JEROME • A large structure fire resulted in almost 20 families unable to return to their homes, after flames damaged several downtown buildings in Jerome on Tuesday.

The fire started at 126 West Main Street in Jerome around 4:30 p.m., said Jerome Fire Chief Jack Krill. After working for hours to put out the fire, flames were still active and jumping to adjoining buildings, including the Harvest Moon Café at 130 West Main Street and an office space at 132 West Main Street.

As of 9:20 p.m., Krill expected officials to remain on the scene throughout the night in an attempt to contain the fire.

Firefighters attempted to search the building, but the flames were too hot, Krill said. It is still unknown if anyone was in the building and the cause has yet to be determined, Krill said.

Firefighters battled strong winds blowing throughout the night, Krill said. For the first three hours, the wind made it unsafe to put firefighters in water towers. Along with slowing down suppression efforts, the wind pushed the smoke east on Main Street, causing officials to evacuate the surrounding eastern blocks, Krill said.

Later in the night, compounds from the smoke combusted and caused additional explosions to go off, said Zoe Monahan, spokeswoman for the city of Jerome.

Burley Officials Trying to Locate Odor’s Source

BY LAURIE WELCH

BURLEY • The city of Burley is ramping up efforts to identify the source of odor complaints.

Mary Lou Herbert, operations supervisor for the city of Burley’s wastewater department, said anyone with odor complaints in Burley should call the wastewater plant during business hours or the on-call line after hours and on weekends.

“We are getting odor complaints and we are trying to track down the source,” Herbert said.

Odor Complaints

Anyone with an odor complaint in Burley should call the city wastewater department at 208-878-5249 Monday through Friday during business hours. After hours and on weekends, call 208-260-0298. The caller will need to provide his or her name, address and telephone number, along with wind direction at the time of the complaint.

The callers have not identified either the city’s municipal or industrial wastewater plants as the source of the smell, Herbert said.

“They are just saying it’s a sewage smell,” Herbert said.

Herbert said she went out last

Friday and Saturday nights to investigate a complaint from a Heyburn resident.

“I smelled nothing,” Herbert said.

The city’s industrial plant is currently undergoing a $14.3 million upgrade.

Burley Mayor Terry Greenman said the city is not denying the odors are coming from one of the city’s wastewater plants.

“We just want to find out where the odors are coming from and get the problem fixed,” he said.

Since the last city meeting April 16 when a city resident lodged an odor complaint against vegetable-dehydrating company Ida Pro, Greenman said that he has not noticed any bad smells coming from the plant.

The company has added a

THE MARKET AT A GLANCE

IBM Pulls the Stock Market Out of a Morning Slump

NEW YORK (AP) • News that IBM will buy back more stock and raise its dividend helped pull major stock indexes out of a morning slump Tuesday.

IBM and other tech stocks led the Standard & Poor's 500 index up. The broad-market measure ended April with a 1.8 percent gain, the sixth month in a row the index has climbed higher.

Worries about slower economic growth have rattled the stock market this month, but it has consistently bounced back. Brad Sorensen, director of market research at the brokerage Charles Schwab, said that's a result of investors having few alternatives.

Down and Derby

I stood near the penalty box in the far corner of the gym. The Magic Valley Derby Girls' debut bout, the Magic Valley Mash-up on April 14, was the closest I had ever been to skaters at a roller derby match. As skaters made a beeline for the folding chairs, a few slid on their knees to slow their momentum; others simply landed on their butts.

Dunlap

As a spectator, I kind of liked being this close and personal with the skaters. It gave me a chance to see every nudge, push or elbow. A couple of times I thought skaters were going to barrel into the crowd of people sitting on folding chairs in the corners of the gym. One came close, heading straight for the front row, but she gracefully flopped on her backside before her wheels glided her into fans.

The first time I attended a roller derby match was in Missoula, Mont., to watch the Hellgate Roller girls. That venue was much bigger than the one at Hilltop Adventist Church in Twin Falls. I sat with my boyfriend and friend in the upper deck of the auditorium, which gave us a good view of the entire track below. I instantly became a fan of roller derby. I liked the atmosphere, a mixture of families and individuals drinking beer from plastic cups with their friends.

I even remember driving by a roller derby bout that was held outside. I didn't attend that match, but I think an outside match sounds like it would be fun to watch, especially in nice weather.

I really hope the Magic Valley Derby Girls continue to grow and hold more bouts in Twin Falls. I'm just a fan, but in case I ever decide to give roller derby a try one day, I have already thought of a derby name: Tetona Dun-lapped-you-twice.

But if I'm going to have a name like that I'd better learn how to skate first.

Wind Dies Down, Temps Warm Up

Winds have been the weather story since Sunday.

Winds during the day have averaged around 15 mph and peak gusts have ranged from 25 to 40 mph. The good news is winds will die down and be considerably lighter today through the end of the week. In fact, winds will average less than 10 mph out of the east for most of us across the Magic Valley.

Temperatures will also be on the rise over the next couple of days. Temperatures will remain cool today as they only reach the mid-50s in the afternoon. This is still about 10 degrees below the average high. The good news is it doesn't stay chilly long. We will be back into the upper 60s to even the 70s by Thursday and into Friday. Sunshine will also remain, so we will end the week with nice weather.

There is some uncertainty as we go into the weekend. Winds could return on Saturday as a disturbance tries to move though Friday night into Saturday evening. This could produce a couple of showers in the Wood River region and highs back into the 60s for the Magic Valley. Sunday warms up back into the 70s and should remain nice going into the early part of next week.

TF Man Sentenced to Federal Prison in Aryan Knights Case

TIMES-NEWS

BOISE • A Twin Falls man and a Caldwell man were sentenced to federal prison on drug charges this week.

Christopher John Solders, 26, of Twin Falls, and Joseph Anthony Goulart, 42, of Caldwell, were sentenced to prison for distributing methamphetamine, U.S. Attorney Wendy J. Olson said in a Tuesday afternoon press release. A federal grand jury in Boise charged the men in separate indictments last fall.

Solders was sentenced Monday to 84 months in prison followed by three years of supervised release for distribution of meth. Solders pleaded guilty to the charge on Feb. 14. According to the plea agreement, Solders admitted that he sold meth on two occasions to a confidential informant working with law enforcement. The first transaction occurred in February 2012 and the second in May 2012, the press release said.

Goulart was sentenced Tuesday to 180 months in prison followed by five years of supervised release. On Feb. 7, Goulart pleaded guilty to conspiracy to distribute meth. According to information presented in court, law enforcement agents found about 1 1/2 pounds of meth during a search of Goulart's residence in September 2012, Olson's press release said.

Solders and Goulart were sentenced by John C.

Coughenour, U.S. district judge for the Western District of Washington, at the federal courthouse in Boise.

The Solders and Goulart cases are part of the Aryan Knights investigation in which 23 people were charged as a result of a long-term investigation by the Treasure Valley Metro Violent Crime Task Force, Olson's release said. The investigation began when the task force focused on illegal drug distribution by the Aryan Knights, a gang active both in prison and on the streets throughout Idaho.

Law enforcement agents identified Aryan Knights gang members who were trafficking meth, as well as associates of the gang who were the source of that meth, the release said.

Darin Scott Melton, 44, also of Twin Falls, was indicted Sept. 12 along with Solders and 11 other defendants. Melton entered a guilty plea in January and is scheduled to be sentenced on May 16 in Boise, according to online federal court records.

The Treasure Valley Metro Violent Crime Task Force is comprised of federal, state and local agencies.

The cases are being prosecuted by the special assistant U.S. attorney hired by the Treasure Valley Partnership and the state of Idaho to address gang crimes. The Treasure Valley Partnership is comprised of elected officials in southwest Idaho.

TWIN FALLS • A trial has been pushed back one week in September for an antitrust lawsuit aiming to prevent St. Luke's Health System from buying a Nampa physician-owned medical group.

There was a status conference Tuesday, April 30, about preparations for the trial.

Online court records show the trial was reset for Sept. 23 — one week later than originally scheduled. The trial is expected to last three or four weeks.

In March, the Federal

Trade Commission and the Idaho Attorney General's Office filed a complaint in U.S. District Court in Boise.

St. Luke's proposed acquisition of Saltzer Medical Group, which has offices in Nampa, will "substantially lessen competition for healthcare services in and around Nampa, Idaho," the complaint alleges.

Dr. David Pate, chief executive officer of St. Luke's Health System, told the Times-News in March that the complaint is a series of allegations that haven't been proven.

Seasons of Hope Files Appeal

BY JULIE WOOTTON

TWIN FALLS • In an appeal filed last week, Seasons of Hope admits there were errors in the company's billing practices and paperwork, but disputes allegations of fraud.

In a 58-page document submitted Thursday, April 25, the Chubbuck-based mental health clinic and developmental disabilities agency also disputes the amount of money it must repay.

Tom Shanahan, spokesman for the Idaho Department of Health and Welfare, said appeal hearings will be scheduled within the next 30 days.

Following an 18-month investigation, the department suspended Medicaid payments to Seasons of Hope in late March.

The company laid off as many as 10 employees last month at its Twin Falls and Burley clinics after losing its Medicaid provider status.

Seasons of Hope must repay nearly $440,000 in overpayments and pay a civil penalty totaling about $110,000, according to a letter of allegations dated March 28.

The Idaho Department of Health and Welfare alleges the company altered records, billed for services that weren't covered, misrepresented services, billed for services not documented or provided and billed for medically unnecessary services.

"Certainly, in some instances there will be errors or honest mistakes made in a billing practice or in paperwork but under no circumstance does Seasons believe that it committed any fraud," Seasons of Hope's appeal states.

In a statement released Sunday, Seasons of Hope chief executive officer Heath Sommer wrote that there are "at least 17 clear cases of misrepresented allegations that represent a malicious and hostile characterization" of the company by the Idaho Department of Health and Welfare.

Earlier this month, the company laid off almost all of its 100 employees and closed down offices around the state.

About 85-90 percent of the clinic's work was for

Medicaid patients, according to the appeal, and "Seasons was immediately put out of business."

Sommer told the Times-News last month that the Twin Falls clinic was growing rapidly and the Burley clinic just opened a month ago.

The company was planning to eventually open more offices in rural areas of the Magic Valley and Wood River Valley, including Oakley and Hailey, he said.

Free Screening for Infants, Children Under 3

TIMES-NEWS

TWIN FALLS • The Child Development Center is hosting a free developmental screening clinic next week for infants and children under 3 years old.

The clinic is scheduled for 9 a.m.-2 p.m. Thursday, May 9 at the center, 803 Harrison St. in Twin Falls.

Children will be screened in vision, motor coordination, self help, social skills, hearing and speech/language development.

Developmental specialist Scott Neff said if delays in motor skills or speech are addressed early, children can receive services and catch up quickly.

"Early intervention is better than waiting until the child is much older," he said.

The Child Development Center is coordinating the clinic with Head Start, which will provide a vision screener.

The center is part of the Idaho Infant Toddler Program through the Department of Health and Welfare.

The program provides early intervention services to children with developmental delays up to age three.

On the day of screening clinic in Twin Falls, attendees should use the driveway on the south side of the building and park in the back.

To schedule an appointment, call Liz Barr at 208-732-1547.

Gun-control Foes and Slippery-slope Fallacies

In 1991, the economist Albert Hirschman published a biting, funny and subversive book, “The Rhetoric of Reaction,” whose principal goal was to provide a kind of reader’s guide to conservative objections to social reform. Hirschman wanted to demonstrate that such objections are pervasive, mechanical, routinized and often unconvincing.

Hirschman used the words “perversity” and “futility” to describe his best examples of reactionary rhetoric. Conservatives often object that reforms will turn out to be perverse, because they will have the opposite of their intended effect. For example, those who oppose increases in the minimum wage contend that such increases will worsen unemployment and thus hurt the very people they are intended to help — a clear example of perversity.

Alternatively, conservatives argue that reforms will do nothing to solve the problem that they purport to address. For example, those who oppose gun-control legislation contend that such laws will fail to decrease gun-related deaths — a clear example of futility.

Hirschman agreed that such arguments are sometimes right, and he emphasized that progressives have routine rhetorical moves of their own. But his primary goal was to try to inoculate people against arguments that, while seemingly forceful, come out of a kind of reactionary’s playbook.

Cass R. Sunstein

Bloomberg News

Illuminating though it is, Hirschman’s account misses an especially pernicious example of the rhetoric of reaction: the slippery-slope argument. According to that argument, we should reject Reform A, which is admittedly not so terrible, because it would inevitably put us on a slippery slope to Reform B, which is really bad.

Examples are all around us. The federal government shouldn’t require background checks for gun purchasers because, if it does, it will be on the path toward banning gun ownership. The Supreme Court shouldn’t force states to recognize same-sex marriages because, if it does, it will have to require states to recognize polygamous marriages.

The Obama administration shouldn’t intervene in Libya because, if it does, it will turn the United States into the globe’s policeman, intervening whenever it likes. The government shouldn’t require people to buy health insurance because if it does, it will eventually require people to exercise and buy broccoli.

The problem with slippery-slope contentions is that despite their occasional rhetorical force, they are often silly. To appreciate the problem, it is important to see that these arguments come in two quite different forms. Some versions are purely logical. The claim is that if you undertake Reform A, you are logically committed to Reform B, as well. Other versions aren’t logical but empirical. The claim is that if you undertake Reform A, you will probably end up undertaking Reform B, as well, not because of logic but because of the likely unfolding of events.

As a matter of logic, slippery-slope arguments can be convincing. If you say you oppose racial segregation in public schools in New York, you are almost certainly committed to opposing racial segregation in public schools in Los Angeles.

In many cases, however, your support for Reform A doesn’t commit you to support Reform B. Those who believe that government shouldn’t discriminate against gay men and lesbians, and thus should allow same-sex marriages, needn’t think that the right to marry should be extended to polygamous couples. If you favor background checks for gun purchasers, you can also believe that the Second Amendment provides firm protection for the right to own guns.

When they claim logical necessity, slippery-slope arguments can be lazy. Reform B is often a lot different from Reform A, and with a little work, the difference is easy to identify.

Empirical slippery-slope positions aren’t self-evidently wrong. If the government requires background checks before people can buy guns, maybe it will be more willing to consider other restrictions on gun ownership.

But the opposite could easily be true. After requiring background checks, the government may be more reluctant to impose other restrictions on gun ownership. One humanitarian intervention may well decrease the national appetite for other humanitarian interventions.

When opponents argue against Reform A by saying it will lead to Reform B, it is often best to assume that the slippery-slope argument is merely a rhetorical move. It isn’t the real reason they oppose Reform A. When they point to the supposedly slippery slope, it is only because they know a lot of their fellow citizens favor Reform A — so they try to scare them by changing the subject and talking about Reform B instead. (Progressives, and not only conservatives, like to exploit this strategy.)

As the date of publication approached, Hirschman tried to change the title of his book from “The Rhetoric of Reaction” to “The Rhetoric of Intransigence.” His publisher dissuaded him, arguing that book buyers wouldn’t be attracted to the word “intransigence.” Fair enough, but it’s a good word. Slippery-slope arguments usually reflect intransigence. Let’s not be fooled by them.

Giving Blitz Planned for Tomorrow

BY LYNN HOFFMANN

Part of what makes life in Idaho special is a strong sense of community and a pervasive spirit of generosity. Our rugged individualism is complemented by a commitment to looking out for one another. On Thursday, May 2, Idahoans have an opportunity to make history — and make a difference — for hundreds of nonprofit organizations and the critically important work they perform in communities throughout Idaho. That day will mark the inaugural Idaho Gives, a statewide, 24-hour charitable giving blitz sponsored by the Idaho Nonprofit Center.

Modeled after highly successful philanthropic giving days in states and cities across the country, Idaho Gives aims to attract thousands of donors to raise funds for hundreds of Idaho nonprofits. By tapping into Idahoans’ civic pride and making charitable giving a highly publicized and fun event, we intend to raise awareness of nonprofit work and convince both long-time supporters and new donors to join your fellow citizens in raising much-needed funds across the state.

Several unique features make Idaho

More Online

Idaho Gives can be found on Facebook, Twitter and at idahogives.org.

Gives an event you won’t want to miss. Thanks to our numerous event sponsors, your donations will be multiplied with a pool of award money that will be available to all participating nonprofits. Contests will also be running throughout the day, giving nonprofits another opportunity to add to the donations coming in. Thus, your donation will go further and its impact will be amplified on May 2.

In addition, because Idaho Gives takes place primarily online, much of the “buzz” surrounding the day and the frequent calls to action will be conveyed through social media, making it easy to share the spirit of giving with friends. And finally, this highly charged day of giving offers so many possible destinations for your charitable gifts: from health and human services organizations to conservation groups, from school foundations to senior centers, and from faith based groups to food pantries. Hundreds of nonprofits are eager to introduce themselves to you and share the good news about how they’re making a difference in your community.

Of course, helping nonprofits to build capacity and expand their donor base isn’t only about funding the diverse range of nonprofit programs and services they offer. Nonprofits are a critical facet of our economy. Some might be surprised by the direct economic impact of nonprofits — as employers, as purchasers of our goods and services, and as stakeholders in projects and investments that strengthen our communities.

According to a 2012 study by the Idaho Nonprofit Center, charitable nonprofits employ more than 2,300 people in south-central Idaho, which is 3.1 percent of all (covered) jobs in the region. Nonprofits provide more than $79 million in wages and pump more than $144 million in spending into the local economy.

The bottom line is that nonprofits are not only an essential partner in maintaining our famous quality of life, but also a vital sector of the Idaho’s economy, giving you all the more reason to support one or more nonprofits. On May 2, Idaho Gives. Will you?

Control Towers: Sequestration Strikes

William Hamilton

Central View

So what’s the deal about the Federal Aviation Administration (FAA) closing 149 FAA “contract” control towers? Will flying still be statistically safer than driving on our highways? Some facts to consider:

The FAA recognizes 19,786 landing facilities of all types across America. Currently, only ten-percent of those public-use airports have air traffic control towers, meaning 90-percent of America’s public-use airports depend on America’s 617,128 licensed pilots to “traffic control” each other within what is acknowledged as the world’s safest aviation system.

Recently, the FAA announced it will close 149 FAA “contract” towers. Why is the word “contract” in quotes? Approximately 50-percent of the FAA’s control towers are staffed by FAA government employees. The other half are staffed under “contract” to private firms certified by the FAA. According to a recent study by the U.S. Department of Transportation, the annual operating cost of a FAA “contract” tower is $1.5 million dollars less than the annual operating cost of a FAA tower staffed with unionized government employees. Care to guess which ones will be closed?

For the most part, the “contract” towers are staffed with former or retired military air traffic controllers who are FAA-certified and willing to work for less and who are, for the most part, non-union.

Back to safety: In the absence of control towers, how do America’s pilots manage to get in and out of all those non-towered airports so safely? They follow a simple system of rules-of-the-road, if you will. They are trained to talk to each other over a radio frequency — Common Traffic Advisory Frequency (CTAF) — assigned to each airport.

When a pilot gets within about 10 miles of an airport where he or she intends to land, the pilot uses the CTAF to let other pilots know his or her location relative to the airport. If the pilot intends to land, the pilot declares which runway he or she will use. If any other pilots are in the air or may be getting ready to take-off, they identify themselves.

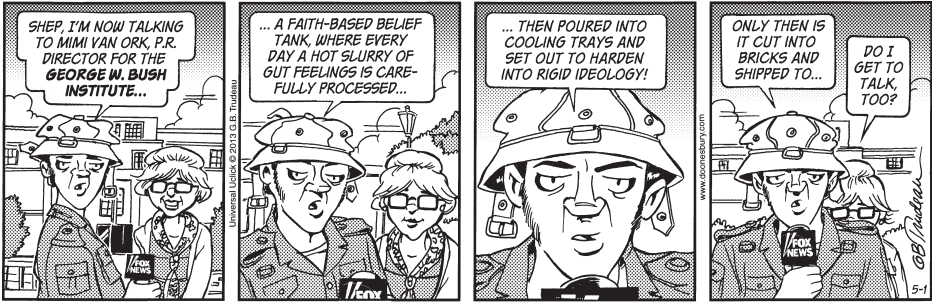

Think of it as a road intersection with a four-way stop sign. But, instead of hand gestures (sometimes rude) used by motorists to declare their intentions, the pilots’ intent (most often, polite) radio procedure to decide who is going to do what and when. Stone simple. Literally, hundreds of thousands of air operations are carried out safely each year using the CTAF method.

Would airports be safer with more control towers? Of course. And control towers are certainly needed at high-traffic metropolitan airports with airline service. Will the world end when the FAA closes 149 “contract” control towers? Of course, not. Almost all of the airports with commercial airline service will continue to enjoy their FAA government-employee control towers. But the negative financial impact on the families and on the businesses in the 149 communities that will lose their FAA “contract” towers will be severe.

Meanwhile, $764,825 will be spent on a study of how students use cellphones, $606,000 will go to a study of online dating, and $175,587 is being spent to study a link between cocaine and the mating habits of quail. Go figure.

Car Crashes into Twin Falls Restaurant

TIMES-NEWS

TWIN FALLS • A car crashed into a Twin Falls Chinese restaurant late Tuesday morning, causing minor damage and resulting in no injuries.

At around 11:30 a.m. Tuesday, a Toyota Sedan crashed into the front window of Mandarin House Chinese Buffet & Family Restaurant on Blue Lakes Boulevard after the driver failed to stop while pulling into a parking space, said Officer Justin Hendrickson with the Twin Falls Police Department.

The crash broke the window and caused minor damage to the wall behind it, as well as minor damage to the car. Hendrickson said the driver and lone passenger were uninjured. He said a citation would not be issued.

Mandarin House owner Konnie Lam said no one was sitting in the booth against the window. She said there was no structural damage to the building.

Lam said she heard the crash from inside the restaurant, describing it as sounding “like a bomb.” She quickly went outside and saw the car crashed against the glass, she said.

“We’re lucky,” she said. “It was very scary.”

No Suspects in Blaine Co. Explosive

TIMES-NEWS

KETCHUM • Blaine County Sheriff Gene Ramsey said there are no suspects so far in the case of an improvised explosive device that was placed in a mailbox on Hyndman View Drive between Hailey and Ketchum last week.

Ramsey said the sheriff’s office has received a few tips so far.

Many people have had questions about the device, and Ramsey said he wanted to assure residents the device was not set up as a booby trap in the mailbox and that there was no triggering mechanism on it.

The device was made to detonate by chemical reaction, Ramsey said, but he didn’t know what the chemicals were.

Ramsey said he contacted the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco, Firearms and Explosives, and wants to have them analyze the device in their lab.

Ramsey said there’s been no other suspicious activity near the area where the device was found. He said he believes it was randomly placed.

Law enforcement responded to a report of a suspicious explosive device around 4:30 p.m. on April 24; the report came from a caretaker for the East Fork residence.

The Twin Falls Bomb Squad also responded and was able to neutralize the device.

Anyone with information about the incident is asked to contact the sheriff’s office at 208-788-5555. Confidential reports may be sent by texting BCSOTIP with any pertinent information to 847411 (TIP411).

saw her building on fire.

“I’ve lived there a year with my husband,” she said. “It’s stressful watching your home burn. I don’t know where I’m going to sleep tonight or what I’m going to do.”

Jose Gomez had lived in the building for almost nine years. He was working in Twin Falls when he got the call from a frantic family member to come home.

“It’s been pretty emotional for my mom,” he said. “It’s hard watching your home burn. ... I’m not used to saying ‘I lived there.’”

Jerome resident Emma Parks stood on the north side of the fire along with many of the building’s former residents. She said she was shocked to see something like this in Jerome.

“I’ve never seen a fire this big in a town,” she said.

Ryan Smallwood, who works as a cook for Harvest

Moon Café, said he was one of the first people to report the fire.

He said one of the waiters said she could smell smoke and when they walked around to the front of the apartment complex, all they could see was smoke-filled windows.

“I put my hand on the window and it was warm,” he said. “I immediately called 911.”

The American Red Cross has set up a temporary shelter at the Jerome County Fairgrounds, Monahan said. As of Tuesday evening, it was still unknown how many people would need shelter or help.

Jerome city firefighters, Jerome Rural Fire Department and Jerome City Police responded to the scene. Wendell Rural Department, Shoshone Rural Department and Twin Falls City Fire were later called in to put out the flames, Monahan said.

“We would like to thank the jurisdictions for helping us with this fire,” she said.

Police: Man Goes on Meth-Fueled Rampage

BY ALISON GENE SMITH
alismith@magicvalley.com

TWIN FALLS • Twin Falls police say a man went on a 3 a.m. meth-fueled rampage on Blue Lakes Boulevard South early Sunday morning and pointed a cellphone at an officer like it was a gun before being arrested.

Israel Cerro Gonzalez, 32, of Twin Falls, was arraigned on charges of aggravated battery, unlawful entry, reckless driving and driving without privileges Monday in Twin Falls County Fifth District Court.

According to a police report, a woman said she was driving her Toyota 4-Runner in the 200 block of Blue Lakes South with a man in the front seat when she noticed a Plymouth Neon turn toward her, driving the wrong way on the street. Before she had time to move, the Neon crashed into her head-on, the report states.

According to the report, Gonzalez, the driver of the Neon, got out of his car, ran up to the male passenger’s door and took the woman’s keys out of the ignition along with the man’s cellphone as the man was calling 911.

The two told police that Gonzalez continued to yell in Spanish before running into a house in the 200 block of Blue Lakes South. According to the report, Gonzalez left the house and got into the resident’s vehicle, before getting out of that vehicle and putting the woman in the car in a headlock.

According to the report, the woman had been trying to talk to Gonzalez to get her keys back when he grabbed her and possibly began to try to kiss her.

The man at the scene used the woman’s cellphone to call police again, he told police, then began punching Gonzalez to get him to release the woman.

At that point, the report states, Gonzalez let go of the woman and ran toward a Gem State Security car in the area.

The driver of that car said Gonzalez ran up to his car and broke the driver’s side mirror off, the report states. The security car driver got away and called police.

According to the report, officer Jerry Hutchison arrived at 2:56 a.m. as Gonzalez was getting back in the Neon and beginning to drive away.

The report states that Hutchison believed Gonzalez was trying to get away and positioned his patrol car to block the path.

“Israel got out of the vehicle and pointed a cellphone at me as if it were a gun and was screaming incoherent words,” Hutchison wrote in the report.

The report states that Gonzalez charged Hutchison but stopped before making contact. Hutchison ordered Gonzalez to the ground, but he wouldn’t comply. Gonzalez was put in handcuffs and arrested when a backup officer arrived.

Police said Gonzalez was agitated, sweating and seemed very excited, consistent with someone who has been using a stimulant.

Once he calmed down, police read Gonzalez his rights, which he said in English that he understood. Police were able to identify Gonzalez by his Green Card, the report states. The report states Gonzalez explained to police that he had smoked some methamphetamine.

The report states that police found the woman’s keys and the man’s phone in Gonzalez’s pocket. Police also said they discovered that Gonzalez’s driving status has been permanently suspended by the Idaho Division of Motor Vehicles, and he possessed a fake Social Security card and two other false Social Security numbers associated with his name.

Gonzalez was taken to the Twin Falls County Jail and held on $15,000 bond. He’s also being held on a border patrol hold by jail staff in order to be interviewed by Immigration and Customs Enforcement, the report states.

A preliminary hearing is scheduled for May 10.

misting system to its emissions system since the meeting, Greenman said.

“But, the wind was blowing so hard today any smells would have blown right over us,” Greenman said Tuesday.

The odors tend to be more prevalent when the winds are calm, he said.

Greenman said if the odor problem stemming from Ida Pro is not resolved, the city has the option to fine the company $1,000 per day because it is in violation of the city’s bad odor code.

Idaho Department of Environmental Quality Re-

Dye did not return phone calls Tuesday before Times-News press time.

Hagerman Store Expands Products, Changes Name

New natural foods storefront in Hagerman will make you scream for non-dairy ice cream.

HAGERMAN • After four years of baking whole wheat bread by special order, Hagerman Manna has a new name and storefront. Now called Hagerman Natural Foods, operators have expanded their products beyond breads and granola to include locally grown vegetables, fruits and meats, in addition to a few out-of-state products like pecans and grapefruit from Arizona.

As the days start to heat up, a popular item is the nonprofit's non-dairy ice cream, made with nut butter and a soy base.

On April 21-23, Hagerman Natural Foods held an open house and ice cream social. About 150 visitors stopped in to taste homemade strawberry, carob mint and vanilla almond flavors.

Legacy of the Magic Valley 'Wine Guy'

BY JOE CADOTTE
jcadotte@magicvalley.com

TWIN FALLS • Jon Melone has helped 10 restaurants in the Magic Valley and Boise develop their wine menus over the past eight years. One of two wine experts in the Magic Valley, the former college administrator committed to his passion for wine in 2005.

Jon was on a cruise ship that was approaching a white-sand beach near Zipolite, Mexico. He and his wife, Tina, were watching the sunrise above the seaside town.

"We were just talking about dreams, and I remember telling my wife, 'People have dreams, but a lot of people never follow through with them,'" Jon Melone said. "My dream is to have a wine bar."

At the time, Jon Melone was a college administrator in San Diego, but soon he would change all that. Wine had been his favorite drink since he was of age, but it became something else in that moment.

Melone soon moved his wife and daughter to southern Idaho and opened a wine bar in downtown Twin Falls.

"When we opened the very first day, we had a line of people waiting to get in at 10 in the morning at a wine bar," Melone said. "We were just blown away. The response was fantastic."

The Magic Valley Wine Guy

After rallying the town around his new business, Melone wanted to take his love of wine to the next level.

There are 200 master sommeliers (or master wine experts) in the world, Melone said. When three of them came to Boise, Melone jumped at the opportunity to get formal training in the art.

"I took training over several days, broken up into classroom time and tests," Melone said, "very excruciating tests."

The final test included a blind tasting of 22 different wines.

“After a time of understanding, if you can identify the grape variety through the maturation process, you can possibly begin to identify the vintage,” Melone said. “Of the 22 that we blind tasted, I got one perfect. It was the Gamay grape variety from France, Burgundy Region, Beaujolais subregion. And the vintage was 2005.”

Word soon spread of Melone’s expertise. Restaurants around Twin Falls and Boise paid Melone to set up their wine bar. He also freelanced, hosting wine pairing and tasting parties.

“People here in the Magic Valley know me as the wine guy,” Melone said. “I can be in the grocery store at Fred Meyers and people come up and ask me what wine they should purchase. It has changed my life because of that.”

Melone said because of family reasons he sold his wine bar in 2008 and it eventually closed. His career in wine was far from over.

He now teaches two wine appreciation classes at the College of Southern Idaho. He worked as the wine director of Canyon Crest for the first three years it was open and set up the wine bar at Zulu Afterhours in Twin Falls.

“Even today after a few years of selling that business, I still am approached by people on the street who say, ‘We wish you still had your wine bar open,’” Melone said.

Melone said he plans on making a living as a wine consultant for the rest of his life. He also serves as the executive director of the Jerome Chamber of Commerce.

Wine Tips for Summer

“As we start getting into warmer weather, I recommend some of the light white wines,” Melone said. “Pinot Grigio is always nice. Vino Verite from Portugal is a very nice wine. Agave from Italy, something like that, light and you can just sit there on a nice day and it’s very refreshing.”

When it comes to pairing wine with foods, Melone said to take a sip of the wine first, then a bite of the food, then another drink of wine.

“Experience the difference in the taste of the wine paired with the right food. I take a sip of wine with food in my mouth and allow it just to blend together and work.”

The vast history and science behind wine is the center of his passion for it, Melone said.

“Wine is the most complex food group in the world because of chemical compounds found in wine called esters,” he said. “Esters are what give us aromas. It can be found in an orange. It can be found in a pine tree. It can be found in a glass of wine. What makes wine so complex is that there can be more than 200 different esters found in the Vitis vinifera grape variety that produces wine.”

DEB LINDSEY • FOR THE WASHINGTON POST; TABLEWARE FROM CRATE AND BARREL

Dinner in 35 Minutes: Lime Beef Salad

BY BONNIE S. BENWICK

The Washington Post

“Top Chef” watchers: Think all the way back to Season 9. The cheftestants were hot and grumpy in Texas. Paul Qui won, and one chef seemed to get off more ornery one-liners than the others: Edward Lee of 610 Magnolia in Louisville.

Turns out he’s a nice guy, and he has a new cookbook out next month — “Smoke & Pickles: Recipes and Stories From a New Southern Kitchen” — that had us reaching for Post-it Notes.

This is his take on a crunchy, tangy, savory salad. It calls for a small amount of meat that, he writes, “satisfies the carnivore in you.” A few ounces of beef are pounded thin and given a pho-like treatment before being dressed and added to the salad. He is right; it’s all you need here.

Tips from the chef include using the cilantro stems as well as leaves, and finding a good-quality fish sauce, because that’s what adds real depth to the vinaigrette.

Don’t be scared off by the number of ingredients. The dish comes together fast enough if you have average knife skills. We left out one or two elements to save time, but you’ll taste the essence of what he was after. Use toasted white sesame seeds if you don’t have black ones on hand.

Lee suggests serving this with a glass of gruner veltliner. Adapted from “Smoke & Pickles: Recipes and Stories From a New Southern Kitchen,” by Edward Lee (Artisan, May 2013).

Lime Beef Salad

4 servings

For the beef and salad

- 8 cups water
- Small knob fresh ginger root
- 1 clove garlic
- 1 teaspoon kosher salt
- 1 small bunch cilantro
- 1 small red Thai chili pepper or jalapeno pepper
- 1 slightly underripe mango
- 8 ounces green cabbage (from 1/2 head)
- About 6 fresh mint leaves
- 1 teaspoon black sesame seeds (may substitute toasted white sesame seed)
- One 5-ounce piece boneless eye round or lean sirloin steak
- 1 tablespoon roasted unsalted peanuts, for garnish

For the vinaigrette

- 3 or 4 limes
- 2-inch piece fresh ginger root
- 1 1/2 tablespoons light or dark brown sugar
- 2 teaspoons good-quality fish sauce
- 2 teaspoons toasted sesame oil
- 1/2 teaspoon dark soy sauce (thicker and darker than regular soy sauce; may substitute low-sodium soy sauce)
- 1/4 teaspoon freshly ground black pepper

For the beef and salad:

Combine the water, ginger, garlic and salt in a small pot over high heat. Bring to a boil, then reduce the heat to low and cook for 15 minutes. Meanwhile, transfer the following ingredients to a large mixing bowl as you prep them: Finely chop the cilantro, including its tender stems. Seed the pepper, then finely chop it. Peel the mango; cut around the pit to create thin matchsticks. Cut the cabbage into very thin strips. Chop the mint. Add the sesame seeds and toss to incorporate.

Cut the beef crosswise into 8 thin slices. Working with a few at a time, lay the slices flat between two pieces of plastic wrap. Use a rolling pin or pan to pound the meat until it is paper-thin. Repeat with all of the slices.

For the vinaigrette:

Squeeze 5 tablespoons of juice from the limes, letting it fall into a medium bowl. Peel and grate 2 teaspoons of ginger and add it to the bowl, along with the brown sugar, fish sauce, toasted sesame oil, soy sauce and pepper. Whisk together until well incorporated; cover and refrigerate.

Drop a few slices of the beef at a time into the hot-water broth; cook for about 10 seconds, until the meat loses its raw look, then use chopsticks or tongs to transfer to the bowl of chilled vinaigrette, turning to coat. Repeat to cook all of the meat.

Add all of the beef and vinaigrette to the salad in the bowl and toss to combine well. Divide among individual plates.

Chop the peanuts, then use them to garnish the salad portions. Serve right away.

Matthews said they have purchased produce from farmers and home gardeners in Hagerman and surrounding towns to sell in their store.

“There are a lot of local people with gardens. This area has so much produce,” Matthews said.

They plan to eventually host a farmers market every Thursday from 3-7 p.m. so people can sell their goods.

“We are a nonprofit organization, and at the moment there is not a lot of profit. Right now we are all volunteers. Eventually we will have paid employees,”

Matthews said.

Future plans include offering cooking and education classes to teach people how to eat healthier.

Emily Woolson, Hagerman Natural Foods’ office manager, said she often has people come in requesting certain products like wine or eggs. If there is a demand, she will try to meet the need by offering popular items.

“Eating healthy is not only better but it tastes good, too,” Woolson said.

If you are looking for the whole grain breads and rolls the group is known for, Tuesdays are your best bet for finding them. That is the day all the baking takes place. Hagerman Natural Foods also takes orders for baked goods. Bread loaves are $4.50, half-size loaves are $2.50 and rolls are 85 cents each.

“We like (kamut) because of its color, nutty flavor, and most people who eat it and never experienced it before, they like it,” said Susan Gallon, partner and bread baker. “We are trying to have people use the whole grain. People look at white bread and think that’s it. It’s just starch.”

For the operators of Hagerman Natural Foods, the fewer steps it takes to get your food on your plate, the better.

“We are just trying to help the community and educate the people,” Matthews said.

FDA WILL INVESTIGATE ADDED CAFFEINE IN FOODS

BY MARY CLARE JALONICK
Associated Press

WASHINGTON • For people seeking an energy boost, companies are increasing their offerings of foods with added caffeine. A new caffeinated gum may have gone too far.

The Food and Drug Administration said Monday that it will investigate the safety of added caffeine and its effects on children and adolescents. The agency made the announcement just as Wrigley was rolling out Alert Energy Gum, a new product that includes as much caffeine as a half a cup of coffee in one piece and promises “the right energy, right now.”

Michael Taylor, FDA’s deputy commissioner of foods, indicated that the proliferation of new foods with caffeine added — especially the gum, which he equates to “four cups of coffee in your pocket” — may even prompt the FDA to look closer at the way all food ingredients are regulated.

The agency is already investigating the safety of energy drinks and energy shots, prompted by consumer reports of illness and death.

Taylor said Monday that the only time FDA explicitly approved the added use of caffeine in a food or drink was in the 1950s for colas. The current proliferation of caffeine added to foods is “beyond anything FDA envisioned,” Taylor said.

“It is disturbing,” Taylor told The Associated Press. “We’re concerned about whether they have been adequately evaluated.”

Caffeine has the regulatory classification of “generally recognized as safe,” or GRAS, which means manufacturers can add it to products and then determine on their own whether the product is safe.

“This raises questions about how the GRAS concept is working and is it working adequately,” Taylor said of the gum and other caffeine-added products.

As food companies have created more new ingredients to add health benefits, improve taste or help food stay fresh, there are at least 4,650 of these “generally recognized as safe” ingredients, according to the non-partisan Pew Charitable Trusts. The bulk of them, at least 3,000, were determined GRAS by companies and trade associations.

Caffeine is not a new ingredient, but Taylor says the FDA is concerned about all of the new ways it is being delivered to consumers. He said the agency will look at the potential impact these “new and easy sources” of caffeine will have on children’s health and will take action if necessary. He said that he and other FDA officials have held meetings with some of the large food companies that have ventured into caffeinated products, including Mars Inc., of which Wrigley is a subsidiary.

Wrigley and other companies adding caffeine to their products have labeled them as for adult use only. A spokeswoman for Wrigley, Denise M. Young, said the gum is for “adults who are looking for foods with caffeine for energy” and each piece contains about 40 milligrams, or the equivalent amount found in half a cup of coffee. She said the company will work with FDA.

“Millions of Americans consume caffeine responsibly and in moderation as part of their daily routines,” Young said.

Food manufacturers have added caffeine to candy, nuts and other snack foods in recent years. Jelly Belly “Extreme Sport Beans,” for example, have 50 mg of caffeine in each 100-calorie pack, while Arma Energy Snx markets trail mix, chips and other products that have caffeine.

Critics say it’s not enough for the companies to say they are marketing the products to adults when the caffeine is added to items like candy that are attractive to children. Many of the energy foods are promoted with social media campaigns, another way they could be targeted to young people.

Major medical associations have warned that too much caffeine can be dangerous for children, who have less ability to process the stimulant than adults. The American Academy of Pediatrics says it has been linked to harmful effects on young people’s developing neurologic and cardiovascular systems.

“Could caffeinated macaroni and cheese or breakfast cereal be next?” said Michael Jacobson, director of the Center for Science in the Public Interest, which asked the FDA to look into the number of foods with added caffeine last year. “One serving of any of these foods isn’t likely to harm anyone. The concern is that it will be increasingly easy to consume caffeine throughout the day, sometimes unwittingly, as companies add caffeine to candies, nuts, snacks and other foods.” Taylor said the agency would look at the added caffeine in its totality — while one product might not cause adverse effects, the increasing number of caffeinated products on the market, including drinks, could mean more adverse health effects for children.

Last November, the FDA said it had received 92 reports over four years that cited illnesses, hospitalizations and deaths after consumption of an energy shot marketed as 5-Hour Energy. The FDA said it had also received reports that cited the highly caffeinated Monster Energy Drink in several deaths.

Agency officials said then that the reports to the FDA from consumers, doctors and others don’t necessarily prove that the drinks caused the deaths or injuries but said they were investigating each one. In February, FDA Commissioner Margaret Hamburg again stressed that reports to the agency of adverse events related to energy drinks did not necessarily suggest a causal effect.

Philadelphia Market Holds Feast of Forgotten Foods

BY JOANN LOVIGLIO
Associated Press

PHILADELPHIA • The city’s Reading Terminal Market is celebrating long-lost foods that were formerly Philly staples, from teaberry ice cream to fried oysters with chicken salad.

The third biennial Festival of Forgotten Foods, which takes place Saturday at the 121-year-old downtown market, is offering about a dozen examples of foods that were the hoagies, soft pretzels and water ice of their day: available everywhere and strongly associated with Philadelphia.

“They’re quirky foods people might not have seen in the course of their lives,” said Sarah Levitsky, marketing and event manager at the Reading Terminal Market, a bustling home to butchers and fishmongers, sandwich stalls and Amish farmers. “We weren’t sure at the beginning how (the festival) was going to work out and the response was beyond that we expected.”

Everything will be offered in small sizes so intimidated eaters won’t be overwhelmed and adventurous foodies will be able to taste everything, she said.

“Some of the foods are old-fashioned kinds of foods that are part of Philadelphia’s culinary history,” Levitsky said Friday, “and some we sell every day in the market ... like snapper soup and raw milk.”

Pepper pot soup — a thick stew of tripe, vegetables, lots of black pepper and other spices — is sometimes called “the soup that won the Revolutionary War.” According to legend, it’s credited with restoring the strength and fighting spirit to Gen. George Washington’s troops during the harsh 1777-1778 winter at Valley Forge.

Nowadays, pepper pot is served at a couple of niche restaurants and as an occasional special at the Reading Terminal’s Down Home Diner, which is making a batch for the festival.

For the tripe averse, there’s fried catfish on a waffle with pepper hash — arguably the cheesesteak of the Victorian era, when catfish were a plentiful catch in the Schuylkill River. There’s also a combination platter of fried oysters and chicken salad, served side by side and known as the “Philadelphia Special” in the 18th-century taverns where it was a menu essential.

Home cooks will be able to buy freshly made horseradish as well as hard-to-find local produce like fiddlehead ferns, ramps and chickweed.

Local ice cream maker Bassett’s has revived for the occasion its teaberry ice cream, which has a bright pink color and unusual wintergreen flavor that come from the berries of native teaberry shrub. It may call to mind the taste of Pepto-Bismol, although a far tastier version, which might have a little something to do with why its popularity waned in the 20th century.

Other sweets being served up by the market’s Pennsylvania General Store include Cara-Mellows, handmade marshmallow dunked in caramel by fourth-generation local sweets-maker Asher’s, and Wilbur Buds chocolate drops, made in Pennsylvania since 1894.

“There’s a cycle I see where food traditions fell out of favor because people didn’t eat the sort of foods of their grandparents anymore but people are returning to them,” said Michael Holahan, who with his wife has run the General Store since 1987. “The things that kind of disappeared, you now have 30-year-olds and 20-year-olds rediscovering.”

NYC Elementary School Adopts All-vegetarian Menu

NEW YORK • A New York City elementary school has adopted an all-vegetarian menu, serving kids tofu wraps and veggie chili.

Public School 244 is the first public school in the city to go all-veggie. The animal-welfare group People for the Ethical Treatment of Animals says it might be the first all-veggie public elementary school in the nation.

Schools Chancellor Dennis Walcott says he’s proud of the “trailblazing” school.

The Queens school has 400 students in pre-kindergarten through third grade. It wanted to offer healthy food options and started serving a vegetarian lunch three times a week and then increased it to four times a week. It recently went all-vegetarian.

Principal Robert Groff said

Tuesday the kids gravitated toward veggie offerings, including black beans and cheddar quesadillas served with salsa and roasted potatoes.

Czech Communist Whisky Matures to Excellence

BY KAREL JANICEK
Associated Press

PRADLO DISTILLERY, Czech Republic • The Scottish peat was put on trucks and trains. The destination was Communist-era Czechoslovakia. The recipient: apparatchiks desperate for a decent whisky.

The journey beyond the Iron Curtain during the Cold War turned out to be the easy part. When the batch arrived, the Czech distillers had only a faint idea how to make whisky — and it took years to get things right.

“It was one thing to read about it in books, but reality is something different,” recalled Vaclav Sitner, a member of the team tasked with creating a premium whisky.

Now, almost 40 years on, the last batches of “Hammer Head” are winning rave reviews. And, in a historical twist, they are owned by a U.S. hedge fund that bought the beverage company that Sitner worked for.

Sitner, whose name still appears on the label, recalls the “alchemy” and “joy” as they concocted the whisky. It sold well despite its relatively high price in a communist economy.

In Czechoslovakia, living standards were higher than in most other communist nations, but only a limited variety of Western products were available at special stores for those privileged enough to have access to foreign currency. In common stores, there was a significant shortage of Western goods, from bananas to electronics.

“There were no means to import foreign whisky,” Sitner said. Communist states’ currencies were not convertible and the struggling command economies failed to produce enough decent goods to sell in exchange for hard currency.

The original plan was to source all the ingredients and equipment locally — but met no luck.

“The problem was with the peat, because it didn’t work,” said Sitner. “The peat we had was from South Bohemia and in combination with oak shavings it created all sorts of problems.”

“It was the most expensive peat in Europe. The (Scottish) peat didn’t actually cost that much but the transport cost a fortune. We placed it on trucks and a train carriage. One carriage was enough for us for 5-6 years.”

Sitner and his colleagues had to rely completely on their own skills since they had no chance to travel to Scotland to visit distilleries. They needed a good barley supplier and knowledge of how to grind it, a source of suitable water and new oak barrels where the product could mature for at least three years.

A small distillery in Pradlo, in the west of the country, coincidentally had a hammer mill of the kind used in Scottish distilleries. Dating from the 1920s, it was the only one in the entire country. Work started in 1976; three years of tests were needed before trial production could start — and mass production started eight years later.

Communist apparatchiks liked it so much that the bottles became a favored present.

“The comrades liked to drink whisky, despite the fact that people (in those days) were obligated to drink vodka,” Sitner said. “But comrades still liked the whisky.”

The 1989 Velvet Revolution toppled the regime and the Czech whisky also vanished from sight as the market was flooded by whiskies from all over the world. Then whisky ceased to be made for good. What left had time to mature in the original oak barrels for years to improve gradually into its current level of excellence.

The liquor company that the distillery belonged to, Stock Plzen-Bozkov, was privatized. The new owners felt the drink had no future. They sold some 250 barrels for a ridiculously low price — “barbarism,” recalled Sitner.

In 2007, U.S. hedge fund Oaktree Capital Management acquired the company.

When officials from London-based Stock Spirits Group that controls the company for the fund were presented the local whisky, their first response was “impossible it was made here,” Sitner remembered. After it passed a test in a tasting with some other single malt whiskies that followed, the company decided to put it on the market.

“Look at the gold,” Sitner said with pride during a recent visit to Pradlo cellar where hundreds the original oak barrels are still in place. “It’s a beautiful color,” he said, holding a glass just taken from a barrel.

Demand for Hammer Head has been solid around the globe, but Sitner would not reveal how much was made and how much is still available. He would only said if the current sales remain at the same level of 10,000 — 15,000 bottles a year, it is expected to be sold out in five to seven years.

The whisky sells for about (euro) 45 ($59) a bottle.

Since 2011, Hammer Head has been listed in Jim Murray’s Whisky Bible, an annual international whisky guide, where it scored 88.5 points out of 100 — putting it among “very good to excellent whiskies definitely worth buying”

“This is one of Europe’s maltiest drams ... if not the maltiest,” the guide said.

In 2011, it won a Masters award at the 2011 Whiskies of the World Masters.

Petr Nemy, an organizer of whisky tastings from the Scottish Club in Prague said that after more than 20 years of aging, Hammer Head “is beautifully matured. It’s delicately malty and smoky with a taste of nuts and maybe, vanilla. It has a beautifully rounded taste. It’s a joy to taste it.”

Pharmacist of the Year Makes Memory Discovery of a Lifetime: Is It the Fountain of Youth for Aging Minds?

‘America’s Pharmacist,’ Dr. Gene Steiner, finds what he and his patients have been looking for – a real memory pill!

PHOENIX, ARIZONA — If Pharmacist of the Year, Dr. Gene Steiner, had a nickel for every time someone leaned over the counter and whispered, “Do you have anything that can improve my memory,” he would be a rich man today.

It’s a question he’s heard countless times in his 45-year career. He has seen families torn apart by the anguish of memory loss and mental decline, a silent condition that threatens the independent lifestyle seniors hold so dearly.

In his years-long search for a drug or nutrient that could slow mental decline, he finally found the answer in the pages of an obscure medical journal.

“I was studying materials about memory loss and cognitive decline, and there it was, right in front of me...evidence of a real memory pill!”

Pharmacist of the Year, Gene Steiner, PharmD, was so impressed with his newfound memory powers that he recommended the patented, prescription-free memory formula to his pharmacy patients with great success.

“At the time, I was an anchor for a medical program in Los Angeles. I was so excited that I contacted the author of the research and invited him to come on the program as a guest.”

“I wanted millions of listeners to learn about this important new development!”

Dr. Steiner’s guest that night, US researcher, Josh Reynolds, observed a common ‘disturbance’ in aging brains, one that may be the primary cause of degrading memory and concentration powers.

Gasping for Air?

He saw evidence that older brains were ‘gasping for additional oxygen,’ a condition caused by poor blood circulation.

“Insufficient circulation,” says Steiner, “reduces oxygen to the brain, a sign of premature mental decline. This also restricts the supply of critical brain specific antioxidants and nutrients.”

Reduced blood flow has another brain-numbing effect: it slashes the number of neurotransmitters in the brain, the messenger molecules used by the brain to help form thoughts, retrieve memories, and help its owner stay focused and on-task.

Fewer neurotransmitters circulating in the brain translates to concentration and memory woes.

So, Reynolds and a team of scientists developed a natural, drug-free compound shown in research to prompt aging brains to begin to ‘think and react,’ younger.

Tired Brains Snap Awake!

“It helps tired, forgetful brains to ‘snap awake,” says Dr. Steiner.

“This natural memory pill is to your aging, sluggish brain, what a breath of fresh air is to your lungs,” he says.

It works so well, explains Steiner, that the participants in a peer-reviewed, international research study not only saw improvements in their memory, mood and concentration, but they also regained lost brainpower equal to that of someone 15 years younger, all in a 30-day time period!

This made perfect sense to Dr. Steiner, who knew instinctively that age-related memory problems may be correctable.

After the Show

After the show, Dr. Steiner confided to his guest that he was fearful of not being able to recall certain subject matter for his popular radio show.

“He gave me a couple of bottles and instructed me on its use,” says Dr. Steiner.

“Within a few days, I can tell you without reservation that my memory became crystal clear!”

Feeding an Older Brain

The formula helps oxygenate listless brain cells to revitalize and protect them from free radicals caused by stress and toxins.

It also helps restore depleted neurotransmitter levels, while feeding the aging mind with brain-specific nutrients and protective antioxidants.

Steiner was so impressed that he began recommending the formula to his pharmacy customers.

“I had such marvelous results that I not only started recommending it to my customers, I even shared it with other physicians!”

Pharmacy Best-Seller

“It became the best-selling brain health product in my pharmacy and customers were returning to thank me for introducing them to it.”

“It felt great to see so many people whose lives were enriched by taking a simple, natural formula.”

“A rookie doctor right out of medical school can set a broken bone, or treat a rash or runny nose,” explains Dr. Steiner.

“But he is often clueless when it comes to helping a patient who can’t remember to take his medicine, or forgets where he’s parked his car, or even worse, foolishly leaves the oven on at night.”

“With this simple, drug-free formula, we finally have something that we can recommend that is safe and effective. And you don’t need a prescription either!”

Seniors are more concerned about memory loss and mental decline than they are about death, itself, according to a new survey.

Recently, Dr. Steiner relocated to another state and was apprehensive about taking the state board of pharmacy jurisprudence examination, a daunting examination that tests a candidate’s mastery of pharmacy law.

“I began taking the natural memory compound for two weeks prior to the test, and I passed with flying colors!”

“The recall I personally experienced was fantastic,” says Steiner.

For years, pharmacists told disappointed patients that memory loss was inevitable. A new, drug-free cognitive formula helps improve mind, mood, and memory in as little as 30 days.

Many frontline healthcare professionals are embracing this natural remedy for three reasons.

First, the formula was submitted to the rigors of a placebo-controlled, randomized, double-blind clinical trial, using the same FDA-sanctioned brain testing protocols used to qualify prescription-sold cognitive medicines.

“The findings for improved brain function were shocking,” says Steiner.

Then, the results were shared with the world in a well-respected, peer-reviewed medical journal.

#1 Selling Brain Health Pill

Thirdly, this natural, memory-boosting wonder has passed the toughest yardstick of all — scrutiny from the US consumer.

Word has spread; in a very short time, Reynolds’ memory-booster has quickly become the #1-selling brain health supplement in the United States.

Dr. Steiner estimates that as much as 10 million single-doses have been used with excellent results by ‘lots of forgetful folks.’

Users like Selwyn Howell* agree. He credits the memory compound with bolstering his confidence.

“It helped me speak out more than I used to. I am growing more confident every day.”

Carey S.* reports, “I feel so much more focused and with the new energy I’m now ready to tackle the things I’ve been putting off for years!”

Elizabeth K.* of Rochester, New York experienced a night-and-day difference in her mind and memory. At the age of 54, her memory was declining at an “alarming rate.”

“I was about to consult a neurologist when I read a newspaper article about it.”

“It took about a month for the memory benefit to kick in. Six months later, even my husband was impressed with my improved memory. And I am very happy with my renewed mental clarity and focus!”

“I highly recommend it,” says Dr. Steiner. “This drug-free compound is the perfect supplement for increasing one’s brain power. If it worked for me, it can work for you!”

Growing Crowd of Celebrity Wines Take New Spotlight

BY MICHELLE LOCKE
Associated Press

Fancy having Brangelina, Drew Barrymore and Dan Aykroyd over for dinner? No problem, they'll even bring the wine.

OK, maybe the stars themselves won't show up, but their wines will appear with just a wave of a credit card. You might start with an aperitif of Angelina Jolie and Brad Pitt's new Miraval rose, move on to a light pasta dish served with Barrymore Wine's pinot grigio, then perhaps finish up with a glass of Aykroyd's cabernet franc ice wine for dessert.

It's hard to put a number on celebrity wines, a category that includes singers, sports stars, chefs and more. But Danny Brager, vice president for alcoholic beverages at market research firm Nielsen, says there's close to 100 on the market at the moment. "It keeps growing all the time," he said.

With thousands and thousands of wines out there, having a recognizable name on the label can help. "Just breaking through the clutter can be hugely difficult and I think that's where a recognized name just in and of itself can help break through that clutter," said Brager.

Interestingly, the average price for all 750-milliliter bottles of wine in the Nielsen database is $9. Average price for celebrity wines: $20. That could be due to a number of factors, including the type of wine the celebrity is selling — some are drawn to high-end efforts. Still, "it's a significant gap," Brager points out.

Jasper Russo, the fine wine buyer for Sigel's wine and spirits store in Dallas, recently held a tasting of celebrity wines, including Miraval, a partnership between Jolie and Pitt and the Perrin French winemaking family. "When you have someone with that kind of serious winemaking background, that's going to tell you something," said Russo. There's a flip side, too. "It tells me volumes when I can't find out from your website who's making the wine."

True wine aficionados are "going to judge the wine based on what the wine tastes like in the glass. But you have lots of customers who are not that picky about the wine. For them, wine is just a hedonistic experience. They don't want to analyze the wine; they just want to enjoy it," he said. "If you're a Brangelina fan, it's cool to have that on the table."

Miraval retails for about $24.99 and is made from grapes grown at Chateau Miraval, Pitt and Jolie's place in the south of France. "I was prepared for it to be not quite as good and I'd still be able to sell it, but I was happy with the quality," Russo said. "It had a wonderful strawberry, raspberry, mineral character to it and a great finish."

Levels of celebrity involvement vary from not much at all to sitting in on blending sessions to taking an active role in the winery.

And then there's renowned tenor Andrea Bocelli of Bocelli Family Wines, who put a new twist on the celebrity wine connection. Born into an Italian winemaking family, Bocelli pursued a singing career and has since returned to his roots helping promote the family wines.

In an email interview, Bocelli said he spent hours in the vineyards as a boy and also worked with his father and brother in the cellar. "It was always a sort of miracle to smell the fermentation and taste the wine afterward," said Bocelli, who is blind.

Bocelli's singing career, which is ongoing, had a direct effect on the winery, said Joshua Hanson, director of Seattle-based August Wine Group, importer for Bocelli Family Wines since 2005 and co-owner of the brand. When the tenor began traveling the world with his career he learned more about wine, bringing back some of the world's best bottles as well as information on the latest in cellar techniques to share with his late father, Alessandro, and brother Alberto, the chief winemaker and estate manager.

The family brought in professionals to help elevate their wines and now make small quantities of high-end wines exclusively from their own grapes. They also have partnered with local growers to make a sangiovese, Bocelli Rosso Toscana, and Bocelli Prosecco sparkling wine, which have a suggested retail price of $20 each.

While Andrea Bocelli is involved in promoting the wines — and has been known to burst into a little impromptu song at tasting events — the labels don't carry anything but the family name.

"Our whole strategy from day one has been to ground it continually in their generational history," said Hanson. "They've been making very good wine for 130 years and they're very serious about it. It's not a new, kind of, 'I'll give wine a try because it's sexy.'"

Spain's El Celler de Can Roca World's No. 1 Eatery

BY J.M. HIRSCH
Associated Press

The Top 10

Spain once again is home to the world's top restaurant.

Avant-garde eatery El Celler de Can Roca in Girona, Spain, was named to the No. 1 spot on Restaurant magazine's annual ranking of the world's 50 best restaurants during a ceremony in London on Monday. Rene Redzepi's innovative Danish restaurant Noma had held the honor for the past three years, after ousting renowned Spanish restaurant elBulli from the top spot in 2010.

The three Michelin-starred El Celler is run by three brothers — Josep, Jordi and Joan Roca. It had been ranked No. 2 for the past two years. Opened in 1986, El Celler is known for dishes that blend innovative cooking techniques with traditional ingredients, such as lobster parmentier with black truffles and Iberian sucking pig with pepper sauce and garlic and quince terrine.

Noma, which has a meticulous focus on indigenous ingredients, fell to No. 2 on this year's list. In third place is Modena, Italy's Osteria Francescana, which has placed in the top 10 restaurants since 2010.

Six U.S. restaurants made the list, but only one broke into the top 10 — Daniel Humm's Eleven Madison Park in New York was No. 5, up from 10th place last year. Thomas Keller's Per Se in New York fell from sixth place to 11th, and his Yountville, Calif., restaurant The French Laundry, came in at No. 47, down from 43rd. The French Laundry held the top spot in 2003 and 2004.

Grant Achatz' ultra-modernist Alinea in Chicago fell from seventh to 15th this year. It had been in the top 10 since 2009. Eric Ripert's seafood-focused Le Bernardin in New York held fast at No. 19, while Daniel Boulud's Daniel in New York slipped from 25th to 29th.

A Personal View Into ‘The Gaza Kitchen’

BY VERED GUTTMAN
Special to The Washington Post.

For Laila El-Haddad, maqlouba is the quintessential comfort dish of her Palestinian homeland. She has eaten it since childhood and now makes it for family gatherings. She layers sliced potatoes, tomatoes, roasted red peppers, carrots, rounds of grid-dled eggplant and chunks of lamb in a deep pot. Once a final thick layer of spiced rice is spread over the top, in goes a long-simmered broth infused with cinnamon, allspice, cardamom, rosemary and nutmeg. Flavorful steam rises to coax the rice into tenderness. Aromatics come to full force once the maqlouba is inverted, layers intact, on a platter and decorated with parsley and sauteed almonds.

Maqlouba is one of my favorites as well. El-Haddad, 35, and I had never met until recently, yet we grew up less than 50 miles away from each other. We were worlds apart, though: she in Palestinian Gaza, I in Israel. The place where we found common ground was in her kitchen, in Columbia, Md., less than 50 miles from where I live.

El-Haddad is a blogger, political analyst and social activist who recently published a cookbook, “The Gaza Kitchen: A Palestinian Culinary Journey” (Just World Books, 2012), with co-author and Madrid-based researcher Maggie Schmitt. The workbook-size paperback has earned praise from food luminaries including Claudia Roden, Nancy Harmon Jenkins and Anthony Bourdain. It was honored in the Arab category of the 2013 Gourmand Cookbook Awards, announced at the Paris Cookbook Fair in February.

Like many other immigrants, El-Haddad uses food to teach her three young children about their heritage and to keep that tradition as part of their daily life in America. She and her husband, a doctor and third-generation Palestinian refugee from Lebanon who has been denied entry to Gaza, moved to America for school and met at Harvard University in 2001. The couple moved to the Washington suburbs when El-Haddad’s husband started his medical fellowship at Johns Hopkins.

Families in Gaza fulfill a similar purpose when they cook: to keep their heritage alive. Sumagiyya, a sumac-infused stew, is a typical dish from Gaza City, while roasted watermelon salad is a specialty of the southern towns in the Gaza Strip, the 140-square-mile sliver of coastline locked between Israel and Egypt’s Sinai Desert along the Mediterranean coast. Refugees account for approximately 70 percent of Gaza’s population of 1.7 million. Many prepare dishes from villages and towns they left 65 years ago — places to which they cannot return or that no longer exist.

When El-Haddad’s parents from Gaza were visiting their daughter a few years back, the borders closed and they couldn’t return home for a year or more. El-Haddad’s mother busied herself in her daughter’s kitchen by preparing rumaniyya, a sour eggplant and lentil stew from Jaffa.

“She was making it and remembering Gaza, crying, citing some poetry. It was very emotional,” El-Haddad says. It was one of the moments that made her realize that the story of Gaza could be told through food.

In their research and travels, the co-authors found that Gaza’s traditional cuisine has adjusted to fit changing conditions: a lifelong period of being refugees with no land, a strict siege enforced by Israel, and reliance on food aid from international organizations. In that part of the world, food and politics go hand in hand.

El-Haddad says she and Schmitt wrote their book, in part, to “humanize” Palestinians.

“Sad that we need to say that,” El-Haddad says. They wanted to show that behind the long war and siege there are concerned mothers trying to feed and nurture their children. And they wanted to document a fascinating cuisine that is hardly known outside the Gaza Strip. Both co-

Sour Lentil and Eggplant Stew (Rumaniyya) from ‘The Gaza Kitchen’ cookbook.

A Quick Gazan Cuisine Guide

Here are a few ingredients and dishes of Gazan and Palestinian origin, mentioned or offered as recipes in “The Gaza Kitchen: A Palestinian Culinary Journey,” by Laila El-Haddad and Maggie Schmitt :

- Red tahini (also called tahina). A paste made of direct-heat-roasted sesame seeds. This is a specialty of Gaza that is not available in the United States.
- Freekeh (also spelled frikah). Smoked green wheat; available in the United States.
- Mahshi. Stuffed vegetables, often including magda squash (usually known as Middle Eastern squash), baby eggplant, tomato, bell pepper and more. The vegetables are filled with a mixture of rice or bulgur and ground beef.
- Fattit ajir. A spicy grilled watermelon salad with chilies, dill, tomatoes and torn bits of Arab bread.
- Maqlouba. An upside-down dish of rice, meat and vegetables cooked in aromatic spices.
- Tabikh. Seasonal vegetable stews, cooked with cubes of lamb or beef. Tabikh baqla is a stew of fresh purslane with chickpeas and cilantro.
- Sumagiyya. A sumac-infused stew of beef or lamb.
- Rumaniyya. A lentil-and-eggplant stew with sour pomegranate; the dish originated in Jaffa.

authors tested and notated recipes, disagreeing on how exacting they should be.

The book is also an attempt to save Palestinian and Gazan cuisine from what El-Haddad and Schmitt say is an Israeli attempt to occupy the Gaza kitchen.

Leafing through their “Gaza Kitchen,” I noticed a section titled “Cultural Appropriation.” The co-authors quoted articles in the Atlantic and in the Israeli daily Haaretz referring to freekeh, a smoked green wheat and longtime Palestinian staple that had become a trendy ingredient in Tel Aviv restaurants. El-Haddad and Schmitt interpreted the phrase “from Arabs living in the Galilee” as, in their words, “some hitherto undiscovered species inhabiting the land.”

At that point, I took personal offense. The article they were quoting was my own, from my Haaretz food blog. But I wasn’t surprised by their attitude. Any time I write about foods with an Arab origin (even those I’ve learned from my Jewish-Iraqi side of the family), I find a comment box full of angry Arab readers claiming that “Israelis took our land, now they’re taking our falafel/hummus/freekeh.”

“You can say this is part of the colonialism,” El-Haddad says.

At first, I found it hard to agree. The problem is not in the hummus; it’s the occupation that is still not resolved. The Palestinian influence on Israeli cuisine is a natural process, especially because it’s based on what the land has to offer: olive oil, herbs, eggplant, tomatoes, wheat and chickpeas. As a child in Israel, I used to eat chard, khobeiza and hamasees, much as El-Haddad’s family did.

The dishes that Israelis themselves consider to be most Israeli are falafel and hummus, both Arab dishes from the Levant. But isn’t that what has always happened with food? It’s the context that makes it different.

Were we dealing with a peaceful situation, the debate over ownership of food would sound overwrought. But for the people of Gaza, seeing their own culinary symbols being claimed by the same people they view as responsible for their plight can be a source of great frustration. In discussing the issue with El-Haddad via e-mail after we met, I found myself seeing that through her eyes.

But we weren’t on the same page, maqlouba-wise.

While El-Haddad and I were corresponding, I let her know that I was planning to include a maqlouba recipe in my blog for Israel’s Independence Day (April 16). Although I knew the dish’s origin was Palestinian, I also knew it was served in Israeli restaurants and homes. My version had a few adaptations to suit the Israeli palate.

“I think publishing a maqlouba recipe on what to Palestinians is Nakba Day — ‘Day of Disaster’ — would generate a lot of controversy,” she said. “I would find it offensive.”

I did not write that article. “Gaza Kitchen” makes the distinction between street and home foods in the Palestinian world. Most Westerners are familiar with the restaurant fare traditionally prepared by male chefs — shawarma, kebab — but not many know the complexity and creativity of the home cuisine prepared by female cooks.

“Palestinians have seen their restaurant food appropriated and lucratively marketed as ‘Israeli,’ the book argues, “and there is some fear that the same thing might happen with these home foods.”

Living under occupation for so many years, El-Haddad had explained when I was wondering about this claim, makes Palestinians feel that their home and kitchen are the only places where they can have independence. That, she says, is why they are so protective of that domain.

The cookbook gives a full, colorful view of Gazan food. El-Haddad and Schmitt were welcomed into the kitchens of home cooks and street vendors alike.

“It’s a herby, sour, peppery, earthy cuisine,” El-Haddad told me as she peeled and prepared mini eggplants for stuffing in her Maryland kitchen. Palestinians use plenty of fresh herbs, many of which grow wild in the area, including parsley, cilantro, watercress, jute leaf, chard, khobeiza and hamasees. Figs, eggplants, tomatoes and watermelon all grow in Gaza, as well as in other parts of Palestine, and are used in lots of dishes.

But Gaza’s location, near the desert but also alongside the sea, results in a unique cuisine. It is based on extensive use of fresh dill and dill seed, on a love of hot peppers and spicy foods, and it features tomato-based dishes as opposed to the yogurt-based dishes in the north. The long stretch of the Mediterranean Sea means a lot of seafood dishes: red mullet, sea bass, sardines. And Gazans use an incredibly flavorful red tahini made with roasted sesame seeds. El-Haddad let me taste that kind of tahini, which is not available in the States. (How I wish it were; the flavor is so much richer than that of regular tahini.)

And, of course, all dishes are cooked in olive oil.

Or at least they used to be. The co-authors have written that massive destruction of centuries-old olive trees in the Gaza Strip by the Israeli army has limited the supply of the traditional oil and made what oil is available too expensive for most Gazans. Families who still own olive trees, such as El-Haddad’s, distribute the oil among themselves. As a result, the oil is used sparingly as a finishing touch instead of a cooking substance. Instead, Gazans use soy oil made available through food aid — a flavorless substitute that doesn’t offer the same health benefits as the olive oil.

The book chronicles Gazans’ reliance on frozen fish, smuggled regularly from Egypt through tunnels, due to restrictive fishing limits. Cheese is made of powdered milk provided by aid organizations. Rice and white-wheat flour, also distributed by the agencies, have replaced more traditional grains, such as bulgur.

Happiness for Mom Is a Toasted Cheese Sandwich

BY ELIZABETH KARMEL
Associated Press

Happiness is ... a warm cheese sandwich.

It's a sentiment as true to-day as when I read it as a child in my very first cookbook, the "Peanuts Cook Book." It described the simple joy of slapping cheese on a slice of bread, topping it with tomato and oregano, then waiting patiently as it toasted to a bubble.

In my family, the sandwich evolved. The bread was replaced by English muffins. The American cheese became cheddar or mozzarella. We kept the slab of tomato and sprinkle of dried oregano, which made all the difference in the world once it meshed with the bubbling juices of the tomato and the melted cheese.

As it cooked, the kitchen smelled divine and I remember looking into the glass of the toaster oven trying to will the cheese to melt faster. Once it was done, it was essential to wait a bit for it to cool down or it would burn the roof of your mouth.

Though I haven't made these sandwiches in a while, they came to mind recently as I thought about Mother's Day. It's perfect to eat in bed. It's simple enough for the kids to make. And it's deliciously comforting.

There are two secrets to maximum happiness in this sandwich.

First, always open the English muffins with a fork so that you preserve the nooks and crannies. Otherwise, it's just flat bread. Second, pre-toast the English muffins without any toppings so that they are a bit crunchy before you put the cheese and tomato slice on top. This takes a little longer but vastly improves the texture of the finished sandwich.

Also, the cheese must go beneath the tomato, otherwise the tomato slice will make the bread soggy. I add a small sprinkle of cheese to the top, too, because it looks finished and because I love the taste of browned cheese on the warm tomato. You can use your favorite cheese or try freshly grated Parmesan like I do.

And if you don't like oregano, use your favorite dried herb or a combination of herbs. And while I favor the simple version in the recipe below, it obviously is easily adapted. Consider these add-ons:

- Whole-grain mustard
- Crisped bacon (or Canadian bacon)
- Seared kielbasa slices
- Pesto
- Cooked spinach (well-drained)
- Jarred banana peppers or jalapeno peppers
- Fresh arugula
- Jarred roasted red peppers (drained and patted dry)
- Mango chutney
- Tapenade

English Muffin Cheese and Tomato Sandwich

Start to finish: 20 minutes
Servings: 4

- 4 English muffins, split with a fork
- 8 slices of cheddar cheese
- 8 center slices of tomato
- Dried oregano
- 2 tablespoons grated Parmesan cheese

Heat the toaster oven or conventional oven to 400 F. Line a baking sheet or pan with foil.

Toast the English muffins halves until lightly colored, about 3 to 4 minutes. Top each muffin half with a slice of cheese, then a slice of tomato, a sprinkling of oregano and a bit of the Parmesan cheese. Arrange the muffins on the prepared baking sheet, then return them to the oven and toast for 10 minutes, or until the cheese is melted and bubbly at the edges and the tomato is hot and cooked through. Let cool for several minutes before serving.

Buhl Duo Signs for College Sports

BY DAVID BASHORE
dbashore@magicvalley.com

BUHL • Two athletes, two colleges, three sports.

Buhl state champion wrestler Stephen Mejia and linebacker/thrower Taylor Oppedyk each signed a letter of intent to continue playing sports in college.

Mejia inked with Colorado Mesa University in Grand Junction, Colo., while Oppedyk signed for football with the College of Idaho. He's waiting for a track and field letter of intent to sign as well.

As a senior, Mejia went 38-1 and won the 160-pound Class 3A championship. His only loss came to a wrestler from Burns, a school that's one of Oregon's high school wrestling titans.

But success against a tough schedule, as well as his tireless work to hone his craft, got the attention of the NCAA Division II program.

"They want to know about your work ethic, and if they see you have a good work ethic and you're willing to learn to get better, that makes a difference," Mejia said. "I think it's going to be a great school for me. I'd love to say I'm going to hit the ground running, but that first year is going to be really tough. Everyone there in the room is just as good as you or better, so I know I'm going to take some lumps before I can give them out."

Oppedyk was a two-way football player during his time at Buhl, continuing head coach Stacy Wilson's tradition of championing ironman football.

He'll likely play on one side of the ball in Caldwell, but he'll have track and field to add to his repertoire. Oppedyk is currently one of the top discus/shot put throwers in the 3A classification.

"They worked it out where in summer and fall I'll focus on football and in the winter and spring I'll be on the track," Oppedyk said. "I'm going to be really busy, but I'm excited. I'm glad that I have a year to get used to academics before worrying about (football) games, which start in 2014."

Oppedyk is the fourth District IV athlete to sign with the College of Idaho football program, joining Gooding's Josh Faulkner, Twin Falls' Jason Byce and 2012 Kimberly graduate Brock Hulsey. The program was reinstated after a 30-plus-year hiatus. Games resume in 2014.

Castleford's Sierra Harr chips onto the green during the Gooding High School Golf Tournament on Tuesday at the Gooding Country Club in Gooding.

Back With the Girls, Harr Still in the Zone

BY NICK RULAND
nruland@magicvalley.com

GOODING • Thirty mile per hour gusts decimated clouds before they could form Tuesday afternoon at Gooding golf course, but it wasn't hard for Castleford golfer Sierra Harr to find silver linings.

"It's crazy out there," Harr said after finishing her round. "You hit it so much differently when you play in the wind, and the swing is so much harder."

All the girls in the Gooding tournament came in after nine holes. The boys were given the option to retreat early to the cozy confines of the clubhouse, but the boys would be boys, and not wanting to look weak amongst their peers, finished up.

Last year, Harr would have been one of the boys, hitting into curtains of wind, altering her stroke, perhaps, to shoot through it — maybe even doing more harm than good in the long run.

Harr is a junior now, and back with the reformed Wolves' girls team, all four of them.

Her dad, temporarily conflicted, is the golf coach and chose to help recruit the other golfers and reform the team. He wasn't sure it would help her daughter, but it certainly made things a lot less stressful.

Harr won the girls state title by six strokes as freshman. The fallout of her sophomore season caused national stir.

Because Castleford didn't have enough players to form a girls team, Harr played with the boys, finishing seventh in the state at 2A. The lead-up to last fall's decision by the Idaho High School Activities Association to not alter the language of its program rules and allow Harr and other female athletes to compete with their male counterparts under certain circumstances turned into a controversy.

Harr's story, with Title IX and civil rights implications, appeared in the Daily Mail, Huffington Post and Associated Press in September, prior to the board's decision.

That's all over with now. Harr is back to winning tournaments by 30 strokes or more. The dominance is comparative obscurity for Harr, who has had to re-frame her perspective as a junior.

GOODING • Gooding senior Zach Woods had been struggling all year.

He found his stroke in some of the worst golfing conditions imaginable Tuesday at Gooding Country Club, shooting a season best 77, winning the tournament on a day his coach Jysen Lancaster played all of his seniors.

"I was just trying to break 90," Woods said. "I found my swing today. I really think I found the keys to my consistency. I had to keep calm and go through my pre-swing routine every time. I had to make sure I was on my game the entire time and couldn't lose focus for a second."

Woods kept the ball low, cutting through the wind, even going three clubs up to pierce it. Many of his teammates and opponents were just trying to get off the golf course.

"I was the one persuading the coaches to let me keep going," Woods said. "I wanted to keep my rhythm."

Woods was the only golfer to break 80 on the day. Gooding finished 35 shots ahead of Valley in the team standings.

The boys shot 18 holes while the girls only played nine due to the high winds. Valley's girls won with a team score of 219, while Castleford's Sierra Harr was the low scorer with a 42.

Collins' Big Test Will Be Joining an NBA Team

ASSOCIATED PRESS

The coming-out part is over.

Now Jason Collins needs a job.

Collins' stunning announcement that he was a gay athlete in a major sport won overwhelming support from other players, coaches and executives — even a phone call from the president.

But it also came after the season ended for the 7-foot center and his Washington Wizards.

The 34-year-old journeyman becomes a free agent on July 1 — meaning that he will first have to sign with an NBA team and wait until next season to see if teammates, coaches, opponents and fans will treat him any differently.

"I think the real response will be once he gets a job," said Brooklyn Nets veteran Jerry Stackhouse, who has called Collins a friend for years.

"It's not like he's under contract next year and guaranteed to go back to a team. I think once that happens, then public opinion or whatever or players' opinion will start to loom a little larger then. But right now we've got the summer to kind of digest what has happened, and I'm pulling for him."

Perhaps only when he starts seeing offers from teams will he get an idea of what coming out will mean for his career. He only played in 38 games last season — his 12th year in the NBA — with averages of 1.1 points, 1.6 rebounds and 10.1 minutes per game for Boston and Washington.

He may not be an All-Star, but he has built a career by being a big, smart, physical player who can come off the bench and help defend some of the few remaining dominant centers the league like the Lakers' Dwight Howard, Brooklyn's Brook Lopez and Marc Gasol of Memphis. And 7-footers in basketball are like left-handed pitchers in baseball — hard to find and can hang around forever if they stay in shape.

His basketball skills were praised by President Barack Obama at a White House news conference Tuesday, a day after he telephoned Collins to offer his support.

According to Obama, Collins was "a role model" who was unafraid to come out as gay and to say, "I'm still 7-foot-tall and can bang with Shaq and, you know, deliver a hard foul."

Collins' potential for future employment appears to be strong.

"Jason's the kind of guy who might only play against five of the 30 teams in the league," TNT analyst and former Phoenix Suns executive Steve Kerr said. "But you need him in those five games, those five matchups. He's definitely worth adding to your roster."

Rebounding, defending, setting screens, those will likely be the least of his concerns. He knows how to do that. But being openly gay in the NBA — that's never been done before.

"Just treat him normal," Heat forward Chris Bosh said. "He's a human being. It's not like he has two heads or anything. He's the same dude. You say 'What's up?' like everything is normal."

Minnesota Vikings punter Chris Kluwe, a vocal advocate for gay rights, has said the first openly gay athlete likely won't have as much to worry about with his teammates in his own locker room as he will with the media that will no doubt give him more attention than he's ever seen.

FARIED LEADS NUGGETS PAST WARRIORS, 107-100

DENVER • Kenneth Faried brought the energy and the Denver Nuggets rediscovered their toughness in time to stave off elimination Tuesday night with a 107-100 win over the Golden State Warriors.

The Nuggets slowed down Golden State's guards, jump-started their transition game and got under Andrew Bogut's skin in Game 5, jumping out to a 22-point lead before weathering the Warriors' frenetic fourth quarter rally.

Game 6 is Thursday night in Oakland. Golden State leads the series 3-2.

Andre Iguodala had 25 points and 12 rebounds, Ty Lawson had 19 points and 10 assists and Faried had 13 points and 10 boards.

Steen's OT Gives Blues 2-1 Win over Kings

ASSOCIATED PRESS

ST. LOUIS • Alex Steen stole the puck from goalie Jonathan Quick behind the net and scored a short-handed goal to give the St. Louis Blues a 2-1 victory over the defending Stanley Cup champion Los Angeles Kings on Tuesday night.

Steen scored unassisted on a backhand at 13:26 of overtime less than a minute after Blues defenseman Kevin Shattenkirk was whistled for a double-minor high sticking when he cut Dustin Penner.

Steen also scored on a power play in the first period for the Blues, who ended an eight-game losing streak against the team that swept them in the second round last spring.

Quick, last year's Conn Smythe winner as playoff MVP, made 35 saves in regulation, keeping the Kings in it for Justin Williams' tying goal with 31.6 seconds left.

Before Steen's shocker, the Kings had been on a roll, outshooting the Blues 7-0 after coach Darryl Sutter called a timeout.

The Kings outscored the Blues 15-6 in the playoffs last season and 14-7 in three regular-season meetings. But they were thoroughly outplayed most of the way in Game 1, rescued time and time again by Quick including a few saves early on that he wasn't sure he'd made judging by the backward glances.

Williams' 16th career playoff goal tied it at 1, not long after Quick was pulled for an extra attacker. Brian Elliot,

BLACKHAWKS 2, WILD 1

CHICAGO • Bryan Bickell scored in overtime on a two-on-one rush, and the Chicago Blackhawks started the playoffs on a winning note after dominating the regular season, beating the Minnesota Wild 2-1 Tuesday night.

Corey Crawford settled down after allowing a weak goal in the opening minutes. Marian Hossa also scored, and the Blackhawks took the early lead in this first-round series.

Game 2 is Friday at the United Center.

The Blackhawks finally put this one away when Johnny Oduya chipped the puck off the boards up to Viktor Stalberg on the right side. Stalberg then dished it to Bickell on the two-on-one rush in front for the winner.

Big things are expected in Chicago after a spectacular regular season that included a record start and the team's first Presidents Trophy since 1991.

The Blackhawks are eyeing a run to the Stanley Cup for the second time in four years. They have been eliminated in the first round the past two seasons after beating Philadelphia for the championship in 2010, and they realize that for all they accomplished thus far in 2013, they'll ultimately be judged by what happens in the playoffs.

O'Neill, Krigger Chase Derby History Together

ASSOCIATED PRESS

LOUISVILLE, Ky. • A little known jockey and a lightly regarded horse pulled off an upset victory for trainer Doug O'Neill at last year's Kentucky Derby.

On Saturday, he'll give another relative unknown a chance of not only winning the big race but joining him in the record books if that happens.

Kevin Krigger, the first black jockey in the Derby since 2000, will be aboard O'Neill's Goldencents, considered a much stronger contender than last year's winner, I'll Have Another.

Only six trainers have won consecutive Derbies in 138 years, and no black jockey has won since 1902.

The 29-year-old Krigger hails from St. Croix, Virgin Islands, and had some success on the smaller Northern California circuit before trying his luck in the big leagues of Los Angeles.

O'Neill is a friend of Krigger's agent, Tom Knust, and was open to a suggestion of having the jockey swing by his barn last summer. So Krigger started working out Goldencents in the morning about six weeks before the colt's racing debut.

"He got off him and in his best U.S. Virgin accent just said, 'Wow, man, this horse can really run,'" O'Neill recalled. "I had Kevin and Tom starting planting the seeds to the owners of Goldencents, and they fell in love with him right away, too."

And suddenly, the Derby rookie was the colt's regular rider. They've won four of six races together, including the Santa Anita Derby, which I'll Have Another won last year before heading to Churchill Downs.

Harr

"It's not as competitive with the girls," Harr said. "With the girls, it's kind of a fun time and everyone is friendly, but with the boys they are almost scared of me or something. They don't talk to me. I don't bite or anything. I told them that."

Harr's dad Tracy, a self-made plumber who started teaching his daughter golf at the same time he learned it (she was 5), said she had improved 15 percent last year competing with the boys.

"Last year was a grind and very competitive and I had to try to play my best golf," Harr said.

This year? Not so much. Harr wants to earn a college scholarship — it's highly unlikely she won't. She's already garnered plenty of interest, but she wants to go to a school with a high caliber golf program.

Harr said she thinks she has the ability to turn pro, "if I work hard enough."

But she has to keep getting better. So Harr couldn't do what she did her freshman season — her game would stagnate.

"I could be playing really well (my freshman year), playing to my potential and make a bad putt and I'd be like, 'oh well I'll win anyways,'" Harr said.

No longer immersed in the male dynamic, Harr's had to find motivation from within. It's provided clarity. Considering the nature of the sport at the higher levels, it might have been the best thing for Harr, even if she had a chance to win state with the boys (which likely would have led to more national publicity).

"I've had to focus on myself and just myself," Harr said. "It's going to help me in the summer."

The new mindset is working, at least at the high school level. Harr is two strokes ahead of where she was last season (74 average score compared to 76 last year) heading into the district and state tournaments.

But the summer is the real season for Harr, a time where she can qualify for national and international tournaments through the Idaho Golf Association, as she did last summer, when she made an international tournament in Hawaii, finishing 36th. She hopes to win state in IGA this year.

But Harr isn't going to waste her time during the spring, unless of course nature has her way (Castleford has only participated in four tournaments the entire season). Since the girls have a team, and they're all Harr's friends, Harr figures she might as well carry them in to the state tournament.

"It would be a big deal," Harr said. "Castleford hasn't qualified for state in any (girls) sport in like 10-15 years. I think we might be able to do it."

The only problem is that the other three girls hadn't picked up golf clubs until the season started.

"They've dropped like 30 strokes since the beginning of the season," Harr said.

If Harr can carry the Wolves into the state tournament ahead of a team like Valley, and perhaps even help the team make noise in the tournament, it might be an accomplishment on par with her seventh place finish on the boy's side — just without the hubbub.

"It's not as hectic this year," Harr said. "I'm finding ways to get better."

Obama Hints at Potential Military Action in Syria

WASHINGTON (AP) • President Barack Obama signaled Tuesday he would consider U.S. military action against Syria if “hard, effective evidence” is found to bolster intelligence that chemical weapons have been used in the 2-year-old civil war. Among the potential options being readied for him: weapons and ammunition for the Syrian rebels.

Despite such planning, Obama appealed for patience during a White House news conference, saying he needed more conclusive evidence about how and when chemical weapons detected by U.S. intelligence agencies were used and who deployed them. If those questions can be answered, Obama said he would consider actions the Pentagon and intelligence community have prepared for him in the event Syria has crossed his chemical weapons “red line.”

As Obama raised the prospect of deeper U.S. involvement, Hezbollah’s leader said Tuesday that his Iranian-backed militant group stood ready to aid Syrian President Bashar Assad. And new violence in Syria hit the capital of Damascus, as a powerful bomb ripped through a bustling commercial district, killing at least 14 people.

Mindful that any military intervention in the combustible Middle East would be complicated and dangerous, Obama hinted the U.S. would probably avoid taking action unilaterally. Part of the rationale for building a stronger chemical weapons case against Assad, Obama said, is to avoid being in a position “where we can’t mobilize the international community to support what we do?”

Obama has resisted calls to expand U.S. assistance beyond the nonlethal aid the government is providing the rebels. That has frustrated some allies as well as some U.S. lawmakers, who say the deaths of 70,000 Syrians should warrant a more robust American response.

Tuesday’s wide-ranging news conference coincided with the 100-day mark of Obama’s second term. It’s a stretch that has been defined by the defeat of gun control legislation he supported, as well as the continuation of old disputes that marked the president’s first four years in office, including the Syria conflict and the launching of his controversial health care overhaul.

Asked if he still had “the juice” to get legislation approved, he smiled and paraphrased Mark Twain’s famous line, saying, “Rumors of my demise may be a little exaggerated at this point.”

Another issue that frustrated Obama in his first term resurfaced when he was pressed about the hunger strike at Guantanamo Bay, the detention center he promised to close but hasn’t been able to. Obama said he would make another run at it, though he was vague about how.

“I’m going to go back at this,” he said. “I’ve asked my team to review everything that’s currently being done in Guantanamo, everything that we can do administratively, and I’m going to re-engage with Congress to try to make the case that this is not something that’s in the best interest of the American people.”

The president also took questions for the first time about the investigation into the Boston Marathon bombings that rattled the nation two weeks ago. He defended the FBI’s 2011 investigation into Tamerlan Tsarnaev, the suspect who was killed, a probe that resulted in the bureau finding no evidence that he was a threat to the United States.

AT A GLANCE

Light Turnout in Mass. US Senate Primary Contest

Turnout was relatively light across Massachusetts on Tuesday as voters chose which Republican and Democratic candidates will win their party primaries and go on to campaign in the state’s second special U.S. Senate election in four years.

The race to fill Secretary of State John Kerry’s former seat has been overshadowed by the Boston bombings, though turnout in the city was running slightly ahead of another special U.S. Senate primary three years ago in part because of an additional local race on Tuesday’s ballot, the state’s top elections official said.

Even before the bombings, the campaign had failed to capture the attention of voters compared with the 2010 special election following the death of longtime Sen. Edward Kennedy. Former Republican Sen. Scott Brown won the seat but was ousted last year in another high-profile race by Democratic challenger Elizabeth Warren.

Two Democrats, both members of the state’s congressional delegation, and three Republicans are vying for their parties’ nominations.

Netherlands Has New King

Millions of Dutch people dressed in orange flocked to celebrations around the Netherlands Tuesday in honor of a once-in-a-generation milestone for the country’s ruling House of Orange-Nassau: after a 33-year reign, Queen Beatrix abdicated in favor of her eldest son, Willem-Alexander. At 46, King Willem-Alexander is the youngest monarch in Europe and the first Dutch king in 123 years, since Willem III died in 1890. Like Beatrix before him, Willem-Alexander has assumed the throne at a time of social strains and economic malaise.

Dutch King Willem-Alexander is given three cheers by guests and his wife Queen Maxima inside the Nieuwe Kerk (New Church) in Amsterdam, during his inauguration Tuesday.

Storming Ministries, Libya’s Militias Increase Pressure

TRIPOLI (AP) • Gunmen swooped in on trucks mounted with anti-aircraft guns and surrounded Libya’s Justice Ministry on Tuesday, cutting off roads and forcing employees out of the building in the latest instance of powerful militiamen showing their muscle to press their demands on how Libya should be run more than a year after Moammar Gadhafi’s ouster.

Over the past three days, militia-men stormed the headquarters of the Interior Ministry and state-run TV and besieged the Foreign Ministry while publicly calling for the removal of Gadhafi-era officials from government posts and the passage of the so-called “isolation law,” which would bar from political life anyone who held any position – even minor – under the ousted autocrat’s regime.

However, analysts and democracy advocates believe militiamen are using the isolation law as a way to get rid of Prime Minister Ali Zidan, who has vowed to restore the authority of the state and disband the armed groups that have become a power unto themselves in Libya. Many of the militias have an Islamist ideology, while Zidan is seen as more secular and liberal.

“In essence this is power struggle between liberals and Islamists. This is a very dangerous turn that could force Zidan to step down,” said political analyst Saad al-Arial. “Each wants to push the other aside, and the way to do so is in parliament and in the street.”

Zidan is backed by the Alliance of National Forces, a bloc that holds the biggest number of seats in parliament and is led by Mahmoud Jibril, a liberal-leaning figure who served as the opposition’s prime minister during the civil war that eventually led to Gadhafi’s ouster and death in the autumn of 2011.

With the oil-rich North African nation still trying to write a constitution and chart its post-Gadhafi path, the alliance has been locked in a power struggle with Islamists, including the Muslim Brotherhood.

The isolation law has become a significant battleground in the rivalry. An initial version of the law presented to the parliament, known as the General National Congress, would have been an entire ruling class from politics, even figures who had minor posts or left the government decades before the uprising against Gadhafi began in early 2011.

Among those who could be affected are the congress head Mohammed el-Megarif, who was ambassador to India before defecting to the opposition in 1980; Zidan, who was a diplomat until he defected at about the same time; and Jibril, who was once an aide to Gadhafi’s son.

OBITUARIES

Dirk Ian Kunz

Aug. 5, 1981-April 27, 2013

BUHL • We are sad to announce the passing of Dirk Kunz this past weekend. Dirk Ian Kunz was killed in a horse riding accident Saturday, April 27, 2013, doing what he loved.

He is survived by his wife, Angela; four children, K.D., Clayton, Cole and Russell of Buhl; parents, Ian and Verla Kunz of Gooding; brothers, Sean Kunz of Twin Falls and Eric Kunz of Provo, Utah; and a sister, Alicia (Dex) Tiggs of Gooding.

Dirk was born Aug. 5, 1981, in Montpelier, Idaho, to Ian and Verla Kunz. Before he was 3 years old, he was introduced to horses while the family lived and worked on a horse ranch. From then on, horses and the ranching way of life were always in the back of his mind. While growing up in Gooding, Idaho, Dirk spent most of his time caring for and raising animals of one sort or another. Always industrious, Dirk let his love for animals drive him to learn what he needed to do to care for each type of critter and was even able to earn income from his endeavors.

After returning from an LDS Mission to Macon, Ga., Dirk pursued equine studies at the College of Southern Idaho where he met his bride, Angela Barnes. They married March 21, 2003, in the Idaho Falls Temple. Dirk worked a multitude of jobs to support his family while still pursuing a dream of owning a ranch and horse training business.

Ever busy, he served diligently in his ward and was presently serving as membership clerk, obtained a degree in accounting and worked at Cooper Norman during tax season. He was also serving in the National Guard as an officer candidate.

In the last 10 years, they were blessed with four intelligent and adorable children. As each has grown, they have learned from Dirk's work ethic and have been a source of help and support to their mother. A hard worker and good friend, Dirk spent almost as much time helping out other people as he did with his own responsibilities. As a result, there are few people in the valley that don't know Dirk as a very good friend. His impact on the community is significant and his leaving is far too soon.

A memorial fund has been established at Zion's Bank, 502 Main St., Gooding, ID 83330, and donations may be made to any Zion's branch or given to the staff of Farmer Funeral Chapel. Make checks payable to the Dirk Kunz Memorial Fund.

Viewing will be from 5 to 7 p.m. Friday, May 3, at Farmer Funeral Chapel, 130 Ninth Ave. N. in Buhl. A service will be at 11 a.m. Saturday, May 4, in the Buhl LDS First Ward Chapel, 501 Main St. Interment will follow the service with military honors at the Elmwood Cemetery in Gooding.

Marla never missed the Elko County Fair where she always had something to exhibit, connected with friends and cheered on the race horses.

trusted adviser in business ventures.

The successful bidder will pay all conveyancing fees, all real estate and other taxes that are due on or after the delivery of the remainder of the payment and all other costs associated with the transfer of title. At the conclusion of the sale, the deposits of the unsuccessful bidders will be returned to them. The Secretary may grant an extension of time with which to deliver the remainder of the payment. All extensions will be fore 9-day increments for a fee of $600.00 paid in advance. The extension fee shall be in the form of certified or cashier's check made payable to the commissioner. If the high bidder closed the sale prior to the expiration period, the unused portion of the extension fee shall be applied toward the amount due. If the high bidder is unable to close the sale within the required period, or within any extensions of time granted by the Secretary, the high bidder may be required to forfeit the cash deposit or, at the election of the Foreclosure Commissioner after consultation with the HUD Field Office representative, will be liable to HUD for any costs incurred as a result of such failure. The Commissioner may, at the direction of HUD Field Office Representative, offer the property to the second highest bidder to an amount equal to the highest price offered by that bidder. There is no right of redemption, or right of possession based upon a right of redemption, in the mortgagor or others subsequent to a foreclosure completed pursuant to the Act. Therefore, the Foreclosure Commissioner will issue a Deed to the purchaser(s) upon receipt of the entire purchase price in accordance with the terms of the sale as proved herein HUD does not guarantee that the property will be vacant. The amount that must be paid by the Mortgagor, to stop the sale prior to the scheduled sale date is $167,241.66 as of 5/21/2013, PLUS all other amounts that are due under the mortgage agreement. Plus advertising costs and postage expenses incurred in giving notice, mileage by the most reasonable road distance for posting notices and for the Foreclosure Commissioner's attendance at the sale, reasonable and customary costs incurred for title and lien record searches, the necessary out-of-pocket costs incurred by the Foreclosure Commissioner for recording documents. DEAR ABBY: My oldest son came out to me as a gay man in a private conversation. I have no problem with him being gay; however, I DO have a problem with the fact that he has asked me not to tell anyone. He isn't ready to come out to anyone else. I tried to advise him that until he is true to himself, he won't be happy. My son says if he comes out to anyone else, it would "hurt so many people!"

DEAR ABBY
Jeanne Phillips

I will keep his secret, but there is a young woman he is living with and planning to marry, and I do not believe this is fair to her or her child. He is not happy being a gay man, and that's why he's choosing to live a lie. He was raised in church and feels like he is betraying God by being gay.

How can I support him and lie to this young woman he is with? My son is so confused. How do I help him and keep his secret at the same time?

— ANONYMOUS
DEAR ANONYMOUS: Your son may not be "happy" being a gay man, but that is who he is. For him to keep a secret like this from his fiancée, who plans to share the rest of her life with him, will be MORE hurtful to her if he goes through with the wedding than telling her now.

Help him by encouraging him to seek counseling through an LGBT community center. It will be strictly confidential, and there is nothing he can tell them they haven't heard before. He has already cracked open his closet door by disclosing his sexual orientation to you. This tells me that on some level he wants to open it all the way.

He is fortunate that he has a parent who is as accepting and wise about life as you. Continue talking to him and encourage him to talk more with you. It may help him to become more comfortable opening up and to accept reality.

DEAR ABBY: I live in a small town where traffic isn't much of a problem. Recently, though, a young man was killed in a car wreck. He ran into a semi because he was texting while driving. His final text was to a friend who had asked if they could get together for a night of fun.

As a rule, we look down on people who drink and drive, as this is unacceptable in today's world. But we do nothing to drivers who text and drive. Please advise your readers that no message is worth dying over. Last night there was ANOTHER traffic accident caused by the same thing!

— ROBERT IN KILGORE, TEXAS
DEAR ROBERT: Sadly, that "night of fun" will have to be postponed indefinitely. Sometimes it takes a tragedy (or two) to wake people up because they're operating under the delusion that they are the exception to the rules of the road or are invincible.

DEAR ABBY: My mother is in her mid-90s and in good health. She has no intention of dying soon, but asked me an interesting question. She has mileage points with a major airline and was wondering if she can use them for the "final trip" back to her home state for burial when the time comes. Do you know the answer?

— ONE-WAY TICKET
DEAR ONE-WAY: Your question is not only an interesting one, but it's a first. I contacted a spokesperson for a major airline who responded that his company does not accept mileage points as a form of payment for any type of "shipment." For her last flight, your mother would no longer be considered a passenger; she would be cargo, which is why her points idea won't fly.

Dear Abby is written by Abigail Van Buren, also known as Jeanne Phillips, and was founded by her mother, Pauline Phillips. Write Dear Abby at www.DearAbby.com or P.O. Box 69440, Los Angeles, CA 90069.
