Officials Release Cause of Jerome Fire

BY KIMBERLEE KRUESI

JEROME • Jerome fire officials have released the cause of the fire that damaged several buildings in downtown Jerome two weeks ago.

According to Fire Chief Jack Krill, the fire started on the first floor in 126 W. Main St. after a hot glue gun was placed on a plastic chair on April 30.

A woman who used to live in the apartment building was using the hot glue gun to make pinatas. The woman set down the glue gun when a customer came in, then left in a rush to pick up her children from school, accidentally leaving the glue gun on, Krill said.

Because she was making pinatas, there were plenty of papers and other highly flammable items in her apartment, Krill said. Krill did not released the woman's name.

The fire quickly grew, eventually jumping to the Harvest Moon Cafe at 130 W. Main St. and an office building at 132 W. Main St.

Fire officials inspected the burnt buildings early last week, Krill said. A team of fire and police officials, state fire investigators and three private investigators from different insurance companies reviewed the site to determine a cause.

Krill said the estimated cost of damages to the buildings is more than $1 million.

He said the woman who used the hot glue gun will not be cited for starting the fire because it was accidental.

Feds: Budget Cuts to Make Wildfire Season Tougher

BY TODD DVORAK
Associated Press

“We are going to be faced with a difficult fire season.”

Tom Vilsack, U.S. Agriculture Secretary

BOISE • After another dry winter across much of the West, fire officials are poised for a tough wildfire season that will be even more challenging because federal budget cuts mean fewer firefighters on the ground, Interior Secretary Sally Jewell said Monday.

Jewell, who is just five weeks into her new job, said automatic budget cuts mandated by Congress will force fire managers to make choices as they prioritize resources.

They also will have fewer resources to use on strategies designed to reduce future fire potential, such as prescribed burns and reseedling.

“We will fight the fires and we will do them safely,” Jewell said. “But the resources will go to suppression, which is not ideal. What you’re not doing is putting the resources in place to thoughtfully manage the landscape for the future.”

Jewell spent the past two days touring the National Interagency Fire Center in Boise, the government’s national wildfire nerve center.

Council Approves Traffic Signal at Fillmore and North College

BY KIMBERLEE KRUESI

TWIN FALLS • Try turning left on North College Road from Fillmore Street and chances are you’ll be stuck at the intersection for more than a few minutes.

Weaving in and out of the intersection may get a little easier after the City Council signed off on installing a traffic signal there.

During Monday’s meeting, council members unanimously approved using street impact fees to fund installing the traffic light.

The light was originally supposed to be installed at Cheney Drive and North College but the need is greater at Fillmore Street, city engineer Jackie Field said.

Fields estimated the light would cost around $300,000, but she has not formally surveyed the project.

The council, who all shared horror stories trying to drive through the intersection, agreed that the project was warranted.

Wastewater Bonds Dominate May Election

BY KIMBERLEE KRUESI
kkruesi@magicvalley.com

TWIN FALLS • In both Twin Falls and Jerome, voters are being asked to pass multi-million dollar bonds to upgrade and expand their wastewater treatment facilities.

Twin Falls

What is this? Twin Falls voters are being asked to pass a $38 million bond to improve the city’s wastewater treatment facility.

Along with increasing capacity, the bond would allow the city to improve its delivery system.

Why is it needed? Currently, the city’s wastewater facility is at full capacity. This means the city cannot approve any new requests for large wastewater capacity from either commercial or residential expansions.

Arguments for: Because the facility is at capacity, the city has already turned away 12 companies that were interested in moving to Twin Falls, according to Joshua Palmer, city spokesman.

Of those 12, eight would have had a capital investment of $1.2 million and created 2,100 jobs, he said.

Arguments against: Those skeptical of the bond have pointed out that the city is at capacity because it allowed Greek-yogurt producer Chobani to come to town. City officials say the wastewater facility was already at capacity before Chobani moved to Twin Falls and that the company paid for its own wastewater capacity.

THE MARKET AT A GLANCE

Stock Market Rally Pauses on Monday

NEW YORK (AP) — A record-breaking rally in stocks paused Monday as investors assessed whether the rise in stock valuations overstated the recent improvement in the economy.

The latest positive data, out Monday, showed that Americans increased spending at retailers last month. That suggests that consumers may boost economic growth in the current quarter ending June 30. Still, that wasn't enough to lift shares.

Curious Mind

What Is Murtaugh Lake?

How large is Murtaugh Lake, what is its tributary and what is the water used for?

Murtaugh Lake was originally called Dry Creek Reservoir.

“Murtaugh Lake is roughly 700 surface acres, and the average depth when full is roughly 10 feet. So the storage capacity is roughly 7,000 acre feet,” said Twin Falls Canal Company General Manager Brian Olmstead. “Historically two creeks ran through what is now Murtaugh Lake on their way to the Snake River. Dry Creek is an intermittent stream that originates in the South Hills a few miles north of Bostetter Guard Station, and Cottonwood Creek is a small perennial stream.”

“Prior to 1900, both streams entered the Snake River just east of the present town of Murtaugh,” Olmstead said. In the early 1900s when the Twin Falls Canal System was built, they decided to make a large dike across this intermittent channel and used the resulting Murtaugh Lake as a re-regulating reservoir for the Twin Falls system. At the time, Milner Dam was the only significant dam on the Upper Snake River, so flows were highly variable at Milner and a “buffering” reservoir was desirable for canal management purposes.

Olmstead said present-day Cottonwood Creek was long ago diverted for irrigation purposes, so it no longer even has a channel that runs to Murtaugh Lake. “Dry Creek still runs into Murtaugh Lake in the spring time when snow is melting in the upper drainage. The rest of the year, all of the water in Murtaugh Lake is canal company water diverted at Milner, running through Murtaugh Lake, and then into the Main Line Canal for diversion to farmers.”

Typical flows are roughly 3,000 to 3,400 cubic feet per second during the irrigation season.

According to “A History of the Twin Falls Canal Company 1905-2005,” by J. Howard Moon and Russell Tremayne, the distance from the canal gates to Dry Creek Reservoir, now known as Murtaugh Lake, was approximately nine miles.

The town of Murtaugh was first called Dry Creek. Its name was then changed to Lucerne after a Colorado town. The soil was also good for growing Lucerne alfalfa. It was called Filer Butte, but when the train stopped, passengers would get off, thinking they were in Filer. Some got back on and continued to Filer. Others had to stay overnight and take the train to Filer the next day. This caused too much confusion, so the railroad changed the name to Murtaugh in honor of Mark Murtaugh, engineer and assistant manager of the Twin Falls Canal Company, according to Bessie Wright’s book, “Milner-Murtaugh-Murtaugh Lake.”

ONLINE: Salt Lake Softball Player Saves Drowning Swimmer

Sportswriters' updates on "Magic Valley Overtime" keep local sports lovers up to the minute. An excerpt from Nick Ruland's latest blog post:

They may have beaten the College of Southern Idaho for the fifth straight time — this time most painfully for the Golden Eagles and its fans, as it occurred at its home park on Saturday — and they'll be CSI's biggest rival for the foreseeable future, but it should be hard to dislike the Salt Lake Community College softball team after what happened Friday.

Bruins catcher Megan Bradshaw saved a local man's life, according to witnesses.

"Our team went swimming at (Dierkes) Lake and we saw a guy drowning," Bradshaw said. "He was yelling for help. I'm a life-guard and my instincts kicked in, so I ran and jumped in and grabbed him. His legs cramped up and he couldn't swim. He was ok. He just looked tired and couldn't swim any more. I'm glad we were there."

The story was corroborated by Bruins players and a fan who happened to be at Dierkes Lake ...

Break from the Heat

Brian Neudorff
Meteorologist

It was like summer the last three days with high temperatures in the 80s and 90s across the Magic Valley. It was nice to get that taste of summer, but we will have cooler and more seasonal temperatures for the rest of the week.

A cold front moved through southern Idaho last night. This will bring some breezy conditions as well as cooler temperatures. Highs this afternoon will be in the upper 60s to low 70s across southern Idaho. This is more typical for this time of year. For those needing rain, unfortunately the outlook for most of the week looks dry.

The forecast for today features more sunshine but cooler temperatures. Afternoon high temperatures will range from 70 to 75 across the Magic Valley and in the mountains. Winds will be out of the west between 10-20 mph.

Wednesday will warm back up to the upper 70s and even a few hours in the 80s during the afternoon with lots of sunshine. On Thursday morning, we will track another cold front working through southern Idaho. This will increase the chance of scattered showers and possible thunderstorms Thursday afternoon into Thursday evening.

The weather on Friday and Saturday is looking a little more unsettled with possible showers and thunderstorms. The best chance for rain will be Friday into the evening. Temperatures will be much cooler than last weekend with highs back into the upper 60s.

Police: Man Charged with Stalking

Man also tracked woman with GPS.

BY ALISON GENE SMITH
alismith@magicvalley.com

TWIN FALLS • When Jeremy Furgason told police he wanted his GPS device out of his ex-girlfriend's car, officers expected to find a navigation unit. Instead, police say, they found a device that was used to track the woman's location.

Furgason was arrested and charged with misdemeanor second-degree stalking on May 7 and arraigned May 8 in Twin Falls County 5th District Court. A no contact order was also issued.

At about 4 p.m. on May 7, Twin Falls police officer David Weigt was flagged down at 6th Avenue North and Shoshone Street by a woman who appeared to be in an argument with a man, later identified as Furgason.

Weigt wrote in a report that he noticed a car at the scene had the same license plate that was called in for a suspicious incident earlier in the day.

According to the report, a man believed to be Furgason walked past the drive-thru window at D.L. Evans Bank in the 200 block of Main Avenue South in Twin Falls. He then crouched beneath a tree while he looked at a neighboring building.

The woman who flagged down police said she'd dated Furgason but broke the relationship off, Weigt wrote in the report. According to the report, the woman said she feared Furgason had been following her and keeping tabs on her location.

The woman showed police paperwork she'd recently obtained from the Twin Falls County Sheriff's Office to keep a log of stalking incidents.

The woman said she and Furgason were arguing about him getting his things back following their breakup when he said he wanted a GPS unit back.

"I expected the device to be a navigation type GPS device, however, it was a small GPS device used to track location," Weigt wrote in the report.

Weigt wrote that the device was eventually found in a seat pocket that had a seat cover over it. Police believe Furgason hid the GPS unit from the woman, the report says.

According to the report, the woman told police she didn't know the GPS unit was in her car and Furgason had seemed to know her whereabouts recently.

Furgason denied tracking the woman's location and said he used the GPS to attempt to find guns he said the woman pawned, the report says. According to the report, Furgason told another officer that he put the GPS device in the woman's car because he believed she was cheating.

A pretrial conference is scheduled for June 18.

Snake River Flows Increasing to Benefit Native Fish

TIMES-NEWS

BURLEY • The Bureau of Reclamation will increase flows in the Snake River below Palisades Dam this week to about 18,000 cubic feet per second.

Each day, starting yesterday, the flow will increase about 15 percent until the maximum is reached on May 18. After the high flow is sustained for two days, it will be slowly decreased. The flow will return to the 30-year average of about 13,000 cfs during Memorial Day weekend, said a press release from Reclamation.

The river will be fast and cold during the high-flow period. Use caution and be aware when recreating near the river.

"One objective of this operation is to approach 20,000 cfs at the gage near Heise, approximately 48 river miles downstream of Palisades," said Roland Springer, assistant area manager for Reclamation's Upper Snake Field Office, in the release. "Providing high flows at the same time that nature would provide them benefits native fish."

These water releases will not affect Reclamation's ability to meet water delivery obligations, the release said. American Falls Reservoir will store the water that is passed through Palisades Reservoir.

Man Accused of Meth-fueled Rampage Settles for Grand Theft, Burglary Charges

TIMES-NEWS

TWIN FALLS • A man who police say went on a meth-fueled rampage down Blue Lakes Boulevard South last week has signed a plea deal, according to court records.

Israel Cerro-Gonzalez, 32, of Twin Falls, opted to skip a preliminary hearing and is scheduled to be arraigned on charges of grand theft and burglary on May 28.

According to a plea offer by prosecutors, filed May 10, the state will recommend a five- to 10-year prison sentence, which would be suspended for 10 years of probation.

The offer also states that Cerro-Gonzalez will plead guilty to one count and the other will be dismissed.

Police say that at about 3 a.m. April 28, Cerro-Gonzalez crashed his car into another vehicle, then stole a cellphone and keys from the occupants of the other car before running into a house in the 200 block of Blue Lakes South.

Police said Cerro-Gonzalez also broke a side mirror off a security vehicle and pointed a cellphone at an officer as if it was a gun before being arrested.

Prosecutors Gathering Evidence in Case of Infant Injury

BY ALISON GENE SMITH
alismith@magicvalley.com

TWIN FALLS • A preliminary hearing for a Twin Falls man accused of severely injuring his infant son has been delayed until the end of the month.

Michael Moranville, 21, signed a time waiver for the hearing at which prosecutors attempt to prove they have enough evidence to take the case to trial.

Moranville is charged with felony injury to a child.

At a May 10 hearing, Twin Falls County Senior Deputy Prosecutor Stan Holloway said prosecutors are gathering medical records in the case and need additional time.

The preliminary hearing was rescheduled for May 31. Police say Moranville squeezed and shook his infant son.

On March 4, Twin Falls police were notified that Boise detectives were dispatched to St. Luke's Medical Center in Boise for a 4-month-old Twin Falls child who was admitted into the pediatric intensive care unit with a brain bleed, a police report said. Boise detectives also told Twin Falls police that an X-ray revealed that the child had two fractured ribs in advanced stages of healing.

A March 27 report by doctors states that the baby's injuries are highly concerning and are consistent with the diagnosis of child abuse, the police report said.

TF Man to Enter Plea on Seventh DUI Charge

BY ALISON GENE SMITH
alismith@magicvalley.com

TWIN FALLS • A man with six driving under the influence convictions is scheduled to enter a plea on his seventh DUI charge next week.

Mark Cornelison, 51, of Twin Falls is still in Twin Falls County Jail in lieu of a $1 million bond.

On Monday, Cornelison was arraigned in Twin Falls County 5th District Court on charges of felony DUI, for a third or subsequent offense, and eluding police.

He's scheduled to enter a plea on May 20.

At about 2 a.m. on March 23, Twin Falls County deputies were dispatched to a possible DUI on U.S. Highway 93 just north of Rogerson, according to a report by sheriff's deputies.

Cornelison was driving a white Lincoln Town Car, the report said. Deputies said his speed ranged from 35 mph to 75 mph at first. Then after an abrupt turn onto Idaho Highway 74, Cornelison reached 83 mph on a curve where the suggested speed was 40 mph, deputies said.

At that point, the report states, Cornelison reportedly missed the curve, traveled across the oncoming lane of traffic and collided with a power pole, breaking the pole in half. He then crossed a concrete irrigation ditch, proceeded across a field, gained speed and finally came to a stop after hitting a metal fence near property at the intersection of Idaho 74 and 2400 East south of Filer, the report said.

In court, prosecutors listed his numerous run-ins with the law.

Cornelison was found guilty of driving under the influence once in Gooding County in 1996. Then in Twin Falls County, he received DUI convictions in 1998, 1999, 2001, 2002 and 2007. The last two and the current charge are felonies, while the previous convictions were misdemeanors. The felony DUI convictions resulted in prison sentences.

According to online court records, Cornelison has several other past convictions including eluding police, battery, resisting officers and assault.

Hidden Geothermal Hot Springs Ranch Up for Auction

300-acre wildlife sanctuary, geothermic hot spring, and resort property near Bliss to be auctioned in three parts.

BY JOE CADOTTE
jcadotte@magicvalley.com

BLISS • The historic, geothermally heated White Arrow Ranch is being sold Thursday to the highest bidder. The sale marks the first time the property has been open to the public in 12 years.

The road out of Bliss is dry as dust and feels empty in all directions, save for a few homes. The main population out here is cattle and sagebrush.

Tucked behind the post office in Bliss is a steep and narrow road that appears to be a dead end, but keep driving. After a few more miles of the flat, sagebrush covered land the paved country road curves to the entrance of some of the most pristine territory in the Magic Valley.

Broad hills emerge and dominate the landscape. For miles the road itself is the only evidence of civilization - and the cows that stand in the middle of the road. Less than a mile from the White Arrow Ranch entrance, nearly all of the sprawling architecture is hidden behind foothills. Through the gate, an oasis of manicured buildings leads to a ranch that looks like something out of 1950s Hollywood.

White Arrow Ranch Owner George Panagiotou said many of his visitors are stunned when they come.

“The first reaction is their mouths are open as they walk into the front door,” Panagiotou said. “White Arrow Ranch is seductive and charismatic because it encapsulates a lot of the beauty of the Magic Valley in one location.”

Rough-hewn cedar planked walls rise to a red, A-frame roof. Inside is a spacious and sunlit, five-bedroom, seven-bathroom house with geothermally heated slate floors. One of the largest, privately owned hot springs in the country flows more than 300,000 gallons of 160 degree water per day underneath much of the property. During the winter, massive plumes of steam rise from the land; snow never sticks. Panagiotou said it “looks almost like outer space.”

“I’d have to pay $500 to $1,000 to heat the house because it’s a big house,” Panagiotou said. “The ground completely heats the house in the winter.”

Large stones line the floors and surround property. Panagiotou controls the heat of those stones with a valve. “The house could be 80 degrees when it’s 15 minus outside.”

Panagiotou, who invented a no-heat Hollywood lighting system, said a family owned the house before him and were forced to leave because of bankruptcy. He bought the ranch 12 years ago to fix and sell it.

“The idea was to buy this place, flip it and sell it,” Panagiotou said. “It was a mess; You couldn’t sell it. Then after I fixed it I loved it and then the economy went to hell so there was a string of events that didn’t allow me to sell it and now I can.”

After interviewing some of the top Realtors in the nation, Panagiotou hired Randy Wells, owner of Realty Auction Services in Coeur d’Alene. Wells said he and a partner company auction 5,000 properties per year around the world. He’s never seen a property like the White Arrow Ranch.

“This is the first property we’ve sold with hot springs and the first commercial greenhouse operation we’ve sold,” Wells said. “It’s the first property we’ve sold that’s been geothermally heated.”

After explaining his relationship with the ranch, Panagiotou got in a pickup truck and drove passed 42,000 square feet of greenhouses to a steaming creek.

Don’t Worry Grandma: Hardcore Take On Same Scam

“Your son was talking on his cellphone and ran into my brother’s BMW at the gas station” the deep-throated heavy-accented voice growls. “So, I’ve taken him hostage.”

Shocked by the 6 a.m. call, Robert McCloud, of Nampa, says all he could think of was where was his son, when did he talk to him last, why was he up so early, and how could he have crashed into someone with a heavy East Coast accent. The caller, who claimed to be a drug dealer, says he wants no police involved.

“He said, ‘Your son was on the phone, and we thought he was calling the police, so we abducted him and are holding him in the house until you pay up,’” McCloud says. “And, this guy says, ‘You better send me $400 to fix the car, if you don’t want your son hurt!’”

Then the red flags went off and McCloud hung up the phone. He called his son, who was safe.

This escalation in the script means the scammers are not getting through to as many grandparents. BBBs across the United States say the grandparent scam has reached an alarming success rate scammers that con artists are using it against younger victims. Against all age groups it rose to 73,281 in 2011, up 22 percent from a year earlier, according to the Federal Trade Commission.

It also means the public has to elevate its guard to all phone calls.

Typically, well-meaning grandparents are bluffed into helping a grandchild as part of the so-called “Grandparent Scam.” Every year grandparents across the country are conned into sending thousands of dollars to rescue their distressed kids.

more unnerving compared to traditional pleas for aid. In the past, vacationing grandchildren were robbed, in crashes, arrested for drugs, helping injured friends, or simply lost a wallet/passport. Impostors are targeting military families asking for “emergency military” money, according to the FBI.

The imposter typically explains he/she was traveling in Canada or Mexico and was arrested or involved in an auto accident and needed grandma/ grandpa to wire money for bail, train/air fare or to pay for damages - usually a couple thousand dollars.

BBB says:
• Remain calm and resist the pressure to act quickly.
• Don’t give any information until you’re certain it is your grandchild.

• If a caller says, “It’s me, grandma!” don’t respond with a name, but instead let the caller say who he or she is.

• Confirm their identity by asking a simple question only your grandchild would know.

FTC says the culprits are difficult to find in part because they often operate abroad, in countries like Canada, Spain, Mexico and Nigeria.

McCloud says when you first get the call the adrenaline is pumping. “You feel fear for your loved ones, and then, afterward, you get angry. I can understand, now, how older people can be confused by a call like that.”

High Court Rules for Monsanto in Patent Case

BY JESSE J. HOLLAND
Associated Press

WASHINGTON • The Supreme Court said Monday that an Indiana farmer violated Monsanto Co.’s patents on soybean seeds resistant to its weed-killer by growing the beans without buying new seeds from the corporation.

The justices unanimously rejected the farmer’s argument that cheap soybeans he bought from a grain elevator are not covered by the Monsanto patents, even though most of them also were genetically modified to resist the company’s Roundup herbicide.

While Monsanto won this case, the court refused to make a sweeping decision that would cover other self-replicating technologies like DNA molecules and nanotechnologies, leaving that for another day. Businesses and researchers had been closely watching this case in hopes of getting guidance on patents, but Justice Elena Kagan said the court’s White Arrow Ranch and Mineral Hot Springs has a 7,000-square-foot home, greenhouses and hot springs on the almost 300 acre ranch north of Bliss. An auction will be held on Thursday May 16, and sold to the highest bidder.

Ranch

Ancient Hot Springs

Panagiotou said scientists from Switzerland tested the water and found it to be anywhere from 12,000 to 18,000 years old when it surfaces, coming from thousands of feet below the earth.

"This is a very special place," Panagiotou said. "All this attracted me, but most of all it was the tranquility out here and the hot water. ...Usually a hot spring is just a little bit of water coming out at 90 or 100 degrees. This water is very hot, very voluminous."

A Rich History

Built around 1979, the White Arrow Ranch is surrounded by undeveloped Bureau of Land Management property. Native American hieroglyphs are plentiful in the surrounding caves and mountains. The ranch was named when early developers found a large white arrow while excavating a swimming pool. Panagiotou said there are many arrowheads and remnants of pottery scattered across his property.

"I've never looked for arrowheads out here," Panagiotou said. "My friends look for them and they have made me bows and arrows, hammers and all kinds of Indian artifacts. I have never found an arrowhead. I figure it's my property. It's mine so let it stay where it's at."

Panagiotou said there is also untouched evidence of early settlers on the property. There is a cemetery nearby with graves dated as far back as 1850. Near an eagle nesting site are the remains of what Panagiotou believes to be a stone shepherd home.

The Auction

The White Arrow Ranch is being auctioned in three segments: 7,000 square foot home on 155 acres, 42,000 square feet of geothermally heated greenhouses on 45 acres and 26 lots on 80 acres of what Panagiotou describes as being located on, "The most pristine hunting and fishing region of the Magic Valley." There is no minimum bid except for a required $75,000 down on the hunting sanctuary.

Panagiotou said so far he's gotten a tremendous response at open houses.

"Most of the interest has been in the greenhouses," Panagiotou said. "The second most interest is in the lodge and resort idea. Perhaps half of that are private people who want to live there."

Randy Wells said auctioning is often more effective for "unique property" than a traditional real estate sale.

"You can list a property like that and if you check traditional listings, a property like that is going to be on the market from two to five years," Wells said. "With the auction method, you get to pick the day, the time and closing. ... What we try to accomplish through the bidding process is to get the current market value of that day."

A view of the 7,000-square-foot home at White Arrow Ranch and Mineral Hot Springs north of Bliss on Thursday.

holding Monday only "addresses the situation before us."

In a statement, Monsanto officials said they were pleased with the court's ruling.

"The court's ruling today ensures that longstanding principles of patent law apply to breakthrough 21st century technologies that are central to meeting the growing demands of our planet and its people," said David F. Snively, Monsanto's top lawyer. "The ruling also provides assurance to all inventors throughout the public and private sectors that they can and should continue to invest in innovation that feeds people, improves lives, creates jobs, and allows America to keep its competitive edge."

In the case decided by the court, farmer Vernon Hugh Bowman bought expensive, patented Monsanto's "Roundup Ready" seeds for his main crop of soybeans, but decided to look for something cheaper for a risky, late-season soybean planting. He went to a grain elevator that held soybeans it typically sells for feed, milling and other uses, but not as seed.

OBITUARIES

Jack Leonard Koonce

June 20, 1931-May 11, 2013

SHOSHONE • Jack Leonard Koonce, 81, passed away peacefully Saturday, May 11, 2013, at his home in Shoshone surrounded by his loving family.

Jack was born June 20, 1931, to Leonard and Gladys Koonce in Soldier, Idaho. He was raised and attended school in Fairfield, graduating from Camas County High School in 1949. Before and after graduation, Jack worked for his father at their local lumberyard. Jack served his country in the United States Army during the Korean War. He was stationed in Okinawa, Japan, for two years before returning to the States and served as a reserve in the Army. Jack has been a proud member of the American Legion Post 0019 in Fairfield for 55 years.

Jack married Beverly Vaught in 1951 and together they raised their three children, Debi, Wendy and Bart. They resided in Fairfield until the summer of 1972. During this time, Jack worked in construction, farming and for Camas County Road and Maintenance. The experience at Camas County opened up a career opportunity to work for the Idaho Transportation Department in Fairfield. In 1972, Jack's family moved to Shoshone when he was promoted to maintenance foreman for the 4th District of ITD in Shoshone. Jack and Beverly were later divorced.

Jack met DeAnn Higley while working for the ITD. They were married June 30, 1979. They enjoyed traveling, especially to the West Coast, having many experiences they have cherished through the years. Their travels were "B.C., Before Cows." Jack and DeAnn became partners, not only in marriage but also as owners and operators of the Koonce Dairy. They started raising Holstein calves on their property east of Shoshone in 1980, working side by side. Jack retired from the ITD and DeAnn left her position there in 1986. The Koonce Dairy became their new career. They also owned and farmed land, raising alfalfa for their dairy. In 1991, they received "Patron of the Year" from the Avonmore Company. Jack built the dairy with a lot of hard work and muscle. There wasn't anything he couldn't build out of wood or metal. Most of his planning and designs came after much thought and without drawings. He did everything in his head. Jack and DeAnn's dairy started very small and grew into a larger "small" one.

Due to illness, Jack left the dairy business in November of 2004 but continued to raise alfalfa and sell it to other dairies in the Magic Valley.

Jack was hoping for another crop this year, and thanks to John McGhee and Monte Higley for all the hard work this last winter and spring for getting the farm ready, it's going to happen. Jack was elected as a Shoshone Highway District Commissioner in 2009, serving until his health would not allow him to continue.

Jack is survived by his wife, DeAnn of Shoshone; daughter, Debi (Buz) Vanskike of Jerome; daughter, Wendy (Jim) Egersdorf of Shoshone; son, Bart (Ginger) Koonce of Shoshone; sister-in-law, Jean (Gaylen) Koonce of Caldwell; six grandchildren; and two great-grandchildren. Jack was preceded in death by his parents, Leonard and Gladys Koonce; and brothers, Gaylen and Gary Koonce.

The family wishes to express thanks to Maighan Hatch and Mistie Mulleian, the staff of St. Luke's Magic Valley and Idaho Home Health and Hospice (especially Heidi and Brandi) for your care in Jack's last days. You were all great to him. A very special "thank you" to Dr. Sara Johnson and her staff for being so good to Jack over the years. Man Accused in Cancer Fundraiser Fraud Shouts at Judge, Storms Out of TF Court

alismith@magicvalley.com

TWIN FALLS • A man accused of holding a fraudulent fundraiser to help his daughter who he and his wife said had cancer left the courtroom in a fit of anger Monday during a pretrial hearing, but not before shouting at the judge and almost striking his lawyer with a cane.

Michael Wayne Holley, 54, and Lisa Holley, 44, of Buhl were both accused in October of holding the fundraiser and charged with two counts of grand theft by deception after Idaho State Police said the two accepted funds from an undercover officer.

On Monday, Michael Holley was in court along with his attorney, George Essma, and Twin Falls County Deputy Prosecutor Rosemary Emory. The purpose of the hearing was to work out any scheduling issues before the trial, set to begin May 29.

Essma told Twin Falls County 5th District Judge Randy Stoker that he had been attempting to resolve the case with a plea deal. Essma said his client could possibly enter an Alford plea, meaning he'd admit that prosecutors had enough evidence to convict him, but not admit to all the elements of the charges against him.

He also told Stoker that Michael Holley is adamant about his innocence and that the recent death of a family member could have been affecting his ability to focus on the case.

At that point, Stoker told Michael Holley that he should speak with Essma about the possible plea deal. Michael Holley told the judge that he would not speak with Essma and went into a tirade against the prosecutor's office.

Stoker cautioned Holley to not speak about the case or incriminate himself on the record.

The judge then attempted to get the hearing back on track when Holley again interrupted Essma while he was discussing how many days the trial could take.

"I'm to the point where I don't care if I live or die," Michael Holley said. "I'm not going to prison."

As Essma tried to get his client to stop speaking, Holley picked up his cane, nearly striking Essma, then asked court security to take him out of the courtroom, saying no one was listening to him.

After being escorted out of court, Holley could be heard yelling in the hallway of the courthouse.

Stoker said the hearing could continue and Essma explained he'd been having a hard time communicating with his client about the case.

Essma said he was ready to go to trial but believed Holley might display some of the same behavior in a trial setting.

Stoker asked Essma if he believed his client was competent or could understand the court proceedings. Essma said he hadn't been able to get Holley to calm down enough for him to explain the proceedings and he believed Holley was unable to assist in his own defense.

Stoker ordered a second mental health evaluation and said the May 29 trial could be cancelled if the evaluation takes too long.

In October, prosecutors charged Lisa Holley with an additional count of grand theft by deception. Prosecutors say Holley falsely claimed she was pregnant with triplets and received more than $1,000 in cash and goods from church members in Buhl.

Mental health evaluations have also been ordered in both of Lisa Holley's cases and no trial dates have been set.

Jerome

What's on the ballot? Just like Twin Falls, the city of Jerome is asking its voters to pass a bond to fund its city's wastewater treatment facility upgrade and expansion. The price tag for the bond is $48 million.

The bond would allow the city to pay for the replacement of old equipment, expand capacity by 15 percent and implement redundancies, which are backup systems in case a section of the wastewater facility needs to shut down.

Why is it needed? Jerome officials have been pushing for a wastewater treatment facility upgrade since 2010. The U.S. Environmental Protection Agency is demanding that the city be brought up to code or face serious fines for noncompliance. Currently, the facility is running over capacity and is at threat of violating its federal and state permits.

Arguments for it: Along with getting the facility to meet federal standards, Mayor John Shine argues that the bond allows the city to compete for more business. Without the capacity, the city is unable to attract industries that may produce large amounts of wastewater and thus hinders Jerome's economic activity.

Arguments against it: Jerome's $48 million bond is not only the highest amount on this May's election but is one of the highest the area has seen for this kind of upgrade in several years. The high amount has caused people to question whether the upgrade really needs to cost that much.

What Else Is on the Ballot?

Jerome County Jail Bond: In Jerome County, residents will vote on an $11.2 million bond to pay for a new jail. It will be the fifth time Jerome County voters have been asked to fund a new jail.

Proponents of a new jail say the current facility must be replaced for the safety of inmates and staff, as well as to address issues such as plumbing and electrical wiring hazards.

Narcotics Investigation from 2011 Nabs Idaho Woman for Trafficking

BY CALEY COOK
Free Press Staff Writer

JACKPOT, Nev. • An investigation involving a confidential informant who bought drugs outside a jackpot casino led police to a Twin Falls woman they believe has been trafficking methamphetamine, according to court records.

Law enforcement from Idaho extradited 40-year-old Linda R. Packham to Elko on Saturday where she was arrested on a $105,000 bench warrant issued by Elko Justice Court in mid-March, according to Elko County Sheriff Jim Pitts.

Packham is facing seven charges related to two incidents in May 2011 in which detectives believe she sold more than 20 grams of meth to a confidential police source, according to the court record.

Elko County Narcotics Unit investigators received information from one of their confidential informants that he had been in Packham's home in Twin Falls, which she shared with her boyfriend Miles K. Miller, and had seen a list of people who owed them money for meth, according to documentation by the ECNU.

Under the guidance of detectives, the informant set up a meeting with Packham on May 17, 2011, to buy four "teeners," or about seven grams of meth. Detectives fitted the informant with a wire that recorded his conversations and gave him money to buy the drugs, according to a receipt included with the court record.

Packham traveled from her home to meet the informant outside the Pony Express Casino where he paid $500 for the meth, which Packham kept inside her bra, according to the ECNU documentation.

A week later, investigators set up the informant to meet both Packham and Miller at the casino to buy half an ounce of meth. According to investigators, Miller gave the informant the meth in a cigarette pack in exchange for $800 in cash (and $20 for gas money) furnished by the detectives, according to the ECNU documentation.

It is unclear whether Miller is in custody, but Packham was booked into Elko County Jail on four charges stemming from the May 17, 2011 transaction — trafficking in a controlled substance, sale of a controlled substance, possession of a controlled substance and conspiracy to violate the Controlled Substances Act.

Three charges also came from the May 24, 2011, transaction — trafficking in a controlled substance, sale of a controlled substance and possession of a controlled substance.

Three narcotics unit detectives were involved in the investigation.

Council

"It's a very scary place to go," said Councilwoman Suzanne Hawkins. "This will make my life a much safer place, and I appreciate it."

The council also approved $21,200 in Municipal Powers Outsource Grant funds for the Twin Falls Municipal Band.

The city is not currently accepting MPOG applications because it is reviewing the application process.

The band has not yet requested a specific dollar amount. Last year, the band requested a little more than $21,100 but was given $20,000 because of competing grant requests.

According to Hawkins, it wasn't fair for the city to jeopardize the band's only source of funding just because the city changed the application approval process this late in the year.

"We have to use our brains," she said. "Because we decided to change the system, we created a problem for our city band."

Councilmen Jim Munn and Shawn Barigar adamantly disagreed with preemptively approving the funding request.

Voting against the motion, both Munn and Barigar pointed out that the approval undermined the council's attempt to improve the application process.

"With all due respect to the council and to the city band, does this not defeat the purpose of revamping?" Barigar asked the council. "It just seems counterproductive to what we've going though to assess the grant process. ... I think they could find other ways to support their programs like all of the other organizations that apply to MPOG."

Other council members argued that the city band was an important tradition that should continue to receive funding.

Councilwoman Rebecca Mills Sojka said that while the city might be behind on when it approves MPOG requests, the band is scheduled to begin conducting concerts in two weeks.

"I think it's different because it has the city's name on it," said. "I can't imagine why you would want to break with that history."

The council voted 5-2. The city expects to begin accepting MPOG applications later this week, said Mike Williams, assistant city manager.

The council also:

- Presented a certificate of appreciation to Christina Bruce, president of the Twin Falls City Youth Council.
- Listened to a presentation of the multi-jurisdiction all hazard mitigation plan from Rick Fawcett, president of Whisper Mountain Professional Services.
- Unanimously approved a request to waive the non-confirming building expansion permit process to allow an expansion of an existing non-conforming residence located at 4006 Canyon Ridge Drive.
- Unanimously approved a request to rezone property at the northwest corner of Eastland Drive North and Addison Avenue East from residential to mixed use.

Budget Cuts

center. She was joined by U.S. Agriculture Secretary Tom Vilsack, who said the U.S. Forest Service alone will hire 500 fewer firefighters and deploy 50 fewer engines this season.

"We are going to be faced with a difficult fire season," Vilsack said. "The bottom line is we're going to do everything we can to be prepared. But folks need to understand ... our resources are limited and our budgets are obviously constrained. We will do the best job we possibly can with the resources we have."

Congress cut the current budgets for the Forest Service and Agriculture Department 5 percent under the mandated spending reductions, then added another 2.5 percent cut for fiscal 2013.

Other federal agencies that battle blazes also anticipate hiring fewer people to fight fires, including the Bureau of Land Management, National Park Service and Fish and Wildlife Service.

The Forest Service, however, will be adding some muscle to its ability to fight blazes from the air. The agency announced earlier this month it has contracted to use seven air tankers that fly faster and drop bigger amounts of fire retardant this summer.

Even before Monday's visit, fire experts were predicting a grim scenario of this summer's fire season. A dry winter and early warming has created conditions for a fire season that could begin earlier than usual and burn as much as last year, where states like New Mexico and Oregon posted new records for burned acreage.

Crews already have fought blazes in California and Colorado. Barring any dramatic weather changes, the fire season is projected to start a month earlier than usual for Oregon, southern Washington, central Idaho and Montana.

Conditions are also ripe for above-normal fire potential in Arizona and New Mexico, but forecasters say late-season rains could tone down the southwest fire season at least until late summer.

Jewell, who flew on a training exercise over Idaho's backcountry Sunday with smokejumpers, said despite the challenges posed by drought and budget constraints, firefighting remains a priority for her agency.

Jewell and Vilsack both emphasized that states and local communities will be called upon even more to help battle blazes, protect property and be patient if federal crews are occupied elsewhere.

Sen. Jim Risch, R-Idaho, defended the decision by Congress to trim agency budgets mid-year in an effort to trim government spending and reduce the national debt. But the first-term senator also predicted congressional support for relief money if catastrophic fires were devastating the Western landscape.

"You have got to accept there is not going to be federal spending as there has been in the past," said Risch, who joined Jewell and Vilsack on the tour. "There is no question of whether you support (the cuts) because there is no money."

Search Ends in Bangladesh

Death toll put at 1,127.

SAVAR, Bangladesh • Several of the biggest Western retailers embraced a plan that would require them to help pay for factory improvements in Bangladesh as the nearly three-week search for victims of the worst garment-industry disaster in history ended Monday with the death toll at a staggering 1,127.

Bangladesh's government also agreed to allow garment workers to form unions without permission from factory owners. That decision came a day after it announced a plan to raise the minimum wage in the industry.

The collapse of the eight-story Rana Plaza factory building April 24 focused worldwide attention on hazardous conditions in Bangladesh's garment industry, where workers sew low-cost clothing that ends up on store shelves around the globe, including the U.S. and Western Europe.

The tragedy came months after a fire at another garment factory in Bangladesh killed 112 workers.

Swedish retailing giant H&M, the largest purchaser of garments from Bangladesh; British companies Primark and Tesco; C&A; and Inditex, owner of the Zara chain, said they would sign a contract that requires them to conduct independent safety inspections, make reports on factory conditions public and cover the costs of repairs.

It also requires them to stop doing business with any factory that refuses to make necessary safety improvements.

Two other companies agreed to sign last year: PVH, which makes clothes under the Calvin Klein, Tommy Hilfiger and Izod labels, and German retailer Tchibo.

Govt. Obtains Wide AP Phone Records in Probe

BY MARK SHERMAN
Associated Press

WASHINGTON • The Justice Department secretly obtained two months of telephone records of reporters and editors for The Associated Press in what the news cooperative's top executive called a "massive and unprecedented intrusion" into how news organizations gather the news.

The records obtained by the Justice Department listed incoming and outgoing calls, and the duration of each call, for the work and personal phone numbers of individual reporters, general AP office numbers in New York, Washington and Hartford, Conn., and the main number for AP reporters in the House of Representatives press gallery, according to attorneys for the AP.

In all, the government seized those records for more than 20 separate telephone lines assigned to AP and its journalists in April and May of 2012. The exact number of journalists who used the phone lines during that period is unknown but more than 100 journalists work in the offices whose phone records were targeted on a wide array of stories about government and other matters.

Philly Abortion Doctor Guilty in 3 Babies' Deaths

BY MARYCLAIRE DALE
Associated Press

PHILADELPHIA • An abortion doctor was convicted Monday of first-degree murder and could face execution in the deaths of three babies who were delivered alive and then killed with scissors at his grimy, "house of horrors" clinic.

In a case that became a grisly flashpoint in the nation's abortion debate, Dr. Kermit Gosnell, 72, was also found guilty of involuntary manslaughter in the overdose death of an abortion patient. He was cleared in the death of a fourth baby, who prosecutors say let out a whimper before the doctor cut the spinal cord.

Gosnell, who portrayed himself as an advocate for poor and desperate women in an impoverished West Philadelphia neighborhood, appeared hopeful before the verdict was read and calm afterward.

The jury reached its verdict on its 10th day of deliberations. It will return May 21 to hear evidence on whether Gosnell should get the death penalty.

Gosnell attorney Jack McMahon called it a "very difficult case" to defend and said there was "a little bit of feeling on the defense part of what salmon must feel swimming upstream."

"There's a lot of emotion. You have the baby factor, which is a big problem. The media has been overwhelmingly against him," he said. But noting that Gosnell was cleared on some of the charges, McMahon said the jurors "obviously took their job seriously."

Prosecutors looked elated, but District Attorney Seth Williams declined comment until after the sentencing phase, citing a gag order.

Former clinic employees testified that Gosnell routinely performed illegal abortions past Pennsylvania's 24-week limit, that he delivered babies who were still moving, whimpering or breathing, and that he and his assistants dispatched the newborns by "snipping" their spines, as he referred to it.

"Are you human?" prosecutor Ed Cameron snarled during closing arguments. "To med these women up and stick knives in the backs of babies?"

Gosnell was also convicted of infanticide, racketeering and more than 200 counts of violating Pennsylvania's abortion laws by performing third-term abortions or failing to counsel women 24 hours in advance. The courtroom was locked for more than 30 minutes as the verdicts were read and the jurors polled one by one.

His co-defendant, former clinic employee Eileen O'Neill, was convicted of taking part in a corrupt organization and illegally billing for her services as if she were a licensed doctor.

Obama Tries to Swat Down IRS, Benghazi Controversies

BY JULIE PACE
White House Correspondent

WASHINGTON (AP) • President Barack Obama tried to swat down a pair of brewing controversies Monday, denouncing as "outrageous" the targeting of conservative political groups by the federal IRS but angrily denying any administration cover-up after last year's deadly attacks in Benghazi, Libya.

Simultaneous investigations — and demands by Republicans for more — have put the White House on the defensive, emboldened GOP lawmakers and threatened to overtake a second-term

Obama agenda already off to a rocky start.

During a joint news conference with British Prime Minister David Cameron, the normally even-keeled Obama appeared agitated over the resurgent investigation into the September attack at a U.S. diplomatic compound in Benghazi. He dismissed the Republican-driven effort as a "sideshow" that dishonors the four Americans who were killed, including Ambassador Christopher Stevens.

"There's no there there," Obama declared in his first public comments since GOP lawmakers launched new hearings on the matter. "The fact that this keeps on getting churned up, frankly, has a whole lot to do with political motivations."

Seeking to keep another controversy from spinning out of control, the president rebuked the IRS for scrutinizing the tax-exempt status of groups with conservative titles such as "Tea Party" or "Patriot" in their names. Those responsible, Obama said, must be held "fully accountable."

"I've got no patience with it," he added. "I will not tolerate it and we will find out exactly what happened."

The president said he first learned of the matter Friday when it was reported by news organizations.

Spokesman Jay Carney said later that the White House counsel's office was alerted on April 22 that the IRS inspector general was completing a review of an IRS office in Cincinnati.

Neither issue appears to be going away any time soon. On Monday, Rep. Darrell Issa, R-Calif., chairman of the House Oversight and Government Reform Committee, asked authors of an independent government review into the Benghazi attack to meet privately with committee investigators. And the House Ways and Means Committee said it plans to hold a hearing on the IRS matter on Friday.

Police ID Suspect in New Orleans Mass Shooting

BY CHEVEL JOHNSON
Associated Press

NEW ORLEANS • Police identified a 19-year-old man as a suspect in the shooting of nearly 20 people during a Mother's Day parade in New Orleans, saying several people had identified him as the gunman.

Police Superintendent Ronal Serpas said they were looking for Akein Scott. He said it was too early to say whether he was the only shooter.

"The important thing for Akein Scott now is to turn himself in," Serpas said, standing outside of police headquarters. A photo of Scott hung from a podium in front of the police chief.

The mass shooting showed again how far the city has to go to shake a persistent culture of violence that belies the city's festive image. Earlier, police announced a $10,000 reward and released blurry surveillance camera images.

Investigators said they got several tips from the community.

"The people chose to be on the side of the young innocent children shot instead of on the side of a coward who shot into the crowd," he said.

Angry residents said gun violence — which has flared at two other city celebrations this year — goes hand-in-hand with the city's other deeply rooted problems such as poverty and urban blight. The investigators tasked with solving Sunday's shooting work within an agency that's had its own troubles rebounding from years of corruption while trying to halt violent crime.

"The old people are scared to walk the streets. The children can't even play outside," Ronald Lewis, 61, said Monday as he sat on the front stoop of his house, about a half a block from the shooting site. His window sill has a hole from a bullet that hit it last year. Across the street sits a house marked by bullets he said were fired two weeks ago.

"The youngsters are doing all this," said Jones, who was away from home when the latest shooting broke out.

Video released early Monday shows a crowd gathered for a boisterous second-line parade suddenly scattering in all directions, with some falling to the ground. They appear to be running from a man in a white T-shirt and dark pants who turns and runs out of the picture. The image isn't clear, but police said they hoped someone would recognize him and notify investigators.

Police were working to determine whether there was more than one gunman, though they initially said three people were spotted fleeing from the scene. Whoever was responsible escaped despite the presence of officers who were interspersed through the crowd as part of routine precautions for such an event.

The Yemeni Way

If you want to know how bad things can go in Syria, study Iraq. If you want to know how much better things could have gone, study Yemen. Say what? Yemen?

Yes, Yemen. Maybe the most unique postrevolutionary political process happening in any country experiencing an Arab awakening is in poor, fractured, water-starved Yemen. In its own messy way, Yemen is doing what all the other Arab awakening countries failed to do: have a serious, broad-based national dialogue, where the different political factions, new parties, young people, women, Islamists, tribes, northerners and southerners are literally introducing themselves to one another in six months of talks — before they write a new constitution and hold presidential elections. (After decades of autocracy, people in these countries did not know each other.)

It is what Egypt certainly failed to do in any serious way before rushing ahead with presidential elections that have left many people feeling disenfranchised and Islamists running away with the politics. One of the most important things President Barack Obama could do to advance the Arab awakening is give a shoutout to Yemen’s approach. Yes, the odds of success here are still really, really long — the effects of 50 years of over-exploiting Yemen’s water and soil could overwhelm even the most heroic politics — but what Yemen is doing is the only way any Arab awakening state can hope to make a stable transition to democracy. Kicked off on March 18, the 565 delegates to Yemen’s national dialogue are tasked with developing recommendations on how to address nine issues ranging from future relations between the feuding north and south to state-building to the future role of the army to rights and freedoms — all of which will go into the writing of a new constitution and holding of elections in February 2014.

“In the beginning, it was very tough,” said Yahia Al-Shaibi, a former education minister participating in the dialogue, but, “after a while, things started getting calm, people were sitting together and eating together and we see our different views. Now we can hear what each other says. We are starting to listen to each other and try to come to consensus.”

The official dialogue has stimulated an even bigger unofficial one. Yemeni Facebook pages and Twitter feeds have exploded with debates about politics, women’s rights and the army. After decades of being silenced, everyone wants to talk now. Women are one-third of the dialogue delegates, and the men are having to adapt. An American democracy adviser here told me this story: “We find that the women members of the dialogue usually come prepared and show up on time. It’s open seating, so sometimes they sit in the front row. The other day a tribal leader came late and went to the front seat, which was already occupied by a woman, and he said, ‘That’s my seat.’ And she said, ‘No, it’s not.’”

The dialogue is possible because of the gradual (and messy) way Yemen’s awakening played out. It started in 2011 with youth-led protests that escalated into near civil war and a government breakdown until then-President Ali Abdullah Saleh handed power to a transitional government. Saleh’s party and his followers, along with the biggest opposition bloc, Islah, Yemen’s Muslim Brotherhood, still retained influence. There was no “de-Baathification” or “de-Mubarakization” in Yemen — but much more of a “no-victor-no-vanquished.”

No party was absolutely “defeated,” said Deputy Foreign Minister Mohy al-Dhabbi. It gave everyone a stake in the democracy transition and “allowed for everyone to give concessions.”

It also allowed time for women and the youths who started the revolution “to all get involved politically before the elections,” added Aidrous Bazara, a businessman in the dialogue. Now no one party “can steal” the revolution, he said. That has been reinforced by the recent decision by Yemen’s new president, Abdu Rabu Mansour Hadi, to professionalize the army, starting by purging Saleh’s relatives from the intelligence agency and the elite Republican Guard.

Yemen is a National Rifle Association paradise. It seems as if every Yemeni man owns a gun and many walk around with daggers in their belts. Yet this country may end up having the most extensive Arab awakening dialogue, with relatively few casualties — so far. It is a reminder for Syria’s rebels that better guns may be needed to topple their dictator. But, without a culture of inclusion, it will all be for naught.

Jamila Rajaa, a woman participating in the dialogue, told me she still worries that some old parties, including the Muslim Brotherhood, are happy to let the dialogue distract the country, while they are feverishly working the streets to cultivate votes to win the election in order to dominate the next government. Some modern Yemeni women see how the Muslim Brotherhood is ruling in Egypt, when it comes to women, and they want their own Islamists to go through a mindset shift before assuming any power.

It’s all part of the dialogue — why it is really hard and why it has to succeed, otherwise, as a recent United States Institute of Peace report warned: “Yemen risks falling backward into open conflict.” The good news is that — for now — a lot of Yemenis really want to give politics a chance. You’ve got to root for them.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Do Not Confuse Culture with LDS Doctrine on Scouting Issue

In response to Michael W. Jarvis, “Media Confused about LDS Response to Boy Scouting Changes:”

Excuse me, but how dare you presume to tell me and set such an intolerant, un-Christlike example on how my religion views the LGBT population and the Boy Scouts of America organization?

If my religion has “too much exposure to contend with an organization like the LGBT, then explain to me why would it bother to set up a positive website, www.mormonsandgays.org, which reiterates how we need to show love and understanding toward our gay brothers and sisters? Why would you call the media confused with the following statement, “We appreciate the positive things contained in this current proposal that will help build and strengthen the moral character and leadership skills of youth as we work together in the future?”

I’m familiar with the previous statement you admitted to be made years ago in which our religion would withdraw BSA charters. However, I’m sure you’re well aware of the revelation given in 1978, which allowed for full membership of African-American saints. So clearly, change from within can occur.

If allowing gays into Scouts is “morally dumbing down” the BSA, then sir, what would you call accepting them into our temples, the most holiest of places, so long as they are worthy? In the two years I’ve lived in this area, I’ve unfortunately witnessed many members — presumably in the Salt Lake City area as well — blur the lines of mainstream LDS American culture with doctrinal principles.

Your opinion is your opinion and please, in the future, save yourself the trouble of speaking for the rest of the members in this world.

America Could Learn Honesty, Responsibility from Thatcher’s Legacy

We need Margaret Thatcher’s principles. Margaret Thatcher’s recent death made me think of her life. She reminded me of Deborah, one of Israel’s judges, who was called a “mother in Israel.” Thatcher was truly “a mother in Britain” during difficult times.

At the end of her years as prime minister, she was asked to give some political ideas she used in governing Britain. She replied that she didn’t have any political ideas, only some principles she was taught when growing up. (1) An honest day’s work for a day’s pay; (2) Live within your means; (3) Save for a “nest egg”; (4) Pay your bills on time; (5) Support your police.” Two words describe these principles: honesty and responsibility.

Mothers in America had better instill these in their children. But all too rarely is this being done. Socialism, which promotes irresponsibility and dishonesty, is entrenched in our nation. Did you know that the Census Bureau reported in 2011 that 25 percent of single moms receiving generous taxpayer cash and benefits actually have a man living in the house whom she doesn’t marry because marriage would cut off her government handouts? Also, there are many more who are “disabled” when their unemployment compensation runs out. Most Americans feel “entitled” to things they have not earned; which, by the way, is the attitude of thieves.

By contrast, after the Civil War, Robert E. Lee, before becoming president of a college for $1,500 a year, rejected an insurance company’s $50,000 offer to use his name. He said, “I cannot accept pay for services I have not rendered.”

Greedy voters elect power-hungry irresponsible candidates who promise more of other people’s money in their own pockets, resulting in national bankruptcy. We have allowed the government to replace our dependence upon God and now worship at the shrine of materialism. Having rejected the truth that made us free; we are losing our freedoms.

In such a crisis hour, this request seems appropriate: “Pray for us: for we trust that we have a good conscience, in all things willing to live honestly (Hebrews 13:18).

Bills Before Congress Would Help Postal Service Help Itself

Being a letter carrier for the Postal Service for more than 35 years, I could easily retire right now and walk away from the major financial challenges that now face the USPS, but I don’t believe in that policy. I believe in future employees and their families providing the best service at the lowest possible cost to the people of Idaho and to the rest of the nation.

With no tax dollars being involved whatsoever, Congress can end the madness of the USPS having to pre-fund future retiree health benefits for the next 75 years, in 10 years’ time, at $5.5 billion a year, which the USPS doesn’t have. Two proposed bills in Congress, S.316 in the Senate and HR 630, both called the Postal Service Protection Act, would end the prefunding requirement, which, by the way, no other agency or business has to make, return overpayments in the FERS and CSRS retirement systems and maintain six-day delivery of mail.

If passed, these bills would also keep mail processing plants open to maintain quality service. It just makes common sense to let the Postal Service help itself.

She went on to Idaho State University. Millie then went to work at Yosemite National Park, where she met the love of her life, Royce Hogue. They were married Aug. 26, 1967, in a beautiful ceremony in the park. They enjoyed traveling and living in many different cities in the United States. While living in Merced, Calif., their two wonderful sons were born to them.

Millie had many different jobs during her lifetime but, without doubt, the position that she had when her cancer was diagnosed was the position that she cherished the most. She was an executive trainer for Columbia-Sussex. With this position, she traveled all over the United States training employees in the hotel business. She experienced many different kinds of trials and got to meet many different people. She loved to share her travel stories with her family.

Millie is survived by her best friend, companion and adoring husband, Royce Hogue; her two wonderful sons, Jeff (Murina) Hogue of Chicago, Ill., and Robert Hogue and his special companion, MaryAnn Munroe of Seattle, Wash.; her special adopted daughter, Lina Cosmas of San Antonio, Texas; her wonderful father, John Baisch; three brothers, David (Theresa) Baisch of Fairbanks, Alaska, John Baisch and his finance, Terri of Boise, Idaho, and Greg (Laurie) Baisch of South Korea and Meridian, Idaho; her two sisters, Susanne (Garry) Young of Mooloolaba, Australia, and Deb (Bill) Stuart of Twin Falls, Idaho; her one granddaughter, Zoe Camille Hogue of Chicago, Ill.; and her special granddaughter, Charlize Cosmas of San Antonio, Texas. She was preceded in death by her mother, Alda Baisch. She will be deeply missed by all who knew and loved her.

A service of life will be held at 2 p.m. Saturday, May 18, at Parke's Magic Valley Funeral Home, 2551 Kimberly Road in Twin Falls.

Those who wish may share memories on Millie's memorial page at www.magicvalleyfuneral-home.com.

Popular Psychologist Joyce Brothers Dead at 85

BY ULA ILNYTZKY
Associated Press

Joyce Brothers, the pop psychologist who pioneered the television advice show in the 1950s and enjoyed a long and prolific career as a syndicated columnist, author, and television and film personality, has died. She was 85. Brothers died Monday of respiratory failure in New York City, according to her long-time Los Angeles-based publicist, Sanford Brokaw. Brothers first gained fame on a game show and went on to publish 15 books and make cameo appearances on popular shows including "Happy Days" and "The Simpsons." She visited Johnny Carson on "The Tonight Show" nearly 100 times. The way Brothers liked to tell it, her multimedia career came about "because we were hungry." It was 1955. Her husband, Milton Brothers, was still in medical school and Brothers had just given up her teaching positions at Hunter College and Columbia University to be home with her newborn, firmly believing a child's development depended on it. But the young family found itself struggling on her husband's residency income. So Brothers came up with the idea of entering a television quiz show as a contestant. "The $64,000 Question" quizzed contestants in their chosen area of expertise. She memorized 20 volumes of a boxing encyclopedia — and, with that as her subject, became the only woman and the second person to ever win the show's top prize. Brothers tried her luck again on the superseding "$64,000 Challenge," answering each question correctly and earning the dubious distinction as one of the biggest winners in the history of television quiz shows. She later denied any knowledge of cheating, and during a 1959 hearing in the quiz show scandal, a producer exonerated her of involvement. Her celebrity opened up doors. In 1956, she became co-host of "Sports Showcast" and frequently appeared on talk shows.

Two years later, NBC offered her a trial on an afternoon television program in which she advised on love, marriage, sex and child-rearing. Its success led to a nationally telecast program, and subsequent late-night shows that addressed such taboo subjects as menopause, frigidity, impotence and sexual enjoyment. She also dispensed advice on several phone-in radio programs, sometimes going live. She was criticized by some for giving out advice without knowing her callers' histories. But Brothers responded that she was not practicing therapy on the air and that she advised callers to seek professional help when needed. Despite criticism of the format, the call-in show took off, and by 1985, the Association of Media Psychologists was created to monitor for abuses. Dr. Drew Pinsky, who has offered his medical expertise in radio and television formats first pioneered by Brothers, was among those sharing reaction to her death Monday. "Knew nothing about her history on the $64,000 question, but I did know Joyce Brothers," he wrote on Twitter. "She was a pioneer and very knowledgeable." Other celebrities, including Paris Hilton, rapper Common and motivational guru Tony Robbins, posted bits of Brothers' advice on Twitter, such as: "The best proof of love is trust." For almost four decades, Brothers was a columnist for Good Housekeeping. She also wrote a daily syndicated advice column that appeared in more than 350 newspapers. Briefly, in 1961, she was host of her own television program.

TF Police Host 5K Challenge

The Twin Falls Police Department is inviting the community to Beat the Heat — a 5K walk or running challenge that promotes awareness and support for the Special Olympics in Idaho.

Since 1972, Special Olympics of Idaho has been providing sports training and athletic competition for people with disabilities.

The Twin Falls Police Department has been involved with Special Olympics of Idaho for 15 years. Law enforcement officers hold a special place within the framework of Special Olympics and are viewed as the guardians of the “Flame of Hope.” In 1981, the Law Enforcement Torch Run began as a grassroots fundraiser and public awareness vehicle. In years past, this event has been a symbolic run, with officers and Special Olympic athletes running side-by-side with the torch.

Beat the Heat will begin at 9 a.m. Saturday, May 18 at the City Park, which is located at the 400 block of Shoshone Street North. Although the event is designed to promote awareness and raise money for Special Olympics of Idaho, it is also a competitive event where prizes and challenge coins will be given to those who qualify.

Two Burley Teens Win State Auto Skills Contest

BY ANDREW WEEKS
aweeks@magicvalley.com

BURLEY • Two Burley High School seniors, representing Cassia Regional Technology Center, recently won top honors in a state automotive skills contest.

Next up, they'll represent Idaho at the National Ford/AAA Student Auto Skills competition in June in Dearborn, Mich. They also won cash prizes and received $33,000 in scholarships.

“This is a pretty big deal for these kids,” said Dave Carlson, chairman of the contest committee.

Nathanael Brown and Jasper Moser, both 18, won the contest at the College of Western Idaho by correctly identifying and accurately repairing their “bugged” 2013 Ford Focus.

“We had to fix all the bugs in under 90 minutes,” Brown said. “We did it in just over an hour.”

Several Ford dealerships and automotive businesses helped with the May 3 state finals, Carlson said. In February, 13,000 students from across the country took a written qualifying test, which narrowed the number to about 1,000 students. Each state could have up to 10 two-person teams.

Brown and Moser's shop teacher, Scott Street, encouraged the boys to compete. Goode Motor in Burley loaned them a 2012 Ford Focus to practice.

“It's a neat deal,” Moser said. “Ford encourages their dealerships to do that.”

Three tech schools offered the winning teens $10,000 each in scholarships. They also each received $500 in cash money from Ford and AAA, Moser said, and Ford gave them both $3,000 in scholarship money, to be used at any school with automotive training.

Both teens said they're not sure what colleges they will attend or what they'll pursue career wise, but both are interested in building their automotive skills.

“I think we earned it,” Moser said of their win. “We worked really hard for it. We did our best and it turned out.”

Canyon Ridge’s Price Signs with Big Bend CC

BY NICK RULAND
nruland@magicvalley.com

TWIN FALLS • Canyon Ridge’s Kaleb Price might be better equipped than most prospective college freshman out on the bump.

The senior pitcher signed with Big Bend Community College (Moses Lake, Wash.) on Monday, where he’ll play baseball.

The great bullpen session and sub 2.00 ERA as a senior surely helped convince coaches to bring the relatively undersized Price aboard.

The fact that he was a district champion wrestler couldn’t have hurt, either.

Price

“Wrestling has taught him how to deal with big situations,” wrestling coach and junior varsity baseball coach Justin Pehrson said. “It taught him how to be cool and stay fundamentally sound in his technique. If you can deal with someone cranking on your head, you can deal with somebody trying to hit a ball at ‘ya. Like wrestling, he approaches pitching, like he is on an island, one on one, you and me, if he happens to put the ball in play, the eight guys behind him will take care it. He sees it as a one-on-one battle.”

Price originally thought he would be recruited as a wrestler. That didn’t take shape. He doesn’t mind.

He’ll take the wrestling mentality with him to the hill anyway.

“I have played baseball for so long, so I wanted to do that,” Price said. “But wrestling has helped me a lot. In wrestling you have to stay focused, and that helps me keep going on mound.”

Price, a strike-throwing machine in his Riverhawks career, was the first male athlete of to sign out of Canyon Ridge in 2013.

He said coaches were impressed with how well he “meshed” with the team.

The adjustment will be relatively easy for Price, who knows Kimberly baseball player Ridge Lee, who signed with Big Bend last week.

Kimberly Hurdler Moves Past ‘Traumatizing’ Injury

BY NICK RULAND
nruland@magicvalley.com

Kimberly’s April Adamson

TWIN FALLS • Kimberly’s April Adamson knows hurdles.

She’s intimately familiar with what can happen when you don’t make it over one.

You’d think the senior might have developed a hitch in her giddy up, hesitation on her approach.

Something bad happened last April, her junior year, at the Gooding track meet.

“It was really scary actually,” Adamson said. “I was coming up on the hurdle and I reached for the hurdle and I knew I wasn’t going to make it. I hit it with my trail leg, landed on my heel and it popped backward while the rest of my body was moving forward. It was traumatizing.”

Adamson was lucky. She only tore her posterior cruciate ligament. It could have been much worse.

It still put her out for the rest of her junior year. She rehabilitated for two months.

No one really knew if she’d fulfill the promise she showed as a sophomore, where she set the Kimberly school record in the 100-meter hurdles.

But Adamson grinded through her recovery.

And the hurdles?

They weren’t mental.

“It’s finally all coming together for me,” Adamson said. “I have focused on just trying to improve my times.”

The injury and the fear of missing another hurdle, isn’t a consideration, she says.

Now she’s headed for the 3A state track meet with a chance to place in at least two events.

The senior won the 100 meter sprint, the 100 and 300 meter hurdles at the 2A/3A District IV track meet in Filer.

She’s in the top eight in both of the hurdles, with the fourth best time in the 100 meter hurdles (16.48).

“I want a chance at a scholarship,” Adamson. “I want to do the hurdles in college.”

Adamson said she’s taken interest in Eastern Oregon University. It’s mutual.

She’ll have the chance to turn a few more heads this Friday at Middleton high school.

CSI Softball’s Winning Season Raises the Bar

BY NICK RULAND

TWIN FALLS • It’s not fair.

The College of Southern Idaho softball team, with its best regular season in program history, loses the opening game of the Region 18 tournament after taking two weeks off from good competition, and then falls to perhaps the best pitcher in the country in the championship game.

Curtains.

Only one team makes it to Nationals. Maybe that needs to change (with a super regional).

But until it does, the progress the CSI softball program makes will be a challenge to quantify.

“You don’t go 50-11 because of smoke and mirrors,” Baumert said.

En route to hosting its first regional tournament in program history, by virtue of winning the Scenic West Athletic Conference, the Golden Eagles led it in batting average, home runs, triples, walks and runs (by nearly 100). It was second in ERA and first in fielding per-

All of that, and CSI must settle for the consolation prize of second place, one that surely will have sentimental value as time passes. An incredible Friday that saw CSI win three do-or-die games, all comebacks, each one more

New York Yankees relief pitcher Adam Warren, right, is congratulated by catcher Austin Romine after New York defeated the Cleveland Indians 7-0 in the second baseball game of a doubleheader on Monday in Cleveland.

Yankees Split Doubleheader with Indians

ASSOCIATED PRESS

CLEVELAND • Vidal Nuno pitched five innings of three-hit ball to win his first major league start, Vernon Wells and Lyle Overbay had two RBIs apiece and the New York Yankees beat the Cleveland Indians 7-0 Monday for a doubleheader split.

Justin Masterson pitched a four-hitter for his third career shutout as the Indians won the opener 1-0 and stopped the Yankees' five-game winning streak.

Pitching in just his second game for the Yankees, Nuno (1-1) walked three and struck out three. The former Cleveland draft pick became the only left-hander other than CC Sabathia or Andy Pettitte to start for New York since 2008.

Yankees rookie Adam Warren finished the five-hitter for his first big league save.

New York chased Trevor Bauer (1-2) during a six-run seventh and handed the Indians just their third loss in 16 games.

In the opener, Masterson (6-2) gave up four singles — only one reached the outfield — for his third career shutout and second this season. The right-hander also blanked the Chicago White Sox on April 12.

Jason Kipnis homered in the first inning off David Phelps (1-2) for the Indians, outscored 25-7 by the Yankees in two losses last month. Consecutive postponements back then forced the teams back to Progressive Field for a one-admission twinbill.

TIGERS 7, ASTROS 2

DETROIT • Andy Dirks hit his first career grand slam, part of a six-run fourth inning for Detroit against Houston.

Victor Martinez also homered for the Tigers, who swept four straight in Houston earlier this month and opened this three-game series at Comerica Park with another convincing victory.

Anibal Sanchez (4-3) allowed two runs and six hits in seven innings for the Tigers. He struck out eight with one walk.

Bud Norris (4-4) allowed seven runs and nine hits in five innings before leaving with lower back spasms. Houston has lost five straight and 15 of 18 — and the Astros also lost standout second baseman Jose Altuve in the second with a jaw injury after he collided with right fielder Jimmy Paredes on a popout.

Dirks finished a triple shy of the cycle — a fine performance in the leadoff spot after Austin Jackson went on the disabled list earlier in the day with a pulled left hamstring.

TWINS 10, WHITE SOX 3

MINNEAPOLIS • Twins rookie Aaron Hicks hit two home runs and made a leaping catch in center field to take a tying home run away from Adam Dunn in Minnesota's victory over Chicago.

Justin Morneau extended his hitting streak to nine games with three hits and four RBIs, including a three-run double that capped the scoring in the eighth inning. Trevor Plouffe had a two-run double in the third.

Hicks, who missed the previous two games with a sore right elbow, led off the fourth with a solo homer to center that gave the Twins a 5-2 lead. He robbed Dunn of a two-run shot in the sixth and connected again in the bottom half.

Dunn and Hicks entered the game tied for the lowest batting average in the majors (.137) among qualifiers. When the night was over, Hicks' average was .152 and Dunn's .133.

Twins starter Pedro Hernandez (2-0) allowed three runs and six hits in 5 1-3 innings. Hector Santiago (1-2) yielded six runs — three earned — and eight hits in 5 2-3 innings. He had only allowed one earned run in his previous two starts.

National League

CUBS 9, ROCKIES 1

CHICAGO • Travis Wood pitched seven scoreless innings and the Chicago Cubs came within two outs of their first shutout since last August in a 9-1 win over the Colorado Rockies on Monday night.

Alfonso Soriano homered for Chicago, which has won three straight for the second time this season. The Cubs' 14 hits were one short of a season high.

CARDINALS 6, METS 3

ST. LOUIS • Lance Lynn overcame early control woes and St. Louis used a three-run seventh inning to beat the Mets.

Lynn (6-1) allowed three runs on three hits and four walks the first two innings. He only gave up one hit and one walk in his last five innings. He is 4-0 at home this season.

BREWERS 5, PIRATES 1

PITTSBURGH • Marco Estrada allowed three hits over seven innings and the Brewers beat the sloppy Pirates to snap a four-game losing streak.

Norichika Aoki went 3 for 5 with three RBIs and two stolen bases for the Brewers. Jean Segura added three hits and three stolen bases as Milwaukee ran wild against Pittsburgh backup catcher Mike McKenry. The Brewers stole six bases in all and took advantage of three Pittsburgh errors to win for just the second time this month.

James, Heat Beat Bulls 88-65 for 3-1 Series Lead

ASSOCIATED PRESS

CHICAGO • LeBron James scored 27 points and the Miami Heat nearly matched a franchise record for points allowed in a playoff game, pounding the listless and short-handed Chicago Bulls 88-65 on Monday night to take a 3-1 lead in the Eastern Conference semifinals.

The 65 points allowed were only two more than the all-time postseason low for a Miami opponent, and it was easily the worst offensive performance by a Chicago team.

Never before had the Bulls scored fewer than 69 in a playoff game nor 10 or less in a quarter during the postseason, but both those marks fell on a night when they were dominated on both ends of the floor.

Miami led by 11 at the half and put this one away in the third quarter, outscoring Chicago 17-9 in the period.

Now the Heat will try to wrap up the series at home on Wednesday night, taking what they hope will be the next step toward a second straight championship.

It's hard to believe the Bulls won the series opener the way the past three games have gone.

Miami pounded Chicago in Game 2, coming away with its most lopsided playoff victory while handing the Bulls their worst ever postseason loss, and the Heat continued to roll from there.

James had his usual complete game with eight assists and seven rebounds Monday.

Chris Bosh finished with 14 points after scoring 20 and grabbing 19 rebounds in Game 3, and the Heat won again despite another quiet night from Dwyane Wade, who finished with six points. Norris Cole also struggled with seven points after back-to-back 18-point performances, but the Heat had more than enough in this one.

They shot about 49 percent while the Bulls set a franchise playoff low at 25.7 percent. They were particularly bad from the outside, going 2 for 17 from 3-point range.

Rangers Beat Caps 5-0 in Game 7 to Reach 2nd Round

WASHINGTON • For 120 minutes over two games, New York Rangers goalie Henrik Lundqvist stopped every single shot Alex Ovechkin and the Washington Capitals threw at him.

That's the main reason the Rangers are heading to the Eastern Conference semifinals.

Led by Lundqvist's 35 saves in a second consecutive shutout, and goals from some unlikely sources, the Rangers beat the Capitals 5-0 in an anticlimactic Game 7 Monday night, eliminating Washington for the second year in a row.

By winning a Game 7 on the road for the first time in its history, New York completed its comeback after trailing in the series 2-0 and 3-2 — the latest in Washington's long history of playoff collapses.

"He was really good, but the team was also good, too. I have to give the team some credit. They played hard in front of him," Rangers coach John Tortorella said, before making sure everyone knew this: "Henrik is our backbone."

The last NHL goalie with shutouts in Games 6 and 7 of a series was Detroit's Dominik Hasek in 2002 against Colorado, according to STATS LLC.

Lundqvist, Ovechkin said, did an "unbelievable job; he makes incredible saves."

ins in the second round.

Arron Asham put New York ahead Monday in the first period, before Taylor Pyatt and Michael Del Zotto made it 3-0 early in the second on goals 2:10 apart. Ryan Callahan added a goal 13 seconds into the third period, and when Mats Zuccarello scored with about 13½ minutes remaining, thousands of red-clad fans streamed to the exits.

Soon after, when Lundqvist fell forward to smother a puck, chants of "Hen-reeek! Hen-reeek!" from the no-longer-out-numbered Rangers supporters rose in the arena.

Asked why his team couldn't score in the final two games, Capitals forward Troy Brouwer replied: "Henrik Lundqvist. Plain and simple."

BRUINS 5, MAPLE LEAFS 4, OT

BOSTON • The Boston Bruins turned back Toronto's comeback with a rally of their own.

Trailing by three goals in the third period and still by two with less than 90 seconds left in their season, the Bruins scored twice in a span of 31 seconds to tie it and then eliminated the Maple Leafs on Patrice Bergeron's goal at 6:05 of overtime to win 5-4 in Game 7 on Monday night.

"It was one of the crazy ones I've been part of," said Bergeron, who assisted on Milan Lucic's goal with 1:22 in regulation and scored to tie it with 51 seconds left in the third. "We found a way, not necessarily the way we would have liked to play the whole game."

Tuukka Rask stopped 24 shots for Boston, which led the best-of-seven series 3-1 before the Maple Leafs won two in a row to force a seventh game.

According to the Elias Sports Bureau, the Bruins are the first team in NHL history to win a Game 7 after trailing by three goals in the third period.

The Bruins will play the New York Rangers in the Eastern Conference semifinals, starting the series at home; the NHL has not announced the dates.

BIG M MIDDLEKAUFF'S QUOTE OF THE DAY

If I have learnt anything, it is that life forms no logical patterns. It is haphazard and full of beauties which I try to catch as they fly by, for who knows whether any of them will ever return?

Kentucky Derby winner Orb, with exercise rider Jennifer Patterson aboard, walks in his barn past trainer Shug McGaughey at Belmont Park after a workout, Monday, in Elmont, N.Y.

Derby Winner Orb Arrives at Pimlico for Preakness

ASSOCIATED PRESS

BALTIMORE • Orb has settled into the place reserved for royalty at Pimlico Race Course — stall 40.

The Triple Crown hopeful arrived at Pimlico on Monday afternoon, five days before the Preakness. He was immediately taken to stall 40 at the Stakes Barn, which traditionally serves as home to the Kentucky Derby winner.

Some of the greatest horses in history have been kept there, including Secretariat (1973), Seattle Slew (1977) and Affirmed (1978).

"I can't believe how proud I am," trainer Shug McGaughey said.

Orb was shipped by van after an outstanding workout at Belmont Park. With exercise rider Jennifer Patterson aboard, Orb seemed to move effortlessly around the track on a clear, sunny day. He breezed four furlongs in 47.18 seconds and galloped out five furlongs in 59.54.

"The way he worked this morning was nothing short of magnificent," McGaughey said. "I couldn't be any happier where we are, and I'm very excited about Saturday afternoon."

McGaughey wasn't concerned with the fast fractions, which came nine days after running 1 1/4 miles in the Derby.

"I think it's a tribute to the way he came out of the Derby, and to come back and be able to have a work like that and do it the way he did it — I couldn't be more thrilled," he said in New York. "Right now, I'm on cloud nine. The way he was striding today, the way he held his leads through the lane, I thought it was spectacular."

McGaughey understands the pressure associated with trying to the first Triple Crown winner since Affirmed, although he sees no reason to be nervous.

"Obviously I'm thinking about what I'm going to do this week, but I'm not really worried about it," he said.

Not to mention, Orb hasn't done anything that would indicate he won't be at his best Saturday.

"Everything just of sort of keeps getting better, his demeanor and as much as he's enjoying what he's doing," the Hall of Fame trainer said.

Orb was the second horse to arrive at Pimlico, joining Goldencents, the 17th-place finisher in the Derby.

"I wanted to just get him down here, get him used to his surroundings," McGaughey said. "I like to school him in the paddock, and I didn't want to do too much at one time. So I thought we'd get him in here today, give him his off day tomorrow and then maybe we'll train a little on Wednesday."

For McGaughey, being the favorite in the Preakness is preferable to coming in as the long shot.

"I want to be the favorite every time I run," he said. "Today we're standing up here with a little bit of a target on our back. I like that. If it doesn't work on Saturday, that's going to be just the way it is. I've been doing this quite a long time, and I know you win some and you lose some."

McGaughey has never won a Preakness. The last time he tried was in 1989, when Kentucky Derby runner-up Easy Goer lost to Sunday Silence by a nose.

"Obviously I'm here with the Derby winner so I'm a lot more at ease than when I came in that time," he said.

A win in the 1 3/16-mile Preakness on Saturday would set up a Triple Crown try in the Belmont Stakes on June 8.

Orb, owned by the Phipps Stable and Stuart Janney III, takes a five-race winning streak into the Preakness, where he will face what look to be nine challengers. Among them are Derby runners Mylute (fifth), Oxbow (sixth), Will Take Charge (eighth), Itsmyluckyday (15th) and Goldencents. Also set for the race is Departing, winner of the Illinois Derby.

"I think it's formidable," McGaughey said. "I know that Oxbow made a good run in the Derby. I never really kind of sat down and watched it and pinned it down. The other horse (Will Take Charge) got in some trouble. You've got to respect Departing coming in there off his race in the Illinois Derby and being relatively fresh. My main concern is just trying to get Orb over there the best way we possibly can and if he runs his race I think they'll know he's in there."

CSI Softball

improbable than the next, all in front of home fans. It started at 9:30 a.m. and ended at 8:00 p.m.

"The atmosphere the last two days was amazing," Baumert said. "We had bigger crowds than we saw (in Salt Lake) for their region tournaments. (Friday) night was pretty raucous. It was an amazing weekend."

It was all set up by 39-5 conference record.

CSI had its best regular season in program history because of its depth. But that may have resulted in diminishing returns during the tournament.

It came down to the best pitching. The Bruins had the tournament's best pitcher.

"Part of (the struggles) in the tournament is you get to see everybody's number one," Baumert said.

CSI averaged eight runs in the regular season. It averaged four in the region tournament.

Ah, but the Golden Eagles were the only conference team to have a bye week at the end of the year. Could the diminished offensive production — CSI was held to one run against North Idaho to start the tournament — have anything to do with a lack of timing?

Baumert will have a full off-season to ponder that question. CSI faces the same situation next year.

"It's a concern," Baumert said. "We have to find a better way to prepare ourselves. But we got to place at end of the year where we were nursing some injuries."

But that challenge pales in comparison to replacing the nine sophomores: the Kimberly trio of pitcher Nellie Makings, Whitney Carlton, and catcher Averie Schroeder, as well as third baseman Patti Ferguson, player of the year and shortstop Lea Hopson, Gabby Stacey, Brooke Boggess, Tyler Wilkinson and Kylee Hogue — all critical components offensively and defensively.

The outgoing class will be remembered. They helped change the culture, according to many around the program.

The change started to happen last year.

"This is the best team I've ever been a part of," Hopson said. "I've never been on a team this close, never believed in a team as much as this one. We had so much fun and learned a lot from the sophomores. Last year we got in trouble a lot and the sophomores taught us that we are here for a reason."

But this year's sophomores took control. According to players on the Salt Lake team, CSI was the loudest and most energized and into-the-game team they'd face — by a long shot.

Perhaps a product of the ownership players took in the outcome.

"I learned a lot of responsibility here," Ferguson said. "I learned who I am. I learned a lot in softball. I learned so much more than I didn't know in my earlier years. I learned to build friendships. It's one of the tightest teams I've been on. I learned to compete on this team. Coming in as a freshman, I had to earn my spot and even this year I had to compete to keep it. It's very competitive here."

"What I will take with me is that hard work never quits," Wilkinson said.

Whether the incoming class heads the lessons the sophomores taught them and replicates the chemistry — perhaps with their own personality spin — will likely be what determines CSI's ability to regain homefield in the playoffs again. Certainly returning pitcher and slugger Sierra Whitmer, her twin Aubrie Whitmer as well as potential ace Brandi Hall, will at the very least put the Golden Eagles in the running.

But the outgoing class is convinced they've started something perpetual.

"The bar was definitely raised," Wilanson said. "The freshman feel that and they are going to take it for next year. Then they are going to teach the freshman after that."

The hometown kids were at the heart of it, too.

"Coming in as a freshman, I wasn't really sure what it was all about," Making said. "Now as a sophomore I feel the potential we had, that we got to host regional. It was such a big thrill to be a part of that. The freshman now know this is the place to be."

COUNTY OF MINIDOKA

ATTEST:
PUBLISH: May 14 and 21, 2013

DEAR ABBY: I am a woman in my late 40s and I hate sex. I always have and always will. I'm disabled, and it has always been torture. I never got any positive benefits out of it.

DEAR ABBY Jeanne Phillips

My problem is I get hit on constantly. I tried marriage once, more for financial reasons than anything else, but I couldn't wait to get out. I'm single now, own my own home, and the men in this town (married and single) all seem to think I'm fair game. They're convinced that I'm in need of satisfaction because I don't date or have a steady man in my life.

I have told them repeatedly that it's not going to happen, but every once in a while one pops up on my doorstep or approaches me in town, only to be told AGAIN to leave me alone.

Please don't tell me to see a therapist. The last one I went to tried to tell me I was gay. No! I'm simply happy being single and sex-free. I go where I want and don't have to answer to anyone. Short of running these idiots off with a shotgun, how do I get it through their thick skulls that I'm not available?

— SEXLESS BY CHOICE

DEAR SEXLESS: Although we live in a sex-obsessed society, not everyone — male or female — is a sexual creature. Your therapist should not have tried to label you as gay. You appear to be asexual, which you describe as happily sex-free.

The next time you are hit on by one of these men — who, by the way, probably think that by doing so they are “helping” — tell him you are happy with your life just the way it is, and it isn't necessary to offer help where none is needed. Period.

DEAR ABBY: I really like this girl, but my parents absolutely cannot stand her. They hate that she has a tattoo and a lip ring, but her appearance has had no effect on her professional life, as she is on the road to success in her field. I am not writing to ask whether I should stay with her, because I intend to. She's an amazing person, a hard worker, a trustworthy partner and, most of all, she's my best friend.

How can I diffuse potentially “combustible” situations with my parents, who always try to put her down no matter how often I plead my case?

— JOE IN RHODE ISLAND

DEAR JOE: Whether your parents approve or not, tattoos seem to have become a rite of passage for many people of your generation, and so have lip rings, eyebrow rings and multiple ear piercings. If you are over 21 and living independent of your parents, then you have the right to choose the women you become involved with. From your letter, I'd say your values are mature.

In time, your parents may recognize the fine qualities you see in this young woman. If they don't, they may wind up estranging a son. Right now, getting into a debate about her will be a losing proposition and I'm advising you against it.

DEAR ABBY: I'll be visiting the United States in a couple of weeks, and I'm really excited. Now my question: How do I tip the waitress properly? I know to round the bill by 15 percent and up, but do I pay only in cash, or can I have this amount charged to my credit card? Are there any other things I have to look out for? I don't want to offend anyone.

— JUTTAN TRIER, GERMANY

DEAR JUTTA: If you prefer to add your tip to your credit card, it is perfectly acceptable to do so. However, before you pay, you should review the bill to be sure that a gratuity has not already been included, which can happen when a group of people dine together. I hope you will enjoy your visit to our beautiful country and that it will be the first of many.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE®

Bobby Wolff

*“God knows what he knows,
And what his wits infer from what he sees
And feels and hears.”*

— Edwin Arlington Robinson

In today's deal from the Caven-dish teams of 1999, North-South look destined to reach three no-trump whether East pre-empts or not. The attractive alternative would be if they can stop off to double their opponents should they go overboard in diamonds. Having said that, though, when the defense to three no-trump starts with West setting up the diamonds, nine tricks seem a long way off. Nonetheless, in the match between the teams captained by Wayne Chu and Gerald Sosler, both tables reached the no-trump game and did remarkably well.

When Craig Gower as South was declarer, Kay Schulle led a top diamond. Gower took the second diamond, then led the heart queen, covered by the king and ace, and next played off the top spades to try to exert a little pressure on West. When Schulle pitched two diamonds, declarer worked out why.

Gower determined that West had to be preserving a heart guard, so he cashed the 10 of hearts, then took the heart finesse. Next he played off the last heart winner and threw West in with a diamond. She could cash her diamond winners, but would eventually have to lead clubs, setting up the queen for declarer and conceding the ninth trick.

Remarkably, this nice play simply minimized Gower's losses on the deal, since in the other room David Berkowitz had made exactly the same play in three no-trump doubled, landing nine tricks.

ANSWER: Your partner's cue-bid asks you primarily for a spade stopper. If you do not have one, you should describe your hand as effectively as possible. Here, with only half a spade stopper, you should bid three diamonds, waiting to see where partner wants to go next. Passing is an equally sensible approach if you consider your trump support unsatisfactory.

IF MAY 14 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: Group activities can bring a smile to your face in the upcoming six to eight weeks. This could be a delightful time to join a gym or participate in health club routines. Over the summer, develop your skills but don't jump the gun in August and September by initiating any new business or financial activities. Because you have powerful fantasies, dreams and hopes, you could be attracted to people and things that look better on the surface than they really are. Wait for October when you are more adept at making smart decisions regarding career, relationships, business or finances.

Horoscope

Jeraldine Saunders

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Stay focused. A series of misunderstandings and distractions could thwart your chances of accomplishing anything constructive. Make personal goals top priority; let the world solve its own problems.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Wires may get crossed. No matter how clear and concise you make it, some people still get it wrong. Concentrate energies on solo projects, as relying on others may bring more headaches than it's worth.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Agree to disagree. You are unlikely to win a debate or change people's minds when their opinions are set in granite. Focus on constructive pursuits, rather than trying to win an impossible battle.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Skepticism is healthy. Don't accept something as gospel just because that's what you were told. Beware of hidden agendas when dealing with others. A majority may share the same opinion and still be wrong.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Don't get too big for your britches. Tooting your own horn over your squeaky-clean record may simply invite others to sling mud. Remain humble and don't take advantage of others; lend a helping hand.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Think before you speak. Trying to play it by ear when lobbying to get your way may leave you tongue-tied. Do your homework before giving a presentation — don't make it up as you go along.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Be sympathetic up to a reasonable point. Someone may sincerely need a shoulder to cry on or may simply want you to bail them out of a bad situation. Achieve a compromise by helping others help themselves.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Patience is a virtue. If nothing is happening, don't try to shake things up by making drastic changes. Take some time to recharge your batteries while things are slow, as you'll see some real action soon.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Stay within the boundaries. Thinking too far outside the box could leave you with a completely off-the-wall plan with little chance of success. Conventional methods are accepted for a reason.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Don't jump the gun. You may have all sorts of plans for all that cash you plan on making, but don't spend a thing until you have the funds in your hand. Hold off on making important decisions.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): If you want to get things done, do them yourself. Don't expect the good fairy to bail you out the minute you run into trouble. Exert your independence by getting the job done all on your own.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Ignoring a problem won't make it go away. Confront difficulties head on, as letting them go unchecked could only make a situation more troublesome. Don't start anything new until your current slate is cleared.

Narcotics Investigation from 2011 Nabs Idaho Woman for Trafficking

BY CALEY COOK
Free Press Staff Writer

JACKPOT, Nev. • An investigation involving a confidential informant who bought drugs outside a Jackpot casino led police to a

Twin Falls woman they believe has been trafficking methamphetamine, according to court records. Law enforcement from Idaho extradited 40-year-old Linda R. Packham to Elko on Saturday where she was arrested on a $105,000 bench warrant issued by Elko Justice Court in mid-March, according to Elko County Sheriff Jim Pitts. Packham is facing seven charges related to two incidents in May 2011 in which detectives believe she sold more than 20 grams of meth to a confidential police source, according to the court record. Elko County Narcotics Unit investigators received information from one of their confidential informants that he had been in Packham's home in Twin Falls, which she shared with her boyfriend Miles K. Miller, and had seen a list of people who owed them money for meth, according to documentation by the ECNU.

Under the guidance of detectives, the informant set up a meeting with Packham on May 17, 2011, to buy four "teeners," or about seven grams of meth. Detectives fitted the informant with a wire that recorded his conversations and gave him money to buy the drugs, according to a receipt included with the court record.

through the absentee voting process instead of at the polling locations previously used by taxing districts like schools, libraries and highway district offices. "I don't want people to get really frustrated if they show up at the district office on Election Day and are told they have to go somewhere else to vote," Miller said. "I'm afraid people will end up not voting at all."

school, have obtained a general educational development certification, or are an honorably discharged veteran of the Coast Guard or Armed Forces of the United States. They must not have been convicted of a felony, significant misdemeanor, or three or more misdemeanors, and do not otherwise pose a threat. Since the passage of DECA, more than 438,000 people have applied for deferred action, according to a March 2013 New York Times article. Herrera Perales is considered an international student, so he pays out-of-state tuition, even though he spent his life since infancy in Burley. And because he is not a citizen, he does not qualify for federal student aid. Herrera Perales is the first person in his family to attend college. "He is very ambitious and has always been a conscientious student," said Susan Beseris, student advisor at CSI. Beseris sees Herrera Perales working hard and struggling because of his immigration status and she gets frustrated. "He has hit probably every obstacle there is to education," she said. "And, we as a country have set up all those obstacles." Beseris said there are students nationwide who are citizens and receive federal aid but are not serious about their educations. She said there are a lot of students like Herrera Perales, who lived in this country nearly all their lives but are not citizens and do not qualify for federal aid. When Herrera Perales goes to a four-year school next year to work toward his law degree, he'll have to take one course at a time, because that's what he can afford, she said. Thousands of students face this dilemma every day, Beseris said. "He is the perfect individual to someday go before Congress and present his side of what's going on in this country," said Beseris. Beseris said student financial aid programs should be revised to take into account students like Herrera Perales who sincerely want to continue their education. "I get really frustrated when I see my American friends fall a little short in school and still get financial aid," said Herrera Perales. "During the general election, I really wanted to go vote and I was sad to see my friends who didn't. Watching stuff like that is really hard."

Budget Cuts

center. She was joined by U.S. Agriculture Secretary Tom Vilsack, who said the U.S. Forest Service alone will hire 500 fewer firefighters and deploy 50 fewer engines this season. "We are going to be faced with a difficult fire season," Vilsack said. "The bottom line is we're going to do everything we can to be prepared. But folks need to understand ... our resources are limited and our budgets are obviously constrained. We will do the best job we possibly can with the resources we have." Congress cut the current budgets for the Forest Service and Agriculture Department 5 percent under the mandated spending reductions, then added another 2.5 percent cut for fiscal 2013. Other federal agencies that battle blazes also anticipate hiring fewer people to fight fires, including the Bureau of Land Management, National Park Service and Fish and Wildlife Service. The Forest Service, however, will be adding some muscle to its ability to fight blazes from the air. The agency announced earlier this month it has contracted to use seven air tankers that fly faster and drop bigger amounts of fire retardant this summer. Even before Monday's visit, fire experts were predicting a grim scenario of this summer's fire season. A dry winter and early warming has created conditions for a fire season that could begin earlier than usual and burn as much as last year, where states like New Mexico and Oregon posted new records for burned acreage. Crews already have fought blazes in California and Colorado. Barring any dramatic weather changes, the fire season is projected to start a month earlier than usual for Oregon, southern Washington, central Idaho and Montana. Conditions are also ripe for above-normal fire potential in Arizona and New Mexico, but forecasters say late-season rains could tone down the southwest fire season at least until late summer. Jewell, who flew on a training exercise over Idaho's backcountry Sunday with smokejumpers, said despite the challenges posed by drought and budget constraints, firefighting remains a priority for her agency. Jewell and Vilsack both emphasized that states and local communities will be called upon even more to help battle blazes, protect property and be patient if federal crews are occupied elsewhere. Sen. Jim Risch, R-Idaho, defended the decision by Congress to trim agency budgets mid-year in an effort to trim government spending and reduce the national debt. But the first-term senator also predicted congressional support for relief money if catastrophic fires were devastating the Western landscape. "You have got to accept there is not going to be federal spending as there has been in the past," said Risch, who joined Jewell and Vilsack on the tour. "There is no question of whether you support (the cuts) because there is no money.
