Decipher
Star Ratings

BY JULIE WOOTTON
jwootton@magicvalley.com

TWIN FALLS • More than half of Idaho’s schools received four- or five-star ratings Thursday under the state’s new accountability system.

One star is the lowest rating, and five stars is the best in the ratings released by the Idaho Department of Education.

A few south-central Idaho schools received top marks: Albion Elementary in Cassia County, Dietrich School and two schools in the Blaine County School District — Wood River and Silver Creek high schools.

“I think you have to work hard to get a five,” Dietrich Superintendent Neil Hollingshead said.

His school, which has 240 students in kindergarten through 12th grades, received a four-star rating last year and barely reached the threshold to add a star. But it’s received a couple of awards since 2007 for students gaining 10 percent or more on test scores, Hollingshead said, and many students are testing at 90 percent or higher in math and reading.

Teachers also have tried to bring all students from the “proficient” to “advanced” level on Idaho Standards Achievement Tests (ISAT), he said.

Last October, the U.S. Department of Education approved Idaho’s No Child Left Behind waiver, providing relief from federal mandates.

Now Idaho public schools are judged under the five-star system. It’s the second year the state has used the system.

Ratings are based on multiple measures, including academic growth and how many students reach grade level or better on the ISAT.

High school ratings include graduation rates, the number of students completing advanced courses and scores on college entrance exams.

The state will publicly recognize three- to five-star schools, though three-star schools must develop improvement plans.

The state has identified areas needing improvement in one- and two-star schools, and they also will need to create plans to address the deficiencies.

TWIN FALLS • Inside Glanbia’s new downtown center, food scientists soon will look to explore new cheese frontiers, revitalize the company’s passion and expand its footprint in the global cheese industry.

Those in the local business community have equally lofty expectations of how the center’s arrival could help revitalize the downtown, local and regional economy.

“The idea is to create a little more passion for cheese for all of our employees,” Glanbia President and CEO Jeff Williams said. “Having a physical asset that does that is a daily reminder that’s what we’re all about — creating passion around cheese, being more excited about it and getting involved with our customers.”

Those close to the situation expect the center to generate a four-fold growth — cheese production within the company, Glanbia employees generating more downtown business, leading growth in

Magic Valley Firefighters Stay Busy

BY KIMBERLEE KRUESI

TWIN FALLS • The neatly trimmed cornfields served as the backdrop to the hazy mess of flames smoldering just outside of Eden.

Burning nearly 1,500 acres, the Southeast Red Bridge fire threatened structures — including a mobile trailer and water pump — and forced a road closure Thursday.

As of Thursday night, no structures had been damaged.

Officials couldn’t say how long South Eden Road would remain closed.

Prosecutors: Twin Falls Woman Stole $100K from Medicaid Over a Decade

BY ALISON GENE SMITH
alismith@magicvalley.com

TWIN FALLS • A deputy coroner has been accused of stealing more than $100,000 from Medicaid and lying about transporting patients for medical care.

Shaiyenne Anton, 39, was arraigned Wednesday in Twin Falls County District Court on charges of fraudulently presenting a false claim for public assistance, grand theft, two counts of forgery, computer crime and obstructing an investigation.

Anton billed for nearly $106,000 in mileage reimbursement over the course of a decade, as she lied about taking Medicaid patients to and from medical appointments, say investigators from the state Medicaid Fraud Control Unit.

She began working with Medicaid on June 1, 2000, as an individual non-emergency transportation provider, says a court affidavit.

She was terminated from the Medicaid program on March 5, 2012.

The federal health program for the poor reimburses providers for non-emergency transportation of patients to and from appointments covered by Medicaid.

The criminal complaint against Anton says she made fraudulent claims that she provided services for 20 Medicaid patients.

Investigators compared data showing all claims Anton billed to Medicaid from Jan. 1, 2000, through June 21, 2011, and data from Idaho Medicaid

THE MARKET AT A GLANCE

S&P 500 Closes above 1,700 Points for First Time

NEW YORK (AP) • Stocks roared back to record highs on Thursday, driven by good news on the economy.

The Standard & Poor's 500, the Dow Jones industrial average and the Russell 2000 index set all-time highs. The S&P broke through 1,700 points for the first time. The Nasdaq hit its highest level since September 2000.

The gains were driven by a steady flow of encouraging reports on the global economy.

West Nile Virus Found in Gooding County Mosquitoes

TIMES-NEWS

GOODING • Health officials have found West Nile virus in mosquitoes in Gooding County.

Health officials confirmed that the mosquitoes were carrying the disease Monday, according to the Idaho Department of Health and Welfare.

This is the eighth Idaho county that tested positive for West Nile this year. So far, only one person in Idaho has reported catching the disease, in Payette County.

West Nile is a potentially fatal illness that spreads from animals to humans through the bite of an infected mosquito. While most infected people do not show symptoms, West Nile can cause fever, headaches, body aches, fatigue, nausea, vomiting, eye pain and sometimes swollen lymph glands or a skin rash.

In some cases, West Nile might affect the central nervous system.

Ways to Protect Against Mosquitoes:

- Use insect repellent containing an EPA-registered active ingredient, such as DEET or Picaridin. Parents are advised not to apply repellent containing more than 10 percent DEET on children.
- In addition to repellent, wear long sleeves, pants and loose-fitting clothing at dawn and dusk, when mosquitoes are most active.

- Keep doors closed and check screens to keep mosquitoes out.
- Remove mosquito breeding sites by draining standing water from flower pots, buckets and barrels. Be sure to regularly change the water in pet dishes and bird baths. Drill holes in tire swings or old tires so water can drain out.
- Empty children's wading pools when not in use.
- Don't over-irrigate your lawns, gardens or pastures.

For more information on West Nile, visit the South Central Public Health District's website at www.phd5.idaho.gov or the Twin Falls County's Pest Abatement District website at www.tfcpad.questoffice.net.

Lower Temps Today

A weather system that brought us rain and storms Wednesday and gusty winds Thursday will finally move east on Friday. Lower temperatures will move in behind the storm system Friday, and that means we will actually see temperatures below normal. High temperatures on Friday will climb into the lower 80s in the valleys. That's about 10 degrees below the normal high of 91. Temperatures in the mountains will climb into the upper 70s.

By this weekend, the jet stream will move back north, and that means temperatures will be on the rise. By Saturday, we will see sunny skies with temperatures back into the upper 80s. Sunday will be even warmer with sunny skies and temperatures into the lower 90s. The hot weather will stick with us most of next week.

We will see sunny skies and temperatures in the lower to middle 90s on Monday and Tuesday. Some moisture will move back into the area by Wednesday and Thursday, so we could see a few isolated thunderstorms back in the forecast.

Brandon Redmond is a reporter and weather anchor for KMVT-TV and KTWT Fox 14.

Police: Nurse Prescribed Herself Pain Meds

BY ALISON GENE SMITH
alismith@magicvalley.com

TWIN FALLS • A nurse at St. Luke’s Mountain States Tumor Institute illegally prescribed herself pain pills for about two years, using a doctor’s signature, police say.

Rebecca L. Haskins, 46, was arraigned Wednesday in Twin Falls County District Court on six counts of obtaining a controlled substance by fraud.

A police report gave this account of the investigation: On April 16, institute director Melissa Fenderson told police that a refill request came in by fax for Norco 10, also known as hydrocodone/acetaminophen, for Haskins, a registered nurse at the tumor institute. The refill was to go to a doctor for a signature, but a triage nurse who saw the fax recognized that Haskins was an employee, not a patient.

Fenderson talked to the doctor, who said he never wrote a Norco prescription for Haskins.

The doctor contacted the pharmacy and learned that Haskins had obtained Norco 21 times, with the doctor as the listed prescriber.

When Fenderson confronted Haskins, she claimed the drugstore had messed up and sent the request to the wrong provider. But Haskins confessed after being shown paperwork from the state Board of Pharmacy, showing 62 times when she got Norco pills under the doctor’s name, Fenderson said.

The nurse said she had called in the pain pill prescription for herself under the doctor’s license but without his consent.

The doctor told police that the pharmacy documents show Haskins wrote prescriptions for herself for about two years.

Police said Haskins admitted as much to them, saying it was common practice for her to write patients’ prescriptions and have the doctor sign them, to save him time. That’s how she was able to fill prescriptions using the signature of the doctor for whom she worked eight years.

The Board of Pharmacy report shows Haskins received about 480 pills in March.

The large number of pills raised police suspicion that she might be selling them. Haskins adamantly denied that she was selling pills, saying they were for personal use and she never used them at work.

Haskins told police she was prescribed Norco after a shoulder injury and became addicted.

She’s set a preliminary hearing on Aug. 12.

Gooding Woman Killed in Highway 46 Crash

GOODING • One person was killed and another injured in a crash Thursday morning in Gooding County.

Just before 7 a.m., Bertha Ramos-Flores, 33, of Gooding, was driving north on Highway 46 near Shoestring Road. For unknown reasons, her 2001 Honda Accord crossed the center line, forcing another vehicle off the road.

Peter Orth, 49, of Gooding, was driving southbound in a 2007 Ford Econoline van when Ramos-Flores crossed into his lane. The two collided head-on.

Ramos-Flores succumbed to her injuries at the scene. Orth was transported by ambulance to North Canyon Medical Center. By Thursday afternoon, hospital staff said he was no longer a patient there.

Orth was wearing a seat-belt, but Ramos-Flores was not.

Highway 46 was blocked for about three hours because of the accident.

Growing from Within

Wednesday’s grand opening will feature speakers starting at 10 a.m. and guided tours of the recently completed center at 161 Fourth Ave. S.

The event is open to the business community, and tours can be reserved on a first-come, first-served basis, marketing manager Whitney Beem said. The event also will feature cheese tastings in an “around-the-world format,” she said.

The innovation center will allow Glanbia to experiment with cheese by making small, 100-pound batches instead of the 1,000-pound lots the company makes now at its local commercial plants, Williams said.

Food scientists will work “shoulder to shoulder” with customers to make new cheeses. Williams said he’s coining the phrase “innovation around the edges” to illustrate that the company won’t stray far from what has made it successful — high-volume, low-cost, top-quality commodity cheese.

“Our goal is to be more and more relevant to our customers,” he said. When someone “has an idea, we’ll be on their speed dial.”

Glanbia expects about 60 percent of the innovation center’s work to come from customers’ ideas. About 30 percent will be ideas generated from marketplace trends, and 10 percent will be “blue sky or serendipitous” activity, he said. The latter is where Glanbia will let its scientists “play around.”

Cheese innovation is a broad subject, but “accelerated aging” is an example of what the company hopes to accomplish, Williams said. Scientists can use certain enzymes to mature cheese more quickly than the natural aging process.

A culinary center will let employees use the cheese the same way customers do.

“We can bake it, stretch it, cook it — do things that our customers would do with it, like put it on a pizza,” he said. “Then we’ll be able to shred it, slice it, dice it, chunk it and those sorts of things.”

In March, Glanbia bought a Blackfoot cheese plant one-third the size of its Twin Falls factory specifically to be an “incubator plant,” Williams said.

“So the plan is to take the things we make in the cheese innovation center, and then we’ll go to commercialize those. Once a customer gives us a big order, we’ll want to make the cheese on a commercial basis, and we’ll take it to our Blackfoot plant.”

The idea for the innovation center came from a “very successful” similar model Glanbia uses in its whey protein division.

“I can’t think of any of our competitors that have a cheese innovation center like we’ll have,” Williams said.

Planting a Seed

Glanbia employees moved into their new offices about two weeks ago, and Williams said he’s seen what their presence can do for downtown businesses. He went to a small area restaurant the other day and saw nine Glanbia employees already there.

“I think it’ll be huge for downtown Twin Falls,” he said. “People are just going to go out the door, hit Main Avenue and hit some of the sandwich places. I’m hoping that someone opens up a few more restaurants down there.”

A few blocks down from the new Glanbia center, Adair Johnson was busy Monday, July 29, hanging a chandelier from Stonehouse and Co.’s ceiling. Johnson and his wife hope to open the building in mid-August for catering events.

Glanbia will be a magnet that draws people to the area and allows other businesses to thrive, Johnson predicted.

“We’re glad to have them in the area, and it’s going to... benefit everybody,” he said.

Johnson said he’s also reassured by Glanbia’s presence. Although much of Stonehouse’s business will come from elsewhere, he said he hopes the cheese company will notice his space.

“In the business that we’re in, we hope to host some of Glanbia’s meetings and parties and stuff like that,” he said. “It’ll be very beneficial. But a lot of our (business) is going to be weddings and several business meetings, as well.”

Ryan Horsley, general manager of Red’s Trading Post in the warehouse district near Stonehouse, said he is pleased to see Glanbia moving into the neighborhood. Although Glanbia employees might not be his direct customers, he said, it’s exciting to be part of business growth.

“You bring these people down, and they want a place to shop, they want a place to go eat,” he said. “It drives more people down here.”

Glanbia and St. Luke’s Magic Valley Patient Financial Services building, remodeled in 2010 from the old Crumb Building, showcase the area’s potential, he said.

Several other new restaurants and businesses have decided to build or move into downtown in recent years, said Horsley, a former member of the Twin Falls Planning and Zoning Commission.

Lots are cheap and plentiful, and empty warehouses can be renovated or torn down to accommodate growth constrained by Twin Falls’ natural barriers — the Snake River Canyon to the north and Rock Creek to the west, he said.

“A lot of people don’t see it right away, but if you take a look at the growing trend, the momentum that’s building, there’s a lot of exciting things that are happening (downtown),” Horsley said.

Gaining Momentum

The warehouse district just off Main Avenue looks “significantly different” than it did five years ago, said city spokesman Joshua Palmer. The city’s Urban Renewal Agency (URA) has helped clean and develop the area, he said.

“If you would have looked at those streets five years ago, the curb was at best gravel and the road was not very good,” Palmer said. “There was no parking, dirt fields and a closed-down nightclub” where Glanbia now sits.

URA spent $1.25 million preparing the Glanbia site, said Melinda Anderson, director of URA and the city’s economic department. That money went to the purchase price, demolition, new water and sewer, wastewater treatment, landscaping, streets and sidewalk improvements, parking, power, gas and telecommunications, she said.

Extra property taxes collected from the land’s higher value will go back to URA to pay off those costs, Anderson said. Some of the upgrades — such as water and sewer lines — also will benefit other projects, she said.

“The more developments like Glanbia, like St. Luke’s, helps other developers realize, ‘Oh, that is worth developing. Let’s go down and see what we can do.’”

A strong downtown is important to any city, said Mark Lopshire, board chairman for the Twin Falls Chamber of Commerce. If a city’s focus shifts away from downtown, the tax base can be lost and the area becomes dilapidated. A vibrant, healthy downtown gives a town flavor, history and a sense of belonging, he said.

“If you go out to Blue Lakes or Pole Line, what’s the personality there? Great businesses, but you don’t have that historical personality that a downtown has and a city needs,” Lopshire said.

A nice downtown is also a corporate recruiting tool, Anderson said. Companies hiring from out of the area want to make sure their employees enjoy a good quality of life.

Lopshire said Glanbia’s new facility and business leaders’ focus on downtown are the next steps in future, sustainable regional business.

“You look at Glanbia, and they are a national and a global company, and they have people coming in from all over the U.S., all over the world. And they take a look at that building and that downtown, and they say, ‘This is a great place,’” he said.

Rogers agreed. Glanbia will brighten the spotlight shining on Twin Falls as a premier food research and production destination. The area has added cheese and whey innovation to its already strong base of sugar, aquaculture, bean and seed research.

The cluster of expert food scientists working across all those fields can be used as a recruiting tool as well, further cementing the excitement building in the area, Rogers said.

“We are the food kings of Idaho,” she said.

Simpson Challenger Flies on Backer’s Plane

Federal law usually forbids candidates from flying on non-commercial aircraft.

BY JOHN MILLER
Associated Press

BOISE • A Republican U.S. House candidate has been flying to campaign and political events on a private airplane owned by one of his biggest supporters, even though federal law generally forbids prospective office holders from flying on non-commercial aircraft.

Bryan Smith, an Idaho Falls lawyer seeking to unseat U.S. Rep. Mike Simpson in Idaho’s 2nd Congressional District in next May’s GOP primary, flew on June 27 to campaign events in Boise, Twin Falls, Pocatello and Idaho Falls aboard an airplane owned by Phenix of Idaho.

Phenix of Idaho is a construction company and federal government contractor founded by Doyle Beck, a Smith backer whose family has given the GOP candidate nearly $13,000 for the primary race against Simpson next year.

Smith and Beck also flew together to McCall for the June 15 Republican State Central Committee meeting.

Provisions of the Honest Leadership and Open Government Act from 2010 effectively forbid House candidates from noncommercial air travel, with limited exceptions. The intent was to end subsidization of air travel by corporations or others — and reduce potential for corruption, or the appearance of corruption.

Smith’s spokeswoman Carrie Brown, who acknowledged the flights, said the campaign inquired Wednesday with FEC regulators in Washington, D.C., about whether his air travel was appropriate.

“While we believe we followed the complex rules that guide this issue, we have requested the FEC to advise us on this situation and how to resolve it,” Brown said.

Smith didn’t report paying for use of Beck’s plane in his latest FEC financial report on July 15.

Brown said Smith received an invoice for the flight only after the quarterly reporting period ended June 30 and had intended to document the expense in his next filing.

Now, what he does will depend on the FEC’s response.

Records indicate Beck owns a 2008 Cessna 400, a turbocharged, single-engine plane that can fly 270 mph and sells new for more than $700,000.

Doyle Beck didn’t return a phone call seeking comment Wednesday.

Brody Aston, Simpson’s campaign manager in Boise, said the eight-term lawmaker would be monitoring the outcome.

“Campaign rules and regulations are complex and require significant attention to detail,” Ashton said. “I am sure the Federal Elections Commission will be looking at these violations closely and in due time will issue fines and sanctions where appropriate.”

Why Have a Hunting Season for Sage Grouse?

Sage grouse numbers are so low that the feds want to add them to the endangered species list, but the state Fish and Game Commission is set to vote on details for the next sage grouse hunting season.

Seems like the ultimate contradiction.

But is it?

Many argue that hunting is the ultimate conservation method for wildlife, especially the sage grouse. If someone is out hunting them, it means someone cares about the health of their population. It means someone is watching and protecting their habitat. It means biologists and land managers can gather population data by monitoring the harvest. It means the animals will survive.

But while hunting is the best way to keep an elk herd healthy, for example, it might not be the case for sage grouse.

Sage grouse live relatively longer lives, have lower reproductive rates and over-winter better than most game birds, says the 2003 Wyoming Greater Sage-Grouse Conservation Plan.

In this equation, while closing hunting won't necessarily translate to population growth, continuing to hunt the bird could do more harm than good.

The last time there was concern about the sage grouse population in Idaho, the hunting season was closed for 21 of the years between 1918 and 1948.

So why keep it open now? It can't be to generate revenue. Hunter participation has dropped off precipitously in sage grouse hunting season over the past few years.

Are we keeping it open simply to keep tradition alive? We've been hunting sage grouse in Idaho since 1900. Those early seasons were three months long with bag limits of 20 birds. But we've slowly scaled back. This year's proposal has a hunting season for one week at the end of September, with a limit of one bird per day for a total bag limit of two birds. The Fish and Game Commission will vote to approve this proposal at its next meeting. But the proposed season is so short and restrictive that it seems to be little more than a token attempt at keeping the season open.

The proposed sage grouse hunting season — one week, two-bird limit — will not do much to help or hurt the sage grouse population.

In 2010, federal officials declared that the sage grouse warranted a listing under the Endangered Species Act but chose not to list it. Then in 2011, a federal judge approved a settlement that requires a final listing decision by 2015.

We need to ask ourselves: Will a hunting season harm or help our efforts to keep that bird off the endangered species list? That must be our No. 1 priority.

Having the sage grouse on the endangered species list will devastate this state. (Read our April 7, 2013 editorial: Pay Now or Pay Later for Sage Grouse Protection: <http://bit.ly/12Jqqum>)

Is keeping the sage grouse hunting season open at a time when the feds want to list the bird a contradiction?

You decide.

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

There Are Two Sides to Bowe Bergdahl Story

On reading the article by Brian Smith on Bowe Bergdahl, I understand the frustration of the family but you are only telling their side of the events as they happened.

I don't know, but being a veteran and understanding how the discipline works, I believe this man may have deserted. Even his own father telling Rolling Stone magazine that this may have happened and that is concerning. To make him out as some kind of hero is wrong.

We all want to believe our sons and daughters are always going to do what is right, but sadly, this doesn't always come about. People on death row have parents claiming they are still innocent. And to put people in harm's way, I believe is immoral and just by having his squad look for him has done just that.

I would like for him to be brought home, too, but I think it will be a different result than what many think. Thank you.

Spy Agencies Addicted to Corporate Data Load

Bruce Schneier

Bloomberg News

Facebook, Apple's iCloud and so on in exchange for whatever free or cheap service we receive from the Internet in return.

The NSA is also in the business of spying on everyone, and it has realized it's far easier to collect all the data from these corporations rather than from us directly. In some cases, the NSA asks for this data nicely. In other cases, it makes use of subtle threats or overt pressure. If that doesn't work, it uses tools like national security letters.

The result is a corporate-government surveillance partnership, one that allows both the government and corporations to get away with things they couldn't otherwise.

There are two types of laws in the United States, each designed to constrain a different type of power: constitutional law, which places limitations on government, and regulatory law, which constrains corporations. Historically, these two areas have largely remained separate, but today each group has learned how to use the other's laws to bypass their own restrictions. The government uses corporations to get around its limits, and corporations use the government to get around their limits.

This partnership manifests itself in various ways. The government uses corporations to circumvent its prohibitions against eavesdropping domestically on its citizens. Corporations rely on the government to ensure that they have unfettered use of the data they collect.

Here's an example: It would be reasonable for our government to debate the circumstances under which corporations can collect and use our data, and to provide for protections against misuse. But if the government is using that very data for its own surveillance purposes, it has an incentive to oppose any laws to limit data collection. And because corporations see no need to give consumers any choice in this matter — because it would only reduce their profits — the market isn't going to protect consumers, either.

Our elected officials are often supported, endorsed and funded by these corporations as well, setting up an incestuous relationship between corporations, lawmakers and the intelligence community.

The losers are us, the people, who are left with no one to stand up for our interests. Our elected government, which is supposed to be responsible to us, is not. And corporations, which in a market economy are supposed to be responsive to our needs, are not. What we have now is death to privacy — and that's very dangerous to democracy and liberty.

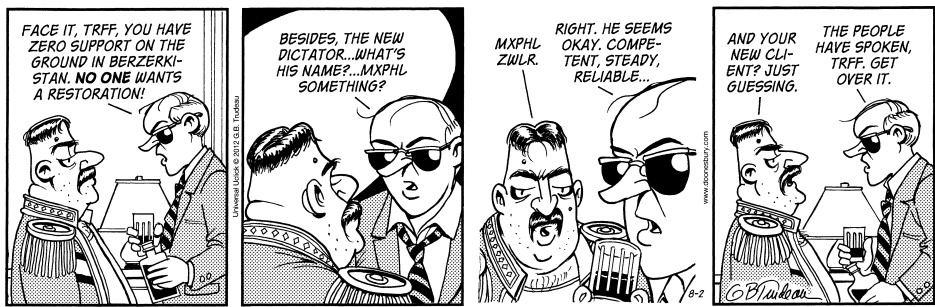

The simple answer is to blame consumers, who shouldn't use mobile phones, credit cards, banks or the Internet if they don't want to be tracked. But that argument deliberately ignores the reality of today's world. Everything we do involves computers, even if we're not using them directly. And by their nature, computers produce tracking data. We can't go back to a world where we don't use computers, the Internet or social networking. We have no choice but to share our personal information with these corporations, because that's how our world works today.

Curbing the power of the corporate-private surveillance partnership requires limitations on both what corporations can do with the data we choose to give them and restrictions on how and when the government can demand access to that data. Because both of these changes go against the interests of corporations and the government, we have to demand them as citizens and voters. We can lobby our government to operate more transparently — disclosing the opinions of the Foreign Intelligence Surveillance Court would be a good start — and hold our lawmakers accountable when it doesn't. But it's not going to be easy. There are strong interests doing their best to ensure that the steady stream of data keeps flowing.

Idaho Company OK'd to Explore Oregon Hydropower Project

PRINEVILLE, Ore. (AP) • An Idaho company has gotten approval to explore building a dam and reservoir near Prineville to store water for generating electricity. The developers envision the project called “pumped hydro storage” as a complement to balance intermittent supplies from such sources as wind turbines, the Bend Bulletin reported. The project would create a smaller dam and reservoir above Bowman Dam and the Prineville Reservoir, which supplies irrigation water. Water would be pumped uphill at night from the larger reservoir into the smaller one. During the day, when power demand is high, it would flow downhill through turbines to generate electricity and flow back into the larger reservoir, to be pumped again to the smaller one for a new round of generation. An underground powerhouse would contain three 50-megawatt turbines and generate enough electricity for about 30,000 homes. The Federal Energy Regulatory Commission granted a preliminary permit July 19 to Prineville Energy Storage LLC, an affiliate of Boise-based Gridflex Energy. It allows a feasibility study for a 40-foot dam and reservoir. The Bowman Dam is 240 feet tall, and the Prineville Reservoir behind it covers 3,030 acres. The upper reservoir used for power generation would cover 57 acres. The process known as pumped hydro storage has been around for 100 years, said Matthew Shapiro, CEO of Gridflex Energy.

The fire started burning on Monday after a lightning storm sparked 17 wildfires across south-central Idaho. The Southeast Red Bridge Fire is burning about 4 miles east of Notch Butte, stretching south toward Eden. Firefighters have not estimated when the fire will be contained. Here is a roundup of other fires in the area as of 9 p.m. on Thursday: Black Ridge: East of Dietrich, the Black Ridge Fire had burned an estimated 9,900 acres, and containment was not expected until Saturday evening.

Coonskin: The Coonskin Complex Fire, two fires close together, covers more than 4,300 acres 10 miles west of Roseworth. Firefighters now have a “pretty good handle” on the fire, said Josh Olsen, spokesman for the U.S. Bureau of Land Management. Containment was expected at 10 p.m. Thursday. Cinder Road: The Cinder Road Fire has burned about 3,000 acres since it was sparked late Wednesday night. The fire 14 miles northeast of Hazelton was contained Thursday. Buck Flat: Olsen said containment on the Buck Flat Fire 19 miles southwest of Castleford was expected at 10 p.m. Thursday, with control following at 10 p.m.

today. That fire was estimated at 637 acres. Crows Nest: The Crows Nest Fire, which started about 7 p.m. Wednesday east of Castleford, had burned an estimated 899 acres. Smaller fires included four near Shoshone. Those had been contained by Thursday morning and were expected to be controlled by Thursday evening. Black Ridge: The Black Ridge Fire burned 1,400 acres Thursday. Firefighters have it contained 7 miles south of Richfield. Many wildfire starts were reported promptly Wednesday evening, which enabled crews to reach fires while they were small, Olsen said.

In the Twin Falls School District, nine of 13 schools received four-star ratings. “We’re real pleased with the improvement we saw,” Superintendent Wiley Dobbs said. Every school but one maintained or raised its point total, and six schools raised their rating. Two schools received two-star ratings this year – Harrison Elementary and Magic Valley High School. Both schools raised their point totals compared with last year, Dobbs said. The schools will create improvement plans. One of the largest gains this year was for Bridge Academy, the district’s alternative middle school. It received a four-star ranking – up from only one star last year. “They’re really focused on academics,” Dobbs said, with hard-working students and great teaching. Some students weren’t motivated in the past, but now they progress through a levels system that motivates them, he said. Bridge Academy has an intense intervention plan for students, Principal Jim Brown told the Times-News in November. Each classroom has 16 students or fewer, and Bridge has an after-school home-ate what caused that,” Superintendent Dale Layne said. Jefferson Elementary’s rating dropped to two stars from three – mostly because of language usage, which will be a major focus now, Layne said. Since Jefferson Elementary is a kindergarten through third grade school, a growth calculation isn’t factored into the rating. That’s because students don’t take the ISAT until third grade, which skews the data a little, Layne said.

showing all services billed from each of Anton’s clients during that time. Checking the times Anton claimed to transport clients with the times they actually needed transportation, paralegal Sandra Seevers of the state Attorney General’s Office determined that the two did not match. But Anton was paid nearly $106,000 for services she billed from Jan. 5, 2000, through June 21, 2011, Seevers found. In the affidavit, Seevers writes that she left out Anton’s claims if they were within two days before or after a patient was transported, in case Anton simply erred in entering the date. Investigators also got Anton’s time sheets from her job as a senior deputy coroner. “The data comparison revealed Anton working at her job at the Twin Falls County Coroner’s Office on many of the days she also billed Medicaid for transportation services, occasionally for 400-mile round-trip transportation,” Seevers wrote in her affidavit. Another affidavit, written by investigator Michael Steen, said Anton was the largest transportation biller for her provider specialty in 2009, so an investigation began in March 2012 into her claims between 2007 and 2010. The initial probe revealed excessive miles billed, billing for three months after a client was reported to have moved out of state, billings that a client confirmed to be false and billings without corresponding medical services. Four times in the fall and winter of 2011-12, a Medicaid analyst sent Anton written requests for records to support the services she said she provided in 2009, Steen’s affidavit says. On Jan. 26, 2012, Anton sent the analyst a hand-written note with two typed pages. The note said the two pages included all Anton “found as of today.” Anton asked for a few more days to find more documentation, but she never followed up, Steen wrote.

Steen wrote that he reviewed the two pages, and they contained some dates and miles, but not all of Anton’s 2009 billing. Seevers reviewed the information Anton provided and compared it with Medicaid data. Her comparison showed no Medicaid-covered services were provided on the dates Anton gave. Thursday, Anton was still employed as the senior deputy coroner, said County Coroner Dennis Chambers. She is set for a preliminary hearing Aug. 12, when prosecutors will try to show they have enough evidence to take Anton to trial.

SNOWDEN WALKS FREE IN RUSSIA, TO US GOVT. ANGER

MOSCOW (AP) • Defying the United States, Russia granted Edward Snowden temporary asylum on Thursday, allowing the National Security Agency leaker to slip out of the Moscow airport where he has been holed up for weeks in hopes of evading espionage charges back home.

The 30-year-old former NSA contractor now has plenty of room to roam throughout the sprawling country and continue the bizarre journey that has already stretched across half the planet — from Hawaii to Hong Kong to the Russian capital.

The move infuriated the U.S. administration, which said it was “extremely disappointed” and warned that the decision could derail an upcoming summit between President Barack Obama and Russian President Vladimir Putin.

Ohio Man Who Enslaved 3 Women Gets Life in Prison

CLEVELAND (AP) • Standing before the man who enslaved and raped her for a decade, Michelle Knight described how the world had changed in the three months since they last saw each other: The captive, she said, was now free and the oppressor would be locked away forever to “die a little every day.”

Ariel Castro’s fate had been determined long before he was sentenced Thursday to life in prison plus 1,000 years. But Knight’s words in a crowded courtroom put a final seal on the kidnapping case that horrified the nation and subjected three young women to years of torment in Castro’s ramshackle house.

A short time later, the 53-year-old former school bus driver apologized to his victims briefly in a rambling, defiant statement. He repeatedly blamed his sex addiction, his former wife and others while claiming most of the sex was consensual and that the women were never tortured.

The sentence was a foregone conclusion after Castro pleaded guilty last week to 937 counts, including aggravated murder, kidnapping, rape and assault. A deal struck with prosecutors spared him from a possible death sentence for beating and starving Knight until she miscarried.

The three women disappeared separately between 2002 and 2004, when they were 14, 16 and 20 years old. Each had accepted a ride from Castro. They escaped May 6 when Amanda Berry, now 27, broke part of a door to Castro’s house in a tough Cleveland neighborhood and yelled for help. Castro was arrested that evening.

Prosecutors on Thursday detailed Castro’s repeated sexual assaults, how he chained the women and denied them food or fresh air. They displayed photos that gave a first glimpse inside the rooms where the women lived. Stuffed animals lined the bed and crayon drawings were taped to the wall where Berry lived with her young daughter who was fathered by Castro.

But in the same room, the window was boarded shut and door knobs had been removed and replaced with multiple locks. Another room shared by Knight and Gina DeJesus had a portable toilet and a clock radio and several chains.

Prosecutors said the women were chained to a pole in the basement and a bedroom heater. One woman had a motorcycle helmet placed on her head while in the basement. Later, when she tried to escape, she had a vacuum cleaner cord wrapped around her neck.

FBI agent Andrew Burke said Castro would occasionally pay his victims after raping them. Then he would require them to pay him if they wanted something special from the store. A letter written by Castro was found in the home days after his arrest and shown in court. It was titled “Confession and Details.”

Cuyahoga County prosecutor Tim McGinty said in a court filing that one of the women kept a diary. “The entries speak of forced sexual conduct, of being locked in a dark room, of anticipating the next session of abuse, of the dreams of someday escaping and being reunited with family, of being chained to a wall, of being held like a prisoner of war ... of being treated like an animal,” the filing said.

Excerpts of Testimony at the Sentencing:

EXCERPTS FROM CASTRO’S TESTIMONY:

People are trying to paint me as a monster, and I’m not a monster. I’m sick. My sexual problems been so bad on my mind, I’m impulsive. ... I believe I am addicted to porn, to the point that it really makes me impulsive.

... When I picked up the first victim, I hadn’t even planned it that day. ... That day I went to Family Dollar, and I heard her, over saying something about she needed to get somewhere and I reacted on that. But when I got up that day, I did not say, “Oh, I’m going to get up and try to find some women.” It wasn’t my character. But I know it’s wrong, I’m not trying to make excuses here. I know I’m 100 percent wrong for doing that.” was only 2 1/2 years old when I was taken. I look inside my heart and I see my son.

I cried every night. I was so alone. I worried about what would happen to me and the other girls every day.

Days never got shorter. Days turned into nights. Nights turned into eternity.

I knew nobody cared about me. He told me that my family didn’t care. He tormented me, constantly, even on holidays. Christmas was the most traumatic day because I never got to spend it with my son.

Ariel Castro, I remember all the times that you came home talking about what everybody else did wrong and act like you wasn’t doing the same thing. You said, “At least I didn’t kill you.”

You took 11 years of my life away and I have got it back. I spent 11 years in hell. Now your hell is just beginning. I will overcome all this that happened, but you will face hell for eternity.

From this moment on I will not let you define me or affect who I am.

I will live on. You will die a little every day. As you think about the 11 years and the atrocities you inflicted on us, what does God think of you hypocritically going to church every Sunday, coming home to torture us.

EXCERPTS OF A STATEMENT READ BY BETH SERRANO, SISTER OF VICTIM AMANDA BERRY

The impact of these crimes on our family is something that we do not want to discuss with people we don’t know. Even if I wanted to talk about it, it is impossible to put into words. For me, I lost my sister for all those years and thought it was forever. And we lost my mother forever. And she died not knowing. My mother and my sister, the two most loving people in the world. It is impossible to put into words how much it hurts.

Amanda is not here today. She is strong, beautiful, inside and out, and is doing better every day. She’s not just my only sister, but the best friend I have and the best person I know. She does not want to talk about these things. She has not talked about these things even with me. And she does not want other people to talk about these things.

EXCERPTS OF A STATEMENT READ BY SYLVIA COLON, COUSIN OF VICTIM GINA DEJESUS

To Ariel Castro’s family — we are saddened that you are burdened with this horror and will unfortunately forever be tied to these atrocities. Please know that we do not hold you accountable and pray that you can one day be whole again. Continue to love and support one another — we promise you that with this recipe you will be triumphant.

We stand before you and promise you that our beloved family member thrives. She laughs, swims, dances, and more importantly she loves and is loved. We are comforted in knowing that she will continue to flourish. She will finish school, go to college, fall in love, and if she chooses, will get married and have children. She is where we will continue to put in our energy. She lives not a victim, but as a survivor. Her insurmountable will to prevail is the only story worth discussing.

We ask that you continue to give her and our family privacy as we continue this journey back into society.

To Ariel Castro (in Spanish): May God have mercy on your soul.

Iraq Sees Highest Monthly Death Toll in 5 Years

BAGHDAD (AP) • More than 1,000 people were killed in Iraq in July, the highest monthly death toll in five years, the U.N. said Thursday, a grim figure that shows rapidly deteriorating security as sectarian tensions soar nearly two years after U.S. troops withdrew from the country.

Violence has been on the rise all year, but the number of attacks against civilians and security forces has spiked during the Islamic holy month of Ramadan, which began early last month. The increased bloodshed has intensified fears that Iraq is on a path back to the widespread chaos that nearly tore the country apart in the aftermath of the U.S.-led invasion that ousted Saddam Hussein in 2003.

Months of rallies by Iraq’s minority Sunnis against the Shiite-led government over what they contend is second-class treatment and the unfair use of tough anti-terrorism measures against their sect set the stage for the violence.

The killings significantly picked up after Iraqi security forces launched a heavy-handed crackdown on a Sunni protest camp in the northern town of Hawija on April 23. A ferocious backlash followed the raid, with deadly bomb attacks and sporadic gumbattles between insurgents and soldiers — this time members of the Iraqi security forces rather than U.S. troops. The U.N. Mission in Iraq said 1,057 Iraqis were killed and 2,326 wounded in July, the highest toll since June 2008 when 975 people were killed.

The increase was particularly troubling because the numbers had begun declining five years ago following a series of U.S.-led offensives and a Sunni revolt against al-Qaida in Iraq.

House's Last Votes about Messaging, Not Laws

WASHINGTON (AP) • Forget the last-minute deals of years past and the huge pile of undone business. The Republican-led House is spending the last days before Congress' five-week summer vacation on bills aimed at rousing the party's conservative base but with little chance of becoming law: The "STOP IRS Act." The "Stop Government Abuse Act." And the "Regulations in Need of Scrutiny Act."

Before they leave today, House members will for the 40th time vote on a GOP measure to effectively repeal Obama's health care overhaul.

The last-minute flurry of politically themed bills is a sharp contrast to two years ago, when Congress scrambled to finish a deficit-reduction bill that set in place more than $2 trillion in spending cuts over the following decade. This year, House Republicans are content with messaging after getting their way on a student loan bill but falling short in trying to carry out further spending cuts in highway and housing programs.

"It's sort of the political equivalent of visiting some place and bringing back a T-shirt," said Ross Baker, a political science professor at Rutgers University. "These bills say, 'I've been there, I've done something and here's a T-shirt.'"

Democrats were less charitable. "It is politics at any cost by the Republican majority," said Rep. Sander Levin, D-Mich. "They want to change the subject?"

On these measures, congressional approval isn't the point.

Several of this week's House bills dredged up past controversies or perceived failings of the Obama administration. One was a twofer: The "Keep the IRS Off Your Health Care Act" would repeal Obama's health care overhaul while invoking the name of the scandal-tainted Internal Revenue Service. The bill would stop the IRS from putting in place any part of the health care law. It's scheduled for a vote today.

The IRS is getting ample floor time among the bills, reminders of the controversy surrounding the agency's targeting of conservative political groups. The "STOP IRS Act" passed on Wednesday would terminate any IRS employees who "take official actions for political purposes." No IRS employee, at least so far, has been found to have done that in investigations into the extra scrutiny that the agency devoted to tea party and other conservative groups seeking tax-exempt status.

Another bill, titled the "Stop Playing on Citizens' Cash Act" or "SPOCC" Act, would prohibit the tax agency from spending money on employee conferences until it carries out reform recommendations from its inspector general. The bill's title references a widely criticized "Star Trek"-themed video costing more than $50,000 and produced by some IRS employees featuring the TV series' iconic character Mr. Spock.

A "Government Spending Accountability Act" is designed to remind voters of the troubles at the General Services Administration, the government's property manager whose top managers resigned after an inspector general report last year revealed lavish agency spending on a Las Vegas conference. The bill would cap non-military government travel spending.

The "Regulation From Executive in Need of Scrutiny Act," or the REINS Act, sponsored by Rep. Todd Young, R-Ind., would require Congress to give final approval before any major new federal regulations are put in place. It gets a vote Friday. The White House issued a veto threat, calling it a "radical departure from the longstanding separation of powers" doctrine in the Constitution.

Three previously introduced bills were combined this week into a "Stop Government Abuse Act." Passed Thursday, it would limit federal bonuses through 2015, specifically allow citizens to record most conversations with federal employees and give agencies more leeway to put employees under investigation on unpaid leave.

Surveillance Critics Confront Pres. Obama in Oval Office

WASHINGTON (AP) • Struggling to salvage a massive surveillance program, President Barack Obama was confronted by congressional critics of the National Security Agency's collection of Americans' telephone records Thursday as snowballing concerns made new limitations on the intelligence effort appear increasingly likely.

Obama invited lawmakers on both sides of the issue to an Oval Office meeting designed to stem the bleeding of public support and show Obama was serious about engaging. Among the participants were the NSA's most vigorous congressional supporters — the top Democrats and Republicans in the House and Senate intelligence panels — alongside its most stern critics, including Democratic Sens. Ron Wyden of Oregon and Mark Udall of Colorado.

The lawmakers departed the rainy White House grounds without speaking to reporters. But in interviews later, they said there was a consensus that the surveillance efforts are suffering from perception problems that have undercut trust among the American people.

"There is openness to making changes," said Rep. Dutch Ruppersberger of Maryland, the top Democrat on the House Intelligence Committee.

Sen. Saxby Chambliss of Georgia, top Republican on the Senate's intelligence panel and a strong NSA defender, said Obama and the lawmakers didn't agree to take specific steps, but brought up a number of proposals that will be fleshed out over the August congressional recess.

"A lot of ideas were thrown out," Chambliss told The Associated Press. "Nothing was concluded."

Wyden, in an interview, said he and Udall had sought to convince Obama of the urgency of addressing rising concerns. He said he proposed strengthening the government's ability to get emergency authorization to collect an individual's phone records, so that pre-emptive collection of everyone's records would no longer be necessary.

Wyden and two Senate colleagues also unveiled legislation Thursday to overhaul the secret federal court that oversees the programs, which critics decry as largely a rubber stamp. The senators aim to make the Foreign Intelligence Surveillance Court more adversarial by creating a special advocate who could argue for privacy during closed-door proceedings and appeal decisions. A companion bill would diversify the court's bench by ending the chief justice's sole authority to pick its judges.

"These bills do not compromise national security, but they put a necessary opposing view in the FISA court and assure ideological diversity of judges," said Sen. Tom Udall, D-N.M. Another of the bill's sponsors, Sen. Richard Blumenthal, D-Conn., said the Obama administration was receptive to the ideas, although White House officials declined to comment.

Debate over the line between counterterrorism and invasion of privacy has been heating up since former government contract systems analyst Edward Snowden leaked classified documents exposing the NSA's monumental capability to sweep up data about phone and Internet use, including programs that store years of phone records on virtually every American. Snowden's revelations have prompted a national rethinking over government surveillance powers that have grown since the Sept. 11, 2001, terrorist attacks.

Pouring salt in the wound Thursday was a decision by Russia to grant asylum to Snowden, who has been in a Moscow airport hotel for more than a month, despite America's insistence that the fugitive be sent home to face prosecution on espionage charges. In Washington, House Judiciary Committee Chairman Bob Goodlatte, R-Va., said he stressed to Obama the role Congress must play in ensuring that U.S. spying isn't infringing on Congress' intent or civil liberties. He said his committee would further probe the issue, including in a classified hearing he's hoping to hold in September.

Extending its efforts to defend the programs to the public, the White House pledged to help Americans understand as much as possible about how they work, even as it staunchly defended their efficacy in keeping a post-9/11 America safe.

"That process will continue," said White House spokesman Jay Carney. "But I don't think that we can sensibly say that programs designed to protect us from terrorist attack are not necessary in this day and age."

Survey Finds Bomb Survivors Hesitant to Pass on Memories

THE JAPAN NEWS

TOKYO • Sixty-three percent of atomic bomb survivors said they had not adequately conveyed their experiences to their children or have refrained from sharing them at all, according to a survey conducted by The Yomiuri Shim-bun and the Institute for Peace Science Hiroshima University.

The survey was conducted from April to July, ahead of the 68th anniversary of atomic bombings in Hiroshima and Nagasaki. With the support of the Japan Confederation of A- and H-Bomb Sufferers Organizations and other relevant parties, the survey covered 2,220 atomic bomb survivors whose average age was 79.6. The survey's findings were analyzed by Megu Otaki, a professor at Hiroshima University's Research Institute for Radiation Biology and Medicine.

Asked "Have you conveyed your atomic bomb experiences to your children?" 37 percent of respondents said they had conveyed them "sufficiently," while 55 percent chose the answer "a little" and 8 percent said they had not conveyed their experiences at all.

When those who said they had not shared their experiences sufficiently were asked why they had not done so, the answer "I have never been asked" accounted for 55 percent, the largest share.

This was followed by "I don't want to remember the painful experiences" by 39 percent, "I have few opportunities to talk about it because my children live a long way off" by 38 percent and "I don't think my experiences would be understood" by 37 percent. Multiple answers were allowed for this question.

Some respondents who chose not to tell their children about their experiences said they did not want their children to worry about their health, or they feared prejudice.

The survey also asked respondents whether they plan to share their experiences with their children in the future. Forty percent of respondents chose "yes," suggesting they wanted to pass their experiences on to future generations as much as possible.

PRES. NIXON JOKES WITH 'DIRTY TRICKS' MEN ON CANDID WHITE HOUSE VIDEO

BY STEPHANIE GREEN
Bloomberg News

WASHINGTON • It turns out the men behind Richard Nixon's "dirty tricks" were actually nice guys just doing their jobs.

That's the impression CNN's new documentary "Our Nixon" wants you to have of H.R. Haldeman, John Ehrlichman, and Dwight Chapin.

"These friendships are golden," a choked up Chapin, the only one still alive, says about his bond with Haldeman and Ehrlichman. "The era of criminality, I just don't see it that way."

They all shared a passion for home video making. Director Penny Lane uses 500 reels of Super 8 home movies filmed by the three top aides during their time in the Nixon White House before they were incarcerated on conspiracy and perjury charges for their part in the Watergate scandal.

For 40 years, the footage stayed locked away in the National Archives.

Video of their children at the White House Easter egg roll, their trips to China and the Vatican with Nixon, and candid interviews offer sympathetic portraits of the men who were blindly loyal to Nixon, and each other.

Haldeman was 43 when he became Nixon's chief of staff, Haldeman was sent to jail in 1975, and after serving 18 months, embarked on a career in business. He died in late 1993, less than a year before Nixon. Ehrlichman also served 18 months, and died in 1999.

The youngest of the three, Chapin was only in his 20s when he was recruited by Haldeman to join the Nixon White House as a special assistant to the President. He currently resides in East Hampton.

The band of brothers were given the more sinister moniker "The Berlin Wall" by the press due to their German surnames, and strenuous protection of the president.

In the film, they look more like boyish "Mad Men" characters in their sleek suits and haircuts, huddled around their boss all hours of the day, taking telephone calls from him to boost his ego or talk about the mundane.

Lane makes superb use of Nixon's recorded conversations with her subjects here. "It was a god---- good speech," a puffed up Nixon tells Haldeman in a phone chat after his "Silent Majority" address to the nation. "It was done with style."

Haldeman confirms Nixon's self-gratification. Nixon's humor can be disturbing. "They were glorifying homosexuality," an indignant president tells Haldeman about a movie he had seen on CBS. "Homosexuality and immorality in general are the enemies of societies," he says. "You ever see what happened to the Greeks? Homosexuality destroyed them. Aristotle was a homosexual. So was Socrates. The last six Roman emperors were fags."

"I never laughed as much," Chapin says of his preWatergate days. "The sense of humor was the leveling factor?"

But then their golden time as the king's men turned to dust, as their proximity to the Watergate break in was investigated. "I love you," Nixon tells Haldeman after he accepted his resignation. "Keep the faith."

While Nixon resigned in August 1974, he never pardoned Haldeman, Ehrlichman or Chapin.

"There's a lot more to my life than Watergate," Haldeman says. "There's a lot more to my life than politics."

"Our Nixon" debuted on CNN on Thursday, and has a theatrical release date of Aug. 30.

State Dept. 'Horrificed' by WikiLeaks Releases

BY DAVID DISHNEAU
Associated Press

FORT MEADE, Md. • State Department workers were horrified by WikiLeaks' publication of more than 250,000 U.S. diplomatic cables leaked by Army Pfc. Bradley Manning, an agency official testified Thursday.

Elizabeth Dibble didn't give any evidence in open court of how the unprecedented leak of classified information damaged U.S. foreign relations, but she did testify in a session closed to the public to protect classified information. She was summoned to talk about the impact of Manning's actions on U.S. relations with Iran, Lebanon and Libya.

Dibble was the No. 2 official in the agency's Bureau of Near Eastern Affairs when WikiLeaks began publishing the leaked cables on its website in the fall of 2010. She was the prosecution's third witness at a sentencing hearing to determine Manning's sentence for leaking the cables, plus more than 470,000 Iraq and Afghanistan battlefield reports and some battlefield video, while working as an intelligence analyst in Iraq.

Manning faces up to 136 years in prison following his conviction on 20 counts, including Espionage Act violations, theft and computer fraud. He has said he leaked the material to expose wrongdoing by the military and U.S. diplomats.

Dibble said people in her office reacted with "horror and disbelief that our diplomatic communications had been released and were revealed on public websites for the world to see."

She said diplomatic cables — written communications between U.S. embassies and agency headquarters — contain sensitive information about U.S. foreign relations.

"Cables not only provide the facts but they provide the analysis, the synthesis and the embassy's judgment of what is going on in a particular country," Dibble said.

The U.S. ambassador in Tripoli, Gene Cretz, was recalled because of the Libyan government's strong reaction to the leaked cables, according to a May 2011 report by the State Department's inspector general's office.

State Department officials said in January 2011 that relations were strained by the cables' disclosures about Cretz' candid reporting on the eccentricities of Libyan leader Moammar Gadhafi.

Another U.S. diplomat, John D. Feely, the No. 2 official in the Western Hemisphere bureau, testified the leaked cables had an impact on U.S. relations with Latin American nations. He saved the details for a closed session following his open-court testimony.

Then Secretary of State Hillary Clinton said in November 2010 that the leaks endangered people's lives, threatened national security and undermined U.S. diplomatic efforts.

Obama Picks Restructuring Expert to Take over IRS

President Barack Obama has chosen a retired corporate and government official with experience managing numerous organizations in crisis to take over an Internal Revenue Service under fire for targeting political groups.

Obama said his nominee for commissioner of the tax agency, John Koskinen, “is an expert at turning around institutions in need of reform.”

Koskinen came in to overhaul mortgage buyer Freddie Mac after its near collapse in the financial crisis at the end of the George W. Bush administration. The 74-year-old also helped restructure the assets of the largest failed life insurance company in U.S. history, Mutual Benefit Life, and reorganize the Penn Central Transportation Company after it became the largest bankruptcy in U.S. history.

His government experience includes handling preparation for the Year 2000 challenge for President Bill Clinton and helping restore the District of Columbia to financial stability after years of mismanagement as city administrator from 2000-2003.

Koskinen’s nomination to a five-year term must be confirmed by the Senate.

If confirmed, Koskinen would take over an agency in crisis, just as it is gearing up to administer large parts of the president’s health care law. The IRS has been under siege since May when agency officials acknowledged that agents working in a Cincinnati office had improperly targeted tea party groups for extra scrutiny when they applied for tax-exempt status. The IRS has since released documents suggesting that progressive groups may have been targeted, too.

Experts: Health Risks Higher from Packaged Greens

Food safety experts say they’re not surprised by a recent outbreak of a stomach bug that two states have linked to bagged salad.

That’s because the process of harvesting, washing, and packaging such products provides numerous opportunities for contamination.

Last year the Food and Drug Administration issued more than 20 recalls for packaged salads, romaine lettuce or spinach. Most recalls came after tests found listeria or E. coli bacteria present. Both can cause serious illness.

The current stomach bug that sickened hundreds in 15 states is caused by a parasite spread when people ingest food or water contaminated with feces. Iowa and Nebraska officials have tied it to pre-washed bagged salad.

Iowa Epidemiologist Patricia Quinlisk says the product that sickened people is gone and packaged salads are safe to eat.

Berlusconi Conviction Upheld; Prison Term Sticks

For the first time in decades of criminal prosecution, a conviction against former Italian premier Silvio Berlusconi finally stuck on Thursday, leaving the media mogul with a four-year prison sentence for tax fraud with all of his appeals exhausted.

But it’s highly unlikely the man who long was Italy’s most powerful politician will actually serve out the sentence behind bars.

And while upholding his tax fraud conviction, Italy’s supreme court ordered another court to recalculate the duration of a ban on holding public office that lower courts had set at five years.

Berlusconi, who, at 76, has dominated Italian politics for 20 years, remained defiant, if shaken. In a nine-minute video address, he denounced the sentence “absolutely” baseless, saying it “deprives me of my freedom and political rights,” and insisted he is the innocent victim of “an incredible series of accusations and trials that had nothing to do with reality.”

The three-time premier, dressed in his usual double-breasted suit and seated before the Italian and EU flags, swung between anger and emotion, at times his voice breaking.

But he showed little signs of abandoning politics, pledging to revive Forza Italia, the movement he founded and which swept him into power as the unchallenged leader of Italy’s conservatives.

Gay Couples Get Hitched in Minnesota, Rhode Island

Spanish PM Denies Party Ran Slush Fund

Spanish Prime Minister Mariano Rajoy told Parliament on Thursday that he was wrong to trust his former party financial chief for so many years, and repeated his vigorous denials of the ex-treasurer’s allegations the party ran a slush fund.

Rajoy surprised many in a special appearance before lawmakers by saying he “was wrong to maintain confidence in someone we now know did not deserve it.”

“I was wrong, and I’m sorry about it, but it happened,” Rajoy said of his decision to stand by Luis Barcenas, his long-standing political colleague. -Associated Press

Avoiding Tempting Lawn Maintenance Mistakes

by Dawn West, All About Lawns Columnist

Everyone loves a healthy green lawn, and the lawn maintenance basics for getting there, things like water and fertilizer, can seem pretty, well, basic.

But in making your way through some of the most common lawn maintenance tasks, you can fall into some serious lawn care pitfalls. Use the following tips to help keep you from those tempting maintenance mistakes.

Lawns need a few things to be happy: sunshine, water, and nutrients. Sometimes your desire to give your lawn exactly what it needs, however, can lead you to make some of your biggest lawn maintenance mistakes. Fortunately, with a little know how, it doesn’t have to be that way.

Tip #1. Water with Restraint.

The easy-to-make mistake: your lawn needs water to thrive, and you want to give it what it needs, so you water... all the time. The first problem is that if your lawn is constantly wet, you’re inviting fungus to move in and build a happy home. Avoid this lawn maintenance pitfall by watering in the morning, thereby giving your lawn plenty of time to dry during the course of the day.

The second problem with too-frequent watering is that you’re not giving your lawn a chance to develop a strong root system. Water less often, but for a longer duration, so water soaks in and gives your lawn’s roots a chance to go deep.

Tip #1. Fertilize When the Time is Right.

The easy-to-make mistake: nothing says spring like a rip roaring lawn, so you give your grass a big dose of fertilizer at the first sign of post-winter green up. A spring fertilizer application is oh-so-tempting, because chances are it’s going to pay off just as you hoped, in lots of fast growing green grass.

That’s precisely the problem, though - spring fertilizing causes top growth, and doesn’t get the nutrients down to the roots of your lawn where they’re really necessary. You’re much better off going with a fall fertilizer application, so that your lawn takes all those nutrients down into its roots as it settles in for dormancy.

ENTERTAINMENT

Three Best Bets in Magic Valley Entertainment

The five Williams brothers' start in performing arts came in JuMP Company plays right here in Twin Falls.

Now they have their own country music vocal group, Spencer's Own, and they live in Nashville, Tenn.

The Williams – Morgan, Nathan, Jordan, Nicholas and Quinn – return to the Magic Valley for concerts tonight and Saturday at Twin Falls High School's Roper Auditorium.

Expect to hear some of their new, original music. They're working on their debut country CD, which will come out this fall.

Twin Falls native Korby Lenker also returns to his hometown for a concert Saturday at the Lamphouse Theater.

Lenker, a 1994 Twin Falls High School alumnus, got started with music after his parents wanted him to take piano lessons.

"They made me practice every day," he told me this week, but he didn't hate it.

Now Lenker lives in Nashville and has released seven albums over the years.

The entertainment calendar is full of a lot of other concerts this weekend, including Rhythm Rangers performing original Americana and Western music tonight at First Friday at Rudy's – A Cook's Paradise.

Crossfire performs tonight during the Magic Valley Arts Council's summer concert series.

Time for Jerome County Fair week

The Jerome County Fair will be in full swing next week. In addition to 4-H and FFA shows, other events include the mud bog challenge, pig wrestling, performances by a hypnotist, carnival and of course, the PRCA Rodeo.

Magic Valley Beer Fest

Blue Lakes Rotary Club holds its second annual Magic Valley Beer Fest on Saturday at Twin Falls City Park.

The cost of admission includes 20 two-ounce samples. Brewers from around the country will be at the event.

Money raised will go to the Blue Lakes Rotary Park project and Twin Falls Animal Shelter.

For details on these events and many others, see the full calendar in this section.

7 Things You Need to Do at the Jerome County Fair

BY TETONA DUNLAP

tdunlap@magicvalley.com

JEROME • Before the sights, sounds and smells of the Jerome County Fair pull you in all directions Aug. 6-12, here are some of the events you won't want to miss.

1. Mud bog

Ever play in the mud as a child? Then you are going to love this.

In lieu of last year's demolition derby, the first Mud Bog Challenge will be from 6 to 10 p.m. Saturday, Aug. 10, at the DePew Arena at the Jerome County Fairgrounds.

General admission is $8 or $5 for children ages 6 to 12. Children 5 and younger get in free.

Never heard of mud bog? Imagine a drag race on mud instead of asphalt.

The race features a variety of vehicles, such as powder puff (women only), stock (road-regulated vehicles) and mud modified (with every mud modification possible).

So should spectators plan to get dirty?

"Maybe if they are too close," said Kathleen Diederich, fair manager. "It's going to be loud and fast."

During half-time and at the end of the races, there will be rock crawlers – Jeeps scaling rock piles – for your entertainment.

Anyone can enter their vehicle into the mud bog for $30. All vehicles must be four-wheel drive.

Mud bog organizer Paula Budd said if you are into off-roading, this is your event. Contact Budd at 208-420-8479 for more information.

2. Pig wrestling

How does one sum up pig wrestling?

Messy. Muddy.

Crazy?

Diederich thinks so.

"Pig wrestling is insane," she said.

That's because teams of four have a mere two minutes to get a slippery, squealing swine into a barrel butt-first.

Some teams only take a few seconds to complete this task; others go hog wild trying to catch their pigs.

There's even a division for children as young as 3.

And for $8, you can witness this muddy madness.

Tickets are $5 for children ages 6-12. Children 5 and younger get in free.

If you want to join in the fun, you better move faster than a greased pig. This is a popular event, and there's a limit of 60 teams.

Pig wrestling starts at 7 p.m. Tuesday, Aug. 6, at the DePew Arena.

For more information on how to enter, go to www.jeromecountyfair.com/

3. Richard Barker

You will go watch Richard Barker. You will go watch Richard Barker.

Why? This hypnotist is a huge hit.

Diederich said the free event drew hundreds last year.

"People were entranced, literally," she said.

And with two-hour performances starting at 6 and at 10 p.m. on the free stage, you have no excuse not to attend.

4. Tri-tip Cook-off

Sample the seasonings of 10 cooks as they face off in the tri-tip cook-off at 5 p.m. in front of the Messersmith building. It's $25 to participate as a cook and $5 to taste. All proceeds go to breast cancer awareness in conjunction with "Tough Enough to Wear Pink" night at the rodeo.

5. PRCA Rodeo

Speaking of the rodeo, have you heard it features some of the best cowboys and cowgirls around?

At 7:30 every night starting Wednesday, Aug. 7, you can watch such local favorites as Montana Barlow from Jerome, Cy Eames of Gooding, Kali Parker of Wendell, Cooper Nuffer of Eden and

Twin Falls Teen Heading to Talent Convention in Los Angeles

BY JULIE WOOTTON

jwootton@magicvalley.com

TWIN FALLS • Kaylee Bolster was watching her brother's soccer game in April when she heard an ad on a radio station.

It was a call for children and teenagers to audition for Disney.

"I was curious about it," the 17-year-old said, but didn't think more of it.

But in the coming days, Bolster heard the ad again and again. She asked her parents if she could go to Boise to audition, and they said yes.

Two weeks later, the Lighthouse Christian School student was waiting in a line that wrapped around the Hampton Inn & Suites.

Bolster said she was overwhelmed to see how many people showed up. Out of more than 500 children who auditioned, she was one of 22 to receive a call back.

Ultimately, she was one of five young Idaho performing artists to be selected for the iPOP! convention in January in Los Angeles.

Bolster is getting ready for the International Presentation of Performers, which draws more than 130 talent scouts from around the world.

The Bolsters – a family of four – are raising money so they can all go to the convention.

A fundraiser is planned for 7 p.m. Saturday, Aug. 10, at the Twin Falls Reformed Church gym.

The event will include a pasta and salad dinner, dessert auction, and live and silent auctions. Bolster will perform six or seven songs.

The family also is planning a few other fundraisers before the January convention, including yard sales and car washes.

Musical talent runs in the family. Parents Dave and Lawnie Kay Bolster are former professional musicians with a combined 80 years of music experience. They have performed in Bolster spent two years on the road with her parents, traveling the country in a motorhome. Her own interest in performing arts continued to grow.

"I just grew up on stage," she said, and it's where she can express herself.

Bolster – who will be a senior at Lighthouse Christian this fall – has been a cheerleader and member of the school's the basketball team and worship team.

Instead of knocking on doors looking for jobs in performing arts after she graduates from high school, Bolster will have access to talent agents watching her perform in January.

While performers are from throughout the United States, talent agents will come from around the world.

"I'd love to go there and get a job real quick," Bolster said.

Going through the Audition Process

When Bolster arrived in Boise for her first audition, she spent an hour or two waiting in line.

Then she and other performers were shuffled into a room where they waited to audition.

Once Bolster took the stage, the audition only lasted about 45 seconds – a "snap of the fingers, and it was done," she said.

Originally, she was only going to sing, but organizers wanted participants to demonstrate their skills acting in commercials and performing a monologue.

Calls back were to be announced at 9 p.m., but Bolster didn't hear anything.

"It hit 9 o'clock and my dad was like, 'Well, too bad,'" she said.

Then at 10:04 p.m., she got a text message saying she'd been chosen for a call back.

For the next three weekends, Bolster made trips up to Boise to prepare.

During the showcase, she performed in front of four talent agents and a talent scout from the iPOP.

Bolster said one of the agents told her she should forget L.A. and go straight to New York City.

The talent scout from the showcase is representing her during the iPOP! convention. Meanwhile, Bolster is preparing songs and monologues to perform.

Only five children from Idaho were invited to go to iPOP!, Dave Bolster said.

When his daughter arrives, she and other participants will be in front of agents and casting directors.

"It teaches us how to present ourselves," Kaylee said.

Nashville Musicians Return for Hometown Concerts

BY JULIE WOOTTON

TWIN FALLS • Nashville, Tenn., is where homegrown musicians Korby Lenker and Spencer's Own are furthering their careers, but it all began here in Twin Falls.

Both return to the Magic Valley for concerts this weekend.

Musician Korby Lenker performs Saturday night at the Lamphouse Theater.

And Spencer's Own – a country music singing group of five brothers – has concerts tonight and Saturday at Twin Falls High School's Roper Auditorium.

The Times-News caught up with the musicians last week. Here's what they've been up to.

Spencer's Own

Spencer's Own plans to have a debut of new, original music during their concerts next week.

The Williams – Morgan, Nathan, Jordan, Nicholas and Quinn – are working on their debut country CD, which is to be released this fall.

One of the songs, "Idaho Love," is all about where the brothers grew up and their childhood experiences.

"We just have a love for Idaho," Nathan said, and the song has been played on many Idaho radio stations.

Nicholas said they're excited about the concerts this weekend in their hometown, where people have supported them for so long.

Concerts will be a chance to hear the band's familiar songs and original songs that no one here has heard yet.

"We have a collection of music for everybody," Morgan said.

The brothers got started with performing arts as children in JuMP Company performances.

After getting stage experience, they continued to develop their voices and started performing around the Magic Valley.

Originally, their band was called "The Standards." But as more people asked if they were brothers, they wanted a name that reflected that.

They decided on "Spencer's Own" in honor of their father, Spencer Williams, a chiropractor in Twin Falls.

The brothers say their parents have been incredibly supportive and are their biggest fans.

Nicholas said he and his brothers love performing and coming up with original music.

"It's been a real great process for us the whole time," he said.

Korby Lenker, a solo artist, sings and plays guitar and ukele.

the Lamphouse Theater last year went well, and he performed at a local charter school six months ago.

Lenker – who grew up in Twin Falls – is doing a run of shows in the Pacific Northwest.

"I'm just excited to come back to my hometown and play and say hello to everyone again," he said.

Before he arrived in Twin Falls, Lenker performed a farewell show Thursday in Nashville. He performs today in Salt Lake City.

After his concert in Twin Falls, he'll perform in Stanley, Ketchum and Pocatello early next week.

His Ketchum performance is a benefit, with proceeds to be used to create a $1,000 performing arts scholarship for a Wood River High School senior.

Then Lenker will continue along the West Coast, with concerts in Bellingham, Wash., Portland, San Francisco and Los Angeles.

The 1994 Twin Falls High graduate got started with music after his parents wanted him to take piano lessons.

"They made me practice every day," he said, but he didn't hate it.

Lenker said he decided in high school that he "would be really serious about music," so he started learning a lot of cover songs.

In high school, he was part of an alternative rock band called Clockwork Orange.

Lenker's interest in bluegrass music was sparked in college and then performed in a band, The Barbed Wire Cutters, for five years.

During that time, Lenker made a few solo albums and toured in Europe and Ireland. Then, more than five years ago, he moved from Seattle to Nashville.

"It's just been little steps," he said. He has released seven albums.

Lenker said he's "obviously not super famous," but he feels lucky to do what he loves.

MOVIE REVIEW

On the Big Screen: Pacific Rim

Directed by:
Guillermo del Toro
Rated: PG-13
Rating: 4 out of 5 stars

Anthony Machado

"Pacific Rim" blazes through 10 years of humanity's war with giant monsters in the first 10 minutes. The "kaiju," as the city-crushing aliens are called, came from an inter-dimensional rift that opened at the bottom of the Pacific Ocean. To combat them, the nations of the world built giant robots called "Jaegers," each with two pilots who control the colossal machine's brain via a shared mental link.

The link, called a neural drift, lets memories and thoughts flow freely between the co-pilots, syncing their brains to better control the Jaeger. The existence of this sci-fi mind meld opens up the script to interesting plot developments. The first of which is what happens when one pilot is synced to another the moment he dies.

Director Guillermo del Toro intentionally makes "Pacific Rim" fantastical and kid-friendly. Yes, the monsters are scary, so the kids can't be too young, and there are some serious themes involved, but the story is something more akin to a fairy tale than an action-war story. "Pacific Rim" is the antithesis to movies like the Transformers and G.I. Joe series, both of which sink to simplistic war glorification. "Pacific Rim" elevates itself to the mythological realm of heroes versus monsters. It's a story of knights and dragons writ large.

It will be surprising if "Pacific Rim" doesn't get an Oscar nod for Best Visual Effects. Del Toro has a very distinct style, infusing the whole movie with water-drenched, neon-lit wonder. His kaiju are colossal draconic beasts and the robots sleek armored machines. The fight scenes between them are something to behold.

One major problem with "Man of Steel" was its disregard for city-wide destruction. "Pacific Rim," which has action at that type of scale, handles it so much better. We're shown scenes of people evacuating the city and going into bunkers before the fight. And the human-controlled Jaeger's never intentionally wreck buildings. The one time a Jaeger misses a swing and drives its fist through a building floor, we're shown the fist going through empty offices in slow motion and the whole punch ends on a little joke.

An hour of footage had to be cut from the final release of "Pacific Rim" and you can feel a few things are missing. An emotional payoff between a father and son didn't seem to be set up. A few of the scenes felt like they were distilled to their core and needed a little more padding. Would all those extra minutes fill those spots? We'll have to wait until the extended cut comes out to see.

I wish I had seen "Pacific Rim" when I was twelve years old. It would've been my favorite movie ever. There's been a lot of PG-13 summer action movies marketed toward kids lately and "Pacific Rim" is one of the best of them. It has great messages about heroism, self-sacrifice and facing your fears, all set in between epic robot versus alien fight scenes. Good stuff. I'm looking forward to the sequel.

Anthony Machado, 23, is a co-owner of Frontier Games in downtown Twin Falls. He hopes one day to make a feature film.

Cowboys Stay Alive at ‘AA’ State Tourney

TIMES-NEWS

Boise Capitals today at 4 p.m.

MERIDIAN • The Twin Falls Cowboys kept their American Legion Baseball Class AA state tournament hopes alive Thursday, eliminating the Lewis-Clark Twins 7-4 in a knockout game that came a little more than 12 hours after the Cowboys were bumped into the losers’ bracket.

Damon Jones hit a go-ahead two-run single in the sixth inning that put the Cowboys up to stay. He made sure it counted on the mound as well, tossing 8 2-3 innings and striking out 14 batters. Braden Stutzman cleaned up the save, retiring the final batter with the bases loaded.

Twin Falls led Rocky Mountain 4-3 in the bottom of the ninth Wednesday evening but gave up two runs to fall 5-4.

Boise State Starts Season Ranked No. 19

TIMES-NEWS

The Boise State football team will start the season from No. 19.

That’s where the Broncos fell in the preseason coaches poll, released Thursday morning by USA Today, which is responsible for collecting votes.

This is the fifth straight year Boise State has been ranked in the coaches’ preseason Top 25.

None of Boise State’s opponents were ranked. Fresno State was sixth-highest among “others receiving votes,” while Utah State, BYU and season-opening opponent Washington also received votes.

This is the first time in four seasons

Boise State won’t open against a ranked opponent from a BCS conference.

Two-time defending national champion Alabama was an overwhelming choice for No. 1, receiving 58 of 62 first-place votes. Ohio State was second and received three first-place votes. Oregon is No. 3, Stanford is 4, Georgia is five and No. 6 Texas A&M received the other first-place vote.

Half the top 10 is from the Southeastern Conference, which has won the last seven national championships, including three in the last four years by Alabama.

South Carolina is No. 7 and Florida is No. 10. No. 8 Clemson and No. 9

Louisville round out the top 10. No. 13 LSU gives the SEC six teams in the top 25. Notre Dame, which lost the BCS title game 42-14 to Alabama last season, is No. 11.

Idaho faces one preseason-ranked team, No. 12 Florida State, and four others that received votes: Fresno State, Arkansas State, Mississippi and Northern Illinois.

Boise State coach Chris Petersen is among the voters this season, as are BYU’s Bronco Mendenhall and Utah’s Kyle Whittingham. The coaches poll constitutes one of three polls that determine the BCS standings.

Twitter Just Another Headache in College Sports World?

Texas A&M quarterback Johnny Manziel

@JManziel2: (expletive) like tonight is a reason why I can't wait to leave college station...whenever it may be

- note: tweet later deleted

Former Alabama offensive lineman D.J. Fluker

@DjFluker76: Yea I took $ n college so wat. I did wat I had to do. Agents was tryin to pimp me so I pimped them. Cast da 1st stone.

- note: agent later claimed account had been hacked

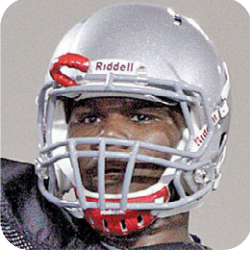

Idaho receiver Taylor Elmo

@TjMO81: Fire a man to keep your own job???

Florida State wide receiver Kenny Shaw

@KShaw81: Child support is worst than aids

Ohio State quarterback Cardale Jones

@Cordale10: Why should we have to go to class if we came here to play FOOTBALL, we ain't come to play SCHOOL, classes are POINTLESS

Who knew 140 characters could cause such a ruckus?

It’s been a much-discussed topic lately: athletes sending ill-advised tweets. One of the most scrutinized lately has been the mid-June rant by Heisman Trophy winner Johnny Manziel, the Texas A&M quarterback and 2012 Heisman Trophy winner.

“(Expletive) like tonight is a reason why I can’t wait to leave college station...whenever it may be”

Hashtag: Oops.

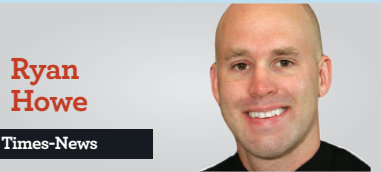

Here’s the trouble with Twitter. It’s unfiltered and unchecked by a publicist or a sports information office — let alone an individual’s better judgment.

With proper restraint, Twitter can be an effective tool for athletes to connect with fans on a personal level. But inevitably, Twitter has become a platform for immature remarks, emotional reactions, drunken outbursts and otherwise embarrassing foolery.

And it’s very much a part of today’s sports culture.

For our dear readers who are unfamiliar with Twitter — and if you’re still reading this column on a printed page with ink-smudged fingertips, chances are this pertains to you — it’s an online social networking service whose users post messages (known as “tweets”) up to 140 characters in length. Users can also post pictures and videos for all the world to see.

It’s what the kids are into these days, which makes it particularly treacherous for college athletes:

They’re young and they’re on Twitter, but they’re also in the public spotlight. Twenty-year-old Manziel is learning the hard way.

But Manziel isn’t alone. Perhaps hundreds of careless tweets by college athletes exist. Considering the negative attention student-athletes and universities receive for such Tweets, why do they continue?

“They don’t have their Twitter taken away from them, that’s why they keep doing it,” said Boise State senior offensive lineman Charles Leno.

Scandalous tweets don’t come out of Boise. That’s because in 2010, head coach Chris Petersen banned Twitter for his players.

In a radio interview last week on The Jim Rome Show, Petersen spoke about the ban.

“I still believe strongly in that just because I think it can be emotional, and all of a sudden they hit that send button, and five minutes later, they’re going, ‘Oh,’” Petersen said on Rome’s show.

Petersen has a Twitter account with more than 5,250 followers, but he hasn’t tweeted once. His assistant coaches use Twitter, mostly for recruiting purposes.

Bronco players are allowed to use other social networking services such as Facebook and Instagram, but Twitter is off-limits. And that’s just fine, according to Leno.

“(Twitter) is just way faster information and people can get that information fast, and you don’t want to put anything out there that can jeopardize the program,” Leno said.

“This spring we had a guy come from an agency that talked about how to build a brand, and your brand is yourself. He told us about how we should never post anything that your mom and your coach wouldn’t want to know. Just make sure everything you post is correct and won’t get you in trouble,” Leno said.

BSU players know to be careful with the social networks they do have, or else Coach Petersen might cut those off, too.

“I think they’re scared to death we’re going to take away Instagram and Facebook and Vine and all those other things, so they don’t say a word about Twitter because it is so much the same,” Petersen said on Rome. “The important thing is, there are a lot of other social media outlets that our kids do use, and they do know, if they’re not smart and careful with it, well, that may go away as well.

“It’s a privilege to be here, it’s a privilege to play college football, and if you’re not doing it the right way and representing this university, your family and the rest of your teammates the way they need to be represented, then you don’t need to be on that stuff.”

That kind of wisdom can’t fit into 140 characters.

Bolt Prepares for Worlds That's Missing Top Stars

ASSOCIATED PRESS

Usain Bolt's balky hamstring is healed. So, too, are any other nagging injuries that have been holding him back in recent months.

The fastest man on the planet feels completely healthy heading into the world championships in Moscow next week.

His sport can't say the same thing.

Track has a dark cloud hanging over it after some of the best sprinters recently tested positive for banned substances, a list that includes Tyson Gay, Asafa Powell, Veronica Campbell-Brown and Sherone Simpson.

These days, Bolt's task may not be to just win titles, but to win in spectacular fashion, which could be one way to change the conversation his sport is currently mired in.

The Jamaican sensation insists there's no added pressure and that once he coils his 6-foot-5 frame into the starting blocks, his focus is only on one thing — the finish line.

"I can't let those scandals cloud my job," Bolt wrote in an email to The Associated Press. "I see running as a gift given to me to inspire people."

He certainly puts on an entertaining show, preening and prancing before a race and then dominating once the gun goes off. As is often the case, Bolt will be the star attraction in Moscow even in a depleted field.

"I'd be lying if I said we have the normal anticipation and hype going into the worlds," said Ato Boldon, a four-time Olympic medalist and NBC sprint analyst. "The fans, on social media, they're like, 'I'll watch, but it's not like I can see Gay vs. Bolt. It's not what it could've been.'"

Maybe not. But there's always the prospect of what numbers Bolt can put on the board, because a world record is always possible when he steps on the track.

Bolt's proud sprinting country has fallen under scrutiny after Powell and Simpson tested positive for a banned stimulant at their national championships in June. Before that, Campbell-Brown had a positive test for a banned diuretic at a meet on the island in May.

Obviously, that doesn't reflect well on his nation.

"Of course there is an impact, but I have to remain focused on making my country proud," said Bolt, who will be featured as a character in the video game "Temple Run 2" from Imangi Studios and given special abilities that will make him run — as if he needs it — even faster. "Right now, my only focus is winning three gold medals at worlds."

Bolt has been virtually unbeatable since his rise to prominence leading up to the 2008 Beijing Olympics. He's won six Olympic titles and shattered world records in the 100 (his current mark is 9.58 seconds) and the 200 (19.19).

Both the current records were set in 2009, the year after Beijing, which kept track in the headlines for the right reasons.

In 2013, the year after the London Olympics, Bolt is essentially racing against the clock again. His main competition is gone. Johan Blake, who famously beat him in the 100 and 200 at Olympic trials last year and who won worlds in 2011 when Bolt false-started, is out with a hamstring injury. Gay will be a no-show after relinquishing his spots when he failed drug tests this summer.

Not that Bolt is too concerned with whomever is stepping into the blocks next to him — never has been, really.

"Having the best athletes in the world in the finals is always good for the sport," Bolt said. "However, I have to focus on what I have to do and that's winning three gold medals at worlds."

The main person in his way figures to be Justin Gatlin, the American who edged him at a meet in Rome nearly two months ago. Asked if Gatlin is on his mind, Bolt responded: "I never focus on any single athlete."

Gatlin certainly is concentrating on Bolt, though. Gatlin is eager for a rematch on an even grander stage and with even more fans watching, just to validate his success that day in Rome against a sprinter who rarely gets beat.

"I have mutual respect for him," said Gatlin, who added a bronze medal in London to the gold he captured at the 2004 Athens Games. "I'm not scared of anything. I have to (compete) anyway, so why do it with fear in my heart?"

"He knows that I'm going to come with my 'A' and he's going to come with his 'A' game, because we're both the kind of people that turn it on when the lights come on in a competition."

Denver Broncos cornerback Champ Bailey motions during NFL football training camp on July 25 in Englewood, Colo. When a cornerback's career is reaching the end, the hints are subtle. People keep looking for signs that Bailey's career is winding down. Yet the Broncos' top cover man, now in his 15th training camp, keeps insisting he's not through.

Bailey Still Locks Down Corner, Eyes Super Bowl

ASSOCIATED PRESS

ENGLEWOOD, Colo. • It happens to so many of the great cornerbacks and Champ Bailey knows it will happen to him, too.

Entering his 15th year in the NFL and still in search of the Super Bowl title that is the only piece missing from a Hall of Fame-bound career, Bailey knows the move from cornerback to safety is inevitable for defensive backs trying to prolong their careers.

"You've got to look at history," Bailey said after practice on Thursday. "Ronnie Lott. Rod Woodson. Aeneas Williams. They all did it and they all did it before I did. History says this is about that time. I understand that and I'm not naive about it."

Lott was 26 when he made the move — a small detour on his way to the Hall of Fame. Williams was 33. Woodson was 34. Bailey turned 35 in the offseason. He knows the whispers and questions get louder with each passing year.

Every time he gets beaten badly — and that happened twice in the playoff loss to Baltimore last year — it's not simply a bad play, but rather a possible sign that his career is dwindling.

Every time the Broncos sign or draft another cornerback — and that happened a handful of times this offseason — it's not simply a transaction but rather a possible sign the Broncos are looking for his eventual replacement.

All of which may be true, Bailey concedes.

"But nobody's going to determine when I move if I don't feel like it's the right time," he said. "It'll definitely be a decision and, whether I'm here or somewhere else, it has to be the right fit."

Through the first week of this, his 10th preseason with the Broncos, Bailey and Denver still look to be the right fit for each other, the way they have been since Bailey arrived in Denver in a trade with Washington for Clinton Portis in the 2004 offseason.

Bailey is lining up in his usual spot on the corner, sparring with members of Denver's loaded receiving corps — namely, Demaryius Thomas and Eric Decker. In deference to the mileage on those thirty-something legs, the Broncos are limiting his time on the practice field, the same way they have the last few seasons.

"I think that's going to help in the long run," Bailey said.

But his time on the sideline isn't down time. It's time spent observing, studying, mentoring. Bailey didn't get to his spot as one of the most revered cornerbacks in the game without becoming a student of the game itself.

"I would say the defense, really," cornerback Chris Harris said when asked what he's learned from Bailey.

"Being able to ID what the offenses are trying to do to try to attack me. Champ gives me an idea how guys want to run routes toward him."

Harris is among those benefiting from playing in the same backfield as Bailey, but also among those who could be in line to take his spot one day.

In the offseason, the Broncos signed free agent Dominique Rodgers-Cromartie and drafted speedy Kayvon Webster, who, upon learning he would get the chance to play with Bailey, said, "I love Champ. Favorite corner."

After each move, the underlying question was whether the transaction signaled the official start of the beginning of the end for Roland "Champ" Bailey in the lockdown corner position.

"He can still get the job done," Harris insists. "He wouldn't be here if he can't do it. Everybody has confidence in him to still be Champ Bailey."

By "being Champ Bailey" over his first 14 seasons, he has compiled one of the most impressive stat lines in history for a cornerback, including:

- 12 career Pro Bowl selections, a record for a defensive back.
- 52 career interceptions, which places him third on the list of active players.
- A total of three pass interference calls in 504 throws his way over the past seven years, according to Stats Inc.

Teams are going after him more of late, and figure to do so again in 2013. Bailey was victimized by Baltimore's Torrey Smith, who caught a pair of long touchdown passes against him in Denver's 38-35 playoff loss to the Ravens.

It made for a long offseason for Bailey, who, like all great cornerbacks, has learned to have a short memory.

"I'm still Champ," he said. "I still can play this game at a high level and I believe in myself 100 percent just as much as when I was 25. There's no challenge put in front of me that I won't take on like a man and go out there and try to do the best that I can. I believe in myself and only time will tell if I need to move or anything like that."

For now, the answer is 'No.' But regardless of the position, he knows time is running out in the quest for a Super Bowl ring.

"I look at it as my only shot," Bailey said of the 2013 season. "I don't know what's to be said about next year. I'm looking at right now as my only shot. I hope everybody in that locker room feels the same way because nothing's guaranteed in this league and we could all be in different places next year."

Jets' Geno Smith Had to Pick: Art or Football?

ASSOCIATED PRESS

CORTLAND, N.Y. • Geno Smith's brothers still have his favorite piece of artwork hanging on the wall of their mother's home.

It could be worth a pretty penny someday. For now, its value is solely sentimental.

When the New York Jets rookie quarterback was in high school, he grabbed a huge sheet of poster board, broke out a few Sharpie markers and got to work on drawing his favorite superheroes. One by one — and making sure he captured every detail — Batman, Superman, Wolverine, Captain America and Spider-Man, among others, appeared to his brothers' amazement.

"Art is something I really love," Smith said. "I have a creative mind."

Smith is locked in a tight competition with Mark Sanchez for the Jets' starting quarterback job. But the rookie wasn't always just a star on the football field. Before he went to high school in south Florida, Smith had to make a choice between throwing touchdowns and painting pictures.

ASSOCIATED PRESS

New York Jets quarterback Geno Smith drops back to pass at their NFL football training camp on Monday in Cortland, N.Y.

"I had a passion for them both," Smith said in an interview with The Associated Press after practice Wednesday. "But I enjoy the passion for being out on the field and being with my teammates and constantly practicing and conditioning, all the challenges that come with playing football."

Smith paused for a second, and then started laughing.

"And, in art," he said, "you really don't get famous until you're dead."

He already has the fame stuff down, especially after a record-breaking career at West Virginia University. Smith was perhaps the biggest name available in the draft in April, but slipped from the first to the second round — and the frowns from his disappointment were caught on camera at Radio City Music Hall.

He also made headlines when he fired his agents and signed on with hip-hop artist Jay-Z's sports agency. Smith raised some eyebrows again when he opted to work out on his own in Florida rather than attend Sanchez's Jets West camp in southern California.

It's the kind of tumultuous few months that can create some pretty interesting and introspective artwork.

"I don't draw as much anymore, but I still doodle, yeah, in my notepads," Smith said. "I caught myself just drawing a picture the other day and it said, 'Practice Better.' That was kind of a message to myself."

The love for art began as a little kid, when he saw his sister, Kiyondra Talley, drawing things he could only dream of.

"She was kind of like a prodigy," Smith said. "She could paint anything and it would look spot on. I wasn't really that good, to be honest with you. I was a couple of years younger than her, and it made me kind of mad that she was so good."

"I took it upon myself to try to be better than her, so I just developed a love for it."

He and his buddies started small, with cartoon characters such as Mickey Mouse and Dragon Ball Z. Around fourth or fifth grade, Smith began trying to draw portraits of family members.

"I'd just take pictures in my house and sit down for hours upon hours and just draw them," he said. "I'd ball up papers and throw them away until I got the right one."

Golf HARR FINISHES 13TH AT GJAC

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. • Sierra Harr bounced back in Thursday's final round of the Girls Junior Americas Cup, shooting a 2-over 74 to finish tied for 13th out of 71 golfers in the three-day tournament.

Harr shot a total score of 7-over 223, 12 shots behind Ana Paula Valdez of Mexico, the overall champion.

The Castleford senior's score was the best for the Idaho contingent, which finished tied for seventh in the team standings with a 681. The finish was the highest by Team Idaho at the tournament.

Mexico dominated the event, placing all four of its golfers in the top five and running away with the team title with a 633 score, 16 shots ahead of Southern California.

NCAA Taking Flexible Approach to Tourney Games

INDIANAPOLIS • The NCAA announced changes Thursday to the way it will select teams for the men's basketball tournament, adding flexibility in hopes of keeping teams properly seeded.

The selection committee voted last week to change the bracketing principles in hopes of keeping teams where they naturally belong, Chairman Ron Wellman told reporters. In previous years, the committee has had to move a team up or down one or two lines to accommodate rules such as when conference teams can meet in the tourney.

Previously, conference teams couldn't meet until the regional final — unless a conference had nine teams in the field.

The changes will not affect which teams get into the tourney. But they will allow conference teams that have played only once during the season — including league tournaments — to meet as early as the third round. Teams that have played twice will not face one another until the regional semifinals and teams that have played three times cannot meet until the regional championship.

Committee members also voted to try and avoid non-conference rematches during the First Four and the second round, and agreed to relax the rules if two or more teams from the same conference are among the last four at-large bids. Those last four would meet in the First Four.

New Enforcement Policies Take Effect at NCAA

INDIANAPOLIS • Rule-breakers beware. The NCAA is now holding everyone more accountable with harsher punishments.

More than a year after hammering Penn State for Jerry Sandusky's crimes and nearly six months after shaking up the enforcement division because of a self-inflicted scandal, the governing body cast aside its outdated two-tiered penalty structure and deliberative hearing process in favor of new policies that could result in the suspension of coaches and more consistent punishments for major infractions.

The new rules, approved in October, officially took effect Thursday.

College fans will see a noticeable difference in the way cases are handled.

Instead of categorizing infractions as major or secondary, there will now be four categories. Punishments will be reduced or toughened based on whether there are mitigating or aggravating circumstances. Teams or schools found to be in "serious breach of conduct" with aggravating circumstances could face severe penalties, if not those approaching Penn State's unprecedented sanctions (four-year postseason ban and a $60 million fine).

Head coaches will find themselves under more scrutiny. By changing the burden from "presumption of knowledge" to "presumption of responsibility," head coaches could now be suspended for up to one full season if any member of their staff commits a serious rules infraction.

The changes will not affect cases that have already been heard, such as the pending case against the University of Miami, and schools that are found to have committed infractions before the board's vote on Oct. 30 will be processed under the new structure but will face penalties under the previous structure. Infractions that occurred after Oct. 30 or both before and after will face the new punishments.

Former BSU Coach Hawkins Fired from CFL Job

MONTREAL • The Montreal Alouettes fired coach Dan Hawkins on Thursday, ending the former Boise State and Colorado coach's run with the CFL team after only five games.

General manager Jim Popp is taking over as coach. The Alouettes are 2-3.

"I won't get into specifics, but there are some issues that we felt should be moving along quicker than they are," Popp said. "We feel it's going very slow. We're a veteran team. We're looking for results now. Hopefully, we can get ourselves back to the Alouette way."

Hawkins was hired Feb. 19 to replace Marc Trestman, who left to coach the NFL's Chicago Bears. In five seasons, Trestman took the Alouettes to three Grey Cup games, winning twice.

Sensitivity Training Set for Eagles WR

PHILADELPHIA • The

Philadelphia Eagles are setting up Riley Cooper with sensitivity training after the wide receiver was caught on video making a racial slur.

"In meeting with Riley yesterday, we decided together that his next step will be to seek outside assistance to help him fully understand the impact of his words and actions," the team said in a statement Thursday. "He needs to reflect. As an organization, we will provide the resources he needs to do so."

Cooper apologized profusely Wednesday after a video of him using the N-word at a Kenny Chesney concert last month surfaced on the Internet. The Eagles immediately fined him. Cooper, an Oklahoma City native, was selected in the 2010 fifth round by the Eagles out of the University of Florida. He had 248 yards receiving and three touchdowns last season.

Carroll: Harvin Faces Long Rehab

RENTON, Wash. • Seattle Seahawks coach Pete Carroll says wide receiver Percy Harvin faces a long rehab process after having surgery Thursday to repair his injured hip.

Carroll said the surgery performed in New York went "very well" but that the team doesn't have a timetable for his recovery. Harvin will remain in New York for the next few weeks for the beginning of his rehab before returning to Seattle.

Carroll said the team feels even more hopeful that Harvin will be able to play this season after getting all the information from the surgery. He is still likely to miss significant time this season.

Harvin was placed on the physically unable to perform list prior to training camp and seems destined to remain there to start the regular season.

Simpson Leads Bridgestone

AKRON, Ohio • Webb Simpson shot a 6-under 64 in his first competitive round at Firestone Country Club to take a one-stroke lead in the Bridgestone Invitational.

The 2012 U.S. Open champion had six birdies in an eight-hole span to get the upper hand on seven-time Bridgestone winner Tiger Woods. Woods, with top-10 finishes in 11 of his 13 starts on the course, shot a 66 in the World Golf Championships event.

Today's Highlight:
On Aug. 2, 1943, during World War II, U.S. Navy boat PT-109, commanded by Lt. (jg) John F. Kennedy, sank after being rammed in the middle of the night by the Japanese destroyer Amagiri off the Solomon Islands. Two crew members were killed; Kennedy led the survivors to nearby islands until they could be rescued.

TODAY IN HISTORY

On this date:
In 1776, members of the Continental Congress began attaching their signatures to the Declaration of Independence.

In 1862, the Ambulance Corps for the Army of the Potomac was created at the order of Maj. Gen. George McClellan during the Civil War.

In 1876, frontiersman "Wild Bill" Hickok was shot and killed while playing poker at a saloon in Deadwood, Dakota Territory, by Jack McCall, who was later hanged.

In 1909, the original Lincoln "wheat" penny first went into circulation, replacing the "Indian Head" cent.

In 1922, Alexander Graham Bell, generally regarded as the inventor of the telephone, died in Nova Scotia, Canada, at age 75.

In 1923, the 29th president of the United States, Warren G. Harding, died in San Francisco; Vice President Calvin Coolidge became president.

In 1934, German President Paul von Hindenburg died, paving the way for Adolf Hitler's complete takeover.

In 1945, President Harry S. Truman, Soviet leader Josef Stalin and British Prime Minister Clement Attlee concluded the Potsdam conference.

In 1964, the destroyer USS Maddox suffered light damage from North Vietnamese patrol torpedo boats in the Gulf of Tonkin.

In 1974, former White House counsel John W. Dean III was sentenced to one to four years in prison for obstruction of justice in the Watergate coverup. (Dean ended up serving four months.)

In 1985, 135 people were killed when a Delta Air Lines jetliner crashed while attempting to land at Dallas-Fort Worth International Airport.

In 1990, Iraq invaded Kuwait, seizing control of the oil-rich emirate. (The Iraqis were later driven out in Operation Desert Storm.)

Ten years ago: Saddam Hussein's two elder sons and a grandson were buried as martyrs near the deposed Iraqi leader's hometown of Tikrit, where insurgents afterward attacked U.S. troops with three remote-controlled bombs. Liberian President Charles Taylor agreed to cede power.

IF AUGUST 2 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: Tread water for the next few weeks, even if you feel frustrated and want to make a break for it. Rather than make changes, this is a time to clean up problems from the past. You might have extra burdens to handle, so don't pile up more liabilities. You can take a quick vacation or enjoy a fling in September when your fun-loving side is on display. However, wait until November, December and January, when everything will run smoothly, to make a major job change, interview for a new position, or ask for a commitment from a loved one. That's a fabulous time to launch plans, start something new, or embrace any opportunities that pop up.

HOROSCOPE
Jeraldine Saunders

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Remain footloose and fancy free this weekend. Sudden attractions, instant friendships and romantic passions are highlighted under these cosmic conditions, but don't give your heart away too quickly.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Generosity seems to have strings attached. Don't look a gift horse in the mouth because you might find out that horse has dental problems and could become a major responsibility.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Be as faithful as Horton who hatched the egg by never wavering in his devotion. Today is a good time to show your appreciation for the loved ones in your life. Offer a lasting token of your affection.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Be crystal clear about terms. Your enthusiasm and optimism break the ice on social and business levels, but someone could misinterpret your meaning. Someone may be happy to let you take the lead.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Try to do something completely unique and different. Compliments from others might seem somewhat undeserved, but you can easily rise to the occasion graciously. Be the light that attracts the moths.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): There are plenty of fish in the sea. Where a new hookup is concerned, you might consider a policy of "catch and release." Wait for better celestial conditions and you may land a much better catch.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Opposites may attract, but it's usually birds of a feather that flock together. You might be fascinated by someone with a unique background or intrigued by exotic places, but there's no place like home.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Wolves seldom lose sleep over the opinion of sheep. You may be less compassionate and loving and more focused on making a killing in the business world. Hold off on major decisions.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Reassess financial matters over the weekend and consider important future changes carefully. Discuss deep feelings with a loved one and overcome fears of being laughed at for having them.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): An ability to work well with others can help lead you to success. You might be passionate about making money or earning a promotion. Once you focus on doing your best, you will.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Dig into the ground beneath your feet. Remain grounded; avoid flights of fancy as the weekend unfolds. You could easily imagine that a relationship is much better, or much worse, than it really is.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): A new love interest might be Mr. or Ms. Right, or merely Mr. or Ms. right now. Only will time will tell if a new hookup can make it to the finish line, so don't dump one romantic partner for another one.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE®

Bobby Wolff

"The dream, alone, is of interest. What is life, without a dream?"

— Edmond Rostand

Former president of the European Bridge League Bill Pencharz reported this deal, played by Mary Gordon at his duplicate bridge club in central France. As he said, "Mary is a fine intuitive player, and when this deal came up at her table while she was playing with Bill, she got it right, without apparent pause for thought. Few of us would have been able to duplicate her play — or her speed."

Defending four hearts, after a spade to East's queen, a diamond to West's ace and a diamond ruff, East didn't have the courage to switch to a club, which would have broken up the position. Instead, he played a heart, giving Mary her chance.

Five rounds of hearts followed (two clubs being discarded from dummy), and two further rounds of diamonds saw the lead in dummy in a three-card ending, with North holding the K-9 of spades and the bare club ace while declarer had two clubs and a trump left.

Both defenders now needed to keep two spades, or declarer could establish a winner in that suit. If East bared his spade ace, declarer would ruff a low spade to hand, and if West came down to the bare spade jack, declarer would lead the spade king from dummy to establish the dummy's nine.

Accordingly, both defenders reduced to one club. Mary cashed the club ace, ruffed a spade to hand, and took her long club at trick 13.

ANSWER: Your partner signed off facing your limit-raise or better in diamonds. What now? It would be premature to bid three no-trump directly. Try three hearts, hoping partner can bid three no-trump with a positional club stop such as the queen. If he temporizes with a three-spade bid, you will be forced to bid three no-trump, having shown doubt in the process.

SUDOKU

Sudoku is a number-placing puzzle based on a 9x9 grid with several given numbers. The object is to place the numbers 1 to 9 in the empty squares so that each row, each column and each 3x3 box contains the same number only once. The difficulty level of the Conceptis Sudoku increases from Monday to Sunday.
