Job Shadow Inspires Student

Canyon Ridge student puts extra effort into senior project at physical therapy clinic.

BY ANDREW WEEKS

aweeks@magicvallev.com

TWIN FALLS • When Carmen Perez found out it is a requirement for high school students to complete a senior project before they can graduate, she wondered how she'd ever get one

"Really? I thought," the 18-year-old Canyon Ridge High School student told the Times-News. "On top of everything else we're supposed to do, how are we going to do this?"

But, like all seniors must, she picked a project and soon fell in love with it.

What's more, it helped her decide what she wants to do as a career. Perez wants to become a physical therapist.

Senior projects became a graduation requirement by the state this year, said high school principal Brady Dickinson. Students either have to choose a project that is career focused, community oriented or academically beneficial. They are encouraged to work on their project during the summer between their junior and senior years.

Perez, who started her project last August, is shadowing therapists at Wright Physical Therapy in Twin Falls. Students are supposed to put at least 40 hours into their projects, but Perez doubled that and continues to visit Wright's at least once a week. She also wrote a research paper and compiled a portfolio of her experiences, also a requirement.

"If she would have been graded first, no one else would have passed," Dickinson said. "Her portfolio is gorgeous. She put tons of work into it."

The portfolio includes pictures of therapy procedures, notes she took while shadowing, journal entries about her experiences and artwork she created herself.

Once an aspiring pediatrician, Perez said she changed her mind when she started her project at Wright's.

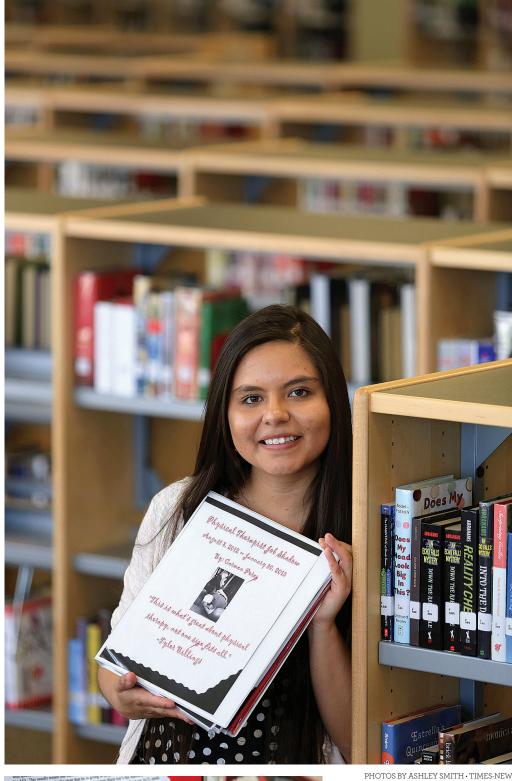

"I didn't think it (would) change my outlook on what I wanted to do," she said. "But it wound up being something I look forward to every day?

She experienced the work of a physical therapist in two ways: as a patient after she had knee surgery in October, and as a shadow. One of the things she learned is that physical therapy doesn't work the same for every person. Treatment is individualized because different bodies have different healing responses.

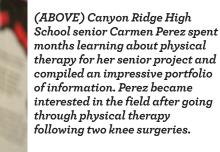

"She is very enthusiastic and took notes on everything. She was always prepared, always on time," said Wright co-owner, therapist and Perez's mentor Tyler Billings. "One day she came in here skipping. We all laughed at how excited Carmen was. She still is. She still comes in here even though she doesn't have to."

Many of the other students Billing's worked with asked him to sign a paper for them, Billings said, but Perez put her whole heart into the project.

Boise Man Faces Debt Worries

An Idaho resident planning to live in a truck is overwhelmed by health care, student loan costs.

BY AUDREY DUTTON

The Idaho Statesman

BOISE • Except for a plan to live in his truck this summer, Brandon Prince is like many other 20- and 30-something Idahoans. He plays hard in the Idaho outdoors. He moved to Boise after college.

And like many of his peers, he's overwhelmed by debt, though not from a maxed-out credit card or a high-interest car loan. Prince owes more than $80,000 combined to student lenders and to St. Luke's Health System, for a culinary degree and an emergency hospital visit.

Prince

Prince, 35, is an example of what the rising costs of education and health care can lead to in a state where wages are stagnant and the percentage of workers covered by health insurance is falling. Two-thirds of Idaho college graduates now owe on student loans, with burdens averaging more than $24,000. About one in five Idahoans younger than 65 lacks any kind of health insurance.

That is leading to more student loan defaults, debt-collection lawsuits, and pleas for money from the state and county taxpayer-funded programs that were intended to cover catastrophic medical The debt isn't just carried by individuals who incur it, though - it's also borne by taxpayers. Unpaid medical debt becomes the responsibility of Idaho counties, the state and the federal government, whose health care payments and tax exemptions help support local hospitals so they can provide care to the uninsured. The federal government in many cases has agreed to pay a student loan if a graduate does not, and as a result is increasingly playing the role of debt collector.

Magic Valley Robotic Teams Make Their Mark at World Finals

Local high school students perform well in St. Louis competition.

BY ANDREW WEEKS aweeks@magicvalley.com

KIMBERLY • Several Magic Valley high schools - Buhl, Dietrich, Filer, Hansen, Hazelton, Kimberly and Twin Falls — were represented this weekend at the FTC World Championships at the Edward Jones Dome in St. Louis, Mo.

Twenty-five students and three robotic teams — Tesla Flyers, Tesla Titans and Tesla Tasers from these Magic Valley schools competed against teams from around the world.

Congratulations were in order Saturday when the Flyers won sixth place overall, said Trachelle Fullmer, outreach coordinator for the teams. The Titans took 26th and Tasers 29th. Telsa Coils, a fourth Magic Valley team that joined a Romanian team, placed ninth.

"All four teams have made a great name for our program and for all of Idaho," proud Kimberly mom Monica Cook wrote in an email to the Times-News. Her son, Andrew Cook, was a robotics driver for the Flyers.

The teams arrived in St. Louis Tuesday, with competition last Thursday-Saturday.

Flyers team members met every Tuesday and Thursday for the past three months, Cook said, Please see ROBOTICS, A4

False War Stories Lead to Discipline of Ex-Law Officer

KALISPELL, Mont. (AP) • A former Lake County sheriff's sergeant who officials say fabricated a military war record has been stripped of his law certifications and had his name entered in a national database that will likely dissuade other law agencies from hiring him.

The Flathead Beacon reports the Montana Public Safety Officer Standards and Training Council last week voted unanimously to permanently revoke Dan Duryee's certificates.

Officials say Duryee lied both on and off duty about serving in the Marine Corps in the first Gulf War, killing enemy combatants, losing comrades and friends, receiving a napalm wound and scar on his arm, and suffering from post-traumatic stress syndrome.

Duryee says he never served in the military and falsely claimed he did, but denies making many other statements attributed to him.

He resigned earlier this year during the investigation.

Reward Boosted for Info about Tortured Cats

PROVO, Utah (AP) • The Humane Society of Utah is increasing its reward for information leading to a conviction of a suspect in the torture of several cats around Provo over the past month.

The group is now offering a $5,000 reward, up from the $3,000 reward announced last week.

Provo police say the first incident involved four cats that had been bound with tape, strangled with rope or wire and burned.

A few of the animals had been laid on the railroad tracks to be decapitated or cut in half.

Police say two more dead cats recently turned up in the same area.

Investigators think someone is trapping the animals. At least one of the cats was someone's pet. It's not clear if the others were strays or had homes.

Former Republican presidential candidate Mitt Romney delivers the commencement address at Southern Virginia University on Saturday in Buena Vista, Va. Romney is planning a four-day event in Utah to be held this summer.

Romney Planning Event in Park City

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) • Former Republican presidential candidate Mitt Romney is bringing high-profile political figures, business leaders and campaign donors to Utah this summer for a retreat to discuss "key opportunities." The four-day event will feature speeches from Republicans, including Romney's 2012 running mate, Wisconsin Rep. Paul Ryan, and New Jersey Gov. Chris Christie, and some prominent Democrats, according to a report in the Boston Globe.

President Barack Obama's former senior adviser David Axelrod and Los Angeles Mayor Antonio Villaraigosa, who served as chairman of last year's Democratic National Convention, are also slated to speak, according to an email sent to Romney supporters.

The summit, titled "Experts and Enthusiasts," will be held in June at the Deer Valley Resort in Park City.

Hewlett-Packard CEO Meg Whitman, Sun Microsystems co-founder Scott McNealy and Harvard Business School professor Clayton M. Christensen are also listed as speakers.

Event attendees must pay a $5,000 fee, which is not a political contribution but covers a portion of the cost of the conference, the newspaper reported. Many of the donors are investors in Solamere Capital, a venture capital firm founded by Romney's oldest son, Tagg.

Brandon Prince of Boise packs his pickup he intends to live in this summer to reduce his debtload.

The debt also burdens others in the economy. A graduate with debt payments is less likely to drop $50 at a local restaurant on a Saturday night. Instead, that person is likely - in as many as 40 percent of cases - to delay buying a home or even a new car when the clunker hits 150,000 miles. He or she waits to get married and moves in with parents or a roommate to save money.

Or, in Prince's case, he moves into a makeshift bedroom in the back of his truck, resigned to working until he dies, and crosses his fingers that he doesn't have another medical emergency.

The problems for Prince began when he enrolled in culinary school in Portland seven years ago and paid for it with student loans. After graduating, he moved to Boise in October 2007, seeking better job prospects. An Idaho native, he says he had missed his home state. But he couldn't find steady work as a chef. He works in a Boise store now, earning too little to pay off his student loans, which started at about $42,700 and now total about $61,000, thanks to interest and fees.

He started having pains last fall that felt an awful lot like the kidney stones he'd passed at St. Luke's Regional Medical Center more than 10 years ago. He went to the hospital's ER, where he learned he was suffering from kidney stones again — including one large enough to present a medical emergency.

After a CT scan, "a nurse came into my room with a tray of tools and a smile," he wrote later in a letter to St. Luke's. Prince was headed for surgery.

"I remembered the sign in the front room of the emergency room, the one that says, 'No one will be denied care on the basis of inability to pay? I felt nervous, but reassured that I would be taken care of," he wrote. "I know very little about how hospitals and nonprofit organizations work, but I assumed part of their charter was to work on some sort of 'slidingscale' for services, including charity care they could take as a tax credit. I work mostly part-time at a customer service job that pays $10 an hour.

where on that sliding scale." After a fairly complicated surgery to break up and remove the stones from one of his kidneys, Prince went home. His total bill, including a follow-up visit, $26,104.36.

Surely, I thought, I fall some-

"I knew I didn't have the money to go to the hospital and did everything in my power to avoid going there, including putting myself at risk for complicated kidney disease," Prince wrote.

"I simply felt that if I endured long enough, the problem would right itself, and I would not have to ask for charity or forgiveness."

The hospital applied almost immediately for Medicaid on his behalf to the Idaho Department of Health and Welfare. The application was denied, so the hospital turned to the payer of last resort, the county's medically indigent

Idaho counties and the state both cover medical bills for patients who aren't capable of paying them off over several years. That program is under a growing burden, according to state and county officials. It spent more than $55 million statewide in the last fiscal year on 6,491 cases like Prince's, according to a presentation to the Legislature's Joint Finance-Appropriations Committee.

Almost 60 percent of claims for catastrophic coverage were denied in fiscal 2011, because the person didn't qualify or for other reasons, according to the Idaho Association of Counties.

St. Luke's routinely files applications for uninsured, poor patients when their bills hit $8,000. If Prince's bills are covered through the program, St. Luke's will recoup about half of what it charged him and write off the rest as charity care, the health system's spokesman said. Ada County may then try to collect some of the money, placing a lien on property - in Prince's case, his truck — but "has not ever foreclosed on any of its liens that I'm aware of," said county spokeswoman Jessica Donald.

The county does set up a payment plan of at least $25 a month with no interest for patients who are required to repay the costs.

The governments get very little of that money back. Ada County's indigent services program recovered $573,000 for the county and $369,000 for the state catastrophic fund, up from $555,000 for the county and state in 2011 and $462,000 in 2010.

Prince makes a low enough income to qualify for Medicaid - but only under a federal expansion of the public health insurance program that would cover Idaho's low-income, childless men and women. A state-commissioned study found that Idaho would save $478 million in property taxes by covering people like Prince under a broader program financed mostly by the federal government. Leaders in the Idaho Legislature decided to pass on that expansion this year and keep the catastrophic-costs program for at least another year. If his application for state and county assistance is denied, Prince would likely receive St. Luke's financial assistance or be put on a payment plan, said St. Luke's spokesman Ken Dey. The hospital isn't charging him interest at this point.

Meanwhile, Prince's student debt overshadows the average Idaho graduate's by tens of thousands of dollars. He's not sure he'll ever repay that debt, a blend of federal and private loans.

He says he feels like a distressed homeowner, thinking, "I can't solve it, so I'm just going to walk away from

He has already gone through bankruptcy - not to undo his student debt, which federal law prohibits, but to clear away other debts so paying his student loans would be easier.

When he got the bill for his St. Luke's care, he wondered whether he'd have to file for bankruptcy again. He hopes it won't come to that.

Prince also still has kidney stones that could present another medical crisis. He said he can't afford the tests and treatments that could keep the problem from reaching that point.

He is quick to praise everyone he interacted with at St. Luke's. He also isn't contesting how much he was charged. He says he just doesn't want to put taxpayers on the hook.

"The last thing I expect is pity," he wrote. "I know life's not fair. It was my damn kidney that made the stone. It's my fault and my responsibility.... It's admittedly dramatic, but if curing me meant stripping freedom and happiness out of my life, I might as well have refused to sign the papers, pulled the IV out of my arm and walked out to sit on the sidewalk and wait for my kidney to fail."

Southeast Idaho Man Objects to 3 Crosses on Town's Water Tower

ROBERTS (AP) • Officials in the southeast Idaho town of Roberts are violating the constitutional separation between church and state by displaying three lighted crosses on the water tower, a resident Joe Cohea said the tower across the street from his home is city property and shouldn't contain any religious symbols or displays.

"It might not only be offensive, but intimidating to some people," Cohea told KIFI-TV. "There are Native American religions and Buddhists and Hindu that I know of here, and there's also an individual that is Jewish."

Robert "B.J." Berlin, mayor of the town with 700 residents, said the city is not getting in the way of anyone's religion and there's nothing wrong with displaying the crosses.

"We understand not everyone's a Christian, not everyone's a God-fearing person and that's fine,' said Berlin. "Government will not create any state religion and will not deter or get in the way of anybody's religion. The City of Roberts abides by the Constitution."

Cohea added that the lights contain various colors.

"Red, white and blue must mean that Christianity is equated with patriotism, I suppose," he said.

Besides the three crosses, Cohea said the city also displays a Nativity scene at the city park during Christmas.

He said he's contacted the American Civil Liberties Union, and he's scheduled to talk to the city council next month.

Hospital to Diagnose Vets' Memory Problems

JACKSON, Wyo. (AP) • Veterans from Wyoming and Idaho soon will be able to get their memory checked remotely by St. John's Institute for Cognitive Health.

The Jackson clinic plans to purchase an $8,000 telemedicine system and virtually connect to veterans affairs clinics in Aspen, Colo., and Pocatello and Idaho Falls.

The technology will enable staff in Jackson to analyze and diagnosis veterans' memory problems, all for no charge to the patient.

Dr. Martha Stearn is founding director of the Jackson institute.

Stearn tells the Jackson Hole News & Guide that the clinic can reach more people without inconveniencing them, especially in the winter.

Some Idaho Stream Gauges Avoid Budget Cut

BOISE (AP) • It appears that only three rather than five stream flow gauges in Idaho will be shut off on Wednesday.

The U.S. Geological Survey's Idaho Water Science Center tells The Spokesman-Reviewthat a cut in a federally funded program that supports 31 stream gauges statewide will likely be less than expected.

"It's still something of a fluid issue in terms of exactly how much the cut was going to be," said Michael Lewis, the center's director. "We're probably looking at a 5.2 percent cut."

He had expected a 7 to 8 percent cut but found out otherwise Thursday. The cut to Idaho stream flow gauges is part of the $85 billion in across-theboard federal spending cuts - known as the sequester - that took effect last month at government agencies.

Lewis said the gauges on the Little Salmon River at Riggins and on the Little Lost River near Howe will remain operating. Stream gauges collect scientific information and are also used by river runners and anglers to check stream flows, and for water rights management. The gauge at Riggins in particular is of interest to recreational users.

"It's certainly critical for the recreational industry of whitewater rafting, kayaking, fishing," Lewis said. "I've heard quite a bit from the public."

The gauge near Howe, the only gauge on the Little Lost River, is viewed as critical for administering water rights and agricultural irrigation.

River gauges remaining on the list to stop operating include one on the South Fork of the Clearwater River near Elk City, one on Lapwai Creek near Lapwai on the Nez Perce Reservation, and one in the Snake River drainage at the Gray's Lake Outlet. Those gauges have supplied information from 26 to 41 years.

Lewis said shutting down the three gauges will save the USGS about $23,000 through the end of the fiscal year, Sept. 30. He said he's cautiously optimistic that the gauges will eventually be turned back on.

"I think once we get through the sequester, hopefully we'll see the budget come back for those gauges," he said.

Of the 31 gauges in Idaho, seven have supplied continuous data for 100 years or more.

"From a scientific perspective, that is absolutely invaluable," he

A 'Miracle' Discovered by the US Navy Could Flush Your Arteries Clean Of All Life-Threatening Arterial Plaque

Amino acid discovery dissolves plaque in arteries, restores youthful blood flow and energy

LOS ANGELES, CALIFORNIA — There's a little known secret that many pharmaceutical companies and doctors hope you never discover.

It concerns the existence of a safe* but obscure amino acid that, when taken in pill form, could actually scrub and clean out harmful plaque from the human circulatory system.

In the process, it could remove years of built-up, life-threatening plaque, sludge and gunk from your veins and arteries, and help lessen the risk of a stroke or heart attack, and possibly even add up to as much as 20 extra years to your life.

"It's remarkable stuff," says Andrew Garcia of Coral Gables, Florida, referring to ethylene diamine tetraacetic acid, or EDTA.

"Unknown to the general public, it's found in soft drinks, cosmetics, and even baby food!"

"It's been proven in more than 1,820 medical studies and declared 100% safe as a food additive by both the FDA and USDA," says Garcia, CEO of Miracle Breakthrough Labs of Coral Gables, Florida, a nutritional laboratory that makes a pharmaceutically advanced EDTA formula.

Does this obscure ingredient found in baby food and soft drinks really pose a threat to modern cardiovascular medicine?

procedures like angioplasty and coronary bypass surgery? Perhaps, says Garcia, citing other possible benefits like better vision, more energy, a stronger immune system, and increased blood flow throughout the body, which often improves sexual performance in both men and

In the 1940s, the US Navy began using EDTA to remove dangerous levels of metals and toxins from the circulatory systems of sailors.

It worked so well and with such a high degree of safety that the US Food and Drug Administration approved it as

Will EDTA replace expensive the leading treatment for heavy metal poisoning.

Curious Side Effect

But doctors noted a curious side effect: the sailors' cardiovascular health had improved. Their blood vessels were inexplicably freer of blockages.

Two-time Nobel Prizewinning scientist Dr. Linus Pauling was the first to discover that EDTA was not only a powerful way to eliminate heavy metals and poisons from the body, but also flush away dangerous deposits of plaque that stick to the inner walls of arteries.

Along with supportive nutrients, Garcia's formula contains a powerful form of EDTA that, immediately after ingestion, begins to scour blood vessels for plaque blockages, from tiny micro-capillaries to major arteries. Its effects are felt quickly, says Garcia, adding, "Needless to say, everyone's different; results do vary."

WWII Vet Who Provided Flag on Iwo Jima Dies

LOS ANGELES (AP) • Alan Wood, a World War II veteran credited with providing the flag in the famous flag-raising on Iwo Jima, has died. He was 90.

Wood died April 18 of natural causes at his Sierra Madre home, his son Steven Wood said Saturday.

Wood was a 22-year-old Navy officer in charge of communications on a landing ship on Iwo Jima's shores Feb. 23, 1945 when a Marine asked him for the biggest flag that he could find. After five days of fighting to capture the Japaneseheld island, U.S. forces had managed to scale Mount Suribachi to hoist an American flag.

Wood happened to have a 37-square-foot flag he had found months before in a Pearl Harbor Navy depot.

Five Marines and a Navy Corpsman later raised that flag in a stirring moment captured by Associated Press photographer Joe Rosenthal.

Steven Wood says his father was always humbled by his small role in the historic

In a 1945 letter to a Marine general who asked for details about the flag, Wood wrote: "The fact that there were men among us who were able to face a situation like Iwo where human life is so cheap, is something to make humble those of us who were so very fortunate not to be called upon to endure such hell."

In its story on Wood's death, the Los Angeles Times reported that over the years others have claimed that they provided the flag, but retired Marine Col. Dave Severance, who commanded the company that took Mount Suribachi, said in an interview last week that it was Wood.

"I have a file of more than 60 people who claim to have had something to do with the flags," he said from his home in La Jolla, Calif.

Wood went on to work as technical artist spokesman at the Jet Propulsion Laboratory in La Canada Flintridge.

His wife, Elizabeth, died in 1985. Besides his son, Wood was survived by three grandchildren.

Female Soldiers Fought, Bled and Died in Civil War, Then Were Forgotten

THE WASHINGTON POST

Under a deadly barrage of artillery fire, wave after wave of Union troops hurled themselves across an open field outside of Fredericksburg, Va., on a bitterly cold mid-December day and charged up a steep hill in a futile attempt to dislodge Confederates dug in atop Marye's Heights.

By nightfall, nearly 13,000 Union troops lay dead or wounded - double the number of fallen Confederates - and a "young and good-looking" corporal from New Jersey that a comrade described as "a real soldierly, thoroughly military fellow," was promoted to sergeant for bravery.

One month later, the sergeant, a veteran of the Seven Days Battle and Antietam, gave birth to a baby boy.

"What use have we for women, if soldiers in the army can give birth to children?" an astonished Col. Elijah H.C. Cavins, of the 14th Indiana, wrote to his

The New Jersey sergeant, whose name and fate have been lost to history, was not the only woman disguised as a man fighting at Fredericksburg that day. Sarah Emma Edmonds, using the alias Pvt. Franklin Thompson, spent 12 hours on her horse, often under enemy fire, delivering dispatches as the orderly to Union Gen. Orlando Poe.

A teenaged Lizzie Compton, whom fellow soldiers knew as Jack or Johnny, was discovered to be a woman only after the battle when military doctors peeled her blue uniform away to treat a shrapnel wound to her side. Discharged – it was illegal to serve in the military as a woman - Compton would go on to reenlist in and be discovered by six more regiments and serve in the Union army a total of 18 months.

In January, the Pentagon agreed to allow women to fight in combat. But what was ignored in that controversial debate was the longforgotten history of hundreds of American women who had fought bravely in the nation's wars, won battlefield citations for valor and died on the front lines.

Their ranks include Deborah Sampson, who served for 17 months in the Continental Army during the Revolutionary War as Robert Shurtliff, and Lucy Brewer, who served with the Marines aboard Old Ironsides as George Baker during the War of 1812. And historians have found that an estimated 400 to 1,000 women, perhaps more, disguised themselves as men and took up arms in the Civil War.

"We just lifted the ban on women in combat as if it were a new phenomenon. It's not. said Elizabeth Leonard, a historian at Colby College in Maine who has studied women soldiers of the Civil War. "It's that we let these stories disappear."

DeAnne Blanton, a military historian at the National Archives, and Lauren Cook Wike have spent more than a decade meticulously combing diaries, letters, burial records, military reports and newspapers documenting the service of women soldiers.

In their book, "They Fought Like Demons," they found evidence that at least 250 women dressed as men and fought for the North and the South in virtually every major battle of the bloody Civil War.

At least eight women combatants fought at Antietam. Catherine Davidson's right arm was amputated. Mary Galloway was shot in the neck. A woman fighting for the Confederates died in the Cornfield at Antietam.

Five women fought at Gettysburg. One Confederate woman was shot in the leg, and two were cut down in Pickett's Charge.

Women soldiers fought in the First Battle of Bull Run. "There were a great many fanatic women in the Yankee army," a Georgia Confederate wrote home, "some of whom were killed." In fighting near Dallas in May 1864, several Confederate women soldiers were killed in an assault on Union lines. "They fought like demons," Sgt. Robert Ardry of the 11th Illinois Infantry wrote to his father, "and we cut them down like Confederate Loreta Janeta Velazquez, disguised as Lt. Harry Buford, fought along with five other women soldiers in the Battle of Shiloh. Maria Lewis, an African-American passing as a white male soldier, served in the 8th New York Cavalry and "skirmished and fought like the rest," a fellow soldier wrote. Four Confederate women were promoted to the rank of captain. At least one was a major.

"We know that because these women were hiding the fact that they were women, they were fully expected to do everything that any other soldier in the company was expected to do," Blanton said.

"They didn't get a pass because of their gender. They were hiding their gender."

It was easy for women to infiltrate the Union and Confederate ranks. Although Army regulations required all recruits to have a physical, the examinations became cursory as each side became desperate for fresh troops. "Often, they'd just have recruits walk by," Blanton said. "And if they weren't lame or blind and if their trigger finger worked, they were in."

Founder of 99 Cents Only Stores Dies at 80

LOS ANGELES (AP) • Dave Gold, the founder of the 99 Cents Only Stores more than three decades ago who saw it expand into a billion-dollar empire, has died. He was 80.

Gold died Monday of an apparent heart attack at his Los Angeles home, his son, Jeff Gold, told the Los Angeles Times in a story published Saturday.

Gold was 50 when he opened the first store in 1982. He told the Times in 2003 that while working at his father's liquor store, he discovered that items he discounted to, say, 98 cents or $1.02 never sold out but a 99-cent label was magic.

"When I put a 99-cent sign on anything, it was gone in no time," he said. "I thought, wouldn't it be fun to have a store where everything was good quality and everything was 99 cents?"

He gave the dollar-store concept, which at the time was perceived as retail graveyards for expired or broken products, a fresh spin by making the stores bigger, brighter and better organized. His stores eventually spread to middle-class and even upscale neighborhoods in California, Arizona, Nevada and Texas.

The chain's ads displayed his sense of humor. One congratulated the Los Angeles Dodgers "on losing 99 games." Another wished Joan Rivers "Happy 99th Facelift." The company was sold in lionaire but lived modestly. His family said he lived in the same middle-class home for nearly five decades with Sherry, his wife of 55 years, and drove the same Toyota Prius he purchased in 2000.

The U.S. Navy's Blue Angels fly in formation above a crowd of spectators at the Jacksonville Sea and Sky Spectacular in Jacksonville Beach, Fla., last year. The Blue Angels and the U.S. Air Force's Thunderbirds have canceled their 2013 seasons because of the automatic federal budget cuts causing about 60 cancellations thus far and affecting more than 200 of the approximately 300 air shows held each year.

Air Shows Don't Go On without Military Aircraft

Federal budget cuts ground Blue Angels, Thunderbirds.

MILWAUKEE (AP) Dozens of air shows that draw tens of thousands of people and generate millions of dollars for local economies have been canceled this year after the military grounded its jet and demonstration teams because of automatic federal budget cuts.

For years, the biggest draws at air shows have been the military's two elite jet teams, the U.S. Navy's Blue Angels and the U.S. Air Force's Thunderbirds, and their intricate stunts. The armed services also have provided F-16, F-18 and F-22 fighter jets and the U.S. Army Parachute Team, known as the Golden Knights. All the teams were grounded as of April 1 to save money, and the military also dramatically curtailed its help with ground displays of various aircraft.

Those cutbacks have affected more than 200 of the approximately 300 air shows held in the United States each year, said John Cudahy, president of the International Council of Air Shows. About 60 shows have been canceled, and he expects more cancellations as the season progresses and hope for restoration of the budget cuts fades. He predicted 15 percent to 20 percent of the shows won't return next year, even if the military begins participating again.

"The worst case is that they either cancel and go out of business, or they don't cancel and they have such poor attendance and they go out of business," he said.

Local economies also will feel the sting of the cancellations without the air shows bringing in crucial tourism dollars.

Representatives for some of the nation's biggest air shows, such as the air and water shows in Chicago and Milwaukee and the Experimental Aircraft Association's Air Venture in Oshkosh, Wis., said they didn't expect a lack of active military jets to affect their events. The Chicago and Milwaukee shows are held along the shore of Lake Michigan, where large crowds are expected to gather for a free spectacle; the Oshkosh event is primarily a convention of pilots and aviation enthusiasts, with an air show attached.

But organizers of other events said they expected such a dramatic drop in attendance that they felt they had to cancel.

Thunder over the Blue Ridge in Martinsburg, W.V., an easy day trip from Baltimore and Washington, won't happen. The two-day show drew 88,000 people when the Thunderbirds performed in 2010, said Bill Walkup, one of the board members and manager of the Martinsburg airport.

"Having the Thunderbirds or the Blue Angels is like having the Super Bowl, it's a household name," Walkup said. Without a jet team, the show typically draws 15,000 or fewer.

Organizers also faced a challenge because the show had been hosted for the past few years by the West Virginia Air National Guard. After the Guard said it couldn't do that because of budget cuts, organizers considered hosting the show at the civilian side of the airport - un-Thunderbirds the til canceled.

"When this happened, it just put us out of business," Walkup said.

Maj. Darrick Lee, spokesman for the Thunderbirds, said a typical season averages about $9.75 million and the Air Force needs to focus its resources now on its mission in Afghanistan. Team members are still doing local public appearances that have little or no cost, he said.

"Would we prefer to be flying? Of course," he said. But, he added, "We encourage folks to go and have a good time with or without

Organizers cancelled the Indianapolis Air Show in February because of concerns the Blue Angels wouldn't participate, said Robert Duncan, chairman of the show's executive committee. The jet team makes a 25 percent to 30 percent difference in the gate admissions, and sponsors weren't signing up as quickly because of uncertainty about the Blue Angels. The committee is trying to reinvent the show for next year, perhaps by adding a 5k run, carnival games or more civilian aircraft, Duncan said.

Many air shows, including those in Martinsburg and Indianapolis, benefit charities. They also generate millions of dollars in tourism, benefiting hotels, rental car companies and restaurants. Economic impact studies indicate the shows are worth $1 billion to $2 billion nationwide, Cudahy said.

Bob Anderson, of Tallahassee, Fla., is among those whose businesses have been hurt. For more than a decade, he and his wife, Sandy, have sold Blue Angels and Thunderbirds T-shirts and other apparel at shows. In a typical year, they go to more than 20 of them and sales surpass $250,000.

Owner of Collapsed Building Captured

Fire breaks out at site; death toll now 377.

SAVAR, Bangladesh (AP) • The fugitive owner of an illegally constructed building that collapsed and killed at least 377 people was captured Sunday by a commando force as he tried to flee into India. At the disaster site, meanwhile, fire broke out in the wreckage and forced authorities to suspend the search for survivors temporarily.

Mohammed Sohel Rana was arrested in the western Bangladesh border town of Benapole, said Jahangir Kabir Nanak, junior minister for local government. Rana was brought back by helicopter to the capital of Dhaka where he faced charges of negligence.

Rana's capture was announced by loudspeaker at the disaster site, drawing cheers and applause from those awaiting the outcome of a continuing search-andrescue operation for survivors of Wednesday's collapse.

Many of those killed were workers at clothing factories in the building, known as the Rana Plaza, and the collapse was the deadliest disaster to hit the garment industry in Bangladesh that is worth $20 billion annually and is a mainstay of the economy.

A Bangladeshi woman weeps as she sits next to the coffin of a relative who died in a building that collapsed Wednesday in Savar.

The fire that broke out late Sunday night sent smoke pouring from the piles of shattered concrete and halted some of the rescue efforts including a bid to free a woman who was found trapped in the rubble.

The blaze was caused by sparks as rescuers tried to cut through a steel rod to reach the woman, said a volunteer, Syed Al-Amin Roman. At least three rescuers were injured in the fire, he said. It forced them to retreat while firefighters frantically hosed down the flames.

Officials believe the fire is likely to have killed the trapped woman, said army spokesman Shahinul Islam. Rescue workers had delayed the use of heavy equipment for several hours in the hope that she could be extricated from the rubble first. But with the woman presumed dead, they began using heavy equipment around midnight. An exhausted and disheveled Rana was brought before reporters briefly at the Dhaka headquarters of the commando team, the Rapid Action Battalion.

Wearing a printed shirt, Rana was sweating as two security officers held him by his arms. A security official helped him to drink water after he gestured he was thirsty. He did not speak during the 10-minute appearance, and he is likely to be handed over to police, who will have to charge him and produce him in court within 24 hours

Lawmakers: Syria Chemical Weapons Could Menace United States

WASHINGTON • Syria's stockpile of chemical weapons could be a greater threat after that nation's president leaves power and could end up targeting Americans at home, lawmakers warned Sunday as they considered a U.S. response that stops short of sending military forces there.

U.S. officials last week declared that the Syrian government probably had used chemical weapons twice in March, newly provocative acts in the 2-year civil war that has killed more than 70,000 people and displaced hundreds of thousands more. The U.S. assessment followed similar conclusions from Britain, France, Israel and Qatar — key allies eager for a more aggressive response to the Syrian conflict.

President Barack Obama has said Syria's likely action or the transfer of President Bashar Assad's stockpiles to terrorists – would cross a "red line" that would compel the United States to act.

Lawmakers sought to remind viewers on Sunday news programs of Obama's declaration while discouraging a U.S. foothold on the ground there.

"The president has laid down the line, and it can't be a dotted line. It can't be anything other than a red line," said House Intelligence Committee Chairman Rep. Mike Rogers, R-Mich. "And more than just Syria, Iran is paying attention to this. North Korea is paying attention to this."

Iraq Suspends Broadcaster Al-Jazeera

BAGHDAD • Iraqi authorities suspended the operating licenses of pan-Arab broadcaster Al-Jazeera and nine Iraqi TV channels on Sunday after accusing them of escalating sectarian tension. The move signaled the Shiite-led government's mounting worries over deteriorating security amid Sunni unrest and clashes that have left more than 180 people dead in less than a week.

The suspensions, which took effect immediately, appeared to target mainly Sunni channels known for criticizing Prime Minister Nouri al-Malik's government. Apart from Al-Jazeera, the decision affected eight Sunni and one Shiite channels.

The government's action comes as Baghdad tries to quell rising unrest in the country that erupted last week after Iraqi security forces launched a deadly crackdown on a Sunni protest site in the central city of Hawija, killing 23 people, including three soldiers.

Mental Health System Improvements as Unlikely as Gun Control In Idaho

s the battle over gun regulation continues, the argument most promoted as an alternative to gun restrictions is the need to do more about mental health. National Rifle Association President Wayne LaPierre, last December, making the case: "We have a mental health system in this country that has completely and totally collapsed."

"We have a mental health system in this country that has completely and totally collapsed."

National Rifle Association President Wayne LaPierre As a gun-rights state second to none, Idaho might be expected to go after the matter of mental health in a more serious way. As a matter of policymaking, concerns about mental health per se might be a hard sell, but propping up the argument on guns would seem to be front burner ... if problem-solving really is of much interest.

Idaho hasn't been doing (yet) what its neighbor to the south, Nevada, reportedly has been doing of late: Packing mentally ill patients on Greyhound buses and sending them to the other 49 states (1,500 or so from the Rawson-Neal Psychiatric Center at Las Vegas). But

In February, the Idaho Department of Correction, which had been seeking approval for a secure mental health facility containing 579 beds — a substantial percentage of people behind bars in Idaho as elsewhere have serious mental issues — dropped the proposal. The department said, "Director Brent Reinke decided to withdraw the proposal while the agency works with the Department of Health and Welfare, the courts, the Idaho Criminal Justice Commission and other stakeholders on developing a plan for addressing broader issues."

Could that be a longer version of: "Let's form a committee"? That would cost less than the facility.

The department outsources medical care, physical and mental, at the correctional institutions, and its current contractor is Corizon, of Brentwood, Tenn. It's a big company, providing services at 349 correctional facilities in 29 states. But as with the Corrections Corporation of America, which runs one of Idaho's prisons, there have been issues.

Last week, the Board of Correction chose to continue its Corizon contract, now valued at $27 million annually, just until January rather than for a full year. It will also solicit other bids. There were prompts for this: Idaho fined Corizon for missing benchmarks, and a federal lawsuit has added pressure for improvements. The Associated Press said in one story last week that "a federally appointed expert concluded its medical care was so bad it amounted to cruel and unusual punishment."

Just what you want to hear about prisoners who one day, sooner or later, will again be walking Idaho's streets, some of them with firearms in hand.

In Idaho, about 54,000 adults and 18,000 children have serious mental conditions; there were 222 suicides in Idaho in 2006, many attributable to mental illness. In 2008, about 17,000 of adults behind bars in Idaho had serious mental disorders (which mostly, probably, got worse under those conditions.) In the state, about 16 percent of adults with serious mental problems get help from public mental health services. There are services, but pressure from budget cuts has been crimping them more and more.

Added up, improvements in mental health treatment begin to look no more likely in Idaho than new gun regulation.

Idaho Should Reconsider Its Support of Common Core

s Idahoans engage in a statewide conversation about K-12 public school improvement, I want to add another discussion point to the mix: The state should reexamine its participation in national education standards known as Common Core.

I say this despite my deep respect and friendship for Idaho Superintendent of Public Instruction Tom Luna, a supporter of Common Core. Tom says there is a lot of misinformation out there about Common Core, propelling some of the opposition.

But Lindsey Burke, the Heritage Foundation's education policy expert, told a panel Friday in Orlando that Common Core will lead to less education choice and competition, and is, ultimately, a push for federal control of all education—public and private.

Common Core is "centralization at the whims of Washington, D.C., bureaucrats" and is more about the ease of administration for the government than it is about quality for students and parents.

Jim Stergios, of the Pioneer Institute in Boston, said Common Core's academic standards are mediocre, injurious to student academic performance in literary studies, English, mathematics and leaves students with, at best, a community college-level of readiness upon graduation. The academic rigors are so suspect, says Stergios, that some experts in education have disavowed them.

But the most compelling discussion during Friday's panel came from parents who are leading the national state-by-state effort to push back. Indiana parent Heather Crossin expressed frustration with the new Common Core-aligned curricula. Crossin said she became aware of Common Core after her third grader struggled with overwrought math homework.

Christel Swasey, from Utah, is spearheading her state's effort because of the lack of research prior to implementation.

"This is about the kids, and it is not going to have a positive result. If we don't stand up now, we will never get out" of Common Core, Swasey said.

While some 45 states have accepted Common Core, several states are reconsidering. The Republican National Committee has passed a resolution opposing Common Core.

Back to Indiana, Crossin who has been pushing legislation in her state to put Common Core in time out, is finding success. As of Friday, a bill to delay implementation was expected to head to the governor. She said she is winning in Indiana despite well-funded support for Common Core.

Said Crossin, "We have a passion to protect and defend our children's education and ultimately their future and America's future."

I'm sure that Tom Luna wants that, too, but Common Core doesn't get us where we need to be. Homogenization and standardization of education is not the answer for what ails education. If the government were to decide, for example, that all grocery stores had to sell only certain commodities in a certain way, we'd expect mediocrity to overtake the system, and investment in creativity, ingenuity and passion to decline.

The ability for parents, teachers, school boards and even state government officials to craft their own unique solutions, standards and approaches to education, to devise individualized solutions based on regional differences, marketplace demands and the learning interests and passions of schoolchildren will help education, and will help fuel the intellectual health of our nation and its people. That's why it is imperative for Idaho to reconsider, and get out of, Common Core.

Wayne Hoffman is the Executive Director of the Idaho Freedom Foundation.

Twin Falls Roads Are an Alignment Shop's Dream

I have a few questions for the city of Twin Falls.

How much money do you get from front-end shops?

I wonder if there are any roads that are smooth, nice, without holes or ruts. There are places that you can see have been worked on recently and all they have been filled with is gravel! The gravel is mostly gone so you have a blunt edge that you hit and there goes the alignment! It is also hard on the tires.

There are so many of these spots or places where the road is so bumpy it really puts your shocks to the test! These roads are great for motorcycle riding! Rough edges, bumps, potholes, very welcoming!

This is surprising because Twin has had so much road construction. But I guess there is no money to fix the roads right because it is all invested in four-door, four-wheel drive, diesel pickups. But all I see in them is one person. And at the price of fuel! Wow!

I'm glad I'm not a ratepayer in Twin. But I guess it doesn't bother the people of Twin because I keep seeing more new pickups and more people just standing around doing nothing!

Please put some effort out there and fix your roads! Try not to just put a lazy patch on them that doesn't get compacted right and settles into a big dip in the road. There are lots of those! Like I said: I'm glad I'm not a ratepayer in Twin but I do business there. Please fix your roads.

United States Needs Strategic View of War on Terror

At least this latest terrorist hasn't been charged with "sporting event violence" by Obama and may even be called a terrorist.

Islamic jihad has been conducted by a small number of radicals using the Muslim religion as cover for hundreds of years. They have attacked nearly every country and every society in the world in their quest for world domination. More Muslims have been killed by these terrorists than any other group. It's not just the United States.

Until we realize this and take a strategic view of this war, we continue at a disadvantage. We are attacked because we are a world leader and a soft target. There is absolutely nothing we can do to appease these radicals.

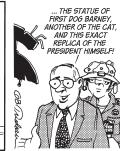

The Obama administration will immediately take the death penalty off the table to avoid radicals using this terrorist as a martyr. It makes no difference. The Muslim Brotherhood, Hamas, Iran and other groups that support this radical ideology are the enemies of all free societies in the world.

Mud Lake resident Orvin Twitchell talks about the 1981 rabbit drives in Idaho Falls. Twitchell was the Mud Lake Farmer's Rabbit Committee chairman and helped organize the drives.

Mud Lake, Idaho, Was Scene of 1981 Jackrabbit Clubbing

It made headlines across the state and the nation, including in The New York Times.

MUD LAKE • Viewed in sequence, the photos flicker like visions from a weird, feverish Jackrabbits scamper. Cudgels swing. Carcasses are stacked like bloody firewood.

The surreal scene was very real more than three decades

It made headlines across the state and the nation, including in The New York Times and a widely circulated Dec. 17, 1981, Associated Press article:

"About 800 men, women and children, armed with ax handles, baseball bats, tire tools and golf clubs, stretched across a mile of the desolate prairie near Mud Lake and rounded up jackrabbits which they claim have done an estimated $5 million in crop

"Many of the jackrabbits were beaten to death during the drive and others captured in a pen had their necks broken and their heads decapitated."

The first jackrabbit drive on record in Jefferson County was in 1891 in Market Lake, which is now Roberts, according to a 1981 Post Register article.

Drives were held in the region whenever jackrabbits threatened crops, often in correlation with their 10-year population cycle.

However, the weekly drives in the winter of 1981-1982 brought media attention that turned the drives into a national circus. There were casualties beyond the quarter-million some say more than 1 million dead jackrabbits. There were two court trials, $10 million in crop damages and a black eye dealt to the region's reputation.

Sometime in the fall of 1981, jackrabbits overran the sagebrush at a rate of about one per square acre, according to expert estimates. They spilled out of the desert and ate through haystacks and acres of grain and alfalfa. Damage estimates topped $10 million.

A jackrabbit can grow up to nine pounds and eat a pound or more of food a day.

Orvin Twitchell and other men formed the Mud Lake Farmer's Rabbit Committee and appointed Twitchell chairman. They hatched and executed a plan to hold jackrabbit drives every weekend from

"We had a problem, and we set out to fix it. We aren't talking about Peter Cottontail. These are desert rats. That's all they are."

Orvin Twitchell, former chairman of the Mud Lake Farmer's Rabbit Committee

November to March. Volunteers would walk through sagebrush, shoulder to shoulder, funneling thousands of jackrabbits toward pens where they'd be exterminated in accordance with the 4-H handbook: a swift blow to the back of the head.

Today Twitchell, 84, helps run the Mud Lake Museum.

"We had a problem, and we set out to fix it," he said. "We aren't talking about Peter Cottontail. These are desert rats. That's all they are."

As far as jackrabbit killing methods go, clubbing was beautifully simple.

Before long, the Idaho Humane Society, Fund for Animals and other animal rights groups tried to stop the drives. Their spokesmen said they understood farmers had to kill the jackrabbits; they wanted it done in a more humane fashion, and they didn't want children participating in the drives.

The Idaho Humane Society suggested shooting the jackrabbits. Twitchell responded that shooting them with hundreds of people around was a bad idea.

A plethora of alternatives emerged, including killing them with strychnine, carbon monoxide gas, electricity, relocating them and using devices that kill them instantly by driving a metal bolt into their brains.

All were too complicated, too expensive and too slow to address the problem, Twitchell said.

The drives weren't a blood sport for most of the farmers, and certainly not for lifelong farmer Gary Skidmore.

Skidmore had participated in a drive about 15 years earlier at age 8. He'd been excited for the drive as a child, but after whacking a few jackrabbits as an adult as the line huddled them toward the pens, he felt sick to his stomach and walked away from the slaughter.

"They have a high-pitch squeal," said Skidmore, now 52. "It's a little bit sad, a little bit sickening."

Volunteers came from towns and cities across the region to bash jackrabbits, including Pocatello, Idaho Falls, Arco, St. Anthony and Rexburg, Twitchell said.

Some were there for sport. "They just loved to participate," Twitchell said. "Hell, we had the same guys in the kill pens week after week after week. They enjoyed it.

"What else are those city people going to do on a Saturday?"

Reporters came from farther.

More than 100 print, TV and radio journalists descended on the town of about 200 to cover a December drive, according to a Post Register article, including a helicopter from KUTV in Salt Lake City and a second mysterious, unmarked helicopter.

Bob Ziel covered the drives for KID-TV in Idaho Falls and sent video to CBS affiliates all over the country. The only story that received more national attention in Ziel's decades of reporting was the floods following the Teton Dam breaking in 1976.

The floodwater swept away houses.

The jackrabbit drives were a different kind of sensation-

"In the pens, it was solid rabbits, like wall-to-wall carpeting," Ziel said. "Fur was flying everywhere. They went ahead with the sticks and bang, bang, bang. And that was it."

Footage of crops destroyed by jackrabbits didn't make national news, Ziel said. But rabbit bashing? You bet.

"Really, who cares about a bunch of farmers losing hay in rural Idaho?" said Ziel, who lives in Rigby. "(The national fallout) was because seeing the rabbits being bashed is very, very visual."

Lawyers from The Animal Fund took the farmers to court seeking to stop the drives on grounds of animal cruelty.

Judges backed the farmers first in district court, then in the Idaho Supreme Court.

Twitchell claims that after the decision was upheld, the head of The Animal Fund, Cleveland Amory, accused him of being a bad winner.

"I told him, 'You son of a bitch, we shouldn't be here in the first place,"' Twitchell said. "The judge didn't like me saying that in court."

The jackrabbit population fell in 1983.

Mud Lake hasn't seen a jackrabbit drive since.

What had started as an agricultural problem sprawled into spectacle. Two Nigerian ISU students and aspiring businessmen had offered to buy the jackrabbits for $6 apiece to ship to starving countrymen.

The men disappeared without paying for a truckload of jackrabbit meat en route to docks in Houston, Texas.

Nigerian Consulate General James Oche issued a statement denouncing the

"These people are punishing the image of Nigeria," Oche said. "We have no need for rabbit meat. People are not malnourished or starving in Nigeria."

More oddities followed.

Animal-rights activists admitted to infiltrating killing pens in disguises and chronicling animal cruelty. Accusations of "bunny baseball" — - tossing live rabbits to be hit with bats – grabbed national headlines.

Throughout, the Mud Lake Tavern served Bloody Bunnies - Bloody Marys served with lettuce stalks instead of celery sticks.

Twitchell received expletive-laden phone calls at all hours, as well as two boxes of hate mail. One letter was from Germany. It was addressed simply to: "Orvin Twitchell, Mud Lake, Idaho."

The letter found its way to Twitchell.

Others Saw Changes in Mother of Boston Bomb Suspects

BOSTON (AP) • In photos of her as a younger woman, Zubeidat Tsarnaeva wears a low-cut blouse and has her hair teased like a 1980s rock star. After she arrived in the U.S. from Russia in 2002, she went to beauty school and did facials at a suburban day spa.

But in recent years, people noticed a change. She began wearing a hijab and cited conspiracy theories about 9/11 being a plot against Muslims.

Now known as the angry and grieving mother of the Boston Marathon bombing suspects, Tsarnaeva is drawing increased attention after federal officials say Russian authorities intercepted her phone calls, including one in which she vaguely discussed jihad with her elder son. In another, she was recorded talking to someone in southern Russia who is under FBI investigation in an unrelated case, U.S. officials said.

Tsarnaeva insists there is no mystery. She's no terrorist, just someone who found a deeper spirituality. She insists her sons -Tamerlan, who was killed in a gunfight with police, and Dzhokhar, who was wounded and captured are innocent.

"It's all lies and hypocrisy," she told The Associated Press in Dagestan. "I'm sick and tired of all this nonsense that they make up about me and my children. People know me as a regular person, and I've never been mixed up in any criminal intentions, especially any linked to terrorism."

Amid the scrutiny, Tsarnaeva and her ex-husband, Anzor Tsarnaev, say they have put off the idea of any trip to the U.S. to reclaim their elder son's body or try to visit Dzhokhar in jail. Tsarnaev told the AP on Sunday he was too ill to travel to the U.S. Tsarnaeva faces a 2012 shoplifting charge in a Boston suburb, though it was unclear whether that

The chairman of the House Homeland Security Committee said Sunday that the FBI is investigating in the United States and overseas to determine whether the suspects in the Boston Marathon bombing received training that helped them carry out the attack.

Dzhokhar Tsarnaev, 19, is charged with joining with his older brother, Tamerlan, who's now dead, in setting off the shrapnel-packed pressure-cooker bombs. The bombs were triggered by a remote detonator of the kind used in remote-control toys, U.S. officials have said.

U.S. officials investigating the bombings have told The Associated Press that so far there is no evidence to date of a wider plot, including training, direction or funding for the attacks.

was a deterrent.

At a news conference in Dagestan with Anzor last week, Tsarnaeva appeared overwhelmed with grief one moment, defiant the next. "They already are talking about that we are terrorists, I am terrorist," she said. "They already want me, him and all of us to look (like) terrorists."

Tsarnaeva arrived in the U.S. in 2002, settling in a working-class section of Cambridge, Mass. With four children, Anzor and Zubeidat qualified for food stamps and were on and off public assistance benefits for years. The large family squeezed itself into a thirdfloor apartment.

Zubeidat took classes at the Catherine Hinds Institute of Esthetics, before becoming a state-licensed aesthetician.

The Ups and Downs of Reclassification

Low-end Classification Shuffle Projected for District IV Schools

BY DAVID BASHORE dbashore@magicvalley.com

TWIN FALLS • Enrollment projections

continue to cause upheaval among small schools in the Magic Valley and beyond.

The official enrollment figures for the Idaho High School Activities Association's 2014-16 classification cycle were released last week and, barring petitions, will force four area schools to reclassify. A fifth potentially could be making changes as well.

Valley, Community School, Light-

Valley, Community School, Lighthouse Christian, Hansen and Glenns Ferry could be on the move from their current classification arrangements — at least for one sport, as far as Glenns Ferry is concerned.

The one facing the most difficult decision is perhaps Valley, which fell just below the 160-student threshold to remain a 2A school. The Vikings' averaged enrollment figures came out at 158.5, and administrators are mulling whether to wait and see what the 2013-14 enrollment looks like before deciding their next course of action.

The biggest switch would be in football, as the drop to 1A-I status would result in playing 8-man football. There's no realistic co-op option in the area for Valley to pick up to remain 2A in football based on combined enrollment figures.

"We're still in the talking process," athletic director Brian Hardy said. "We have until September to petition up to 2A, and if we don't, we'll just stay 1A. We've talked to our coaching staff already, and we'll talk to the administration and the kids and see what the best decision for everyone is. We've talked (about) trying to put our own personal biases aside. Some people have kids involved, some have sports it affects a lot, Please see SHUFFLE, S3

ATHLETES OF THE WEER

Baseball: Casey Merritt, Twin Falls. Merritt struck out nine and allowed one hit against Canyon Ridge Saturday as the Bruins earned a three-game sweep of their cross-town rivals.

Softball: Emma Stephens, Canyon Ridge. Stephens homered to help her own cause in Game 1 of a doubleheader Saturday in Twin Falls, and also drove in four in the nightcap as the Riverhawks swept the three-game series.

Boys golf: Michael Roberts, Twin Falls. Roberts carded a 71 to finish third, the highest among local finishers, at the Canyon Ridge Invitational on Tuesday.

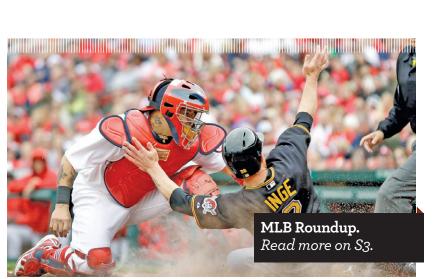

Girls golf: Sierra Harr, Castleford. Harr again led the way for the locals, scoring 71 to win the Pleasant Valley Invitational on Monday.

Boys tennis: Angel Anguiano, Burley. Anguiano earned a pair of straight-set victories as the Bobcats' No. 1 boys singles player last week.

Girls tennis: Bailey Staley and Stacie Sanderson, Minico. The Spartans' No. 1 girls doubles team breezed through the week, winning two straight-set matches and dropping just one game.

Boys track and field: Ian Keys, Wood River. Keys blistered the field at the Middleton Invitational, winning the 100 in 10.59 seconds (adjusted to 10.84 for timing purposes). It was the fastest 100-meter run in the state this year.

Girls track and field: Rachel Youren, Gooding. Youren swept the distance races at the Dairyman Invitational, then turned around and shaved 29 seconds off her 3,200 time to run 11:39 at Middleton.

Denver Nuggets' Ty Lawson, right, drives the ball past Golden State Warriors' Stephen Curry (30) during the first half of Game 4 in a first-round NBA playoff series on Sunday in Oakland, Calif.

Curry Leads Warriors past Denver 115-101 in Game 4

ASSOCIATED PRESS

OAKLAND, Calif. Stephen Curry shook off a sore left ankle to score 22 of his 31 points in the third quarter, leading the Golden State Warriors past the Denver Nuggets 115-101 on Sunday night for a commanding 3-1 series lead.

Curry shot 10 of 16 from the floor and added seven assists in a dominant and dazzling display that rivaled his days in the NCAA tournament for tiny Davidson. His five 3pointers in the third quarter lifted Golden State to a 20-point lead and its third straight victory in this frenetic and flashy series.

Jarrett Jack added 21 points and nine assists and Andrew Bogut broke out in the first half with 12 points and five rebounds for the sixth-seeded Warriors, who can close out the Nuggets in Game 5 on Tuesday night in Denver.

Ty Lawson scored 26 points and Andre Iguodala had 19 for the third-seeded Nuggets.

The Warriors lost All-Star forward David Lee to a season-ending hip injury in Game 1, and Curry sprained his left ankle late in Game 2. With Curry carrying the load anyway, none of it has seemed to matter.

The quick-shooting point guard hit 5 of 8 from beyond the arc in a spectacular third quarter, when nearly every gold-shirt wearing fan in the sellout crowd of 19,596 stood and cheered. Curry scored all 22 points in the final 6:22 of the quarter, showing the kind of range that helped him make 2723-pointers in the regular season — three more than Ray Allen's record set in 2005-06 with Curry capped his remarkable run with two of his most highlight-reel plays.

He stole the ball from Lawson, stopped in heavy traffic and dropped in a 27footer before sprinting all the way to the bench highfiving and chest-bumping teammates. Following a timeout, Curry sprung free near Denver's bench for a corner 3 that gave Golden State a 91-72 lead entering the fourth. Curry's five 3s in the quarter were a Warriors record for a half. Curry, wearing heavy tape around his nagging ankle, gave fans a scare when Corey Brewer poked Curry in the eye going for a rebound early in the fourth. Curry returned about 41/2 minutes later, receiving another standing ovation from the home fans. While Curry scored only seven points in the first half, Bogut broke out in a big way to provide the onetwo punch Golden State had long envisioned.

SPURS 103, LAKERS 82 LOS ANGELES • Tony Parker scored 23 points, and the San Antonio Spurs completed their firstround sweep of the injuryplagued Los Angeles Lakers with a 103-82 victory in Game 4 on Sunday night.

Tim Duncan had 11 points and six rebounds for the second-seeded Spurs, who will face the winner of Denver's series with Golden State in the second round. They'll get plenty of rest after flattening the Lakers, who finished without three regular starters in their first opening-round exit since 2007.

In his final game before unrestricted free agency, Dwight Howard scored seven points before getting ejected early in the third quarter for arguing. Pau Gasol had 16 points for the Lakers, who were swept from the postseason for the second time in three years despite a late courtside appearance by Kobe Bryant on crutches.

HEAT 88, BUCKS 77 MILWAUKEE • LeBron

James scored 30, Ray Allen had another big game against his old team and the Miami Heat advanced to the Eastern Conference semifinals with a victory over the Bucks. It's the first time the Heat have swept a playoff series since James and Chris Bosh joined Dwyane Wade in Miami three years ago. And the Heat didn't even need Wade to do it. The guard missed only the second postseason game of his career, and first since 2005, with three bone bruises on his right knee.

But the Heat still won handily, winning their fourth straight game by double digits.

Wade will get plenty of time to rest now, too. The Heat will face the winner of the Brooklyn Nets-Chicago Bulls series — Chicago leads 3-1 — but the next round won't begin until next Saturday.

CELTICS 97, KNICKS 90, OT

BOSTON • Jason Terry scored Boston's last nine points as the Celtics weathered a strong comeback by the Knicks and avoided being swept with a overtime win.

Paul Pierce led the Celtics with 29 points as they forced a fifth game in the series, but it was Terry who provided the finishing touches. In Game 3, he had been elbowed by J.R. Smith, and the NBA suspended the

Knicks guard for Sunday's game. New York had tied the game 84-84 after trailing by 20 points early in the third quarter. It was 88-all before the Celtics regained control and took the lead for good on a 3-pointer by Terry. Carmelo Anthony, who led the Knicks with 32 points, hit a short jumper, but Terry connected on a 15-footer with 50 seconds

After Anthony missed a 3-pointer with 21 seconds to go, Terry was fouled and sank both free throws. He added a layup to close out the game.

SHOSHONE • With all the recent events happening around the world, the words "first responders" has been heard numerous times, seemingly much too often. In times of tragedy or need, first responders are called on for help and in the sport of rodeo, competitors have come to depend on the work done by the bull Kyle Spencer from Twin Falls is living a dream and is participating in his fifth year as one of the bull fighters for the District V.

"I always liked being around the rodeos and the rodeo crowds," Spencer said. "These people are a different breed and are all hard working folks. I feel like it is an honorable position."

At 30 years old, 5-foot-11 inches and a slim 150 pounds, seeing a 1,500-lb bull charging at you can be humbling. "I've learned more to respect the animals and of the power they have. Some bulls seem to like people and others don't," Spencer said.

"Most of the learning comes from on-the-jobtraining," he said. "You just get in there and do it and take the lumps." Spencer did attend a school held by contractors, Brent Williams and Royce Ford, at the College of Southern Idaho.

"They asked if I would like to try it and it just felt right," Spencer said. And the rest is, as they say, history.

Spencer said being able to come to the aid of a cowboy really feels good but the one thing that does make him a little nervous is when the rider doesn't fit the bull.

"There is no better feeling than saving a cowboy," Spencer said. "Especially when they get up and say thank you. I work with a really good partner, Ben James. We talk and are pretty much able to read each other."

He hopes to continue in the profession, maybe even advancing to another level.

"My parents don't miss a rodeo," said Spencer. "My dad loves me doing it."

Even with her sister, Samantha getting married on Saturday, Cheyenne Logan from Jerome did her sister duties early and made it to Shoshone in time to win the opening event. The Jerome cowgirl posted a 16.888 second run in barrels for her second event win after running a 16.848 to win Friday night. With a pair of wins in goats, Savannah Fleming took over the top spot in the event standings. Fleming turned in a 9.314 time on Friday but was faster at 9.23 seconds on Saturday. On Saturday, Cassie Bahe turned in the best time of the year in breakaway roping her calf in 2.35 seconds and then the Gooding cowgirl teamed with Cody Ruby from Valley to win the team roping.

In breakaway, a time of 3.607 on Friday by Whitnee Hurless from Fairfield just edged out the 3.608 by Max McCammon from Gooding. Jerome cowgirl Morgan McCarthy got her first win of the season leaving all the poles up and finishing with a run of 21.865 on Friday

On the boys side, Pake-Os Palmer from Richfield claimed wins in calf roping and teamed with Cole Lickley from Valley to capture the Friday night team roping title.

As a rookie bareback rider, Riley Beck feels he is closer to covering one of his

"I'm determined to make a ride," said the Wood River junior. "I was about 6.5 last night (Friday). I've dreamed about doing this since I was a little kid. My mom wouldn't sign for me to ride until this year. I eat, sleep and think rodeo all the time."

Horschel Takes First PGA Win at Zurich Classic

ASSOCIATED PRESS

AVONDALE, La. • Billy Horschel sensed the time had come for him to win his first PGA Tour event. This could explain the composure he displayed in the face of two final-round weather delays and a 27-foot putt he had to make on the final hole to avert a playoff.

Horschel tied a course record at the TPC Louisiana with an 8under 64 in the final round of the Zurich Classic on Sunday, which was good enough to win by one stroke over D.A. Points.

Points put pressure on Horschel by hitting out of a bunker to set up a 5-foot birdie putt on the par-5 18th. Then Horschelrolledin his long victory-sealing putt, pumping his arms and letting out a triumphant yell before sinking into a crouch and briefly pulling his cap over his face as the crowd roared.

"I hadn't made a long one all week and I said, 'I'm due,"' Horschel said. "I was like, 'If it's my time, this putt needs to go in?

Soon after, he saw a video replay of his celebration.

"Iknowit was pretty intense;" he said. "There was a lot going on. It's celebration time now:"

Billy Horschel celebrates after sinking a birdie putt on the 18th green to win the PGA Zurich Classic golf tournament at TPC Louisiana in Avondale, La., Sunday.

Hardy added that Valley may wait in part to see what Glenns Ferry does. The Pilots have had a co-op with Bliss in past years to remain 2A, but few - if any - Bliss students have taken up the option. That, combined with Glenns Ferry's lack of competitiveness in the last couple of seasons, has some wondering if the Pilots may accept life in 1A-I for football, where most of its other sports have resided for three school years.

As of the April IHSAA meeting, no co-op agreement between Glenns Ferry and Bliss had been put forth.

The Community School and Lighthouse Christian are projected to move up from 1A-II to 1A-I, while Hansen is currently assigned to move in the opposite direction.

Community School athletic director Richard Whitelaw said the school already plans to petition back to 1A-II. The only sports it competes in currently at the 1A-II level are volleyball and basketball there is no split 1A classification for cross country and track, and there is no division below 3A for soccer and tennis.

"Most of the increase in numbers is because of our boarders on the (Sun Valley) ski team, and none of them play (the affected sports)" Whitelaw said. "We're not competitive in those sports even at the level we're at. To have to go up a division really wouldn't be good for us at all."

Lighthouse Christian also could petition. The school's numbers tend to fluctuate with the changing amounts of international students.

The deadline for petitions is Sept. 10, according to IHSAA Assistant Director Julie Hammons. Oakley, which petitioned up to 2A during the 2012-14 cycle, has already said it won't do so again and will return to

DEAR ABBY: I work in a small office with two former heavy smokers who have now transitioned to vapor/ecigarettes. My concern is that they "smoke" their ecigarettes in the office constantly, and I don't know what chemicals I am now breathing secondhand.

Both of them are senior to me in rank and age, and they pooh-pooh the notion that anything but water vapor is being exhaled. Am I making something out of nothing, or should I be worried about this?

- CLEAN AIR

DEAR ABBY Jeanne Phillips

DEAR CLEAN AIR: You don't have anything to worry about, but your co-workers may. In 2009, the FDA announced the findings from a laboratory analysis that indicated that electronic cigarettes expose users to harmful chemical ingredients, including carcinogens. However, those elements were NOT detected in exhaled vapor.

DEAR ABBY: The woman who collaborated with me on this letter is in her 80s and lives at an assisted-living facility. I am a caregiver and a senior myself, and I have worked in this area for six years.

We read your column on the days I care for her. She loves it and responds verbally to all the letters. Many times the situations spark good conversation, even though her short-term memory is failing. Sometimes we end up howling with laughter. She's a delight and has the courage to still seek out relationships.

This is what she asked me to help her to communicate.

– KATE IN AUSTIN, TEXAS DEAR ABBY: I have been in assisted living for seven years. There are times when it can be lonely and boring. I'd like to meet some men for companionship, conversation and perhaps romance. The men here act so much older than me. They don't start conversations. They stay in their rooms and watch TV and don't seem interested in conversations.

It's hard because my memory isn't what it used to be, but I do remember how nice it was to have male companionship. Do you have any ideas to make my life a little more interesting?

LONELY WOMAN DEAR LONELY: Start by making sure you participate in all the activities your assisted-living facility offers. Shared mealtimes and holiday celebrations also present opportunities to mingle.

The trick is to find something you have in common with these men - sports, games, music, movies. Because long-term memory outlasts short-term memory, some of them might find it easier to discuss their youth than the present.

Encourage your caregiver, Kate, to take you places where you can meet other seniors. And while you're at it, why not invite some of the men to join you both during your Dear Abby sessions? It's a way to draw people out and get to know them better.

DEAR ABBY: After a sixmonth separation, my husband and I are reuniting. We were married for 22 years. I know for a fact he has dated and slept with several women. He's adamant that he used protection each time, but the idea of STDs has me preoccupied and worried. I have asked him to use protection with me until I get over my fear.

How long do most of today's STDs incubate, and what is a safe time to wait to remove the "rain gear"?

- LONGING FOR CONTACT

DEAR LONGING: Congratulations on your reunion. Rather than worry about this, ask your husband to schedule a doctor's appointment and be tested for any STD he might have contracted. Not all STDs have the same incubation period, but a blood test could resolve the issue and put your mind at ease.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE®

"God is in the details." — Gustave Flaubert

You'd expect today's contract of three no-trump to be reached at most tables. North's diamond suit offers enough prospects for development that he should raise the two-no-trump opening to game, relying on there to be a decent chance that declarer has some length in diamonds.

West has a choice of attractive opening leads — a major and a minor. West should opt without question for the solid sequence. You should only settle for a major in the case of a tie, not true here.

After East overtakes the club lead, South wins the first club (to avoid a heart switch) and imagines that he will be able to cash out the diamonds. The 4-1 break is a rude shock, but declarer will still be able to come to nine tricks so long as he can take four spade winners. Can you see any possible snag?

If South runs dummy's spade iack, which spade will he play from hand? If he drops the 10, then East can cover the spade nine on the second round and build a trick for his eight. If South does not unblock his 10, then he must win the second spade in hand and can no longer remain in dummy to play spades.

The solution is painless, though. Simply run the spade nine on the first round of the suit, then lead the jack and underplay it with the 10, retaining the lead in North for the third spade play from dummy.

ANSWER: Your partner's double is doubtless based on a club stack, and declarer surely has the missing spade honors. I'd lead a heart rather than the singleton club — the clubs can surely wait. My choice would be the six second highest from four small is acceptable against no-trump, though rarely elsewhere.

IF APRIL 29 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: Huge ambitions must be achieved to realize happiness. The next several months are fabulous for working nonstop on a key project, to gather experience or to finalize business plans. Although you have the desire and the vision to make big changes in your life, your methods may be rough and ready. Wait until after mid-June to take on additional responsibilities or you could wear yourself out. September is the worst month to launch a new project or to make crucial decisions. Wait for October, when you will receive wise advice and support from others, to make weighty decisions and launch fundamental plans. If you hold off until October to accept opportunities or to make firm resolutions, success is likely.

HOROSCOPE Jeraldine Saunders

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Watch every penny. Even Scrooge would be impressed by your pennypinching ways. This can be a very good thing — unless you take thriftiness too far. Remain balanced about spending and saving.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Couch potatoes can't climb every mountain. Avoid strenuous physical exercise that you are not accustomed to doing. Rather than hurrying off in a huff, take the time to discuss opposition to your GEMINI (May 21-June 20): When you are rolling in the clover, sometimes you find the four-leaf kind. Financial schemes and ideas that you stumble across can be put on the back burner for better use in the future.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Confide only in people you can trust. If you are looking for reliable information and opinions, you will find it. If you allow discussions to disintegrate into finger pointing, the positive thrust will be lost.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Add some oil to shifting gears on the home front. Some changes within the family might have hidden benefits, as well as added responsibilities. You can make a smooth transition by being supportive.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Convert those who oppose vour interests into loval followers by sharing your innermost thoughts. Everyone loves a mystery; use insight ful words to paint of a picture of how to solve a dilem-

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Making a guess can cause a mess. If you think you can imagine what someone else is going through, try asking him or her to tell you instead, as a frank and open discussion will prevent misunderstandings.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): A new endeavor requires a cautious wait-and-see attitude. You may have enthusiasm for anything new right now, but the stars suggest you put off taking significant first steps for a few days.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): One for the money, two for the show. Slow and steady always wins the race at least as far as career is concerned. Trying to solve relationship issues now could mire you in endless recriminations.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): You can learn how to use power and manipulate situations to your advantage. The ability to stick to a job until it is done, like a dog with a bone, is your best asset.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Remain reserved and analytical to gain deep insights into just what gives you the best advantage in business affairs. You can develop a game plan that will be of value to you at some future time.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Settle disputes about possessions or money before they happen. You have the necessary charm to convey your true meaning, and the ability to ferret out secrets that may have caused problems.
