LABOR OF LOVE

Work of Magic Valley residents knits community together

BY BRIAN SMITH
bsmith@magicvalley.com

TWIN FALLS • Americans work. The construction of a world superpower is a testament to the drive instilled in our ancestors, most who stepped off a boat penniless and found their daily bread by the pull of their muscles. Like wasps building an intricate hive, the American worker has for decades strived to make the world a better place and to provide a better quality of living for the next generation. What we have accomplished is nothing short of miraculous. All have contributed, from the inventors and industry tycoons, to the factory workers and construction crews. But one does not read about the miners who unearthed the metals needed to power Steve Jobs' inventions, the person who collected Albert Einstein's garbage, or the electrician who wired the dorm room where Mark Zuckerberg invented Facebook. For that reason, the Times-News took the opportunity this Labor Day to speak with those people who make our community run, those whose work might not otherwise be celebrated. The farmer, whose endless labor feeds hungry mouths. The welder and fabricator, whose labor holds together factories. The nurse, whose selfless care for others casts a safety net. The sewer maintenance man, who does the work we'd all rather forget about. These people, while they may differ in politics and perspective, agree in the value and virtue of working hard. They take pride in what they do. They find beauty in their daily efforts. But they also take the time to enjoy the fruits of their labor — from riding motorcycles, to golfing, to spending time with loved ones and singing in a band. Labor Day, in that sense, is a moment to recreate and find the enthusiasm to continue our work, no matter how prominent or unnoticed it may be.

I farmed until I was 43 years old. It was about '93 or '94 is when I started in the construction business, basically.

They'd bring me pipe, I'd install it. I got plates in both femurs, plastic hip, plastic knees, this hip is redone and plates on both ankles. Even with all that in me I went right up until I had to put this right knee in, then that finished me. That's it. I'm tired. So, they put me in the office. A little estimating, answer the phone, check on prices, see where or—

I've always been a trencher. I don't mind getting dirty. Doesn't bother me. My dad worked construction his whole life. I can't be in an office. People usually crinkle their nose up a little bit. Of course, I'm usually a little more colorful when I tell them what I'm doing. It's very imperative for public health. We have over 200 miles of sewer main lines in Twin Falls. The majority of our time is all maintenance and repair. This September will be my 24th year. I was in Gooding for 18 (years) and I've been here for five. Started on the garbage truck in Gooding where we still slung it by hand. We are going to trainings a lot too and keeping up our certifications. It is not just working in poop, there's a lot of other things we need to know. There's a lot of knowledge

There's not a moment of my day I am not thinking of someone else. Nursing is not easy. It is not just putting a patient in a room for a doctor. Nurses are the backbone of any clinical office. We are always watching out for critical values to come in on lab work, warning signs on patients as they walk in for appointments. Check marks, cross your Ts, dot your Is. I've been here for eight years and I walk in everyday thinking ... if I can change somebody's day today and make them a healthier person tomorrow, then I know I have done my job. That's what makes me want to come back. For me it is a comforting factor. Emotionally, you have to be able to read patients. You have to be able to open up yourself for them to be able to open up to you. You see a ton of stuff in the office that can drag you down.

Kelley Fire near Featherville 11,568 Acres and Growing

BY JOE CADOTTE
jcadotte@magicvalley.com

FEATHERVILLE • Firefighters lined the upper south fork corridor of the Boise River Sunday, laying hoses and other protective measures to prevent the Kelley Fire from reaching homes near the north side of the river, said David Chevalier, Kelley Fire information officer. Crews were trying to prevent the wildfire from jumping across the Boise River where seven houses stand between 100 and 200 yards from the shore. The wildfire grew more than four times its size since Friday, when it was measured at around 1,000 acres. Widespread flames threatened the Baumgartner Campground Saturday, one of the most pristine in the area, and caused additional road closures to portions of Forest Road 166 and the Mountain Home Ranger

Flash Flood Watch in Effect for South-Central Idaho

BY JOE CADOTTE
jcadotte@magicvalley.com

TWIN FALLS • Monsoon type conditions are expected to move north from Nevada into Idaho today and Tuesday, possibly dumping up to half an inch of rain per hour in parts of south-central Idaho, said Valerie Mills, meteorologist with the National Weather Service.

A flash flood watch is in effect for southern Twin Falls County, not including the City of Twin Falls, from Monday afternoon through Tuesday afternoon. A flood watch is in effect for Cassia County through midnight Tuesday morning and parts of Elmore, Camas and Blaine counties early Tuesday morning through early Wednesday. The flood watch is in place to alert people for the possibility of a warning, said Mills.

“If you’re camping, pack up and go to high ground or go home,” she said. “If you’re out driving and come to a flooded roadway, turn around. Don’t drown. Be prepared that there is a threat coming for heavy rain and conditions could develop in a couple spots, for now it’s just conditions favorable to heavy rain.”

Flash flooding is not unusual for south-central Idaho, she said.

“There is a monsoon push with flash flooding every year in southern Idaho. People should watch the latest forecasts and be prepared to take action if a warning is issued.”

District, Chevalier said.

“The guys did a miraculous job saving the campground,” he said.

Despite its massive growth potential, the Kelley Fire is not expected to put people, animals or anything of value in eminent danger.

Jennifer Myslivy was among 391 firefighters who extinguished volatile areas Sunday.

“We saw three significant columns (Sunday) in the Deadwood Creek area. I know there was a spot west of Boardman Creek, it was picking up pretty good,” Myslivy said.

“Some of the areas were backing down on the south side of the Boise River. There were Hotshot crews watching that the fire didn’t go over the river.”

Three Type I Incident Management helicopters circled the wildfire, making 5,000 gallon drops of water and retardant Sunday night.

Much of the burning landscape is under a flood watch from the National Weather Service. Up to half an inch of rain per hour Tuesday could significantly increase containment of the Kelley Fire, which was around 7 percent contained Sunday night.

“The rain is going to change everything and it all depends on what is going to happen. We have high expectations the rain will benefit the fire,” Chevalier said. “The rain will increase the containment in an immeasurable amount. We can be hopeful because any rainfall or increased humidity is a bonus. It’s like adding extra firefighters, but it might hamper air operations that would try to continue drops during rainfall.”

Lightning caused the blaze Saturday, Aug. 24 seven miles southeast of Featherville. Spruce, fir, sagebrush and grass were burning as the fire spread to the east Sunday night. Firefighting efforts at times was considered “extremely difficult” as 18 mph winds spread flames over rough terrain.

Chevalier encourages people to call 877-208-2202 for more information or www.inciweb.org.

Chobani Pulls Yogurt from Store Shelves

BOISE • Yogurt maker Chobani says it has pulled products from stores following reports of yogurt that didn't remain fresh as long as it should have.

The Idaho Statesman reports a check of Fred Meyer, Albertson's and Winco stores on Saturday in the Boise area found that Chobani yogurt had been removed.

It's unclear if the removal extends to other states, where customers reported bad yogurt.

Chobani on its website says it took action after hearing what the company called isolated quality concerns with certain cups of yogurt.

The company says it's working voluntarily with retailers to remove yogurt and deliver fresh replacements.

Chobani opened a huge yogurt plant in Twin Falls late last year at a cost of $450 million.

The company on Sunday didn't return a request for additional information from The Associated Press.

Utah Man Killed near Glenns Ferry

GLENNS FERRY • Idaho State Police say a 32-year-old Utah man died after being hit by a semitrailer on Interstate 84 near Glenns Ferry in south-central Idaho.

Police say Jason Richmond of Midvale, Utah, was helping a tow truck operator remove his disabled 2012 Jeep Patriot from the Interstate at about 8:15 p.m. Saturday.

Police say 57-year-old Volodymyr Boyko of Portland, Ore., was traveling eastbound on the highway when he struck Richmond and his vehicle.

Richmond was pronounced dead at the scene.

Idaho State Police are continuing to investigate the crash.

Team to Probe Jail Death of Lawmaker's Son

POCATELLO • An eastern Idaho sheriff says the investigation into the death in jail of the 26-year-old son of an Idaho state lawmaker has been turned over to a special investigative team.

Bannock County Sheriff Lorin Nielsen tells the Idaho State Journal that the tri-county investigative team is taking over with detectives from Bingham and Jefferson counties in charge.

Bannock County Jail officials in Pocatello say Jason VanOrden of Pingree died early Friday. He's the son of Rep. Julie VanOrden of Pingree.

Nielsen says the death "was consistent with suicide."

Jason VanOrden was arrested last month following a standoff with police in Pocatello in which he told officers that he had a knife and a gun.

He has several previous arrests, including driving under the influence and domestic battery.

Idaho First Lady Dislocates Shoulder at Rodeo

BOISE • Idaho Gov. C.L. "Butch" Otter says first lady Lori Otter dislocated her shoulder while calf roping at a rodeo in Oregon and faces surgery.

Otter spokesman Jon

Hanian says the mishap occurred in mid-August on the couple's anniversary. Hanian says the first lady had just roped a calf when her shoulder became dislocated.

The Spokesman-Review reports that Otter revealed the injury last week during the opening of his annual Address to the Business Community.

Otter told the crowd of 600 that after the injury they went to a hospital where the doctor put his foot on the first lady's armpit and jerked on the arm to put her shoulder back in place. The governor says he couldn't get away with doing that.

Police: No Suspect at Large in Officer Slaying

DRAPER, Utah • The shooting that killed a Draper police officer early Sunday was caused by one or both of the civilians who are hospitalized with critical injuries, police said.

Investigators do not believe any additional suspects were involved in the gunfire that killed Sgt. Derek Johnson, Draper City Police Chief Bryan Roberts said at a news conference Sunday afternoon.

The incident began around 6 a.m. when police received an unintelligible radio call from Johnson, Roberts said, followed by 911 calls from residents reporting gunshots near 13800 South and Fort Street.

Officers arriving on the scene found Johnson had been wounded, along with the man and woman.

Johnson was transported to Intermountain Medical Center, where he later died.

The man and woman, whose identities have not been released, are still in critical condition.

Roberts said 32-year-old

Johnson was a father, husband and an eight-year veteran of the Draper City Police Department.

"He was a very dedicated, devoted and highly decorated police officer," he said.

Draper City Mayor Darrell Smith, who appeared with Roberts at the news conference, said he met with Johnson's wife and family at their home earlier Sunday.

"They're wonderful people who have suffered a tremendous and tragic loss," he said.

Johnson worked in police investigations, patrols and community policing efforts and always had a positive attitude, Smith said.

TV Figure David Frost Dies

Veteran broadcaster famous for drawing post-Watergate apology from Nixon.

THE WASHINGTON POST

Sir David Frost, the veteran broadcaster who famously drew a grudging post-Watergate apology out of former President Richard Nixon, died Saturday aboard a cruise ship sailing from England to the Mediterranean. He was 74.

His death, from an apparent heart attack, was confirmed in a statement his family released to the BBC.

Known for his laid-back but probing style of interviewing, Mr. Frost gained access to an astonishing array of world figures during a five-decade career. His subjects included seven U.S. presidents and eight British prime ministers, and his A-list included Prince Charles, Nelson Mandela, Billy Graham, Muhammad Ali, Orson Welles, Truman Capote, the Beatles, Henry Kissinger and Vladimir Putin.

Ferociously prepared but charming to the point of servility, he had a knack for getting his interviewees to relax and open up. “He could be – and certainly was with me – a good friend and a fearsome interviewer,” tweeted David Cameron, the British prime minister.

Former President Richard M. Nixon, right, with broadcaster David Frost in California in 1977.

The coup of Frost's career came in 1977, when he persuaded Nixon to sit with him (for a fee and a share of the broadcast profits) in a series of interviews over several weeks. Nearly 29 hours of taped conversation – Nixon's first interview after resigning in disgrace in 1974 – was distilled into four 90-minute programs.

At one point, Nixon said of his Watergate machinations “that when the president does it, that means that it is not illegal”

Once Frost had established a rapport with Nixon, he cannily appealed to Nixon's sense of history and remorse, telling the leader that unless he acknowledged his abuses, “you're going to be haunted for the rest of your life.”

Mandela Leaves Hospital, Still in Critical Condition

JOHANNESBURG •

Nelson Mandela went home in an ambulance on Sunday after nearly three months in a hospital that became the focus of a global outpouring of concern, but authorities said the health of the former South African president remained critical and sometimes unstable.

The return of the 95-year-old leader of the anti-apartheid movement to his home in an affluent neighborhood of Johannesburg allows his family to share time with him in a more intimate setting.

The office of South African President Jacob Zuma said Mandela will receive the same level of intensive care that he did in the hospital, administered by the same doctors.

Zuma's office said the team of doctors treating Mandela, also known by his clan name Madiba, is "convinced that he will receive the same level of intensive care at his Houghton home that he received in Pretoria. His home has been reconfigured to allow him to receive intensive care there."

The statement also said: "If there are health conditions that warrant another admission to hospital in future, this will be done."

Protests Highlight Fast-Food Economics

American fast-food workers often earn about $7.25 an hour to make the $3 chicken sandwiches and 99-cent tacos that generate billions of dollars in profit each year for McDonald's and other chains.

Thousands of the nation's many millions of fast-food workers and their supporters have been staging protests across the country in the past year to call attention to the struggles of living on or close to the federal minimum wage. The push raises the question of whether the economics of the fast-food industry allow room for a boost in pay for its workers.

The industry is built on a business model that keeps costs — including those for labor — low so companies can make money while satisfying America's love of cheap, fast food.

Support for Path to Citizenship Gaining Ground

As Congress wrestles with immigration legislation, a central question is whether the 11 million immigrants already in the United States illegally should get a path to citizenship.

The answer from a small but growing number of House Republicans is "yes," just as long as it's not the "special" path advocated by Democrats and passed by the Senate.

"There should be a pathway to citizenship — not a special pathway and not no pathway," Rep. Jason Chaffetz, R-Utah, told ABC 4 Utah after speaking at a recent town hall meeting in his district. "But there has to be a legal, lawful way to go through this process that works, and right now it doesn't."

Many House Republicans say people who illegally crossed the border or overstayed their visas should not be rewarded with a special, tailor-made solution that awards them a prize of American citizenship, especially when millions are waiting in line to attempt the process through current legal channels.

It's far from clear, however, what a path to citizenship that's not a special path to citizenship might look like, or how many people it might help.

The phrase means different things to different people, and a large number of House Republicans oppose any approach that results in citizenship for people who now are in the country illegally.

Naval Academy Sex Assault Case Continues

Defense attorneys for three U.S. Naval Academy midshipmen charged with sexually assaulting a fellow student finished lengthy cross-examination of the woman on Sunday.

She testified that Midshipman Josh Tate, one of the men charged in the case, told her shortly after an April 2012 party that the two had sex after she had been drinking heavily. She says that during a subsequent phone call he said he'd only been kidding about having sex with her.

Tate, 21; Eric Graham, 21; and Tra'ves Bush, 22, are accused of sexually assaulting the woman at an alcohol-fueled off-campus party.

The woman has testified that she has no memory of having sex with any of the three men, but later was told by Tate that the two had sex. She said he also told her she had a sexual encounter with Graham.

US Boosts Case for Intervention

ASSOCIATED PRESS

A demonstrator in Cairo, Egypt Sunday holds placards depicting President Barack Obama during a protest against possible U.S. military action against Syria.

Support in Congress split as vote to give Obama go-ahead to use military force looms.

WASHINGTON (AP) • The Obama administration geared up for the biggest foreign policy vote since the Iraq war by arguing Sunday that new physical evidence shows the Syrian government used sarin gas in a deadly August attack. With its credibility on the line, the United States must respond, the country's top diplomat said.

Members of Congress, deadlocked on just about everything these days and still on summer break, expressed sharply divergent opinions about whether to give President Barack Obama the go-ahead he requested to retaliate with military force against the Assad regime, and what turning down the commander in chief could mean for America's reputation.

Presenting Obama's case for military action, Secretary of State John Kerry gave a series of interviews on Sunday news shows outlining the latest information the administration has received about the Aug. 21 attack in the Damascus suburbs that the U.S. says killed 1,429 civilians, including more than 400 children. He said samples collected by first responders added to the growing body of proof that Syria's government launched a chemical weapons attack.

"Samples of hair and blood have been tested and they have reported positive for signatures of sarin," Kerry said. "Each day that goes by, this case is even stronger. We know that the regime ordered this attack. We know they prepared for it. We know where the rockets came from. We know where they landed. We know the damage that was done afterwards."

Sarin, which affects the nervous system and is toxic in liquid or gas form, can be delivered in missiles, bombs, rockets or artillery shells. The gas is outlawed under international rules of warfare. The reference to hair and blood samples were the first pieces of specific physiological evidence cited by any member of the administration, which previously spoke only about an unnamed nerve agent.

Kerry's assertion coincided with the beginning of a forceful administration appeal for congressional support, now that Obama has declared he will await approval from the House and Senate before ordering any cruise missile strikes or other action.

On Capitol Hill, senior administration officials briefed lawmakers in private to explain why the U.S. is compelled to act against President Bashar Assad's government. Obama, Vice President Joe Biden and White House Chief of Staff Denis McDonough also made calls to individual lawmakers. Further classified meetings were planned over the next three days.

Sen. John McCain of Arizona, a leading Senate hawk and the candidate Obama defeated for the presidency in 2008, said he'd discuss Syria with the president at the White House Monday.

Obama must convince skeptical Americans and their representatives in Congress of the need for more U.S. military action in the Muslim world after a decade of war in Iraq and Afghanistan.

He also is trying to assemble an international coalition, but finding it hard to land partners. They fear becoming involved in a conflict that has claimed more than 100,000 lives in the past 2½ years and dragged in terrorist groups on both sides of the battlefield.

Syrian government involvement in purported poison gas attacks. Syria's state-run news agency SANA quoted Assad saying that his government is capable of confronting a U.S. strike, but did not carry his exact comments.

UNITED NATIONS: U.N. spokesman Martin Nesirky said that Secretary-General Ban Ki-moon asked the head of the U.N. chemical weapons inspection team to expedite the analysis of tests from samples collected from its visits to alleged chemical weapons attack sites in Syria. He said two Syrian government officials are observing the process as mandated by guidelines that safeguard the samples' chain of custody. Nesirky declined comment on when results were expected.

FRANCE: Francois Fillon, France's ex-prime minister and leading figure in the opposition UMP party, said the French parliament should get the same privilege the U.S. Congress will have to vote on Syria intervention. France's parliament is scheduled to debate the issue Wednesday, but no vote is scheduled. President Francois Hollande backs Obama's decision for a strike. The French constitution doesn't require such a vote unless and until a French military intervention lasts longer than four months.

VATICAN: Pope Francis condemned the use of chemical weapons and called for a negotiated settlement to the civil war in Syria. Francis spoke with anguish about Syria: "My heart is deeply wounded by what is happening in Syria and anguished by the dramatic developments" on the horizon, an apparent reference to the U.S. and France considering a military strike against the Syrian regime.

MEDITERRANEAN SEA: Five U.S. Navy destroyers were in the eastern Mediterranean Sea — armed with dozens of Tomahawk cruise missiles, which have a range of about 1,000 nautical miles (1,151 miles, 1,852 kilometers) and are used for precise targeting. Obama announced Friday that "we are prepared to strike whenever we choose."

IRAN: Iranian state TV said an Iranian parliamentary delegation in Damascus visited with Syrians allegedly injured in chemical weapons attacks that the Assad regime blames on rebels. They were also expected to meet with the Syrian prime minister and foreign minister.

ISRAEL: Israeli Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu Israel's prime minister tried to soothe a jittery nation unnerved by the standoff between the U.S. and Syria, saying Israel is "calm and self-assured" and ready for "any possible scenario." More Israelis lined up to receive free gas masks, fearing Israel could be targeted in retribution if Syria is hit by a punitive strike.

TURKEY: Syrian refugees continued crossing the border into Turkey, despite the delay of a possible U.S. military strike targeting Assad's government. Refugee Mohammed Yaser said arms shipments to rebels would hurt Assad more than a U.S. strike: "If they give us weapons, we can deal with it in one week."

Analysis: Decision to Pull Back Tests the President's Credibility

WASHINGTON (AP) •

For more than a week, the White House had been barreling toward imminent military action against Syria. But President Barack Obama's abrupt decision to instead ask Congress for permission left him with a high-risk gamble that could devastate his credibility if no action is ultimately taken in response to a deadly chemical weapons attack that crossed his own "red line."

The stunning reversal also raises questions about the president's decisiveness and could embolden leaders in Syria, Iran, North Korea and elsewhere, leaving them with the impression of a U.S. president unwilling to back up his words with actions.

The president, in a hastily announced statement Saturday in the White House Rose Garden, argued that he did in fact have the power to act on his own. But faced with the prospect of taking action opposed by many Americans, the commander in chief tried to shift the burden and instead round up partners on Capitol Hill to share in that responsibility.

"While I believe I have the authority to carry out this military action without specific congressional authorization, I know that the country will be stronger if we take this course, and our actions will be even more effective," Obama said. "We should have this debate."

Plenty of Pleased Employees in Magic Valley

TIMES-NEWS

TWIN FALLS • Asked to report any great bosses, plenty of readers of magicvalley.com and the Times-News Facebook page enthusiastically cited their employers on the week leading to Labor Day. Here are some of their responses.

“I have, without a doubt, the greatest bosses and co-workers,” wrote James Rabe. “My kidneys failed in early 2012, and when it came time for a transplant, it timed out during the busiest time of the season. December is crazy busy in radio, and with everyone wanting time off, it gets even crazier.

“I told my boss I could probably put off the transplant ’til January, but he made it clear my health came first. Other co-workers skipped vacations and worked double time to make up for my TWO MONTH absence from work. At no time did I fear for my job. In fact, I still received a paycheck during those two months of activity. I have to say, when it comes to a great workplace, bosses and co-workers, I hit the lottery and am enormously fortunate.”

Burley High School Principal Carolyn Hondo won praise from Jaysa Fillmore, who wrote: “I have the privilege of working with Dr. Carolyn Hondo ... Dr. Hondo challenges me everyday to be a better teacher and is always there when I need suggestions, a kind word, or a kick in the pants! She loves her job, and her passion for education and kids is infectious!”

Says a comment from Ravish Sakshamya: “I have also a boss. Mr. Himlal Rai is my boss. He is very genius. He always help me. I think Himlal Rai one of the best managers in my company”

“I have two wonderful bosses at An Angels Touch Home Care,” wrote Salina Timmons. “Their names are Teri and Megan. You could not ask for anyone sweeter, and I have never had a boss as caring and wonderful as these two ladies.”

Turning the tables, Kaleb Mikal Henson Quintana wrote: “Tina Whitman is an amazing employee. She goes above and beyond her job duties. She is an amazing team player, and our store would be lost without her.”

“Ed Sabia is a great boss,” reported Michael Angelo Villanueva. “He allways tries to help out his employees with work or home situations.”

“Big shout out to my boss, Paul Castronova, IT Director at North Canyon Medical Center,” wrote Lori Nebeker, IT systems analyst at the center. “Paul goes above and beyond to make sure I have everything I need to get my job done accurately. His knowledge of Information Technology is vast, which is very helpful to me in many situations related to my work. Thanks Paul!”

ders are, procurement. A little of everything.

I feel sorry for a factory worker who has to stand there and do the same thing day after day. Mine is so varied here.

I had two farms and my son wanted to farm his whole life — that’s all he ever wanted. There wasn’t enough income for myself and him, so I basically turned ’em over and rented the farms to him.

We’ve lost a lot of it. The workforce now is no comparison to what it was, say, 10 years ago. ... Doesn’t have the work ethics, the determination, be on time, you strive to be there for the employer.

It was drilled in at an early age — this is your responsibility, this is what you do. Sun comes up, sun goes down. Black and white. No maybes. You did it or you paid the consequences.

It’s pride of the accomplishment.

It came from my dad mostly, but from 45 (years-old) on, I learned my own ethics.

I could retire now, but I don’t know what I’d do in the winter.

I used to hunt, but I can’t because of my legs. Now I golf, fish and ride a motorcycle. On one trip we hit eight states. Golfing and sight-seein’. You need the break. Sometimes mental fatigue makes you a lot more tired than physical fatigue.

When I was in college, I was setting the dies on a big old press ... I just reached down to the roller with my fingers and he just about knocked me down. He says, ‘You don’t live long enough to make all the mistakes yourself.’ He held up his hand. He rolled it, came off the bolt and it took his finger off.

If you pay attention to what you are doing and learn from others and have good work ethic, you will succeed.

It is not a glamorous job.

A lot of people know it comes out of the tap and they know it leaves the house when they flush the toilet. Public knowledge — it would be nice if there was more out there, but you can’t blame Joe Public for that.

I can look back and say I feel good about what I have done.

It has helped me grow up in a number of different ways. First off, just being able to keep the job. You go through your wild stages when you are younger and then starting new families and stuff. My main focus is on having that retirement when I get done.

A self-pride thing. I have been able to keep moving in the right direction. A lot of people will say, ‘You could do more than that.’ I’m proud of what I do.

I spend more time around these people than I do my own family. If you can’t get along with them, you might as well kick rocks because it is not going to work.

My wife and I ride (motorcycles) and I play in a local band (Dirty Johnny, main vocalist) that’s been playing around here for quite a few years. Been playing with the same guys for 25 years, I’ve done it since I was 15. My dad was a musician. My son is a musician, he’s in the Navy currently.

So many people are geared toward going to college and making a lot of money. A lot of times that doesn’t happen. Keep your eyes open and have a broader range of things you want to do.

Nobody wants to be on the end of a shovel all day, but in the reality of it, if people like us weren’t around, things would fail.

You have to make your career your career. If you are not fully engaged in that, if you are not happy when you walk through the door, then you might as well walk out.

Everyone knows that I am a nurse, so I get a lot of phone calls. Just being an advocate for everybody has made me a stronger person.

I’ll be at the grocery store, a little girl will look at me and say, ‘Look, mom, there’s my doctor.’

When something is wrong with me, I try and push it off. I try to be the backbone, the support for everyone around me. Sometimes that’s not always good. I need to care for myself as well.

I have a more positive attitude on life.

We camp, we boat, we ride ATVs, I love to take my kids to do stuff. Any opportunity we get, we are doing stuff with my family. My husband and I have been together for 13 years. It is a good life.

The hardest part is the willingness and eagerness to go on. You have to have that strive to continue.

Go volunteer. Go get out in the community. Get out there and see what the healthcare field is about.

It is not about the money. You have to have that mental capacity to say, ‘I’m a caring person. I want to help this patient and not just be a person in the clinic.’

Be a mentor for yourself, as well. Stop in to see how someone else does it, or teach someone else. It kind of opens up your eyes.

me and I didn’t listen.

Marvin: One of the biggest things that’s changed is I don’t sweat the small stuff anymore. I don’t get near as excited about hail storms or stuff anymore. It happens? It happens. I’ve lived through them for 40 years, I’ll live through the next one.

Marvin: In farming, there’s always tomorrow. I have never seen anything yet, in all my years, that took us totally out.

Daniel: Growing up, I always thought of the farmer as the low man on the totem pole. Now I have more pride and a different view point on it. In the grand scheme of things, I view farmers as one of the most important people in society, making food for the world.

Marvin: I had a group here two weeks ago from back East that had no idea what farming was. We spent the whole day taking them around. I dug a sugar beet ... let them take a bite to taste the sugar in it. These were adults, six in their mid-40s up into their late 70s. ... They had no idea where a Del Monte green bean came from or how it was raised.

Daniel: There’s definitely pride in the name you make for yourself in an area.

Marvin: Farming is a great life. It’s hard work, but there is a lot of freedom.

Takeaways: Five Things From Boise State-Washington

SEATTLE • As the Boise State football program vacillated between the then-Big East and Mountain West conferences last winter, some fans pondered the possibility of a future pairing with the Pac-12.

If Boise State academics continue to improve on its current trajectory, in five to 10 years, who is to say it absolutely couldn't happen?

Over the last decade, the Broncos have more than held their own against teams from the big five conferences.

The Pac-12 is still the premier speed conference.

In the worst loss for Boise State football in the Chris Petersen era, the Broncos, with one of the fastest teams in program history, looked like an under-qualified mare in the Kentucky Derby.

Washington isn't exactly the Secretariat of the Pac-12.

Maybe the home crowd and new environment enlivened the Huskies, maybe the turbo no-huddle spread was too much too soon, but from the press box, Boise State looked outmatched, with fewer top level athletes on both sides of the ball.

What five things stood out?

Defensive Backs

The size of the Broncos' defensive backs posed a concern for fans going into Saturday, and the Huskies offense went out of its way to exploit Donte Deayon and Bryan Douglas, calling a bevy of bubble screens, which seemed to move the chains each time, setting up bigger plays later in the game as the Broncos safeties were forced to cheat up to help. The Broncos will face bigger receivers and better passing games this year, so this could be a recurring and possibly debilitating problem.

Conservative Offense

The Broncos played almost exclusively out of a no-huddle spread, which was bereft of the shifting that made Boise State so recognizable before the snap. The offensive alignment was generic, and passing plays were a preponderance of underneath routes. Boise State quarterback Joe Southwick completed 25 passes for just over 150 yards, a paltry yards per completion average of about six.

Receivers Fail to Launch

Shane Williams-Rhodes, who was expected to help re-ignite an offense that lost its explosiveness last season, didn't play all that much, and was rarely in sight when he did, catching two garbage time throws. A bigger concern was that Boise State receivers struggled to beat their defenders in press coverage, disallowing the kind of separation that creates big plays downfield. Like the Broncos defensive backs, Boise State receivers lost most of their hand-battles at the line of scrimmage. Maybe it's because they practice against said small defensive backs? The receivers' vaunted speed was not apparent either.

Defense Outmatched

Washington averaged an Oregon-esque 16 seconds per snap in the first half. Broncos defenders said they were not surprised by the fast-break no-huddle spread. Linebacker Corey Bell had no response when asked whether the breakdowns were of a mental or physical nature. Was Boise State not properly conditioned? Were they out-schemed or out-manned? Both?

Jay Ajayi

His line didn't scream superstar: 23 carries for 93 yards.

But give most backs those holes and they'd be lucky to crack 75. Ajayi showed why he was all the rave this summer, as most of his yards came after initial contact. The sophomore was clearly the Broncos' best player, a relentless display of power and elusiveness. To Ajayi the Broncos may have to entrust the largest of production tote bags, but he appears more than capable of carrying it.

Four Downs: Observations from Zero Week

TWIN FALLS • The first week of the Idaho high school football season is in the books. With it, there were some impressive results, and some others were impressively unimpressive.

Each week we'll break down four things that we took away from the previous week of the high school football season.

Time to debut Four Downs.

Minico will be just fine: Sure, the Spartans beat up on a team that has now lost two games by a combined 81-10. But the way Minico gashed Park City, Utah, was particularly impressive. The Spartans have long been run-heavy, but on Saturday they balanced it out between a quality ground showing from Daniel Freiburger and their Tanner Harper-led aerial game. If Minico can keep that up the rest of the season, the team could be right back where it is every season despite holding the on-paper look of a rebuilding season.

Jerome has some kinks to work out in its offense: It wasn't exactly Boise State levels of bad, but the Tigers called their performance against Mountain Home "rough." Over the summer, when the offense was going good, it was really tough to stop. But when it didn't go so well, the Tigers struggled to muster anything of consequence. Zach Thibault had what's come to be called a typical game, throwing three touchdowns but also tossing three picks. His ability to clean that up will go a long way toward the Tigers being more efficient on the whole.

Canyon Ridge might be its own worst enemy: The Riverhawks moved the ball plenty at Columbia on Friday, but they fired six bullets into their own collective foot, in the form of a half-dozen turnovers. If not

Madrid Wins Before Bale Joins Messiscores 3

BARCELONA, Spain (AP) • Cristiano Ronaldo helped Real Madrid roll to a 3-1 win over Athletic Bilbao Sunday hours before the Spanish club announced it had signed Gareth Bale to pair him with the Portugal forward in one of the most formidable attacks in foot-ball.

Not to be overshadowed by Bale's imminent arrival, Lionel Messi needed 41 minutes to score his 23rd career hat trick for Barcelona in a thrilling 3-2 victory at Valencia.

Barcelona sports direc-tor Andoni Zubizarreta was one of the first to extend his welcome to the new rein-forcement of the defending champion's fierce rivals.

Kyle Busch Wins at Atlanta, Locks up Chase Spot

HAMPTON, Ga. (AP) • With a big hand from his pit crew, Kyle Busch locked up his spot in the Chase for the Sprint Cup championship with his fourth victory of the year Sunday night at Atlanta Motor Speedway.

Busch emerged with the lead after a rapid-fire series of caution flags near the end, and he held off hard-charging Joey Logano to win by 0.740 seconds.

"My boys on pit road," Busch said. "They're amaz-ing. I would do anything for them."

Martin Truex Jr., racing with a broken right wrist, was third on the 1.54-mile trioval, followed by Kurt Busch and Ryan Newman.

Kyle Busch was among three more drivers locking up their spot in the Chase head-ing to Richmond next week-end, where the 12-car field will be set for the playoff. He was joined by Harvick and Carl Edwards.

Points leader Jimmie John-son, Clint Bowyer and Matt Kenseth had already claimed playoff berths before Atlanta.

Busch earned his 16th win of the year in NASCAR's top three series. He has nine vic-tories in Nationwide and three in trucks.

NO. 9 LOUISVILLE DOMINATES OHIO, 49-7

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) • Teddy Bridgewater threw five touchdown passes and Michael Dyer had a 46-yard touchdown run as No. 9 Louisville defeated Ohio 49-7 Sunday.

Coming off an 11-2 finish and a Sugar Bowl upset of Florida, Bridgewater and the Cardinals (1-0) domi-nated. That pleased a sellout crowd of 55,332 seeing them for the first time since that BCS win set off the school's remarkable run of success that included an NCAA men's basketball title, the women's team's runner-up NCAA finish and an appear-ance in College World Series.

Bridgewater kicked off his Heisman Trophy campaign by going 23 of 28 for 355 yards. Damian Copeland and Kai De La Cruz each caught two touchdowns and DeVante Parker and Robert Clark each had one.

Where the cause for con-cern may lie is with the perceived better unit of the two: Canyon Ridge's de-fense, which was gashed time and again by Colum-bia's Wing-T. Then again, when you're on the field as much as that group was Friday, you're not going to stop anyone for long.

It's shaping up to be a three-team race in 1A-II: One game is too small a sample size to rule out any contenders, but Carey and Castleford did themselves no favors with dismal showings on Friday night. YOU ARE NOTIFIED THAT:
A Petition, a copy of which is attached, has been filed in the above-entitled matter in the Magistrate's Division of the District Court of Twin Falls County, Idaho, by the Prosecuting Attorney, alleging the above-named child comes within the Court's jurisdiction under the Child Protective Act.

You are hereby directed to appear personally for a Case Plan Hearing at the Twin Falls County Courthouse, 425 Shoshone Street, Twin Falls, Idaho on September 19, 2013 at 9:30 AM. DEAR ABBY: I have had a friend since grade school, "Dennis," and have maintained a friendship with him throughout our lifetime. Dennis never married and lived with his parents until both died about 10 years ago. He now lives alone.

DEAR ABBY
Jeanne Phillips

Dennis does not seem to want to take care of himself hygienically, and since we work together it is becoming a serious problem. Some of the other guys don't want to be around him. He doesn't bathe often enough or appear to brush his teeth daily.

I have tried repeatedly over the years to talk to him about his apparent lack of cleanliness, and now that he is almost 60, it is becoming unbearable. People are starting to avoid him.

Dennis is a good person and will do anything for anyone, but this lackadaisical attitude is something we can't overlook. How can I get it across to him? He just doesn't listen or take me seriously.

— IN NEED OF FRESH AIR

DEAR IN NEED: Because Dennis' poor hygiene is affecting his relationship with his co-workers, the person to address the issue is his supervisor or boss. While Dennis may ignore or dismiss your attempts to help him, when he hears from his employers that he has to clean up his act, he may pay more attention.

DEAR ABBY: For the past year I have been an old friend's lover. I'm a widow; he is married. I don't want him to leave his wife because she has been through a lot with him, including alcohol addiction. For the past few months he has given me excuses for not seeing me. We had gotten together on a weekly basis until recently.

I have all the emails and texts we have sent each other, along with pictures and a journal I have kept throughout the relationship. Should I send them to his wife? They have had a long marriage, and he has cheated on her repeatedly for the last 25 years.

I'm not ashamed or embarrassed about our affair. I just need to know if I should let his wife know what he has been doing. Yes, there is jealousy and revenge involved, and no, I haven't talked to him about what I suspect because I'm not sure how to broach the subject.

— THE OTHER WOMAN IN THE SOUTHWEST

DEAR OTHER WOMAN: I know you are hurting right now, but I see no reason to punish the wife for it. I'm sure after all these years there is nothing you could show-and-tell the woman that she isn't already aware of — except that you, a friend, betrayed her. Leave her alone. If you want confirmation of your suspicions, take it up with your lover.

DEAR ABBY: I'm entering high school. The one I'm transferring to is K-12, and my younger sister already goes there. She warned me that all the girls wear skirts and wearing pants is, basically, social suicide.

The problem is, I don't like skirts. I never have. Should I go with the flow and wear something I'm not comfortable in, or should I wear pants and give up all hope of making friends?

— HUNG UP IN HOUSTON

DEAR HUNG UP: Start by wearing skirts for the first week or so and let the girls get to know you. See if what your sister said is true. After that, make up your own mind.

Dear Abby is written by Abigail Van Buren, also known as Jeanne Phillips, and was founded by her mother, Pauline Phillips. Write Dear Abby at www.DearAbby.com or P.O. Box 69440, Los Angeles, CA 90069.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE®

Bobby Wolff

"Of two evils, the least should be chosen."

— Cicero

One secret of defense is to play partner for the minimum that he needs to let you beat the contract. On a hand like today's, the auction has told you before dummy comes down that you won't find many values in your partner's hand — both opponents appear to have opening bids, and at West you have a 15-count.

Against four hearts you lead the diamond king, on which partner plays the nine — suggesting an original holding of a doubleton or singleton — and declarer follows with the five. Plan the defense.

Your best chance is to find your partner with the heart jack or queen. If he has a trump honor and uses it wisely, you can create a fourth defensive trick from nowhere. You cash the diamond queen at trick two, hoping that partner will show out, but both East and South follow suit. No matter; you next play the diamond three.

If the layout is as shown in the diagram and partner remembers to ruff in with the jack (he should, since you are known to have the diamond ace), there is no way for declarer to succeed. He must overruff, but now you will come to both a trump trick and a black king.

Note that if you don't try to promote a trump but exit passively with a heart at trick three, declarer draws trump and runs the diamond jack, pitching a club, after which he has the rest with the help of the spade finesse.

ANSWER: It is hard to reconstruct the full hand, but dummy rates to have short spades and both minors, and declarer to have some degree of diamond fit. Meanwhile, partner perhaps has both majors — and maybe only two or three clubs. A low-spade lead might set up tricks for our side as fast as anything, but the heart nine is far safer, if less aggressive.

2000 GRIM

Today is Monday, Sept. 2, the 245th day of 2013. There are 120 days left in the year. This is Labor Day.

Today's Highlight:
On September 2, 1945, Japan formally surrendered in ceremonies aboard the USS Missouri in Tokyo Bay, ending World War II.

TODAY IN HISTORY

On this date:
In 1666, the Great Fire of London broke out.
In 1789, the United States Treasury Department was established.
In 1864, during the Civil War, Union Gen. William T. Sherman's forces occupied Atlanta.
In 1901, Vice President Theodore Roosevelt offered the advice, "Speak softly and carry a big stick" in a speech at the Minnesota State Fair.
In 1924, the Rudolf Friml operetta "Rose Marie" opened on Broadway.
In 1935, a Labor Day hurricane slammed into the Florida Keys, claiming more than 400 lives.
In 1945, Ho Chi Minh declared Vietnam an independent republic. (Ho died on this date in 1969.)
In 1963, Alabama Gov. George C. Wallace prevented the integration of Tuskegee High School by encircling the building with state troopers. "The CBS Evening News" with Walter Cronkite was lengthened from 15 to 30 minutes, becoming network television's first half-hour nightly newscast.
In 1972, Dave Wottle of the United States won the men's 800-meter race at the Munich Summer Olympics.
In 1986, a judge in Los Angeles sentenced Cathy Evelyn Smith to three years in prison for involuntary manslaughter for her role in the 1982 drug overdose death of comedian John Belushi. (Smith served 18 months.)
In 1993, the United States and Russia formally ended decades of competition in space by agreeing to a joint venture to build a space station.
In 1998, a Swissair MD-11 jetliner crashed off Nova Scotia, killing all 229 people aboard.

Ten years ago: A court in Jakarta, Indonesia, sentenced Muslim cleric Abu Bakar Bashir to four years in prison for sedition (his conviction was later overturned after he'd spent more than two years behind bars.) A federal appeals court in San Francisco threw out more than 100 death sentences in Arizona, Montana and Idaho because the inmates had been sent to death row by judges instead of juries.

Five years ago: Republicans assailed Barack Obama as the most liberal, least experienced White House nominee in history at their convention in St. Paul, Minn., and enthusiastically extolled their own man, John McCain, as ready to lead the nation. President George W. Bush briefly addressed the convention by satellite from the White House. A gunman in Skagit County, Wash., killed six people and injured four others; a suspect, Isaac Zamora, later pleaded not guilty by reason of insanity to two murders and guilty to the remaining four, and is being held in a mental hospital. Jaguars offensive tackle Richard Collier was left paralyzed in a shooting outside an apartment building in Jacksonville, Fla.; a suspect, Tyrone Hartsfield, was later convicted and sentenced to life in prison.

One year ago: Campaigning his way toward the Democratic National Convention, President Barack Obama slapped a "Romney doesn't care" label on his rival's health-care views and said Republicans wanted to repeal new protections for millions without offering a plan of their own. Mark Abrahamian, 46, lead guitarist for the rock group Starship, died in Norfolk, Neb., of a heart attack after a performance.

IF SEPTEMBER 2 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: Your business acumen is at an all-time high during the next three to four months, but a relationship might not bear up under the strain of your ambitions. October or early November is a great time to make a decision about a questionable relationship since you'll receive sound advice from friends and can make a wise assessment. That is also a fabulous time to change jobs, ask for a promotion, and launch any new enterprise or plan with the best chance of success.

HOROSCOPE

Jeraldine Saunders

ARIES (March 21-April 19): "Let's get physical" can be your theme song. If you have the day off, you might be more interested in washing the car than going to the movies. Use your extra energy constructively.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Act like a tire on a car and keep on going no matter how many bumps in the road you encounter. Someone might back down from a promise or have a change of heart.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Tie a yellow ribbon on the tire iron. Handle a change in the home or family with the same equanimity you would use to change a tire. Show love even in the face of a misunderstanding.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Play hard, but fair. You are blessed by a competitive but sportsmanlike spirit. This could be a great time to organize a team or to go up against someone with less experience.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Impulsive spending could put the whammy on your wallet. You may expect a constant level of commitment and faithfulness from others only to be disappointed at a crucial moment.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): You've lost that loving feeling. Someone might do or say something that makes you feel you've been let down. If you react without thinking or act on instinct you may break away.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Making up your mind is similar to making the bed. Once you have made a decision, someone is likely to come along and pull down the covers so you need to repeat the process.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Sometimes the turtle wins the race. Slow down and take stock of situations rather than giving in to the temptation to act on impulse. Jack rabbit starts won't help you get ahead.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Even the bluest skies eventually have a cloud, but cloudy skies eventually clear up. Just because something is new or trendy doesn't mean it will offer lasting pleasure.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): The path to true love is not smooth. That is why you should concentrate on the bills on your desk or meeting deadlines. Eventually you will arrive at a less bumpy part of the trail.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Think before you spend. Getting sidetracked by a fascinating bauble or the latest bling can wallop your wallet. A significant other could egg you on when you should just say "no."

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): The attraction of opposites results in opposition. You might think someone has come around to your way of thinking when all you've done is highlight the differences between you.
