th Boston Marathon. If I go, it will be my 10th marathon in St. George, and I was hoping to qualify for Boston 2014 at the event.

If God allows, I will toe the line in Hopkington in tears in 2014, and if I cross that finish line I will again be bawling.

Don’t ever give up the dreams you should be keeping. In the long run they are what define you and perhaps even give you the platform on which to share God’s love and grace with others.

Darvish 10 Ks as Rangers Beat Mariners 7-0

ASSOCIATED PRESS

ARLINGTON, Texas • Yu Darvish struck out 10 while allowing only three hits over seven innings for Texas, and the Rangers had their biggest inning of the season in a 7-0 victory over the Seattle Mariners on Friday night.

In his first start in a week, and 33rd in the major leagues, Darvish (3-1) had his 10th career 10-strikeout game.

Jeff Baker put Texas up 1-0 with a two-out solo homer in the second off Joe Saunders (1-2). The Rangers added a six-run fifth, scoring twice as many runs as they had in any inning this year. The seven runs overall matched their season high.

YANKEES 9, BLUE JAYS 4
TORONTO • Andy Pettitte pitched effectively into the eighth inning, Travis Hafner homered and had two RBIs, and the Yankees beat the Blue Jays.

Lyle Overbay and Vernon Wells also went deep against their former team as the Yankees won for the eighth time in 10 games.

Scratched from his previous scheduled start because of back spasms, Pettitte (3-0) was pitching for the first time since April 9 at Cleveland. He showed few signs of rust, however, striking out four in a row at one stretch in his 7 1-3 innings.

RAYS 8, ATHLETICS 3
ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. • Evan Longoria hit a two-run homer and Ben Zobrist had a pair of RBI singles to help Tampa Bay beat Oakland.

Jose Lobaton also drove in two runs with a bases-loaded single to back the pitching of Alex Cobb (2-1), who allowed three runs and 10 hits over 7 1-3 innings.

ASTROS 3, INDIANS 2
HOUSTON • J.D. Martinez and Rick Ankiel hit back-to-back homers in the second inning and the Astros held on for a win over the Indians.

The win snaps a five-game skid for Houston and extends Cleveland's losing streak to five.

National League
METS 7, NATIONALS 1

NEW YORK • Matt Harvey outpitched Stephen Strasburg in a marquee matchup of young aces, escaping a late bases-loaded jam while the crowd chanted his name and leading the New York Mets over the Washington Nationals 7-1 Friday night.

Ike Davis and Lucas Duda each hit two home runs, providing an ample cushion for Harvey and the Mets to end their three-game skid.

Harvey (4-0) gave up one run and four hits in seven innings, striking out seven.

Davis and Duda hit solo home runs in the sixth — the first time Strasburg (1-3) ever had been tagged twice in an inning.

Davis added a two-run homer in the eighth and Duda hit a solo drive off Drew Storen.

Strasburg allowed four runs, two unearned, and five hits in six innings. He fanned six.

PIRATES 6, BRAVES 0
PITTSBURGH • Wandy Rodriguez faced the minimum while throwing seven innings of one-hit ball to out-pitch Tim Hudson and help the Pirates beat the Braves.

Hudson came up short in his first attempt at win No. 200.

PHILLIES 8, CARDINALS 2, 7 INNINGS
PHILADELPHIA • Roy Halladay tossed a two-hitter over seven innings and the Phillies beat the Cardinals in a rain-shortened game to snap a four-game losing streak.

Halladay (2-2) allowed two runs, walked two and struck out six to record a complete game. He's had consecutive strong outings after starting the season with two poor ones.

Jimmy Rollins, Ben Revere, Humberto Quintero and John Mayberry Jr. each had two hits for the Phillies, who busted out of their slump with five runs off Jaime Garcia (1-1) in the first inning.

Carlos Beltran and Matt Holliday hit solo homers for the Cardinals.

Garcia allowed eight runs — four earned — and nine hits in three innings.

BREWERS 5, CUBS 4
MILWAUKEE • Ryan Braun hit a three-run homer, and Jean Segura produced some bizarre baserunning in the Brewers' win over the Cubs.

Segura somehow wound up safe at first base after attempting to steal third, only to later be thrown out attempting to steal second base again.

Segura led off the eighth inning with a single and stole second before Braun walked. The two attempted a double steal, but Kevin Gregg didn't deliver a pitch. Instead, he threw to third well ahead of Segura, who turned and went back to second. Braun was there, and shortstop Luis Valbuena tagged both runners as they stood on the bag.

The rules say only the trailing runner is out in that case, but Segura trotted back toward first base and the home dugout, then appeared to realize what had happened and sped into the unoccupied base.

He later attempted a straight steal of second, but Cubs catcher Welington Castillo threw him out.

It didn't matter, though, because Braun went deep against Jeff Samardzija (1-3) and Anthony Rizzo hit his fifth homer of the year for the Cubs, who never trailed.

Milwaukee starter Marco Estrada (2-0) pitched out of trouble in his six innings.

MARLINS 2, REDS 1
CINCINNATI • Justin Rug-giano hit a solo homer off Aroldis Chapman in the ninth inning sending the Marlins to a victory that snapped the Reds' winning streak at four games.

ROCKIES 3,
DIAMONDBACKS 1
DENVER • Jhoulys Chacin pitched effectively into the seventh inning and became the first Rockies starter to throw 100 pitches in a game since June before leaving with left oblique tightness, and Colorado beat the Diamondbacks.

Injured Derek Jeter Will Be 39 When He Returns to Yankees

ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK • Don Mattingly knows about trying to come back from an injury that just won't heal.

A star first baseman for the New York Yankees from 1982-95, Mattingly retired as a player following several years of severe back pain.

It remains to be seen how successful injured Yankees captain Derek Jeter will be in returning to shortstop this summer at age 39 — after a career-high, nine-month layoff.

"The older you get makes it tougher," Mattingly, now the Los Angeles Dodgers manager, said Friday. "But I think if there was one guy I wouldn't doubt, it would be Jeter because he seems to defy the odds."

Jeter broke the ankle in the AL championship series opener against Detroit in Oct. 13 and found out Thursday there was a small crack near the original injury. The new break will need four-to-eight weeks to heal.

He hit .316 last season and led the AL with 216 hits, his best season since winning his fifth World Series title in 2009. Age has already crimped his range and some wonder whether he will be able to be an everyday shortstop when he returns.

"That's a pretty significant injury when it's going to impact your legs like it is, especially the position he plays," Tampa Bay manager Joe Maddon said. "I don't know if they have to start making other plans to play different spots based on mobility. I don't know how significant or bad it is. But it's going to be difficult to come back to what we remember of him in the past, I would think."

Not wearing a boot and walking without a limp, Jeter spent 45 minutes Friday at the Yankees' minor league complex in Tampa, Fla. The Yankees captain was wearing sneakers when he left the facility, where he talked with the training staff. Asked if he was disappointed by the setback, he said "of course" but little else.

Jeter plans to talk about his injury with New York media next week when the Yankees return from a trip that ends Wednesday at Tampa Bay.

"It must be devastating for him," said 43-year-old closer Mariano Rivera, who came back for a final season this year following a knee injury that sidelined him most of last season. "There are people that lead by example, and he's one of them. He doesn't have to say anything. He doesn't have to say much. He will say something if he needs to, but most of the time it's just by example. Being there. Playing hard. Respect the game. Be there for your teammates. All that. That's what's missed."

Rutgers Suspends Lacrosse Coach during Review

ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW BRUNSWICK, N.J. • Rutgers University has suspended its head men's lacrosse coach as it investigates allegations of verbal abuse.

The university announced the suspension on Friday, saying that Brian Brecht will continue to be paid.

The school did not give details of allegations.

Rutgers, under the direction of President Robert Barchi and Interim Athletic Director Carl Kirschner, has been reviewing videos of practices in all sports since men's basketball coach Mike Rice was fired this month after a video was made public that showed him abusing players.

The Rutgers lacrosse team competes in the Big East Conference, and is struggling this season. The Scarlet Knights are 2-11 overall, and 0-5 in the league. Brecht's team has lost 10 consecutive games headed into Saturday's home game vs. Duke.

Brecht, in his second season as coach at Rutgers, spent seven years as coach at Siena College, and was a three-time conference coach of the year in the Metro Atlantic Athletic Conference. He is a New York native who played at Springfield College in Massachusetts, and was hired by former Athletic Director Tim Pernetti on June 16, 2011, after posting 57 victories with the Saints in his final five years there. Pernetti resigned two days after Rice was fired.

The College of Southern Idaho extended its winning streak to eight games, defeating CSN 5-2 in game one on Friday, its first win in six games against the conference leader.

"I just think this time I was able to work better with runners on, made sure I was in the zone, and we didn't give them anything extra," Johnson said.

Game two was suspended by rain in the bottom of the seventh inning with the Coyotes up 3-2. The final two and a half innings will be made up on Saturday at 11 a.m. prior to the third game of the four game set, which is scheduled to start at noon. CSI will have runners at first and third with one out and lead-off hitter Jordan Godman at the plate.

The Golden Eagles, as they have throughout their winning streak, executed small-ball on offense, bunched their hits together and came through with outs and runners in scoring position, didn't yield extra baserunners through copious errors and walks.

"We are playing clean baseball," coach Boomer Walker said. It was the Coyotes that weren't.

In the first, Tanner Morache doubled and advanced to third base on a passed ball. He scored on a ground out by shortstop Carter Yagi.

In the fourth, Yagi reached on an error, was replaced on the basepath by Isaac Anderson, who eventually scored after a single and a wild pitch.

In the fifth, R.J. Bush singled, moved to second on a perfect bunt down the third baseline by Kholeton Sanchez, who nearly beat the throw, advanced to third on a Godman single and scored on a sacrifice fly to deep center by Morache.

CSI put together a veritable coup de grace in the sixth, with three hits and another baserunner reaching by error. Sanchez' two base gapper gave the Golden Eagles a three run cushion, and Anderson, moving in from center field, saved the game, facing the minimum three batters in the seventh.

Women Dominate

The Golden Eagles like their new perch.

There was no letdown for the CSI softball team after its series win against Salt Lake Community College last weekend, as it took over the top spot in the Scenic West Athletic Conference with the tie-breaker in its back pocket.

CSI won game one 5-1 and game two 17-2 against Snow College, ostensibly taking pleasure in the rainy and muddy conditions.

The women hit six home runs on the day – in just 11 innings – with third baseman Patti Ferguson hitting two, her fifth and sixth of the season.

"I honestly am not sure how you pitch to us," Ferguson said. "I think you have to know our weaknesses. If not, this is what happens"

The Golden Eagles don't have many weaknesses, compiling 23 hits and 10 walks in 11 innings.

"I really think we stressed to them that we have to stay focused," head coach Nick Baumer said.

So far, so good.

Pitchers Nellie Makings and Sierra Whitmer combined to allow just two earned runs, striking out eight.

New to the series full time this year is former MVS Street Stock champion Kendel Woll.

"I ran a truck two times last year and I kind of fell in love with it, Woll said. "Then I found a truck in Salt Lake and was able to get it for a reasonable price."

"This is a great group and I am really looking forward to the season. I might even be willing to deal with getting rookie of the year, who knows?"

Two drivers have their eyes on dual championships this year. Twin Falls High School student Hannah Newhouse and Rocky Mountain Challenge Series driver Travis Monett of Spring Creek, Nev., will both be competing for championships in the Pro Trucks and the Rocky Mountain Challenge Series divisions.

Another name Rocky Mountain Challenge Series fans may recognize is that of Jeff Hillock. Kerr relayed that Hillock has "purchased a truck for his crew members to drive."

Jesse Anderson will be racing it this Saturday night.

"He must be looking really looking forward to it; he's been posting pictures of the truck on Facebook almost every day," Kerr added.

In addition to three visits to MVS this season, the series will be making stops at Meridian and Pocatello Speedways and Rocky Mountain Raceway near Salt Lake City, Utah.

The series also has something new up their tailpipes and will try competing on a surface other than asphalt this season.

"In June we're going to be 'blowing up the dirt' at Atomic Raceway," Kerr reported. "Honestly we started talking about it as a joke early last year, but the more we talked about it the more we thought, 'why not'? NASCAR is trying it."

The season will wrap up at MVS September 21 with the crowning of the series champion.

Local Churches Hold Benefit to Bring Home Boise Pastor Saeed Abedini

BY TETONA DUNLAP

TWIN FALLS • As seniors and juniors at Lighthouse Christian School walked across I.B. Perrine Bridge, they left a trail of 1,000 yellow ribbons.

It was a silent message — strips of plastic tied to the railing, fluttering in the breeze of passing vehicles — that people in the Magic Valley are demanding the release of Pastor Saeed Abedini. He is currently imprisoned in Iran’s Evin Prison, a prison that has a reputation for being one of the more brutal in the country.

“The more noise we make, the more outspoken we are that we as American citizens are not satisfied with our own being treated this way,” said Pam Fadness, women’s ministry leader at Lighthouse.

On Thursday, April 18, Fadness and about 60 students and teachers tied yellow ribbons in honor of Saeed Abedini, a Boise pastor who was sentenced Jan. 27 to eight years.

Jamie Morton, 17, a student at Lighthouse Christian School, said the event was important to her because Saeed is a local pastor and her father is also a pastor.

“I think Twin Falls cares, no matter religion or race. That’s why I like Twin Falls,” Morton said.

Saeed has been in an Iranian prison since September 2012. He was in Iran visiting family when he was arrested and charged with attempting to undermine state security by Naghmeh Abedini, the wife of Pastor Saeed Abedini, will be at the Benefit for Freedom Fundraiser event, which will start at 5:30 p.m., today, April 20 at Lighthouse, 960 Eastland Drive, in Twin Falls. Naghmeh will speak at 6:30 p.m. and the program will include food, speakers, a silent auction, music, a video and children’s choir. Cost to attend is by donation.

creating a network of Christian churches in private homes.

According to the American Center for Law and Justice, which represents Abedini’s wife, Naghmeh, and her two children, Saeed has been suffering from internal bleeding for months. These injuries, the ACLJ states, exist due to beatings in prison. The ACLJ says Saeed has yet to receive any medical treatment.

“It’s more than religion. His human rights are being violated... he deserves our support. It’s wrong they can keep him this long,” Fadness said.

The ribbons on the bridge were also a message for Naghmeh Abedini that the community supports her as well. Students said they hoped that she would see them the next day as she drove into Twin Falls to speak at their school.

On Friday, April 19, Naghmeh Abedini was at Lighthouse Christian School to share Saeed’s story and attend

Benefit for Freedom, a fundraiser and show of support to help free Saeed.

Standing on stage in the school’s auditorium, Naghmeh Abedini told students about when she came to the U.S. and how she and her twin brother converted to Christianity when they were 9.

“I became a believer at 9 years old. I knew it was a hard decision because I came from a Muslim family. Since I was nine, various trials have come to me,” Naghmeh said. “He (God) can use someone from Idaho to change the world.”

Eventually, Naghmeh said, her own parents, once devout Muslims, also converted to Christianity.

She shared the pain of not seeing her husband and the anguish of knowing he is beaten because of his faith.

“He’s your best friend, your soul mate, and they come and take him,” Naghmeh Abedini said. “When Saeed first went to prison, I wanted to go in a hole and hide.”

But now she is perhaps Saeed’s greatest advocate, keeping her husband’s story alive in the media. This weekend she will appear on Fox News.

Fadness said that as a pastor’s wife, she can’t imagine the hardship Naghmeh Abedini is facing.

“She’s burning the candle on both ends. I admire her. She’s an inspiration,” Fadness said. “If it was my husband, I’d hope the community would get involved.”

Jessica Parsons-DePew of Jerome, one of the organizers, said she remembers hearing Saeed Abedini speak in Hagerman a couple of years ago. At the time, Parsons-DePew said, she wasn’t at a place in her life to fully hear his message. But now she is fully committed to help return him to his family.

Parsons-DePew said she approached Lighthouse a month ago to see if they could help organize the event and get other churches in the area involved. The collaboration produced the Benefit for Freedom.

“This is all of our brother. It’s all of our cause. It’s a human rights issue. It’s a faith issue,” Parsons-DePew said.

Naghmeh Abedini said January was the last time she communicated with her husband by phone, but she does receive letters. Before her speech, she played a video of a letter written by Saeed Abedini.

He talked about hugging those who beat him.

“He has so much love and forgiveness for them,” Naghmeh Abedini said. “Love fixes things, covers things. Our first reaction is anger, but often it should be love and compassion. Love is going to change.”

The Place Where I Can Find God

“Where is God?” It is a question for the ages, whether sounded in the anguished tears of parents who has lost a child to violence, or in the collective cry of runners from 90 nations gathered to celebrate human accomplishment, only to see that celebration turned to horror.

Quick answers come from all ends of the religious spectrum. At one extreme are those, like Pat Robertson with his latest pontificating. At the other are those who point to human tragedy as proof of the absence of God.

Most people of faith I know struggle in the middle: we believe in a loving God, a God who walks with us and who has given human beings free will. It wasn’t God who plotted and designed the bombs that brought tragedy to the Boston Marathon. It wasn’t God who conspired to submit a child to abuse from ages 3 until 11. It wasn’t God who tortured and taunted and beat up Adam Lanza when he attended Sandy Hook.

Christians are still celebrating the Easter season.

The mocking of the crowd is fresh in our minds. We remember how they taunted Jesus as he hung on the cross, “He saved others, let God save him, if he loves him.”

They dared God to intervene in an extraordinary, showy fashion. “Where is your God now?”

We remember the despair of Jesus’ followers as we struggle with the horrors we inflict on each other. We wonder: if God is sovereign, why is the world in such a mess? And we reject pat answers: “It is God’s will. Good will come of this. It’s a message to heathen America.”

And we struggle together to deal with our anger that some fool with pressure cookers, duffle bags, BBs and a circuit board can rip apart so many lives. That such ordinary objects could cause such destruction. Yet cars driven by drunken or distracted drivers do that, and worse. The innocent are lured and tortured by the same devices that allow me to write this article and to communicate with bereaved parishioners.

“Where is God?” begs the question of whether God is big enough to handle our anger and our anguished questions. “Where is God?” Emmanuel, God-with-us, I believe was in those who tore down the fences to allow people to flee from the bomb debris.

God-with-us is in those who shielded others with their own bodies. God-with-us is in the medical and emergency personnel who labor overtime to save lives, just as God-with-us is in those who investigate the causes of violence, are working with disturbed children and with school districts to combat bullying.

“Where is God?” Looking to Jesus, I see that God-with-us is one who suffers too; I have faith that there is a depth to God no one can comprehend. But most importantly, I have faith that God is not only with us in the pews but in our lives. And that God’s promise is that love will win — that neither bomb nor knife nor cross nor tomb will have the last word.

“Where is God?” Wherever love, justice and mercy are present — that’s where I find God.

According to the Unitarian Universalist Association of Congregations, "Unitarian Universalism is a religion that celebrates diversity of belief and is guided by seven principles: (1) the inherent worth and dignity of every person; (2) justice, equity and compassion in human relations; (3) acceptance of one another and encouragement to spiritual growth in our congregations; (4) a free and responsible search for truth and meaning; (5) the right of conscience and the use of the democratic process within our congregations and in society at large; (6) the goal of world community with peace, liberty and justice for all; and (7) respect for the interdependent web of all existence of which we are a part.

UU congregations are places where people gather to nurture their spirits and put their faith into action through social justice work in their communities and the wider world.

Warsaw Marks 70 Years Since Uprising in Ghetto

WARSAW, Poland (AP) • Sirens wailed and church bells tolled in Warsaw as largely Roman Catholic Poland paid homage Friday to the Jewish fighters who rose up 70 years ago against German Nazi forces in the Warsaw ghetto uprising.

The mournful sounds marked the start of state ceremonies that were led by Polish President Bronislaw Komorowski at the iconic Monument to the Ghetto Heroes. The president was joined by officials from Poland, Israel and elsewhere as well as a survivor of the fighting, Simha Rotem, to honor the first large-scale rebellion against the Germans during World War II.

About 750 Jews with few arms and no military training made their opening attack on April 19, 1943, on a much larger and well-equipped German force. The attack came after most of the nearly half a million inhabitants of the ghetto had already been sent to die at Treblinka.

The insurgency came when it was clear the Nazis were about to send the remaining residents of the ghetto to die too. The revolt was crushed the following month, and the ghetto was razed to the ground, most of its residents killed.

"We knew that the end would be the same for everyone. The thought of waging an uprising was dictated by our determination. We wanted to choose the kind of death we would die," said Rotem, an 88-year-old who is among a tiny number of surviving fighters and was the key figure at the ceremony. "But to this day I have doubts as to whether we had the right to carry out the uprising and shorten the lives of people by a day, a week, or two weeks. No one gave us that right and I have to live with my doubts."

Rotem's uncertainty is in stark contrast to how the world remembers the revolt. Though a clear military defeat, it is hailed as a moral victory for the Jewish fighters, who refused to go without a fight to the gas chambers. It is prominently commemorated in Israel, part of a never-again ethos that stresses the importance of self-defense.

"The Nazi Germans made a hell on earth of the ghetto," Komorowski said in a speech. "Persecuting the Jews appealed to the lowest of human instincts."

During the ceremonies, Komorowski bestowed one of the country's highest honors on Rotem — the Grand Cross of the Order of the Rebirth of Poland. Later the two of them, along with Israeli Education Minister Shai Piron and Wladyslaw Bartoszewski, a Polish Auschwitz survivor who helped rescue Jews during the war, walked side-by-side to the monument and bowed before it as soldiers laid a wreath for them.

To a military drum, other dignitaries followed them in paying their respects at the dark memorial to suffering and struggle, including Polish Prime Minister Donald Tusk, members of Poland's Jewish community and U.S. Ambassador Stephen Mull along with an American survivor of the Warsaw ghetto, Estelle Laughlin.

Poland's chief rabbi and a cantor also recited mournful Hebrew prayers as they were joined by three Polish army chaplains, one Catholic, one Eastern Orthodox and one Protestant. Psalm 130, which starts, "Out of the depths I cry to you, O Lord! ..." was recited in Hebrew and Polish.

Officials had announced that a second surviving fighter, Havka Folman Raban, would also participate, but she was not featured in television coverage and it was unclear if she actually was there.

It's not clear how many of the fighters are still living, but the number is tiny, with Polish authorities saying they believe there are perhaps four. One, Boruch Spiegel, is 93 and living in a home for the elderly in Montreal. He was presented with a state honor in Warsaw on the 60th anniversary of the uprising but was unable to attend commemorations this year.

Throughout Warsaw, national and city flags fluttered from city buses, trams and public buildings as authorities made an unprecedented effort to encourage Poles to remember the ghetto fighters and Jewish suffering during the war. Warsaw city hall said it is the first time that churches in the capital rang their bells to mark the anniversary.

Though the Warsaw ghetto uprising is well-known worldwide, it hasn't received the same level of attention among Poles, for whom a separate city-wide revolt in 1944 plays a much more critical role in national memory.

Authorities, however, have been trying to change this and to convince Poles that the ghetto uprising is a key moment not just in Jewish but also in broader Polish history.

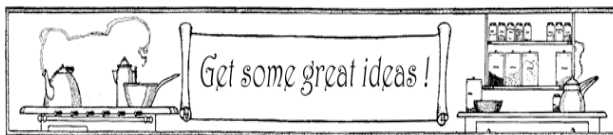

Newspaper articles in recent days have stressed the Polishness of the Jewish revolt, while officials have encouraged Warsaw residents to get involved in a month of commemorations that ends on May 16. That is the day in 1943 when the Nazis blew up the Great Synagogue, a jewel of 19th-century architecture, to symbolize their crushing of the revolt.

The events Friday followed an evening of commemorations on Thursday featuring the Israel Philharmonic Orchestra.

Israel also marked the anniversary of the uprising on its Holocaust Remembrance Day, April 7, which coincided with the Hebrew date of the anniversary of the Warsaw ghetto uprising.

DEAR ABBY: I am a 16-year-old girl from Serbia. I have been in U.S. for two years and I'm studying English in an ESL class. I read your column and could use some help to solve my problem because I am very upset.

DEAR ABBY
Jeanne Phillips

I have known my best friend, "Vanessa," for a year and a half. She is my age and we were very close. She had to leave school because her family moved. I can't visit her because she is too far away. I cried because I don't know if she is going to remember me or if she is going to forget all about me. I'm so afraid I am going to lose her. Can you help me?

— SAD IN BUFFALO

DEAR SAD: You are obviously doing well in your ESL studies, and for that I congratulate you. Because you and Vanessa no longer live close does not mean that you can't still be friends. Although she has moved to a different geographical location, you can maintain a friendship because she is as near as your phone or computer.

Because you want to still be a part of her life, keep her updated on what is going on in your life and ask her to do the same. That is the way long-distance relationships are maintained, and some of them have been known to last a lifetime.

DEAR ABBY: I have been dating my boyfriend, "Adam," for three years. Although we are young, we are serious about our relationship. Not too long after we started dating, Adam began staying over at my house on most weekends. I live with my mom, who is 47.

For the past year when Adam comes to visit, my mom has been coming out of her bedroom in her bra and panties, for the most part exposed. She also makes flirtatious comments to Adam that I feel are completely inappropriate.

I have tried talking to her about it, letting her know how uncomfortable Adam and I and some of my friends are about it. I hoped she would understand, but she continues with the flirting and underdressing. What can I do about this? I'm desperate to try anything.

— DESPERATE IN MAINE

DEAR DESPERATE: You may be desperate, but not as desperate as it appears your mother is for attention. Because talking to her hasn't helped, accept that she is not going to change her behavior. Have Adam stay over less often. When you meet with your friends, do it at someone else's house. And if you can afford to move elsewhere, you should consider it.

DEAR ABBY: I am a single mother of a 12-year-old boy. Three or four of his friends are constantly over at our house, and I feel obligated to feed and/or entertain them. Their parents don't send money for their meals and often don't even call to check on them, so they are left spending the night here.

I don't mind the boys staying with us, but I don't think I should be expected to pay for their food and fun or feel guilty if my son and I eat and they don't. Any suggestions?

— SINGLE MOM IN THE SOUTH

DEAR SINGLE MOM: Call the boys' parents and have a friendly chat with them. I agree that the current situation isn't fair to you, and because the boys are at your home so often, their parents should be chipping in. Alternatively, start sending the boys home at dinner time.

HAGERMAN

THE ACES ON BRIDGE® Bobby Wolff

"When everyone is wrong, everyone is right."
— Nivelle de la Chaussee

In today's deal from a recent knockout match, there were instructive points for both declarer and the defenders.

In both rooms, West led his singleton heart against four spades. In one room, declarer won and played the king and ace of spades. When East showed out, declarer started cashing hearts, but when West ruffed and exited with a trump, declarer had nine tricks and no more.

In the other room, when East's 10 appeared on the first round of trump, South could foresee that both major suits were likely to break badly. So, at trick three, he played a diamond, ducking East's nine. East gave his partner a heart ruff, but that worked only to declarer's advantage. If West now played a trump, declarer had 10 tricks, so he did the best he could by playing a diamond, but declarer discarded from dummy and made the rest of the tricks.

East should have worked out to continue with a second diamond rather than switch to a heart. If he does, all declarer can do is ruff in dummy and play a heart, but West trumps and plays the diamond ace. Again, declarer has only nine tricks. So can you see where both declarers went wrong?

After the heart lead, declarer simply needs to play four rounds of trump, giving West his trump trick. What can West do? A diamond is fatal, so he must play a club, covered by the jack, king and ace. Declarer simply plays a second club to establish his 10th trick in that suit.

ANSWER: Until you know the secret, it may perhaps be tempting to raise spades here. The best call, though, is to bid two clubs, expecting to be able to raise spades at your next turn. This will show extras with three spades. If over two clubs your partner inquires with two diamonds, the fourth suit, jump to three spades to show extras with three-card support.

B

IF APRIL 20 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: You possess more ambition than usual during the next six months — but this could blind you to the necessity of gathering more experience before acting. Hold off until the first half of July to make irrevocable decisions or changes. At that time, you will be protected from bad results, so anything worthwhile will be a success — and if something fails there will be some good that comes from it. You might be deluged by offers, rewards, opportunities or truly beneficial advice. In October, something inspiring should come along either in the form of a romantic relationship or a mentoring experience.

HOROSCOPE

Jeraldine Saunders

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Feather your own nest. Make necessary improvements in your home or putter around in your own back yard. Relatives or neighbors might give you valuable insights or offers nuggets of wisdom.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Simple logic can leave you in the lurch. Don't get too excited by news of a get-rich scheme or a potential romance that tickles your fancy. Like ships passing in the night, everything looks better from a distance.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): An extra pair of hands makes light work. Someone will be delighted to help you with a work-related project or tag along on a social occasion. Hold off on making major investments or purchases.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): You can depend on the sun rising in the morning — as well as on reality setting in. If you have been harboring false hopes, this is the time to blow them away like smoke. Take time to re-evaluate beliefs.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): "Please" and "thank you" are the tools of the trade. Be a stickler about formalities that grease the wheels of social interaction. People appreciate social niceties and this could help prevent a misunderstanding.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Your mind is like clay and can be remolded at any time of your choosing. Although there may be serious matters at stake, you can choose to think on the bright side or focus on something else.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Walk a balance beam so you avoid choosing sides and can please almost everyone. If you let bygones be bygones, others will respond in kind. Conflicts evaporate in the face of neutrality.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Take a rain check. A dinner date or night out on the town might turn out to be duller than watching paint dry. Remain dutiful, responsible and organized, but don't start anything of importance.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): A dollar in the hand is worth two in the bush. Keep your pennies safely in the piggy bank. You may rationalize a purchase or investment because you are led astray by the desire to impress someone else.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Visiting the Land of Oz via a yellow brick road is a tricky proposition. After all that effort, you might find that the wizard went on vacation. Don't get carried away or invest too much time into fantasies.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Watch the road ahead, not the rearview mirror. Issues from the past might waste your time or cause friction with a partner. Penny-saving opportunities can be a lifesaver if you put your thinking cap on.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Perfectly paired like two peas in a pod? Maybe. You could meet a new romantic partner and find you have plenty in common. Living out your fantasies and dreams take center stage under these stars.
