5,000-Acre McCan Fire Threatens Homes

Parts of golf course also burned.

FAIRFIELD • Sporadic winds whipped flames just out of fire-fighters’ reach, threatening homes and jumping roads Thursday just north of Fairfield.

The McCan Fire first lit up near the Soldier Mountains on Wednesday evening, when six lightning strikes hit the ground. Four of them sparked fires, but only two forced firefighters to forgo sleep and battle flames.

By Thursday, the fire had blown up to 5,000 acres and almost completely surrounded Soldier Mountain Ranch.

The blaze hadn’t damaged any area cabins or houses. The flames crept across parts of the golf course, however.

“The fire is moving fast, and it hasn’t stopped,” said Incident Commander Chris Anthony of the U.S. Bureau of Land Management. “Thankfully, we’ve had enough air resources to help us out.”

Among the firefighters’ fire suppression resources were two C-130 planes holding special equipment used to drop large amounts of fire retardant.

The equipment — known as the Modular Airborne Fire Fighting System — is used to drop 3,000 gallons of retardant, all at once or in quick spurts around a fire.

“This is an elite group,” said Jodi Mallozzi of the U.S. Forest Service. “There is only a handful of them from different parts of the country.”

Flying sometimes as low as 300 feet above ground, the planes roared over Soldier Mountain Ranch, protecting homes defenseless against the flames.

Ranch owner Nancy Hallowell said she woke up in the middle of the night to find the slope outside her window crawling with flames. She and her husband spent the rest of the night digging a line with a dozer to stop the flames from encroaching any farther.

By Thursday, the flames moved north of her ranch. Smoke swirled between the wheat and alfalfa fields, and Hallowell’s husband was still digging lines to protect their crops.

“We got about two hours of sleep last night,” she said. “We’ve had other fires before, but never this close to us.”

Jerry Craven, who owns another area ranch, also was outside watching the fire grow and move with the wind.

Burley to Establish Its Own Police Department

BY LAURIE WELCH

BURLEY • City officials will determine Monday how to establish a new Burley police department.

“We don’t have a choice,” said City Council President Casey Andersen. “We can’t just sit around.”

The noon Monday meeting comes on the heels of failed negotiations with Cassia County to bridge a $50,000 difference in price for contracted law enforcement services in the city.

The council voted Tuesday to pay $1.45 for police services, but the county had requested $1.5 million.

County commissioners met Wednesday and terminated the contract effective Sept. 30.

The city’s meeting agenda Monday includes a discussion on the law enforcement contract, the transition plan for the contract and establishing the position of a Burley police chief.

County Commission Chairman Dennis Crane said news of the city’s Monday meeting came as “kind of a surprise.”

“The city can’t pay for what we were giving them,” Crane said. “How can it pay to start up a police department?”

Rock Creek Fire to Hold Statewide Fire Training

BY ALISON GENE SMITH

KIMBERLY • This isn’t the same Magic Valley of 10 years ago. And it’s not the same Rock Creek Fire Department.

So say Rock Creek Fire Chief Jason Keller and training captain Brent Blamires.

“We are a small department,” Keller said. “But in the past two years we’ve doubled our members.”

The small department has big plans to hold the inaugural Magic Valley Fire and EMS Hands on Training Academy from Oct. 4-6.

Classes will include engine company operations, extrication operations, forcible entry and wind-driven fires in structures, wildland fires and

Of those, only five are full-time. The rest are volunteers.

THE MARKET AT A GLANCE

Surging Mining Stocks End a Slump on Wall Street

NEW YORK (AP) • Miners and other companies dealing in commodities helped pull the stock market out of a three-day slump on Thursday.

News that China's trade rebounded last month signaled the end of a six-month slowdown for the world's biggest buyer of raw materials. The report drove prices up for copper and other commodities, and that helped lift Newmont Mining, Freeport-McMoRan and other stocks in the materials industry.

WEATHER

Expect a Dry, Sunny Weekend

After quite a few storms on Thursday, things won't be as active on Friday. A weak weather system and just enough moisture will still be in the area on Friday and that means we could see a couple isolated storms, mainly in the higher elevations. The other big weather story on Friday will be the high fire danger. Gusty winds and low humidity caused the National Weather Service to issue Red Flag Warnings for parts of the Magic Valley. Any thunderstorms could also cause fire starts. Temperatures will be near normal for the next several days. That means we will see high temperatures in the lower-90s. The normal high this time of year is right around 90 degrees. The weekend will be dry and actually very nice. Plenty of sunshine is in the forecast for both Saturday and Sunday. There could be just a few clouds on Sunday, but overall it will be a great weekend. We will continue to see sunny skies and temperatures in the lower-90s for most of next week. Brandon Redmond is a reporter and weather anchor for KMVT-TV and KTWT Fox 14.

Women's Veterans Conference Welcomes Servicewomen from Across Idaho

tdunlap@magicvalley.com

BOISE • Idaho has about 13,000 women veterans, but many former servicewomen have neglected to apply for the benefits they earned. Rectifying that oversight – and extending gratitude to women who have and are serving – is among the aims of the Women's Veterans Conference in Boise on Saturday, Aug. 10. "I identify myself as a veteran and Air Force person, but many women do not because they were not treated like veterans," said Tamara Mackenthun, a 21½-year veteran and the state's women veterans coordinator. "One of the goals is to help with that. It's a validation of their service and a way to send a big thank you."

"I think there are a lot of people who think of veterans as men. The women are forgotten," said Linda Brugger of Twin Falls, who served a year as a Navy electronics technician and was in the Air Force Reserves from 1975 until 1996. Brugger said that when she enlisted in the Navy in 1960, she wasn't allowed on the ship. "Women weren't allowed to be in harm's way. We were a separate part of the military," she said. "This new crop of women veterans has been through so much more than I was." About 200,000 women are in uniform today, many of them in combat, representing about 14 percent of the active-duty force of 1.38 million service members. One of the most highly decorated military women ever – U.S. Air Force Brig. Gen. Wilma Vaught – will give the keynote address at Saturday's conference to the 150 or so women who had registered as of Thursday. Vaught enlisted in the Air Force in 1957, long before many of today's female soldiers were even born. In 1966, she became the first woman to deploy with a Strategic Air Command bombardment wing on an operational deployment. Fourteen years later, she was promoted to brigadier general, the first woman to gain that rank in the comptroller career field. She became commander in 1982 of the U.S. Military Entrance Processing Command in North Chicago, Ill. She also was chairwoman of the NATO Women in the Allied Forces Committee and was the senior woman military representative to the Secretary of Defense's prestigious Advisory Committee on Women in the Service, according to the National Women's Hall of Fame. Vaught retired in 1985 as one of only seven women generals in the U.S. Since then, she has helped raise more than $20 million to create the first major memorial to honor the nearly 2 million women who have served in the U.S. armed forces, a memorial that now stands directly outside of Arlington National Cemetery. Vaught still serves as board president of the Women In Military Service

More Information

The free Women's Veterans Conference in Boise on Saturday, Aug. 10, requires registration. To register online, go to www.veterans.idaho.gov. For more information, email womens.conf@veterans.idaho.gov or call 208-577-2310. If you are late registering online, please call Tamara Mackenthun, Idaho's women veterans coordinator, at 208-577-2310. On-site registration will not be available. For those who already have registered, check-in is from 8 a.m. to 9 a.m. at the Riverside Hotel, 2900 W Chinden Blvd., in Boise. The conference runs until 5 p.m. It is free to all women who have served or are serving in the U.S. military.

For America Memorial Foundation Inc. The memorial honors today's servicewomen as well as those who served during World War II in the Women's Army Corps (called WACs), the Navy's Women Accepted for Volunteer Emergency Service (WAVEs), and the Women Air Force Service Pilots (WASPs). All provided critical support for the war effort. At the Idaho conference, in addition to hearing remarks by Vaught, attendees will have time to network with other women veterans and attend workshops on such subjects as veterans' benefits and women's health and wellness. A variety of vendors will provide information on continuing education, finance, women and children's services, medical care and more. The veterans also will be served lunch and treated to a raffle and door prizes. Brugger said it took her a long time to feel comfortable calling herself a veteran, but now she does so proudly and is looking forward to attending the Women's Veterans Conference. "I wish more female veterans got involved so we had a bigger voice," she said.

Rep. Hartgen Continues Recovery After Triple Bypass

BY MYCHEL MATTHEWS
mmatthews@magicvalley.com

BOISE • State Rep. Stephen Hartgen is slowly recovering after a successful triple bypass heart surgery Tuesday, July 30.

Hartgen "continues to recuperate at St. Luke's in Boise," House Speaker Scott Bedke said Thursday. "I haven't talked to the family today, but I know that they are very appreciative of all the calls and well-wishing they have received."

Recovery "just takes time," Bedke said. He did not know when Hartgen might be released.

Gov. C.L. "Butch" Otter appointed Hartgen to fill a seat in the Idaho House in July 2008, following selection by the District 24 Central Committee. Hartgen was elected in November 2008.

Hartgen, who is in his late 60s, is a former publisher of the Times-News.

Deputies Identify Owner of Hobbled Horse

TIMES-NEWS

BUHL • The owner of an emaciated horse found hobbled in a Melon Valley pasture has been identified, reports the Twin Falls County Sheriff's Office.

The man has not been charged, and his identity has not been released.

The pasture's owner had called the sheriff's office July 19 to report the young paint stud colt, which deputies earlier thought was a gelding.

The horse was to have been auctioned Aug. 17. Now that an owner has been identified, though, the colt will stay in the care of the sheriff's office until the case is resolved.

Deputies declined to allow the horse to be photographed, saying he now is considered evidence in the case.

A veterinarian is looking after the horse, said Lori Stewart, sheriff's office spokeswoman. The colt is being fed senior pellets, a special nutritional supplement.

Since an initial news report, the sheriff's office received many tips about a possible owner and calls from people offering to take the horse, said Lt. Daron Brown.

Jerome County In Talks to Do More Pest Abatement

BY KIMBERLEE KRUESI
kkruesi@magicvalley.com

JEROME • Don't be surprised if that pesky mosquito landing on your bare arm in Twin Falls was hatched in Jerome.

With only the Snake River Canyon dividing Twin Falls and Jerome counties, mosquitoes and other pests fly back and forth between the two without a care in the world.

But with more cases of West Nile virus being reported throughout Idaho, health and local officials are stretching their mosquito-bitten arms across county lines to find a way to reduce the risk of the disease.

Jerome County officials hope to make the mosquito's flight a little more difficult by working with Twin Falls to spray against black flies and mosquitoes, said Jerome County Commissioner Charlie Howell.

Several years ago, Jerome County allotted several thousand dollars to spray pesticides by airplane, Howell said. The county stopped using that service after federal agencies, such as the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency, amended its permit process to require applicants to include intricate details on how the chemicals are sprayed and where they land.

Jerome County commissioners would like to resume spraying with help from the Twin Falls pest abatement district. The need was heightened earlier this year when mosquitoes infected with West Nile were found on the two counties' border. Treatment would be applied mainly along the river corridor, not across the whole county.

"We want to be more proactive," Howell said. "Two years ago, we did have a West Nile victim, and we are trying to prevent that from happening again."

West Nile is a potentially fatal illness that spreads from animals to humans through the bite of an infected mosquito. While most infected people do not show symptoms, West Nile can cause fever, headaches, body aches, fatigue, nausea, vomiting, eye pain and sometimes swollen lymph glands or a skin rash. In some cases, West Nile may affect the central nervous system.

Twin Falls County is one of the few counties in the state to have a pest abatement district. It treats for mosquitoes and black flies, tests for West Nile and promotes education on how to reduce pests in yards.

"I get a lot of phone calls from folks outside Twin Falls asking what to do to reduce mosquitoes," said Kirk Tubbs, manager of the county's pest abatement district. "I'm thrilled we're having this discussion."

Tubbs has been monitoring the Snake River corridor ever since six traps tested positive for West Nile along the river. After treating both sides of the river, Tubbs said, only two of the six traps tested positive for West Nile.

"That wouldn't have been possible if we weren't treating both sides," he said.

Police: Kickback Employee Stole Gift Cards

BY ALISON GENE SMITH
alismith@magicvalley.com

TWIN FALLS • An employee of KickBack Points stole about $2,000 in prepaid Visa gift cards that were meant for members of the company's rewards program, police said.

KickBack cards allow members to earn points on purchases at local stores.

Lisa Hoffman, 42, has been charged with two counts of grand theft. She's scheduled for a preliminary hearing

Monday, Aug. 12, at which prosecutors will attempt to show they have enough evidence to take her to trial.

On April 25, Debbie Brennan, a KickBack Points employee made a fraud report with Twin Falls police.

Police gave this account:

Brennan said several prepaid Visa cards had gone missing. Kickback issues prepaid Visa gift cards as part of its WingPoints program.

The gift cards are intended for private pilots who earn points through fuel purchases.

The cards are mailed to the pilots when KickBack Points LLC gets a notification email requesting the type and dollar amount that the pilot earned. The cards are activated at KickBack's Twin Falls office.

The office then sends the cards using the Mail Room, the U.S. Post Office or FedEx.

Brennan told police that in the last quarter of 2012 and the first quarter of 2013, a large number of cards were getting lost between the office and the destination.

KickBack contacted the company that provided the cards to see if any transactions were happening on the missing cards.

Several transactions were found on 12 cards at stores and restaurants throughout Twin Falls, including Applebee's, Johnny Carino's, Walmart, Target, Canyon Crest and more. The cards also were used in Jerome and Boise.

In May, police met with an employee at Karnation Intimate Apparel, one of the stores where the card was used. The employee identified Hoffman as the person who made the purchase and later identified her in a photo lineup. Police also spoke with loss prevention officers at Target. They showed police their surveillance video of Hoffman purchasing items and swiping the stolen gift card.

When police again spoke with Brennan, she confirmed that Hoffman was a current Kickback employee who had access to the cards prior to shipment.

Suspect Arrested in Gold Coin Burglary

COEUR D'ALENE (AP) • A 24-year-old Coeur d'Alene man has been arrested on suspicion of being involved in a home burglary in which thousands of dollars in gold and silver coins were taken.

Coeur d'Alene Police said Derek D. Hague was arrested Tuesday night. Court records say he was arraigned Wednesday Kootenai County on charges of robbery for the home break-in early Sunday along with burglary and grand theft for crimes that prosecutors say took place on Aug. 2. His bail was set at $50,000.

Police spokeswoman Sgt. Christie Wood says the burglary investigation continues. She did not immediately return a phone message Thursday asking if the coins had been recovered.

The homeowner said the burglars got away with one safe, but left another in the driveway. Police say the two safes had a combined $250,000 worth of coins.

“The research shows that machines and screen media are a really ineffective way of teaching a baby language.”

Susan Linn, the director of the Boston-based Campaign for a Commercial-Free Childhood, in comments as the advocacy group complained to the Federal Trade commission about mobile apps that claim to help babies learn.

I Survived, but Army Prolonging Victims’ Pain

In November 2009, my Army Reserve Medical Detachment reported to Fort Hood, Texas, in preparation for deployment to Afghanistan. As we waited in line at the base’s processing center, Maj. Nidal Hasan entered the building and fired rounds that would kill 13 people and an unborn child and wound 32 others, including me. After many setbacks, Hasan’s trial finally began this week, only to be delayed yet again on Wednesday.

My recovery has been long and agonizing. But the pain that has taken me by surprise has come in the nearly four years since the attack, as my fellow victims and I have been given the runaround by a government more eager to protect itself than the dead and wounded.

On the day of the attack, I was waiting for a medical exam before what would have been my third deployment overseas. I was texting my wife when I heard the shout of “Allahu Akbar!”

I looked up to see a man in Army fatigues firing a pistol. His fourth or fifth shot went into my chest. As screams broke out around me, I collapsed to the ground. The bullet had punctured my lung and I was gasping for breath. As I lay there, he shot me five more times in my back and legs. Eventually soldiers helped me get medical attention.

The bullets had narrowly missed my heart, but one had lodged in my liver. I still have two bullets in my body and deal with near-constant pain in my legs and back.

During my recovery, I learned that the Army had classified the shooting as nonpolitical workplace violence instead of a terrorist attack. The language used to describe the attack may seem meaningless, but it is very meaningful to the victims and their families.

Because the Army decided that our wounds were not “combat-related,” a number of benefits are being denied to the victims and their families, including certain health and disability ones. In some instances, the designation even resulted in victims receiving smaller salaries than we would have received during our deployment. As a reservist, I was making roughly $2,000 per month less than I would have in my private-sector job. The Army would have made up that difference had I been on deployment orders or had my injuries classified as combat-related.

Unfortunately, I am not alone in my experience. I have watched other victims and their families be denied disability benefits and treated indifferently by the Army. This has left many families suffering not just physical and emotional wounds, but financial ones as well. Though the Army claims that the survivors of the Fort Hood attack are eligible for the same medical benefits as any service member, we are not getting the same treatment as soldiers wounded in combat. That is part of the reason we have brought a lawsuit against the government.

But it would be a mistake to think that the terrorism designation is just about benefits. It is also about the government acknowledging its complicity in the attack.

Before the shooting, the Army knew that the gunman was an Islamic religious extremist. After the attack, a bipartisan Senate report concluded that the Defense Department had evidence that “Hasan embraced views so extreme that it should have disciplined him or discharged him from the military, but DoD failed to take action against him.”

The FBI knew that Hasan was e-mailing with known terrorist leader Anwar al-Awlaki, asking questions about religious martyrdom and expressing support for al-Awlaki’s terrorist tactics. It did nothing. The Army also knew that Hasan was an incompetent psychiatrist who repeatedly neglected his duties. Yet instead of investigating, disciplining or discharging him, they transferred him to my medical detachment for deployment to Afghanistan.

Congress has labeled the Fort Hood attack an act of terrorism. In the wake of the attack, an independent report commissioned by the FBI looked at ways to improve counterterrorism measures. Even the president said the attack was inspired by “larger notions of violent jihad.” The only entities that have stubbornly refused to call it an act of terrorism are the Army and the Pentagon. Unfortunately for those wounded in the attack, their opinions are the ones that most affect us.

Hasan’s conviction would represent one step on the path toward justice. But that journey won’t be complete until the government tells the truth about the attack, provides proper support for its victims and takes measures to ensure that these mistakes won’t happen again.

Shawn Manning is a retired Army staff sergeant and mental health counselor who lives in Lacey, Wash.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Thanks to CSI’s Chris Anderson For Fun, Informative Caving Adventure

I wanted to write a short letter to tell everybody about a great experience my brother and I had recently on a College of Southern Idaho caving adventure. My brother and I live in Idaho Falls, and we were visiting in Twin Falls for a week with grandpa and grandma. My grandma signed us up for this caving adventure, so we were pretty excited.

My grandpa dropped us off at the Herrett Center, where we met Chris Anderson (he is a physics teacher at CSI). He gave us helmets, headlamps and knee and elbow pads to use for the day. We drove out into the middle of the desert somewhere and met the rest of our group.

We spent the whole day in multiple caves learning about how to be safe when caving and a lot of other things, like rock formations, cave ecosystems and cave restoration. We learned how to preserve the caves so that others who come after us can enjoy them as much as we did.

One thing we learned was to make sure and not leave anything behind and to even take out trash that was left behind by other people that were there before us to help preserve the cave.

I had lots of fun and learned tons! I would recommend this to anyone who is just starting out caving and would like to learn more about it and how to be safe doing it.

I just wanted to thank Chris and the CSI Herrett Center for this activity.

Luna Should Resign, Go Work for Ed Tech Company

If Tom Luna has the qualifications for state school superintendent (skills in management of education, wisdom, integrity), he would recognize that the process he used to develop the wireless program may not be in the best interest of students, teachers and administrators in Idaho schools.

If he doesn’t see the possibility that their benefits have been superceded by the benefits of the company that Mr. Luna chose (and possibility his own benefits), then he doesn’t have the qualifications to be Idaho’s state superintendent.

Mr. Luna, please consider resigning and making room for those who will benefit from the wireless contract: students, teachers, parents, school administrators, etc. Perhaps Education Networks of America has a job opening for which you would qualify.

Time to Examine a Debt-free College Education

Last week — almost a month after Congress failed to prevent student loan rates from doubling — Democrats and Republicans reached a compromise that will keep rates low, at least temporarily, for most graduates.

From a body with a record of procrastinating on student debt worse than students procrastinate on term papers, this was welcome news. But let’s not get ahead of ourselves. Indeed, the price of higher education — and how that price is paid — is still a huge problem in this country. Federal and student loan debt now exceeds $1 trillion. Today, the average graduate leaves school with nearly $30,000 in debt.

And those are just the students who graduate. For millions of students, America’s university system is not a pathway to success but a debt trap. As of 2011, nearly half the students enrolled in four-year programs — and more than 70 percent of students in two-year programs — failed to earn their degrees within that time, with many dropping out because of the cost. They leave school far worse than they arrived: saddled with debt, but with no degree to help them land a job and pay it off.

What’s more, according to some experts, almost half of low-income college-eligible

Katrina Vanden Heuvel

Special to the Washington Post

students don’t enroll in four-year colleges because of the sticker shock of tuition. And all of this is happening as state and community systems of higher education face unprecedented budget cuts, leaving students with even bigger bills.

A stopgap reduction in loan rates won’t do anything to fix this. We need a whole new model for financing higher education. Fortunately, though Washington remains perpetually paralyzed, some states are demonstrating refreshing creativity and determination in tackling this issue.

Last month, the Oregon legislature passed a bill that paves the way for students to attend state and community colleges without having to pay tuition or take out traditional loans.

Once Gov. John Kitzhaber signs the bill — as he is expected to — the state’s Higher Education Coordination Commission will get to work designing a “Pay It Forward, Pay It Back” financing model, similar to ones used in Australia and the United Kingdom. Under this model, students would pay nothing while in school. Instead, after graduation, alumni would pay a flat 3 percent of their income for the next two decades or so to fund the education of future students. Those who attend for less time would pay a pro-rated amount.

What this means is that the state’s university system should eventually pay for itself. College economics classes have always taught that there’s no such thing as a free lunch. But students in Oregon may soon learn that there is such a thing as a debt-free economics class.

This marks an enormous stride toward eliminating the kind of crushing student debt that burdens 37 million Americans. Pay It Forward, Pay It Back asks the most of those graduates who are best equipped to pay and the least of graduates who can’t.

It also unravels one of the most pernicious moral hazards of a college education: Universities claim to prepare students for the workforce, yet they are paid whether they fulfill that promise or not. And it would eliminate the role of big banks, which have built a lucrative industry from student loans.

This victory is the result of tireless organizing and policy creativity by the state’s Working Families Party, which worked with allies to build a coalition of students, advocates and organizations, from the Economic Opportunity Institute to Moveon.org to the faith-based Jubilee USA. Their success speaks volumes about the power of organizing to effect real change.

Of course, as with any new, sweeping proposal, there are concerns. Some policymakers have balked at the plan’s startup costs, which are estimated to begin at $1.4 billion the first year, though they will decrease as more alumni pay into the system.

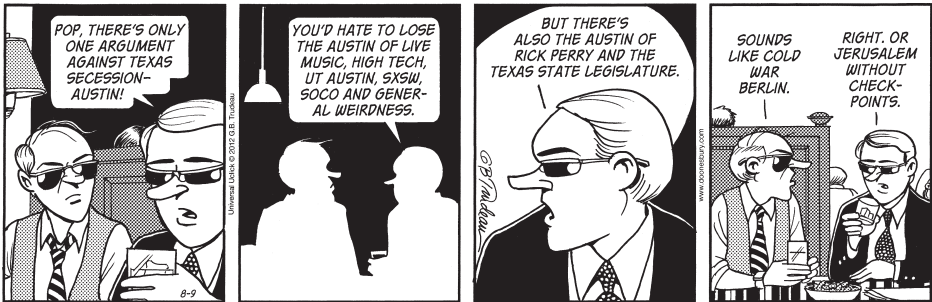

Others worry that linking tuition to income will incentivize colleges to cut down on training for modest-paying, but necessary, professions, such as teaching.

These are valid concerns — but they are far smaller, more tractable issues than the vicious cycle of debt, default and bankruptcy. By and large, Pay It Forward, Pay It Back is an idea with more promise than pitfalls.

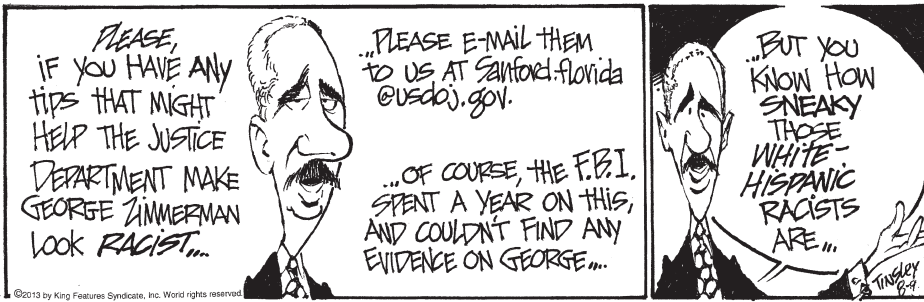

What happens in Oregon, in this case, shouldn’t stay in Oregon. Congress may have given us a short-term answer on student loan rates. But lower rates don’t begin to answer the question of how to fix a fundamentally broken system. Maybe Congress can learn a thing or two from Oregon.

Judge Says He'll Decide Soon if CCA is in Contempt

BY REBECCA BOONE
Associated Press

BOISE • A federal judge says he will decide soon if Corrections Corporation of America should be held in contempt of court for violating a settlement agreement it had with inmates at an Idaho prison requiring the company to increase staffing.

U.S. District Judge David Carter told attorneys for both the American Civil Liberties Union and the Nashville, Tenn.-based private prison company that he planned to review the evidence immediately while it was still fresh in his mind from the hearing.

The hearing was requested by the ACLU of Idaho, which is representing inmates at the CCA-run Idaho Correctional Center. The inmates sued CCA in 2010, saying the facility was so violent prisoners called it “Gladiator School.” CCA denied the allegations but reached a settlement the following year that required widespread changes at the prison, including increased staffing.

The company earlier this year acknowledged it understaffed mandatory minimum posts by 4,800 hours over seven months in 2012. On Wednesday, company officials said that understaffing was during night shifts, and the company didn't investigate day shift patterns.

The settlement agreement was originally set to expire on Sept. 16. But the ACLU wants the judge to extend the agreement — and thus, oversight of the court. The ACLU says the company is still not meeting minimum staffing required under both the settlement and its $29 million contract with the Idaho Department of Correction.

CCA's attorney, Dan Struck, told the judge in closing arguments Thursday evening that CCA has taken meaningful and effective steps to resolve the matter and had already agreed to extend the settlement agreement, but the ACLU's attorney, Stephen Pevar, refused.

“Before we spent thousands of dollars in the last two weeks litigating this issue, CCA offered to extend the settlement. CCA offered to hire Bill Collins to investigate the staffing issue. CCA offered to pay costs associated with filing this action,” Struck said. “Mr. Pevar said no. He wanted a public display and to put CCA in stocks and embarrass CCA.”

Several CCA officials testified about the steps the company had taken to investigate the staffing problems, and said the staffing reports were falsified without the Idaho warden or his supervisors ever suspecting the problem.

Shoshone Falls Flows Diminishing by Tonight

TIMES-NEWS

TWIN FALLS • Flows at the city's stunning Shoshone Falls will decrease rapidly starting today, as the last of Idaho Power's water stored in American Falls Reservoir is released.

The water volume will decrease to about one-fourth of what was going over the falls Thursday.

Idaho Power had been releasing water stored at the reservoir in recent weeks, boosting the water going over the falls and generating electricity as it flowed through the utility's hydroelectric dams on the Snake River.

That power has been crucial to serving peak demand during an unusually hot, dry summer. The stored water will run out today, and flows downstream of American Falls will diminish rapidly.

On Thursday, flows over the falls peaked at about 2,500 cubic feet per second (cfs). By tonight, flows will slow to about 600 cfs.

Upstream, at Milner Dam, flows will be reduced from about 1,800 cfs early today to zero by 4 p.m., as all available water is diverted for irrigation. It takes about five hours for those changes to appear at Shoshone Falls. Spring water and irrigation return flows gradually will build the Snake's volume back to 600 cfs by the time it reaches Shoshone Falls. That water volume is likely to remain unchanged until irrigators are done pumping water.

county Commissioner Paul Christensen had been assigned to negotiate the fiscal 2014 contract for police services, but months of negotiations failed to produce a consensus.

Hawkins declined to comment Thursday, saying, “It's really not a good time.” Christensen could not be reached for comment.

Cassia County Sheriff Jay Heward was on vacation Thursday and also could not be reached.

Said Andersen: “People need to know that it was totally the commissioners' decision to cancel this contract.”

The city agreed to spend $46,000 more than on the current contract, enough to preserve the job of one officer, whose salary was paid through an expiring grant. But the city didn't want to pay $1.5 million and would have been willing to forgo some services for a lower cost, Andersen said.

“If they wanted to pay less and have fewer services, they should have said so,” said Crane.

Andersen said the contract has become a power struggle with the commissioners.

“We came up $46,000. They came down zero. That's not negotiating,” he said. “I feel like it is a battle of wills with them. We made a fair offer.”

“We came up $46,000. They came down zero. That's not negotiating. I feel like it is a battle of wills with them. We made a fair offer.”

Crane said the county negotiated in good faith, and if there was a breakdown, it was a lack of communication on the city's part.

Christensen reported back to county commissioners after each negotiations meeting, he said.

“We quoted a price to the city, and we never heard back from them. Hawkins just kept asking for more cost information,” said Crane.

The county proceeded with its budgeting process using the $1.5 million figure and did not hear back from the city until Tuesday night, when the council voted to approve $1.45 million, he said.

If the city does form its own police department, it

The city of Burley has called a meeting at noon Monday to discuss establishing a police department after negotiations failed over a new law enforcement services contract with Cassia County.

will mean cuts at the sheriff's office, Crane said

“There will be a reduction in officers, and we regret that might happen.”

How many positions might be cut would be impossible to gauge, he said.

“We would have to make reductions in a number of areas at the department.”

If the city forms a new department, Andersen said, it will try to recruit the laid-off county officers.

The contract requires the county to keep providing police services to the city for 120 days after the contract termination Sept. 30, he said.

“We would have six months to put something together. That's very doable.”

Andersen said it's not too late to repair the miscommunications and reach an agreement.

“The city has stated what it's willing to pay,” he said. The city's costs have increased $130,000 over the past two years.

“I have fought to keep this law enforcement contract together,” Andersen said.

He said he likes having an elected official as the head of city law enforcement rather than an appointed chief, which can invite corruption.

“I'm very disappointed in this,” Andersen said. “But if we need to do this, we need to get started so we can get it put together and have a seamless transition.”

Crane said the county was providing $1.9 million in police services to the city.

“I don't feel like the Cassia County taxpayers should have to keep supplementing that,” he said.

CSI Volleyball Opens Fall Practice

BY DAVID BASHORE
dbashore@magicvalley.com

TWIN FALLS • The champs are back on the court — kind of.

The College of Southern Idaho volleyball team opened fall practice on Thursday, but it looked nothing like the squad that claimed the program's 10th national championship last November.

The team that follows a national champion has big shoes to fill. That barely begins to cover it for the 2013 CSI squad, which has 13 newcomers and only one player who set foot on the court last season.

"It's a lot of teaching right now, and that's OK," said eighth-year head coach Heidi Cartisser. "It's a lot of working with them and showing them what CSI volleyball is all about, and getting them into our routines. For a first practice, I was pleasantly surprised."

Of the 15 players who suited up Thursday, only two had any program experience — middle blocker Alyssa Povey and outside hitter Alexandria Johnson, both of whom redshirted in 2012. Libero Braiden Johnston, the only playing holdover from last season's title team, is likely to miss the first tournament or two after she suffered a foot injury over the summer.

All that means is that every spot is officially up for grabs in the next two weeks before the season starts.

"It's a great opportunity for girls to step up and prove themselves," said Povey, who is recovering from an

ACL injury sustained at last season's national tournament, in which she wasn't going to play anyway. "We don't have a lot of time (before the season starts) so we're all trying to improve as fast as we can."

Those 15 in action included a couple of late additions in middle blocker Mercedes Vaughn, a third-year sophomore transfer from the University of Tennessee, and Serbian setter Katarina Kojic. They took the roster spots vacated by Milica Zmiric and Alejandra Isiordia. Zmiric wasn't retained for a second season and Isiordia impressed with Mexico at the U-20 World Championships and signed with an Italian professional club.

The season starts with a home tournament Aug. 22-23.

Thompson Looking to Lead as Sophomore

BY NICK RULAND
nruland@magicvalley.com

BOISE • Redshirt sophomore safety Darian Thompson was one of the first interview subjects of fall camp.

Given that Thompson started the last six games of last season as a freshman, yet finished second on the team in interceptions and then came into camp as presumed fortification for the back end of the defense, one would assume he'd have been with a bit more probing examination.

Instead, he was asked to speak on macro issues normally reserved for coaches and veterans — from the new enforcement rules, to the difference between grass and turf — and hounded on trivialities, asked multiple times about why he changed his number from 35 to 4.

And still, Thompson held serve with the aplomb of a five-year senior, as a shotgun sequence of questions was met with machine gun responses.

"The biggest thing I can do is to help everyone else out with things they might not know."

Darian Thompson

But there's one thing Thompson expounded on without any extra prompting and prodding, perhaps providing a glimpse into what he sees as meaningful.

The question: Is it important for the younger guys to step into bigger roles this year?

In his answer, Thompson chose not to include himself with the group of younger players.

"I'll be able to teach the freshmen, some of the younger guys some of the things we know," Thompson said. "The biggest thing I can do is to help everyone else out with things they might not know. I want to feel like I'm available to them, and if they feel like that, they can come up to me and ask me any question they want to know."

He later added: "It is easy to relate to the younger guys. Not so long ago I was in their position. I'd be in a meeting with the older guys and I wasn't sure if I should ask a question and sound uneducated. I want to reach out my hand and let everyone that it is alright and I'll be there for them."

On a defense projected to start just one senior next year, it's likely to be important for younger players to act like seniors. Count Thompson as one of those.

Practice notes: Safety Jeremy Ioane was a standout in a one-on-one receiver against defensive back endzone drill. Tight end Jake Hardee caught a long touchdown pass from quarterback Joe Southwick in the team portion of practice.

Scott, Furyk Tied for Lead at Oak Hill

ASSOCIATED PRESS

PITTSFORD, N.Y. • With every major, Adam Scott is making a convincing case that he isn't satisfied with just a green jacket.

Scott ran off five straight birdies early in his round at soft and vulnerable Oak Hill, and finished with a 15-foot par for a 5-under 65 that gave him a share of the lead Thursday with Jim Furyk in the PGA Championship.

Scott finally became a major champion at Augusta National in April when he won a playoff at the Masters. Just three weeks ago, he had the lead on the back nine at Muirfield in the British Open until he made four bogeys to fall back. In the last major of the year, Scott at times looked unstoppable.

His five straight birdies quickly put him atop the leaderboard with Furyk, and after a 71-minute delay when storms moved into the area, Scott added a sixth birdie on the par-3 15th to reach 6 under. He was on pace to tie the major championship record at Oak Hill until a three-putt bogey on the 16th.

"Just got on a bit of a roll and hit a few shots close," Scott said. "I didn't have too much putting to do. You've got to take advantage when it happens, because it doesn't happen too much in the majors. Nothing to complain about in 65."

There were hardly any complaints on Oak Hill, a course that has yielded only 10 72-hole scores under par in five previous majors. It's only Thursday, and the players felt as if they got off easy. Rain overnight and humid conditions kept the course soft, and birdies were dropping at an alarming pace.

Except for Tiger Woods. The world's No. 1 player made only two birdies despite playing in the still of the morning, and he watched his round fall apart with a bogey on par-5 fourth and a double bogey on his final hole when his flop shot out of a deep rough floated into a bunker. Woods had a 71, not a bad start at Oak Hill, except on this day.

There were 35 rounds under par, compared with only a dozen rounds in the 60s when the PGA Championship was here 10 years ago. "The round realistically could have been under par easily," Woods said.

Furyk, who won his lone major at the U.S. Open in 2003 at Olympia Fields, has gone nearly three years since his last win at the Tour Championship to capture the FedEx Cup and win PGA Adam Scott, of Australia, watches his tee shot on the fourth hole during the first round of the PGA Championship golf tournament at Oak Hill Country Club, Thursday in Pittsford, N.Y.

Tour player of the year. Still fresh are the four close calls from a year ago, including the U.S. Open.

He was as steady as Scott, rarely putting himself in trouble until the end of the round. Furyk missed the fairway to the right and had to pitch out because of thick rough and trees blocking his way to the green. That led to his only bogey, but still his lowest first-round score in 19 appearances at the PGA Championship.

"Usually disappointed with ending the day on a bogey," Furyk said. "But you know, 65, PGA, is not so bad."

David Hearn of Canada, an alternate until a week ago, had a 66 in the morning. Also at 66 was Lee Westwood, who had his best score ever in the PGA and offered evidence that there was no hangover from losing a 54-hole lead in the British Open last month.

There were no record scores at Oak Hill despite the soft conditions, just a lot of low rounds.

"If you don't hit it in the fairways, then you won't score well," Westwood said. "These guys are good. There are a lot of good players playing in the tournament. Somebody is going to hit it straight, and somebody is going to shoot a good score."

Even Rory McIlroy got in on the act. The defending champion, at the end of a major season that has been a major disappointment, came out firing with three birdies on the opening four holes and made the turn in 32 until back-to-back bogeys. He wound up with a 69.

A resurgent Paul Casey was in the group at 67, while U.S. Open champion Justin Rose, British Open runner-up Henrik Stenson and the ageless Miguel Angel Jimenez were among 11 players at 68.

British Open champion Phil Mickelson wound up with the same score as Woods, only they arrived at 71 on vastly different roads.

Woods had only two birdies. Mickelson shot 71 despite two double bogeys. On the par-5 fourth hole, he hooked his tee shot out-of-bounds and nearly lost the next tee shot in the same place. And on the closing hole, Mickelson looked as if he was back at Winged Foot — wild left off the tees, a reckless attempt into the trees and another double bogey.

He headed straight to the practice range, even summoning coach Butch Harmon down from the Sky Sports television booth.

Scott hasn't won since the Masters, though he has shown full control of his swing. He looks at these next 10 years as a chance to win more majors and establish himself as a major force in his generation.

"I put a lot into my game the last two years with a focus on the big tournaments," Scott said. "Everyone around me has had the same focus, as well. We come here to do business."

From there, a poor 9-iron came up short and into the bunker, and he finally missed a par putt from 5 feet.

"Just one of those holes where I laid up and caught the tree," Woods said. "It was supposed to be way down there if it just happened to get through there, but it didn't. And I stuck a 9-iron into the ground."

Woods didn't have a single birdie chance on the last four holes — a chunked 3-iron off the tee at No. 7, a shot from the fairway into the bunker at No. 8. Even so, he was still at 1-under par and headed for an acceptable start.

That changed on his final hole. Woods hit a 3-wood to the first cut of rough on the right side, the worst place to miss with a tree blocking his view of the green on the dogleg right. He came up short and left, in rough so deep that he was trying to just land it on the green about 20 feet away. He didn't even reach the green, coming up short and into the bunker, and he blasted out to 12 feet and two-putted for double bogey.

For a guy who has struggled on the weekend at the majors, Woods didn't help himself in the opening round.

The good news? It was his lowest score in five rounds at

Twin Falls graduate Kyle Miley won the boys age 16-18 championship at the Idaho Golf Association's junior state tournament this week in Rexburg.

Miley led wire-to-wire, posting under-par rounds on both days to card a final score of 8-under 136, good enough for a five-shot victory.

In the nine-hole ranks, McKade Huft of Kimberly won his third straight IGA Juniors championship, taking the boys age 11-12 championship with a two-day score of 76 (4-over par).

A Lost Opportunity for Tiger in First Round

ASSOCIATED PRESS

PITTSFORD, N.Y. • Oak Hill was there for the taking. Tiger Woods gave away too many chances.

Woods had everything he needed to start the final major championship of the year on a good note. The conditions were soft, still and ideal for scoring. He was one shot out of the lead Thursday morning in the PGA Championship when he made the turn, and there was nothing to suggest he would stray too far away.

Instead, he staggered off the course with double bogey on his last hole for a 1-over 71. That's not bad on a course where there typically is a premium on par. It just looked ordinary compared with the 28 rounds at par or better from other early starters in the opening round.

A wasted opportunity? "A little bit," Woods said.

That was a phrase he mentioned three times when going over a round that featured four tough putts for par, but a round that should have been in red numbers.

Oddly enough, it was his best stretch of golf that stalled his round.

After making the turn at 2 under with a simple bunker save on the 18th hole —

Tiger Woods watches his drive on the 11th hole during the first round of the PGA Championship golf tournament at Oak Hill Country Club, Thursday in Pittsford, N.Y.

Woods had 11 putts on the back nine — he hit his approach 12 feet below the cup on No. 1. His shot into the par-4 second hole caught the side of a hill and settled 4 feet away as the largest crowd at Oak Hill roared. Woods drilled his tee shot on the 214-yard third hole to 10 feet left of the hole.

He missed every putt, and he missed them badly. The worst of them was at No. 2, when Woods said he should have taken more time except that his group was on the clock. It was a side hill putt, difficult even from 4 feet on the greens at Oak Hill. Woods was so tentative that the ball fell sharply to the right and never even touched the cup.

A momentum killer?

"A little bit," Woods said.

The real killer was the par-5 fourth hole, the only time Woods removed that Tiger head cover off his driver. After several rehearsals with his swing, the ball sailed well to the right, Woods simply picked up his tee. There was no emotion. It was almost as if he expected to miss the fairway. What he didn't count on was his next shot out of deep rough clipping a tree and spitting sideways into the fairway, costing him some 30 yards of roll.

Doubleheader Set for Rocky Mountain Challenge Series

BY LINDA BRITTSAN

For the Times-News

Two nights of racing expected to play a major role in the 2013 Rocky Mountain Challenge Series championship are set for today and Saturday at Magic Valley Speedway.

Hot off of two wins at Meridian Speedway in late July, Trevor Cristani is in prime position to gain even more ground on the rest of the field this weekend. Cristiani now leads his nearest competitor, Jonathon Gomez, by more than 100 points in the standings.

Since moving to Meridian from northern California less than a year ago, the 18-year-old has taken the RMCS circuit by storm. In six races this season, Cristiani has accumulated three main event wins and two runner-up finishes, including a May 4 win at MVS.

"I just like to go into each race with the perspective of coming out with a solid finish and leaving with the car in one piece," Cristiani said. "I don't like to tear my car up and I don't like to tear anyone else's car up either. Hopefully this weekend we won't have any issues and we can go on to the last race and get the win in the series."

Tonight features a 75-lap main event race sponsored by Papa John's. Saturday evening the drivers will take on the RMCS 100.

After a frustrating weekend at Meridian, Gomez is hoping to cash in on all the laps awaiting him at his hometown track.

"We have had some pretty bad luck," he said. "But we like the track at Magic Valley and have always had great success there. Hopefully we can turn it around this weekend and get ourselves back into contention."

Currently third in the standings, defending RMCS champion Bruce Quale admitted that Cristiani is "having a great season and will be hard to beat for the championship." Quale added that he and his crew "are going to give it everything we have to catch him."

Along with Gomez and Quale, local driver Hannah Newhouse, who is right behind Quale in the standings, is also hoping to make a dent in Cristiani's lead. Newhouse is also looking to add to her point advantage in the A-1 rookie of the year race.

This weekend's events mark the final appearance for the RMCS at MVS this season. The RMCS championship will be crowned Sept. 7 at Rocky Mountain Raceway located near Salt Lake City.

In NASCAR Whelen Weekly Racing Series action, the Super Stocks, Hornets, Stingers and Thunderdogs will do battle Friday night while the Super Stocks, Street Stocks and Hornets make the rounds Saturday evening.

Qualifying begins at 6:30 p.m. tonight with green flag racing starting at 7. Saturday night qualifying will begin at 5:30 p.m. with racing starting at 6.

25 Years Following Unrest, Myanmar Begins to Cope

BY TIM SULLIVAN & YADANA HTUN
Associated Press

YANGON, Myanmar • Twenty-five years later, you can still see the fear in the eyes of the doctors — two young men carrying a schoolgirl, her blouse drenched in blood, through streets where soldiers were brutally crushing pro-democracy protests.

The photograph, thrust to prominence when it ran on the cover of Newsweek, came to symbolize the defeat of a 1988 uprising in the nation then called Burma. The revolt's end cemented the power of the military, sent thousands of activists to prison and helped bring a future Nobel Peace Prize laureate, Aung San Suu Kyi, to prominence.

Only now, a generation after the events of the day known as “8.8.88,” is Win Zaw beginning to talk about it all. He is the doctor in the back of the scene, his glasses slipping down his nose as he struggles to carry the bloody girl. Today, two years after Myanmar's military junta handed over power to a quasi-civilian government, he still hesitates to summon that long-ago day. And for many people in Myanmar, their own painful history remains little more than a whisper. “The door is only open a little bit,” says Win, now 48, taking long pauses as he tries to find the right words. “I want to talk, for the sake of history, and all those who died. In my heart, I feel like this is the right time. But still I feel insecure.”

It is a story from so many nations that have struggled with the aftermaths of their own horrors. When is the right time to push long-hidden conversations into the open, to deal with the past, to cope?

Argentina faced this in the years after the Dirty War of the 1970s, when the nation tried to move past decades of military oppression. It happened in Cambodia, where the savagery of Pol Pot's regime trained an entire nation to remain silent.

It has happened repeatedly in modern China, where the 1989 Tiananmen crackdown remains a largely forbidden topic, and where even the half-century-old historical realities of the “Great Leap Forward” — Mao Zedong's disastrous policies that led to widespread famine and the deaths of tens of millions in the late 1950s and early 1960s — have come into the open only recently.

“We avoided even making reference to it,” said Dali Yang, a political scientist at the University of Chicago who was born and raised in China. “There's still a constant tug of war, between the censors and the people who want to tell the truth ... Subtly, gradually, though, this is beginning to change.”

When change does come, though, where does it come from? How do fear and silence eventually get out of the way so that a country can openly discuss its own history? Some of it is simply the power of time. Powerful politicians die. History's traumatic events are eclipsed by more recent traumas. Small steps toward truth cascade into more. Eventually, details begin to emerge.

Myanmar, like China, is a nation where dictatorial rule has become less harsh, though it remains far from truly democratic. And Myanmar's history has bred generations of pessimists.

After Gen. Ne Win seized control in a 1962 coup it went from being one of Asia's wealthiest nations to one of the world's poorest. Resentment over Ne Win's corrupt and inefficient policies began to grow in 1987 and simmered until Aug. 8, 1988, when a nationwide strike led to widespread protests and quick military repression. A civilian president, named amid the bloodshed, lasted less than a month before being ousted in a Sept. 18 coup.

No government officials were ever held accountable for the violence, which left an estimated 3,000 people dead.

Twenty-five years after the crackdown, much remains unspoken in Myanmar. Thousands disappeared into the country's prisons during military rule, some for many years and often for doing nothing more than distributing leaflets. The torturers of the interrogation centers remain free, as do the jailers and the men who gave them orders.

“If the government recognizes past atrocities and commits to accountability, the anniversary of 8.8.88 could be a pivotal moment in addressing decades of repressive rule,” Brad Adams, Asia director for Human Rights Watch, said in a statement. “It could even be the start of a new era if the military and government move from denial to admission and from impunity to justice.”

Yemen Official: US Drones Kill 12 in 3 Airstrikes

SANAA, Yemen (AP) • The U.S. has sharply escalated its drone war in Yemen, with military officials in the Arab country reporting 34 suspected al-Qaida militants killed in less than two weeks, including three strikes on Thursday alone in which a dozen died.

The action against al-Qaida in the Arabian Peninsula, as the Yemen branch is known, comes amid a global terror alert issued by Washington. One Mideast official says the uptick is due to its leaders leaving themselves more vulnerable by moving from their normal hideouts toward areas where they could carry out attacks.

The U.S. and Britain evacuated diplomatic staff from the capital of Sanaa this week after learning of a threatened attack that prompted Washington to close temporarily 19 diplomatic posts in the Middle East and Africa.

Thursday's first reported drone attack hit a car carrying suspected militants in the district of Wadi Ubaidah, about 175 kilometers (109 miles) east of Sanaa, and killed six, a security official said.

Badly burned bodies lay beside their vehicle, according to the official. Five of the dead were Yemenis, while the sixth was believed to be of another Arab nationality, he said.

The second drone attack killed three alleged militants in the al-Ayoon area of Hadramawt province in the south, the official said. The third, also in Hadramawt province, killed three more suspected militants in the al-Qutn area, he added. All the airstrikes targeted cars, added the official, who spoke on condition of anonymity because he was not authorized to talk to the media.

The drone strikes have become a near-daily routine since they began July 27. So far, they have been concentrated in remote, mountainous areas where al-Qaida's top five leaders are believed to have taken refuge.

DEATH ON THE NILE

With violent persecution of Christians and Jews on the rise, Islamists demanding the return of the Morsi government, and the Obama Administration struggling to broker democracy amidst anti-Americanism, all is not well in Egypt.

Egypt's Coup Puts Fearful Christians in a Corner

It was nighttime and 10,000 Islamists were marching down the most heavily Christian street in this ancient Egyptian city, chanting “Islamic, Islamic, despite the Christians.” A half-dozen kids were spray-painting “Boycott the Christians” on walls, supervised by an adult.

While Islamists are on the defensive in Cairo following the military coup that ousted President Mohammed Morsi, in Assiut and elsewhere in Egypt's deep south they are waging a stepped-up hate campaign, claiming the country's Christian minority somehow engineered Morsi's downfall.

The hostility led a coalition of 16 Egyptian rights groups to warn on Wednesday of a wave of violence to come, and to demand that the post-coup authorities protect the Christians who are 10 percent of the population, and suffer chronic discrimination.

Nile-side Assiut, a city of one million people 250 miles south of Cairo, dates back to the pharaohs. The New Testament says Mary, Joseph and the infant Jesus passed through as they fled the infanticidal King Herod. Today, its Christian fears are compounded by the failure of authorities to curb the graffitispraying and the Islamists' demonstrations, which have gone on almost nightly since the July 3 coup that ousted Morsi. “They (the Islamists) will not stop as long as they are left to do as they please without fear of accountability,” said Hossam Nabil, 38, who owns a jewelry store on Yousry Ragheb Street, where the demonstration passed on Tuesday night. “They are many and one day they will trash our stores.”

Like other Christians with stores on the street, Nabil shuttered his establishment until the protesters had passed.

“They (the marchers) run their index finger across their throats to suggest they will slaughter us, or scream Morsi's name in our faces,” he said.

At least seven Christians have been killed since the coup, one of them in Assiut. Scores have been injured.

US Messaging Mess in Egypt Complicates Diplomacy

The Obama administration's efforts to promote democracy in Egypt are being complicated by what many Egyptians see as mixed and confusing messages coming from Washington, exacerbating already high anti-American sentiment and threatening broader U.S. goals in the region. Any administration might find it difficult to safely navigate the intricacies of Egypt's current political tumult, but some U.S. officials concede they have been unable to communicate a coherent policy. Officials also complain that their task has been made more challenging by the delicate line they must toe and by members of Congress who have inserted themselves into the high-wire diplomacy with one of America's most important Arab allies.

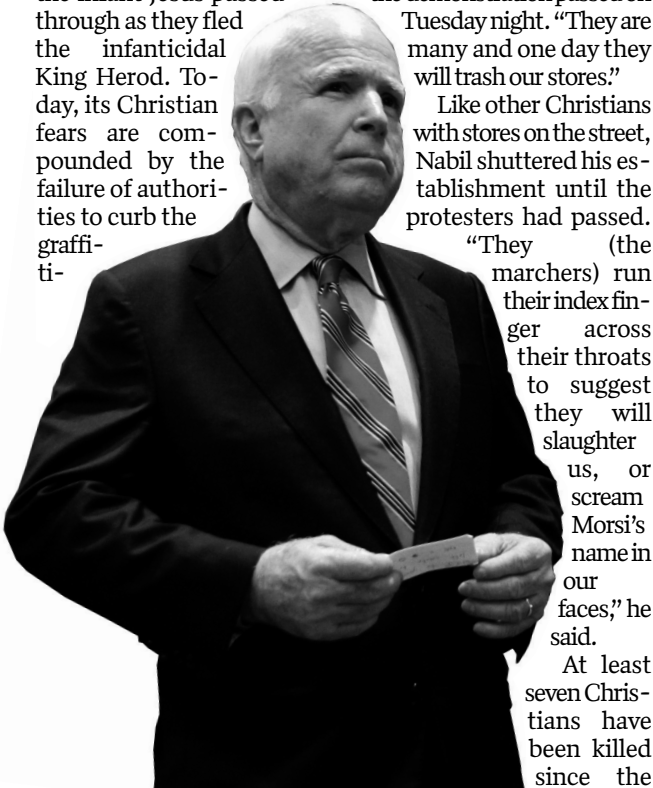

Egypt has been a cornerstone of Mideast stability for decades, notably because of its peace deal with Israel and its protection of the vital Suez Canal. The administration has been eager to remain engaged, but it is trying to balance its support for representative government with U.S. national interests. In Egypt's crisis, the two do not meld well and staying involved has required what some see as a compromise in democratic principles.

McCain Worries Egypt May Suffer More Violence

Fresh off a contentious meeting in Cairo, Sen. John McCain expressed concern Thursday that Egypt may be headed toward a period of prolonged violence if the Arab country's military and the Muslim Brotherhood cannot start a political dialogue.

McCain and fellow Republican Sen. Lindsey Graham pressed their case over meetings this week with Egypt's top army brass, interim political leaders, youth groups and allies of Egypt's ousted and now imprisoned president, Mohammed Morsi. And the 2008 presidential runner-up acknowledged that top Gen. Abdel-Fattah el-Sissi was unhappy with some of the “straightforward” suggestions they offered.

Da Vinci Notebook Lands at National Air and Space Museum

BY JESSICA GOLDSTEIN
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON • As part of the Year of Italian Culture in the United States, Leonardo da Vinci's "Codex on the Flight of Birds" will make its second appearance on American soil at the Smithsonian's National Air and Space Museum. The notebook, on loan from the Biblioteca Reale in Turin, Italy, dates back to approximately 1505 and contains da Vinci's schemes, scribbles and sketches about bird flight and though he was about 400 years early to the party the possibility of mechanical aviation.

"Leonardo da Vinci materials very rarely travel, even within Europe," said Peter Jakab, chief curator at the Air and Space Museum. "To have a da Vinci item come to the United States for a public exhibit is extraordinary."

The codex will be digitized so visitors can flip through each of the 18 folios on monitors. It's one of da Vinci's only notebooks that is dedicated to a single subject. In it, he explored "issues about aerodynamics, the importance of lightweight structures in flight, the position of the pilot and how he would need to fly the airplane," Jakab said. "He even hints at the force that Newton would later define as gravity."

Da Vinci died more than 300 years before Orville and Wilbur Wright were born, yet as a nod to "the foreshadowing quality" of da Vinci's work, this codex will be on display in the same exhibition space as "The Wright Brothers & The Invention of the Aerial Age," whose main attraction is the Wrights' 1903 Flyer: the first successful powered aircraft on the face of the Earth.

"When you look at what the Wright Brothers did," Jakab said, "you see these concepts that da Vinci had identified in rudimentary form appearing in the work of the people who actually created the airplane in the 20th century."

Da Vinci "lived a 15th century life, but he really saw the modern world in his mind's eye. And many of the things that he did were not only without peer in his own time, but were so prescient for the distant future."

The codex will be on display Sept. 13 through Oct. 22.

Oman Struggles to Save Arabia's Last Leopards

TAWI ATAIR, Oman (AP) • Once thriving across the Middle East, the Arabian Leopard is now considered critically endangered by the International Union for Conservation of Nature. It estimates there are fewer than 200 in the wild with the largest single population of 50 to 100 in the mountains of southern Oman. There also are small populations in Yemen and Israel's Negev desert.

The animals' range is increasingly fragmented by development, overgrazing and herders who shoot or poison them lest they prey on their goats, cows and camels. Leopards in Yemen are under threat from poachers who supply a vibrant exotic animal trade in places like the United Arab Emirates.

"They are at a critical point," said Andrew Spalton, a Briton who advises the Oman government on environmental affairs and has worked on leopard conservation for 16 years. "Inevitably, they are going down. That's because of loss of habitat. Where they are hanging on are areas that people find most difficult to get into with their livestock and their four-by-fours," Spalton said.

AT A GLANCE

Togo Ivory Boss Implicates others in Trafficking

For more than three decades, Emile N'Bouke operated a small, unmarked shop on the corner of a busy street in downtown Lome that received few customers and kept irregular hours. Wood sculptures and iron masks could be seen through the barred storefront window, but activists say N'Bouke's real job was serving as "The Boss" of Togo's ivory trafficking trade. And as early as 1976, N'Bouke was presenting himself as an ivory expert and former U.N. consultant who could find loopholes around any international ban.

When authorities arrested him this week, they found some 1,500 pounds of ivory in his possession, a fraction of the inventory he had allegedly moved during decades of illegal trafficking. It was the first such operation in a country that has recently emerged as a main transit point for ivory bound for Asia and other markets.

N'Bouke told The Associated Press on Thursday that he was a "victim of injustice" in a misguided crackdown, claiming he had in fact been trying to help Togolese officials identify "the real ivory traffickers" in the country.

US, Philippines to Open Troops Talks

Philippine officials say they will soon begin negotiations with the United States on a larger American military presence to help deter what they say is increasing Chinese aggression in Philippine-claimed waters in the South China Sea.

In a letter to Philippine congressional leaders, the secretaries of national defense and foreign affairs said that allowing American troops to have an "increased rotational presence" will help the country attain a "minimum credible defense" to guard its territory while it struggles to modernize its own military, one of Asia's weakest.

A larger American presence would also mean more resources and training for responding to disasters in a nation often battered by typhoons and earthquakes, Defense Secretary Voltaire Gazmin and Foreign Secretary Albert del Rosario said in their letter, a copy of which was obtained by The Associated Press on Thursday.

"The Philippines will shortly enter into consultations and negotiations with the United States on a possible framework agreement that would implement our agreed policy of increased rotational presence," Gazmin and del Rosario said.

Muslims Celebrate Ramadan End, Strife Casts Shadow

Millions of Muslims paid respects at ancestral graves, shared festive family meals and visited beaches and amusement parks Thursday to mark the end of the fasting month of Ramadan, but violence and political tension overshadowed holiday joy in hotspots like Egypt, Yemen and Afghanistan.

The three-day Eid al-Fitr holiday, which caps Ramadan, also highlighted the long-running divide between Sunni and Shiite Muslims.

Many Sunnis began celebrating Thursday, while Shiites were to mark the holiday Friday, based on different views about sighting the moon.

In recent months, sectarian tensions have risen between Sunnis and Shiites, with the two sides increasingly lined up on opposite sides of Syria's civil war.

Ramadan and Eid al-Fitr are a time of increased religious devotion, and some Muslims said they're particularly distraught over discord among the faithful during the holiday season.

US Extends Ban on Gems Imports from Myanmar

The Obama administration on Wednesday extended a ban on imports of rubies and jade from Myanmar, reflecting worries about the powerful military's continuing involvement in the murky industry based in conflict-wracked border regions.

Washington remains concerned about human rights abuses against ethnic minorities and the role of the army in Myanmar despite democratic reforms that have seen a shift from decades of authoritarian rule. The reforms have led to a dramatic improvement in U.S. relations with the Southeast Asian nation, also known as Burma, and the overall trend remains a positive one for the government of President Thein Sein.

President Barack Obama issued Wednesday's executive order to extend the gems ban because wide-ranging sanctions legislation lapsed when it was up for renewal in late July. The original sponsor, senior Republican Sen. Mitch McConnell of Kentucky, announced in May he would not seek to extend the 2003 legislation because of Myanmar's democratic progress.

McConnell was for years one of the harshest critics in Congress of Myanmar's military rulers and a fervent supporter of opposition leader Aung San Suu Kyi. The Burmese Freedom and Democracy Act he sponsored had imposed a broad ban on all imports from Myanmar. Obama waived its provisions in November other than on gems.

Jerome High School Marching Band members practice on Thursday.

PRACTICE, PRACTICE, PRACTICE

Jerome High marching band starts season with a new director.

BY JULIE WOOTTON
jwootton@magicvalley.com

JEROME • At the crack of dawn, Jerome High School's marching band members already were hard at work last week.

The sound of the drumline practice filtered out of the band room, mixing with music from other instruments Thursday, Aug. 1, at Jerome Middle School.

Outside, eight members of the color guard twirled their orange flags while they practiced marching.

Last week was the first week of camp for the marching band. Days started bright and early at 7:30 a.m., and the student musicians kept working until noon.

The color guard and drumline started rehearsals a couple of weeks ago for a few hours a day.

They have been marching a lot and getting their routines down, said Color Guard Capt. Danielle Heuer, 17.

"We've done a lot already," she said. A senior, Heuer said she has loved being in color guard and wants to make the last year fun.

A New Director

Changes are on the horizon for the Ambush of Jerome High sophomore KayLee Day practices the Marching French horn on Thursday.

Tigers this year – namely, a new director. Hiroshi Fukuoka starts in his new position Aug. 19, the first day of the band's field show camp.

Last week, he was traveling cross-country from Louisville, Ky., in time to join the band at Tuesday's Jerome County Fair parade.

Most recently, Fukuoka directed several community bands at the University of Louisville.

He grew up in Pocatello, graduated from Century High School and earned a bachelor's degree at Idaho State University.

Then he obtained his master's degree in wind conducting from the University of Louisville.

Here, he said, he wants to at least double the 48 marching band members.

Fukuoka said he'll strive to provide a high-quality education to band students so they can learn lifelong skills such as leadership and co-operation.

"I'm hoping to inspire the way I was inspired with music in the school system," he said.

Whether students continue in music after high school or do something else, Fukuoka said, he hopes they'll be curious and pursue their passion.

Jerome High's marching band traditionally has been tight with the local community, he said, and he intends to keep it that way.

Until Fukuoka starts, former band directors Gordon Smith and Sam Stone are keeping the group going during summer rehearsals as they prepare for parades and learn a field show.

Smith – who will assist the band this season – said he was part of the interview committee to hire a new director. Students have even had a chance to talk with Fukuoka on the phone multiple times this summer.

"We're really excited about him," Smith said. The band's ranks have decreased in recent years. When Smith started as director in 2006, the band had the same number of students as now.

Smith said he built the program to 99 students. But after he stepped down, last year was a rough transition.

Sam Stone, who was band director last year, is leaving to take a job in Parma.

Smith said he's confident that Fukuoka will build the program up.

For more than 50 years, Watson has proven his pure, down-to-earth country voice through hits such as "Fourteen Carat Mind," "Speak Softly," "Paper Rosie," "Sometimes I Get Lucky and Forget" and "Farewell Party."

Gooding County 4-H and FFA Members Gear Up for Fair Week

BY JULIE WOOTTON

GOODING • As the Gooding County Fair approaches, 13-year-old Dustin Andrus is walking his pigs and brushing his steers' hair to make sure they look good on show day.

The 4-H club member spent a year raising heifers, market steers, pigs and goats.

To get his pigs ready, Dustin walks them.

"I'm just making sure they're getting enough exercise for them to still move as good as they can," he said.

Dustin also is working with his steers on where they set their feet during shows, and he brushes the heifers and steers.

He's no stranger to showing animals, having won numerous awards in 4-H and other livestock shows over the years. Something new for him will be showing a goat for the first time at the fair.

About 280 children and volunteer leaders in 4-H and the Future Farmers of America (FFA) are gearing up for this year's Gooding County Fair.

"The fair just gives those kids an opportunity to show off what they've been doing throughout the year," said Sarah Butler, county 4-H program coordinator.

As the culmination to a year's work, students must exhibit something during the fair. That can range from woodworking to an animal they've raised.

Even before the fair officially kicks off, 4-H and FFA members are hard at work.

"Really, our fair week is two weeks," Butler said.

Children finalize their projects and get their record books done.

They also get an opportunity to practice being interviewed – a skill they'll need later when they apply for scholarships and jobs, Butler said.

Some 4-H and FFA members even go above and beyond by participating in contests that aren't required for their project, Butler said.

Those include an oral presentation contest and a style review for children who created clothing for their project.

Even with high feed costs, Butler

Getting Ready for a New Season

The Jerome High band is gearing up for this year’s field show, “The Outlaws,” featuring music from “Robin Hood,” “Billy the Kid” and “The Lone Ranger.” The show will get back to the band’s traditional style – telling a story out on the field with characters, Smith said. A field show typically lasts eight to nine minutes. The band has to be on and off the field within the 15-minute football halftime – quite a feat given how many props they use. An incredible group of parents travels with the band and helps out, Smith said. “You can’t do something like this without a good booster program,” he said.

What’s on the Schedule for the Band this Season?

Later this month, students will attend a field show camp. September will be busy with plenty of public performances and football games. In October, the band competes. The ensemble typically performs at a field show contest at Idaho State University in Pocatello, as well as at one or two competitions in the Boise area. The season wraps up in November. That month, the band puts on its popular Tiger Indoor Marching Extravaganza. That vaudeville-type show includes comedy and skits, and it provides a nice respite from the stress of the season, Smith said. Because south-central Idaho has few band programs, Jerome’s band has “kind of taken on the role of being the Twin Falls area marching band,” Smith said. Over the past decade, Jerome and Burley high schools have had the two largest marching bands in the area, he said. In recent years, Jerome band students have performed at Disneyland, a rose parade in Portland and around the United States. Band and choir students will return to Disneyland for performances in March 2014.

Practice, Practice, Practice, Practice

During a rehearsal Aug. 1, band students did a teamwork exercise. Then Smith called them to attention. “Band, atten-hut,” he said. Students stood silently as Smith talked to them about the importance of leadership. “When a leader is needed, it shows up,” he said. A few students had drumsticks in their back pockets or saxophone straps around their necks. Toward the end of rehearsal, students divided up for 25-minute sectionals to practice music and Color Guard routines. Gordon encouraged them to move while playing the music for at least part of the practice. Senior Adrian Blair, 18, co-captain of the Color Guard, said he’s excited about the competition in Pocatello. Sophomore Sarah Cahala, 15, said she’s looking forward to meeting the new band director. Seniors such as Gilda Duarte, 17, want to make their last year “as good as possible.” Inside the band room at Jerome Middle School, drum majors Jeri Moore and Samuel Paytosh practiced conducting – including cut-offs, cues and dynamics. Moore, a senior, said they help the band through music and marching. She said she’s excited to be a “big metronome” on the field, keeping time for the band. Paytosh, a sophomore, said he looks forward to seeing how the band will improve over the season, musically and with the field show. As drum majors, he said, “We’re the servants to the band.” One goal of band camps is to teach students the skills they’ll use all year, Smith said. They don’t have music for their field show yet, but they were preparing last week for the Jerome County Fair parade. Band students are taught lessons that go beyond marching and musical technique. Most of them won’t pursue a music career, Smith said. So there’s a push to teach discipline, teamwork and work ethic – values that students can take with them regardless of what they decide to do.

Sun Valley Center Arts & Crafts Festival Returns

TIMES-NEWS

KETCHUM • Spend a day shopping, browsing and watching artists at work at the Sun Valley Center Arts & Crafts Festival. This year’s event is today through Sunday, Aug. 11, at Atkinson Park in Ketchum. Now in its 45th year, the festival features more than 100 art booths, live music, artist demonstrations, activities for families and children, and food from local vendors. The three-day festival has grown from a small gathering of artists in 1968 to one of the top 100 outdoor juried festivals in the nation. Hundreds of artists apply every year for the chance to display and sell their handmade fine arts and crafts. Among returning artists this year are the 2012 best of show and best of sculpture artist Vicki Banks, best of ceramics artist Don McWhorter and best of fiber artist Starr Hagenbring. The children’s activity area is open from 11 a.m.-2 p.m. each day. Over the weekend, children will have the chance to make summer pinwheels, clay creatures and sun hats. Parents are asked to sign their children in and remain with those under 8 to assist in the projects. Artist demonstrations for all ages are at 1-4 p.m. each day. Feel free to ask questions and check back later to see how their work is progressing.

A REALITY SHOW WITH DEPTH: LIVE OCEAN EXPLORATION

BY SETH BORENSTEIN
AP Science Writer

WASHINGTON • Vicious fights! Stunning beauties! Surprises around every corner! Yes, it’s reality TV but with a lot more depth – as much as 10,000 feet. It’s live coverage of deep-sea exploration off Nantucket and tens of thousands of people are tuning in. They’re watching an eel suddenly attack a squid, ooohing-and-aahing over hot pink starfish and listening as excited researchers discover a canyon so downright alien that sea life lives on methane escaping from the sea floor instead of sunlight. They’re watching science as it happens, however weird and wild. “We’ve been calling it Deep Sea TV,” said National Marine Fisheries Services scientist Martha Nizinski, in a ship-to-shore interview. “It’s much better than any other reality show being broadcast.” For years, the world of the deep sea floor has mostly been the province of scientists. A handful of researchers would huddle on a ship and watch the video from below, take notes, and two or three years later write a scientific paper. Now, as the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration’s ship Okeanos Explorer and its robotic submarine explore thousands of feet deep, the view is broadcast live, usually from 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. EDT, for other scientists and everyday people to follow along to the tune of 50,000 visits. Leona McKinney of Hiram, Ga., started watching from home over three weeks ago. “I’ve watched every day since then. In fact, I’m watching now. I’m hooked on it,” she said in a phone interview Wednesday. The expedition, which costs about $40,000 a day, continues until Aug. 16. As the robotic sub roams the Atlantic Ocean off Massachusetts, scientists can call in or send messages with requests to see this or that. In past years, the ship explored the Pacific Ocean, but the next several missions will be off the East Coast with officials considering a deep Puerto Rico trench dive in the winter – with live coverage, of course. Aboard the ship, researchers do more than watch; they explain the science and the action for viewers. “It’s a bit like color commentary from sports,” said U.S. Geological Survey scientist Amanda Demopoulos, whose voice is often heard calling the underwater action. “These are mysterious ecosystems. We don’t always know what we’re going to find.”

Fair and Rodeo Season Returns to Mini-Cassia

lwelch@magicvalley.com

BURLEY • Cowboys on bucking broncos, tantalizing fair food and dizzying rides will draw thousands of people to the Cassia County Fair and Rodeo Aug. 12-17.

About 25,000 people visit the fair each year. Admission is free.

“In a small town like this, the community just loves to come together to see friends and their fellow residents, past and present,” said Sam Yoshida, president of the Cassia County Fair Board. “We take very small steps making any changes to the fair because it’s been so successful in the past few years. The last thing we want to do is ruin a good thing.”

Yoshida said the major change this year, besides behind-the-scenes improvements to safety features and facility upgrades, is the addition of free entertainment on the hypnotist’s stage.

“The hypnotist will still perform free, three times a day, but during other times the stage will be open to local talent,” said Yoshida.

The concert Tuesday will feature country music singer Aaron Tippen.

“This concert is going to be really good,” said Cory Parish, fairgrounds manager.

There will be entertainment each night, except Monday, with free admission to team ranch sorting Wednesday.

Local thrill seekers will try their hand during the wild cow ride Thursday and Saturday. The kid’s calf scramble also will be Thursday.

Brown Amusements carnival opens Tuesday.

Parade Marshals Chuck and Delta Skaggs will lead the Cassia County Fair & Rodeo Parade starting at 10 a.m. Wednesday.

Parish said more paid parking was added this year at the fairgrounds, which can be accessed from Hiland Avenue.

“It’s well worth a couple of bucks to come in and park a little closer,” said Parish.

Hiland Avenue will be blocked off near the fair so motorists wishing to use the parking will come from the north across the railroad tracks.

“If you look at the number of people in our county and the percentage that attend our fair, it’s pretty incredible,” said Yoshida. “I’ll put our fair up against anyone’s.”

simpler things,” he said. “Singing was something we did all the time, mostly in church.”

And his career started strictly by accident.

“I did some amateur things when I was young, going to school,” he said. “I was playing in different clubs starting in 1962 and had a day job too, never thinking anything would happen professionally.”

He ended up in Nashville doing some recordings. The song “Love in the Hot Afternoon,” released in 1974, gave Watson his first big break, and Capitol Records signed him to a long-term contract.

Yet, he said, “Farewell Party” is the most requested song of his career.

“I’ve never played Jackpot before,” Watson said. “We want to invite everyone out, and we’re gonna try our best to do just exactly the right songs for them and the ones they want to hear. It’s gonna be a great night for us and hopefully for them too.”

Tickets — $20, $25 and $30 — can be purchased by calling Cactus Petes Hotlines at 866-667-3386 or 1-800-821-1103.

Unexpected Lawn and Yard Ideas for Late Summer
by Joe Cooper, All About Lawns Columnist

Fertilizing, aerating, and weeding are all pretty predictable late summer lawn maintenance trends. (And they're good ones). But consider a few other, perhaps more surprising late summer ideas for your lawn. These can help you get the most from your lawn space (both present and future) and get your lawn in good shape for fall.

Hate your lawn? Replace it. The idea of getting an entire new lawn could seem like overkill, but it's actually easier than it sounds. And it could be worth the extra expense if you just haven't been able to restore those annoying brown patches. If you live in an area where you'll enjoy warm temperatures for another month at least, this can be a great idea before fall sets in. On the other hand, if you're in a northern state where temperatures will start dropping in September, you'll want to act fast or hold off until next year.

Not motivated to aerate or dethatch? Be lazy. Did you know there are liquid products that can have similar effects to aerating, dethatching, and soil conditioning? Check out your local hardware store for products like this, which you can attach to your hose. Skip the manual labor and use this strategic sprayer.

- Before you spray, be sure to mow your lawn to about half of its mowing height, helping the liquid product reach and penetrate the soil more effectively.

Brighten your spring lawn plan with bulbs. Fall can be a great time to stalk on bulbs you plan to plant later, especially the popular ones that tend to sell out once winter wears off. Here are a few of those choices:

- Daffodils
- Tulips
- Peonies
- Freesia

Not a green thumb? Try bulbs that are easy to grow and let yourself off the hook a little.

There are other things you can do to plan ahead, like performing maintenance on your mower and other power tools

(so that winterizing them is easier come late fall). But don't forget to sit back and enjoy your summer lawn, too - after all, that's why it's there.

LEGAL NOTICE
The Magic Valley Regional Office of the Idaho Department of Fish and Game has determined that there is a high likelihood that Thorn Creek Reservoir in Gooding County will be dry or nearly dry by late summer. Drought conditions, lack of runoff into this water and continued high ambient air temperatures have led to this determination. Fish in this water will have a high likelihood of perishing as water levels drop and conditions become unsuitable.
Therefore, fish bag and possession limits will be removed on Thorn Creek Reservoir in Gooding County, effective August 3, 2013 through November 30, 2013. Fish may be taken by any method except firearms, explosives, chemicals, or electric current; effective August 3rd through November 30th, 2013. In accordance with Section 36-401, Idaho Code, a valid Idaho fishing license is required to salvage fish.
Copies of Order 13-33 are available at the Idaho Department of Fish and Game headquarters, 600 South Walnut, PO Box 25, Boise, Idaho 83707.

Today is Friday, Aug. 9, the 221st day of 2013. There are 144 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight:
On Aug. 9, 1974, Vice President Gerald R. Ford became the nation's 38th chief executive as President Richard Nixon's resignation took effect.

TODAY IN HISTORY

On this date:
In 1842, the United States and Canada resolved a border dispute by signing the Webster-Ashburton Treaty.

In 1854, Henry David Thoreau's "Walden," which described Thoreau's experiences while living near Walden Pond in Massachusetts, was first published.

In 1862, during the Civil War, Confederate forces drove back Union troops in the Battle of Cedar Mountain in Culpeper County, Va.

In 1902, Edward VII was crowned king of Britain following the death of his mother, Queen Victoria.

In 1936, Jesse Owens won his fourth gold medal at the Berlin Olympics as the United States took first place in the 400-meter relay.

In 1942, Britain arrested Indian nationalist Mohandas K. Gandhi; he was released in 1944.

In 1944, 258 African-American sailors based at Port Chicago, Calif., refused to load a munitions ship following an explosion on another ship that killed 320 men, many of them black. (Fifty of the sailors were convicted of mutiny, fined and imprisoned.)

In 1945, three days after the atomic bombing of Hiroshima, Japan, the United States exploded a nuclear device over Nagasaki, killing an estimated 74,000 people.

In 1969, actress Sharon Tate and four other people were found brutally slain at Tate's Los Angeles home; cult leader Charles Manson and a group of his followers were later convicted of the crime.

In 1982, a federal judge in Washington ordered John W. Hinckley Jr., who'd been acquitted of shooting President Ronald Reagan and three others by reason of insanity, committed to a mental hospital.

In 1988, President Ronald Reagan nominated Lauro Cavazos to be secretary of education; Cavazos became the first Hispanic to serve in the Cabinet.

In 1995, Jerry Garcia, lead singer of the Grateful Dead, died in Forest Knolls, Calif., of a heart attack at age 53.

Ten years ago: The Army fired up its first chemical weapons incinerator located near a residential area, outside Anniston, Ala., to destroy two rockets loaded with enough sarin nerve agent to wipe out a city. Dancer-actor Gregory Hines died in Los Angeles at age 57.

Five years ago: Todd Bachman, the father of 2004 volleyball Olympian Elisabeth "Wiz" Bachman, was stabbed to death by a Chinese man in Beijing in an apparently random attack just hours after the start of the Olympic Games. (The assailant took his own life.) Mariel Zagunis led a U.S. sweep of the women's saber fencing for the first American medals of the Games. Comedian Bernie Mac died in Chicago at age 50.

One year ago: The United States began a landmark project to clean up dioxin left from Agent Orange at the site of a former U.S. air base in Danang in central Vietnam, 50 years after the defoliant was first sprayed by American planes on Vietnam's jungles to destroy enemy cover. At the London Games, Usain Bolt won the 200 meters in 19.32 seconds, making him the only man with two Olympic titles in that event. The U.S. women's soccer team won the gold medal, avenging one of its most painful defeats with a 2-1 victory over Japan. Mel Stuart, 83, an award-winning film documentarian who also directed "Willy Wonka & the Chocolate Factory," died in Los Angeles.

DEAR ABBY: My father-in-law died two weeks ago. The services were beautiful. Many people sent flowers, but one arrangement — a bouquet of white flowers — arrived anonymously. I didn't think much about it, just that someone wanted to express sympathy. Now my mother-in-law has become frantic with concern about the flowers. She sobs over not knowing who sent them and — we think — suspects they came from an old or not-so-old flame.

DEAR ABBY Jeanne Phillips

My in-laws were married for more than 50 years, and it is heartbreaking to see her compound her grief with these thoughts. We have suggested various reasons that someone might have sent the flowers anonymously, but she refuses to accept them.

Is sending flowers this way unusual? Or are there good reasons to do it? For the record, is it even good manners to send flowers to a funeral anonymously? Or is my mother-in-law's reaction normal?

— GRIEVING IN GEORGETOWN,
TEXAS

DEAR GRIEVING: Your mother-in-law is grieving. She is fragile right now, and possibly not thinking straight. A card may have been sent with the bouquet that was somehow lost in transit.

That she was married to her husband for 50 years and now suspects he was unfaithful because of a bouquet of flowers at the man's funeral is a sad reflection on their marriage. She should discuss this with her spiritual adviser, if she has one, or a grief therapist.

DEAR ABBY: I am in my early 30s and have been married for five years. My husband and I decided to have a baby, and five months ago I found out I was pregnant. When I told my mom the great news, she wasn't happy to hear it. She doesn't care. All she cares about is how "fat" I'm going to get.

My mother never wants to talk about anything baby-related. If I complain about an ache or pain, she quickly says, "It's because you're fat!" The last time I went to the OB/GYN for a checkup, Mom didn't even ask if everything was OK. All she said was, "How much weight have you gained?"

It hurts me so much that she treats me and her future grandchild this way. I almost feel like having this baby was a mistake. Please help me. I don't know what to do anymore.

— ALMOST IN TEARS IN OHIO

DEAR ALMOST IN TEARS: Stop depending so much on your mother's approval and you'll have a happier pregnancy. The person you should talk to about your weight is your OB/GYN. If your weight is such that it might affect your health or your baby's, you need to know it ASAP. Your doctor can refer you to a nutritionist if you need guidance about your diet.

Your relationship with your mother doesn't appear to be particularly positive. As you grow closer to motherhood, talk more with your girlfriends, talk more to your husband and less to your mother.

DEAR ABBY: I don't go to nightclubs often, so I'm curious as to what the protocol is for this. Sometimes, in the ladies' room, there is a woman there with toiletries, gum, cosmetics, etc. Before you can get your own, she puts soap in your hand and gives you a paper towel. There is a bowl on the counter for people to leave tips. The club manager says she isn't an employee of the club, but simply looking to make tips. I understand this.

My question: Am I supposed to tip her just once for the evening, or each time I use the ladies' room?

— INQUISITIVE
FLORIDA

DEAR CLUBBER: Tip the attendant each time you use the bathroom and she hands you the soap and towel — the standard rate is 50 cents to a dollar. However, if you tip the person generously the first time, you shouldn't feel obligated to do it again if you need to return.

IF AUGUST 9 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: Those you think are merely fair weather friends will prove more than fair during the next 4-6 weeks. A romantic experience might inspire you to do bigger and better things. Get all your business, financial and job-related ducks in a row during September, when your good sense, energy level and financial decision-making is at its best. Maintain a low profile, don't make waves, don't press your luck, and don't make any major changes or decisions during November and December.

HOROSCOPE

Jeraldine Saunders

ARIES (March 21-April 19): The horizon can always grow bigger. Time spent with a new acquaintance could yield valuable insights that could totally change your outlook on things. Physical exercise releases pent up energy.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): New doesn't always mean better. Someone may try to shake things up by implementing a whole new system. Unless the previous system was completely broken, you may ask, "Is this trip really necessary?"

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Don't shy away from invitations to spread your social wings. Give in to the lure of hot spots where you're likely to meet new and interesting people and find exciting adventures.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Make reservations for two. Put the work week behind you and give the object of your affection some much-needed attention. The more spontaneous the activity, the more exciting it's likely to be.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): You get what you pay for. Go for quality over quantity, as one sturdy item is far more valuable than several shoddy items. Giving into an adventurous urge may lead you to strange new places.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Keep the schedule open. Don't waste time making plans for the evening, as a phone call or knock at the door will take care of that for you. You'll do far better in a group than on your own.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22.): Strut your stuff. Put on your best outfit and go out with the gang for an evening of fun and merriment. Utilize your charm and wit and everyone will be hanging on your every word, but don't expect to find Mr. or Ms. Right.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Carve out your niche. You'll find your greatest satisfaction in small, intimate gatherings rather than chattering out local hot spots tonight. Better still would be a one-on-one rendezvous with the object of your heart's desire.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Luck be a lady tonight. Being in the right place at the right time could lead to a fortuitous meeting with a business contact that will provide lucrative opportunities. You won't meet anyone of note if you stay home.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Don't knock it until you try it. New insights may quell prejudices and inhibitions and have you trying something you've never considered before. Don't let spending get out of hand.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Live and let live. Don't try to talk others out of doing something you don't approve of; if you don't like it doesn't mean others can't. Gift your significant other room to breathe.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March. 20): Spending too much time in the spotlight attracts moths. You may be the life of the party and extremely appealing to the opposite sex, but just make sure the princes or princesses who come your way aren't frogs.

"I bend but I do not break."

— Jean de La Fontaine

Most of the rules in bridge have an underlying grain of sense to them. Equally, it is almost impossible to construct a rule where one cannot find an exception. A typical rule that is generally but not always right is the prohibition against giving a ruff-sluff. Today's deal shows when a defender can break that rule.

North-South had an optimistic but straightforward auction to slam, though North's decision to set up a game-force with a relatively balanced hand persuaded South to overbid by using Blackwood, when perhaps cue-bidding would have kept the contract low. In general, the use of the Jacoby two-no-trump response should be restricted to hands better than a dead-minimum opening bid.

Declarer took the diamond king lead, drew trump, eliminated the spades, and exited with a diamond to leave West on play in the six-card ending. Before she led to the next trick, she paused to count out declarer's distribution. South was marked with having started with 2-5-2-4 distribution, so a ruff-and-discard would not advance declarer's cause — either the clubs were solid to start with, or there would still be a loser. Conversely, touching clubs might surrender the defenders' trick in that suit if East had the club queen and declarer played for split honors. So West exited with the diamond 10, and declarer had to lose a club at the end.

ANSWER: You have the shape and values to bid one no-trump here. The bid of a major in response to an overcall can be made on a four-card suit, but not one as weak as this, particularly when you have a sensible alternative, and certainly not after the negative double by your RHO, which suggests he has both majors.
