Prostitution in Twin Falls

Prostitution arrests are rare in Twin Falls, according to local police, but the interstate system in the Magic Valley brings with it human and drug trafficking across our borders.

BY ALISON GENE SMITH
alismith@magicvalley.com

TWIN FALLS • Across the country this week, during a three-day FBI sweep, police arrested 150 pimps and rescued 105 children who had been forced into prostitution.

While there were no Idaho arrests, local investigators say they know human trafficking happens here. The Magic Valley lies along a main corridor of the interstate system, which means drugs and humans are being trafficked across our borders. Prostitution arrests are fairly rare in Twin Falls, and detectives with local police and the Twin Falls County Sheriff's Office say they haven't seen a case of child prostitution in their careers. In many local cases, women who may or may not have a pimp come into town, advertise they're at a hotel, then move on, said sheriff's Lt. Perry Barnhill.

"I wish we could look into it more," Barnhill said. "I think we could find out a lot more about it." The sheriff's office was extremely productive in its Rock Creek Park sting operation last summer, he said. "We were there for a short time and had two customers right away." Barnhill said deputies could stand to do more operations, but the time it takes to set them up is a roadblock. "It is solely time and manpower," he said. "It's not a funding issue." The sheriff's office and police monitor free classified websites, such as Craigslist and Backpage, for posts about possible prostitution. Those sites usually contain contact information police try to use, Barnhill said.

TWIN FALLS • Emery Petersen isn't much for bragging. If you ask about his recent title win, don't expect a long answer. Petersen and his doubles partner, Jack Largent, of Las Vegas, Nev., recently won first place in tennis in the 80- to 84-year-old category at the 2013 National Senior Games. The pair had to qualify to compete at the games, held July 19 to Aug. 1 in Cleveland. The nonprofit National Senior Games are designed to motivate healthy lifestyles among adults 50 and older. This year's event drew 10,800 contestants in 19 sporting events. Competitors must qualify the year before through NSGA-sanctioned state qualifying games

Just before the national contest, Petersen and Largent won in their age category at a tennis tournament sponsored by Nike in Portland, Ore. "It does not mean we are the best in the U.S.," Petersen said. But ask those who play with Petersen, and they might say it does make him one of the best. "It's quite an accomplishment," said Ann Vogt, Magic Valley area league coordinator for the Idaho Tennis Association. "He's our hero in the tennis world." Vogt is a tennis coach at Twin Falls High and coordinates the summer league for the Magic Valley Tennis Team on which Petersen plays. "Not only does he whip us all, he's twice our age," Vogt said. "He beats the high school kids. These kids could learn a lot from Emery." Petersen and Largent are ranked fifth nationally in their age division, according to the U.S. Tennis Association. Petersen, 80, said it's the highest ranking he has reached since he resurged his love for tennis almost 40 years ago and started pursuing it seriously 15 years ago. He first picked up a ball and racket when he was a student at Twin Falls High. There wasn't much of a tennis team, he said. They didn't even have a coach. "The basketball coach would come around once a week and ask, 'How you guys doing?'" Petersen said. After high school, he played now and then. But between college, work and life, there wasn't much time. It was when he retired in 1998 and started spending winters in Palm Desert, Calif., that Petersen starting becoming a fixture at tennis tournaments. Over the past 15 years, he has competed

Firefighters Control Most of This Week's Area Wildfires

TIMES-NEWS

TWIN FALLS • All 17 wildfires that burst across south-central Idaho Wednesday evening are expected to have been suppressed by today. The blazes started by Wednesday's lightning storm scorched more than 20,700 acres. Most of the wildfires sparked in remote areas, causing few structures to be threatened by flames. The public's quick response to report the fires helped keep damage to a minimum. Cooler weather Thursday night aided firefighters in putting out many of the active fires. As of Friday, firefighters had controlled the Coonskin, Crows Nest, Buck Flat, Millard, 3 Well, Red Bridge, Red Bridge 2 and Black Ridge fires. Two more are expected to be controlled today: The Southeast Red Bridge Fire, about 4 miles east of Notch Butte, stretching south toward Eden, was contained Friday. The 4,240-acre Cinder Road Fire, 14 miles northeast of Hazelton, also was contained Friday.

WinCo Model Setting New Grocery Industry Standard

BY AUDREY DUTTON
Idaho Statesman

BOISE (AP) • About once a month, Burt Flickinger III walks into a WinCo supermarket and stares down the "Wall of Values" — a trademark wall-to-wall display just inside WinCo entrances that catches customers' eyes with marked-down crackers, canned soup, boxed pasta or s'mores supplies. Flickinger lingers in the store and talks to everyone he can. He asks vendors for intimate details about WinCo. He gets the dirt on its discount structure. And when the New York-based retail analyst, who specializes in the art of grocery, heads back to the East Coast and talks with university students, he'll use WinCo Foods as a case study in shrewd retailing. "WinCo arguably may be the best retailer in the Western U.S.," he says. Tell us how you really feel, Flickinger. "WinCo is really unstoppable at this point." One more time? "They're Wal-Mart's worst nightmare." In his career of touring retailers, Flickinger says he found one comparable business when it comes to employees, efficiency, customer service and sanitation. It's called Pak 'N Save. It's in New Zealand. Flickinger is far from the only fan of the Boise-based company. Its lack of a membership fee for access to lower-priced goods made it popular enough to grow from a single store on Overland Road east of Orchard Street in 1967 into a regional chain with about $5.5 billion in sales last year, making it one of Idaho's largest for-profit companies. WinCo has almost 15,000 employees and close to 100 stores open or coming soon. It has two stores opening in 2014 in the Dallas-Fort Worth area and plans additional locations in Texas, its latest conquest. The company is privately held and doesn't disclose profits. It keeps a low profile and

THE MARKET AT A GLANCE

Tepid Jobs News Barely Dents Stock Market Advance

NEW YORK (AP) • A tepid jobs report Friday barely dented a summer rally on the stock market.

The Standard & Poor's 500 index ended the week 1 percent higher after breaking through 1,700 points for the first time Thursday. The index has risen for five of the last six weeks. The Dow Jones industrial average rose 0.6 percent and is on a streak of six weekly gains. On Friday, indexes dropped in early trading after the U.S. added fewer jobs than forecast in July, curbing optimism that the economy is poised to pick up strength in the second half of the year.

ASK ST. LUKE'S

What Is Gout, and How Can It Be Treated?

Dr. Betty Sugden
St. Luke's Clinic
Jerome Family Medicine

Q. I'm a 40-year-old male and have a very inflamed right toe and am worried it may be gout. Can you tell me what gout is and how it can be treated?
Troy, Heyburn

Gout is more common in men, who may get it at a younger age. It can appear in any joint in the body with redness, pain and swelling, but it's most prevalent in the feet. Classic signs are a swollen, red toe, which can be extremely painful. It occurs suddenly and can go away in a week or two, but it may return.

Gout usually affects one joint but can afflict multiple joints — sometimes in the knee or ankle.

Gout can be caused by one or more underlying conditions.

When too much uric acid is in the blood, it can be deposited in the joints, causing soreness and inflammation.

Many cases have a genetic predisposition: Your body either produces too much uric acid, or your kidneys don't get rid of the acid as they should.

Diseases such as cancer and kidney failure may cause gout, too. Cancer cells can make a lot of uric acid.

Other gout causes include low doses of aspirin, use of diuretics, and overindulgence in alcohol, specifically beer and hard liquor.

Gout causes varying degrees of pain and can be exacerbated by dehydration, diet and medications.

Meats, organ meats and seafood can aggravate gout and cause recurrences.

If left untreated for a long period of time, gout can impair kidney function.

See your physician right away, especially if your joint appears to be infected. The best way to determine if you have gout is for your provider to take a sample of liquid from your joint to see if uric acid crystals are present.

Some diagnoses require only a simple blood test for uric acid and an examination of the affected joint. Your provider can determine whether any underlying condition may be the cause of the inflammation and redness.

Eating a healthy, low-fat diet, lean meats and lots of fruits and vegetables can help in treatment of gout. Anti-inflammatory, over-the-counter medications can reduce the swelling and pain.

More Schools Sign Up for Wireless Internet

TIMES-NEWS

BOISE • More than 80 percent of eligible Idaho school districts and public charter schools have signed up to have wireless Internet access by the end of the upcoming school year.

Of the possible 137 districts and public charter schools, 93 districts and 21 charter schools have chosen to participate.

Last month, the Idaho Department of Education signed a $2.1 million annual contract with Education Networks of America for a managed service.

Under the five-year contract, the company will provide uninterrupted, high-speed wireless Internet access in public high schools, as well as ongoing support and repair.

All schools that opted in for wireless connectivity this school year should be connected by March.

If a district or charter school did not opt in, they will have the opportunity again next school year.

For a full list of schools and districts that opted in, visit www.sde.idaho.gov/site/tech_services/requestForProposal.htm.

WEATHER

Heat Will Come Back Sunday

A cooler air mass moved into parts of Idaho on Friday, with local temperatures registering about 10 degrees below normal. That trend continues today, with temperatures below normal. Afternoon high temperatures in the valleys will climb into the mid to upper 80s. The normal high this time of year is 91.

The jet stream will start to move north Sunday, and temperatures will rise again. Beginning Sunday, temperatures will be back in the lower 90s and will hover there for most of next week.

Breezy conditions could develop Sunday, leading to more critical fire conditions.

The forecast will remain dry until some moisture works its way into southern Idaho next Wednesday and Thursday. That moisture could lead to a chance of isolated thunderstorms Wednesday and Thursday afternoon, with more gusty winds and critical fire conditions.

Twin Falls Chobani Plant Wins Design- Build Award

TIMES-NEWS

TWIN FALLS • Chobani's Greek yogurt plant in Twin Falls recently won a National Design-Build Award for Industrial/Process/Research Facilities.

The Design-Build Institute of America (DBIA) says the plant exemplifies collaboration and integration in project delivery.

"The 2013 Design-Build Project Awards serve to celebrate the people and projects that demonstrate what design-build done right can achieve to advance our industry and our economy," said a news release from Lisa Washington, DBIA executive director.

The awards showcase design-build best practices and celebrate the achievements of owners and design-build teams in 10 categories across the spectrum of horizontal and vertical construction. The categories are civic, commercial, correctional facilities, industrial/process/research facilities, educational facilities, health care, office, rehabilitation/renovation/restoration, transportation and water/wastewater.

Shambaugh & Son L.P. was the design-builder, general contractor and engineer on the Chobani project, and MSKTD & Associates Inc. was the architect.

The project is the world's largest, most complex yogurt processing plant, encompassing 1 million square feet. It was hyper-tracked, with a construction cycle completed in 10 months as opposed to two years. From foundations to product trials on the first two lines, the team effort peaked at 1,000 workers, six days a week in two 10-hour shifts to complete this record-time project. Design-build was used because it provided the most flexibility with many design and technology enhancements, and it was the only method able to achieve 10-month delivery, says the DBIA website.

Chobani's project will compete nationally against more than three dozen other projects for the best overall award, and the winner will be announced Nov. 5 at the Design-Build Conference and Expo at the Mirage in Las Vegas.

Offer to Buy ID Plant Raises Hopes, Draws Scrutiny

BY JOHN MILLER

Associated Press

BOISE • A $25 million offer intended to save a bankrupt polysilicon plant in Pocatello has city officials hopeful the facility and the jobs and economic boost it once promised can finally become a reality.

Given the history of the troubled project, some are taking a more skeptical view of the bid for the idle $600 million project.

An attorney for the plant's leading creditor, JH Kelly Inc., a Washington state construction company still owed about $25 million from the project, said there are several reasons to wonder about the seriousness of the recent bid.

"It just seems difficult to conceive these people are serious if they haven't made a written offer and haven't engaged capable bankruptcy counsel," said Ford Elsaesser, JH Kelly's attorney.

"The first thing a bankruptcy judge asks is: 'Show me the money,'" Elsaesser said.

John Regetz, head of the economic development agency in Pocatello, said Friday he welcomes any proposal that saves the facility.

"It's not our decision as to whether they'll put in a successful bid," he said.

The two companies tied to the bid are Arco Hills Silica Co. and Henderson, Nev.-based JCF Funding, a company whose website included numerous misspelled words and grammatical errors.

Together, Arco Hills and JCF made a verbal bid for the facility, owned by Hawaii-based Hoku Corp., now mired in bankruptcy.

Arco Hills was recently led by an executive awaiting sentencing on federal wire fraud charges in New York.

In June, former Arco Hills CEO Theodore Sweeten, of Ashland, Ore., pleaded guilty in U.S. District Court in New York for his role in a scheme to defraud an investor of $5 million. Sweeten served as executive of the Idaho Falls company until at least 2012.

According to New York prosecutors, Sweeten was among several people who divvied up $5 million, while duping a victim by fabricating bank statements. He's due to be sentenced Aug. 27 in Brooklyn and faces 20 years in prison.

Attempts to contact Sweeten were unsuccessful. His Oregon phone number wasn't listed.

According to a letter dated Feb. 19, 2012, however, Sweeten was working closely with JCF on winning money for Arco Hills' projects. In one passage, he thanked the Nevada company for securing some funding — and working to get more.

"It has helped us reach our next level of financing for a project that will end up employing, directly and indirectly, more than 4,000 people,"

Sweeten wrote, according to the letter posted on JCF's website.

Gordon W. Jenkins, president of Arco Hills, downplayed Sweeten's role at Arco Hills, saying he departed the company within the last year. Jenkins didn't give an exact date.

"The wire fraud has absolutely nothing to do with us," said Jenkins on Friday.

Francis W. Kreais III, listed as JCF Funding's owner, also didn't return phone calls Friday.

In a press release Thursday, however, Kreais indicated JCF has been working with Arco Hills "for over a year now" to secure control of Hoku's facility and produce polysilicon for solar panels.

On his web site, Kreais also offers investors, among other things, the chance to buy "one to four bags of palatinate ore concentrates" for $1 million each, pledging a return of 100 percent within 91 days.

Otter Banks $85K from Donors, Luna Pulls in Less

BOISE (AP) • Gov. C.L. "Butch" Otter raised $85,000 in campaign contributions as he prepares for what he says will be a run in 2014 for a third term.

Otter also forgave a $131,000 loan he'd previously made to his own campaign and ended the first six month of the year with just over $129,000 in his coffers, according to a report with the Idaho secretary of state's office.

Though Otter says he plans to run again, he has yet to make a formal announcement.

Meanwhile, another lawmaker who says he'll run again, Superintendent of Public Instruction Tom Luna, raised far less, adding just $4,750 to his campaign's reserves.

Congress: Divided, Discourteous, and Taking a Break

BY DAVID ESPO
AP Special Correspondent

WASHINGTON • The accomplishments are few, the chaos plentiful in the 113th Congress, a discourteous model of divided government now beginning a five-week break.

“Have senators sit down and shut up, OK?” Senate Majority Leader Harry Reid blurted out on Thursday as lawmakers milled about noisily at a time Sen. Susan Collins was trying to speak.

There was political calculation even in that. Democrats knew the Maine Republican was about rip into her own party’s leadership, and wanted to make sure her indictment could be heard.

Across the Capitol, unsteady bookends tell the story of the House’s first seven months in this two-year term. Internal dissent among Republicans nearly toppled Speaker John Boehner when lawmakers first convened in January. And leadership’s grip is no surer now: A routine spending bill was pulled from the floor this week, two days before the monthlong August break, for fear it would fall in a crossfire between opposing GOP factions.

A few weeks earlier, Boehner suggested a new standard for Congress. “We should not be judged on how many new laws we create. We ought to be judged on how many laws that we repeal,” he said as Republicans voted for the 38th and 39th time since 2011 to repeal or otherwise neuter the health care law known as Obamacare.

House Democrats claimed to hate all of this, yet couldn’t get enough.

After attacking virtually every move Republicans made for months, they demanded the GOP cancel summer vacation so Congress could stay in session. The break, Democratic leader Nancy Pelosi said, “shows shocking disregard for the American people and our economy.”

To be sure, there have been accomplishments since Congress convened last winter, although two of the more prominent ones merely avoided a meltdown rather than advancing the public’s preferred agenda.

A closed-door session helped produce compromise over President Barack Obama’s stalled nominations to administration posts and important boards — avoiding a blow-up that Republicans said would follow if Democrats changed the Senate’s filibuster rules unilaterally.

Months earlier, at the urging of their leaders, House Republicans agreed to raise the government’s debt limit rather than push the Treasury to the brink of a first-ever national default.

Legislation linking interest rates on student loans to the marketplace passed, and, too, a bill to strengthen the government’s response to crimes against women. Two more section of the tax code after former Sen. Kay Bailey Hutchison of Texas.

A third clarified the size of metal blanks to be used by the Baseball Hall of Fame in minting gold and silver commemorative coins: a diameter of .85 inches in the case of $5 gold coins, and 1.5 inches for $1 silvers.

The Senate passed sweeping immigration legislation to spend billions securing the nation’s borders against illegal entry and creating a path to citizenship for an estimated 11 million immigrants currently in the country unlawfully. The vote was 68-32, with all Democrats and about one-third of Republicans in favor.

But House Republicans, many of whom oppose granting citizenship to anyone living in the country illegally, deemed the bill a non-starter. They intend to have alternative legislation this fall. If it succeeds, that will give the two houses about a year to somehow compromise before Congress’ term expires.

The Senate approved a bipartisan farm bill that followed customary lines in providing funding simultaneously for growers and for government programs to feed the hungry.

But a revolt by tea party conservatives blocked passage of a combined bill in the House, which then approved a measure to aid farmers. The leadership promises one for nutrition programs this fall, and an attempt will be made to find common ground with the Senate.

So far, Congress’ classic two-house compromises have been elusive.

Both houses have approved budgets.

But some Senate Republicans have blocked Democratic attempts to begin compromise talks, saying they will relent only if there is agreement in advance not to raise the federal debt limit as part of any deal.

“Let me be clear, I don’t trust the Republicans,” said GOP Sen. Ted Cruz, a tea party-backed first-term lawmaker from Texas. “I don’t trust the Democrats, and I think a whole lot of Americans likewise don’t trust the Republicans or the Democrats because it is leadership in both parties that has got us into this mess.”

Indeed, most opinion polls over the past six months put public approval for Congress in the mid-teens, with disapproval generally over 70 percent.

And yet, says Rep. Peter King, R-N.Y., “Congress does reflect the American people and the American people are divided.”

Tempers Flare in Congress

WASHINGTON (AP) • Tempers and frustrations are flaring in Congress on the eve of its August recess.

“Have senators sit down and shut up, OK,” Majority Leader Harry Reid said Thursday, addressing freshman Wisconsin Sen. Tammy Baldwin, who was presiding over the Senate, but in an uncharacteristic loud voice aimed at chatting colleagues.

“It’s unfair ... it’s just not polite,” the Nevada Democrat added, referring to Sen. Susan Collins of Maine, who had been recognized to speak on a highway and housing bill about to be blocked.

House Speaker John Boehner told reporters earlier, quoting: “I’m sure the August recess will have our members in a better mood when they come back.”

The Ohio Republican’s comment followed a question about postponement of a vote on the House version of the highways bill.

Sen. Barbara Mikulski, D-Md., chair of the Senate Appropriations Committee, and other Senate Democratic leaders, speak to reporters, after Senate Republicans killed a $54 billion funding bill for transportation, housing and community development grants, at the Capitol on Thursday.

House OKs 40th Effort to Repeal Health Law

WASHINGTON (AP) • For the 40th time, Republicans pushed legislation through the House on Friday targeting President Barack Obama’s health care overhaul, this one a bill preventing the Internal Revenue Service from implementing any part of the health care law.

The measure, symbolic because of the certainty that it will be ignored by the Democratic-led Senate, was approved by a near party-line 232-185 vote. The legislation married two of the GOP’s favorite targets: the 2010 health care law and the IRS, which in May conceded it had improperly targeted conservative groups seeking tax-exempt status for detailed investigations.

Next year, the IRS will begin enforcing the requirement that most individuals have health insurance, collecting fines from people who don’t. The agency also will distribute subsidies to help people buy insurance in new exchanges. Repealing those provisions would enfeeble the heart of the measure, which was aimed in part at making health care more affordable for lower-income people. Analysts say healthy people must purchase health care to help cover the costs of those who are ill, and the fines are designed to prod those who are fit to buy policies.

Sponsor Rep. Tom Price, R-Ga., named his bill the “Keep the IRS Off Your Health Care Act.”

“We simply want patients and families and doctors to be in charge of health care, not Washington, D.C., and not the IRS,” Price said.

Democrats argued that Friday’s vote, the last before the House was joining the Senate in a five-week recess, was a waste of time that ignored the country’s larger economic and budget problems and was aimed instead at letting Republicans score political points with conservatives.

“Political red meat is not what this country needs,” said Rep. Joseph Crowley, D-N.Y. “We need a Congress with a vision for tomorrow.”

With the IRS under congressional and Justice Department investigations for its mishandling of groups’ applications for tax-exempt status, Republicans warned that the agency should not get involved in Americans’ health care. “This is nothing short of an unwelcome, big-government overreach into the most personal aspect of our lives,” said House Majority Leader Eric Cantor, R-Va.

Democrats said that the IRS would only have peoples’ names, addresses, family size, incomes and insurance information.

“Assertions that the IRS will have access to personal health information is wrong and deliberately misleading,” said Rep. Sander Levin, D-Mich.

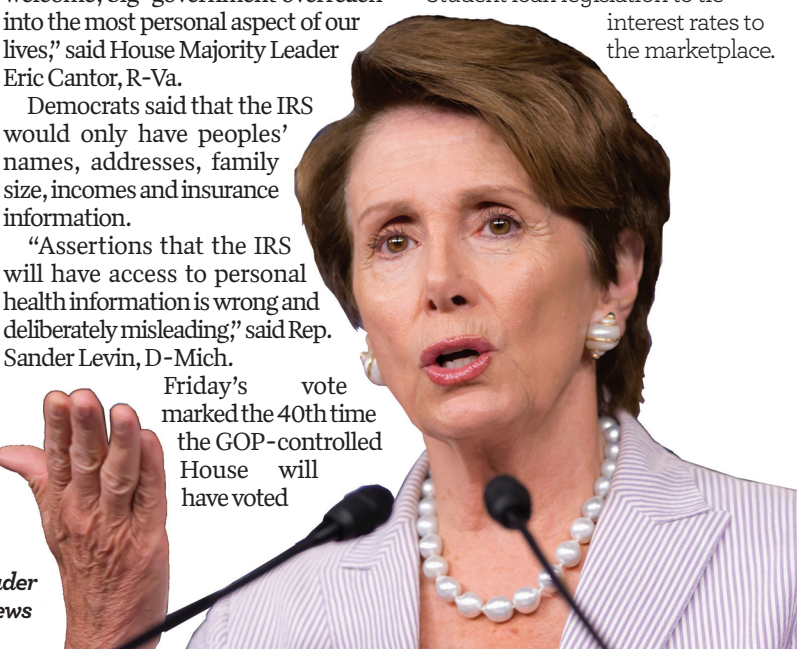

Friday’s vote marked the 40th time the GOP-controlled House will have voted to repeal all or part of the law.

Most of the measures have died in the Democratic-controlled Senate. A handful have been enacted, including one that reduced small business record-keeping the law had required.

Global Travel Warning: US Cites Al-Qaida

WASHINGTON (AP) • The United States issued an extraordinary global travel warning to Americans Friday about the threat of an al-Qaida attack and closed down 21 embassies and consulates across the Muslim world for the weekend.

The alert was the first of its kind since an announcement preceding the tenth anniversary of the 9/11 terrorist attacks. This one comes with the scars still fresh from last year's deadly Sept. 11 attack on a U.S. diplomatic post in Benghazi, Libya, and with the Obama administration and Congress determined to prevent any similar breach of an American Embassy or consulate.

"There is a significant threat stream and we're reacting to it," said Gen. Martin Dempsey, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff. He told ABC News in an interview to be aired Sunday that the threat was "more specific" than previous ones and the "intent is to attack Western, not just U.S. interests."

The State Department warning urged American travelers to take extra precautions overseas, citing potential dangers involved with public transportation systems and other prime sites for tourists and noting that previous terrorist attacks have centered on subway and rail networks as well as airplanes and boats. It suggested travelers sign up for State Department alerts and register with U.S. consulates in the countries they visit. The statement said that al-Qaida or its allies might target either U.S. government or private American interests. The alert expires on Aug. 31.

The State Department said the potential for terrorism was particularly acute in the Middle East and North Africa, with a possible attack occurring on or coming from the Arabian Peninsula.

U.S. officials pointed specifically to Yemen, the home of al-Qaida's most dangerous offshoot and the network blamed for several notable terrorist plots on the United States, from the foiled Christmas Day 2009 effort to bomb an airliner over Detroit to the explosives-laden parcels intercepted the following year aboard cargo flights.

"Current information suggests that al-Qaida and affiliated organizations continue to plan terrorist attacks both in the region and beyond, and that they may focus efforts to conduct attacks in the period between now and the end of August," a department statement said.

The alert was posted a day after the U.S. announced it would shut many diplomatic facilities Sunday. Spokeswoman Marie Harf said the department acted out of an "abundance of caution" and that some missions may stay closed for longer than a day. Sunday is a business day in Muslim countries, and the diplomatic offices affected stretch from Mauritania in northwest Africa to Afghanistan.

"I don't know if I can say there was a specific threat," said Rep. Eliot Engel of New York, the House Foreign Affairs Committee's top Democrat, who was briefed on the State Department's decision. "There is concern over the potentiality of violence."

Although the warning coincided with "Al-Quds Day," the last Friday of the Islamic month of Ramadan when people in Iran and some Arab countries express their solidarity with the Palestinians and their opposition to Israel, U.S. officials played down any connection. They said the threat wasn't directed toward a specific American diplomatic facility.

The concern by American officials over the Yemen-based al-Qaida in the Arabian Peninsula is not new, given the terror branch's gains in territory and reach during Yemen's prolonged Arab Spring-related instability.

The group made significant territorial gains last year, capturing towns and cities in the south amid a power struggle in the capital that ended with the resignation of Yemen's longtime leader, Ali Abdullah Saleh. A U.S.-aided counteroffensive by the government has since pushed the militants back.

Yemen's current president, Abdo Rabby Mansour Hadi, met with U.S. President Barack Obama at the White House on Thursday, where both leaders cited strong counterterrorism cooperation. Earlier this week, Yemen's military reported a U.S. drone strike killed six alleged al-Qaida militants in the group's southern strongholds.

As recently as June, the group's commander, Qasim al-Rimi, released an Arabic-language video urging attacks on U.S. targets and praising the ethnic Chechen brothers accused of carrying out the Boston Marathon bombings.

FDA Links Stomach Bug in 2 States to Mexican Farm

The Food and Drug Administration says an outbreak of stomach illnesses in Iowa and Nebraska is linked to salad mix served at Olive Garden and Red Lobster restaurants in those states and supplied by a Mexican farm.

The outbreak of cyclospora infections has sickened more than 400 people in 16 states in all. The agency says it is working to determine whether the salad mix is the source of illnesses in the other 14 states.

Both Olive Garden and Red Lobster are owned by Orlando-based Darden Restaurants. In a statement, Darden spokesman Mike Bernstein said the FDA's announcement is "new information."

"Nothing we have seen prior to this announcement gave us any reason to be concerned about the products we've received from this supplier," Bernstein said.

The FDA said it traced illnesses from the restaurants in Nebraska and Iowa to Taylor Farms de Mexico, the Mexican branch of Salinas, Calif.-based Taylor Farms. The company, which provides produce to the food service industry, said its facility located about 180 miles north of Mexico City in San Miguel de Allende is the only one of its 12 sites to be connected to the cases.

Pilot Ejects from Jet off Virginia, Rescued at Sea

Two Air National Guard fighter jets clipped each other's wings midair, forcing one of the pilots to eject into the ocean and be rescued by a Coast Guard helicopter a few hours later off the Virginia coast, officials said Friday.

The other pilot involved in the collision was able to fly back to Joint Base Andrews, Md. Both jets were from the 113th Wing D.C. Air National Guard and were on a routine training mission Thursday night when the collision happened about 35 miles southeast of Chincoteague on Virginia's Eastern Shore.

Capt. Michael Odle, chief of public affairs for the air wing, said the single seat F-16C Fighting Falcons collided when their wings clipped each other. Odle didn't specify the exact maneuvers the pilots were going through, but he noted that the air wing's pilots are frequently called upon to intercept aircraft that enter restricted airspace or lose communications in the Washington area. Those intercepts typically require aircraft to fly in close proximity.

The Air National Guard has not released the names of the pilots involved, but Odle said both are experienced pilots. One is a captain, and the other is a lieutenant colonel.

The Coast Guard said the pilot of the jet who was rescued early Friday is in good condition. Odle said the other pilot has already been evaluated by medical staff and released.

Mali Presidential Race Goes to Runoff

A career politician, known for ruling with a firm hand, took the lead in Mali's first presidential election since last year's coup, according to provisional results announced Friday, a sign that Malians are looking for decisive leadership after months of turmoil.

Mali will still face a runoff later this month, however, since none of the 28 candidates received a majority of the vote. Ibrahim Boubacar Keita, a former prime minister and speaker of the country's parliament, received about 39.2 percent of the 3.1 million votes that were cast. He will face off against second-place finisher, former Finance Minister Soumaila Cisse, who received half as many votes with 19.4 percent, according to the results announced by the Minister of Territorial Administration Moussa Sinko Coulibaly.

Known to everyone by his initials "IBK," Keita is known for his tough demeanor, blunt message delivery and his uncompromising stance once he takes a position. These qualities have cost him support in the past, but they were cited as the very reason why people voted for him during an election that comes just months after French soldiers intervened in a military campaign to free Mali's northern half from the grips of al-Qaida's army in the region. -AP

A Test We Can't Afford to Skip

The chief problem with U.S. schools apparently isn't high dropout rates or underqualified teachers but standardized testing.

Norman R. Augustine

Special to the Washington Post

This is the only conclusion that can be drawn from the push by parents and teachers in Buffalo, Philadelphia, Seattle and elsewhere to help students opt out of taking standardized tests.

Members of this burgeoning anti-test movement fail to grasp testing's valuable role in motivating and guiding students and teachers. Preparing young Americans for success in the global economy will require our schools to improve, not abolish, academic standards.

Opponents of standardized tests typically rely on three basic arguments.

First, they contend that these exams detract from the larger goals of education by encouraging teachers to “teach the test.”

In a certain sense, however, teaching the test is the whole point. Exams are instruments for measuring student proficiency. And, as I've learned during my career in the business world, measuring something is often the best way to maximize or improve it. Economist Dan Ariely of Duke University has said: “CEOs care about stock value because that's how we measure them. If we want to change what they care about, we should change what we measure.”

If an exam effectively gauges a student's mastery of U.S. history or English grammar, then teaching the test is simply a matter of helping students develop that knowledge. Teachers who feel that a test ignores something essential should commit to fixing the test, not condemning the entire practice of testing.

Another oft-heard argument is that standardized tests drive educators to cheat. Teachers and administrators in the Atlanta public school system, for instance, were indicted this year in an alleged scheme of inflating their students' test scores to avoid sanctions and secure performance-based bonuses. Not surprisingly, some education advocates were quick to blame the scandal on the tests themselves. It should be noted that most teachers are honest, dedicated professionals. But even if this sort of fraud were rampant, it would be absurd to fault standardized tests. As Thomas J. Kane, director of the Center for Education Policy Research at Harvard University, noted this spring, such a reaction would “be equivalent to saying ‘OK, because there are some players that cheated in Major League Baseball, we should stop keeping score, because that only encourages people to take steroids.’”

The third argument is that high-stakes testing places too much pressure on students. This objection is not without some merit. Having visited schools in other countries where a single five-day examination can determine a student's future, I understand how tests can sometimes constitute cruel and unusual punishment. But surely there is a sensible middle ground between such brutal practices and full-scale abandonment of standardized testing.

Finding that middle ground has never been more important, as U.S. students continue to fall far behind their international peers. In its most recent report, the World Economic Forum ranked U.S. math and science education 52nd in the world. A 2009 evaluation of students in 34 developed nations found that U.S. 15-year-olds were outperformed in science by students from 12 countries. The results were worse in math: Students in 17 countries outperformed U.S. students.

To address U.S. students' international achievement gap, the National Governors Association, in partnership with the Council of Chief State School Officers, a nonpartisan organization of public school officials, helped create a set of nationwide achievement goals known as the Common Core State Standards. These voluntary benchmarks in English language arts and math reflect what young Americans will need to know if they are to compete with students from China, Singapore, Finland, South Korea and elsewhere. Instead of speaking out against the Common Core, critics of standardized testing should see this reform effort as an opportunity to make testing better. Educators have an indispensable role in creating tests that do justice to student achievement while rewarding skilled teachers.

Raising standards should be the primary goal of education reform. Those who argue against standardized testing are not only misguided but are also leading U.S. schools and students in precisely the wrong direction.

Thank You for Saving My Husband from House Fire

I cannot say thank you enough to the Jerome City Fire Department and to Allan Fairchild. Without these people, I do think that my husband would have been burned.

We had a fire in our mobile home on July 27 and it scared us. My husband has Alzheimer's and he got excited and wanted to put the fire out by himself but he could not. Our neighbor, Allan, came over and finally my husband got out of the house and Allan put out the fire.

As you know, fire extinguishers are really messy. The Jerome City Fire Department stayed and cleaned up the mess for us. Then Fire Chief Jack Krill came by on Sunday to make sure we were OK.

I don't know how I will ever repay all these wonderful people, but without them it would be a different scenario today. Thank you so much to these wonderful people: Allan and the fire crew, along with the Jerome Police.

Thank you again. God be with you in all you do. Thank you.

in at least eight tournaments a year.

Petersen said Southern California and Florida are the best places for seniors who play tennis because they have so many tournaments and leagues. During the summer, he lives in his hometown of Twin Falls.

“I’ve developed some skills,” Petersen said between pick-up games with friends Friday at the College of Southern Idaho courts. The group meets to play every Wednesday morning.

“I picked up some things that have helped me a lot, but I’m obviously slowing down,” Petersen said.

Tom Schmidt of Twin Falls was Petersen’s doubles partner 12 years ago.

Schmidt also plays every Wednesday.

“Emery’s been winning doubles teams the last 40 years,” Schmidt said. “He’s always been a part of the winning team.”

At one point, the two were ranked in the top 10 in Idaho, he said.

So what makes Petersen so good?

“He has the best strokes and is extra quick at the net.

And even at the age of 80, he is still quick at the net,” Schmidt said. “At the same time, he’s been such a humble, wonderful guy and role model for the rest of us.”

Ask Petersen, and his response is: I’m really good at choosing a partner.

Win or lose, he said, the real reason he still plays is because it’s a fun workout.

WinCo

rarely engages in self-promotion. But WinCo spokesman Mike Read recently shared some facts with The Idaho Statesman’s Business Insider.

So did Flickinger, whose family founded WinCo partner Federated Foods, though he now has no financial or personal ties to WinCo.

- WinCo is owned by that stockperson who tells you where to find the blueberries, and by its executives.

That wasn’t always true. Ralph Ward and Bud Williams, two Idaho businessmen, started a discount warehouse in Boise and called it Waremart. Their store multiplied into several in the Northwest. Their company added another banner, Cub Foods, to some of its stores.

Former CEO Bill Long joined the company in its early years. By 1978, when he’d risen to president of the company, it was struggling.

“We were opening stores and closing just as many stores,” Long said in a 2007 Idaho Statesman profile of the company.

The chain as we know it today started in 1985. That’s when Long and other employees negotiated a buyout, making it an employee-owned company. At the time, WinCo had 18 stores selling $187 million a year — less than $11 million for the average store. Now it’s closer to $55 million per store, and some new stores are headed for $75 million or more per year, Flickinger says.

It donned the name WinCo, short for “Winning Company,” companywide in 1999. The board picked the name from more than 5,000 pitched by employees.

WinCo’s current president and CEO is Steven Goddard. He took over from Long in 2007, when annual sales were about $3 billion across more than 50 stores.

- Some of those employee owners have plump pensions. Especially those who got in on the ground floor.

People who work at WinCo long enough will qualify for a pension that gives them a slice of WinCo’s fortune.

The company pours an amount equal to 20 percent of an employee’s total yearly pay into a pension plan.

The value of the shares in those retirement accounts has been appreciating, on average, at 20 percent a year since 1985, Read says. More than 400 employees Read refers to as “front-line” employees — produce clerks, cashiers and other nonexecutives — have retirement accounts worth at least $1 million, he says.

Flickinger says WinCo workers tend to stick around. His company, Strategic Resource Group, estimates the average WinCo hourly worker in Idaho, Oregon, Washington, Utah and California stays with the company for more than eight years.

- WinCo saves money, and makes money, by cutting out the middleman.

Grocery stores traditionally rely on distributors to get their products. WinCo has a different approach — one that uses a few strategies to keep prices low without eroding profit.

The company will send a truck of its own to a manufacturer’s plant and stuff it with pallets of cherries, Fruit by the Foot, Hamburger Helper or Betty Crocker cake mix. Buying a mountainous quantity of one item yields WinCo a special price that can amount to a 10 percent to 50 percent discount, Flickinger says. The manufacturer also rewards WinCo for saving it the hassle and cost of loading and delivering the product by giving WinCo a hauling fee of $150 to $250 per shipment, he says.

At the same time, having just four distribution and storage centers, with trucks going straight to stores, means WinCo doesn’t have the overhead of several people unloading trucks and stocking smaller warehouses, and store employees spending time constantly checking and re-ordering inventory. Instead, the cake mix goes straight to a store to be stacked in an aisle.

The company also trains its eyes on promotionally priced items from manufacturers.

WinCo opened some Arizona stores recently. Flickinger says he visited them at 2 a.m., around the same time he visited some nearby Wal-Mart stores.

The vendors “told me that WinCo literally cut Wal-Mart’s direct store shipments on a lot of big brands by anywhere from 30 to 40 percent,” he says. “And in many cases, WinCo was doing 50 percent more volume per store on a lot of the big brands compared to the closest Wal-Mart Supercenter.”

- It saves money at the register.

WinCo requires customers to bag their own groceries — ideally, while the cashier is running the items through checkout — to cut down on labor costs. Its checkout stands have two lanes, meaning one shopper can finish bagging her groceries without slowing down the guy in line behind her.

The stores take no credit cards — just debit, cash and checks. That eliminates the fees card processors charge merchants.

WinCo’s checkout stands, and everything else for that matter, lack frills. They’re pragmatic, not pretty.

“Our stores, though we think they’re nice-looking, they’re not filled with a lot of fixturing,” Read says. “We keep them clean and easy” to navigate.

- WinCo runs on cash, not debt.

The company’s expansion into seven Western states has been funded mostly by its cash flow, Read says. “We don’t have much leverage right now,” he says.

Flickinger adds that WinCo’s real estate team has leveraged the real estate crash and the economy to help it expand. Instead of always building new warehouses, WinCo has swooped in on abandoned or vacant Home Depots or other big-box stores.

- The company has challenges, but they’re not unique.

Read says the federal health-reform law is having “an impact on us, and not necessarily a good one,” because of changes such as having to cover employees’ children up to age 26 and eliminating lifetime coverage caps. The company provides full medical benefits for employees who average at least 24 hours per week, which is beyond the requirements for a business of its size in the Affordable Care Act.

Other possible legislative changes — labels having to say whether foods contain genetically modified products, for example — would add “an awful lot of costs” to WinCo’s business, he says.

Flickinger says WinCo’s growth and the newly reunited Albertsons chain offer a “dual benefit for Idaho.” Boise-based Albertsons is “solidified,” while WinCo’s growth is explosive, he says.

If WinCo stays on its trajectory for 12 to 15 years, he projects WinCo will have higher sales volume than Albertsons did at its peak.

“WinCo is really accelerating its growth significantly,” Flickinger says. “You can see WinCo doubling in size every five to seven years. ... No one can compete against them effectively.”

Prostitution

“We call the number and find where the person is, if the call is returned,” said police Sgt. John Wilson.

When police get to the location, they try to assess what’s really going on. They ask about what they call freedom of movement: Are you allowed to come and go as you please? Do you live and work in the same place? What were the conditions when you left your previous home? Are you ever physically restrained? When someone locks you in a room, who holds the key? Are you allowed to move about in public without being watched? Are you allowed to go buy things on your own?

“If we get straight answers, we can find out if we have a pimp,” Wilson said.

Straight answers are often difficult to get, whether out of fear or because the people don’t consider themselves victims.

“She may in her mind think that she’s doing this willingly, but an underage girl can’t consent,” Wilson said. “They may view the person controlling them as an ally or friend and the police as an adversary.”

Police often are given fake names or birthdates, and building trust is a process, he said.

“Then we start getting into the runaways,” Barnhill said. “They get into the wrong crowd, and the next thing you know they’re turning tricks.”

That might sound like exaggeration, but the U.S. Department of Justice estimates that nearly 450,000 children run away from home each year, and one-third of teens living on the street will be lured into prostitution within 48 hours of leaving home.

“One of our bigger hurdles is our officers just aren’t faced with this call a lot,” Wilson said. “After doing some investigations once or twice, they have an idea of what questions to ask.”

Local law enforcement has assisted other agencies, including in Portland, Ore., Wilson said.

Portland police asked Twin Falls officers to verify information from a victim of prostitution who said she’d been in Twin Falls. Police were able to contact hotels where the victim had stayed and a mechanic where the woman said she’d taken a car.

“People in Twin Falls are hopefully aware that if a crime happens in Salt Lake or Portland or Los Angeles, it can also happen in Twin Falls,” Wilson said. “People need to be aware that these crimes do occur and that because we’re a smaller community, we’re not immune.”

The Associated Press contributed to this report.

Idaho Law on Prostitution

In Idaho, paying a person younger than 18 for sexual contact carries a penalty of up to life in prison. Paying means exchanging anything of value, which can include cash, food, shelter, clothing, medical care or gang membership. Anyone who induces a minor to engage in prostitution faces the same penalty.

Trafficking in adult prostitutes, pimping and many other adult prostitution charges all are punishable by up to 20 years in prison.

Prostitution itself and patronizing a prostitute are misdemeanors until a third conviction.

Twin Falls Prostitution Cases:

- Brittnay Watson, a 23-year-old Portland woman, was cited for prostitution. She was fined about $400 and given a year of unsupervised probation.

- Shaymeka Monk, Janita Lynn Hammond and Charles Crockett all were arrested on prostitution-related charges. Monk’s prostitution charge was reduced to aiding in a misdemeanor. Crockett’s two counts of interstate trafficking were dismissed. A warrant was issued for Hammond for failing to appear in court on her prostitution charge, and the case was dismissed for inactivity.
- Christopher Kent Teague and Stormie Todd for prostitution-related charges. Their charges also were dismissed.

- During a sheriff’s undercover sting at Rock Creek, Zachary Williamson, 25, and Billy Turpin, 78, were cited for soliciting a prostitute, and Eric Allen Boldt, 39, was arrested after allegedly offering the undercover officer a marijuana cigarette.

2009

- Sun Do Chong and Myeong Sook Mickley were arrested on prostitution charges while they worked at Osaka Massage and Spa in Twin Falls. Chong pleaded guilty and was sentenced to a fine and community service. Mickley’s charge was dropped.

Mickley and Chong allegedly told police an Asian woman in New York instructed them to come to Twin Falls. Another Asian woman came once a month to pick up “house money” and $2,000 rent, Chong allegedly told police in court records.

Trial Ordered for 2 Men in Missing Mom Case

MOSCOW (AP) • An Idaho judge has ordered two Moscow men to stand trial in the death of the estranged wife of one of the suspects even though her body has not been found.

On Thursday, 2nd District Magistrate John C. Judge made his ruling after determining during a preliminary hearing that there was probable cause to try Charles A. Capone, 52, and David C. Stone, 49.

The men are charged with first-degree murder and conspiracy to commit first-degree murder in the death of Capone’s estranged wife, Rachael Anderson. They are also charged with failure to notify a coroner or police about a death.

Anderson, a mother of four, was last seen three years ago and her body has not been found. She is presumed dead.

Judge acknowledged the case against both men is complex but evidence presented during the hearing was significant enough to take the case to a jury.

Judge cited testimony alleging the crime occurred in Capone’s auto mechanic shop, where Anderson was last seen. Evidence also showed her blood was found on documents inside the vehicle she was driving along with a glove tip with DNA from Capone and Anderson.

A cadaver dog also detected decomposing human flesh inside Anderson’s vehicle.

Latah County Prosecutor William Thompson Jr. said the case is based on circumstantial evidence and it’s complicated because the body is not available.

“Typically we know the cause of death,” Thompson Jr.

told the magistrate during his closing statement. “We are dealing with a different type of case than this court has ever seen.”

Capone is alleged to have formed a pact with Stone, in which both men conspired to kill their wives and cover up the crimes, starting with Anderson.

Defense attorney Mark Monson, who represents Capone, argued there was no evidence of her death in Latah County or the state of Idaho.

“At the end of the day, we’re left with speculation and conjecture,” Monson said.

US Flying Deportees Deep into Mexico to Avoid Dangerous Border

BY NICK MIROFF
The Washington Post

MEXICO CITY • Security has grown so dire in Mexican border towns that U.S. immigration authorities have begun flying some deportees to Mexico City, rather than releasing them into areas where they could be targeted by kidnapers and smuggling gangs.

The twice-weekly flights operated by U.S. Immigration and Customs Enforcement (ICE) carry only a fraction of the nearly 300,000 Mexican nationals returned by the Obama administration each year. But flying deportees deep into Mexico could save lives by discouraging them from attempting another desperate illegal crossing, ICE officials say.

“We’re trying to reduce attempted reentry into the United States and minimize the potential for exploitation of people who are removed to Mexico, and their loss of life,” said Tim Robins, an ICE official who coordinates the flight program, known as the Interior Repatriation Initiative.

The program is also built on the assumption that deportees sent to their home communities might stay there. But U.S. and Mexican officials acknowledge that they’re not sure whether that’s true. As part of the arrangement with ICE, the Mexican government provides returning deportees with a bus ticket from the airport to anywhere in Mexico, as long as their destination is not a border state.

The joint effort is part of broader bilateral cooperation on immigration issues that the Obama administration and Mexican President Enrique Nieto are looking to highlight amid doubts about the health of their drug-war partnership. Last week, top officials from both countries announced plans to better coordinate patrols and information-sharing along the border, and officials here have pledged to tighten controls in southern Mexico to catch more U.S.-bound Central American migrants and collect their biometric data.

Still, the deportee flights from El Paso to Mexico City aboard “ICE Air” the agency’s name for its charters represent the first time that U.S. authorities will send home Mexican returnees by air on a large-scale, sustained basis, after a trial run last fall. The vast majority of Mexicans will continue to be repatriated at land border crossings in cities such as Tijuana, Ciudad Juarez and Nuevo Laredo. They are often sent back in large groups and sometimes dropped off at night, when few services are available and gangs rule the streets.

“Kidnappers know that deportees have relatives and family members in the U.S. who can be extorted,” said Jorge Durand, an immigration expert at Mexico’s University of Guadalajara.

“It used to be that crossing into the United States was dangerous,” he said. “Now, it’s coming back, too.”

During the first six months of 2013, more than 50,000 Mexicans deported from the United States ended up in the Mexican state of Tamaulipas, whose border cities are major drug-cartel battlegrounds and considered by U.S. State Department officials to be virtual no-go zones.

The kidnapping rate in Tamaulipas is the highest in Mexico, after doubling last year, according to State Department travel warnings.

The flights to Mexico City, by comparison, can carry just 270 passengers a week. “In the end, that’s a very small number compared to the overall number of deportations from Mexico,” said Maureen Meyer, a senior researcher at the Washington Office on Latin America.

Sikh Son First Saw Father at Wis. Funeral

BY DINESH RAMDE
Associated Press

OAK CREEK, Wis. • Gurvinder Singh approached his father’s open coffin with one thought: “Please, god, it’s not my dad.”

As he stepped closer, he realized the man was indeed the father he knew only from photographs. The 14-year-old stood numbly, not crying until officials wheeled the coffin toward a hearse. Then Gurvinder collapsed in tears, inconsolable, telling his mother he wanted to die in the same flames that would cremate his father. Ranjit Singh left his family behind in India in 1997, to work as a priest at the Sikh Temple of Wisconsin.

He always planned to visit Gurvinder, his only son, whom he last saw as a 7-month-old. But last August, two months before the father was to go home for the first time in nearly 14 years, Singh and five others were fatally shot by a white supremacist at the temple. The gunman’s motive still eludes police. With the anniversary of that day approaching, Gurvinder recently sat in the same temple, down the hallway from where his father was killed, and recounted the few memories he has of the man he knew only from daily but brief phone calls.

“I’ve never seen my dad. I just saw him dead,” Gurvinder said softly, shaking his head. “Whenever I look at someone’s dad holding him I can’t see that. It’s hard to see.”

Gurvinder, now 15, is quiet and soft-spoken. But he’s quick to smile at people he’s meeting for the first time. He’s also eager to help out at the Oak Creek temple, carrying in boxes of groceries and keeping common areas clean. He spends nearly every day at the temple. Wherever he goes he’s reminded of the father he never met, such as memorial portraits of all six victims that now adorn the lobby.

Iran’s Rouhani: Occupation of Palestine is ‘Wound’

TEHRAN (AP) • Iran’s president-elect called Israel’s control of Jerusalem and Palestinian lands a “wound” for the Islamic world in relatively moderate remarks Friday that contrasted with the harsh rhetoric of his predecessor and other Iranian leaders.

Speaking to reporters during an annual pro-Palestinian rally, Hasan Rouhani said: “In our region and under occupation of Palestine and dear Jerusalem, there has been a wound on the body of the Islamic world.”

The comments, two days before Rouhani’s inauguration, were tame compared with those frequently made by outgoing President Mahmoud Ahmadinejad calling for Israel’s destruction. The country’s supreme leader, Ayatollah Ali Khamenei, once called the Jewish state a “cancer” that needed to be cut away. A semiofficial Iranian news agency initially quoted Rouhani as calling Israel a “wound that should be removed.” That prompted Israeli Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu to retort that “the real face of Rouhani has been exposed earlier than expected.”

But the news agency, ISNA, later said it was a misquote, confirmed by state TV footage of Rouhani’s comment reviewed by The Associated Press. Netanyahu issued no statement on the corrected version. Nevertheless, the mishap underscored the challenges facing the incoming president, who was elected in June with pledges to seek a calmer and more balanced outreach to the West.

It is Khamenei and the Revolutionary Guard who control Iranian policies, and the supreme leader has final say in all key matters.

Rouhani will effectively be the international face of Iran and has made no secret of his desire to project a new image of dialogue rather than diatribes. It remains to be seen to what extent he will be able to persuade the ruling clerics and military that interaction with Washington and its allies over Iran’s nuclear program could bring dividends such as easing painful sanctions.

Israel has not ruled out a military option against Iran’s nuclear facilities, which the West suspects are geared toward making a nuclear weapon. Tehran denies the charge and insists its nuclear program is meant for peaceful purposes only.

The Iranian leadership has long maintained harsh views on Israel, backing anti-Israeli factions such as Lebanon’s Hezbollah militant group. But it now appears to recognize that Ahmadinejad’s fiery denunciations of Israel and his questioning the extent of the Holocaust needlessly outraged the West and did not advance Iran’s national interests. Rouhani appears to be trying to maneuver in the tight space allotted in Iran’s power structure. He is making clear that he stands with Iran’s uncompromising positions on Israel but is also backing away from Ahmadinejad’s fist-waving approach.

BOISE • Four weeks from today, the Boise State will kick off its 2013 football season in Seattle, taking on the Washington Huskies.

While Bronco fans are buzzing about the fast-approaching opener, Bronco players are maintaining a more patient approach.

“Right now we’re not even worried about the first game,” said BSU senior offensive lineman Charles Leno. “We’re just worried about fall camp, being with our guys, competing with those guys. Then once that week before the game starts, then we’ll worry about Washington. Right now that’s not even in our minds.”

Boise State’s fall camp begins Monday, and just because the team isn’t yet discussing the Washington game on Aug. 31 doesn’t mean fans and media can’t. The Broncos’ 28-26 win over the Huskies in last December’s Maaco Las Vegas Bowl is still fresh on everyone’s minds.

Despite being outgained 447 yards to 407, BSU withstood Washington, with help in the final 76 seconds from a Michael Frisina field goal and a game-clinching interception by Jeremy Ioane.

In recent years, Boise State has done a fine job stirring up preseason hype by scheduling tough openers against the likes of Oregon, Virginia Tech, Georgia and Michigan State. However, this will be the first time in five years that BSU plays a non-ranked opponent in its season opener.

Washington, coming off a 7-6 season, is projected by most preseason publications to be a middle-of-the-pack Pac-12 team. But that’s not fooling Southwick.

“Those guys were good (in the bowl game),” Southwick said of Washington, which returns 18 starters.

Southwick was good, too. He agrees the Las Vegas Bowl was the best game of his junior season. He completed 26 of 38 passes for 264 yards and two touchdowns with zero interceptions.

“We did a great job in the passing game. We moved the ball great. They did a good job at times of stopping the run, so it was on us to throw the ball around a little bit,” Southwick said.

The 38 pass attempts was Southwick’s highest of the season — a sign, he says, that perhaps he had finally fully gained the coaches’ trust after some early-season struggles.

“It just goes to show that we’re moving in the right direction and it was great to end the season on that positive note,” Southwick said.

Monday MLB Drug Deal Deadline

ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK • Pressure to get suspensions over with before the playoffs could force an end to negotiations in baseball’s latest drug scandal.

Monday appears to be the deadline for Alex Rodriguez and 13 others to accept suspensions for their ties to the Biogenesis of America anti-aging clinic. While A-Rod is expected to get a lengthy ban, a penalty starting that day would allow Texas All-Star outfielder Nelson Cruz to return for October.

Major League Baseball is prepared to issue two simultaneous announcements no later than Monday, a person familiar with the process told The Associated Press. One would list players who accept suspensions; the other would name those disciplined without deals, but who could challenge penalties before an arbitrator.

The person spoke on condition of anonymity because no statements were authorized.

Most players face 50-game suspensions for their links to the now-closed Florida clinic, which has been accused of distributing banned performance-enhancing drugs.

But baseball is threatening to kick Rodriguez out for life unless the three-time AL MVP agrees to a long ban,

New York’s Alex Rodriguez loosens up before the start of a Class AA baseball game with the Trenton Thunder against the Reading Phillies on Friday. Monday appears to be the deadline for Rodriguez and 13 others to accept suspensions for their ties to the Biogenesis of America anti-aging clinic.

perhaps around 200 games.

Rodriguez appeared ready to talk Thursday as he was leaving the team’s minor league complex in Tampa, Fla., waving a group of writers to his car in the parking lot and rolling down the window. However, when he saw a second group with TV cameras approaching, he said: “I’ll talk to you guys, but no cameras.”

Rodriguez closed the window and waited a moment, then left without saying another word.

Baseball’s highest-paid player with a $28 million salary, Rodriguez played in a simulated game and saw 31 pitches over six at-bats, played third and ran bases.

The Yankees expect A-Rod to be accused of recruiting other athletes for the clinic, attempting to obstruct MLB’s investigation, and not being truthful with MLB in the past. Baseball has considered suspending him for violations of its labor contract and drug agreement, which would cause him to start serving his penalty before the case would go to arbitration.

Sidelined following hip surgery in January and then a strained quadriceps, the 38-year-old third baseman hopes to return to the Yankees in a few days. He is to play Friday and Saturday at Double-A Trenton, putting himself in position to rejoin New York for Monday’s series opener at the Chicago White Sox if he’s not banned.

Barring a rainout this weekend, Cruz’s Rangers would have exactly 50 games remaining before they play at the Los Angeles Angels on Monday night. If he files a grievance, as a first offender, the penalty would be delayed until after a decision by arbitrator Fredric Horowitz. But the lengthy legal process likely would risk his eligibility for the playoffs and the start of next season.

Cruz said Thursday he hadn’t made any decision about a possible appeal. Asked whether he was told specifically what penalty could be forthcoming, Cruz responded, “No, I cannot tell you. Sorry.”

Detroit shortstop Jhonny Peralta is the other targeted All-Star on a pennant contender, and the Tigers would have 53 games left before playing at Cleveland on Monday.

Another All-Star shortstop, San Diego’s Everth Cabrera, could serve all of a 50-game suspension this year if he begins with the Padres’ game against Baltimore on Tuesday.

Manning Has a Patchwork Pocket of Protection

ASSOCIATED PRESS

ENGLEWOOD, Colo. • Peyton Manning is about to enter a season of Super Bowl expectations behind an offensive line that’s full of questions, surgical scars, fresh faces and, yes, promise.

Three centers with a combined 18 career starts at the position are vying for the starting job now that J.D. Walton and Dan Koppen are out, and the leading candidate, Manny Ramirez, has none of those starts, although he was Denver’s starting right guard for most of last season.

“Manny’s played center since 2007. I was in Detroit when they drafted him,” said Broncos offensive coordinator Adam Gase. “He came to Detroit, he was a guard. You know what he was doing? He was working on center in practice. Now, I understand he hasn’t done it in a game, but he was the starting guard on a 13-3 team last year, OK? He’s been in some big situations, all right? And he’s a very intelligent guy.”

Ryan Lilja and Steve Vallos have a little more experience in the middle but are also guards by trade and provide depth and flexibility more than anything.

Lilja played guard for six seasons with Manning in Indianapolis and then converted to center in Kansas City last year, then retired after the Chiefs went 2-14.

“It was just too good of an opportunity to pass up to come out here and play with these guys and try to wash this taste out of my mouth from a crummy season,” Lilja said.

Manning’s blindside protector, All-Pro left tackle Ryan Clady, is still working his way back from an off-season operation to repair a torn labrum in his right shoulder.

That means Chris Clark, who has never started an NFL game at tackle, will be the one charged with keeping outside linebacker Aldon Smith away from No. 18 in the Broncos’ preseason opener Thursday night at San Francisco.

If the Broncos are worried about this patchwork pocket of protection for their $20 million man, it sure doesn’t show.

Executive Vice President John Elway said his biggest takeaway from the first week of training camp was that Manning looks even better this summer than he did last season, which was, statistically, the second-best of his career, and that’s had a ripple effect on the entire roster.

“I’ve seen a big difference in the way he’s throwing the ball, the way the ball’s coming off for him,” Elway told Denver radio station 104.3 The Fan this week, “and so that, for me, has made everything else look that much better.”

Manning said at the start of camp that he feels more comfortable in Year 2 in Denver, suggesting he recognizes how his surgically repaired neck will react to the rigors of football and also has a better feel for his receivers, save for Wes Welker, whom he’s only been working with since March.

For all the consternation over who will be the one snapping Manning the ball this season, remember this: Ramirez has been the starter all offseason, even for the week’s worth of practices that Koppen, last year’s starter, attended before blowing out a knee and landing on I.R. last weekend.

Koppen was working primarily with backup QB Brock Osweiler and snapping to Manning only when Ramirez would slide over to get some work at guard.

Like Ramirez, Clark hasn’t had a lot of experience at his current position. He has started a half-dozen NFL games, all at tight end during the Tim Tebow experiment in Denver a few years ago.

“Once again, he’s got position flexibility,” Gase said. And that’s the next best thing to stability.

Gase noted that the current five starters, including left guard Zane Beadles, right guard Louis Vasquez and right tackle Orlando Franklin, have been working together all offseason.

Beadles is the only Denver O-lineman who came out of last season unscathed. The rest needed offseason surgeries, including right guard Chris Kuper (ankle), whom the Broncos replaced in the starting lineup with Vasquez, who signed a $23.5 million, four-year deal when free agency was but 20 minutes old.

That gives Denver a 655-pound mountain of muscle on the right side to help a ground game led by rookie running back Montee Ball, the NCAA career touchdowns leader, and second-year speedster Ronnie Hillman.

“I think it’s good how it’s going with those two as far as getting used to playing with each other,” Gase said. “Obviously, with that group it’s a game of chemistry and Clady’s not in there, so Chris Clark’s done a great job of trying to fill that role to the best of his ability. Obviously, Ryan’s one of the top guys in the league. Would it be great if he was out there with Beadles right now? Absolutely. But Chris may be in that situation whether he’s on the left or the right, if something happens to either one of those guys. So, they’ve got to get used to playing with him.”

Orioles Blast Past Mariners

ASSOCIATED PRESS

BALTIMORE • Chris Davis hit his major league-leading 40th home run and Nate McLouth contributed his first career grand slam to a power display that carried the Baltimore Orioles past the Seattle Mariners 11-8 Friday night.

Ryan Flaherty also homered and had a career-high three hits for the Orioles, who never trailed but had to withstand four homers by Seattle.

McLouth connected off Brandon Maurer to make it 11-6 in the sixth, and that was enough offense to fend off the Mariners, who closed the gap in the eighth with solo shots from Kendrys Morales and Michael Morse.

Jim Johnson worked the ninth to earn his 38th save and secure the win for Chris Tillman (14-3).

Davis drove a pitch from Aaron Harang (5-10) over the right-field wall and onto Eutaw Street to give Baltimore a 5-3 lead in the third inning. The solo homer traveled an estimated 442 feet and gave Davis a major-league high 101 RBIs.

He is the fifth Oriole to hit 40 homers in a season, joining Brady Anderson (50), Frank Robinson (49), Jim Gentile (46) and Rafael Palmeiro (43).

TIGERS 2, WHITE SOX 1 DETROIT • Doug Fister pitched eight impressive innings, Austin Jackson homered and Jose Iglesias drove in a run in his Detroit debut to lead the Tigers over Chicago. The White Sox lost their eighth straight, while AL Central-leading Detroit has won 10 of 11.

NATIONAL LEAGUE DODGERS 6, CUBS 2 CHICAGO • Mark Ellis extended his hitting streak to 13 games before both he and manager Don Mattingly were ejected, and the Los Angeles Dodgers matched an 89-year-old club record with their 12th straight road victory.

Ellis doubled and scored in the third before being tossed when he and Mattingly argued a called third strike in the fourth, but the Dodgers still improved to 12-2 since the All-Star break.

The NL West leaders remained unbeaten on the road since a loss at San Francisco on July 6 and matched the 1924 Brooklyn Robins for the longest streak in franchise history.

ROCKIES 4, PIRATES 2 PITTSBURGH • Jhoulys Chacin allowed one run on six hits over eight innings and Colorado snapped a four-game losing streak with a win over Pittsburgh.

Chacin (10-5), who has won seven of his past nine decisions, stayed in the game after taking a sharp line drive off the bat of Starling Marte in the fifth inning.

CARDINALS 13, REDS 3 CINCINNATI • David Freese set the tone with a bases-loaded double in the first inning, and Daniel Descalso hit two of St. Louis’ three homers in a win over Cincinnati.

The Cardinals have emerged from a deep hitting slump by scoring 13 runs in each of their last two games. It’s the first time this season they’ve had double-digit run totals in consecutive games.

BRAVES 6, PHILLIES 4 PHILADELPHIA • Brian McCann and Chris Johnson hit consecutive homers in a five-run fifth inning to lead Atlanta over Philadelphia for its eighth straight win.

McCann’s two-run shot gave the Braves a 4-2 lead just two batters after Justin Upton tied it on an RBI single. McCann’s 16th homer gave the Braves a 5-2 lead.

NATIONALS 4, BREWERS 1 MILWAUKEE • Jordan Zimmermann earned his career-high 13th win and Bryce Harper hit a home run and the Washington Nationals beat the Milwaukee Brewers.

Zimmermann (13-6) was 12-8 in 2012 after 32 starts. Friday’s victory came in his 22nd start. He went six innings, struck out four, but walked a season-high four.

INTERLEAGUE METS 4, ROYALS 2, 11 INNINGS NEW YORK • Eric Young Jr. homered with two outs in the 11th inning and the New York Mets overcame a blown lead to snap the Royals’ winning streak at nine.

Young slammed a 3-1 pitch from Luis Mendoza (2-6) over the right-field fence for his first career game-ending hit and just his second home run of the season. It scored Omar Quintanilla, who had walked.

MARLINS 10, INDIANS 0 MIAMI • Jose Fernandez Fernandez pitched eight innings and struck out 14, the most by an NL pitcher this season, to help Miami snap Cleveland’s eight-game win streak.

Miami’s All-Star became the first major league pitcher to strike out at least 13 in consecutive games since Randy Johnson in 2004. He’s the first rookie to do so since Kerry Wood in 1998.

GIANTS 4, RAYS 1 ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. • Madison Bumgarner struck out 11 in seven innings, Brandon Crawford hit a two-run homer and San Francisco beat Tampa Bay.

Tampa Bay has lost two in a row, including its first game in August. The Rays went 21-5 in July.

DIAMONDBACKS 7, RED SOX 6 BOSTON • Cody Ross capped his four-hit return to Fenway Park with a tie-breaking homer that gave Arizona a win over Boston.

Ross, Boston’s regular right fielder last season, drove in three runs, doubled twice and singled once. His big hit came with the score tied at 6 when he led off the seventh inning against Pedro Beato (1-1) with his seventh homer of the year.

Eclectic Group to Enter Hall of Fame

Seven to be inducted today.

ASSOCIATED PRESS

CANTON, Ohio • While his six other classmates for this weekend's enshrinement sported blue golf shirts given them by the Pro Football Hall of Fame, Cris Carter was dressed in suit and tie.

He might never take them off.

"Man, I am in the Hall of Fame. I am wearing a suit every day," Carter said Friday as the 50th anniversary festivities for the hall began.

Carter will join Jonathan Ogden, Larry Allen, Bill Parcells, Warren Sapp, Dave Robinson and Curley Culp as the newest inductees tonight. He was, by far, the most emotional during a news conference Friday as festivities began for the 50th anniversary celebration of the hall.

The only member of the Class of 2013 who didn't win an NFL title, Carter used a handkerchief to wipe away the tears when asked about his career and the fact it took six tries to get elected.

"Minnesota fans didn't judge me when a lot of bad things were being said about me," Carter said, frequently pausing to regain his composure. "They always cheered for Cris. The only thing I really wish is we could've won that championship for those people. What they did for my life, every day I went out there, I played for those people."

Carter was exiled from Philadelphia in 1989 after off-field problems, including drug and alcohol issues. The first one to call him and offer a job was Parcells.

Carter ever told his agent he wanted to go to the Giants, but he wound up with the Vikings, who had a stronger need for a wide receiver. All Carter did the rest of his 16-season career was wind up second at his retirement in 2002 behind Jerry Rice for all-time receptions and touchdowns. He's fourth in those categories now.

As he mentioned, though, he doesn't have that championship. For the other six, those Super Bowl rings will have a blinding shine to them this evening.

Parcells was a winner of two NFL titles as a coach and master of the franchise turnaround. Ogden, one of the premier offensive tackles of his time, grabbed a Super Bowl ring in 2000. Larry Allen, a 1995 champion with Dallas, was the rare equal of Ogden on the offensive line in their era.

Sapp, an outstanding defensive tackle with a personality as big as any football stadium, won the 2002 championship in Tampa Bay. Robinson, a major cog in Green Bay's championship machine under Vince Lombardi, won the first two Super Bowls. Culp, one of the original pass-rushing demons at defensive tackle, got his ring with the 1969 Chiefs.

Quite a group, and a record 121 hall members are expected to attend the ceremonies.

"It's somewhat overwhelming," said Ogden, the Baltimore Ravens' first-ever draft choice and the first team member elected to the hall. "You look around and there's Joe Greene and Joe Namath — heck, they are all there, you can't stop naming names."

Ogden, Allen and Sapp have the distinction of making the hall in their first year of eligibility. It's all the more impressive considering all three were linemen.

Allen became the anchor of the Cowboys' blocking unit for a dozen seasons, then finished his career with two years in San Francisco. He made six All-Pro teams and 11 Pro Bowls, playing guard and tackle.

"It's great, great company to be in," said Allen, who Cowboys executive vice president Stephen Jones believes "would have been a Hall of Famer at guard or tackle, and either side. He was special like that."

Adds Curtis Martin, the Jets and Patriots running back who was inducted last year: "If there were two guys I would have wanted to run behind, it would be Larry and Jonathan."

Sapp, whose induction speech might be the most anticipated because he's liable to say anything, was a cornerstone of Tampa Bay's powerful defense that was the key to winning the Buccaneers' only title after decades of futility.

"We took a place where they said careers came to die to a place that's become a destination," Sapp said, noting the Tampa 2 scheme is now played by defenses everywhere.

As for his speech, Sapp said he has "been trying to imagine how everything will feel and still haven't gotten it. My anticipation is nowhere near complete."

Like Sapp in Tampa, Parcells also was heavily involved in making popular — and successful — a specific alignment. The 3-4 defense came to life under Parcells with the New York Giants, and he led them to the 1986 and 1990 championships.

Parcells, who also took the Patriots, Jets and Cowboys from the bottom to near the top of the NFL as head coach, says it was his duty to provide a prosperous environment.

"You give the players a chance to succeed to the best of their ability," he said. "That's your job as a coach, your responsibility."

Parcells mentioned his coaching tree, which includes the likes of Tom Coughlin, Bill Belichick and Sean Payton — all Super Bowl-winning coaches planning to be on hand today — as among his proudest achievements. He promised to bring that up during his induction speech.

Robinson and Culp were voted in as senior members. Considering their pedigrees, it's stunning it took so long for them to make it; Robinson retired in 1974, Culp in 1981.

"That bust means an awful lot," Robinson said. "That bust will last forever."

Fuller Center bicyclists visit Twin Falls church, share mission.

TWIN FALLS • A couple of months ago, some cyclists traveling across the U.S. contacted the First United Methodist Church. They needed a place to stop for the night as they made the final leg of their trip through the Northwest. The travelers were part of the Fuller Center Bicycle Adventure's sixth annual summer cross-country ride.

The church opened its doors July 24 to the 21 cyclists, who took a break and got to speak with the congregation about why they are biking 3,700 miles from Savannah, Ga. to Vancouver, B.C.

Their mission is three-fold, said trip leader Melissa Merrill:

- They were trying to raise $220,000 for The Fuller Center for Housing, a nonprofit that seeks to eradicate poverty housing by promoting partnerships with individuals and community groups to build and rehabilitate homes for people in need in 16 countries and 22 states.
- Each of the 21 traveling volunteers raised $1 for every mile they biked, for a total of $77,700.
- Along their route, they stopped in cities with Fuller Center chapters so they could help with local projects. They decided to stop in Twin Falls because it was between major stops in Salt Lake City and Boise.

- The cyclists also share their stories and message in hopes of inspiring people to start more Fuller Center chapters.

similar programs? Bike and Build, for example, is a nonprofit committed to affordable housing that sends college-age volunteers across the country to help build homes.

"We let all ages join, and we're more of a faith-based trip," Merrill said.

Tom Weber of Colorado was 52 years older than the group's youngest member. Weber joined the Fuller Center Bicycle Adventure in 2011.

"I joined this ride in a selfish way, to ride across America," he said.

But Weber said his perception of the trek changed after he saw the effect the volunteers had on people.

"We've changed a light bulb to building a whole house," Weber said.

He choked up recalling how he helped put in an extra wheelchair-accessible bedroom and bathroom for a sick boy on the East Coast.

The Fuller Center is an ecumenical Christian organization that works in partnership with people of all faiths and backgrounds. The partners include Hindus in Nepal, Buddhists in Sri Lanka and Muslims in Senegal.

Millard Fuller founded The Fuller Center in 2005, after first founding Habitat for Humanity and serving as its president for 29 years.

The Bicycle Adventure was created in 2008 and was inspired by the walks of 700, 1,000 and 1,200 miles led by Millard and Linda Fuller in the 1980s.

It is also about living with less so other can have more. Since they are traveling by bike, they can only pack a small bag and often sleep on floors.

"Biking is our method to spread the word about affordable housing," Merrill said.

And by the end of the trip, everyone is a flat-tire expert.

How does The Fuller Center Bicycle Adventure change those who participate?

"This is my first time doing it. I wanted to do a bike ride across the country," said Ben Coughenour of Michigan. "At first I was happy to find a cheap, easy way to do it."

But Coughenour said he has changed over recent weeks. He also was impressed by how people go out of their way to help the group with a meal or place to stay.

"The more I participate, the more I want to make a difference, and it isn't about me anymore," he said. "I hope to ride again, but I'm just enjoying it while it lasts."

The next day, the group departed en route to Boise, and then were headed to Lewiston.

In Lewiston, they planned to build 12 wheelchair ramps.

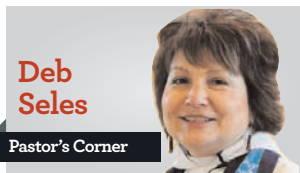

False Dichotomy: Either Religion or Spirituality?

“Religion is for those who are afraid of hell, spirituality is for those who have been there.”

It's a cynical phrase but one with a kernel of truth. If you believe in a vindictive God who delights in assigning sinners to the eternal fires, then there is comfort in following the right tenets, declaring the correct beliefs to avoid such a fate. To be fearful of hell, of being cut off from the Source of Love and Life, can be motivating, but not nearly in the way those who are positively motivated to enter into the heart of a God who loves all of humanity beyond our imagining.

The quote sets up a false dichotomy. Either religion or spirituality. Either a set of practices and dogma or a deep encounter with the Divine One. It needn't be either/or, rather there is delightful richness in both/and. I know, I traveled the “spiritual but not religious” path myself.

I was passionate about discovering God in all things, having grown up Roman Catholic. High school friends and I asked tough questions about our lives of faith and consulted theologians like Harvey Cox, Paul Tillich and Dietrich Bonhoeffer. In my 20s, I broke away and sought answers in pop spiritualities and in the world of self-help and psychology. None of it was satisfying. I hungered for community and for meaning beyond my own self-interest.

My moment of conversion came in my 30s. It was Christmastime and I was driving past my childhood while listening to a local radio station. The station featured calls from people in need; then they would fulfill those Christmas wishes. Invariably they were requests for others: parents who couldn't afford presents for their children, relatives helping out other family members or friends who struggled with illness, disability or devastation. That was when I realized the truth of “Jesus is the reason. It all ties back to Love Incarnate, the reason these people are giving of themselves.” Thus began my slow, steady return to religion.

I sought to be re-attached (religion comes from the root, ligio, or attachment-like ligament) to a community where I could experience a place and a way to shape my life. Returning to organized religion has enriched my spiritual life. Here I have found wise spiritual guides to help me when I become blind to my own goodness and sin and to God's grace and mercy. Here I have found a community to hold me accountable and a way to forgive myself and others. Here I have found ways to serve God and other people that would have never been possible had I continued my spiritual lonerism. With others I read and grapple with scripture. In community, I am fed at the Lord's table. When my husband and mother died, I found people with whom to mourn and prayers and rituals of comfort. In the 'communion of saints' I find writers who have traveled the path before me, who have struggled as we are struggling now and in their words, I find sage advice. Not from fear of hell, but from a desire to participate in God's promise of abundant life did I return. While there have been hellish times in my life, I have found these to be transformative times because I have a community of faith that supports my spiritual growth.

And coming out the other side has been, well, like a taste of that other place, a taste of heaven. As a pastor, that is my prayer and my hope, that all who enter our churches can taste a bit of heaven. Even if we're going through hell.

Televangelist Schuller out of Hospital after Fall

GARDEN GROVE, Calif. (AP) • Crystal Cathedral founder and former televangelist the Rev. Robert H. Schuller is out of the hospital after a fall at his Southern California home last month.

Schuller's daughter, Carol Schuller Milner, told The Associated Press on Thursday that her father needed physical therapy and was alert and walking.

The 86-year-old televangelist, who started the popular "Hour of Power" broadcast and built Orange County's glass-paned Crystal

Schuller

Cathedral, fell on July 20 at his home in Orange.

Schuller once attracted millions of viewers worldwide with his sermons broadcast from the Crystal Cathedral, but in later years his ministry suffered from a decline in viewership and donations.

Schuller resigned from the ministry's board in 2012, two years after the famed church filed for bankruptcy.

GUNS AT CHURCH

Pastor Cory Respondek poses with his Ruger handgun at his Living Water Church in Cahokia, Ill., just east of St. Louis, on Friday. An Illinois state lawmaker is proposing adding churches to a list of places where firearms toted publicly under the state's new concealed-carry law would not be allowed.

Lawmaker wants to ban firearms from places of worship.

CAHOKIA, ILL. (AP) • Illinois lawmakers who last month beat a court-imposed deadline to allow concealed weapons in public left out something a suburban Chicago legislator now wants to change: A ban on firearms in places of worship.

Democratic state Sen. Dan Kotowski, a former gun-control lobbyist from Park Ridge, is drawing fire from some ministers after introducing an amendment in mid-July to add churches, synagogues and mosques to the list of places forbidden for concealed carry.

Kotowski said he consulted with Chicago-area religious leaders before formally proposing the amendment in a state where a pastor inexplicably was gunned down during a Sunday service four years ago. But clergy leaders downstate say prohibiting pistols near pulpits could be an unrighteous affront to constitutional and property rights, and a National Rifle Association lobbyist says he plans to challenge it.

The fledgling law, passed July 9 and months from taking effect, bars concealed weapons from Illinois schools, courthouses, government buildings, libraries and forms of public transit. The measure says churches and other private places may post a sign noting people can't carry guns onto the property.

Kotowski says providing churches with a specific exemption was an oversight that some lawmakers were unaware of until the legislation was debated.

"There are certain places where guns should be off-limits. Churches, as sanctuaries, are among them," Kotowski told The Associated Press this week, stressing that the ministers he consulted "believe that when you go into a house of worship you're going in to pray, reflect and make the most of this period of silence."

"For many, knowing someone can bring in a loaded, concealed handgun is very troubling," he added.

Such a prohibition has the blessings of Charles Burton, pastor of the 125-member Unity Fellowship Church in Godfrey northeast of St. Louis. Burton, though, believes the debate about concealed weapons dodges an underlying issue: broken communities and "the politics of division."

"People don't feel safe because of the lack of community, and guns don't fix that," Burton said. While he understands gun ownership for home protection and hunting, "guns in public space where we're supposed to have law enforcement to protect us is problematic."

He doubts congregants need to pack heat.

"To help people and be a blessing to the community, there's some risk involved. I get it," he said. "But when we surrender to our fear, we dishonor our faith."

Other religious leaders consider Kotowski's legislation misguided, saying big churches, mosques and synagogues in Chicago and elsewhere can afford security while their smaller, less well-funded counterparts are defenseless.

"I'm fine with the church deciding (whether to allow concealed guns). I'm not fine with the state dictating it," said Cory Respondek, pastor of the 20-member Living Water Church in Cahokia, which he calls "a higher crime area" near St. Louis.

"If someone is intending harm or to attack our congregation, we want to be able to stop that threat. Arming ourselves and a few of our people is the easiest way to deter that," said Respondek, whose Pennsylvania concealed-carry permit allows him to publicly tote a firearm in dozens of states, but not Illinois.

Pastors who object to Kotowski's plan also point to examples of church violence in Illinois.

Four years ago, a stranger armed with a .45-caliber handgun and enough bullets to kill 30 people strolled into the First Baptist Church in Maryville during a Sunday morning service and shot at pastor Fred Winters as he stood at the pulpit — causing confetti to rain from the pastor's Bible and leaving some of the 150 onlookers to wonder, at first, if it was a skit.

Gunman Terry Sedlacek, who had no apparent connection to the southwestern Illinois church or Winters, fired three more times, with one bullet going through the pastor's heart as Winters, 45, tried to run, authorities said. After Sedlacek's gun jammed, he pulled out a knife but was wrestled down by two congregants, police said.

Numbers Don't Add Up for Mass Crowd Count

RIO DE JANEIRO (AP) • If measured in spirit, there is hardly a soul who would question the success of Pope Francis' Mass on giant Copacabana beach last weekend. The count when it comes to the flesh-and-blood numbers of faithful who actually attended is an entirely different matter.

The Vatican said an historic 3.7 million people were at the Sunday event, an eye-popping number that would have made it the second largest papal Mass ever. But number crunchers were splashing cold water on those jubilant estimates Friday, saying the real figure was not even half as big.

The problem was, the count released by Vatican and Brazilian officials was a guesstimate that statisticians say grossly inflated the crowd figures. The research director of Datafolha, one of Brazil's top polling and statistic firms, said that based on the size of the crowd area and reasonable density estimates, he would put Sunday's turnout at between 1.2 million and 1.5 million people.

Vatican officials or organizers of World Youth Day, an event held every three years that draws young Catholics from across the globe, weren't bashful about telling the press how many people turned out to see Francis.

"It's an old, old story that organizations, whether political radicals or the Vatican, always over-guesstimate the size of turnout, they want their event to look as good as possible," said Clark McPhail, an emeritus professor of sociology at the University of Illinois who has studied crowd counts for four decades.

McPhail first chuckled when he heard the Vatican's claim that the pope drew 3.7 million people to an area of Copacabana beach and adjoining streets that encompassed about 594,400 square yards.

By the Vatican's count, the crowd density throughout the entire area would have been 7.4 people per square yard, which wouldn't allow for movement of any kind, let alone the jumping, arm waving, singing and dancing seen at the papal events. Video and photos of the crowd also showed that while it was packed close to the gigantic altar built on Copacabana beach, the faithful thinned out along the 2.5-mile long beach.

Historic Pipe Organ Back in Mass. Church

HEATH, Mass. (AP) • After a 2½-year absence, the "Opus 16" Johnson pipe organ is back in its place of honor inside the Heath Union Evangelical Church — better than ever after its $160,000 restoration.

Built around 1850, the organ was scheduled to be rededicated in a special service on July 21, an event that was supposed to include an inaugural performance featuring international concert organist Nathan J. Laube. The free concert was planned to be held in the Heath Union Church.

Gone is the white paint, which was applied to the original faux-wood grain surface, and back again are the original gold-plated facade pipes that had been stored inside the organ for at least a century.

All the original leather components have been replaced, and a missing rank of pipes has been replicated.

Ruth Johnson of Heath, who has spearheaded fundraising efforts for at least two decades, played the newly restored organ for the first time during this year's Palm Sunday church service.

When asked how the organ sounds, she replied, "It's got much better depth. With the old (electric) blower, there wasn't as much air-flow as there should have been."

Johnson, who is not related to the organ builder, said the restoration "was much more authentic than they thought it was going to be. That's why this is such a treasure."

By the 1980s, it was clear to church members that the organ needed an overhaul. Sometimes the 130-year-old leather parts would fail, rendering the organ unplayable.

OBITUARIES

James Eugene Todd Jr.

Nov. 27, 1956-July 29, 2013

TWIN FALLS • On Monday, July 29, 2013, we lost a dear, wonderful, stubborn and loving man, James Eugene Todd Jr., who left his worries and pain behind for a peaceful rest.

James “Jet” was born Nov. 27, 1956, in Huntington Beach, Calif., to James Eugene Todd Sr. and Vonnie Lee Todd. He was raised and lived in Southern California until the birth of his daughter, Laura Lorena LaVonne Todd. Both James and her mother, Mary San Roman, wanted a different life for their daughter, so they moved to Twin Falls, Idaho, in the summer of 1986. James and Mary later decided they were better as friends.

James married Laurie Rackham and he loved his stepchildren, Brandon, Robert and Amber; and their grandchildren, Sabrina, Starr, Jenna, Jaren, Christifer, Alicia and Selena.

James is also survived by his brothers, Joseph Todd, John Todd and his wife Regina; and his sister, Judy “Sweetpea” Dufour; along with his nieces, Serena, Cassandra, Corrine and Heather Todd, and Jade, Jessa and Julia Dufour. Grandmother LaVonne Bottoms was always precious to James and he loved his stepmother, Sally Todd, as well. James was preceded in death by his paternal grandparents and maternal grandfather; his parents, James and Vonnie; his beloved brother, Jerry Todd; and stepdaughter, Shawna Rackham Miller. James will also have his honorary brothers, Don Hemingway and Dave Short, to greet him in the hereafter.

James served his country honorably in the Army and worked at Amalgamated Sugar Company until he was injured in the workplace. James came to live his life “One Day at a Time.” He truly enjoyed spending all the time he could outdoors, fishing, or just out in a canoe on the river. James taught all of his grandchildren to fish and enjoy the outdoors.

James had a special relationship with his grandson, Christifer, and was teaching him to use a wrench and to learn the names and parts of hand tools. James had a lifelong love of motorcycles and was always happy to talk about riding and working on bikes with anyone.

There will be a celebration for James at 3 p.m. Monday, Aug. 5, at Rock Creek Park. A funeral service will be held at 1 p.m. Tuesday, Aug. 6, at Rosenau Funeral Home. Burial will follow the service at Twin Falls Cemetery.

Kazmaier, Princeton Heisman Winner, Dies at 82

PRINCETON, N.J. (AP) • Dick Kazmaier, the last Ivy League football player to win the Heisman Trophy, has died. He was 82.

Susan Kazmaier said Friday that her father died of natural causes Thursday at a Boston hospital. He had been living in Concord, Mass.

Kazmaier played halfback for Princeton and as a senior in 1951 won the Heisman Trophy in a landslide, receiving 506 first-place votes and 1,777 points, which was a record at the time. He also won the Maxwell Award as the nation’s best player, and was The Associated Press male athlete of the year.

In his final two college seasons, the Tigers went 18-0. When he was done playing, he was Princeton’s career leader in yards rushing (1,950) and ranked second in yards passing (2,404). His career completion percentage of 59.5 still ranks third at Princeton.

He was voted into the College Football Hall of Fame in 1966 and in 2008 Princeton retired his No. 42, a jersey number also worn by Basketball Hall of Famer Bill Bradley.

“Notwithstanding all of the achievements in his athletic, business and philanthropic endeavors, Dick remained one of the most self-effacing individuals I have ever met,” Princeton Athletic Director Gary Walters said in a statement. “He never sought the spotlight and always led in a thoughtful and ethical manner.”

Three of Kazmaier’s six daughters with wife Patricia graduated from Princeton, including Patty Kazmaier, who played hockey for the Tigers and helped them to three consecutive Ivy League championships in the early 1980s.

After Patty died of a rare blood disease in 1990, Dick Kazmaier and the USA Hockey Foundation created the Patty Kazmaier Award, which has been given to the top player in NCAA Division I women’s ice hockey since 1998.

Kazmaier was an Ohio native from the small town of Maumee. After his brilliant career at Princeton, he passed on chance to play in the NFL after being drafted by the Chicago Bears in 1952. Instead, he attended business school at Harvard. He also served three years in the Navy.

USS Indianapolis Survivors Attend Last Big Reunion

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) • More than a dozen men who survived the worst sea disaster in U.S. naval history — the World War II sinking of the USS Indianapolis — have gathered in the cruiser’s namesake city for the final large-scale reunion of the famed ship’s dwindling number of survivors.

Thirty-eight of the 317 men who survived the ship’s July 1945 sinking and five days in the Pacific’s shark-infested waters are still alive, but they’re now in their late 80s and early 90s and many use wheelchairs.

Harold Bray, an 86-year-old from Benicia, Calif., said he and the 14 other survivors attending this year’s reunion decided Friday that any future gatherings will be smaller and less frequent because so many of the survivors are in poor health.

“We decided to stay together until the last guy’s standing, but the goal is to continue at a smaller scale,” said Bray, chairman of the USS Indianapolis Survivors Organization. “Some of the guys are in wheelchairs now and travel is pretty tough for them.”

Bray said the survivors will nonetheless keep telling the story of the ship’s sinking, their survival and the role they played in helping bring the war to a close.

The USS Indianapolis was halfway between Guam and the Philippines in shark-filled waters when a Japanese submarine sank it with torpedoes on July 30, 1945, in the war’s closing weeks.

Just days earlier, the Indianapolis had visited the island of Tinian in a secret mission to deliver the uranium-235 and other components for the atomic bomb later dropped on Hiroshima by the Enola Gay, which took off from the remote island.

The Indianapolis’ mission was so secret she sailed alone, unescorted by ships better equipped to detect and fight Japanese submarines.

An estimated 900 of the ship’s servicemen survived the vessel’s nighttime sinking, but before rescuers arrived five days later, drowning, delirium, dehydration and shark attacks had claimed all but 317 of the men.

The Indianapolis’ death toll — 880 members out of a crew of 1,197 died — is the U.S. Navy’s worst single at-sea loss of life. But reports of the tragedy were buried by the news of the Japanese surrender, and interest in the ship’s story was not revived until the 1975 movie “Jaws” featured a character who told of the sinking and the survivors’ days of agony.

Edgar Harrell, an 89-year-old from Clarksville, Tenn., who is one of only two ex-Marines among the remaining survivors, said the horrors he witnessed — including sharks devouring men around him — became too much for him to bear after he returned home.

While many survivors kept what they saw and heard to themselves, Harrell said the lingering trauma he’d suffered left him unable to focus on the college courses he enrolled in immediately after the war.

“I learned early on that you had to get it out, you had to tell others what happened,” he said. “Once I did it was a relief.”

Only 38 of the 317 survivors who were pulled from the Pacific’s shark-infested waters in August 1945 are still alive and they’re in their late 80s and early 90s. FEE'S MATTER:
WHAT ARE YOU PAYING?

A loan origination refers to the fees charged to the borrower associated with the initiation and completion of the home loan process. A loan origination fee is a form of profit to the lender, and is typically 1% of the loan amount.

Idaho Lending Group offers a "No Origination Fee Option" for the purchase or refinance of owner occupied properties. This can equate to a big savings for our borrowers.

DEAR ABBY: I am a 17-year-old girl who lives with my mother and my mother's boyfriend. This man has changed my world, and not for the better. The one person I ever cared about has practically turned against me.

DEAR ABBY
Jeanne Phillips

My mom tried killing herself for this man and chose him over me after she was released from the institution. I have been diagnosed with depression and have also tried to kill myself. I also have a habit of cutting myself. I stopped, but lately I have been wanting to start again. The only thing that has held me back is her threats of committing me to an institution.

She threatened my boyfriend with the police if he ever spoke to me again after we broke up. When I confronted her, she insisted that she was right and someday I'd understand. She has turned into this person I hardly know, and it's because of her boyfriend's influence. Before, when she was upset she would just not talk to me, but now she calls me the most horrid things and won't apologize unless someone besides me tells her.

I feel so alone. I honestly do want to kill myself, but I haven't because I know it isn't the right thing to do, even if it may seem right. I have tried talking to her. She won't listen to me. What should I do?

— HOPELESS AND ALONE IN FLORIDA
DEAR HOPELESS AND ALONE: Because you honestly do want to harm yourself, contact the doctor who diagnosed you with depression. However, if this is about your mother breaking up your romance by threatening to involve the police, you need to understand that the tactic wouldn't have worked unless he had something to fear.

The level of conflict in your home is not healthy. If you are still in school, discuss this with a trusted teacher or school counselor. In one more year you will be 18 and able to make decisions for yourself, but they shouldn't be based on your mother or her boyfriend. They need to be about what is truly best for you.

DEAR ABBY: I hate funerals. My grandfather died when I was 6, and one of my relatives held me over the casket and made me kiss his cold, dead face. It terrified me, and it's all I can remember of my grandfather. I force myself to recall any of the good times we had together, but that event still taints the good memory.

Since then, every funeral I have been to has had the same poisoning effect, no matter what the service was. Funerals are for the living, and I understand that many people feel the need for closure and the sharing of grief to begin healing. But I need to keep my grief and my faith private in order to heal.

I'm sure some people think my not showing up at a service is a sign of disrespect or just not caring. Nothing could be further from the truth. I prefer to remember the good times with the loved one, not the passing. My way of honoring that person is to keep my happy memories untainted.

Am I wrong? Selfish or lazy? Weird or crazy? Please let me know because at my age I'm sure more of these events will happen.

— KEEPING MY DISTANCE IN WASHINGTON STATE
DEAR KEEPING YOUR DISTANCE: You are none of the above. People grieve in different ways. An appropriate way to express your respect for the deceased and your support for the survivors would be to write a condolence letter expressing those feelings and sharing a happy memory with the grieving widow, widower or child. No rule of etiquette demands that you show up to a funeral — unless it happens to be your own.

Today is Saturday, Aug. 3, the 215th day of 2013. There are 150 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight:

On August 3, 1863, the first thoroughbred horse races took place at the Saratoga Race Course in Saratoga Springs, N.Y.

TODAY IN HISTORY

On this date:

In 1492, Christopher Columbus set sail from Pa- los, Spain, on a voyage that took him to the present-day Americas.

In 1807, former Vice Pres- ident Aaron Burr won on trial before a federal court in Richmond, Va., charged with treason. (He was acquitted less than a month later.)

In 1914, Germany de- clared war on France at the onset of World War I.

In 1936, Jesse Owens of the United States won the first of his four gold medals at the Berlin Olympics as he took the 100-meter sprint.

In 1943, Gen. George S. Patton slapped a private at an army hospital in Sicily, accusing him of cowardice. (Patton was later ordered by Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower to apologize for this and a second, similar episode.)

In 1949, the National Bas- ketball Association was formed as a merger of the Basketball Association of America and the National Basketball League.

In 1958, the nuclear- pow- ered submarine USS Nau- tilus became the first vessel to cross the North Pole un- derwater.

In 1966, comedian Lenny Bruce, 40, was found dead in his Los Angeles home.

In 1972, the U.S. Senate ratified the Anti-Ballistic Missile Treaty between the United States and the Soviet Union. (The U.S. unilaterally withdrew from the treaty in 2002.)

In 1981, U.S. air traffic controllers went on strike, despite a warning from Pres- ident Ronald Reagan they would be fired, which they were.

In 1988, the Soviet Union released Mathias Rust, the young West German pilot who had landed a light plane near Moscow's Red Square in May 1987.

In 1993, the Senate voted 96-3 to confirm U.S. Supreme Court nominee Ruth Bader Ginsburg.

Ten years ago: The Epis- copal Church's House of Deputies further paved the way for the Rev. V. Gene Robinson to become the church's first openly gay elected bishop, approving him on a 128-63 vote. Anni- ka Sorenstam completed a career Grand Slam at the Women's British Open, beating Se Ri Pak by a stroke in a head-to-head show- down. Hank Stram, Marcus Allen, James Lofton, Elvin Bethea and Joe De- Lamielleure were inducted into the Pro Football Hall of Fame.

Five years ago: Nobel Prize-winning Russian au- thor Alexander Solzhenitsyn died near Moscow at age 89. Al-Qaida confirmed the death of a top commander (Abu Khabab al-Masri), ap- parently in a U.S. airstrike in Pakistan; he was accused of training the suicide bombers who'd killed 17 American sailors on the USS Cole in 2000. At least 145 people were killed in a stampede of pilgrims at a remote moun- taintop Hindu temple in In- dia.

One year ago: The U.N. General Assembly over- whelmingly denounced Syr- ia's crackdown on dissent in a symbolic effort meant to push the deadlocked Securi- ty Council and the world at large into action on stopping the country's civil war. Michael Phelps rallied to win the 100-meter butterfly for his third gold of the London Games and No. 17 of his ca- reer. Missy Franklin set a world record in the 200 backstroke for the 17-year- old's third gold in London. Falling at speeds of up to 220 mph, nearly 140 skydivers shattered the vertical sky- diving world record as they flew heads-down in a mas- sive snowflake formation in northern Illinois.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE®

Bobby Wolff

“It is better to have enough ideas for some of them to be wrong, than to be always right by having no ideas at all.”
— Edward de Bono

When you are short of entries to a hand, a little lateral thinking may get you to the position you require. Today's deal provides an example.

Against four hearts, West led the diamond king and ace, on which the seven then two from East suggested a holding of four diamonds. Declarer played low from dummy on West's switch to the club four, and East won with the club king as declarer followed low. East now carefully returned a club to South's queen, and after drawing trump, declarer had to rely on the spade queen dropping. It didn't, and down went the game.

South's play lacked imagination. We can all see that if the spade queen drops, declarer is home. But there is a second string to declarer's bow, which he failed to consider. Had South unblocked his club queen under the king at trick three, the opportunity to finesse West for the club jack would be a valid possibility if the spade queen fails to oblige.

This unblock will also come up in positions such as the doubleton queen facing A-9-2 or K-9-2, when West leads the jack and East takes the trick with his high honor. Unblocking the queen leaves a finesse against the 10.

Incidentally, East did well to return a club to South's queen at trick four. On a major-suit return, South would have won, drawn trump, and tested the spades.
Then he could have run the rest of the trumps and squeezed West in the black suits.

ANSWER: It would be nice for North to be able to make a support double of two diamonds, not to show extras, but three-card spade support. That lets the simple raise to two spades show four trumps, often critical in deciding what level to compete to. Without such an agreement,
I'd guess to pass as South. Doubling for takeout now would require at least the heart queen in addition to my values.

IF AUGUST 3 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: You can form beneficial relationships and make key changes that help you improve your life this year. Avoid speculation or investments of time, emotions, or money between now and mid-August, as well as in October, as your judgment may be at a low point and you'd be wise to concentrate on fulfilling outstanding obligations or fixing problems from the past. September can offer a whirlwind of attention and adjustments, but wait until January to make key commitments. The first quarter of next year is a prime time to make crucial decisions, ask for favors, change jobs, find a permanent relationship, or launch key plans. Any opportunity that you accept at that time will, in some way, improve your life.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Sit back and watch the sun shine and the flowers grow. Surprising news might briefly tempt you to make sudden changes. It's in your best interest to digest new information at your leisure and wait before acting.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Concentrate on creative ideas, hobbies, or entertaining this weekend. Don't miss out on any opportunity to discuss future plans with others. Two heads, or even three, are better than one.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Be content with what you already have. You might wonder if you'd rather be a small fish in a big pond, or the big fish in the small one. The truth is, you don't really need to make that decision.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Friends, partners and loved ones have the ability to inspire you daily. Look at them with a more appreciative eye. Don't be confused or distracted by a passing whim or take a mild criticism to heart.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Juggle only as many balls as you can handle without dropping one. You might be tempted to be the class clown and flaunt your sparkling personality. Focus on circulating and networking with others.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Permanent blessings are in store. Pair up with a congenial partner for mutual enjoyment. Whether you have a family to cherish, or a romantic twinkle in your eye, it's a good time to make memories.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Be purposeful; Plant flowers rather than weeds. Whatever spreads may grow wild and could choke out the sense of beauty and harmony you hope to achieve. Tend to your social garden by making a personal choice.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Put the shoe on the other foot. You can best appreciate the feelings and needs of others if you put yourself in their place and imagine their situation. Achieving true understanding begins with baby steps.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Steer clear of schemes and dreams that might entail large expenditures in the immediate future. Take a long, hard look at your financial situation. Remain economical and thrifty for the best results.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): A significant other might assess an ongoing situation better than you can, so listen up. If you're contemplating an investment or a major purchase, however, you might hear only what you want to hear.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Things that seem too good to be true usually are. However, you might find value and usefulness in an experience. Even a carnival game is fun although you know it is rigged so players usually lose.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Take a sentimental journey down memory lane. If you rub the lamp with extra enthusiasm, a genie might pop out and grant you a wish. Blend imagination with inspiration and let your creativity free.
