PASSION FOR CHEESE, Jumpstart for Downtown

Glanbia opens doors to new cheese center, corporate offices.

Unbuttoning his dress shirt, Glanbia President and CEO Jeff Williams puffed out his chest and proudly bared the blue and white T-shirt beneath.

“Life is gouda,” it read. “We wear our passion on our shirtsleeves. But I can tell you that we also wear it on our heart,” he said, rousing applause from the crowd gathered Wednesday morning.

During Glanbia’s grand opening of its corporate offices and Cheese Innovation Center in Old Towne, Williams said he hopes the buzz will energize employees to further improve the company and its products.

Much energy, thought and hard work went into building the innovation center, which local officials hope will be an economic boon for Old Towne and downtown, he said.

“It was a huge collaborative effort, and it does show what can happen when people come together — entrepreneurs, business people, government, city folks, townspeople and a group of great employees and milk suppliers,” he said. “We have the best milk in the world right here in Idaho, and we are going feed the world.”

Between samples of cheese, locals toured the 14,000-square-foot innovation center and the three-story, 35,000-square-foot corporate headquarters built to house about 100 employees. The buildings are at Fourth Avenue South and Shoshone Street West.

“This is where the money is going to be made,” Williams said, gesturing toward the innovation center. “And this (corporate headquarters) is where we are going to count the money.”

The corporate building features numerous offices and spaces for traveling executives, collaboration areas and sitting and standing

The innovation center — lined with large windows and filled with shiny new equipment — features a kitchen, culinary lab, make area, analytical lab, offices, conference room and posters illustrating pepper matchmaking.

In the analytical lab, food scientists support the art of cheese-making with scientific testing. Instead of leaving the cheese to subjective human tastes, food scientists can gather specific data and produce a more consistent product, said staffer Candace Clark. They can identify, say, what

McCain Foods in Burley to Invest $100 Million in Third Production Line

BY JOE CADOTTE
jcadotte@magicvalley.com

BURLEY • One of Burley’s largest employers announced Wednesday that it is ready to expand. McCain Foods plans to invest $100 million in a new building and a third production line.

The company plans to immediately request building permits. Jobs will be created, but the range and number of jobs will not be known until the line is almost ready to open. The third line is expected to open in late 2015, said McCain communications manager Cathy Sharifi.

McCain Foods employs 550 people in Burley and 4,500 nationwide at production facilities in eight states.

The expansion decision was made because “there is an increasing demand for potato

“In addition to hiring more employees, we plan to buy potatoes locally for the new third production line, which means more business for our local community.”

Cassia County Terminates Burley’s Law Enforcement Services

BY LAURIE WELCH
lwelch@magicvalley.com

BURLEY • Cassia County has terminated its law enforcement services contract with Burley, effective Sept. 30, after the two governments failed to reach a compromise on a $50,000 difference in contract costs.

Commissioners voted unanimously in an emergency meeting Wednesday to stop providing police services to Burley.

The decision came on the heels of the Burley City Council’s vote Tuesday to spend $1.45 million on those services. The county had asked for $1.5 million.

The two entities had been negotiating the contract for months.

“This was a surprise. It was a complete shock to me,” said county Undersheriff George Warrell.

“We regret we came to this point,” said commission Chairman Dennis Crane, “but we just can’t afford to keep doing business like this.”

Commissioner Paul Christensen was absent from the meeting, and Sheriff Jay Heward was out of town.

The key question now is how Burley will ensure public safety after Sept. 30.

“Having no police services would be an option but a poor one,” said City Councilman Gordon Hansen. “It wouldn’t be a responsible position to take. One of our primary responsibilities is to provide public safety.”

For $1.5 million, Hansen said, the city may want to investigate having its own police department again.

Burley’s police force became part of the Sheriff’s Office in 1986.

“I feel like the city has been paying a premium for years,” said Hansen.

Ketchum Woman Dies When Bike Falls into Path of Dump Truck

TIMES-NEWS

KETCHUM • A 56-year-old Ketchum woman died Tuesday when her bicycle fell under the wheels of a dump truck, which ran her over, said Blaine County Sheriff Gene Ramsey.

Bonni Curran was headed north on Main Street at Fourth Street East about 3:40 p.m. Also northbound was the dump truck, pulling a trailer and being driven by Steven Stroud, 59, of Gooding.

Traffic had stopped for a pedestrian who was crossing the road, Ramsey said. After the pedestrian cleared the roadway, traffic started moving forward. Curran started pedaling, her bicycle wobbled and she fell under the truck's wheels of the truck, the sheriff said.

Ramsey said the investigation into the crash should be complete by the end of the week.

Rumors that chip sealing on Ketchum streets contributed to the crash are not true, he said.

"It's a tragedy that happened," he said. "There wasn't speed involved; we don't see any negligence at this time."

Hidden History
The KKK in the Magic Valley

BY MYCHEL MATTHEWS
mmatthews@magicvalley.com

BUHL • For 50 years after the federal government told it to disband, the local Ku Klux Klan laid low — until its resurgence in the 1920s, when the Klan came to town to recruit members.

By 1922, the KKK had become a minor political power in the West, with a focus on white Protestant dominance over blacks, Catholics and Jews. The movement got a foothold in California, then spread to Oregon and Washington.

from New York, spoke at the IOOF Hall in Buhl.

The Buhl Herald praised Burger's speaking style and said a dozen hooded Klansmen handed out membership forms at two of his lectures. Klan dues were $3.50 a year, plus a $10 joining fee. The newspaper did not report whether a Buhl branch — or klavern — was formed.

The next month, Burger spoke to a group in Idaho Falls and claimed that 38 members of Congress were Klan members.

Curiously, H.W. Evans, imperial wizard of the Klan, declared that he had never heard of Burger and that no member of the Klan was allowed to discuss Klan membership, says a Feb. 15, 1923, Associated Press news article.

Later that year, the KKK came close to taking control of the Twin Falls city election; Klan candidates were narrowly defeated.

In 1924, about 150 men and women in full Klan regalia held a day-long rally at the Twin Falls County Fairgrounds.

A year later, Buhl's only black resident received a threat from the Klan. Henry Field had run a shoeshine parlor in town since 1915.

Field discussed the state of local banks after the post-WWI agricultural depression. Apparently, the Klan didn't approve of the discussion and threatened him in a letter. Although others had joined in the conversation, Field was the only one threatened.

WEATHER

Thunderstorms Increase Fire Danger this Week

Brandon Redmond
Weather Anchor

Red Flag Warnings have been issued for most of southern Idaho and the Magic Valley through Friday morning. Moisture will move into southern Idaho by Thursday afternoon and evening sparking the development of thunderstorms. The storms will be capable of producing strong winds and frequent lightning. Of course, those two factors will lead to the increased fire danger risk across the area. Unfortunately, it does not appear that much rain will fall with the storms. The best chance for any measurable rain will be in the mountains.

An isolated storm is still possible on Friday, but by the weekend the moisture should move out and we will be left with sunny skies and nice conditions.

The clouds on Thursday and Friday will keep temperatures a little cooler, only climbing to near 90. Temperatures this weekend will be in the upper-80s before climbing back into the low-90s next week.

ONLINE: A Nervous Photographer, Chasing Lightning

At "Between the Frames," Times-News photographers blog about how they got the shot. In the latest entry, Drew Nash writes about his night photo combining lightning and headlights, featured in the Aug. 2 edition. Here's an excerpt:

"Lightning imagery has always fascinated me. Getting struck by lightning has always scared me. I figure the odds are against me with a tall metal tripod next to me. I'm also not a big fan of having my gear out in the rain, though I do have rain gear if it becomes a downpour.

"Another aspect of shooting lightning storms is not only picking a spot in the sky but deciding how much of that spot to pull into the frame. I usually shoot loose with my 16-35mm. I have the megapixels to crop in, but the perspective always feels wrong. Think I'll try the 50mm next time. ...

"I was off the clock but saw several strikes to the north. I was already on that side of town with my gear and knew I had to shoot it. I found an empty lot and jumped out and set up. ..."

Shoshone Hires New Police Chief

TIMES-NEWS

SHOSHONE • The City of Shoshone hired Marshall R. Emerson as its new police chief, Mayor Dave Wendell said Wednesday.

Emerson, who vied with 12 other highly qualified applicants, will oversee Shoshone's four police officers, Wendell said. His appointment was confirmed at Tuesday's City Council meeting.

He had been assistant sheriff at the Washoe County Sheriff's Office in Nevada since 1990.

There, Emerson oversaw detectives, patrol, the Northern Nevada Law Enforcement Academy, detention and search and rescue. He also commanded all functions of the Washoe County Consolidated Detention Facility and was responsible for protection of the Mills Lane Justice Complex and the 2nd Judicial District Court.

Emerson received a bachelor's degree in criminal justice from Kings College in Wilkes-Barre, Penn., and graduated from the FBI National Academy Drug Unit Commander's Academy as well as the Police Executive Research Forum's Senior Management Institute for Police.

He has received many awards for search and rescue operations and achievements in criminal justice.

Emerson served on the Joint Together Northern Nevada Anti-Drug Coalition, the Associated General Contractors Emergency Services Committee and the Washoe County Workplace Violence Committee.

Before joining the Washoe County Sheriff's Office, Emerson was an officer with the Metropolitan Police Department in Washington, D.C., and an agent in charge for the Pennsylvania Attorney General's Office.

Man Charged With Home Invasion, Lighting Home on Fire

BY ALISON GENE SMITH
alismith@magicvalley.com

MURTAUGH • A Fort Hall man has been charged with several crimes in a suspicious trailer fire in Murtaugh. Vince Henison Littleman, 31, was arraigned Wednesday, accused of forcing his way into a trailer home, beating up a man, then lighting the home on fire. Littleman was being held at the Twin Falls County Jail on charges of aggravated battery, robbery, first-degree arson and burglary.

Bond was set at $250,000. His preliminary hearing is Aug. 16. Littleman was with a 39-year-old man and 16-year-old girl when they burst into Terry Hollifield's trailer at 3050 N. 4700 E., deputies said. His companions have not been charged.

Twin Falls County sheriff's officials gave this account:

About 12:30 a.m. July 13, trailer resident Rufino Cintora, 43, was awakened by loud knocking. He yelled for the person at the door to identify himself, but then he became afraid and locked himself in the back bedroom. Cintora soon heard the front door being forced open, then the bedroom door was pushed open.

A man with short dark hair entered the bedroom carrying a flashlight and asked for money or marijuana. When Cintora told him he didn't have either, the man beat him in the head and upper body with a heavy metal bar.

About five minutes later, a man with a long, dark ponytail entered the bedroom and started beating him with a bar, also. A girl came in next and asked in Spanish about money and about a man who the group apparently thought lived in the house. Cintora told deputies he'd never seen the three before.

Cintora was bleeding profusely as the intruders searched his bedroom, took his cell phone and left.

He tried to tend to his wounds. But then, afraid that the intruders would return, he drove an ATV to a vacant home on the property.

About an hour later, he heard what he thought was the intruder's vehicle driving by. Cintora hid in the home until about 6 a.m., then left to get help. As he was driving the ATV back to the trailer, Cintora saw it was engulfed in flames. After finding someone with a phone, Cintora and his co-workers called 911.

Firefighters arrived about 7 a.m. and battled the blaze for an hour with two engines and two tenders, said Taylor Hunsaker, spokesman for the Rock Creek Fire Department. The trailer was a total loss. On July 17, a woman told deputies that the same 16-year-old girl threatened to beat and shoot her and the man whom the group had been seeking in the trailer unless they paid money owed to the girl's family.

On July 30, the girl confessed to entering Cintora's home with Littleman. She said she asked Littleman to help her find a man who owed her family money. They found his last address, forced their way in and beat up a man inside. After beating Cintora, Littleman said, he and the girl returned to beat him more. When they found nobody home, they used lighters to ignite fires inside the trailer.

Sun Valley Was Birthplace of Washington Post-Amazon Deal

IDAHO STATESMAN

Amazon founder and CEO Jeff Bezos and The Washington Post Co.'s Donald Graham used Allen & Co.'s media conference in Sun Valley last month to solidify the sale of one of the country's most venerable news organizations.

Reuters reports that the $250 million deal was agreed to after just two meetings during the July conference in Idaho's most well known mountain resort community.

Allen & Co.'s annual conference attracts the biggest names in media, politics, business and even sports (the commissioners of all four major professional sports leagues attended this year). As a result, the conference also has been the incubator for other major transactions and announcements. It was at previous Allen & Co. conferences that Comcast's purchase of NBC

Universal, Disney's decision to buy ABC and Facebook CEO Mark Zuckerberg's $100 million donation to Newark, N.J., schools came about.

CCA WARDEN SAYS HE DIDN'T KNOW ABOUT UNDERSTAFFING

BOISE (AP) • A former warden for private prison giant Corrections Corporation of America says he didn't know that mandatory posts at the Idaho prison he led were chronically understaffed.

Tim Wengler, the former warden at the CCA-run Idaho Correctional Center south of Boise, told U.S. District Judge David Carter on Wednesday that in his three years on the job, he never noticed that some mandatory security posts went understaffed or that some staffing reports were falsified to cover up the missing staff hours.

Wengler was one of several CCA officials and employees to testify during a contempt-of-court hearing over whether the Nashville, Tenn.-based company is abiding by the terms of a settlement it reached with Idaho inmates two years ago.

The inmates, represented by the American Civil Liberties Union of Idaho, sued in 2010, contending that the prison was so violent that prisoners call it "Gladiator School." CCA denied the allegations but reached a deal in 2011 requiring widespread operating changes including increased staffing. Earlier this year, however, the company acknowledged that it understaffed the mandatory minimum posts at the prison by 4,800 hours during seven months in 2012. Shortly after that admission, CCA announced that the 46-year-old Wengler was retiring after 17 years with the company.

But in his testimony Wednesday, Wengler said he was still under contract with CCA and still getting paid by the company. His job is "to assist them with things they need," Wengler said, including making sure the company is following through with the settlement it reached with the Idaho inmates. Wengler said he couldn't remember if his employment contact prohibits him from disparaging or testifying against CCA.

Wengler also said he never suspected that the mandatory security staff positions required under both CCA's $29 million contract with the Idaho Department of Correction and the court settlement order were frequently left understaffed for all or part of the shift.

"I believed we were fulfilling the terms of the settlement," Wengler said.

He laid the blame at the feet of his subordinates, saying it was apparent "that somebody knew something" and was falsifying documents, but that he never spotted any inaccuracies when he looked at the staffing rosters.

Carter frequently interjected his own sharp questions and comments during question, asking another CCA official how much money the company should pay back Idaho taxpayers for failing to meeting the contract terms. The judge said the 4,800 hours of understaffing appeared to be a low estimate of how much time went unfilled.

Scott Craddock, CCA's top ethics officer, said those hours only accounted for understaffing that occurred during the night shift during a seven-month span, and that CCA didn't fully investigate the number of hours that were understaffed during the day shift.

A partial review showed at least 152 hours understaffed in May and another 300 in June, Craddock said.

"As I understand it, CCA has represented they're going to pay back IDOC. What amount should they pay them?" the judge asked Craddock.

"Let's add together," he said, "4800 hours, plus 152, plus 300, what is that? ... And we don't know what the day shift for gosh, July, August, September, October, November, we don't know that, do we? So 4800 hours is kind of a pretty low number, isn't it?"

"We reported what we did a detailed report on," Craddock said, saying they based the estimate on the period they investigated, which was the night shift for seven months.

ACLU attorney Stephen Pevar said he would show evidence that CCA violated the court's order by failing to fill thousands of hours of security posts, that the company tried to cover up the understaffing by filing false documents with the state, that CCA deliberately avoided learning who was responsible for the problems, and that despite learning of the staffing problems more than a year ago, the understaffing continues to this day.

Pevar said the understaffing problems occurred because there was "inadequate supervision by the warden. Someone was asleep at the wheel."

CCA's attorney Daniel Struck said hiring and retaining qualified correctional officers is a problem at prisons of all sorts, nationwide.

CCA's management team at the Idaho Correctional Center did what it could to try to keep the mandatory posts filled, Struck said, and even hired more staffers than were required under the contract to meet the terms of the court settlement.

"The evidence shows there's always going to be challenges in filling mandatory posts," Struck said. He said the company implemented a plan to make sure the vacancies don't happen again, and that there were no increases in inmate assaults as a result of the understaffing.

"As a result there is no reason to punish CCA for taking the actions that they did," Struck said.

Kevin Myers, a regional managing director of operations for CCA, testified the company offered to pay the Idaho Department of Correction $117,000 to cover the understaffed hours. That amounts to about $24.37 an hour.

Cleveland House in Kidnap, Rape Case is Demolished

CLEVELAND (AP) • With several swipes from the arm of an excavator and applause from spectators, a house where three women were held captive and raped for a decade was demolished Wednesday, reduced to rubble in less than an hour and a half.

The demolition had the look of a neighborhood celebration, but some residents have been troubled by guilt for failing to notice tell-tale signs of the women's imprisonment, like windows boarded up from the inside and the kidnapper's practice of keeping visitors from going past the front room. The home was torn down as part of the plea deal that spared Ariel Castro a possible death sentence and forced him to turn over the deed to the house and pay for it to be razed.

Yemen Becomes Hotbed of Al-Qaida and Counterterrorism Operations

Yemen's Government Says It Uncovers Al-Qaida Plots

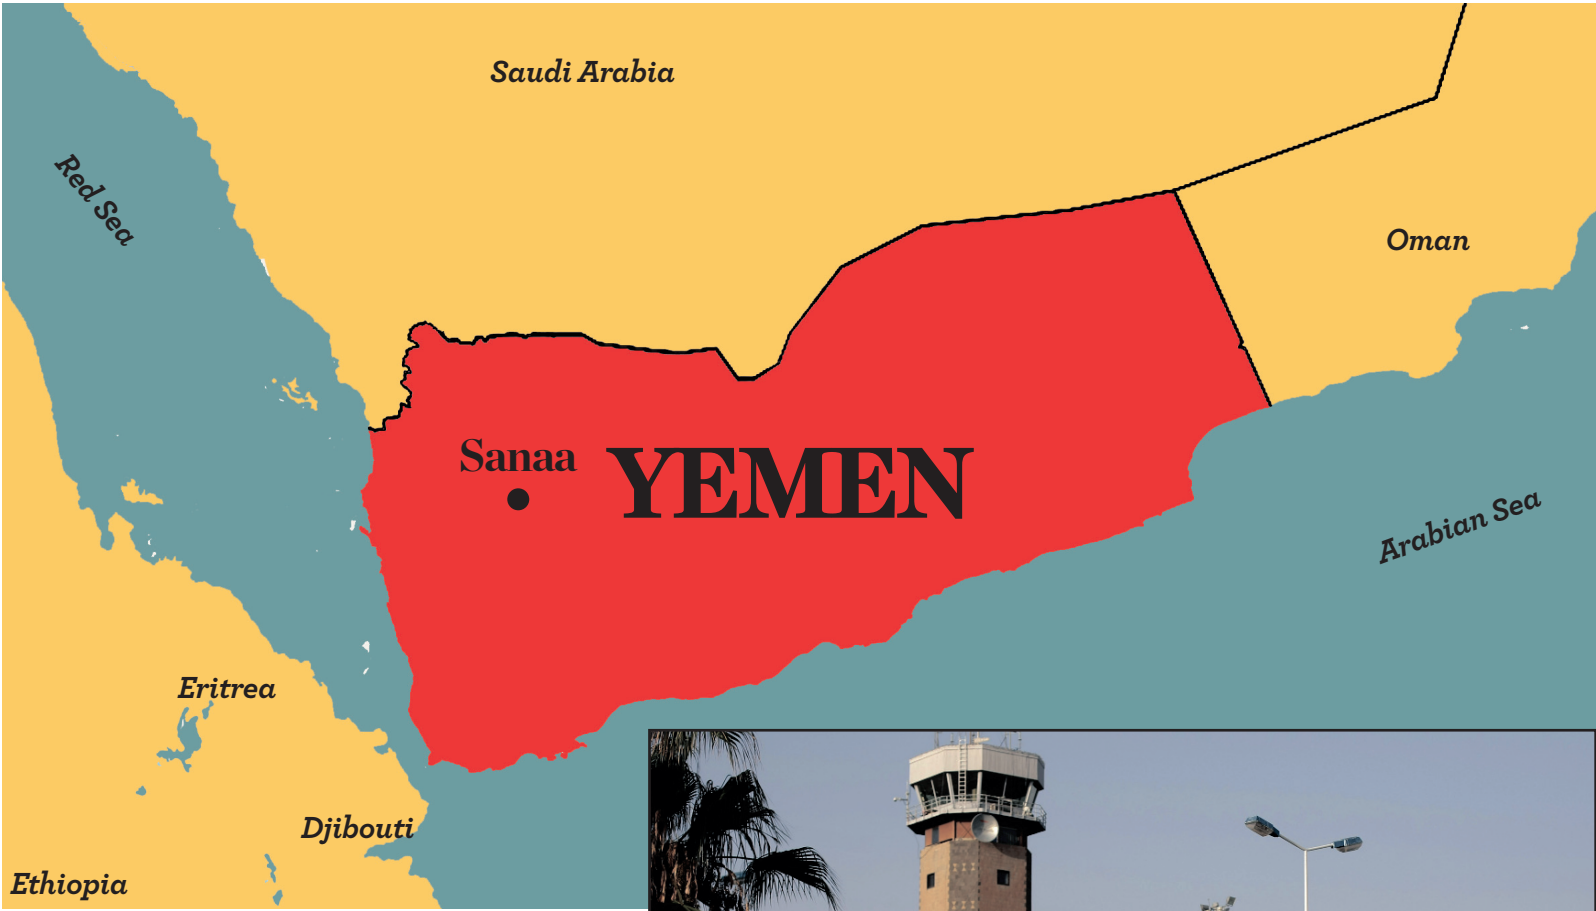

Military and intelligence officials in Yemen said Wednesday they uncovered an al-Qaida plot to fire missiles at foreign embassies in the capital and to attack naval forces guarding international shipping in the Red Sea.

Details of the plot, which was reminiscent of the suicide attack on the USS Cole in 2000 that killed 17 American sailors, emerged as Yemen remains in a heightened state of alert that has seen the U.S. and British embassies evacuated and a new suspected U.S. drone strike that killed seven alleged militants from the terrorist group.

The discovery of the al-Qaida plot prompted the Defense Ministry to step up security around the strategic Bab el-Mandeb waterway, which connects the Red Sea with the Gulf of Aden. Officials banning speedboats or fishing vessels from the area, and military forces have been ordered to shoot to kill anybody who arouses suspicion or refuses to identify themselves.

Defense Minister Mohammed Nasser Ahmed visited the area Sunday and urged the forces, known as Battalion 117, to stay on high alert for possible suicide attacks, according to officials who spoke to The Associated Press on condition of anonymity because they were not authorized to talk to the media.

An estimated 3.5 million barrels of oil passed daily in 2010 through the Bab el-Mandeb strait, increasing the strategic importance of impoverished Yemen, which itself has only a relatively small production of oil and natural gas. Revenue from oil and gas production is declining, worsening Yemen's ability to provide social services.

The militants from the terrorist group's Yemeni branch — known as al-Qaida in the Arabian Peninsula — also were said to be plotting to use long-range missiles to target embassies and diplomats' residences, or try to take foreigners as hostages, the officials said.

Suspected US Drone Kills 7 Militants in Southern Yemen

A suspected U.S. drone strike killed seven alleged al-Qaida militants Wednesday in southern Yemen, security officials and residents said, as the Arab nation remained on high alert following threats of a terror attack targeting Western of government interests.

It was the fifth strike in less than two weeks in Yemen, which has emerged as the focus of fears of an attack that has led the United States to temporarily shut down 19 diplomatic posts in the Middle East and Africa, and to evacuate staff from the embassy in the Yemeni capital of Sanaa.

The U.S. has dramatically stepped up its use of drone strikes in Yemen in its covert fight against al-Qaida's branch there, which is considered one of the most active of the terror network.

Washington also has been backing a Yemeni military campaign to uproot al-Qaida militants and their radical allies who had taken over a string of southern cities and towns.

The militants have largely been driven into the mountains and countryside, and Yemeni intelligence officials say the current threat may be retaliation for that offensive.

As Al-Qaida Grows, Leaders Remain a Global Threat

Far from being on the brink of collapse, al-Qaida's core leadership remains a potent threat — and one that experts say has encouraged the terror network's spread into more countries today than it was operating in immediately after 9/11.

Nineteen U.S. diplomatic outposts stretching across the Eastern Hemisphere remain closed, and nonessential personnel have been evacuated from the U.S. Embassy in Yemen after intelligence officials said they had intercepted a recent message about plans for a major al-Qaida terror attack.

The new communique came from bin Laden's replacement, Ayman al-Zawahri, who as early as December 2001 announced plans to decentralize the network and scatter its affiliates across the globe as a way of ensuring its survival. Now, major al-Qaida hubs are thriving along the Iraqi-Syrian border, in North Africa and, in the most serious risk to the U.S., in Yemen.

The regional hubs may not take direct orders from al-Zawahri, and terror experts say they rarely coordinate operations with each other or share funding and fighters. But they have promoted al-Qaida's mission far beyond what its reach was a dozen years ago and, in turn, created an enduring legacy for its core leaders.

Inferno Roars through E. Africa's Largest Airport

NAIROBI, Kenya (AP) • A small fire at Kenya's main airport swelled into a roaring inferno Wednesday that destroyed part of East Africa's largest aviation hub and hampered air travel across the continent.

Firefighters were desperately short of equipment in an area where the county government apparently lacks a single working fire engine. Crews needed hours to get the flames under control and at one point resorted to a line of officers passing water buckets.

The early morning blaze gutted the arrival hall, forcing authorities to close the entire airport and airlines to cancel dozens of flights. The flames also charred airport banks and foreign exchange bureaus.

No serious injuries were reported.

The fire broke out on the 15th anniversary of the bombings by al-Qaida of the U.S. embassies in Nairobi and Dar es Salaam, in neighboring Tanzania. No terror connection to the fire was immediately evident.

Dale L. Baker

Sept. 29, 1948-Aug. 5, 2013

CHUBBUCK • Dale Lindsay Baker, born Sept. 29, 1948, in Roy, Utah, passed away Monday, Aug. 5, 2013, in American Falls, Idaho, at the age of 64, as a result of a farming accident.

Dale was the first child born to William Evan and Phyllis Jordan Baker. He grew up in a happy family and loved to learn at his father's hand. He loved helping with the sheep, the farming and the horses (the milking and feeding maybe not so much). He was a farm boy through and through. Wherever he went, he was always checking out the crops and, if in a new area, was immensely curious to know all the details of that area's farming culture.

Dale attended schools in Burley where he and his family moved when he was a tiny boy. We have called other places home, but Burley still holds our heart strings. Dale graduated from Burley High School in 1966 and graduated from Brigham Young University with a bachelor's degree and from Utah State University with a master's degree, both in agricultural economics.

He served in the Canada Alberta Mission from 1968 to 1970 and treasured that experience.

In 1970, Dale married Terry Ann Elzinga in the Idaho Falls Idaho LDS Temple. To this union were born six children, Janette (Paul) Pratt of Cooper City, Fla., Laura (Sid) Anderson of Boise, Idaho, Stacey Andrade of Pembroke Pines, Fla., Dale Gregory Baker of Seattle, Wash., Jason William (Haley) Baker of Murray, Utah, and Lindsey Baker of Bountiful, Utah.

Terry preceded him in death in 1994. Dale faithfully cared for Terry during her battle with cancer and did his best to keep the family together.

In 1996, Dale married DeAnn Larsen in the Logan Utah LDS Temple. DeAnn brought six children to this union, Brad Allen (Katrina) Bell of Rupert, Idaho, Scot William (Stacie) Bell of Heyburn, Idaho, Todd Bell of Hazleton, Idaho, Shanna (Nick) Kraus of Rupert, Idaho, Lana Hanks of Burley, Idaho, and Brandi (Barrett) Burbidge of Olympia, Wash.

Dale served his community wherever he lived and loved to help others. He was compassionate in his views and dedicated in his service. He was an active member of the LDS Church and has served in various capacities, including teacher, clerk, bishop and, at the time of his death, was serving as a high counselor in the Pocatello Tyhee Stake and as an ordinance worker in the Idaho Falls Temple. He loved the Lord and served faithfully to the end.

Dale leaves behind 12 children; 28 grandchildren; and his wife, DeAnn. Family was everything to Dale. He loved all 12 of our children and all of the grandchildren. There wasn't a better grandpa than Grandpa Baker. He will be watching over all of us! Dale also leaves behind his siblings, Gary (Donna) Baker of Syracuse, Utah, Brent Baker of Eugene, Ore., RoLane (Bob) Poulton of Murtaugh, Idaho, and Stan (Sandy) Baker and Julie Baker, all of Burley, Idaho. In addition to his first wife, Terry; he was preceded in death by his parents, Bill and Phyllis Baker.

The funeral will be held at 11 a.m. Saturday, Aug. 10, at the Burley LDS West Stake Center, 2420 Parke Ave. in Burley, with Bishop Steve Nielsen officiating. Burial will follow at the View Cemetery.

Friends may call from 6-8 p.m. Friday, Aug. 9, at the Rasmussen Funeral Home, 1350 E. 16th St. in Burley, and from 9:30-10:30 a.m. Saturday at the church.

Hagerman Turns Out to Honor Life of 'Butch' Maag

BY TETONA DUNLAP
tdunlap@magicvalley.com

HAGERMAN • There are some people who leave such a lasting impression it's hard to forget them.

Quentin "Butch" Maag, 75, was one of those people for many in the town of Hagerman.

Maag died Aug. 1 at his Hagerman home. His funeral was held Aug. 7 with more than 500 people attending.

People who knew him said if you wanted to hear a kind word said about Maag, just open the phone book and pick any name in Hagerman. Chances are the person on the other end knew him and had a story to share.

"He was a fine man," said Tim Peterson, fire chief of the Hagerman Fire Department and Maag's neighbor.

Peterson was 10 years old when he first met Maag.

"You never missed trick-or-treating at Lorena and Butch's house. They gave away soda pop," Peterson said.

And while Peterson can't remember what costume he wore that year, he did recall Maag sitting in his living room with a mountain of Shasta pop cans waiting to be given out to trick-or-treaters. Peterson said generations of children in Hagerman have trick-or-treated the Maag home just for those cans of soda.

"Everybody loved Butch," Peterson said.

Maag was born on Jan. 13, 1938, in Stanley. He was the third of seven children born to Dan and Violet Maag. He attended all 12 years of school in Challis, graduating in 1956.

According to his obituary, on Nov. 19, 1962, Maag married his wife of 50 years, Lorena. They had two children, Dan and Mona.

The Maag family came to Hagerman in September 1967 after he accepted a transfer with the Idaho Transportation Department. He retired in November 1996. Pat Taylor of Hagerman knew Maag for 45 years.

Taylor recalled being a high schooler going around town collecting signatures to start a ski club at Hagerman High School. When he knocked on Maag's door, Taylor said Maag told him, "Well, Pat, give me a paper."

And Maag went around town helping him gather more signatures.

The ski club never materialized, but Taylor didn't forget the day Maag took the time out of his day to help him.

Taylor said he was the type of man where it didn't matter if you were the most important person in town or the least, he treated everybody the same.

"He didn't look down on anybody. He was involved with the community 1,000 percent."

So Taylor was not surprised when the streets of Hagerman were lined with cars Wednesday as friends and family said goodbye to a "pillar of the community."

"I've never seen the streets filled up with this many cars unless there is a parade," Taylor said.

Bill Jones of Hagerman met Maag in the '70s. Jones was friends with Maag's sisters, but also found himself becoming friends with Maag.

"I'd go by and visit him and take fruits and vegetables," Jones said. "He's a very good person, very likeable."

In addition to being an active member of three Masonic Lodges in Hagerman, Challis and Richfield, Maag was also a very active member of the "Temple of Truth," a group of men that gather at the local coffee shop to talk politics and life inside the Hagerman Chevron station.

Sigrid Veenendaal's husband, Jerry, is also a member of the "Temple of Truth." When she went by the Chevron station Wednesday looking for Jerry, she said the men were gathered to drink coffee and pay homage to "the president of the Temple of Truth" who will be remembered as one of the most honest people they knew.

Quale's Electronics Named Idaho Small Business of the Month

BY JOE CADOTTE
jcadotte@magicvalley.com

TWIN FALLS • U.S. Sen. Jim Risch paid a visit to Quale's Electronics yesterday to personally honor them as Idaho Small Business of the Month. Since Risch became the ranking member of the Senate Small Business Committee in January, he has been giving recognition to local businesses throughout Idaho by presenting them with a certificate.

The certificate reads: "...family owned small businesses are a crucial part of America's landscape. They supply a demand in locations all across the United States, and are built on the sweat and dedication of their owners and employees. It is for this reason that today I rise to honor Quale's Electronics, its founder Mel Quale, and all those who now manage and work for this long-standing family business."

The award came as a surprise to store manager Bruce Quale. "We've been lucky to get the recognition," Bruce Quale said. "We're very happy and proud he selected us. It is definitely an honor. Out of all the small businesses, he picked us."

In 1966, Quale's opened as a TV repair shop in downtown Twin Falls. It moved to Kimberly Road in 1977 where it has thrived ever since.

"We've been lucky," Bruce Quale said. "We've had a good customer base and I think our customer service and helping people understand the new technology has been a plus for us. That has kept us able to stay in business."

A smile stretched across Mel Quale's face as Risch handed him the award.

"I'm so honored to recognize your business and your family," Risch said.

Although his business survived multiple recessions, changes in TV technology and the expansion of big box stores, Mel Quale is humble about the recognition.

"I don't feel that I deserve it. We just do our business. We don't do it for glory," Mel Quale said. "We have customers that are friends. They start out as customers and they become friends over the years. They have children and grandchildren; we've been able to survive long enough so that it's become a family thing with our customers kind of an extended family. It's kind of amazing."

The award is given partially on a business's history and success, Risch said.

"They've been through good times and bad times and have maintained success. The reputation of the people, the quality and character of the people running the business are all things that are factored into it," he said.

OPINION

“Delays in apprehending the suspected Benghazi killers will only put Americans lives at further and needless risk.”

Rep. Darrell Issa, R-Calif., the chairman of the House of Oversight and Government Reform Committee, in a statement urging the administration to do more than file charges after the Justice Department filed the first criminal charges in the deadly attack on the U.S. diplomatic mission in Benghazi, Libya.

Sec. John Kerry: Daring to Fail

Secretary of State John Kerry has pulled off a major achievement in getting Israelis and Palestinians to say yes to the United States. Can he now get them to say yes to each other?

I admire Kerry's doggedness in getting Israelis and Palestinians back to the negotiating table for the first time in five years, in part by making clear that whoever said no to America's urging that they resume talks would be called out publicly. I also like the fact that Kerry dared to fail. It is how you make history as a secretary of state. It can also be helpful to him going forward. Even a little success like this breeds more authority, and more authority can breed more success in other arenas. That said, the prospects for an Israeli-Palestinian deal remain slim. Indeed, if these negotiations were a play, it would be called: "When the Necessary Met the Impossible."

So why should we even bother? I've always thought that the most important rule of journalism is: Never try to be smarter than the story. There is every reason to doubt that these talks will succeed, but when you look under the hood of this story you find there were some powerful forces propelling both sides to say yes to Kerry - and at least consider saying yes to each other, so it's worth letting this play out a little.

Let's start with a small item in Britain's Independent newspaper on July 24, which began: "He once sang, 'You Gotta Get Outta This Place,' but now Eric Burdon is not even turning up at all having deciding to withdraw from a planned concert in Israel. ... The Animals frontman, whose hits include 'House of the Rising Sun,' and 'San Franciscan Nights,' had been due to perform alongside local Israeli bands in Binyamina. ... However, in a statement, Mr. Burdon's management, said: 'We've been receiving mounting pressure, including numerous threatening emails, daily. ...' Burdon was just the latest of a rising number of artists and intellectuals who have started boycotting Israel over the occupation issue."

Israel's continued occupation of the West Bank is isolating the Jewish state more and more. Just before Prime Minister Bibi Netanyahu agreed to these negotiations, the European Union announced new guidelines banning EU financing or cooperating with any Israeli institutions in territory seized during the 1967 war. This involves research grants, scholarships and cultural exchanges.

The EU is considering requiring any products made in West Bank settlements to be labeled as such (some individual EU states already do) to make them easier to for Europeans to boycott. These are dangerous trends for Israel.

The EU is one of Israel's largest trading partners. And now add the fact that Palestine has been granted U.N. status as a "nonmember observer state," so President Mahmoud Abbas is positioned to ask the International Criminal Court to investigate Israel's settlement activities in the West Bank, which are widely viewed as contravening international law.

Meanwhile, Abbas was looking at a situation where the turmoil in the Arab world was both sidelining the Palestinian issue and weakening his archrival Hamas, which had been supported by the Syrian regime and Egypt's Muslim Brotherhood. If Abbas - who foolishly did not take advantage of former Israeli Prime Minister Ehud Olmert's offer of a two-state deal in 2008 - did not take advantage of this renewed U.S. effort, it is not clear when the next bus would come again for him, if at all.

If all of that explains why both sides felt these talks were necessary, what makes them feel impossible is the sheer accretion of obstacles. There are some 350,000 Jewish settlers in the West Bank and at least 50,000 to 80,000 would have to be moved, even after land swaps. There are tens of thousands of Palestinian refugees living outside the West Bank and Gaza who will have to be persuaded that they can return to those two places but never again to their original homes in pre-1967 Israel. Hamas will try to use any Abbas concessions to undermine him, while rightists in Israel will go ballistic over any Israeli givebacks in Jerusalem, while Palestinians will denounce any leader who does not restore a Palestinian foothold there.

And have no doubt: Just trying to make peace will have consequences the minute both sides reveal their maps. One should never forget just how crazy some of Israel's Jewish settlers are. They assassinated Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin when he tried to cede part of the West Bank for peace. Nor should one underestimate the capacity of Palestinian hard-liners to generate suicidal violence when left only with despair or a sense that their leadership is selling them out.

But doing nothing also promised disaster - permanent Israeli control of the West Bank - and I think the center in both communities has come to see that. I repeat: They did not come to the table by accident or just to please us. But saying yes to each other will require a new kind of leadership from Abbas and Netanyahu. They will have to help each other face down their respective internal opponents rather than use each other as an excuse for not doing so. How and whether they do that is the drama that you're about to see play out. Pull up a chair.

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

Congress Should Bring Back DDT, Stop Listening to Lies

The ban on the insecticide DDT in 1972 by Environmental Protection Agency administrator William Ruckelshaus, despite being ruled safe by EPA judge Edmund Sweeney, has cost millions of lives due to malaria and other insect transmitted diseases like West Nile virus. The ban also is causing the death of millions of acres of pine and hardwood trees due to insects previously controlled by DDT.

The Environmental Defense Fund and its allies had pushed to have DDT banned. The book, "Silent Spring," with half-truths and lies, was used to place DDT under investigation. J. Gordon Edwards, Ph.D., entomologist, defended the safety of DDT in his publication, "DDT, A Case Study in Scientific Fraud."

There are three major lies still being repeated about DDT. These are: DDT did not kill birds or cause egg shell thinning. The initial test was conducted without necessary calcium to produce normal shells. This was published in Science Journal. A second test with calcium showed no difference, but science editor Philip Abelson refused to publish the truth.

DDT is not toxic to humans and is not a human carcinogen. It is far safer than many replacement insecticides. DDT does not persist in the environment and does not accumulate and concentrate in the food chain.

A documentary, "Three Billion and Counting" by Dr. Rutledge Taylor is named for the number of malaria victims worldwide throughout history and exposes four decades of genocide due to the DDT ban. Original EPA hearing transcripts (9,312 Pages) reveal that DDT is safe and effective.

Visit the website, www.3billionandcounting.com. Dr. Art Robinson said, "The number of children slaughtered by the ban of DDT is greater than any other genocide in world history!"

Congress must pass a bill to bring back DDT to not only fight malaria but also West Nile virus and tree-killing insects to save our forests and reduce destructive fires.

Did Chris Carlson Cross the Line?

It appears that your columnist turns out to be the one who crossed a line, and not First District Congressman Raul Labrador. In Tuesday's column in the Times-News, I admittedly speculated, based on acknowledged circumstantial evidence, that the First District Congressman, given his alleged ties to the Club For Growth, must have had a hand in the Club finding and supporting Idaho Falls attorney Bryan Smith's primary challenge to Labrador's colleague, Second District congressman Mike Simpson.

Acknowledging that I was speculating, I sent the Congressman two direct questions seeking his response and asked to hear from him before my column deadline at noon on Monday of the following week. In this age of instant communication anywhere in the world, the Congressman or his press secretary, Todd Winer, could have easily responded by then, but did not.

Whether they cynically waited to see what I would write absent their response I cannot say. All I can say is they issued an emphatic denial of any involvement in any way, shape or form some 24 hours after the deadline and after the column was published.

Despite the accompanying personal attack on my integrity from Labrador (published below), and the lecture on journalistic principles, I want to offer the Congressman a full apology. He's right. Absent some corroborating sources it was wrong of me to speculate on so important a subject and it was and is unfair to him.

Regardless of our political differences, I do believe Raul Labrador is a person of integrity and honesty. I take him at his word. What follows is his complete statement to me. I'll leave it to the reader to decide whether I have dishonored my long-time association with former Governor Cecil D. Andrus.

Again, I apologize for my mistake to the First District congressman.

Mea culpa, mea culpa.

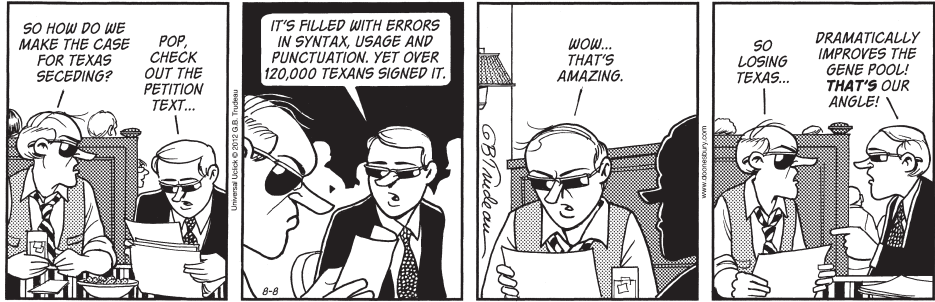

Chris:
The line in your first column that "Labrador is responsible for recruiting the Club for Growth to underwrite ... Bryan Smith's primary challenge" is inaccurate. I did not recruit Bryan Smith for the Club for Growth. Other than your two columns, there are no other stories in print or on any blog making that claim. You even admit that you have found no other column making said claim. It would be the responsible thing for you to stop spreading this lie.
To say that in this business "silence is tantamount to assent" is one of the most irresponsible statements I have seen in print. In the business of journalism, which you clearly do not engage in, the rule is that at least two sources have to corroborate your story. That means two sources that have actual knowledge of an event not mere speculation about an event.

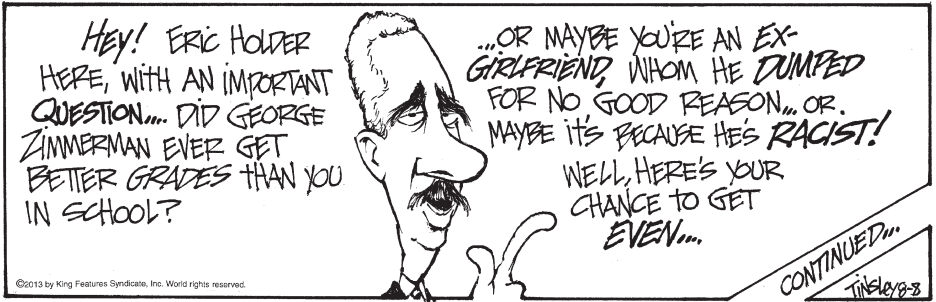

To be clear, I did not recruit Bryan Smith. The Club for Growth picked Mike Simpson as a top target without my knowledge, and picked Bryan Smith as a challenger without my help. In fact, even though Bryan Smith seems to be a fine person and a good candidate, I don't know him well enough to recruit him for a political position in Idaho.

You are an embarrassment to the legacy of your mentor Cecil Andrus. Even though Governor Andrus and I do not share a political philosophy, we share a desire to serve the people of Idaho with dignity and respect. Every time you write a column speculating about a person without corroborating the facts, you show a lack of journalistic integrity and ethics. If you are merely striving to be a gossip columnist, you have definitely succeeded. I would expect more from somebody who worked for Cecil Andrus.

Jerome Council Passes Tentative Budget

BY KIMBERLEE KRUESI
kkruesi@magicvalley.com

JEROME • Jerome city residents will see an increase in water and irrigation rates next year under a tentative budget approved by the Jerome City Council.

Jerome council members approved the tentative $21.57 million budget for fiscal year 2014 during their Wednesday meeting. The city will make a final vote on the budget Sept. 3.

Unlike last year, the proposed budget does not include a wastewater bond the city is trying to pass through judicial confirmation.

Last year's 2013 budget was set at $60.65 million, which included a $48 million wastewater bond under the assumption that it would be approved by voters. In May, however, voters voted down the bond.

City officials are now trying to secure $35.8 million through judicial confirmation, which would bypass voter approval.

Yet, because of the bond's unknown future, city officials haven't released how much the city's sewer rates will increase. The city council is scheduled to discuss possible rate changes Aug. 20, said Kathy Cone, assistant finance director.

So far, proposed rate increases include a 3 percent property tax rate and a 10 percent irrigation rate increase.

For water, the new proposed water rate would cost $1.52 per 100 cubic feet per second of water used, up from the current rate of $1.48 per 100 cfs. The base fee would also cost more under the new budget with the capital reserve fee increasing to $7.10 from $6.83. The debt service and operating reserve fees will not go up.

For a family of four using 800 cfs per month, it would cost $29.76 per month in 2014. The total is currently $29.17.

While the council adopted the tentative budget, members are still disagreeing over certain line items.

During Tuesday's meeting, three council members voiced concerns that the budget included a $40,000 to Jerome 20/20, a collaboration between local government and private industry to promote economic development in the Jerome area.

The newly formed group was supposed to collect $40,000 from the city, the county and from local businesses. While the city and county paid up, businesses only brought in half of what was promised.

Councilman Chris Barber said he was concerned that the city wasn't getting the return they were promised.

"We're working with a tight budget, $40,000 is a lot of money," he said. "I know these things take time but they haven't performed."

The council will hold a public hearing for people to voice their thoughts on the city budget on Aug. 26. The meeting will be held at 5:30 p.m. at the city council chambers, 100 East Ave. A, Jerome.

In the culinary lab, employees can look at how the cheese's flavors carry over to a food product. There they can shred, slice, perform melt tests and use deep fryers, induction burners or a gas range — "everything we need to make any kind of conventional cheese product," said staffer Colin Cassard.

The innovation center is "where the fun starts," said Dave Perry, Glanbia director of cheese technology.

"Everybody needs to eat some cheese," he told the audience. "If you don't eat some cheese, you've missed the point. Then, from there, you need to every day keep eating some cheese. The more you eat, the more we'll make."

U.S. Sen. Jim Risch, R-Idaho, said Glanbia has been critical to growing the state's dairy industry. It's a "cornerstone" and one of the many reasons Idaho is a great place to live and work, he said.

"This new facility that Glanbia is building here represents Glanbia's belief, such as we all believe, in the future of Idaho, in the future of this community here in Twin Falls and a commitment to the future of the people of the great state of Idaho," he said.

The facility is the largest private investment made in the city's Old Towne to date, said Cindy Bond, chairwoman of the Urban Renewal Agency. The project is a "catalyst for change" and has drawn the interest of other firms to Old Towne and downtown.

"Downtown is the most vibrant it has been in decades, and we expect the vibrancy to continue," Bond said.

Twin Falls Mayor Greg Lanting agreed. Bringing new employees and business to an area "keeps the ball rolling" with new investment, he said after the opening ceremony.

"We're excited about downtown," he said. "Every city or downtown is the heart of the city. So if your heart is not doing well, your city is not doing as well as it could be."

Other options might be for the city to contract police services with Minidoka County or the city of Heyburn, he said.

The city's current contract, which expires Sept. 30, costs $1.4 million. The previous year's contract cost $1.35 million.

Burley had been given data showing that providing its services cost the county nearly $1.97 million, a commission news release said.

Amid continued state and federal funding cutbacks, if the county absorbed the extra Burley costs as well, it would be an "unfair burden and hardship" to Cassia County taxpayers, the release said. "It is with regret that the city could not accept the county's offer"

Hansen questioned why the county wouldn't let the city pursue other options for the contract.

"Maybe we could have less officers assigned to the city or (fewer) patrol cars," said Hansen.

Crane said a provision in this year's contract states that one county commissioner, Christensen, and one city council member, Randy Hawkins, would meet to negotiate the next year's contract.

"They met diligently and at the request of Mr. Hawkins, we furnished information about the costs of doing business," said Crane.

Said Councilman John Craner, "I don't know where we'll go from here. We will have to review our position. We need to see what our options are."

Council President Casey Andersen did not return calls from the Times-News Wednesday.

The Burley plant produces tater tots, hash browns, French fries, battered fries and Southern-style hash browns. The plant will continue production during the expansion.

The new line will make potato products for the foodservice industry and restaurant chains.

"In addition to hiring more employees, we plan to buy potatoes locally for the new third production line, which means more business for our local community," said plant manager Jeff McCray in a statement.

McCain chose Burley for the expansion because "Burley has a tremendously strong potato grower community," Sharifi said.

The new production facility in Burley is the only expansion McCain USA is planning, Sharifi said.

"McCain Foods is a great corporate citizen that appreciates the value of a talented, committed work force and the kind of responsive, business-friendly state and local government we have in Idaho," said Gov. C.L. "Butch" Otter in a statement. "We look forward to McCain's continuing growth in Burley, and to a long and successful relationship in the community."

McCain Foods, based in Lisle, Ill., supplies frozen potato and snack food products for the foodservice markets. They also supply retail grocery chains with both McCain and private-label potato products.

The Burley plant was built in the 1960s.

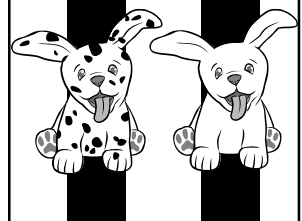

"We've really enjoyed a really long and successful relationship in the community and we look forward to enjoying more of that," Sharifi said.

LYNDE, CREATOR OF 'RICK O'SHAY' COMIC STRIP, DIES

HELENA, Mont. (AP) • Western cartoonist and author Stan Lynde, creator of the nationally syndicated "Rick O'Shay" comic strip, has died of cancer in Montana. He was 81.

His "Rick O'Shay" comic strip began in 1958 and ran for 20 years with an average daily readership of about 15 million people. In 1979, he launched another comic strip, "Latigo," which ran through 1983. Lynde died Tuesday in Helena, where he lived with his wife.

Myron Stanford "Stan" Lynde was born in Billings in 1931 and was raised on a cattle and sheep ranch on Montana's Crow Indian Reservation. His mother gave him crayons and paper and taught him to draw to keep her young son occupied, said Lynde's sister, Lorretta.

"Cowboys were my heroes," Stan Lynde told the Independent Record in December 2012. "I followed them around and they played with me."

Boise State players “take a knee” during fall camp in Boise on Wednesday.

NICK RULAND • TIMES-NEWS

Boldewijn Hopes to Make Up for Lost Time

BY NICK RULAND
 nruland@magicvalley.com

BOISE • How many of the 220 pounds on Ger-aldo Boldewijn’s 6-foot-4 frame have been earned through five years in Boise State foot-ball’s weight program?

It’s a scientific query.

But there’s some empirical evidence that suggests its considerable.

Take a repetition in Wednesday morning’s practice. He easily shed the hands of the defensive back assigned to guard him, givinag him the space to release off the line of scrimmage, and he finished running a route his defender should have been well positioned to cover.

The ball found him late, allowing a safety and linebacker to converge.

No matter. Boldewijn reached well above any of the orange colored jerseys, and when he brought the ball down, a barrage of forces tried unsuccessfully to separate him from its posses-sion.

On a single play, Boldewijn displayed his physicals gifts — height, leaping ability, burst of speed in a short space, large hands — with the wares of his five years of work in the pro-gram: size and strength.

Impressing in a non-game situation is nothing new for the Capital High grad, who came over from Amsterdam and still has an accent.

At this point in his Broncos career, Boldewi-jn is as much of a tease as he was as underclass-man, where many thought he was destined for stardom.

On Tuesday, the fifth-year player was talked about as still unproven.

“I will say this, (Boldewijn and wide receiver Aaron Burks) are what you want them to look like,” Boise State head coach Chris Petersen said. “Now we need to get them to play how we want them to look like. I think they are getting there. Last year they did a good job of taking a step and it doesn’t happen overnight.”

But it doesn’t normally take five years, either. Boldewijn senses fleeting time.

“I started realizing it’s getting scary,” Boldewijn said. “(The seniors) had our last summer workout, ran our last upper deck. This is going to be my last fall camp.”

NICK RULAND • TIMES-NEWS

Boise State receiver Geraldo Boldewijn leaves the field during Day 3 of fall camp Wednesday in Boise.

There’s been an added urgency to Boldewi-jn’s game so far in fall that, as implied by his head coach, maybe hadn’t always been there in the past.

Tuesday afternoon, he streaked by his man down the sideline. He was wide open, but the ball was thrown to the other side of the field. He yelled in frustration, but quickly regrouped for the next play.

“I’m just trying to go out with a bang,” Boldewijn said. “What does going out with a bang mean to me? It’s just that feeling you get at the end of the season that we did it and gave it our all. It is like every play there is probably some-thing you can do better. It’s about how much effort and energy you give.”

Boldewijn has not surpassed the 20-recep-tion mark in a season yet. He surely would have last year had he been able to avoid a four-game NCAA suspension for receiving extra benefits.

“What’s great about Geraldo is that we are going to have him for the whole season instead of being suspended the first four games,” sec-ond year offensive coordinator and receivers coach Robert Prince said.

Boldewijn, like the rest of the Broncos of-fense, also has some momentum and renewed confidence heading into the opener against Washington.

Boldewijn caught five balls for 59 yards against the Huskies in the Las Vegas Bowl.

“For him to end the way he did last year, he had the best game of his career,” Prince said.

Multiple players, including receiver Matt Miller, have talked during camp about Boldewijn being primed for a breakout. Add his coach to that list after Tuesday.

“I think the stage is set for (Boldewijn and Burks) to take the next step,” Petersen said. “It will take the passing game to a new level.”

Boldewijn said he has some big numbers in the “back of his” he thinks he can reach this year, but that’s not the primary way he views success.

“I’m pretty sure we have a bunch of receivers who can have big numbers,” Boldewijn said. “But when, say, Kirby (Moore) and Matt make a catch, I kind of feel like that is part of my suc-cess, too. When we are all running our routes, coming off the ball hard, making big blocks, that is all part of our stats.”

Practice notes: Redshirt freshman quarter-back Nick Patti was nearly flawless in the team portion of newcomers practice Wednesday, completing all but a couple of passes. He was also pinpoint in seven-on-seven drills after struggling the first two days. He routinely de-livered strikes on sideline patterns beyond 10 yards.

Easy to Find Autographs of College Stars for Sale

ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK • A simple search on eBay reveals Heisman Trophy winner Johnny Manziel is far from the only college football player whose autograph is for sale.

Pick a star and you can find memorabilia with a supposedly verified signature. South Carolina's Jadeveon Clowney. Ohio State's Braxton Miller. Oregon's De'Anthony Thomas. Louisville's Teddy Bridgewater. Alabama's AJ McCarron. The list goes on and on.

The difference is ESPN has reported the NCAA is investigating whether Manziel, the Texas A&M quarterback, got paid to sign autographs, which would violate amateurism rules. That has led to other schools being asked questions about whether their players earned money for signatures.

If the allegations against Manziel, made by unidentified sources to ESPN, are proved true by the NCAA, his eligibility for the coming season could be in doubt as well as his status as a Heisman winner. ESPN reported that a top autograph authenticator had authenticated nearly 1,000 Manziel autographs.

Brandon Steiner of Steiner Sports, which is the official collectible and memorabilia company of the NBA, the New York Yankees and Notre Dame, among others, said his company does not do business with college athletes.

He said Manziel would likely be able to sign a contract with a collectibles company of at least

In this Dec. 8, 2012, file photo, Texas A&M quarterback Johnny Manziel poses with the Heisman Trophy in New York, after becoming the first freshman to win the award.

$100,000 after he went pro. "I know there is a vibrant Heisman Trophy collectible audience out there," he said. A market flooded with Manziel autographs could cost him money later, Steiner said. "It creates market confusion and takes a lot away from the category," Steiner said Wednesday. Other college athletes might want to take note. Two sports websites — bustedcoverage.com and goodbull-hunting.com — found what appeared to be dozens of authenticated items signed by Clowney online, and that led to questions for South Carolina officials. Associate athletic director Chris Rogers said Wednesday the school's compliance office has looked into the Clowney autographs on eBay and found no violations had occurred. "The websites that we've looked at and the pictures and autographs and items that we've found over the last academic year, we've not had any issues to suggest that anything impermissible had occurred," Rogers said. Ohio State athletic director Gene Smith said school officials have determined Miller had not profited from the numerous items found online with his signature. Smith said the quarterback signed many autographs at a Big Ten preseason kickoff luncheon. Presumably fans or memorabilia brokers then went and sold items they got autographed for free. "We've already looked at it," Smith said. "There's no issue there." Louisville came to a similar conclusion. "We are aware of many of the items for sale online that have been autographed by several of our student-athletes with remaining eligibility. As we are required to do by NCAA rules, we regularly review these items and send correspondence to the seller(s) requesting they remove the item for sale," the school said in a statement. "We have and continue to educate our student-athletes that it is not permissible to accept any type of compensation for their autograph or the sale of memorabilia. We have spoken with Teddy Bridgewater and we are comfortable that no violation has occurred." Clowney, Bridgewater and Miller enter the season as prime contenders for the Heisman. Manziel became the first freshman to win it last season. It's unclear if an NCAA violation would cause the Heisman trust to reconsider Manziel's victory. Heisman Trust's rules state: "The recipient must be in compliance with the bylaws defining an NCAA Student-Athlete." "The Heisman Trust never comments on speculation," Heisman spokesman Tim Henning said Wednesday. Reggie Bush's 2005 Heisman Trophy was later vacated after the NCAA found he had received improper benefits during his winning season.

Minor League Team Fakes Rejected Marriage Proposal

A minor league baseball team acknowledged Wednesday that it staged a rejected marriage proposal during a recent game as a publicity stunt. The Double-A New Britain Rock Cats, an affiliate of the Minnesota Twins, issued a statement saying the club had two employees pretend to be a couple taking part in a between-innings trivia contest Friday.

The third question in the contest was a surprise marriage proposal to which the woman on the field replies, "I'm sorry, I can't, I'm sorry" and then flees. The man then also runs off the field and into the Rock Cats dugout.

A video of the stunt has been viewed more than 600,000 times on YouTube and was the subject of several news stories, some of which questioned its authenticity.

The club confirmed the hoax in a news release. "After watching a public proposal, we talked about what would happen if the answer were 'no,' and how that might affect a crowd and those viewing it after on video," said Mike Abramson, the team's vice president of marketing. "We worked with two of our staff on the skit and executed a digital strategy to set the video on a viral path; we could not be more pleased with the outcome."

Abramson issued an apology to anyone who might have been offended. "This endeavor was intended to entertain and remind fans you never know what you're going to see at a Rock Cats game," he said.

Union Appeals A-Rod's Ban

The Major League Baseball Players Association formally appealed Alex Rodriguez's 211-game suspension on Wednesday.

The New York Yankees slugger was suspended through the 2014 season on Monday when the league penalized 13 players following an investigation into Biogenesis of America, a shuttled Florida anti-aging clinic accused of distributing banned performance-enhancing drugs.

The other 12 players accepted 50-game suspensions, but Rodriguez said he planned to fight. Union head Michael Weiner said the punishment for the third baseman was "way out of line."

Rodriguez is allowed to keep playing until the grievance is heard by arbitrator Fredric Horowitz, who isn't expected to rule until November or December at the earliest.

Oden Finalizes Heat Contract

Greg Oden has taken his physical, done a bit of house hunting in South Florida and signed on the dotted line.

Nearly four years after he last played, he's officially back in the NBA.

The former No. 1 overall pick signed his contract with the two-time defending NBA champion Miami Heat on Wednesday, the last in a series of formalities that needed to be completed before the team could finally announce the move. Oden announced late last week that he was accepting Miami's offer, one that will pay him about $1 million this coming year and includes a $1.1 million player option for the 2014-15 season.

Oden's last NBA appearance was Dec. 5, 2009, for Portland against Houston. He went up to defend a layup attempt by the Rockets' Aaron Brooks, fracturing his left kneecap on the play and doing so without even making contact with anyone. Oden collapsed to the floor in obvious agony, was wheeled off the floor after a delay, taken for surgery and the Blazers quickly announced that his season was over.

Another microfracture surgery awaited him in November 2010, and a third one was needed early last year. The Blazers waived him in March 2012.

Stewart's Injury Shows Superman Could Get Hurt

ASSOCIATED PRESS

CHARLOTTE, N.C. • Aside from a minor arm injury in the 2006 Chili Bowl, and a banged up shoulder that required a relief driver in a NASCAR race later that same season, Tony Stewart has walked away unscathed from many harrowing wrecks.

It was something everyone around him had seemingly taken for granted until Monday night, when the three-time NASCAR champion broke his right leg in a sprint car race in Iowa.

"He's run so many of these races and flipped in those things, I think me and him and everybody around us didn't think Superman could get hurt; this is his day," Greg Zipadelli, his longtime crew chief and the current competition director at Stewart-Haas Racing, said Wednesday.

Zipadelli has never been the biggest fan of Stewart's extracurricular racing and was his crew chief both times Stewart ran the Indianapolis 500 and Coca-Cola 600 double on the same day. But he's understood Stewart's passion to drive anything at any time, and doesn't try to interfere.

And for 15 years, 521 races, 48 wins and three NASCAR championships, none of Stewart's extra activities interfered. But now the star of the organization is in an Iowa hospital, recovering from surgery to stabilize and clean a Grade 2 break to his tibia and fibula in his right leg, and awaiting a second surgery that will give the team a better indication of what his recovery time will be and what the organization will need to do for the coming weeks.

For now, all Zipadelli knows for sure is that road course ace Max Papis will drive the No. 14 Chevrolet this weekend at Watkins Glen, where Stewart is a five-time winner, and that they'll need to find another replacement driver for at least the next few weeks.

But what the future holds for the organization, for how much extra racing Stewart does in the future, all of that is for later conversations. Stewart was scheduled to race more than 100 times this year.

"We all know Tony loves to do those races. We know that that's his golf game, that's his hunting, his fishing, all the things that the rest of us do," Zipadelli said. "You know, there is a difference in the amount of responsibility we have and obligations to other people, and that's where I think that's kind of where it gets sticky.

"I think it makes him better at what he does here, but it obviously leaves the door open for a situation that we're in now. I think that as many races as he's run in the past, we're probably lucky that this is the first time we're dealing with this, to be perfectly honest with you. We'll do our best at Stewart-Haas to put pieces together and sit down and evaluate it. That doesn't mean anything other than we will talk about it, we'll discuss it and we'll try and do what's best for Stewart-Haas and our partners in the future."

Zipadelli and many SHR crew members were already in Atlanta on Monday night preparing for a Tuesday tire test at Atlanta Motor Speedway when they got word Stewart was injured. Stewart has always been diligent about texting Zipadelli after every single heat race or qualifying run to give him an update, the updates had become routine after all these years.

From there it became a scramble — cancel the test, get planes organized to get the team back to North Carolina and make contingency plans for Watkins Glen.

In the chaos, Zipadelli spoke by phone to a remorseful and uncomfortable Stewart.

"He was worried about what everybody thought and apologetic and feels like he's letting everybody down here," Zipadelli said. "At the end of the day, the reason we're all here is because of him, so I know he'll get back in it and make it up to us."

But like the older brother and mentor he's always been to Stewart, he didn't let him off so easy and didn't give him a chance to talk about getting back in a car.

"I told him to hurry up and get his butt down here because I was going to break his other leg, like some of my ancestors used to do, old school, and maybe beat him with it," Zipadelli joked.

Zipadelli's most serious task is pulling SHR together and keeping the focus on getting Ryan Newman in the Chase for the Sprint Cup championship.

It was just two weeks ago that Newman won at Indianapolis Motor Speedway to move into position to earn a wild-card berth into the 12-driver field, and Stewart left Pocono Raceway on Sunday ranked 11th in the standings holding the first wild-card position. It had SHR in position after a poor first-half of the season to get two of its three drivers in the Chase.

Now Stewart's chances are over, but Newman has a very real opportunity to get into the field.

"Obviously it's a huge let-down to everybody at Stewart-Haas, knowing that we were making some great strides," Zipadelli said. "I think we've had some drastic improvements in the performance on the race track. I felt like we were peaking at the right time with two race cars having an opportunity. It's a huge disappointment. But we'll try to do our best to take that disappointment and turn it into a positive push for (Newman)."

Fish and Game Proposes Waterfowl Season

JEROME • Idaho Department of Fish and Game is proposing 2013-14 waterfowl seasons of 105 days and a two-day youth hunt, along with some changes in goose seasons and limits. You can comment, by Aug. 16, in open houses or online.

Idaho sets waterfowl seasons by zones. The state has three duck and dark goose zones and four light goose zones. The proposal would separate Canada geese and white-fronted geese seasons, a Fish and Game press release said.

Idaho's waterfowl seasons must fit within guidelines set annually by the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service for all states in the Pacific Flyway. As it has since 1997, Fish and Wildlife has allowed a 107-day season.

This year, for ducks and Canada geese, those 107 days may occur only between Sept. 21 and Jan. 26. For white-fronted geese and light geese — snow and Ross's geese — those 107 days may occur only between Sept. 21 and March 10.

Idaho's proposed waterfowl season would open with a two-day hunt Sept. 28-29 for licensed youths ages 10-15.

Duck and Canada goose seasons in the area around American Falls Reservoir would run from Oct. 5 to Jan. 17, with scaup seasons from Oct. 25 to Jan. 17. In the rest of the state it would run from Oct. 12 to Jan. 24, with scaup seasons from Nov. 2 to Jan. 24.

The daily bag limit would be seven ducks — but no more than two female mallards, two redheads, three scaup, two pintails and two canvasbacks — and four Canada geese.

In 2013, the framework for white-fronted geese was separated from Canada geese. For the first time, Idaho can now select a 107-day white-fronted goose season between Sept. 21 and March 10. Fish and Game said it is considering two options to accommodate white-fronted goose hunting opportunities for the

Watch Salmon Spawning at Rapid River Hatchery

BY VIRGINIA HUTCHINS
vhutchins@magicvalley.com

RIGGINS • Love the primitive fisherman-meets-salmon experience each summer? With rivers dammed throughout the Pacific Northwest, it takes a not-so-primitive system of fish traps, hatcheries and tanker trucks to sustain that annual migration of Chinook salmon from the Pacific Ocean to spawn in Idaho rivers.

At the Rapid River Fish Hatchery

this month, you can watch a particularly fascinating segment of the salmon cycle: spawning.

The spectacle begins Aug. 12 with the “first sort,” when workers crowd adult salmon with nets, sort males from females, then sort the ripe females from the immature. The spawning happens in an earthen pond lined with vegetation — that is, a pond that looks more natural than concrete raceways — and finishes Sept. 13, said Ralph Steiner, the fish hatchery’s manager for Idaho Department of Fish and Game.

Spawning draws spectators every year — though not as many as in the days when Fish and Game gave away the fish carcasses after spawning. Some families went through the line over and over, then canned the salmon for winter, Steiner said.

Fish and Game stopped giving away the carcasses when fish started receiving an antibiotic injection meant to control a bacterial kidney

Big Wood River neighbors do their part to protect water resources with trout-friendly lawns.

BY TETONA DUNLAP
tdunlap@magicvalley.com

HAILEY • Having a trout-friendly lawn doesn't mean you have to sacrifice beauty.

Vanessa Fry's front and back lawns are green and colorful. Instead of her vegetable garden being in the backyard, it is in the front. She has perennials and raspberry bushes. The only grass on the property is a strip of the droughttolerant variety.

So what is a certified Trout Friendly Lawn? It's water-wise, reduces or eliminates the use of synthetic fertilizers and herbicides, and uses native and drought-tolerant plants.

The initiative was started in 2007 by the Wood River Land Trust — an organization that protects and restores land, water and wildlife habitat in the Wood River Valley — to work with private landowners and local communities to protect and restore the Big Wood River.

Chad Chorney, southern Idaho project manager with Trout Unlimited, said it's especially important because a number of homes are located along the Big Wood River and a lot of their runoff ends up in the river.

Overhaul Your Lawn

For information on the Trout Friendly Lawn program, go to www.woodriverlandtrust.org and click on the program's icon on the left.

“A program like this is ... critical to the Wood River Valley because water use and management is at the forefront,” Chorney said. “Trout Unlimited has worked with them on this, and we are supporters certainly.”

The Trout Friendly Lawn program promotes steps residents can take in managing their yards and parks to conserve water and protect water quality and local fisheries.

‘Dark Sky’ Star Party Is this Weekend at Castle Rocks

ALMO • The Herrett Center and Magic Valley Astronomical Society will team up again for another “dark sky” star party on Friday and Saturday, Aug. 9-10, at Castle Rocks State Park near Almo. The event lets people enjoy sky views not washed out by city light.

The sixth annual City of Rocks star party will start at 2 p.m. each day with solar viewing at the Smoky Mountain Campground at Castle Rocks State Park. The park is about one mile southwest of the town of Almo, and visitors may camp overnight. State park fees apply, but the event is free and open to everyone. Nighttime sky viewing will begin at 9 p.m. and run until midnight.

Event information: Herrett Center, 732-6655, or www.csi.edu/herrett.

Discuss Idaho RV Registrations at Open Houses

Have something to say about recreational vehicle registrations? Idaho Department of Parks and Recreation is inviting the public to three open houses in August:

- 6-8 p.m. Aug. 13, at the Department of Lands Region Office, 3802 Industrial Ave. in Coeur d’Alene.
- 6-8 p.m. Aug. 13, at the IDPR East Region Office, 4279 Commerce Circle, Suite B, in Idaho Falls.
- 6-8 p.m. Aug. 15, at

IDPR headquarters, 5657 Warm Springs Blvd., Boise.

IDPR said it was tasked with analyzing recreational vehicle registrations in the state and making recommendations for how that process should be managed. The open houses give the public an opportunity to review and comment on recommendations by the recreational vehicle registration task force and consulting group hired by the department.

The Lunar Reconnaissance Orbiter has been taking photos and other data from lunar orbit since 2009. However, without periodic tweaks, Earth’s gravity will slowly de-circularize a lunar satellite’s orbit until it crashes into the surface. Thus, a natural satellite of the moon would be relatively short-lived.

To answer the related question — How many levels of (stable) orbits can exist in nature? — consider the following star system.

Two red dwarf stars (Gliese 644 Ba and Bb), each with masses roughly one-third that of the sun, orbit a common center of mass in just under three days, bound by their mutual gravity. That’s level one.

This pair, in turn, orbits a common center of mass with another (0.41 solar mass) red dwarf (Gliese 644 A) every 627 days. Imagine removing one end of a dumbbell, and replacing it with a smaller, spinning dumbbell, making level two.

Orbiting Gliese 644 A/Ba/Bb, at around a dozen times the separation between the sun and Pluto, is Gliese 643, a (0.19 solar mass) red dwarf, for level three.

Finally, there’s V1054

Ophiuchi C, a red dwarf with a mere 8 percent of the sun’s heft (about as small as a star can be and still have enough internal pressure to sustain nuclear fusion), so far from the other four that its orbit is difficult to quantify.

The key to stability for such hierarchical orbits is distance. Each successive star must be far enough away from the others that the latter’s combined gravitational fields don’t differ significantly from that of a single, larger star. Explaining how a proto-stellar cloud fragments into such a system in the first place is less straightforward.

Next column: Journey from the center of the sun.

2013-14 season in the southwest part of the state.

One option would separate the white-fronted and light goose seasons, with white-fronted geese open from Nov. 2 to Feb. 14, and light geese from Nov. 5 to Jan. 24 and Feb. 15 to March 10. Under a second option, both white-fronted geese and light geese would be open from Nov. 26 through March 10.

However, if the white-fronted goose and light-goose seasons would occur at the same time, the use of electronic calls and unplugged shotguns would not be allowed, Fish and Game’s release said.

Elsewhere in the state, the white-fronted goose season around American Falls Reservoir would run from Oct. 5 through Jan. 17, and in the rest of the state it would run from Oct. 12 through Jan. 24. The daily bag limit would be six white-fronted geese.

For light geese — snow and Ross’s geese — there are four zones. The season for:

- Zone 1 would run Oct. 5-Jan. 17.
- Zone 2 would run Oct.

29-Jan. 17 and Feb. 15-March 10.

- Zone 3 would run Nov. 5-Jan. 24 and Feb. 15-March 10; or Nov. 26-March 10.
- Zone 4 would run Oct. 12-Jan. 24.

The daily bag limit would be 20 light geese, increased from 10 last year.

For light geese, zones 1 and 2 are in the area around American Falls Reservoir, including the Fort Hall Indian Reservation, Bannock County and parts of Bingham, Caribou and Power counties; zone 3 is the southwest and part of the Magic Valley; and zone 4 is the rest of the state.

Open house meetings are planned across the state to take public comments on the proposed seasons. Or, submit comments online at: <https://fishandgame.idaho.gov/content/web-form/2013-waterfowl-season-proposals>. Or, mail written comments to: 2013-14 Waterfowl Seasons, P.O. Box 25, Boise, ID 83707.

The deadline for public comment is Aug. 16. A summary of public comments will be presented to the Idaho Fish and Game Commission at the meeting Aug. 19 in Idaho Falls.

of handing out fish after the spawning.

Each female produces 3,500 to 5,000 eggs, according to Fish and Game. After spawning, the eggs from each female are placed in buckets, fertilized with the sperm from a male and taken to the hatchery’s incubation building, where river water flows continuously through incubators.

You can watch the spawning on Mondays and Thursdays from mid-August to mid-September. This year, you can also watch on Tuesdays and Fridays during late August and early September, when the Rapid River hatchery expects to spawn summer Chinook salmon for Clearwater River hatcheries using surplus broodstock from the South Fork of the Salmon River. Salmon returns to the Clearwater were low in 2013, Steiner said on July 25, and the Rapid River hatchery’s role is part of Idaho’s response.

His next appointment that day would be a conference call on the Clearwater shortfall.

Hatchery Basics

Idaho Power Co. built the Rapid River Fish Hatchery in 1964 and still funds it as part of the utility’s operating license for its Snake River dams, but Fish and Game operates the hatchery. The dam-mitigation goal for the Rapid River hatchery is to release 3 million spring Chinook smolts annually to help conserve fish runs.

On July 25, the hatchery’s earthen ponds had an inventory of 2,200 broodstock adults, most captured in a fish trap just below the hatchery, and 3.1 million small Chinook salmon, most destined for release directly into the Rapid River. The Rapid flows into the Little Salmon River, then the Salmon, the Snake, the Columbia River and the Pacific Ocean, where most Chinook spend two years in saltwater before returning as 4-year-olds. Some smolts will instead be trucked to the Snake River and released below Hells Canyon Dam, and some will be released into the Little Salmon.

That morning, the fish fed constantly on bugs, and a kingfisher dipped into the water for a salmon meal. The Rapid River hatchery doesn’t cover its ponds with nets to keep out birds, because it’s far enough away from other fish facilities to prevent disease transmission.

“We feed a lot of birds here,” Steiner said. Leave the kingfishers alone and a pair will establish and defend a territory, he said; harass the birds and you’ll get more of them.

Sprinklers break up the surface of the broodstock pond to keep the adults calm by making the water seem deeper and obscuring their view of people walking by. So you’re welcome to stand beside the water and ponder the salmon as they swim.

What Else to See There

Another popular spectacle at the Rapid River hatchery peaks in the last week of June or the first week of July: workers handling each fish caught by the fish trap downstream from the hatchery. Wild fish — identified by an intact adipose fin — are passed around the trap and weir to continue their trip up the Rapid River.

At other times of year, call ahead (208-628-3277) for a tour of the fish trap, a fascinating system of channels diverting river water and fish.

The hatchery sits in a hole surrounded by mountains with a ring of trees at their base. Though the slopes turn brown around June, the tree-lined hatchery grounds are an oasis where families picnic in the park, watch quail and other wildlife and listen to the sounds of running water.

This 100 percent gravity-flow hatchery takes its water from the long, wild Rapid River drainage. So you won’t hear any pumps.

In the clover-filled grass of the park are at least seven picnic tables and a pair of cool, clean-smelling restrooms. It’s often the site of wedding receptions, church gatherings and the like.

In another vegetation-lined pond, no longer used in the hatchery operations, Fish and Game stocks trout for children, disabled anglers and seniors, who may fish there from noon to dark on Fridays. Weeds around the water ensure hearty bug production for the trout.

“This is very popular with seniors,” Steiner said, and some local families return every Friday.

Idaho’s Archery Season Opens Soon

JEROME • Idaho’s archery pronghorn season opens Aug. 15 and continues through Sept. 15.

In many units, archery seasons for mule deer, white-tailed deer and elk open Aug. 30 and run through September.

In the warm weather of summer, hunters should consider hunting in the higher country, the Idaho Department of Fish and Game said. Hunters have an ethical and legal obligation to salvage the edible portions of their kill, but meat spoilage is a concern during hot weather.

The key to preserving meat is starting the cooling process quickly. Game animals should be skinned immediately and quartered in most cases and transported quickly to cold storage facilities, Fish and Game said. Early-season hunters often use large ice chests to keep game meat cool and clean. Removing meat from the bones also helps speed cooling.

Archery permits are required. And archers using blinds on federal public lands should consult the big game rules brochure or contact the Bureau of Land Management for the latest policies on hunting blinds on public lands.

connection. I think we can all connect to the river.”

Chris Kastner, owner of CK’s Real Food in Hailey, said both his restaurant and home have the certification. Though certified for only a couple of years, Kastner said he’s always practiced being a good steward.

“Water is not an unlimited resource. You have to make a compromise. You are going to have a few more weeds,” Kastner said. “I think it’s a great program, and I think there are a lot more people who are aware of it.”

So how does one keep a yard relatively weed-free without herbicides?

To keep her weeds under control, Fry sprays vinegar under the leaves. To get rid of aphids, Fry purchased ladybugs.

Fry said she doesn’t use any fertilizers or herbicides because an irrigation canal runs through her backyard. “We have a dog too and wanted to make sure we weren’t using any chemicals.”

Fry displays the Trout Friendly Lawn sign in her front yard, just in case it might facilitate a conversation about the program. And recently she noticed one of her neighbors redoing a yard.

A sign identifies Vanessa Fry’s Hailey yard as one that conserves water and protects Big Wood River water quality.

Foreclosure is being effected because of default in the payment of the obligation due and owing from the grantor to beneficiaries, and evidenced by a promissory note, which said obligation is secured by the said deed of trust. Said default, as of the date of the Notice of Default, consists of the failure to make three monthly installment payments or other obligations of $450.00 since April, 2013, under Deed of Trust Note. The total principal and interest due is $36,961.39 as of July 9, 2013, which amount is due plus accrued interest, late charges, back real property taxes, escrow fees, attorneys fees and any other costs or expenses associated with this foreclosure. The Notice of Default was recorded in the records of Cassia County Idaho on July 11, 2013, as Instrument No. 523245.

That by reason of said default, the beneficiaries of said deed of trust have, in the Notice of Default, declared all sums secured by said deed of trust immediately due and payable.

YOU ARE NOTIFIED THAT:

A Petition, a copy of which is attached, has been filed in the above-entitled matter in the Magistrate's Division of the District Court of Twin Falls County, Idaho, by the Prosecuting Attorney, alleging the above-named children come within the Court's jurisdiction under the Child Protective Act.

You are hereby directed to appear personally for a Case Plan Hearing at the Twin Falls County Courthouse, 425 Shoshone Street, Twin Falls, Idaho on August 29, 2013 at 9:30 AM.

You are notified that service of the attached Petition upon you, as the parent(s), guardian, or custodian of these children, confers personal jurisdiction of the Court upon you and subjects you to the provisions of the Child Protective Act.

You are notified that if you fail to appear without reasonable cause, the Court may proceed in your absence or you may be proceeded against for contempt of Court.

You are notified that the parent(s), guardian, or a custodian may be financially liable for the support and/or treatment of the children.

You are further notified that the children and parent(s), guardian, or custodian have the right to be represented by an attorney of your choosing, or if financially unable to pay, have the right to have an attorney appointed by the Court to represent the children or the parent(s), guardian, or custodian at county expense. If you request to have an attorney appointed at county expense, you must appear before the date of the hearing given above, at which time the Court shall consider appointment of an attorney for the children and inquire whether the parent(s), guardian, or custodian require the separate appointment of an attorney.

You are further notified that there shall be a rebuttable presumption that if a child is placed in the custody of the IDHW and was also placed in care out of the home for a period not less than fifteen (15) out of the last twenty-two (22) months from the date of Adjudication, the IDHW shall initiate a Petition for Termination of Parental Rights. This presumption may be rebutted by a finding by the Court that the filing of a Petition for Termination of Parental Rights would not be in the best interest of the children and their family, or that the children are placed permanently with a relative.

LEGAL NOTICE

The Magic Valley Regional Office of the Idaho Department of Fish and Game has determined that there is a high likelihood that Thorn Creek Reservoir in Gooding County will be dry or nearly dry by late summer. Drought conditions, lack of runoff into this water and continued high ambient air temperatures have led to this determination. Fish in this water will have a high likelihood of perishing as water levels drop and conditions become unsuitable.

Therefore, fish bag and possession limits will be removed on Thorn Creek Reservoir in Gooding County, effective August 3, 2013 through November 30, 2013. Fish may be taken by any method except firearms, explosives, chemicals, or electric current; effective August 3rd through November 30th, 2013. In accordance with Section 36-401, Idaho Code, a valid Idaho fishing license is required to salvage fish.

Copies of Order 13-33 are available at the Idaho Department of Fish and Game headquarters, 600 South Walnut, PO Box 25, Boise, Idaho 83707.

Today is Thursday, Aug. 8, the 220th day of 2013. There are 145 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight:

On August 8, 1963, Britain's "Great Train Robbery" took place as thieves made off with 2.6 million pounds in banknotes.

TODAY IN HISTORY

On this date:

In 1815, Napoleon Bonaparte set sail for St. Helena to spend the remainder of his days in exile.

In 1911, President William Howard Taft signed a measure raising the number of U.S. representatives from 391 to 433, effective with the next Congress, with a proviso to add two more when New Mexico and Arizona became states.

In 1937, during the Second Sino-Japanese War, Japan completed its occupation of Beijing.

In 1942, during World War II, six Nazi saboteurs who were captured after landing in the U.S. were executed in Washington, D.C.; two others who'd cooperated with authorities were spared.

In 1945, President Harry S. Truman signed the U.S. instrument of ratification for the United Nations Charter. The Soviet Union declared war against Japan during World War II.

In 1953, the United States and South Korea initiated a mutual security pact.

In 1968, the Republican national convention in Miami Beach nominated Richard Nixon for president on the first ballot.

In 1973, Vice President Spiro T. Agnew branded as "damned lies" reports he had taken kickbacks from government contracts in Maryland, and vowed not to resign — which he ended up doing.

In 1974, President Richard Nixon announced his resignation, effective the next day, following damaging new revelations in the Watergate scandal.

In 1978, the U.S. launched Pioneer Venus 2, which carried scientific probes to study the atmosphere of Venus.

In 1993, in Somalia, four U.S. soldiers were killed when a land mine was detonated underneath their vehicle, prompting President Bill Clinton to order Army Rangers to try to capture Somali warlord Mohamed Farrah Aidid.

In 2007, space shuttle Endeavour roared into orbit with teacher-astronaut Barbara Morgan on board.

Ten years ago: The Boston Roman Catholic archdiocese offered $55 million to settle more than 500 lawsuits stemming from alleged sex abuse by priests. (The archdiocese later settled for $85 million.)

Five years ago: China opened the Summer Olympic Games with an extravaganza of fireworks and pageantry. A charter bus crashed near Sherman, Texas, killing 17 members of a Vietnamese-American Catholic group en route to Missouri. Former Democratic presidential candidate and vice-presidential nominee John Edwards admitted having an extramarital affair. Russia sent an armored column into the breakaway enclave of South Ossetia after Georgia launched an offensive to crush separatists there.

One year ago: Egyptian President Mohammed Morsi fired his intelligence chief for failing to act on an Israeli warning of an imminent attack days before militants stormed a border post in the Sinai Peninsula and killed 16 soldiers. Misty May-Treanor and Kerri Walsh Jennings of the United States became the first three-time gold medalists in Olympic beach volleyball history, beating Jennifer Kessy and April Ross 21-16, 21-16 in the all-American final.

DEAR ABBY: I am a self-employed general contractor, and have been for the most part successful. My wife, “Janine,” worked in the mortgage industry, but because of the economic downturn hasn’t worked in three years.

DEAR ABBY
Jeanne Phillips

After her mom provided some financial help to my business eight months ago, Janine decided she wanted to work for me doing the office work and bookkeeping. The problem is, she doesn’t show up until late afternoon and stays only a short while. She doesn’t get any work done, and then she leaves. She constantly rushes to get the bills paid at the very last minute.

Although my wife is college-educated, she really can’t handle the job. Her work ethic is terrible. I started my company and I’m the boss. When Janine doesn’t agree with me about something, she yells so loud I’m sure the people who work next door can hear her. I have talked to her about this, and we have fought about it. I tried to fire, her but she says if she can’t work for my business, we might as well get divorced.

I never wanted a partner and didn’t ask for one, and now I feel trapped with an employee from hell. I love Janine and don’t want a divorce. How can I get her to quit and still stay married?

—NEEDS HELP
IN CALIFORNIA

DEAR NEEDS: Your wife’s behavior is immature and inappropriate. If her being in your office is connected to the money her mother loaned you, my advice is to repay it immediately before your wife’s “dabbling” as a business partner disrupts the business any further.

You may love Janine, but if the only thing holding your marriage together is allowing her to play at working in the office, then I’m sorry to say you don’t have much of a marriage. Wake up and smell the coffee. You need an assistant and your wife needs something else to occupy her time.

DEAR ABBY: I was abused as a child through my teenage years. I told my mom and we talked about it. My stepfather was the molester.

Part of me is still angry about what he did to me, but another part thinks fondly of the life we had as kids. What’s wrong with me? Is it normal to have conflicted emotions about a person who hurt you? None of my siblings know about my past. My stepfather is deceased now and so is my mom.

—SURVIVOR
IN MARYLAND

DEAR SURVIVOR: You deserve credit for not only being able to acknowledge your pain, but also emotionally mature enough to look back and not diminish the good things. It’s a sign that you are healthy. Your feelings are normal, and you are to be congratulated for being able to view your history in its entirety.

DEAR ABBY: The women I work with are now starting to have grandchildren. That’s great, but when did it become trendy to have baby showers for the grandmothers? Personally, I think this is over the top. What about you?

—SHOWER
OVERLOAD IN MINNESOTA

DEAR SHOWER OVERLOAD: I don’t agree. It may have become trendy around the time that so many grandmothers assumed responsibility for raising their grandchildren. Or, the women may be so excited about welcoming a first grandchild that they want to celebrate with a party of their own. Because you feel differently, simply decline the invitations.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE®

Bobby Wolff

“Resolves the sad vicissitudes of things.”

— Richard Gifford

At the Dyspeptics Club, complaining about bad luck is something of an art-form.

Here South grumbled that he should have followed his instincts instead of wasting time getting a complete count of the hand when the diamond queen was with West, the short hand, instead of with East, the long hand. While he had a point, of sorts, he had missed a simple clue at the end that would have eliminated any guesswork.

Against four spades, West led the heart king, continued with the ace, then played a third round to kill off dummy’s now established nine. East ruffed, then South overruffed and started on trumps. West won the second round and got off lead with his last trump, while his partner discarded two diamonds.

When South tested the clubs, he found they were 4-2. At this point it was clear that West had started with three spades, six hearts, two clubs and hence only two diamonds. Playing, as he thought, with the odds, declarer crossed to the diamond king and finessed the jack, only to lose to West’s now bare queen.

Either opponent could have held the missing queen, granted, but before testing the clubs, declarer should have played off his last trump, throwing a diamond from the table. Then, after running the club winners, in the three-card end position East has to keep his club jack, so must come down to only two diamonds. Now, irrespective of its whereabouts, the diamond queen must fall in two rounds.

ANSWER: A hand that can’t open or overcall at its first turn can’t sensibly jump at its next turn to show a single-suited hand. Here the three-club call is a fit jump — say, four-card spade support and A-Q-fifth of clubs. You have a little in hand for your overcall, but not enough shape to drive to game. Bid three diamonds to show where you live, and let partner determine if he has enough to bid game.

IF AUGUST 8 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: You may be popular and respected in any kind of group settings during the next four to five weeks. Because your business judgment is better than usual, September is a good time to make key financial or business decisions. In October, your ambitions may edge up a notch, but this isn't a good time to change jobs or make investments. Hold off on making major changes or decisions from November through the first half of January, when added responsibilities might hold you back. After January circumstances could tip the scales back in your favor.

HOROSCOPE

Jeraldine Saunders

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Paying attention pays off. While you're pulling your hair out trying to solve a problem, the simple insight of a friend could provide all the answers. Your love life takes a turn for the better.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Everybody gets their five minutes of fame, so enjoy yours while it lasts. Expect to be treated like a conquering hero for your recent actions. Ask for favors or advice with no worries.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Practice what you preach. You're quite aware of the difference between right and wrong, so don't start cutting corners when things don't go your way. Make someone's day by asking for an informed opinion.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Slow and steady wins the race. Trying to make a mad dash for the finish line on a project may result in shoddy work fraught with errors. Even if it takes longer, take your time and do the job right.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): The heart takes precedence. Other matters have to wait as romance blossoms for you. New encounters get off to a grand start, but don't expect a traditional relationship.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Nobody can argue with the truth. Don't let discussions turn into arguments; present the facts honestly and the other party will come around. Being willing to compromise puts you at an advantage.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22.): Ignore the pressure. You may feel a little heat to reach a quick decision, but it would be to your advantage to wait until more information is revealed. All systems are go for romantic pursuits.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Put your faith in those you trust. Those closest to you are there because they've earned your confidence and in a sticky situation they'll come through for you. Your home life will be teeming with affection.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Never say "never." You may be dead set against a friend or colleague's plan, but if you open up and listen to their thoughts, you'll see there may be a few diamonds in the rough there.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): A little self-indulgence doesn't hurt. You can treat yourself to a small gift or guilty pleasure. You're able to express feelings to loved ones a little more clearly than usual.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Put your charms to work. You have an attractive glow about you that will allow you to get your way. Let your instincts guide you to trustworthy companions.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March. 20): Keep your head out of the clouds. You may give an idea more time than it's worth and ignore more tangible responsibilities. Multitasking leaves you with several poorly done projects instead of one that's done well.

BURLEY • One of Burley’s largest employers announced Wednesday that it is ready to expand. McCain Foods plans to invest $100 million in a new building and a third production line.

The company plans to immediately request building permits. Jobs will be created, but the range and number of jobs will not be known until the line is almost ready to open. The third line is expected to open in late 2015, said McCain communications manager Cathy Sharifi.

McCain Foods employs 550 people in Burley and 4,500 nationwide at production facilities in eight states.

The expansion decision was made because “there is an increasing demand for potato products from customers nationwide and around the world,” said regional president Frank van Schaayk in a statement. “We made the decision to invest in our Burley plant because of its strong potato grower community, highly capable work force and tremendous support from the local and state government.”

The Burley plant produces tater tots, hash browns, French fries, battered fries and Southern-style hash browns. The plant will continue production during the expansion.

The new line will make potato products for the foodservice industry and restaurant chains.

“In addition to hiring more employees, we plan to buy potatoes locally for the new third production line, which means more business for our local community,” said plant manager Jeff McCray in a statement.

McCain chose Burley for the expansion because “Burley has a tremendously strong potato grower community,” Sharifi said.

The new production facility in Burley is the only expansion McCain USA is planning, Sharifi said.

“McCain Foods is a great corporate citizen that appreciates the value of a talented, committed work force and the kind of responsive,

Cassia County Terminates Law Enforcement Services to Burley

BY LAURIE WELCH
lwelch@magicvalley.com

BURLEY • Cassia County has terminated its law enforcement services contract with Burley, effective Sept. 30, after the two governments failed to reach a compromise on a $50,000 difference in contract costs.

Commissioners voted unanimously in an emergency meeting Wednesday to stop providing police services to Burley.

The decision came on the heels of the Burley City Council’s vote Tuesday to spend $1.45 million on those services. The county had asked for $1.5 million.

The two entities had been negotiating the contract for months.

“This was a surprise. It was a complete shock to me,” said county Undersheriff George Warrell. “I don’t know what we’re going to do. We will meet with the sheriff and the commissioners to see what they have in mind and go from there. It was one of those surprising moments.”

Commissioner Paul Christensen was absent from the meeting, and Sheriff Jay Heward was out of town.

The key question now is how Burley will ensure public safety after Sept. 30.

“Having no police services would be an option but a poor one,” said City Councilman Gordon Hansen. “It wouldn’t be a responsible position to take. One of our primary responsibilities is to provide public safety.”

For $1.5 million, Hansen said, the city may want to investigate having its own police department again.

Burley’s police force became part of the Sheriff’s Office in 1986.

“I feel like the city has been paying a premium for years,” said Hansen.

Other options may be for the city to contract police services with Minidoka County or the city of Heyburn, he said.

“This was a surprise. It was a complete shock to me. I don’t know what we’re going to do.”

County Undersheriff George Warrell

The city’s current contract, which expires Sept. 30, costs $1.4 million. The previous year’s contract cost $1.35 million.

Burley had been given data showing that providing its services cost the county nearly $1.97 million, a commission news release said.

Amid continued state and federal funding cutbacks, if the county absorbed the extra Burley costs as well, it would be an “unfair burden and hardship” to Cassia County taxpayers, the release said. “It is with regret that the city could not accept the county’s offer.”

Hansen questioned why the county wouldn’t let the city pursue other options for the contract.

“Maybe we could have less officers assigned to the city or (fewer) patrol cars,” said Hansen.

Crane said a provision in this year’s contract states that one

Burley Woman Struck by Car Identified

TIMES-NEWS

BURLEY • The woman struck by a car while walking downtown Tuesday has been identified as Jean Freymiller, 70, of Burley.

Freymiller was in the crosswalk when Debra Whiteley, 54, of Oakley, made a right-hand turn from 13th Street onto Overland Avenue in a 2012 Toyota Camery and struck Freymiller, the Cassia County Sheriff’s Office reported.

Whiteley was cited with failure to yield to a pedestrian.

Freymiller was taken by ambulance to Cassia Regional Medical Center but had been discharged as of Wednesday, hospital staff said.

Glanbia Opens Doors to New Cheese Center

BY BRIAN SMITH

Unbuttoning his dress shirt, Glanbia President and CEO Jeff Williams puffed out his chest and proudly bared the blue and white T-shirt beneath.

“Life is gouda,” it read.

“We wear our passion on our shirtsleeves. But I can tell you that we also wear it on our heart,” he said, rousing applause from the crowd gathered Wednesday morning.

During Glanbia’s grand opening of its corporate offices and Cheese Innovation Center in Old Towne, Williams said he hopes the buzz will energize employees to further improve the company and its products.

Much energy, thought and hard work went into building the innovation center, which local officials hope will be an economic boon for Old Towne and downtown, he said.

“It was a huge collaborative effort, and it does show what can happen when people come together — entrepreneurs, business people, government, city folks, townspeople and a group of great employees and milk suppliers,” he said. “We have the best milk in the world right here in Idaho, and we are going feed the world.”

Between samples of cheese, locals toured the 14,000-square-foot innovation center and the three-story, 35,000-square-foot corporate headquarters built to house about 100 employees. The buildings are at Fourth Avenue South and Shoshone Street West.

“This is where the money is going to be made,” Williams said, gesturing toward the innovation center. “And this (corporate headquarters) is where we are going to count the money.”

The corporate building features numerous offices and spaces for traveling executives, collaboration areas and sitting and standing conference rooms.

The innovation center — lined with large windows and filled with shiny new equipment — features a kitchen, culinary lab, make area, analytical lab, offices, conference room and posters illustrating pepper matchmaking.

with scientific testing. Instead of leaving the cheese to subjective human tastes, food scientists can gather specific data and produce a more consistent product, said staffer Candace Clark. They can identify, say, what makes cheddar's aged and unique note.

"We can monitor cheese characteristics like moisture, salt levels, fat levels and protein levels," Clark said. "We can also measure things like flavor."

In the culinary lab, employees can look at how the cheese's flavors carry over to a food product. There they can shred, slice, perform melt tests and use deep fryers, induction burners or a gas range — "everything we need to make any kind of conventional cheese product," said staffer Colin Cassard.

The innovation center is "where the fun starts," said Dave Perry, Glanbia director of cheese technology.

"Everybody needs to eat some cheese," he told the audience. "If you don't eat some cheese, you've missed the point. Then, from there, you need to every day keep eating some cheese. The more you eat, the more we'll make."

U.S. Sen. Jim Risch, R-Idaho, said Glanbia has been critical to growing the state's dairy industry. It's a "cornerstone" and one of the many reasons Idaho is a great place to live and work, he said.

"This new facility that Glanbia is building here represents Glanbia's belief, such as we all believe, in the future of Idaho, in the future of this community here in Twin Falls and a commitment to the future of the people of the great state of Idaho," he said.

The facility is the largest private investment made in the city's Old Towne to date, said Cindy Bond, chairwoman of the Urban Renewal Agency. The project is a "catalyst for change" and has drawn the interest of other firms to Old Towne and downtown.

"Downtown is the most vibrant it has been in decades, and we expect the vibrancy to continue," Bond said.

Twin Falls Mayor Greg Lanting agreed. Bringing new employees and business to an area "keeps the ball rolling" with new investment, he said after the opening ceremony.

"We're excited about downtown," he said. "Every city or downtown is the heart of the city. So if your heart is not doing well, your city is not doing well as it could be."

county commissioner, Christensen, and one city council member, Randy Hawkins, would meet to negotiate the next year's contract.

"They met diligently and at the request of Mr. Hawkins, we furnished in-

Said Councilman John Craner, "I don't know where we'll go from here. We will have to review our position. We need to see what our options are."

Council President Casey Andersen did not return calls from the Times-News Wednesday.
