Jerome Cheese Co., EPA Reach Settlement

BOISE • The U.S. Environmental Protection Agency has reached a settlement agreement with Jerome Cheese Company that would have the cheesemaker paying more than $300,000 in fines for dumping too many pollutants into the Snake River.

The federal agency sued the Davisco Foods International-owned Jerome Cheese Company in Boise's U.S. District Court in 2011, contending that the cheesemaker dumped wastewater containing pollutants into an irrigation system that eventually flows into the Snake River between 2006 and 2010. The company has a permit allowing it to dump some pollutants, but the EPA said the company exceeded the allowable amounts of phosphorus and ammonia at times.

Jerome Cheese Company's permits require it to sample its wastewater effluent once a month to measure the amounts and concentrations of various pollutants. The EPA alleged that Jerome Cheese Company sometimes failed to do so and failed to notify the EPA within 24 hours when it became aware of discharges that exceeded the maximum daily permit limits. The company's also accused of not submitting the required annual reports for 2007 and 2008.

Based on the maximum allowable daily fine, the EPA could have sought roughly $100 million in penalties.

Under the settlement agreement, Davisco doesn't admit any liability, nor does it acknowledge that the EPA's contentions are factual. But the company does agree to pay a civil penalty of $304,000 plus interest. The settlement still must undergo a 30-day public comment period before it can be finalized.

BURLEY • Jon Searle, 52, was hit by a pickup truck Tuesday while riding a bicycle southeast of Burley.

Searle was riding eastbound on 500 S. Road about 6:30 p.m. when he was struck by an eastbound 2000 Chevrolet pickup driven by Jonathan Warren, 35, of Albion.

Searle was conscious and breathing when an air ambulance took him to Portneuf Medical Center in Pocatello, the sheriff's office reported.

The medical center did not return calls Tuesday regarding Searle's condition.

The crash remains under investigation, sheriff's officials said.

Less Is Still More for MPOG Recipients

TWIN FALLS • Despite receiving almost half of what they requested, most local nonprofit leaders are thankful for finally being given a chance to apply for a city grant once set aside for only a half-dozen organizations.

City officials began tweaking the Municipal Powers Outsource Grant (MPOG) application process almost two years ago. The $100,000 city-funded grant had been divided among the same six nonprofits, and other organizations weren't told they could apply. However, that changed last year when Councilman Jim Munn pushed to advertise the application process to all nonprofits inside city limits.

This year, the council awarded MPOG funds to 11 nonprofits, the most in eight years.

Jubilee House was one of four organizations to receive funding for the first time. It requested $5,000 to help with overall costs for its drug and alcohol women's rehab center, but it got $2,500.

What They Received

Here's a list of grant funds awarded Monday by the city of Twin Falls. The organizations' requests are in parentheses.

Twin Falls Senior Center $3,000 ($6,430)
Crisis Center of Magic Valley $15,000 ($15,000)
CASA $6,000 ($6,094)
Salvation Army $5,000 ($10,000)
Magic Valley Arts Council $6,150 ($10,000)
Boys and Girls Club of Magic Valley $11,150 ($23,500)
Jubilee House $2,500 ($5,000)
Interfaith Caregivers of Magic Valley $5,000 ($10,000)
Trans IV $25,000 ($40,000)
Twin Falls Municipal Band $21,200 ($21,200)

The faith-based organization doesn't qualify for most federal or state grants, which has put a strain on finding funding, said Kathryn Bausman, executive director.

Jerome City Officials Apologize for Invoice Mistake

JEROME • The city of Jerome retracted Sylvia Moore's $96,700 bill more than a week ago, but officials are still apologizing for the mistake.

Several city council members and staff expressed their embarrassment and remorse over the situation during Tuesday's council meeting.

On May 17, the city of Jerome sent Sylvia Moore a $96,700 bill to recover costs for a large downtown fire that started in a building she owned on West Main Street on April 30.

Councilman Chris Barber said the city would improve its leadership in order to prevent future blunders.

"The personality of the city is going to reflect in the leadership of the city," he said.

Councilman Dale Ross also expressed his disappointment. He said he felt the council should not have been excluded from discussions about billing Moore.

Mayor John Shine agreed. He apologized to the council, city staff, the public and Moore for the error.

"I deeply regret it," Shine said. "More than anything, I regret my part in it. I'm

Stocks Head Lower on Fed Stimulus Worries

NEW YORK (AP) - The Federal Reserve guessing game threw the markets for another loop Tuesday. Comments from a Fed official raised expectations that the Fed could start easing off its support for the economy soon, sending the stock market sharply lower in the late afternoon. The market recovered in the last hour of trading to end with slight losses. The Standard & Poor's 500 index fell 9.04 points to close at 1,631.38. The Dow Jones industrial average lost 76.49 points to 15,177.54, a drop of 0.5 percent. The Nasdaq composite fell 20.11 points to 3,445.26.

Bellevue Man Sentenced in Cliff Death

BY ALISON GENE SMITH
alismith@magicvalley.com

HAILEY • A Bellevue man, who admitted knocking a man off a cliff, will spend at least four years in prison for vehicular manslaughter. Steven Tyler Jameson, 20, was sentenced Monday in Blaine County District Court to six years and six months in prison with the possibility of parole after four years. Steven Franco, 26, died in June 2012 after Jameson's Jeep knocked him off a cliff at Magic Reservoir. Franco was helping Jameson back up near the edge of the cliff when Jameson hit the gas instead of the brakes, knocking Franco 12 feet down the cliff, where he hit his head and continued rolling, authorities said at the time. Witnesses said Jameson got out of the vehicle, looked over the cliff edge, got back in and left. The death occurred on a dirt road off U.S. 20, west of Hot Springs Landing Road near Poison Creek. Jameson also was charged with leaving the scene of an accident, resulting in injury or death and with a commercial driver's license violation. He was credited 367 days for time already spent in the Blaine County Jail. Jameson's driver's license will be suspended three years, starting the day he is released from prison. He also was fined $5,000 and must pay court costs.

Is It Windier than Normal?

Has this spring been windier than normal? That's a question I've been asked many times over the past month. On the surface, it could appear that way. From last Friday through this Monday, the only day without much wind was Saturday. Windy conditions are common in Twin Falls in spring and early summer. National Weather Service officials said they have been hearing the same kinds of comments and questions, but they field the same queries each spring and summer. I agree with the NWS that it may appear to be windier, but while the agency keeps climate statistics for western Idaho and the western Magic Valley, it doesn't have good records on wind.

As noted in a previous column, southern Idaho's terrain and lack of trees contribute to windy conditions. The region's big swings in temperatures this spring also tend to change air pressure, which causes wind. Wind wants to go from higher pressure to lower pressure, just as a ball wants to roll from the top of a hill to the bottom. If the hill is steep, the ball rolls fast. If the difference between high and low pressure is great, the winds will be stronger. Tomorrow I will talk more about winds and answer why the wind seems to shut off at sunset.

OPINION

“We must have the trust of the American taxpayer. Unfortunately, that trust has been broken.”

Acting IRS Commissioner Danny Werfel, who says he has installed new leadership at the agency.

OUR VIEW

Creative Thinking Needed to Deal with Budget Busters

One of the common threads that binds almost all municipalities across this country concerns how to pay their bills in the face of unexpected catastrophes and ever-rising costs. Especially when local budgets seem to be going the opposite direction.

Municipalities are under a distinct disadvantage over, say, the Federal government, which simply prints more money or increases the portion of America already owned by China. Local municipalities have to live within their means. There is no governmental “sugar-daddy” for communities in the Magic Valley or elsewhere. And when calamities occur, they can take a heavy toll, unless the municipal government has managed their funds wisely.

According to Twin Falls Chief Finance Officer Lorie Race, municipal budgets are like those of normal households. You can either discipline yourself and save for a rainy day, or live “paycheck-to-paycheck.” Race attributes Twin Falls’ financial security to the fact that they have been conservative in their revenue and expense expectations, and meticulously save additional monies for the unexpected — a practice she acknowledged some jurisdictions do not do, forcing them into a limited set of uncomfortable choices when the unthinkable occurs. For these organizations, the options have been limited and unwaveringly painful — cut costs or raise taxes.

Traditionally, cutting costs means cutting services, which taxpayers don’t like. The alternative is raising taxes or assessing more fees, which taxpayers also don’t like. The resulting tug-o-war creates unnecessary casualties. Often, municipal officials are voted out for simply trying to make the best out of a very bad situation over which they don’t have much control.

Speaking to the Idaho Fire

Chief Association’s President David Gates this past week about the Jerome fire bill incident was revealing in a number of ways. He related the difficulty that his department faced when they were forced to deal with a large brush fire some time ago.

“It cost us over $200,000, and we only owned 5 percent of the event,” Chief Gates said. “Who do we bill for that? The state fire district? Their entire annual operating budget is only $67,000.”

The result is that municipal governments that lack any kind of rainy day contingency fund are looking at innovative ways to bridge the budget shortfall without having to resort to bonds or other tax hikes. As we mentioned in our editorial of Sunday, June 2, local Idaho communities like Chubbuck are turning to implementing “fee-for-service” schemes to help out. Mayor John Shine of Jerome indicated that his city may do the same thing.

There may be other solutions. Beyond wiser budgeting practices, some major municipalities like Kansas City and San Antonio are hiring “Innovation Managers” to review entire city infrastructure components to see where costs can be shaved or efficiencies improved without resorting to tax increases or service cuts. Other options include privatization of traditional municipally managed services.

In fact, a whole cottage industry has sprung up to address this issue, with one of the privatization solutions being the management of water and wastewater treatment facilities. Private companies contract to municipal services to not only provide capital financing for expensive projects, but to provide “Peer Performance” systems where the company is rewarded with more revenue depending on how much operational money is saved — a “win-win” all around.

This idea isn’t new. Idaho has already dipped its toe into the privatization pool with the Department of Correction to mixed results. Experts in Public Administration such as Richard Culp Ph.D. declared prison privatization, in particular, to be a disappointing failure. “The big promises of prison privatization — less cost, higher quality — have simply not materialized,” he said.

Other privatization efforts have shown a very positive potential. For instance, privatization of municipal services like water and wastewater management have experienced huge success. Cities like New York City and Ontario, Canada, now use all privatized water and wastewater services and that trend has expanded into more than 8,500 communities. The take-away is that, while not necessarily a “cure-all” for all budgetary woes, innovation and creativity as well as a healthy governmental paradigm shift toward more stringent fiscal conservatism could breathe some life back into otherwise struggling communities.

We believe disciplined fiscal responsibility in budgetary prioritization, and the idea of an “Innovation Manager” with broad powers and authority to drag governmental entities who are frozen in “analysis paralysis” and “This-Is-The-Way-We’ve-Always-Done-It” disease kicking and screaming if necessary into the 21st century to review and restructure the way they do business has merit. At the very least, we feel it is worth a serious discussion.

While innovation and privatization may not be a “one-size-fits-all” solution, we feel there is room for creative and innovative approaches to long-standing budgetary problems that are worth exploring. And after what we just witnessed with the Jerome fire billing debacle, some progress in this area seems to be desperately needed.

T.F. City Manager Offers His List of Movers and Shakers

BY TRAVIS ROTHWEILER

Baseball and other team sports require several players to grind through a season to win the championship. Economic development in Twin Falls is no different.

The Times-News recently published a series on the city of Twin Falls’ economic development efforts, philosophies and opportunities. Read in its entirety, the series accurately captures the city’s role in economic development.

Words like “collaboration,” “partnerships,” “creativity” and “inclusiveness” are a few terms that describe the city of Twin Falls’ approach to economic development. As a team sport, I want to take this opportunity to add to the “movers and shakers” roster included in the series.

Mayor Greg Lanting, current Vice-mayor Don Hall and current and past members of the Twin Falls City Council. The city council has actively shaped the city of Twin Falls’ economic development philosophy. The mayor of the city of Twin Falls has participated in almost every economic development opportunity the city has pursued. Former mayor and current vice-mayor, Don Hall, and current Mayor Greg Lanting have gone the extra mile by representing and promoting our community, as well as by cultivating relationships with prospective company leaders and site consultants. Past and current members of the city council were closely involved in the Chobani project and continue to be involved in current opportunities. Without their efforts, we would not have enjoyed any of the successes.

Melinda Anderson and members of the Twin Falls city staff are also on my list. Serving as the Twin Falls Economic Development Director and Twin Falls Urban Renewal Agency executive director, Melinda Anderson has been involved in every economic development deal during her tenure. She has provided a critical leadership element to the Twin Falls URA. Without the Twin Falls URA, none of the successes highlighted would have come to fruition. Several other key city team members play vital roles in our approach to economic development and include Chief Financial Officer Lorie Race, City Engineer Jackie Fields, Community Development Director Mitch Humble and Assistant to the City Manager Mike Williams, just to name a few.

URA Chairman Gary Garnand and current and past members of the Twin Falls Urban Renewal Agency are on my list. Because local governments have limited tools available to create economic incentives and compete in Idaho, many rely on urban renewal agencies and tax increment financing. The city of Twin Falls is no different. Under the leadership of Chairman Gary Garnand and its members, the Twin Falls URA has been able to leverage resources to create jobs, expand and strengthen our economic base and build critical infrastructure components. Without the agency’s proactive and progressive spirit, none of the projects would have been realized. Jobs would not have been created. Private sector Investments would likely not have been realized including: Jayco, St. Luke’s downtown office, C3, Chobani, Glanbia and First Federal.

Dr. Jerry Beck and the College of Southern Idaho deserve to be on the list. Under the leadership of Dr. Jerry Beck, the concepts of creating a regional, collaborative economic development approach was implemented. Dr. Beck has been a true champion and has been recognized nationally for this effort in the economic development arena. As an institution of higher education, the College of Southern Idaho has also been an active, valued partner. To ensure the area could provide the work force to prospective companies, the college has tailor-made job training programs, offered use of college spaces and provided numerous resources. Without CSI’s active involvement, the city of Twin Falls and other cities in the Magic Valley would not have realized the successes we have.

Additionally, the city has relied on people like Mitch Watkins, Ruth Pierce and many other leaders within the Twin Falls business community through organizations like Business Plus, the State of Idaho’s Departments of Labor and Commerce, Fran Florence, Brad Wills, Doug Vollmer and members of our development community, and, of course the more than 45,000 residents that make and call Twin Falls home.

Again, economic development is a team sport. Without the active involvement of the all of the team, none of the successes we have enjoyed or will in our future would have been possible.

Buhl School Board Hires New Superintendent

BY JULIE WOOTTON
jwootton@magicvalley.com

BUHL • After five years as a local school principal, Ron Anthony will now serve as the Buhl School District superintendent.

Anthony, principal at Popplewell Elementary School, starts his new position July 1.

He replaces Byron Stutzman, who accepted a job as superintendent of the Crook County School District in Wyoming.

Anthony said part of his vision will be to “continue the good things we have been doing” and tweak some areas.

“State finances make it very difficult,” he said, but district employees will keep providing the best education possible for students.

Anthony said he’ll have a lot to learn as a first-time superintendent. One of his goals is to continue to be visible to employees and parents.

“My hope it to make sure I’m in schools as much as I can (be)” he said.

The search for a new superintendent took a month, said school board Chairman Jim Barker.

Stutzman put in his notice in early May. District officials advertised the position and set a May 17 deadline for applications.

ASHLEY SMITH • TIMES-NEWS

Ron Anthony, principal of Popplewell Elementary School in Buhl, has been hired as superintendent of the Buhl School District.

Seven people applied. A 10-member committee of parents, teachers and business leaders chose four to interview.

The committee recommended Anthony, and the school board voted May 28 to hire him.

Anthony has more than 30 years’ experience as an educator.

He began as a middle school math teacher and spent 15 years teaching and 10 years as a school administrator in eastern Oregon. He also was an administrator for two years in northern Idaho and has been a principal in elementary, middle and high schools.

When Anthony arrived in Buhl five years ago, Popplewell Elementary wasn’t making “adequate yearly progress” under the federal No Child Left Behind Act.

Anthony worked with teachers to improve student achievement and test scores increased each year in reading and math, Barker said.

Last year, Popplewell Elementary made AYP and received four of a possible five stars under the state Department of Education’s new school rating system.

Seventy-eight percent of the Buhl School District’s 1,100 students qualify for free or reduced-price school lunches under federal poverty guidelines.

State Seeks Proposals for High School Wireless

TIMES-NEWS

BOISE • The Idaho State Department of Education has issued a request for proposals to provide high-speed wireless Internet access at public high schools.

Proposals will be accepted until June 28. ISDE anticipates awarding a bid before the next school year.

Through Senate Bill 1200, legislators provided $2.25 million to provide every public high school with wireless connectivity. Most public high schools already are connected to high-speed broadband intranet access through the Idaho Education Network.

Through the statewide contract, though, a managed service will provide wireless connectivity as well as security, content filtering and project management.

The state’s wireless network will work with the Idaho Education Network and any existing network a school or district has in place.

High schools won’t be required to participate. All public high schools that opt in for the state’s managed wireless service are estimated to be connected by March 2014.

To download the request for proposals, visit www.sde.idaho.gov and click on “Request for Proposal 1305W” link under “Top Topics” section of the home page.

County Closing Road for Sage Grouse

MONTROSE, Colo. (AP) • Montrose County is closing a county road near Crawford for a few months each year to help protect the Gunnison sage grouse by preserving six courtship and mating areas for the bird.

Commissioners David White, Gary Ellis and Ron Henderson passed a resolution closing county road C77 from March 15 to May 15 each year.

The commissioners are worried the birds will be disturbed by people who collect antlers for souvenirs or a living.

According to the Montrose Daily Press, the road does not provide direct access to any homes and receives no winter maintenance from the county. The road closure only applies to motorized vehicle traffic.

The resolution must be reauthorized every year.

The U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service has proposed listing the Gunnison sage grouse under the Endangered Species Act. A decision is not expected before the end of September.

Montrose County opposes the proposed listing. Officials contend an accompanying critical habitat designation of 1.7 million acres could devastate the local economy.

Infestation of Exotic Deer Lice Hits Deer Herds in the West

RENO, Nev. (AP) • Scientists across the West are raising concerns about a growing infestation of exotic deer lice that appears to be killing Columbian black-tailed and mule deer. Researchers said the non-native lice first appeared in the mid-1990s.

They apparently weaken the deer during the long winter months, causing hair loss and distracting them from threats posed by hungry predators such as mountain lions. The infestation has been on the rise, especially in Oregon, Washington, California and New Mexico. “We’re very concerned about the potential impacts on the deer population,” said Greg Gerstenberg, a senior wildlife biologist with the California Department of Fish and Wildlife. “The potential impact of exotic lice and hair loss could be devastating,” he told the Reno Gazette-Journal.

T.F. Man Sentenced to 15 Years for Rape

MOSCOW (AP) • A former University of Idaho student has been sentenced to up to 15 years in prison for raping another student last fall. Jesse Vierstra of Twin Falls was sentenced by 2nd District Judge Carl B. Kerrick on Monday. Kerrick said Vierstra would have to serve five years in prison before he would be eligible for parole, and must register as a sex offender.

Prosecutors say Vierstra was attending a party at the Sigma Chi fraternity house in October when he and the woman walked outside. The woman told police they began kissing and when she tried to end the encounter he picked her up, carried her to some dark bushes and raped her. The victim testified Monday that she is in constant fear of running into Vierstra or his family.

IRS OFFICIALS ENJOY LUXURIES AND FRIVOLITIES

WASHINGTON (AP) • Already heavily criticized for targeting conservative groups, the Internal Revenue Service absorbed another blow Tuesday as new details emerged about senior officials enjoying luxury hotel rooms, free drinks and free food at a $4.1 million training conference. It was one of many expensive gatherings the agency held for employees over a three-year period.

One top official stayed five nights in a room that regularly goes for $3,500 a night, and another — who was later promoted — stayed four nights in a room that regularly goes for $1,499.

A total of 132 IRS officials received room upgrades at the conference in 2010 in Anaheim, Calif., according to a report by J. Russell George, the Treasury Department inspector general for tax administration. The tax agency paid a flat daily fee of $135 per hotel room, the report said, but the upgrades were part of a package deal that added to the overall cost of the conference. The report was made public on the same day leaders of six conservative groups testified at a congressional hearing, where they told lawmakers they had endured abuse from IRS agents as they spent years trying to qualify for tax-exempt status.

In often-emotional testimony, the conservatives described IRS demands for details about employees' and group officials' political activities and backgrounds, for comments they'd posted on websites, for videos of meetings and information on whether speakers at such sessions voiced political views. Some said it took three years to get their tax-exempt status; others said they were still waiting.

"I'm a born-free American woman," Becky Gerrit-son, president of the We-tumpka Tea Party of Alabama, tearfully told the lawmakers. "I'm telling my government, 'You've forgotten your place!'"

Federal regulations say that tax-exempt social welfare organizations can engage in some political activity but the activity cannot be their primary mission. It is up to the IRS to make that determination of their level of political activity, and some Democrats at Tuesday's House Ways and Means Committee hearing noted that some liberal groups also have had a hard time winning tax-exempt status from the IRS. However, revelations about IRS agents improperly targeting tea party and other groups have led to investigations by three congressional committees and the Justice Department. One top IRS official was forced to resign, another retired and a third was placed on paid leave.

Tuesday's report by the inspector general suggests the agency has struggled with management issues beyond the division that handles tax-exempt applications. According to the report, expensive employee conferences were approved with few restraints or safeguards until new rules were imposed in 2011. In all, the IRS held 225 employee conferences from 2010 through 2012, at a total cost of $49 million, the report said. The Anaheim conference was the most expensive, but others were costly, too.

In 2010, the agency held a conference in Philadelphia that cost $2.9 million, one in San Diego that cost $1.2 million and another in Atlanta that also cost $1.2 million. All of these conferences would violate new rules imposed by the White House budget office in 2012 that cap expenses for a single conference at $500,000.

Hong Kong Holds June 4 Vigil, Bristles at Beijing

HONG KONG (AP) • Every year, Hong Kong residents gather in droves for the annual vigil to commemorate the Tiananmen democracy protests. More than marking the brutal crackdown in Beijing 24 years ago, the event here increasingly symbolizes disaffection with rule by China. Tens of thousands of people gathered Tuesday evening at a large park in the former British colony. They turned the park into a sea of flickering light as they held candles aloft to remember those killed when their protests in central Beijing were crushed by the Chinese military on June 4, 1989. Commemorations of the crackdown are suppressed everywhere else in China.

The vigil was cut short by a brief but heavy tropical downpour that sent some scurrying for the exits. But many remained, huddling with their candles under umbrellas. Organizers estimated a crowd of 150,000 while police put the number at 54,000, local media reported.

"We need to let everyone know" about what happened, said Alex Lai, a 26-year-old accountant who has been attending the vigil for 10 years. "Because if you don't hold this event, then the memory will quickly be forgotten."

Organizers and crowd members called for Beijing to reverse its verdict on the protests, which Communist Party leaders have condemned as a counterrevolutionary riot. In Beijing, there was no sign of large-scale protest, but some people answered a call by activists to wear black to work in remembrance. As in previous years, many pro-democracy activists themselves were not allowed to leave their homes to mark the anniversary. On the country's lively social media, searches for words including "commemorate" and "6-4" were banned, and the candle emoticon was removed.

In Hong Kong, the event has taken on a life of its own, with residents of the now-semiautonomous Chinese region expressing unhappiness that their administrators are still hand-picked by Beijing despite promises of more democracy.

"There are more people who want to use this vigil regarding June 4 as a way to protest against Beijing's heavy-handed intervention in Hong Kong affairs," said Willy Lam, a professor at Chinese University of Hong Kong.

And "of course it also expresses the anger of people over the Chinese government messing with our democratic reform," said pro-democracy legislator Lee Cheuk-yan. Mike Yip, a sales consultant attending the vigil, said people were dissatisfied with the lack of reform.

"Everybody understands we can't change anything in the short term but we hope that slowly there will be changes," he said.

HACKER WHO TURNED MANNING IN TAKES WITNESS STAND

FORT MEADE, Md. (AP) • A one-time computer hacker who told authorities Pfc. Bradley Manning was giving information to WikiLeaks testified Tuesday the soldier never said he wanted to help the enemy during their online chats. Manning is on trial for giving hundreds of thousands of documents to the secret-spilling website WikiLeaks. He pleaded guilty to charges that could bring 20 years behind bars, but the military has pressed ahead with a court-martial on more serious charges, including aiding the enemy. That charge carries a potential life sentence.

Adrian Lamo, a convicted hacker, said he started chatting online with Manning on May 20, 2010, and alerted law enforcement the next day about the contents of the soldier's messages, including his mention of WikiLeaks founder Julian Assange. He said he continued chatting with Manning on and off for six more days. On cross-examination, Lamo said Manning never told him he wanted to help the enemy and did not express disloyalty to America.

"At any time, did Pfc. Manning ever say he wanted to help the enemy?" defense attorney David Coombs said. "Not in those words, no," Lamo said.

Prosecutors have said they will show the 25-year-old intelligence analyst effectively put U.S. military secrets into the hands of the enemy, including Osama bin Laden.

Manning is escorted out of a courthouse in Fort Meade on Tuesday.

France, Britain Confirm Use of Sarin Gas in Syria

PARIS (AP) • France said Tuesday it has confirmed that the nerve gas sarin was used “multiple times and in a localized way” in Syria, including at least once by the regime. It was the most specific claim by any Western power about chemical weapons attacks in the 27-month-old conflict.

Britain later said that tests it conducted on samples taken from Syria also were positive for sarin.

The back-to-back announcements left many questions unanswered, highlighting the difficulties of confirming from a distance whether combatants in Syria have crossed the “red line” set by President Barack Obama. The regime of Syrian President Bashar Assad has refused to allow U.N. investigators into the country. The French and British findings, based on samples taken from Syria, came hours after a U.N. team said it had “reasonable grounds” to suspect small-scale use of toxic chemicals in at least four attacks in March and April.

The U.N. probe was conducted from outside Syria’s borders, based on interviews with doctors and witnesses of purported attacks and a review of amateur videos from Syria. The team said solid evidence will remain elusive until inspectors can collect samples from victims directly or from the sites of alleged attacks.

Some experts cautioned that the type of evidence currently available to investigators — videos, witness reports and physiological samples of uncertain origin — leaves wide doubts.

At the same time, forensic evidence of alleged chemical weapons use is fading away with time, and the longer U.N. inspectors are kept out of Syria, the harder it will be to collect conclusive proof, they said.

Syria is suspected of having one of the world’s largest chemical weapons arsenals, including mustard and nerve gas, such as sarin. In recent weeks, the regime and those trying to topple Assad have increasingly used accusations of chemical weapons as a propaganda tool, but have offered no solid proof.

In the West, meanwhile, the lack of certainty about such allegations is linked to a high stakes political debate over whether the U.S. should get more involved in the Syria conflict, including by arming those fighting Assad.

AT A GLANCE

Fort Hood Suspect Says He Was Protecting Taliban

An Army psychiatrist charged with gunning down Fort Hood soldiers said Tuesday his defense would show that he was compelled to do so because deploying U.S. troops posed an imminent danger to Taliban fighters.

The military judge asked Maj. Nidal Hasan if he has evidence to support his “defense of others” strategy, hinting that it could be thrown out.

Such a defense requires Hasan to prove the 2009 killings were necessary to protect others from immediate harm or death, and military law experts not involved in the case said the judge is unlikely to allow him to present that defense.

“A ‘defense of others’ strategy is not going to work when you’re at war and the ‘others’ are enemies of the U.S.,” said Jeff Addicott, director of the Center for Terrorism Law at St. Mary’s University in San Antonio. “And what makes it more egregious is that he targeted medical personnel whose primary purpose was to heal, not to kill.”

While Hasan’s argument may have been a bit more sympathetic if he said the rampage was necessary to protect Muslim women and children, that defense strategy does not apply in a war situation, said Lisa M. Windsor, a retired Army colonel and former judge advocate. Still, it’s unclear what Hasan may present because attorneys are not allowed to give evidence themselves, said Windsor, an attorney specializing in military law. The court-martial had been scheduled to start with jury selection Wednesday, two days after Hasan was granted his request to represent himself. Hasan, an American-born Muslim, then requested a three-month delay to give him more time to prepare his defense.

Defense attorney Daniel King arrives at district court for a hearing for Aurora theater shooting suspect James Holmes in Centennial, Colo., on Tuesday.

Judge Accepts Insanity Plea in Colo. Shooting Case

A judge accepted James Holmes’ long-awaited plea of not guilty by reason of insanity Tuesday and ordered him to undergo a mental evaluation — an examination that could be a decisive factor in whether the Colorado theater shooting suspect is convicted and sentenced to die.

The judge also granted prosecutors access to a hotly contested notebook that Holmes sent to a psychiatrist shortly before the July 20 rampage, which left 12 people dead and 70 injured in a bloody, bullet-riddled movie theater in suburban Denver. Taken together, the three developments marked a major step forward in the 10-month-old case, which at times has inched along through thickets of legal arguments or veered off on tangents.

Holmes faces more than 160 counts of murder and attempted murder, and prosecutors are seeking the death penalty.

He will now be examined by the Colorado Mental Health Institute in Pueblo, but it’s not certain when the evaluation will begin or how long it will take. Hospital officials have said that before they meet with Holmes, they want to review evidence in the case, which prosecutors said totals nearly 40,000 pages.

Stinky Feet May Lead to Better Malaria Traps

LONDON (AP) • For decades, health officials have battled malaria with insecticides, bed nets and drugs. Now, scientists say there might be a potent new tool to fight the deadly mosquito-borne disease: the stench of human feet.

In a laboratory study, researchers found that mosquitoes infected with the tropical disease were more attracted to human odors from a dirty sock than those that didn’t carry malaria. Insects carrying malaria parasites were three times more likely to be drawn to the stinky stockings.

The new finding may help create traps that target only malaria-carrying mosquitoes, researchers say.

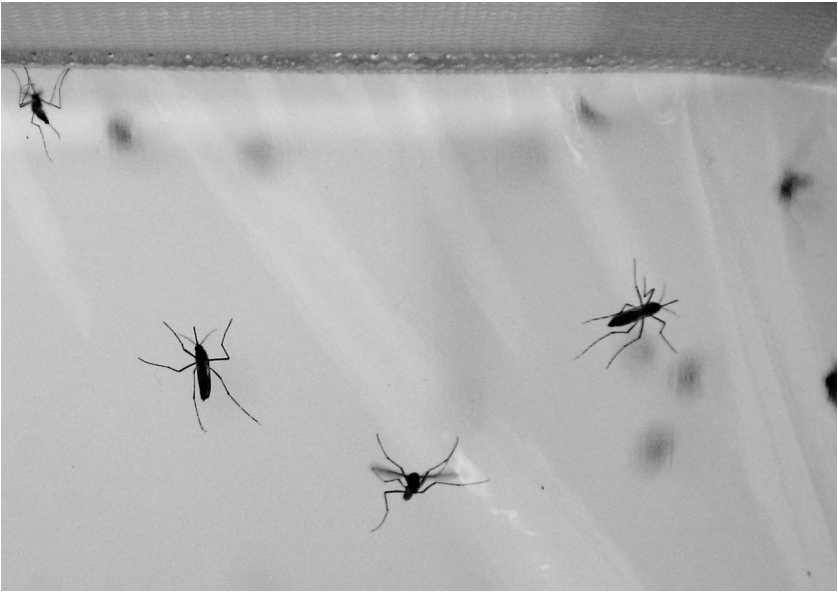

“Smelly feet have a use after all,” said Dr. James Logan, who headed the research at the London School of Hygiene and Tropical Medicine. “Every time we identify a new part of how the malaria mosquito interacts with us, we’re one step closer to controlling it better.”

The sock findings were published last month in the journal, PLoS One.

Malaria is estimated to kill more than 600,000 people every year, mostly children in Africa.

Experts have long known that mosquitoes are drawn to human odors, but it was unclear if being infected with malaria made them even more attracted to us. Infected mosquitoes are believed to make up about 1 percent of the mosquito population.

Using traps that only target malaria mosquitoes could result in fewer mosquitoes becoming resistant to the insecticides used to kill them. And it would likely be difficult for the insects to evade traps based on their sense of smell, scientists say.

“The only way mosquitoes could (develop resistance) is if they were less attracted to human odors,” said Andrew Read, a professor of biology and entomology at the University of Pennsylvania, who was not part of Logan’s research. “And if they did that and started feeding on something else — like cows — that would be fine.”

Read said the same strategy might also work to target insects that carry other diseases such as dengue and Japanese encephalitis.

In a related study, Logan and colleagues also sealed human volunteers into a foil bag to collect their body odor as they grew hot and sweaty. The odors were then piped into a tube next door, alongside another tube untainted by human odor. Afterwards, mosquitoes were released and had the option of flying into either tube. The insects buzzed in droves into the smelly tube.

Logan said the next step is to identify the chemicals in human foot odor so that it can be made synthetically for mosquito traps. But given mosquitoes’ highly developed sense of smell, getting that formula right will be challenging.

Some smelly cheeses have the same odor as feet, Logan noted.

BEIRUT • Space is running low in the hall in south Beirut where Hezbollah buries its war dead, a testament to the heavy price the Lebanese Shi’ite militant movement is paying as it pins its fate ever closer to Syrian President Bashar Assad in a high-stakes game that it cannot afford to lose.

Hezbollah militants are being deployed outside Lebanese borders for the first time in what its leader, Hasan Nasrallah, has called a “new phase” for the movement. With this decision, Hezbollah’s focus has pivoted from fighting Israel to fighting fellow Muslims in Syria.

The group’s loyal followers appear enthusiastic about the new battle, with supporters talking of waiting lists to sign up to fight alongside Assad’s forces. But analysts question how long the movement’s near-monopoly on support among Lebanon’s Shi’ites will last as it pitches ever deeper into a long and logistically draining war and draws in fragile Lebanon with it. The decision of Hezbollah, a long-standing ally of Shi’ite Iran and Syria, to send thousands of men to Syria is a risky bid to ensure the survival of its axis of support. Geographically, Syria has long been a conduit for Iranian-supplied arms to Hezbollah. But the new mission, which pits Hezbollah against a largely Sunni Syrian opposition, has a sectarian flavor and is quickly deepening divides in Lebanon.

Since Nasrallah dramatically pledged Hezbollah’s all-out support for Assad in a May 25 speech, there have been near-daily signs of the Syrian war spilling over into Lebanon. On Monday, a Sunni cleric who has spoken out in support of Hezbollah said he narrowly escaped assassination when gunmen opened fire on him in the southern city of Sidon. A day earlier, Hezbollah militants and rebels battled near Baalbek in the Bekaa Valley, the first serious clashes on Lebanese soil since the conflict in Syria erupted more than two years ago.

For the moment, Hezbollah’s popularity among its supporters appears unwavering. Hezbollah was formed in 1982 with the stated aim of waging “resistance” against the Israeli occupation of southern Lebanon. Even after Israel completed its withdrawal in 2000, the group has continued its campaign against Israel. Hezbollah has grown into a formidable political movement with a well-armed paramilitary force known for its prowess in guerrilla warfare and is generally thought to be stronger than Lebanon’s army.

Turkish Gov’t Offers Apology as Protests Continue

ANKARA (AP) • Turkey’s deputy prime minister offered an apology Tuesday for the government’s violent crack-down on an environmental protest, a calculated bid to ease days of anti-government rallies in the country’s major cities.

The message was a bit mixed, however, as hundreds of riot police deployed with water cannons around the prime minister’s office in Ankara, the capital.

Bulent Arinc, who is standing in for the prime minister while he is out of the country, said the crackdown was “wrong and unjust.”

“In that first (protest) action, the excessive violence exerted on people who were acting out of environmental concerns was wrong and unjust,” Arinc said. “I apologize to those citizens.”

Yet the impact of his statement was unclear. Prime Minister Recep Tayyip Erdogan, who is visiting Morocco, Algeria and Tunisia, has undermined previous statements by his ministers and has dismissed the protesters as a fringe minority stirred up by the opposition.

Tens of thousands of mostly secular-minded Turks have joined anti-government rallies since Friday, when police launched a pre-dawn raid against a peaceful sit-in protesting plans to uproot trees in Istanbul’s main Taksim Square. Since then, the demonstrations have spiraled into Turkey’s biggest anti-government disturbances in years.

Late Tuesday night, thousands of people were demonstrating in the square. Many of the streets leading into it have been blocked by barricades that protesters have built of overturned dumpsters, metal railings and damaged vehicles to keep police away.

At one point, near the German Consulate, police fired tear gas at several hundred protesters who were throwing bricks at the officers.

A 22-year-old man died during an anti-government protest in a city near Turkey’s border with Syria, and officials gave conflicting reports on what caused his death.

Police have been accused of using disproportionate force in trying to break up demonstrations. In a boisterous debate in Parliament, Interior Minister Muammer Guler defended police officers’ use of tear gas against demonstrators trying to reach government buildings.

“Should we have allowed them to march and take over Parliament?” he asked. “We do not have the luxury to allow illegal acts and will never have that luxury.”

Arinc said he had no information about reports that riot police had erased or painted over numbers on their helmets so people could not report them in the event of abuse. Guler, the interior minister, said protesters had destroyed CCTV cameras around Taksim, and the vandalism would make it harder for the government to detect abuse by police.

The Turkish Human Rights Association said some 3,300 people nationwide were detained during four days of protests, although most have since been released. At least 1,300 people were injured, the group said, although it said the number could be higher.

Protests have been directed at what critics say is Erdogan’s aggressive and authoritarian style of governing.

Many accuse him of forcing his conservative, religious outlook on citizens’ lives in this mainly Muslim but secular nation. Erdogan rejects the accusations, says he respects all lifestyles.

Arinc said the government was “sensitive” to the demands of the largely urban, pro-secular section of society that had not voted for Erdogan’s Islamic-rooted party.

“I would like to express this in all sincerity: everyone’s lifestyle is important to us and we are sensitive to them,” he said. There were several other efforts to ease tensions.

Sirri Sureyya Onder, legislator from a Kurdish party who became a hero to many for standing in front of bulldozers to prevent the destruction of trees in Istanbul’s Taksim square, called on demonstrators to continue protests in a more festival-like manner.

The state-run Anadolu Agency said police in Antalya, on the Mediterranean coast, handed over carnations and roses to a group of protesters.

Shey Patterson

Aug. 21, 1934-May 29, 2013

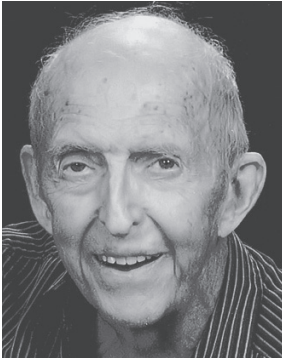

TWIN FALLS • Shey was born Aug. 21, 1934, to A.F. and Hazel Patterson in Dayton, Ohio, and went to be with Jesus on Wednesday, May 29, 2013, surrounded by his loving family.

He was raised on a small farm in Eaton, Ohio, along with his brother, Armond (Bud) Patterson. He attended grade school in Ohio until 1948, when the family moved to New Mexico and started a diary business. He graduated from Artesia High School in 1952 and continued working in the family business. In 1965, the family moved to Jerome, Idaho, and started the Mon Ropsa Black Angus business in which they raised and sold premium stock all over the United States, where Shey recounted some perilous trips hauling cattle in various parts of the states. While working on the ranch, he had a dramatic tractor accident which was to impact the rest of his life. During surgery, it was found he had polycystic kidney disease.

After months in recovery, he decided he would go back to school and get a degree in ministry at Northwest Christian College in Eugene, Ore. Graduating with honors in 1988, his life took another turn and he decided to go into the real estate business going to work for Coldwell Banker Western Realty in December 1988. His true ministry was in his music, which he gladly shared with many people, singing at retirement centers, churches, weddings and funerals. He had a true love for people and loved sharing his gift.

He married Donna Bach on Nov. 3, 1990, and inherited a large adopted family that started a new chapter in his life. They loved playing golf and played at many courses throughout the United States and traveling the world visiting many exotic places. In 1996, his life once again took another turn and was told the PKD disease had taken a toll and he was going to have to have a kidney transplant in order to live a "normal" life, so he went to the University of Utah transplant center where his wife was tested and gave him her kidney and they had another 14 years traveling and working together.

One of his favorite places was Egypt and the Holy Land, walking where Jesus walked. During one of our trips to Rome, he visited a Lamborghini dealer and, fortunately, they would not let him take a test drive and gave him a poster to take home instead. He loved cars and was a real car buff, visiting many car shows and museums throughout the world. In 2010, his kidney once again failed and he had to choose to go to dialysis three times a week. After a year of trying to work and complete the treatment, he retired from the real estate business and became a full-time grandpa to Charity and Sammi.

He is survived by loving wife; his brother, Bud Patterson; son, A.F. Patterson; stepdaughter, Jan Orth; his adopted children, Paul and Cindy, Mark and Sandra, Melinda, Michelle and Pete, and Derek and Celene; his special "girls," Charity and Sammi; and many grandchildren and great-grandchildren, who were all dear to him as he valued his family above all. He was preceded in death by his parents and son-in-law.

We want to thank Dr. Ficklin, Dr. Narasimhan and all the doctors, nurses and staff at St. Luke's for the loving care during the last three years. Also, a special thanks to the wonderful and caring people at Davita Dialysis Center; big thanks to the staff at Bridgeview Estates and Twin Falls Care center for all the care he received there.

In lieu of flowers, contributions may be made in Shey's name to the Polycystic Kidney Disease Foundation, 8330 Ward Parkway, Suite 510, Kansas City, MO 64114-2027, or a charity of your choice.

Viewing for Shey will be held from 5 to 7 p.m. Friday, June 7, at Rosenau Funeral Home. A celebration of life for Shey will be at 10:30 a.m. Saturday, June 8, at Rosenau Funeral Home, 2826 Addison Ave. E. in Twin Falls, Idaho, with Pastor Dave Mowry from the First Church of the Nazarene officiating. Burial will follow at Sunset Memorial Park. Immediately following the service, friends and family are invited to return to the funeral home for lunch and fellowship after the service. Family and friends are encouraged to share their memories of Shey at www.rosenaufuneralhome.com.

All the Dirt: Tomato Gateway

Growing tomatoes is widely acknowledged in gardening circles to be the gateway drug to more gardening. One day you have a cherry tomato growing in a pot and the next you are spending next month's rent on the newest Hosta variety. Despite this risk, I believe growing your own tomatoes will make you a better person. Fresh garden tomatoes are to store bought tomatoes what Van Gogh is to Thomas Kincaid.

There are hundreds of tomato varieties, which make choosing which to grow a daunting task. Only a few cultivars make up the majority of tomato plants sold at Idaho garden centers. They are the popular, the reliable and the known, sometimes with good reason. Some favorite varieties in Idaho are Early Girl, Superfantasic, Celebrity, Sweet 100's and Roma. Early Girl is particularly helpful to those with short growing seasons because it will ripen earlier than most other tomatoes. They are slightly smaller than average and are sometimes referred to as a salad tomato. Roma, a paste tomato, is well suited to salsa and cooking uses because it is meatier. Don't let this description confuse you with another variety called Beefmaster, also popular. Beefmaster is a very big tomato, usually called a beefsteak type. They are a great slicing tomato, but at 100 plus days to maturity you might be in a race with frost to be able to harvest ripe tomatoes.

If taste is the primary criterion when choosing tomatoes, then heirlooms have to be considered. Generally, an heirloom vegetable is an open pollinated (non-hybrid) variety that has been in cultivation at least 50 years. Hybrids are typically much more disease resistant, have higher yields and are earlier to ripen. The breeding work to produce these desirable characteristics sometimes sacrifices taste.

KETCHUM • Sylvie Dore dips a spoon into a jar of fermenting Daikon radish. It looks as if it's gone bad, but it's very good for you, Dore noted. NourishMe, a health food store in Ketchum, is having trouble keeping fermented foods on the shelves as health-savvy customers seek to fortify their bodies with good bacteria. "Eating one big tablespoon of sauerkraut is the same as eating a large bowl of salad," said Dore, who ferments food for the store. "Bacteria in the gut helps us digest food and assimilate nutrients. It also helps strengthen our immune system." Raw vegetables can be difficult to digest and overcooked food can lose nutrients, said Julie Johnson, a nutritionist and owner of Nour-ishMe. Fermented foods are easy to digest. "They help the micro- and macronutrients enter our bloodstream and they help break them down on a cellular level so they can enter cells," Johnson said. "And, of course, we add other beneficial things to our fermented foods. Ginger, for instance, has a lovely effect on the blood. Garlic helps thin blood and it's antibacterial. It's the right way to eat for a lot of reasons."

Fermented foods are a keen example of consumers rediscovering an old tradition, Dore said. "People used to eat fermented foods all the time before refrigeration. They'd harvest their vegetables in the fall, cut them up, ferment them and they'd last all winter. It's a form of preserving," she said. Dore began eating fermented foods when she was pregnant eight years ago.

"Someone gave me a cookbook titled 'Nourishing Traditions,' by Sally Fallon. I read it and was sold," Dore said. "It's traditional knowledge that humans have made use of over hundreds of years and thrown away just in the last 50 years. We changed our diet to white flour and other refined foods, forgetting all the wisdom of the past, and we began seeing diseases increase." Fermenting foods is easy to do

ONLINE: Summer Brews in Variety Packs

Community blogger Steve Koonce writes about craft beers at "Idaho on Tap." An excerpt from his latest post:

"...Ran across the Citra Blonde Ale in the current Widmer variety

12-pack. I found it quite nice, with refreshing malt sweetness and a splash of grapefruit on the nose. Pick it up on its own or in the variety pack. O'Ryely IPA, a good attempt at a Rye-IPA, is still the rotator IPA in that pack and tastes fine. It doesn't have the sharp rye bite that I enjoy in the, let's say, Freeheeler Rye IPA from Sawtooth Brewery, but as Widmer IPAs go, this one is pretty good. I also spotted a Ninkasi Variety

R&D. Ninkasi describes it as a light, fruity cream ale. I did try Babylon Double IPA, and it was pretty good. You can find that in the Ninkasi 4-pack wherever Ninkasi is sold..."

State Ag Marketing Arm Cancels Debut Dinner in Magic Valley

BY JOE CADOTTE
jcadotte@magicvalley.com

JEROME • The state department that markets Idaho farms nationwide canceled its debut dinner series this weekend due to lack of interest in the Magic Valley. Only 16 people signed up for Idaho Preferred program's homegrown, seven-course meal. The dinner, which was to take place Saturday in Jerome, had a 50-seat minimum.

Idaho Preferred Manager Leah Clark said it wouldn't have taken at least one week for chefs to prepare the feast of locally harvested lamb, fish, beef and vegetables. "I'm surprised it didn't sell out," Clark said. "Events like this usually sell out. The whole concept of dinner on the farm is usually a very popular consumer event. ...I don't know why it didn't have success in the Magic Valley. Maybe they didn't think it was that Dore chops vegetables, including cabbage, carrots and Daikon radish. She then lightly salts them to draw out the liquid. She adds whey, a by-product of raw milk, to help them ferment quicker. She then submerges the vegetables under their own liquid, forcing out air bubbles.

It's important to get the liquid over the chopped veggies, she said, because good bacteria doesn't like oxygen.

Dore lines NourishMe's shelves with a variety of choices: German sauerkraut made with caraway seed, salt and whey; Asian kraut, featuring cabbage, kale, garlic, ginger, lemon juice, tamari, whey and salt; a carrot-ginger mix; curry kraut; and kimchi made of cabbage, carrots, Daikon radishes, ginger, garlic, chili, sea salt and whey.

Brandywine is the best known of the more common heirloom varieties. I like Cherokee Purple just as much and, because it matures faster, I have a reasonable chance of harvesting more than two. Recently, grafted tomatoes have been introduced to the home gardener. The goal with these wonders is to have the strength of hybrid with the taste of an heirloom. An heirloom variety such as Brandywine is grafted onto the rootstock of a stronger, disease resistant variety. The above ground portion of the plant is an heirloom and the root is genetically an entirely different plant. The plant grows much larger. They are, in fact, monsters. One plant may produce three times as many tomatoes as a conventional plant and with fewer problems. No genes have been modified in the production of these plants.

Look for other vegetables to become available as this trend continues.

unique of an experience.”

The Dinner on the Farm Series celebrates Idaho agriculture and marks the 10-year anniversary of Idaho Preferred, which acts as the domestic marketing arm for the State Department of Agriculture.

“We're building awareness. It's the commitment from consumers to support local as much as they can and we see that they're doing that,” Clark said. “Farmers markets have increased significantly almost by 100 percent. There are 50 farmers markets now where 10 years ago it was in the 20s. We also see an increase of major retailers carrying local products.”

Instead of starting the series at Si-Ellen Farms in Jerome, the first dinner will be held July 13 at Symms Fruit Ranch in Caldwell.

Clark said eating gourmet, locally produced food underneath a canopy of cherry orchards is worth the trip.

The menu hasn't been released yet but Clark said it will definitely include cherries.

“Every menu series will be different based on what's fresh in that moment of time,” Clark said.

Despite poor reception in the Magic Valley, Clark said they'll try it again next year.

Clark said people should sign up early for the Caldwell event because events sell out in the Boise area. Tickets are $60 for one person or $100 per couple.

I have two dogs, Misty & Brandy, and a Kitty named Tiger. One day Tiger pottied and sprayed on my leather sofa. My problem is...I love them both! Can't get rid of my sofa nor my Kitty. Do you have any suggestions on how we can all co-exist without nasty stains and odor?!

“Kitty on my Couch, Turning me into a Grouch!”

Answer:

Let's not break up the love affair you're having with the sofa and Tiger! You can keep and love them both. LEATHER MAGIC is a superior cleaner for leather and vinyl. It will clean your sofa and still keep it soft and supple. X-O PLUS is an all natural organic odor neutralizer. Use them together and avoid the devastating destruction of this beautiful love triangle by intruding stink and stain! May you all live happily ever after!

Bitter Root Brewery Expanding to Increase Beer Production

HAMILTON, Mont. (AP) • The Bitter Root Brewery is expanding production as it nears its 15th anniversary of craft beer making.

In March, the brewery began construction to add nearly 2,000 square feet of space, extra room that will eventually allow production of 8,000 barrels of beer.

“We hit max capacity last year,” partner Nicol Musburger said.

Musburger's father and brewery owner Tim Bozik said a large part of the expansion is the production of cans.

The cans are more environmentally friendly, and are easier for people to tote along on outings. Beginning in July, the brewery will have retail 12-ounce cans on the market for its Sawtooth Ale, Nut Brown Ale and Single Hop Ale.

For Father’s Day, a Pairing for Every Patriarch

BY MICHELLE LOCKE
Associated Press

Forget the tie. Think bespoke booze for Father's Day, specifically a beverage tailor-made to suit the hobbies father knows best.

Of course, to do that you first have to decide who, exactly, is your daddy. The type of guy who likes to putt? Or someone who's happiest when merely puttering? Is he sporty? Handy? Or maybe he's that most challenging of giftees, the man who has everything. Whatever the type, we've got a few suggestions to help you pick out that perfect bottle.

The Sports Fan

Lots of choices in this category, including a number of wines by NFL greats such as legendary coach Dick Vermeil (<http://www.vermeilwines.com>) of the Philadelphia Eagles, St. Louis Rams and Kansas City Chiefs as well as former Oakland Raiders and Green Bay Packers player Charles Woodson (<http://www.twentyfourwines.com>). Is dad more of a brew guy? Radeberger Pilsner (<http://www.radebergergruppe.com>) is a classic German Pilsner made with barley malt, hops and water from the brewery's own well.

The Grill Guru

Port isn't what comes to first mind when selecting a summer wine, but a chilled tawny port can be delicious as a barbecue aperitif or paired with dishes such as grilled scallops. Two to try are Taylor-Fladgate 20-year-old Tawny and Graham's 20-year-old Tawny. Does your dad's typical backyard bash involve inviting the whole block over? Consider Ravenswood Vintners Blend Old Vine Zinfandel, a hearty, meat-friendly wine that's priced reasonably enough at $10 to $12 a bottle to allow you to grab a case.

The Movie Maven

For 007 fans, a No. 1 choice might be The Macallan, a single-malt scotch featured as James Bond's favorite drink in the recent box-office hit "Skyfall." Interesting fact, Macallan did not pay for product placement of the scotch, which Bond and M are shown drinking and which is also used in an edgy scene featuring an unfortunate game of William Tell-style marksmanship. (www.themacallan.com)

Another option is the Director's Cut wines from director-turned-vintner Francis Ford Coppola of "The Godfather" and "Apocalypse Now" fame. The limited production wines sourced from Sonoma County come with a wraparound label modeled after a Zoetrope strip, one of the earliest moving picture devices. (<http://www.franciscoppolawinery.com>)

The Handyman

Is your dad the kind of guy who disappears into his workshop for hours in search of a better mousetrap? He might like Lucid Absinthe. Popular in the 19th and early-20th centuries, especially in France, the anise-flavored spirit was banned due to concerns that it contained dangerously high levels of the chemical compound thujone, found in the key absinthe botanical ingredient Artemisia Absinthium.

But environmental chemist T.A. Breaux wasn't convinced the experts were right. A Louisiana native, Breaux had some pre-ban bottles of absinthe. He ran it through the mass spectrometer and, hey presto, found only trace amounts of thujone. In 2007, Lucid, produced in France, was approved for importation to the United States.

The Golfer

Scotland is the home of golf and of Scotch whisky (no telling if those two are related), and a good gift for the dad who golfs might be Johnny Walker Double Black, a smoky, complex whisky. Or, try a single-malt whisky like Oban 14-year-old, which balances sweet and smoky with a slightly briny finish.

If dad likes wine, a number of golfers have gotten into the wine business, including South African Ernie Els, who produces wines from his country's Stellenbosch region (www.ernieelswines.com) and Arnold Palmer who collaborates with Luna Vineyards in the Napa Valley. (www.arnoldpalmerwines.com)

The Auto Racing Aficionado

Turn4 wines (www.turn4.com) are named after the most exciting turn in the track. Try the California cabernet sauvignon, fruity and elegant. The Andretti Winery in the Napa Valley founded by race car legend Mario Andretti is another option. (<http://www.andrettiwinery.com>)

The Guy Who Has Everything

There are a lot of people to look up to in the world of wine, but maybe none so literally as 7-foot-6 former NBA star Yao Ming. Ming's Yao Family Wines made its debut in 2011 with two choices, Yao Ming 2009 Napa Valley Cabernet Sauvignon and Yao Ming 2009 Family Reserve Cabernet Sauvignon. They're both priced in the special occasions category, the first coming with a suggested retail price of $150 and the second tagged at $625 and are available at a few fine wine shops by signing up on the winery mailing list. (<http://www.yaofamilywines.com>)

Associated Press
Turn 4 wines are displayed during Auction Napa Valley at Raymond Vineyards in St. Helena, Calif.

In the spirits category, cognac offers elegance and finesse, just the ticket for a dad with sophisticated tastes. Camus cognac fits the Father's Day theme well since it's now being run by fifth-generation member Cyril Camus. The line starts with the reasonably priced VSOP Elegance at $24; try it over ice for a refreshing change. But if you recently won the lottery or are celebrating a VERY special Father's Day, how about the Cuvee 5.150 which marks the family-owned company's 50th anniversary and rings up at $13,500 a bottle. Or maybe you need a bit more time to save up for that one.

A Lighter Take on Classic Steakhouse Fare for Dad

BY SARA MOULTON
Associated Press

My family has been weaning itself from red meat for years. We still love it, but the portions and frequency are less than they used to be. Still, when I started planning a Father's Day menu for my husband and my dad, I thought it might be nice to bow to tradition by turning to the Batman and Robin of manly fare — steak and potatoes.

Happily, there are many ways these days to have your steak and eat it, too. For this menu, I was able to lower the fat and calorie count not only of the steak and potatoes, but of the equally sinful sauce — bearnaise. And, as ever, the flavor stays large.

We start with flank steak. Leaner and tougher than rib-eye (the traditionalist's cut of choice), flank steak is nonetheless plenty juicy and delicious as long as you cook it to no more than medium-rare and slice it thinly and against the grain. And just a little of it — 4 ounces — can be surprisingly satisfying.

The satisfaction quotient leaps up pretty quickly, of course, when potatoes get into the act. In this case, I'm talking about russets, the king of starchy potatoes. I shred those bad boys, flatten them into a pancake, and crisp up the pancake in a nonstick skillet with just a little bit of olive oil. Then I transfer it to a sheet pan and finish it in the oven, which frees up the skillet for the steak.

While the steak is cooking and resting, you can go to work on my "bearnaise sauce." The traditional version — made with egg yolks, lots of butter and tarragon — is a classic of French cuisine. In my version, tarragon is the only ingredient to survive. I start by making a reduction with white wine, white wine vinegar, minced shallots and dried tarragon. You can use all white wine if you have no vinegar or all vinegar if you prefer not to use white wine. If you have no shallots, just substitute finely-chopped onion.

This reduction is the acid base of the sauce, to which you will add my miraculous cheating ingredient — one-third-less-fat cream cheese — which somehow replaces both the egg yolks and the butter. Finish off the sauce with fresh tarragon, and there you have it, a wonderful bearnaise that is simultaneously rich and light.

One of the side benefits of the one-third-less-fat cream cheese is that the sauce it makes is virtually indestructible. A traditional bearnaise is temperamental; you always have to fret about the yolks curdling and the butter separating out to form a greasy slick. This sauce stays intact. By the way, don't forget to add the resting juices from the steak to the sauce, as they make it even tastier.

Our steakhouse dinner wouldn't be complete without some spinach on the side. I cooked it up with olive oil and garlic in the same pan as the potatoes and the steak. I'm telling you, Mom, this is almost a one-dish meal! When I had The Husband test drive the whole menu, he declared that it would make any day Father's Day.

FATHER'S DAY STEAKHOUSE DINNER

Start to finish: 1 hour
Servings: 6

- 4 tablespoons extra-virgin olive oil, divided
- 2 medium russet potatoes, peeled and coarsely grated, preferably using the grating disk of a food processor
- Kosher salt and ground black pepper
- 1 medium shallot, minced
- 1 tablespoon white wine vinegar
- 2 tablespoons dry white wine
- 2 teaspoons dried tarragon
- 6 ounces 1/3-less fat cream cheese (Neufchatel)
- 1 1/2 pounds flank steak, trimmed of any visible fat
- 1 1/2 pounds baby spinach leaves
- 2 cloves garlic, minced
- 2 teaspoons chopped fresh tarragon

Heat the oven to 350 F.

In a large nonstick skillet over medium-high, heat 1 tablespoon of the oil. Add the grated potatoes, pressing them down with a spatula, then reduce the heat to medium and cook until golden brown on the bottom, 10 to 12 minutes. Remove the skillet from the heat. Set a large dinner plate over the skillet, then invert to transfer the potatoes, browned side up, onto the plate.

Return the skillet to the heat and add another 1/2 tablespoon of oil. Slide the potatoes back into the skillet, browned side up. Cook until golden brown on the second side, about another 10 minutes. Season with salt and pepper, then transfer to a sheet pan and place in the oven to keep warm.

Meanwhile, in a small saucepan over medium-high, combine the shallot, vinegar, white wine, tarragon, a hefty pinch of salt and a few grinds of pepper. Bring to a boil, then reduce heat to simmer. Cook gently until reduced to about 1 tablespoon. Add the cream cheese, 1 tablespoon at a time, whisking each until incorporated. Whisk in 2 tablespoons water, then set aside.

Wipe out the skillet, add 1 tablespoon of the remaining oil and heat it over medium-high. Pat the steak dry, sprinkle it on both sides with salt and pepper, then add it to the skillet. Cook the steak to desired doneness, 4 to 5 minutes per side for medium rare, then transfer it to a platter, cover it loosely with foil and let it rest for 5 minutes.

While the steak is resting, add a tablespoon of the oil to the skillet and reduce the heat to medium. Add the spinach in 4 batches, adding more as each batch cooks down slightly. Add the remaining 1/2 tablespoon of oil after the first 2 batches of spinach. Cook until the spinach is just wilted, then add the garlic and salt and pepper to taste. Cook for another minute, then keep warm on low heat.

Remove the potato pancake from the oven and cut it into 6 wedges. Slice the steak thinly at an angle against the grain. Add the juices from the resting steak to the sauce along with the fresh tarragon, and additional water, if necessary, to reach the desired consistency. Warm the sauce over medium heat just until hot.

Transfer a potato wedge, a mound of spinach and some of the steak to each of 6 serving plates. Drizzle the sauce over each portion of steak and serve immediately.

A Grilled Greek Chicken Salad: Made Your Way

BY J.M. HIRSCH
AP Food Editor

Salad recipes that have fussy lists of ingredients generally irritate me. I don't doubt that they are delicious, nor that assembling them just so with just the right blend of flavors and textures makes for a transformative salad experience. It's simply that my life doesn't allow for such fuss. To me, the very nature of a salad should be that it brings together whatever is fresh and delicious and marries it all with some oil and acid. Particulars beyond that don't much matter. So I give you my recipe for grilled Greek salad. I use the term "recipe" loosely, for you should use this merely as inspiration, a guide for making good salad choices. Substitute, modify, amplify. The chicken, for example, is easily replaced with thinly sliced steak. Or turkey tenderloin. Or small cubes of lamb. Or salmon. Don't have Boston lettuce? Use anything frilly and green. Or even something not so frilly. Heck, use a bed of finely chopped steamed and cooled broccoli if that's what you have. And substitute at will for the veggies I call for. I like them grilled, but don't feel compelled. Want something bready? Grill some and add as croutons. My only request? Don't use bottled dressing. Make it. Homemade vinaigrette tastes better, is better for you, and makes you a better person. And use your hands when dressing the greens with it. You'll get much better coverage, making for a much better salad.

GRILLED GREEK CHICKEN SALAD

*Start to finish: 45 minutes
Servings: 4*

- 1/4 cup olive oil
- Juice of 1 lemon
- 2 cloves garlic, minced
- 2 tablespoons chopped fresh oregano
- Kosher salt and ground black pepper
- 1 1/3 pounds boneless, skinless chicken breasts, cut into thin strips
- 2 large red bell peppers, cored and cut into 1/2-inch strips
- 2 ears corn, husked
- 2 heads Boston lettuce, roughly chopped
- 1/2 small red onion, diced
- 2 tablespoons finely chopped fresh mint
- 1/2 cup crumbled feta cheese

Heat a grill to high. In a large bowl, combine the olive oil, lemon juice, garlic, oregano, 1/2 teaspoon salt and a generous amount of pepper. Whisk well. Transfer 2 tablespoons of the dressing to a medium bowl. Add the chicken to the smaller bowl, toss well to coat, then set aside. Place the bell peppers in the larger bowl and toss to coat with the remaining dressing, then transfer the peppers to a plate. Roll the ears of corn in the dressing, then set them on the plate with the peppers. Set the peppers and corn on the grill. Lower the heat to medium and cook, turning often, until lightly seared and the peppers just start to turn tender, about 3 to 6 minutes. Return to the plate and set aside. Add the chicken to the grill and cook for 4 minutes per side. Transfer to the plate with the vegetables. Add the lettuce to the large bowl and use your hands to toss it with the dressing, carefully coating each leaf with the vinaigrette. Divide the greens between 4 serving plates, then top each with some of the peppers and chicken. Divide the red onion and mint between the plates. Stand each ear of corn on its wide end then cut off the kernels by sawing a knife carefully down the sides. Divide the kernels between the salads, then top with feta cheese. Serve immediately.

Molecular Mixologists Raising the Bar on Cocktails

BY MICHELLE LOCKE
Associated Press

Bartender Tony Conigliaro's new beverage book is called "The Cocktail Lab," and he's not speaking figuratively. Among the equipment at his London-based Drink Factory consulting business are a centrifuge (the better to filter macerated liquids), a cold smoker and smoke gun (for smoking garnishes as well as syrup ingredients), and a refractometer to measure exact alcohol levels. Not quite your standard issue bar gear. And an ordinary day in the lab "can involve thermomixing, sous-viding, dehydrating — even stripping bark from trees," Conigliaro writes in the introduction to the book, due out in July. Conigliaro, a renowned British bartender, is a pioneer in so-called molecular mixology, but he's got a lot of company these days as more bartenders on both sides of the Atlantic work on elevating the art of the cocktail into a science.

"All of the regular tools of molecular cooking are in play: they're Cryovacing (putting in vacuum-sealed packaging) and slow cooking ingredients, smoke-infusing liquors, carbonating drinks, barrel-aging cocktails, centrifuging juices to get clear liquids, infusing liquors with unexpected ingredients, and using rotary evaporators to get strongly flavored distillates," says Erica Duecy, cocktail historian and author of the upcoming book "Storied Sips." "The high-end bar has become as devoted to this equipment and these techniques as the kitchen."

For Conigliaro, molecular mixology started with people asking questions. "And the more questions people asked you kind of got to points where the only places where you could find the answers were either in the chemistry of food or the science of how it works," he says. "For years and years all we've ever had is recipes passed down and you get shown how to make them and shown what they should be like and how they should taste, but it was scratching below the surface of that and seeing what was actually going on that really proved to be of interest for us."

Kevin K. Liu, author of "Craft Cocktails at Home," sees cocktail chemistry as something that fits into his overarching interest in how science can improve everyday life, something he began exploring while studying technology policy at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. "I wrote the book about cocktails because I thought this was a field where bartenders and customers alike could benefit from some simple scientific knowledge, but I think the concept applies to many other fields as well," he says.

The best of the new breed of drinks look like regular cocktails but "taste like nothing you've tried before," says Duecy. Bartenders like Dave Arnold at Booker & Dax in New York are developing new techniques like nitromuddling (flash-freezing fresh herbs with liquid nitrogen, then crushing them into a powder and incorporating it into the cocktail). What you get — intense herb flavor. What you don't get — herbs stuck in your teeth. And in San Diego, Erick Castro of Polite Provisions, a new bar, works with carbonation so the cocktails are premixed and come out of a kegerator, a refrigerated dispenser, like beer or soda.

One of the best molecular cocktails Duecy has tried was at Eleven Madison Park in New York, where bartenders used liquid nitrogen to make a frozen gin sorbet, which they then mixed with bing cherry syrup and grapefruit juice and topped with Pop Rocks. "The drink is refreshing and clean, yet invigorating and fun with those Pop Rocks crackling in your mouth. Surprise and delight is the reaction molecular mixologists are going for, and that's what this drink delivered." New tools open up new possibilities. For instance, a rotary evaporator is a piece of lab equipment that lets you "boil" water or alcohol at low temperatures. You can put orange juice in and end up with orange water and orange-flavored jam, "both of which would taste clean and fresh," says Liu. Alternatively, you could put in bourbon and end with a super high-proof distillate of bourbon and bourbon-flavored powder. Still, while gadgetry can produce new flavors, it takes a skilled bartender to balance those flavors, notes Liu.

Conigliaro would agree. He may create his cocktails in a lab-like setting, but he serves them in an atmosphere that's anything but clinical. The menu at his Bar 69 in Islington, North London, has just 12 cocktails, three wines and Champagnes, and one beer. The gee-whiz techniques are generally out of sight, though customers who want to know what went into a drink are welcome to ask.

Conigliaro rather likes the idea, he writes in "Cocktail Lab," that "the rest will contentedly sip on a Bloody Mary, blissfully unaware that it took two years to perfect each individual component of their drink." Want to up your home

SWEET BROILED LEMON MARGARITA

Note: Unused lemon juice can be refrigerated for several weeks.

*Start to finish: 25 minutes
Servings: 1*

- 5 Sicilian lemons
- Sugar
- Ice cubes
- 1 1/2 ounces reposado tequila
- 2/3 ounce triple sec liqueur

Heat the oven to broil. Slice the lemons in half, then arrange cut side up on a rimmed baking sheet. Broil at the center of the oven for about 10 minutes, or until the lemons are golden brown. Set aside until cool enough to handle, then juice the lemons into a bowl or 2-cup liquid measuring container. Using a mesh strainer lined with cheesecloth, strain the lemon juice into a blender. Blend for four 25-second bursts. Set aside. Sprinkle a few tablespoons of sugar on a small plate. Use one of the squeezed lemon rinds to moisten the rim of a coupette or other suitable glass for a margarita. Overturn the glass into the sugar and gently move around to coat the rim. Refrigerate the glass until ready to fill. To prepare the cocktail, in cocktail shaker filled with ice, combine the tequila, 3/4 ounce of the broiled lemon juice and the triple sec. Shake well, then strain into the prepared glass.

bartending game? Here are some tips. Duecy: Make sure you're using top quality ingredients, i.e., no shriveled limes. Try infusing liquors or wines with fruit, herbs and even vegetables. Start with vodka until you get familiar with the length of time and results you'll get from certain ingredients. To a vodka-filled jam jar, just drop in some ingredients, and leave the infusion on the counter. Try spices (cardamom, black pepper, horseradish), fruit (pineapple, lemon peel, berries), and vegetables (beets, celery). Liu: Get some gear. Start with a water filter (Why would you fill up half a cocktail with poor-tasting water?). Then get a dual infrared/probe thermometer. Use it to check temperatures, from how cold your freezer gets to whether you've stirred a drink long enough. Conigliaro: Source your ingredients well. Look at not just what you find on the supermarket shelf, but go that little bit further and find those spirits and cordials. Compare one gin to another. Compare your Beefeater to your Tanqueray and see how the drink works and make choices off the back of that. That's how you really kind of understand how things work.

Coca-Cola Opens Myanmar Bottling Plant

BY YADANA HTUN
Associated Press

YANGON, Myanmar • Coca-Cola began bottling its famous soft drink in Myanmar on Tuesday as part of a planned five-year, $200 million investment after having no local production for more than 60 years. The company announced in a press release the ceremonial inauguration of its bottling plant in Hmawbi Township, a suburb of Yangon, the country’s biggest city, with local partner Pinya Manufacturing Co. The return of Coca-Cola Co. is emblematic of the opportunities U.S. companies see in Myanmar as it builds a free market economy after decades of military rule. The economy was socialized after a 1962 military coup, and most investment by U.S. companies was banned after Washington applied economic sanctions against the junta that took power in 1988 due to its repressive policies. The announcement said the investment will help create more than 22,000 related jobs along the supply chain over five years.

Dunkin’ Taking Doughnut Bacon Sandwich National

BY CANDICE CHOI
AP Food Industry Writer

NEW YORK • Even as fast-food chains tout their healthy offerings, they’re also coming up with fatty new treats to keep customers interested. Case in point: Dunkin’ Donuts is adding a doughnut breakfast sandwich to its national menu this week.

The sandwich, which comes with fried eggs and bacon between a split glazed doughnut, will become a part of the permanent menu starting Friday, which the chain claims is “National Donut Day.” Dunkin’ Donuts had tested the sandwich in select stores in eastern Massachusetts in April, creating considerable buzz online. Notably, Dunkin’ Donuts says the “Glazed Donut Breakfast Sandwich” clocks in at 360 calories, which is less than the 390 calories for the turkey sausage sandwich it recently introduced for people looking to eat better.

Dunkin’ Donuts, based in Canton, Mass., is a unit of Dunkin’ Brands Group Inc., which also owns Baskin-Robbins.2

The latest concoction may seem to conflict with the push by companies to court customers with better-for-you offerings. For example, options like egg whites and whole grain bread have become common as fast-food chains scramble to attract people in their 20s and 30s, who they say want fresher, wholesome food.

That desire to give menus a healthier glow isn’t just lip service. Earlier this year, a report by the Hudson Institute found that lower-calorie options were a key indicator of growth at restaurant chains between 2006 and 2011.

The chains that expanded such options saw customer traffic rise by 11 percent, while those that didn’t saw traffic fall by 15 percent, according to the public policy research group.

But at the same time,

companies know that indulgent new creations can generate excitement and a big sales spike. For example, Taco Bell says its Doritos Locos Tacos were its most successful item ever, helping lift sales at established restaurants by 8 percent last year.

Stan Frankenthaler, executive chef and vice president of product innovation at Dunkin’ Donuts, noted that the chain has been growing sales of its breakfast sandwiches in recent years. The profit margins on breakfast sandwiches are second only to beverages, according to a recent company presentation for investors.

As for Dunkin’s recent offerings of a breakfast sandwich with turkey sausage and the new doughnut sandwich, Frankenthaler said they reflect the chain’s goal of offering as much variety as possible.

Already, he noted that people can customize sandwiches in multiple ways, such as requesting that it be made with a certain type of bagel.

When asked whether a customer will also be able to order a sandwich on any type of doughnut, such as a chocolate cake doughnut, Frankenthaler said, “I’m sure the store will do that for you.”

Dunkin’ Brands Group shares rose 46 cents to close at $40.06 on Monday.

Are Nutritional Labels Coming on Alcoholic Drinks?

BY MARY CLARE JALONICK
Associated Press

WASHINGTON • Alcoholic beverages soon could have nutritional labels like those on food packaging, but only if the producers want to put them there.

The Treasury Department, which regulates alcohol, said this past week that beer, wine and spirits companies can use labels that include serving size, servings per container, calories, carbohydrates, protein and fat per serving. Such package labels have never before been approved.

The labels are voluntary, so it will be up to beverage companies to decide whether to use them on their products.

The decision is a temporary, first step while the Alcohol and Tobacco Trade and Tax Bureau, or TTB, continues to consider final rules on alcohol labels. Rules proposed in 2007 would have made labels mandatory, but the agency never made the rules final.

The labeling regulation, issued May 28, comes after a decade of lobbying by hard liquor companies and consumer groups, with clearly different goals.

The liquor companies want to advertise low calories and low carbohydrates in their products. Consumer groups want alcoholic drinks to have the same transparency as packaged foods, which are required to be labeled.

“This is actually bringing alcoholic beverages into the modern era,” says Guy Smith, an executive vice president at Diageo, the world’s largest distiller and maker of such well-known brands as Johnnie Walker, Smirnoff, Jose Cuervo and Tanqueray.

Diageo asked the bureau in 2003 to allow the company to add that information to its products as low-carbohydrate diets were gaining in popularity.

Almost 10 years later, Smith said he expects Diageo gradually to put the new labels on all of its products, which include a small number of beer and wine companies.

“It’s something consumers have come to expect,” Smith said. “In time, it’s going to be, why isn’t it there?”

Not all alcohol companies are expected to use labels.

Among those that may take a pass are beer companies, which don’t want consumers counting calories, and winemakers, which don’t want to ruin the sleek look of their bottles.

The Wine Institute, which represents more than a thousand California wineries, said in a statement that it supports the ruling but “experience suggests that such information is not a key factor in consumer purchase decisions about wine.”

Spokeswoman Gladys Horiuchi said the group knows of no wine companies that plan to use the new labels.

The beer industry praised the agency for acknowledging that labels should take into account variations in the concentration of alcohol content in different products.

The industry has opposed the idea of defining serving size by fluid ounces of pure alcohol — or as 12 ounces of beer, 5 ounces of wine or 1.5 ounces of 80-proof liquor — on the grounds that you may get more than 1.5 ounces of liquor in a cocktail depending on what else is in the drink and the accuracy of the bartender.

2013 Boys Tennis Player of the Year: DALLAS HUNT, TWIN FALLS

BY RYAN HOWE

TWIN FALLS • Dallas Hunt is too humble to talk about himself.

His coach could talk about him all day.

"I cannot say enough good things about this young man," Twin Falls High tennis coach Ann Vogt said of Hunt, the 2013 Times-News tennis player of the year. "He is the heart of this program."

A recently graduated senior, Hunt finished his high school tennis career with back-to-back Class 4A state runner-up finishes in boys singles.

"There's always room for improvement," Hunt shrugged. "I just tried to win every match."

For this story, Hunt was pelted with various questions about his tennis prowess. He couldn't find many poignant answers, instead requesting that the article include his thank-you to coaches Vogt, Sean Timoney and Tiffany Milan, as well as practice partner Kory Putnam.

teammates," Hunt said.

He showed his gratitude by giving back to the sport. For his senior project, Hunt taught tennis at the Boys and Girls Club.

In addition, Vogt says Hunt would recruit new kids to College of Southern Idaho's tennis courts for the Wednesday Night Lights summer program. Hunt would try to keep everybody involved, regardless of age or skill level.

"That's why we love him. He just wants to play and he will play with anybody, and he will teach anybody," Vogt said.

In two weeks, Hunt will head off to Argentina for a two-year LDS Church mission.

"He's really going to be missed," Vogt said. "He is great as a student and as an athlete. He's just a humble guy who just happens to be a virtuoso with the racquet."

Switzerland's Roger Federer leaves the court after losing to France's Jo-Wilfried Tsonga during their quarterfinal match of the French Open tennis tournament at the Roland Garros stadium Tuesday in Paris. Tsonga won 7-5, 6-3, 6-3.

PARIS • By Roger Federer's standards, defeat came early in the French Open. And it came quickly.

The 17-time Grand Slam champion lost Tuesday in the quarterfinals to Jo-Wilfried Tsonga of France, 7-5, 6-3, 6-3.

Federer was eliminated before the semifinals for the second time in past three Grand Slam tournaments, but only the fifth time in the past nine years at a major event. Tsonga was responsible for two of the losses — he also beat Federer in the quarterfinals at Wimbledon in 2011.

"I'm pretty sad about the match and the way I played," Federer said. "He was in all areas better than me today. That's why the result was pretty clean."

Serena Williams narrowly averted Federer's fate. She came from behind in the third set and advanced to the French Open semifinals for the first time since 2003 when she defeated Svetlana Kuznetsova 6-1, 3-6, 6-3.

Williams had been beaten the last four times she reached the Roland Garros quarterfinals, most recently in 2010. The 15-time Grand Slam champion, who is ranked No. 1, won her only French Open title in 2002.

"I just got tired of losing in the quarters," she said. "I was so determined to get through that, and I really, really, really wanted it more than I think anyone. So I think that kind of helped."

Tsonga earned his first berth in the Roland Garros semifinals and is trying to become the first Frenchman to win the tournament since Yannick Noah in 1983. He's the first Frenchman to reach the semifinals since Gael Monfils in 2008.

"I can't have better a dream," Tsonga told the center court crowd. "So far I play very well. I played against a champion today, a guy who has won everything. Today it's my turn."

On Friday he'll play No. 4-seeded David Ferrer, who beat fellow Spaniard Tommy Robredo 6-2, 6-1, 6-1.

Tsonga was runner-up to Novak Djokovic at the 2008

Serena Williams, of the U.S., returns the ball to Russia's Svetlana Kuznetsova during their quarterfinal match of the French Open tennis tournament at the Roland Garros stadium Tuesday in Paris. Williams won 6-1, 3-6, 6-3.

Australian Open, his best Grand Slam result. Ranked No. 8, he dominated Federer with his blend of power and athleticism.

"Give some credit to the old Jo-Willy Tsonga, please," Federer said.

Federer took a 4-2 lead but played like a mere mortal after that as the match rapidly slipped away. He blew three overheads, missed several easy volleys, hit no aces, dropped serve six times and took a shot to the body on the point that put Tsonga ahead to stay in the final set.

Facing a break point, Federer sliced a drop shot, and Tsonga raced forward to scoop it up. He whacked a backhand that clipped the net cord and then drilled Federer under his right arm.

That made it 4-3, and Tsonga quickly won the final two games. When he closed out the victory, Federer greeted him with a gracious smile and a congratulatory pat on the stomach.

A jubilant Tsonga then went spinning across the court, waving his arms as the partisan crowd roared. Federer, long a fan favorite in Paris, also earned a lusty cheer as he headed to the exit. He responded by applauding the crowd.

"I should have won the first set," Federer said.

"Unfortunately I couldn't regroup."

The last time Federer lost to a player ranked so low in a major tournament was at Wimbledon two years ago, when the No. 19-ranked Tsonga overcame a two-set deficit to beat him.

The French Open has always been the most difficult major event for Federer. He won his lone Roland Garros title in 2009 to complete a career Grand Slam and tie Pete Sampras' record of 14 major titles.

Now 31, he has yet to win any tournament in 2013, his longest drought to start a year since 2000.

Williams is also 31 but playing at her peak — although that wasn't the case for a long stretch against Kuznetsova. Williams overcame an inconsistent serve, erratic groundstrokes and a 2-love deficit in the final set, winning five consecutive games and then closing the victory with a forehand winner and a scream.

"Yes!" she hollered.

It was the first real test of the tournament for Williams, who lost 10 games after losing a total of 10 games in her four earlier matches. She laughed at herself, screamed at herself, violently shook her uncooperative racket and cocked it over her head, threatening to fling it before she changed her mind.

Williams finally found a way out of her funk — and into the semifinals. She extended her career-best winning streak to 29 consecutive matches.

In a post-match on-court interview, Williams seemed spent.

"I'm very happy to have won this quarterfinal because the whole night I was afraid of my quarterfinal match," she told the crowd in French. "It was a very tough match today, but it's good for me because, I don't know, but it's very good. I am exhausted."

Kuznetsova said strained an abdominal muscle early in the tournament, which hampered her serve, but her aggressive returns kept pressure on Williams.

"I did push her to the limit I think today, even without my serve," Kuznetsova said. "I was serving like, I don't know, a grandmother."

Williams is the first American woman to reach the French Open semifinals since Jennifer Capriati in 2004. Her opponent Thursday will be 2012 runner-up Sara Errani, who advanced by beating No. 4 Agnieszka Radwanska 6-4, 7-6 (6).

Williams is 5-0 against Errani.

NBA FINALS

Spoelstra, Popovich Making the Right Moves

ASSOCIATED PRESS

MIAMI • Other than being widely known by just the first syllable of their surnames, the coaches who will match wits in these NBA Finals may seem like polar opposites.

Of course, they would probably disagree with that assertion.

Miami's Erik Spoelstra wears sharp suits and is a stats guy; San Antonio's Gregg Popovich often skips the tie and would immeasurably prefer to answer questions about wine than anything about himself. Both are intensely private, but even during an NBA Finals loaded with star power — the "Big Three" from Miami, the "Big Three" from San Antonio, a four-time MVP in LeBron James, a four-time champion in Tim Duncan — the coaches will share misery in one way.

To their chagrin, Spo and Pop will be in the spotlight.

"It's easier to talk about how they are similar versus how they are dissimilar," said ESPN analyst Jeff Van Gundy, a former NBA coach who is part of the broadcast team for the series that opens Thursday in Miami. "They are both going to the Hall of Fame. They both have tremendous respect from the coaches they coach against, and they both have a level of humility that I believe shows NBA coaching in the most positive light possible."

Spoelstra is in the finals for the third straight year and is looking for a second consecutive championship. Popovich is going for his fifth title, the last of the ones currently in his collection coming over James and the Cleveland Cavaliers in 2007, and could join Phil Jackson as the only coaches to win championships in three different decades.

So far, only Jackson, Red Auerbach, John Kundla and Pat Riley — Spoelstra's mentor and boss in Miami — have five rings as a head coach.

"Maybe I don't show it the way I should, but it's pretty special," Popovich said, in a rare moment of near-sheepishness, after his team beat Memphis and won the West title for a fifth time. "I'm just really proud of the group the way they worked all year long to get there, and I'm sure that we've been a team that's probably been written off like they've had their day."

Spoelstra took over for Riley five seasons ago, has won nearly twice as many games as he's lost, and has endured a constant circus of distractions ever since the Heat acquired James and Chris Bosh to play alongside Dwyane Wade in 2010. San Antonio hasn't had anywhere near that sort of scrutiny; being in a smaller market helps keep the level of attention down.

By now, Spoelstra doesn't even notice what he calls "the noise." Even in the din of an Eastern Conference championship celebration on Monday night — actually during the trophy presentation ceremony — Spoelstra found his mind drifting away from the grind of facing the Indiana Pacers and onto the next challenge, this duel with the Spurs for the NBA title.

"It's one of those few times in competitive team sports you're not thinking about tomorrow, you're not thinking about the previous games, you're not thinking about what possibly may happen, you're not thinking about the reward. All you're thinking about is the desperation of that moment," Spoelstra said. "That's a great place to live."

And then ...

"It probably hit me right about then, and it was the 'ohh' type moment," Spoelstra said. "We have to get our act together in the next 48 hours. ... They are a great organization. I think the two organizations from afar have always respected each other for similar foundations and culture."

The coaches have items designed to inspire players in their respective locker rooms, a famous quote about a stonemason for the Spurs, a replica of the championship trophy with the words "All In" emblazoned on it for the Heat. Both believe in loyalty, proven by the fact neither has changed work addresses in nearly two decades.

Maybe they're not so different after all.

"Both sides have great coaches. A great coaching staff," Wade said. "They're going to get their team prepared as well as they can. Obviously San Antonio has a system. Obviously they have certain players that's featured in the system, that have been featured awhile, many years for them. That's not a surprise."

"We're going to have to make adjustments every game, throughout the series."

There may be no coach in the league with more open disdain for in-game interviews, the ones taking place at the end of the first and third quarters of nationally televised games, than Popovich.

It's not personal. He'd simply rather coach than talk.

"He says what he needs to say and he gets out," Duncan said. "So I guess I've learned that much. ... I think it's hilarious. I think it's awesome. As I said, he's direct. He says what he needs to say and he gets out of there."

Popovich has proven that time and again. In these playoffs alone, some of his interview highlights included calling half-seriously calling Duncan a pain in the butt, talking about wanting to trade Manu Ginobili over poor shot selection, prefacing his response to a question by warning a reporter he was about to receive a trite answer, and offering this gem when asked for his favorite part of the gameday process.

"Dinner," Popovich said.

Spoelstra clearly embraces banter with the media more, though it's almost impossible to get him to reveal much of his innermost thoughts or workings. He rarely has revealed any facet of his personal life. And just this week, when asked about how many hours coaches log in the playoffs, he had a two-word answer.

"That's irrelevant," he said.

STANLEY CUP PLAYOFFS

LA Kings Beat Chicago 3-1 in Game 3 of West Finals

ASSOCIATED PRESS

LOS ANGELES • Slava Voynov had a goal and an assist, Jonathan Quick made 19 saves, and the Los Angeles Kings beat Chicago 3-1 in Game 3 of the Western Conference finals on Tuesday night, trimming the Blackhawks' series lead to 2-1.

Justin Williams also scored and Dwight King added an empty-net goal in the defending Stanley Cup champions' 15th consecutive home victory since March. The Kings have won eight straight home playoff games, dating to last season's title clincher, and they never trailed while ending the top-seeded Blackhawks' five-game postseason winning streak.

Game 4 is Thursday night.

Bryan Bickell scored and Corey Crawford stopped 25 shots for the Blackhawks, who chased Quick from Game 2 and earned back-to-back home victories to open the series last weekend.

The Kings had lost five of their previous seven playoff games before getting back to friendly Staples Center and their sellout crowd. Quick also returned to Conn Smythe Trophy form in Game 3, highlighted by a dazzling late save on Bickell, while his low-scoring teammates generated just enough offense to hold off the Blackhawks, who hadn't lost since Game 4 of the second round.

Jeff Carter had two assists during an inspired effort despite the absence of injured linemate Mike Richards, and Voynov had his fourth multipoint game in a prolific postseason.

Bruins Return Home with Chance to Sweep Penguins

BY HOWARD ULMAN
AP Sports Writer

BOSTON • Sidney Crosby and the potent Penguins have been punchless.

Pittsburgh led the NHL in scoring in the regular season. It averaged 4.27 goals per game in the first two rounds of the playoffs. And it poured in 13 goals in the last two games of the Eastern Conference semifinals.

Since then?
No addition necessary.

The Penguins have just one goal in two losses on their home ice to the Boston Bruins. To play there again this season, they must win Wednesday or Friday and avoid what seemed so improbable just a few days ago — being swept in the best-of-seven conference finals.

“Right now, we’re not liking the picture, down 0-2. They’re in control,” Penguins coach Dan Bylsma said. “I don’t think we’re frustrated by the fact that we haven’t scored as much as (the fact that) they’re getting up leads, especially in Game 2.”

The Bruins won the opener 3-0 but led just 1-0 after two periods. The second game was much different. They rolled to a 4-1 lead after one period and remained aggressive in finishing off their 6-1 rout. The Penguins’ effort waned as the game went on.

“I didn’t do anything, didn’t change anything. It felt like every time we had a puck that was bouncing, we ended up giving it away,” Crosby said. “We gave them the game. We didn’t really do anything to give ourselves a chance to win.”

Combine that with the Bruins’ high level of play — disciplined on defense, organized on offense — and the pre-series chatter about the Penguins being favorites seems like so much nonsense.

But any talk that Boston will have an easy path to the Stanley Cup finals is just as premature.

“We’re going to have to play even better than we did because they’re going to be desperate,” Boston’s David Krejci said.

With a day off to ponder their problems and work at eliminating them, the Penguins’ offense could resurface. “It’s about what we do in the next game,” Boston defenseman Andrew Ference said, “not about patting ourselves on the back for what’s already happened.”

Do-It-Yourself Ideas

Sun Trellis

When it's hot, a sun trellis like this one extends a home's living area, provides a shady place for barbecues and shields people and pets from the summer sun.

Although this sun trellis project is large—either 12 feet by 16 feet or 12 feet by 24 feet—it's really not difficult. Its simple post-and-beam construction uses mostly standard cuts of rough Douglas fir, which can be painted or stained. Do-it-yourselfers can substitute cedar, pine or another weather-resistant lumber.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE®

Bobby Wolff

“I’m all in favor of keeping dangerous weapons out of the hands of fools. Let’s start with typewriters.”

— Solomon Short

.....

Professional courtesy among journalists (some would call it honor among thieves) prevents me from specifying which of my colleagues ran this deal in one of his books.

The author suggested that in four spades, declarer should find the winning line of ducking the first spade after winning the club lead in dummy. That holds the trump losers to one and is certainly a successful line — though it would fail against 3-2 trumps, since the defenders can switch to hearts and promote East’s third trump!

The writer also goes a step too far when he says that this line is essential if you want to make the contract.

Let’s revisit the play on a club lead to dummy’s ace. Declarer leads a trump to the king and ace, and the defenders now have a choice. On a heart shift, declarer ducks, then wins the next heart to play the spade queen, jack and a third trump, then claims the rest. If West switches back to clubs after the first heart holds, declarer ruffs and plays ace and another heart, ruffing in dummy. East does best to discard, but declarer comes to hand with a diamond and ruffs the fourth heart. All the defenders score is their trump trick.

It looks better for the defenders to lead a top club at trick three. Declarer ruffs, and only now does he lead a low trump! East wins and plays another club; declarer discards a heart from hand and ruffs the next club in dummy, comes to hand with a diamond, draws trump and claims.

ANSWER: This auction suggests partner has real clubs as well as four hearts. (With a balanced hand, partner would rebid one no-trump; our sequence strongly suggests we have no major if we have less than invitational values.) Nonetheless, my choice is to rebid one no-trump here, despite possibly wrong-siding our spade stop. We can always get back to clubs if partner is minimum and shapely.

Today is Wednesday, June 5, the 156th day of 2013. There are 209 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight:

On June 5, 1963, Britain's Secretary of State for War, John Profumo, resigned after acknowledging an affair with a call girl, Christine Keeler (who was also involved with a Soviet spy), and lying to Parliament about it; while there was no finding of a security breach, the scandal helped bring down the Conservative government of Prime Minister Harold Macmillan.

TODAY IN HISTORY

On this date:

In 1794, Congress passed the Neutrality Act, which prohibited Americans from taking part in any military action against a country that was at peace with the United States.

In 1884, Civil War hero Gen. William T. Sherman refused the Republican presidential nomination, saying, "I will not accept if nominated and will not serve if elected."

In 1916, the Arab Revolt against Turkish Ottoman rule began during World War I.

In 1933, the United States went off the gold standard.

In 1940, during the World War II Battle of France, Germany attacked French forces along the Somme line.

In 1947, Secretary of State George C. Marshall gave a speech at Harvard University in which he outlined an aid program for Europe that came to be known as The Marshall Plan.

In 1950, the U.S. Supreme Court, in Henderson v. United States, struck down racially segregated railroad dining cars.

In 1967, war erupted in the Mideast as Israel raided military aircraft parked on the ground in Egypt; Syria, Jordan and Iraq entered the conflict.

In 1968, Sen. Robert F. Kennedy was assassinated in Los Angeles' Ambassador Hotel after claiming victory in California's Democratic presidential primary. Gunman Sirhan Bishara Sirhan was immediately arrested.

In 1976, 14 people were killed when the Teton Dam in Idaho burst.

In 1993, country star Conway Twitty died in Springfield, Mo., at age 59.

In 2004, Ronald Wilson Reagan, the 40th president of the United States, died in Los Angeles at age 93 after a long struggle with Alzheimer's disease.

Ten years ago: Speaking to American soldiers in Qatar, President George W. Bush argued the U.S.-led invasion of Iraq was justified and pledged that "we'll reveal the truth" on Saddam Hussein's weapons of mass destruction. The United States agreed to pull its ground troops away from the Demilitarized Zone separating North and South Korea. The New York Times' top two editors resigned in the wake of the Jayson Blair scandal.

Five years ago: Defense Secretary Robert Gates ousted Air Force Chief of Staff Gen. Michael Moseley and Air Force Secretary Michael Wynne, holding them to account in a historic Pentagon shake-up after embarrassing nuclear mix-ups. Barack Obama and Hillary Rodham Clinton met privately at the Washington home of Sen. Dianne Feinstein, the first such get-together since Obama clinched the Democratic presidential nomination. Khalid Sheikh Mohammed, the reputed mastermind of the Sept. 11 attacks, told a military judge at his arraignment he welcomed the death penalty as a way to martyrdom and ridiculed the proceedings as an "inquisition." Astronauts opened up Japan's new billion-dollar space station lab, Kibo, aboard the international space station.

One year ago: Wisconsin Republican Gov. Scott Walker beat back a recall challenge, winning both the right to finish his term and a voter endorsement of his strategy to curb state spending. Jury selection began in Bellefonte, Pa., in the trial of Jerry Sandusky, the former Penn State assistant football coach charged with child sexual abuse. (Sandusky was later convicted of 45 counts and sentenced to 30 to 60 years in prison.) Science-fiction author Ray Bradbury, 91, died in Los Angeles.

DEAR ABBY: I'm a single mother of two amazing boys, 16 and 12. While my older son has been private about coming into puberty, my younger son is very open about it, and we have had many conversations about it. Abby, I'll be honest. The subject makes me uncomfortable.

DEAR ABBY
Jeanne Phillips

Last night I walked into my 12-year-old's room and interrupted him pleasuring himself. I was shocked, and I started to laugh because I was embarrassed. I did tell him he needed to be more private about his curiosity, to close the door and have a blanket over himself. But I was laughing when I was talking to him and literally could not stop.

I'm unsure what is the right course of action at this point. Where do I go from here?

— EMBARRASSED MOM

DEAR EMBARRASSED: Masturbation is natural. Every healthy, normal person has done it. It is not depraved, a crime or harmful to one's health.

Your son is now at an age when it is appropriate for Mom to knock before entering his room out of respect for his privacy. So: Apologize to your son for laughing. Explain that it was because you were embarrassed.

If your children's father is in the picture (or another male relative), a man-to-man talk about this could be helpful. If there isn't one, consult your sons' pediatrician for suggestions on how to discuss sexuality with both of your boys. If you haven't already done so, the time has arrived.

DEAR ABBY: My brother, three sisters and their husbands and children and I go to our parents' house for holiday dinners. My youngest sister's husband refuses to go because he doesn't get along with our family. (He also does not get along with his own family.)

Before my youngest sister leaves, she insists on taking a plate of food home for her husband who was "unable to be there." I feel if he doesn't want to be with our family, he shouldn't be allowed to have takeout. Our mother is 82, and it upsets her that he doesn't want to be there. What do you think?

— RESENTFUL

DEAR RESENTFUL: If your brother-in-law can't get along with the family, he is doing everyone a favor by not attending those family dinners. Because your mother finds his absence upsetting, it is up to her to put her foot down and tell your sister she doesn't want food taken to him. Until she does, food deliveries will continue.

DEAR ABBY: I, too, am disgusted with people who answer their cellphones wherever and whenever.

I was at a funeral last week where this twit answered her cellphone while viewing the deceased in his casket. She was literally kneeling beside the casket when her phone rang, and she carried on a conversation with the caller for a full three minutes. I timed it!

I know some people may think this is funny or no big deal. I suggest that those who feel that way should learn manners. Unless you're a doctor or some other emergency caretaker, there is no reason to take a call while in the company of others.

— MICHAEL IN ROCHESTER, N.Y.

DEAR MICHAEL: I agree. When attending a funeral or a memorial, cellphones should be TURNED OFF out of respect not only for the deceased, but for the others around you.

Dear Abby is written by Abigail Van Buren, also known as Jeanne Phillips, and was founded by her mother, Pauline Phillips. Write Dear Abby at www.DearAbby.com or P.O. Box 69440, Los Angeles, CA 90069.

IF JUNE 5 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: You may be at your best handling your resources, making business decisions or pursuing career objectives during the next five weeks. Late July or late August are excellent times for a vacation, but prepare to buckle down for some hard work in October. Wait until after Thanksgiving to make a crucial decision or tweak a business deal and it will be easier to strike a comfortable compromise. December is the best time to launch important initiatives or make commitments. This is also a good time to ask for professional advice from a doctor, lawyer, or other expert.

HOROSCOPE

Jeraldine Saunders

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Don't drop out of the race until you've passed the finish line. All the good intentions in the world mean nothing if you don't see a job through to the end. Keep on trucking.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Adopt a "never say die" attitude and you'll quickly finish with something that seems overwhelming. Capitalize on the fact that key people see you as better than you really are.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Watch your wallet. Beware of a passing obsession with something and be sure that what you do buy is worthwhile. Save major purchases for another day.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): A fascinating admirer may have you wrapped around his or her finger, but that may mean there are strings attached. A thriving romantic attraction doesn't necessarily guarantee a ring on your finger.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): The real secret to having it all is realizing that you already do. Adjust your thinking and reevaluate your goals so you balance material desires with spiritual aims. Remember that money can't buy happiness.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): A taste for fabulous fakes may fan the flames of desire. Sidestep crucial financial decisions until you're better equipped to sort out your choices. Don't settle for glass when diamonds are available.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Let passing fads pass you by. What seems important and necessary to you right now may be passé in a flash. Re-assess your goals and ask a friend or professional to act as a sounding board.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Regular exercise is key to a sound body and a clear mind. Take a time out to reflect on a problem rather than acting on it. A brisk walk in the middle of the day will relieve stress if you're overloaded at work.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Become results-driven. Prove that you're capable of backing up everything you say with action. There's no time to take it easy, even though you've been given a green light.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): If you put off until tomorrow what you could do today, you'll end up buried in work just when you planned a long weekend out of town. Avoid becoming involved with someone enticing who may distract you and waste your time.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Accentuate the positive in your work and life. The people who are good for you will lift your spirits, but those who don't have your best interests at heart won't get a foot in the door.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Don't get caught with your hand in the till. You might be briefly tempted to help yourself to the fruits of someone else's labors. It's easier on everyone if you stick to a strict set of ethical principles.

Sudoku is a number-placing puzzle based on a 9x9 grid with several given numbers. The object is to place the numbers 1 to 9 in the empty squares so that each row, each column and each 3x3 box contains the same number only once. The difficulty level of the Conceptis Sudoku increases from Monday to Sunday.
