Flash Floods, Falling Rock Warnings in Wildfire Areas

TIMES-NEWS

BOISE • A flash flood watch is in effect for wildfire-scorched lands within Boise National Forest, the National Weather Service announced Monday.

Heavy rains were possible last night in areas near the Elk Complex, Pony Complex and Little Queens fires, and the flood watch continues into the evening for those areas and the Boise and West Central Mountains.

Travelers should be on the lookout for rapid increases in creek and river water flows beside burned mountains.

Water level changes can swiftly lead to flash floods.

Avoid crossing where water is high at creeks and rivers.

Culverts are more likely to plug up and flood, and high flows could wash out road surfaces quickly.

The denuded hillsides create optimum conditions for flooding and mudslides, as do hardened, water-repellent soils broiled by extreme heat during recent wildfires.

Rocks, snag trees and logs can be swept down steep embankments as the rain loosens their footings.

Because of the risk of falling rocks, travelers should avoid moving through burn areas until the flood watch ends.

Heavy rainfall on wildfire-burnt earth already has resulted in deadly mudslides around the West.

Last month, mudslides poured across U.S. 24 west of Colorado Springs, burying John Collins, 53, in mud and debris. The flooding resulted from the scorched earth left behind by the 2012 Waldo Canyon Fire, which killed two people and destroyed 347 homes.

Chocolate Extravaganza

Bakers' Desserts Up for Judging

BY JULIE WOOTTON
jwootton@magicvalley.com

TWIN FALLS • Carol Malone waited in the sweetest spot at the Twin Falls County Fair — surrounded by desserts in the pantry.

Display cases were filled with baked goods, some with ribbons attached to the plates. Neatly covered pies and other desserts were refrigerated nearby.

On the last day of the fair Monday, bakers faced an especially important contest — the Chocolate Extravaganza.

Malone has entered the competition for at least 12 years, and her three children compete, too.

They made nine desserts this year for five categories: cake, cheesecake, pie, candy and cookies.

“This is the most we’ve ever brought,” Malone said.

She made three desserts, and each of her children made two.

Despite the apparent baking frenzy, Malone said the preparation this year was fun and “really relaxed.”

Malone said she loves entering desserts in the Chocolate Extravaganza. She also enters baked goods in the open class.

“I really think our cheesecake might win” the chocolate contest, Malone said, or maybe their chocolate cake.

Son Michael, 11, said he thought he would win in the pie category.

Their confidence isn’t unfounded. Over the years, Carol and her children have taken top honors in the cake category seven times and placed in the category on many other occasions.

They have had some hiccups with the Chocolate Extravaganza, though.

Once, Carol dropped her son’s

Kelley Fire Growing, Beaver Creek Fire Contained

TIMES-NEWS

FEATHERVILLE • The Beaver Creek Fire north of Hailey now is 100 percent contained, but the Kelley Fire near Featherville has erupted from 10 acres to about 1,500 acres over the past week.

A public meeting will be at 7 p.m. tonight in the American Legion Hall in Fairfield to discuss fire managers’ strategies and how closures are affecting the hunting season.

The lightning-sparked Kelley Fire was only 10 percent contained Monday.

It was burning in steep, remote areas not easily accessible to the 538 firefighters battling the blaze.

The fire made another big run Sunday night and was spotted across the South Fork of the Boise River near Jumbo Creek.

Firefighters lined the corridor of the river Sunday, laying protective measures to prevent the blaze from reaching homes near the north side of the river, said David Chevalier, Kelley Fire information officer.

Crews were trying to prevent the fire from jumping the Boise River, where seven houses stand 100 to 200 yards from the shore.

The fire continued to make moderate upslope runs. A few fingers of fire have crept down toward the river in the Deadwood Creek area and pushed about 1½ miles south of the Big Hole, the U.S. Forest Service reported.

Widespread flames threatened the Baumgartner Campground on Saturday, one of the most pristine in the area, and caused closures to portions of Forest Road 166 and the Mountain Home Ranger District, Chevalier said.

Monday, the fire area was hit with 22-mph winds, but the forecast called for increased clouds, lower temperatures and higher humidity — all positive factors for firefighters.

Showers and thunderstorms were predicted to start late Monday and

Leaving the Nest Mothers share stories of sending their children off into the world.

BUHL • Brenda Hoover sat on the bed in what once was her daughter Brooke’s bedroom.

On one of the bright orange walls with lime green trim is a message in marker from Brooke: “Sometimes Goodbyes are for the Best.”

And though this room is now the guest room, Hoover said, she will never paint over the reminders her two daughters left behind.

She can’t help it. She still misses her little girls, who aren’t so little anymore.

Empty Nest Syndrome refers to feelings of depression, sadness, grief or any combination experienced by parents and caregivers after children come of age and leave their childhood homes, says Psychology Today.

“It was pretty hard to get used to having no kids at home,” said Hoover, 41.

After her husband died in 2004, it was just Hoover and her girls, Erika and Brooke.

Erika, 22, is pursuing her master’s degree in so-too far. But the mother knew she couldn't hold Erika back even if she tried. "After lots of thought, prayers and advice from others, I told her I supported her. She came home for a few days, and as it got closer to her leaving, the more I was wishing my girls were little so I could keep them close. We've been a really close family. When my girls were growing up, this was known as the 'Safe House,' and it was always full of kids."

Empty Nest Syndrome often occurs when children go to college or marry. And though women are more likely than men to be affected, this doesn't mean men are immune, says Psychology Today.

"It's definitely a big change," said Hoover, who played the roles of mother and father.

"I talk to the dogs a lot," she said with a laugh. "The dogs have become my children. They are constantly sitting on me."

More mothers work these days, and they tend to feel less emptiness when their children leave home.

Hoover said she picks up double shifts a lot more now and volunteers to work holidays. A number of her co-workers have young families at home, so she likes to help them out.

"I know how important family is," she said.

In June, Evin Fox of Twin Falls sent her youngest son off into the world. Robby, 23, left for China to serve in the Peace Corps for two years.

"I was very sad for three days. I had to learn about life as a 'non-mother,'" Fox said. "When the last one leaves for the final part, it's a different kind of goodbye."

Fox said when her oldest son, Tim, now 26, first left for college, she would sit in his room and smell his clothes.

"My husband just laughs at me. He missed the kids, and they are very close. But he would just roll his eyes at me as I clutched a shirt and smelled it," she said.

So why do some parents experience Empty Nest Syndrome more than others?

Fox said she thinks it has to do with coming to terms with your own mortality and mourning the end to a chapter in life.

"It's just me and my husband and our cat. And for some people, they don't even have that, they don't have another person," she said.

She said losing her longtime identity as "mom" has made her rethink her passions in life.

"I'm no longer coming home at night and planning that big crockpot of barbecued ribs. Tonight it can be cheese and crackers for dinner."

After a summer of reflection and three days of "ugly crying," Fox said, she's starting to focus on herself again.

She's taken up some old and new hobbies. She does more gardening, yoga and bicycling and even enrolled in an African drumming class.

"You prepare for this forever. I knew I'd get over it. I couldn't avoid it."

She once apologized to her sons, telling them: "I'm so sorry you have such a goofy mom."

But one son replied, "No, Mom, you are perfect."

privately owned and has been converted to a home."

Twin Falls Canal Co. historian Joe Webster said, "This building was the water purification building that was used to purify the water when the city of Twin Falls used canal water for drinking and household use. The Twin Falls Canal Co. ran water year around in the Low Line Canal to supply water for domestic use.

"Built in 1920, it was used for this purpose until about 1962, when it was decided this 'Winter Water' could be put to better use if it were stored in the reservoirs along the Snake River to be used for crops during the growing season."

Anyone except professional bakers can enter the Chocolate Extravaganza, said Marie Webb, superintendent of the fair's kitchen pantry department.

"As the name says, everything needs to be chocolate," Webb said.

This year, 30 to 40 tasty sweets were entered.

The lucky judges sat at a long plastic table beneath a white tent with lined paper and pencils to track their tastes.

Under a table sat chocolate-colored ribbons stacked in a box.

Three of the judges were from Gateway Real Estate, the event sponsor.

The other three have been participating for years and keep coming back for more.

Nathan Lyda has been a judge of the Chocolate Extravaganza for four years.

"It's a lot of stuff — enough to make you sick," said Lyda, owner/broker at Gateway Real Estate.

The number of entries varies each year, so the judges never know quite how much they'll end up eating.

to choose first-, second- and third-place winners in each category. Then the prize money gets doled out.

After the judging, event organizers planned to "serve samples until hopefully they're all gone," Webb said.

While the chocolate contest was underway, the fair parking was filling quickly.

Screams of people whirling on carnival rides punctuated the blasting music.

On the other side of the fairgrounds, an auctioneer speedily rattled off livestock bids at the 4-H/FFA market animal sale.

OBITUARIES

Carter Benson Smith

July 11, 1942-Aug. 29, 2013

RUPERT• Carter Benson Smith, 71, of Rupert, passed away from injuries sustained in a motor vehicle accident south of Jackpot, Nev., on Thursday, Aug. 29, 2013, where he was traveling on one of his many adventures with his best buddy, Rod.

Carter was born on July 11, 1942, to Vernal and Myrtle “Babe” Smith in Tacoma, Wash. His family later moved to Boise, Idaho, where he attended Borah High School and met the love of his life, Linda Lee Norris. Carter and Linda married in Boise on June 10, 1961. They were blessed with three children, Kurt Smith, Paula Goodsell and Arlin Smith.

Carter served in the United States Navy from 1959 to 1965. He was a member of the American Legion, a leader in the Boy Scouts of America, the Lions Club, Elks, and the Idaho Mountain Search and Rescue. He worked for the State of Idaho Highway Department, Redi-to-Pour Concrete and, Morrison-Knudsen helping to build the Hells Canyon Dam in Hells Canyon, Idaho. In 1973, Carter moved his family to Rupert, Idaho, to help his dad and stepmom operate Smitty’s A&W Drive-In, which he later took it over and renamed “Smitty’s.” Smitty’s became an essential part of the Rupert community for some 40 years.

After retiring from being an owner/operator of Smitty’s, Carter decided that retirement was way too boring so he took on the task of becoming a school bus driver for the Minidoka County School District, where he was set for retirement on Sept. 1, 2013.

Carter enjoyed the finer things in life – hunting, fishing, backpacking, motorcycle riding (in his younger years), hunting for rocks, sightseeing in the South Hills with his very dear friend, Rod Butterworth, jeep riding with his family on the desert, having his morning coffee with his coffee buddies, and playing pinocle or any other card game with his family. Most of all, Carter enjoyed having his family together and being able to watch the loves of his life, his grandchildren and great-grandchildren laugh and play. There was never a dull moment or a time Carter did not smile when his grandchildren and great-grandchildren were around. One of Carter’s most wonderful recent memories was Christmas 2009 when the “entire” family invaded “Papa” Carter’s space.

Carter was preceded in death by his father; mother; stepmother; and grandparents. He is survived by his wife of 52 years, Linda Smith; his three children, Kurt Smith (Cori Hedges Smith), Paula Goodsell (Dan Bywater) and Arlin Smith (Tani); eight grandchildren, Keith (Kayla), Emily (Ben), Nickol (Sean), Grace (Logan), Kayleigh (Kyle), Kyle, Ryleigh and Landrie; and eight great-grandchildren whom he loved dearly. He was also loved and he loved numerous dear friends, relatives, and his employees of Smitty’s – the “Girls.”

A celebration of life service will be held at 2 p.m. Saturday, Sept. 7, at the Rasmussen Funeral Home, 1350 E. 16th St. in Burley. Military rites will be provided by the Mini-Cassia Veterans Organization. Burial will be in Cloverdale Memorial Park in Boise.

Roe Hill Groesbeck

BURLEY• Roe Hill Groesbeck, age 94, passed away on Monday, Aug. 26, 2013, at the Wentworth at Draper Assisted Living in Draper, Utah.

He was born in Moore, Idaho, in 1919, to Squire Bush Groesbeck and Jessie McDonald. He was married in Burley, Idaho, to Bessie Matthews on April 15, 1942.

Roe was an easy-going person with a quick smile who kept his sense of humor and quick wit even when the going got tough for him. He was a self-described gear-jamming, coffee-drinking truck driver for much of his career and was an employee of Thompson Building Materials of Orange, Calif., since the company was started in 1962.

He is survived by his children, Kathleen (Jim) Stoops of Lakewood, Calif., and Steven (Irene) Groesbeck of Draper, Utah; five grandchildren; and 10 great-grandchildren. He was preceded in death by his parents; his wife; one daughter, Melva Groesbeck Taylor; and brothers, Lee, Woods, and Teddy.

The family would like to express their appreciation to the staff of Wentworth at Draper Assisted Living, Envision Home Health and Hospice, and Summit Home Health and Hospice for the care and support they provided him.

Rita June Simpson

June 9, 1934 - Aug. 30, 2013

TWIN FALLS • Rita June Simpson, 79, Twin Falls, our beloved wife, mother, grandmother, sister, aunt and friend, departed suddenly and unexpectedly when God called her home to Heaven on Friday, Aug. 30.

Rita was born in Wendell, Idaho, on June 9, 1934, to Everett and Erma (Smith) Simpson. She arrived on her mother's birthday, the third of five children and the first daughter.

During her childhood, the family lived in Wendell, Bellevue and Hailey. Rita attended grade school and junior high in Wendell. She attended Wood River High School in Hailey through her junior year. After her father died, her mother accepted a job in Jerome, moving Rita's senior year. She graduated from Jerome High School in 1952.

Rita and her siblings worked throughout their teens to help support the family in their father's absence. She began work in bookkeeping at Jerome Co-op Dairy her senior year and was employed there until 1964.

She married Joseph Wagner of Buhl in July 1959. The couple had three children: Anna, Christina, who died at birth, and Joe. The family moved from Jerome to Hazelton in 1964, residing there until 1968, when they moved to Twin Falls. While in Hazelton, Rita devoted her time and talents to homemaking and raising her young children. She and Joe later divorced.

In 1970, she married Jay D. Schwenson, her childhood friend, school sweetheart and true love. They made their home in Twin Falls, where they have resided for 43 years.

Rita's career in bookkeeping resumed in 1968 when she took a job at Gateway Trailer Center. In 1977, she began work at Beckstead-Cooper CPA firm, which later became Cooper-Norman Co. In the early 1990s, Rita accepted a position as office manager at Latham Motors, working there until her retirement in 2002.

Her greatest joy and passion centered on family. Encouraging and supporting her children's and, later, grandchildren's school activities, music performances and athletic events was what she most enjoyed. She showed enthusiasm for their interests and goals and was proud of their many accomplishments.

Memorable family times included camping, boating and vacationing. Attending the 1980 Miss Rodeo America Pageant in Oklahoma City, Okla, when Anna was a contestant, was a highlight for Rita.

In retirement, Rita and Jay had great adventures traveling with various groups of friends and family. Camping and boating at Flaming Gorge was their favored getaway.

She was an avid garden-er and loved tending the varied flowers in her yard, which was in constant bloom. Roses and clematis were her favorites.

Recently, Rita became a great-grandmother to Carder Jay, who quickly became the newest love in her life. She absolutely glowed when he was present, delighting in each baby milestone.

This beautiful, sweet, gentle woman was known for her grace, cheer, optimism and compassion for others. She had a deep faith in God. A sense of humor and a tinge of mischief made her all the more endearing. Rita, we will miss you every day. We are grateful for the times we spent together and, most of all, for the love we shared, which endures and sustains us in your absence.

Rita is survived by her husband, Jay; daughter Anna (Craig) Casperson and grandson Cody Casperson, of Kimberly; grandson Brock (Allie) Casperson and great-grandson Carder, of Twin Falls; son Joe (Whitney) Wagner, grandson Jacob Wagner and granddaughter Allison Wagner, of Clarkston, Wash.; stepdaughter Julie (Bob) Powell and grandsons Jack and Danny Powell, and stepson Kevin Schwenson, of Fargo, ND; stepdaughter Tracy Schwenson (Kelly Brant) of Palo Alto, Calif.; brother Marvin Simpson, of Boise; sister Kathy (Robert) Butler, of Eagle; and numerous nieces and nephews.

She was preceded in death by her parents, brothers Gerald Simpson and Carl Simpson, and infant daughter Christina.

A viewing will be held Thursday, Sept. 5, from 6 - 7 p.m. followed by a Vigil Celebration (7 p.m.) at Rosenau Funeral Home. Funeral Mass will take place Friday, Sept. 6, at 11 a.m. at St. Edward's Catholic Church. Arrangements are under the direction of Rosenau Funeral Home.

In lieu of flowers, the family suggests memorial donations to Monastery of the Ascension & Retreat Center, 541 East 100 South, Jerome, Idaho 83338, or to a charity of the donor's choice.

Is your Dream Home on the market?

SENIOR

Q. My teenage sons want to spend some quality time with their great-uncle this summer. What can they do that would be fun for all of them?

A. Sadly, too often visiting senior relatives becomes a chore for young people who are unsure of how to interact with the older folks. Look for common interests. For example, fishing is a great outdoor activity that can be fun for all ages. Whether any fish are caught, kept or released, tossing in the line provides valuable time for talking and sharing. Or, the boys might drive their great-uncle through a favorite state park, find a picnic table, and enjoy a lunch packed at home or from a fast food restaurant. The teens could offer to help Uncle complete a long-overdue task...like cleaning the attic or garage! With the right attitude this "work" could easily become a very memorable and educational experience for all!

Heavyweight Boxer Tommy Morrison Dies at Age 44

ASSOCIATED PRESS

Tommy Morrison's career reached its pinnacle on a hot June night in Las Vegas, when he stepped into the ring and beat George Foreman to become heavyweight champion.

It reached its nadir when he tested positive for HIV three years later.

The last 20 years of the brash boxer's life would be defined by extensive legal troubles, erratic behavior and mounting health problems. Morrison would later claim that he never tested positive for the virus that causes AIDs, even as he was hospitalized during the last days of his life.

Morrison died Sunday night at a Nebraska hospital. He was 44.

His longtime promoter and close friend, Tony Holden, confirmed that "the Duke" had died, but his family would not disclose the cause of death. Morrison and his wife, Trisha, continued to deny that the former champion ever had HIV during the final years of his life.

"Tommy's a very stubborn person and he views things the way he wants to view things. That's his right and privilege," Holden said. "All through his career, him and I would come not to physical blows but disagreements on certain things. We always ended up friends. That was Tommy.

"That's the way Tommy took off after he was told he was HIV-positive," Holden added. "When he first was told, I was taking him to seek treatment and to different doctors around the country. And then he started research on the Internet and started saying it was a conspiracy. He went in that direction and never looked back."

Big Gains on Wildfire near Yosemite National Park

YOSEMITE NATIONAL PARK, Calif. (AP) • A relatively cool and humid Labor Day allowed fire crews to make major progress Monday toward corralling a massive wildfire searing the edge of Yosemite National Park.

The fire was 70 percent contained at nightfall, up from 45 percent some 24 hours earlier, according to the California Department of Forestry and Fire Protection. The blaze now covers 368 square miles, about 20 more than Sunday night.

Fire weather was still classified as extreme with temperatures above 90 degrees and winds in some spots gusting at 20 mph, but Monday was cooler than many recent days, with more moisture and cloud cover.

Full containment is not expected until Sept. 20.

Mandatory evacuations remain in effect for some south of Highway 120, and Tioga Road west of Yosemite Creek Picnic Area is closed.

Crews will continue building fire lines and burning away the fire's potential fuel sources on Monday.

"We do have a nice window here of more cooperative weather," state fire spokesman Daniel Berlant said.

Gusty winds and dryer conditions are expected mid-week, however, again raising the fire danger, Berlant said.

The blaze started Aug. 17 in the Stanislaus National Forest, and two-thirds of the land burned since then is located there as well. The cause is being investigated.

The fire — the fourth largest in California history — has claimed 111 structures, 11 of them homes. About 4,500 structures are threatened.

Cops: Dad of NY Tot Shot in Stroller likely Target

BY JONATHAN LEMIRE AND JENNIFER PELTZ
Associated Press

NEW YORK (AP) — Police investigating the death of a 1-year-old boy who was shot in his stroller during a walk on a city street believe his father was the intended target, Commissioner Raymond Kelly said Monday.

Authorities have some leads in the killing of Antiq Hennis in Brooklyn on Sunday night and believe his death may be gang-related, Kelly said.

Antiq's father, Anthony Hennis, had just gone to pick up the boy at the home of the baby's mother, Cherise Miller, and take him to visit Hennis' grandmother, Kelly said. Hennis, 21, put the boy in the stroller and was pushing him across a street in the Brownsville neighborhood when shots rang out at about 7:20 p.m., police said.

"All of a sudden, we hear shots," Hennis' grandmother, Lenore Steele, told reporters Monday at the site of the shooting.

After the gunfire sounded, Hennis ran up to her, she said.

"And he fell on the ground and said, 'Grandma, my baby got shot! My baby got shot, Grandma!'"

"He was such a beautiful little baby, smiling and talking to everybody," Steele said, flanked by community group leaders and mayoral candidate Bill Thompson.

Anti-violence activist Anthony Herbert, who heads a group called Advocates Without Borders, said its members were also gathering information about the shooting and urging the gunman to turn himself in.

Grief and outrage over the toddler's shooting loomed over the annual West Indian Day Parade about a mile and a half away, where Mayor Michael Bloomberg called the killing "a tragedy for his family, for this community, for the entire city" and political candidates talked about gun violence.

Four shots were fired, and one hit the boy in the left side of his head; he was declared dead on arrival at the hospital. The gunfire left four .45-caliber shell casings on the corner and bullet holes in the stroller, Kelly told reporters before the parade.

"We have some leads, and those leads are being aggressively followed," the commissioner said. He said the baby's father isn't cooperating with police and has a criminal record but didn't elaborate.

The boy's father and mother couldn't immediately be reached for comment. A phone number for the father wasn't listed, and activists who spoke at a news conference said the mother wouldn't be making a statement Monday.

"The family is suffering right now," said Bishop Willie Billips of the Church of Faith, Hope and Charity, who drove the parents to the hospital to identify the body of their only child.

"To have to take a young couple to identify their baby's body is horrible," he said.

Shirley Jones-Baisden, a tenant association vice president in a local public housing complex, wept as she recalled being with the baby's mother at the hospital.

"They need some peace," Jones-Baisden said.

While killings hit a record low in the city last year and are on track to drop further this year, "we know that is cold comfort to any grieving parent or friends," Mayor Michael Bloomberg said before the parade.

As of Aug. 25, killings and shootings were down about 26 percent compared to the same time last year, according to the mayor's office.

In the police precinct that includes Brownsville, there had been seven killings this year, half as many as during the same period in 2012.

Brownsville is a struggling section of central Brooklyn, with a poverty rate about twice the citywide rate, according to a 2012 analysis of government data by New York University's Furman Center for Real Estate and Urban Policy.

It was at least the second case of a toddler being shot to death in a stroller this year.

In March, a woman walking home from a post office in Brunswick, Ga., with her 13-month-old son was accosted by a gunman who demanded her purse, then shot her in the leg and fired a shot at the child in his stroller after she told him she had no money, authorities said.

An 18-year-old man was convicted Friday of murder in the death of Antonio Santiago despite his attorney's attempts to cast guilt upon several others, including the child's parents.

In another case of violence toward toddlers in New York City, 3-year-old Tharell Edward was shot in the head and wounded Aug. 24 as he slept in his family's Brooklyn apartment where an acquaintance was watching him.

Akeem Bernard, a friend of the babysitter, was charged in the shooting. Through a lawyer, he has denied the allegations.

Anglers, Leave Dynamite at Home

LEWISTON (AP) • Anglers heading to Soldiers Meadow Reservoir near Lewiston can catch as many fish as they want from the northcentral Idaho irrigation impoundment, in any way — as long as they don't resort to firearms, explosives, chemicals or electricity.

The Lewiston Tribune reports the announcement came ahead of the Idaho Department of Fish and Game's plans to use a chemical to kill Soldiers Meadows' fish in a bid to eventually improve its attractiveness as a fishery.

Currently, the reservoir is choked with small perch, crappie and bullhead, all species illegally introduced here over the years.

"It doesn't create much of fishery," said Joe DuPont, regional fish manager for the Idaho Department of Fish and Game at Lewiston. "You get a bunch of small fish people don't want to catch but they will also eat eggs of other fish like bass."

So through Oct. 31, licensed anglers can catch as many fish as they want — short of blowing them up, poisoning them or frying them with a jolt of electricity.

After that, plans call for 10,000 9-inch rainbow trout to be planted before Memorial Day, though the state wildlife agency plans to hold public meetings over the winter to see if there's any interest in creating a more specialized fishery there — for warm-water species like bass, for example, or for trout only.

"We want to hear what the public will say," DuPont says.

The challenge at Soldiers Meadow, a 124-acre reservoir 20 miles from Lewiston that's administered by the Lewiston Orchards Irrigation District, underscores how the illegal introduction of fish to a body of water can create problems for anglers — and those trying to create as many fishing opportunities as possible.

That's why Idaho's penalty for illegally introducing fish in Idaho is stiff: It can be a lifetime revocation of fishing and hunting privileges and up to a $10,000 fine.

In addition, violators could be required to pay for treatment costs, which can be as much as $60,000.

Mormon Missionary Killed in Colombia

BY BRADY MCCOMBS
Associated Press

SALT LAKE CITY • A Mormon missionary from the Dominican Republic was killed while serving in Colombia — in what is at least the fifth death this year of a proselytizing member of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

Jose Daniel Encarnacion Montero, 20, was struck by a stray bullet Saturday in Cali, Colombia. He had been on mission for one year.

Officials with the LDS Church said Encarnacion was with three other missionaries when he was killed, but they weren't harmed. Colombian police are investigating the incident.

The Mormon church was not able to immediately provide the number of missionaries who have died this year, or in past years. News reports suggest there have been at least five missionaries who have died in 2013.

Encarnacion's death comes less than a week after missionary Jason Wiberg was fatally hit by a car while on bicycle in Kuching, Malaysia, on Aug. 25. Wiberg, 19, of Roy, Utah, had been on mission since October 2012.

His family is holding a funeral for him this week. They said he dreamed of being a police officer and was an Eagle Scout.

On July 22, Josh Burton died from injuries suffered when a truck he was riding in overturned. Burton, 23, of Alberta, Canada, was on a mission in Guatemala. He was just months from completing his two-year mission.

On June 19, Siosuia "Josh" Taufa was electrocuted while trying to fix a family's leaky roof in Guatemala where had served for 18 months. Taufa, 20, of Salt Lake City, was the second oldest son of Utah Highway Patrol Sgt. Aiveni "Ivan" Taufa, a member of Gov. Gary Herbert's security team.

On Feb. 1, missionary Alesa Renee Smith was killed in Woodward, Okla., when she was hit by a truck while on her bicycle. Smith, 22, of Benton, Ark., had been serving in the Oklahoma mission for 10 months.

Spurred by an historic lowering of the minimum age for missionaries, the Utah-based faith has more ambassadors serving around the world than at any time in the church's history.

The 75,000 missionaries are a 28-percent increase from about 58,000 a year ago. The church expects the number to swell to 85,000 by year's end.

Last October, the church announced men could begin serving at 18, instead of 19, and women at 19, instead of 21. That's led to new, younger missionaries joining older ones already planning to go.

Missions are considered rites of passage for many Mormons, broadening their perspective on the world, strengthening their faith and helping prepare some for future leadership roles within the church.

Young Mormon men are expected, but not required, to serve missions. Historically, women have faced far less pressure to serve, though the church has seen a spike in mission applications from women now that they can serve two years earlier. Men serve two years while women go for 18 months.

At the Beaver Creek Fire, meanwhile, "Fire crews have done an excellent job with extinguishing hot spots and putting out the remaining smokes," incident commander Scott Johnson said in a statement. # Idaho Woman Pleads Guilty to Theft Conspiracy

COEUR D'ALENE (AP) • A former employee of the Coeur d'Alene Tribal Authority has pleaded guilty to conspiracy to commit theft from a tribal organization.

U.S. Attorney Wendy Olson announced in a prepared statement that 36-year-old Angeline Morago George pleaded guilty to the charge Friday in federal court.

Prosecutors said George was issued a credit card related to her duties as a Tribal Housing Authority employee, and that in February she and 26-year-old Billy E. Moffitt drove to Washington where George purchased more than $4,000 in money orders from payday loan stores that they then used for personal benefit.

Moffitt pleaded guilty to the charge earlier this month. Both face up to five years in prison and a fine of up to $250,000 when they are sentenced later this year.

The Plight of Transgender Front and Center after Manning Trial

The following editorial appeared in Monday's Washington Post:

In July, Army Pfc. Bradley Manning, who had passed along classified information to WikiLeaks, was convicted of violating the Espionage Act. When sentenced in mid-August to 35 years in prison, the private issued a public statement that had nothing to do with the sentence or the crime but that nevertheless caught the attention of the country.

"As I transition into this next phase of my life, I want everyone to know the real me," that statement read. "I am Chelsea Manning. I am female."

With four words — "I am Chelsea Manning" — Manning positioned the national spotlight onto the nation's transgender community, the oft-forgotten "T" in "LGBT" (lesbian, gay, bisexual and transgender) and what remains one of America's most marginalized and neglected minority groups, even as the country makes significant strides in recognizing the rights of gay and lesbian citizens.

According to the Williams Institute, there are approximately 700,000 transgender individuals in the United States, but this statistic is unlikely to capture the full number of people who have expressed or self-diagnosed an incongruity between the gender they feel and the gender they were born. Even as gays and lesbians have won the right to marry in 13 states and the District and, this summer, to have the federal government treat those marriages as equal to heterosexual ones, transgender people are still ostracized and stigmatized. They can be refused crucial medical treatments without sufficient justification, and they (like gays) are not protected by federal law from discrimination in the workplace.

The situation for transgender people in the military is especially fraught. While the repeal of "don't ask, don't tell" has allowed gays and lesbians to serve openly in uniform, that is not the case for transgender individuals, who are typically discharged if they express their identities. The military also relies on an antiquated understanding of what it means to be transgender and, at least at Fort Leavenworth, where Manning is likely to be incarcerated, will not provide the hormone therapy doctors may recommend for individuals with gender dysphoria.

As public understanding evolves on this issue, logistical questions and complications will arise, especially as more transgender people come out of the shadows. Shifts in tolerance invariably take time. But the bottom line isn't complicated: All Americans are entitled to live in dignity.

"If the Americans, the French or the British had a shred of proof, they would have shown it beginning on the first day ... We believe that a strong man is one who prevents war, not one who inflames it," easy now to go back and find over-the-top complaints about the president on this issue that are now proved, well, over the top — just as I think one could find similar statements about "don't ask, don't tell," or marriage equality, or exiting Iraq, or getting bogged down in Libya.

My second reaction, however, was that my first reaction was garbage.

Those over-the-top complaints were part of the political landscape that Democrats in Congress and the White House had to deal with when they made the decisions that eventually satisfied, at least to some extent, the activists who were complaining in the first place.

It's worth stopping every once in a while and noting something we all tend to undervalue: Different people within the political system have different jobs to do. The job of an activist may involve being over the top at times (though not always; there's value in being accurate).

And the jobs of the others within the system — presidents, political appointees leading departments and agencies, bureaucrats below them, members of Congress — are all similarly constrained by various rules, norms and incentives.

None of this is to say that everything works out in the end; sometimes it doesn't. At best, this course of events serves as a reminder to lower our arrogance a tick, or at least to bear in mind that there are often perfectly good reasons why political actors act as they do and that anyone seeking to change those actions often has to change the incentives more than anything else.

Is Labor Legislating or Job Hunting?

It's too bad more voters in Idaho's First Congressional District don't tune in for the the venerable, long-running Sunday morning news interview program, "Meet the Press."

If they did, they would have seen their relatively new congressional Idaho U.S. Rep. Raul Labrador, R-Nampa, at his patronizingly worst; shamelessly hawking himself to the right wing pooh-bahs inside the beltway who hand-out those $2 million a-year executive director positions at their "think tanks" and foundations.

How else can one begin to understand what motivated the tea party favorite in his sixth appearance in a remarkably short time span to offer the gratuitous advice to the nation's black leadership to renew the politics of hope, as Dr. Martin Luther King did, rather than continuing to follow the politics of despair?

Rep. Labrador's comments came on the program just prior to the commemoration of the 50th Anniversary of the historic civil rights march on Washington, D.C., and the delivery of Dr. King's immortal "I have a dream" speech. The congressman claimed to have watched the 17-minute tape of the speech three times, yet he still decided to deride the modern black movement.

He offered no specifics to backup his claim, but rather passed it off as accepted fact, and unfortunately was not immediately challenged by any on the panel of interviewers.

To any objective viewer, it looked like he was pandering to those that think America has done enough to expiate for the forefathers having initially embraced slavery; to those who believe the African-American has received too many "affirmative action" breaks, those who think the hand-up has become a hand out; to those who cheer the Supreme Court's recent castration of the Voting Rights Act.

As my former Gallatin Group partner, Marc Johnson, noted in his essay on the subject of the Pew Research Center's study on Race in America:

"Fewer than 50% of Americans believe the country has made substantial progress in the direction of racial equality. . . about half of those surveyed said a 'lot more has to be done' to create a truly color blind society."

Johnson then cites the study documenting the retreat — not forward motion — on key measures like the growing gap in median income and household income between black Americans and white Americans. Blacks are three times more likely to live in poverty than whites. Black home ownership is 60% that of whites, rates of marriage are less for blacks than whites; out-of-wedlock birth rates are higher for blacks than whites. And then there is of course the incredibly higher rate of incarceration blacks face than whites do.

Despite this depressing trend, the fact is most African-American leadership continues to hold out hope for progress and an eventual color-blind society. Congressman Labrador's comment is insulting and demeaning to a colleague of his, Georgia Rep. John Lewis, who marched with Dr. King and continues to believe in the hope of the American dream for all.

Congressman Labrador certainly has an ability to sell his "up-by-the-bootstraps" story and has mastered quickly the art of promoting himself. He projects a perception as a "comer." The inside the beltway media is of course fascinated with a Hispanic Republican, from the implied "rural, redneck state of Idaho" no less, and Labrador has skillfully parlayed that into the impressive number of six appearances on "Meet the Press."

The current best seller, This Town, by Mark Leiovich of the New York Times, starts out with a long description of the funeral services for Tim Russert, the long-time host of "Meet the Press." It documents how for many years this was the show to be on, and Russert was the one to be interviewed by. While in many respects, being written about by Mike Allen in his daily "Playbook" memo (a subsidiary operation of Politico) has taken over top rank in the DC media hierarchy, "Meet the Press" still ranks high.

As one watches Labrador's appearances, keep asking how is he relating what he says to his 1st Congressional District constituents?

To this writer and long-time observer of the political scene it is transparently clear he is advertising his availability to take one of those few but lucrative executive director positions at an association, or a think-tank or a foundation. One gets the feeling he knows how much former Gov. Dirk Kempthorne pulls in doing the tea party's work.

Congressman Labrador wants to join him and those like him.

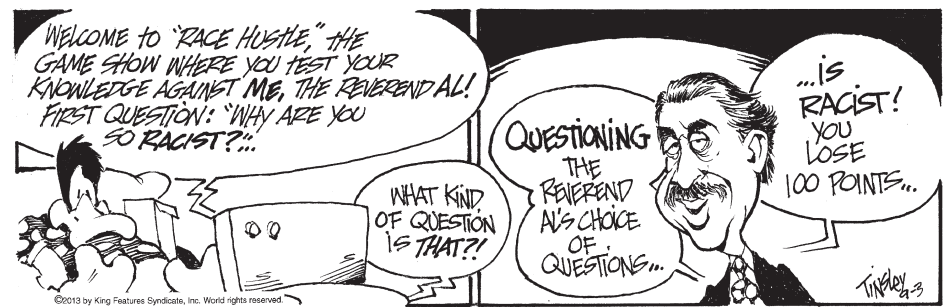

And the sooner he does, the better. Then maybe the district will send someone to represent them more dedicated to serving Idaho's needs rather than finding a stepping stone to wealth.

Assad: Risk of Regional War if West Strikes Syria

BY SYLVIE CORBET
Associated Press

PARIS • France released an intelligence report on Monday alleging chemical weapons use by Syria's regime that dovetailed with similar U.S. claims, as President Bashar Assad warned that any military strike against his country would spark an uncontrollable regional war and spread "chaos and extremism."

The verbal crossfire, including a rejection of the Western allegations by long-time Syrian ally Russia, was part of frenzied efforts on both sides to court international public opinion after President Barack Obama said he would seek authorization from Congress before launching any military action against Assad's regime.

In an interview with French newspaper Le Figaro, Assad was quoted as saying that Syria has challenged the U.S. and France to provide proof to support their allegations, but that their leaders "have been incapable of doing that, including before their own peoples."

"If the Americans, the French or the British had a shred of proof, they would have shown it beginning on the first day," he said, deriding Obama as "weak" and having buckled to U.S. domestic political pressure.

"We believe that a strong man is one who prevents war, not one who inflames it," Assad said.

Syrian refugees arrive at the Turkish Cilvegözü gate border Monday.

French President Francois Hollande and Obama have been the two world leaders most vocally calling for action against Assad's regime, accusing it of carrying out a deadly chemical attack against rebel-held suburbs of Damascus on Aug. 21.

The U.S. said it has proof that the Assad regime is behind attacks that Washington claims killed at least 1,429 people, including more than 400 children. Those numbers are significantly higher than the death toll of 355 provided by the aid group Doctors Without Borders.

It has marked an intolerable escalation in a two-year civil war in Syria that has left some 100,000 people dead.

The Syrian government denies the allegations, and blames opposition fighters. In the Figaro interview, Assad questioned whether an attack took place at all and refused to say whether his forces have chemical weapons, as is widely believed.

If the U.S. and France strike, "Everyone will lose control of the situation ...

Chaos and extremism will spread. The risk of a regional war exists," he added.

To back up its case, the French government published a nine-page intelligence synopsis Monday that concluded Assad's regime had launched an attack on Aug. 21 involving a "massive use of chemical agents" and could carry out similar strikes in the future.

In all, though, the French report provided little new MEXICO CITY • The brother of the head of the Juarez Cartel has been arrested in the western state of Nayarit and is being held pending charges of links to organized crime, Mexican officials said Monday.

Federal officials said Alberto Carrillo Fuentes was a member of the cartel but described his specific role and position as unclear.

Vicente Carrillo Fuentes is one of six brothers. He took over the cartel after his brother Amado, nicknamed "The Lord of the Skies," died in 1997 in a botched cosmetic surgery.

Amado earned his nickname by flying plane loads of drugs into the United States. Vicente carried on trafficking on a more modest scale, but in a much more violent era.

Mexican President Enrique Pena Nieto has continued a strategy of hunting down the heads of the country's drug cartels, although his government has disparaged his predecessor's heavy dependence on that approach.

Germany Tries 92-year-old for Nazi War Crime

BY DANIEL NIEMANN
AND DAVID RISING
Associated Press

HAGEN, Germany • Germany put a 92-year-old former member of the Nazi Waffen SS on trial Monday on charges that he killed a Dutch resistance fighter in 1944.

Dutch-born Siert Bruins, who now is German, entered the Hagen state courtroom using a walker, but appeared alert and attentive as the proceedings opened.

No pleas are made in the German system, and Bruins offered no statement. His attorney, Klaus-Peter Kniffka, said after the short 35-minute opening session that it was unlikely his client would ever address the court personally.

“I will probably deliver a defense declaration, but it depends upon the course of the trial,” he told reporters.

The trial comes amid a new phase of German Nazi-era investigations, with federal prosecutors this week expected to announce they are recommending the pursuit of possible charges against about 40 former Auschwitz guards.

The renewed probes of death camp guards come after the case of former Ohio autoworker John Demjanjuk, who died last year while appealing his 2011 conviction for accessory to murder after allegations he served in Sobibor.

His case established that death camp guards could be convicted as accessories to murder, even if there was no specific evidence of atrocities against them.

Bruins, however, had long been on the radar of German legal authorities and already served time in the 1980s for his role in the wartime slaying of two Dutch Jews.

Bruins also was already convicted and sentenced to death in absentia in the Netherlands in 1949 in a case that involved the killing of the resistance fighter. The sentence was later commuted to life in prison, but attempts to extradite him were unsuccessful because he had obtained German citizenship through a policy instituted by Adolf Hitler to confer citizenship on foreigners who served the Nazi military.

Ulrich Sander, spokesman for an organization representing the victims of Nazi crimes, told the dpa news agency that the decision to bring Bruins to trial again, even at his advanced age, was a good one.

“We must make it clear for the future that such crimes are always prosecuted, that murderers never get away,” he said.

Despite his age, Bruins was found medically fit to stand trial, though Kniffka said the stress of the proceedings against him has weakened him.

Trial sessions are being limited to a maximum of three hours in deference to his age and health.

Bruins volunteered for the Waffen SS, the combat arm of the Nazis’ fanatical paramilitary organization, in 1941 after the Nazis conquered and occupied his homeland. He eventually rose to the rank of Unterscharfuehrer — roughly equivalent to sergeant.

He fought on the eastern front in Russia until 1943 when he became ill and no longer fit for combat duty.

Transferred back to the Netherlands, he served first in the Sicherheitsdienst — the Nazi internal intelligence agency — and then the Sicherheitspolizei, or Security Police, in a unit tasked to find resistance fighters and Jews.

As part of that unit, he is accused of killing resistance fighter Aldert Klaas Dijkema in September 1944 in the town of Appingedam, near the German border in the northern Netherlands.

If convicted, he faces a possible life sentence.

Dijkema was apprehended by the Nazis on Sept. 9, 1944, on suspicion he was involved in the Dutch resistance.

According to prosecutors,

Bruins and alleged accomplice August Neuhaeuser, who has since died, drove Dijkema to an isolated industrial area where they stopped and told him to “go take a leak.”

As he walked away from the car, they fired at least four shots into him, including into the back of his head, killing him instantly, according to the indictment.

Bruins and Neuhaeuser reported that Dijkema was shot while trying to escape.

Though it is not clear who fired the fatal shots, under German law if both suspects were there with the intent to kill, it does not matter who pulled the trigger, according to prosecutors.

The trial is scheduled until the end of September but it could be extended.

Japan to Fund Leak Control Measures at Nuclear Plant

TOKYO (AP) • Japan will fund some of the costly, long-term projects to control the worrisome and growing leaks of contaminated water at the crippled Fukushima nuclear plant.

Public funding is part of several measures the government adopted Tuesday. Most were already announced but they are widely seen as a safety appeal before the International Olympic Committee votes on which city will host the 2020 Olympics. Tokyo is a front-runner.

The operator of the Fukushima Dai-ichi plant says hundreds of tons of radioactive underground water have been leaking into the sea daily since early in the crisis, caused by the 2011 earthquake and tsunami. Several leaks from storage tanks in recent weeks have added to concerns that the plant is unable to manage the radioactive water.

On Monday, Japan’s top nuclear regulator raised safety concerns about the hastily built storage tanks and their foundations after signs of new leaks.

One was found over the weekend in a connecting pipe, and plant operator, Tokyo Electric Power Co., said it suspects three storage tanks where elevated radioactivity was detected also have had leaks.

BOISE • It was the worst loss in the Chris Petersen era and the largest margin of defeat in the last 16 years of Boise State football.

Fans want answers.

On Monday, receiver Gerardo Boldewijn, linebacker Blake Renaud and coach Petersen talked with the media about what they saw on film and how they felt after getting shellacked 38-6 by Washington.

Responses ranged from visceral to technical, as both offense and defense, coaches and their Saturday gameplan, over-arching schemes and philosophies came under question Sunday.

“(The loss) was definitely frustrating,” Boldewijn said. “The biggest thing is trying to keep your head up. It was really shocking. I have never been in this position before. Today we had good energy during practice. We are probably going to get together some time, and there is a lot of stuff to fix.”

Boldewijn had a career-high eight receptions Saturday, but for only 62 yards. Boldewijn’s low yards per catch average was emblematic of the Broncos’ inability to get the explosive plays against the Huskies secondary they talked about all off-season.

Quarterback Joe Southwick averaged just 3.8 yards per attempt, and his longest completion went 16.

Both Petersen and Boldewijn divided their explanation for the offense’s performance into different categories: Washington’s stout front seven and quality secondary play, blown chances at explosive plays and an inability for the receivers to win their one-on-one battles.

“We had a couple of missed opportunities,” Boldewijn said. “It wasn’t a different scheme; they were just on their game, pretty much. We are trying to get more energy during the games, that is a big part of it. As soon as we get the momentum on our side, things will go better.”

Petersen intimated that had the Broncos offense converted a couple of their long play opportunities, the defense would have played better. Petersen said the defense played hard, but it would be difficult to argue they played well, giving up nearly 600 yards.

“(Offense and defense) feed off each other,” Petersen said. “It (was) similar to the opener against Michigan State last year in terms of that style of defense (Boise

What to Watch For

TIMES-NEWS

Tuesday: The volleyball season started last Thursday, but it begins in earnest tonight with 13 matches being played across nine sites. Most are across the lower divisions, but there are a couple of big-school battles when Burley heads to Declo and Jerome crosses the canyon to visit Buhl.

Wednesday: Twin Falls travels to Wood River for a girls soccer battle between the two teams responsible for all the District IV titles since it became a six-team league. The Bruins are looking to continue their recent dominance in the series, after the Wolverines had a stranglehold on the rivalry in the first few seasons.

Friday: It's the home opener for five Great Basin Conference football teams: Twin Falls hosts Hillcrest, Canyon Ridge entertains Madison, Burley welcomes Buhl and Minico hosts Sky View (Utah). Also, Wood River plays host to Salmon. It's actually the season opener for Twin Falls and Wood River, with the other three playing away from home last week. We'll get a full view of all six GBC teams for the first time.

Friday-Saturday: CSI volleyball plays host to the Starr Corporation Invitational, during which it will play four highly-regarded teams. Hutchinson (Kan.) and Miami Dade (Fla.) both are national tournament regulars, while Laramie (Wyo.) has repeatedly been on the cusp. And then there's Blinn (Texas), a multiple national champion that's now coached by former CSI assistant Erin Mellinger. After a 5-3 start to the season, a good performance is a must this weekend.

Saturday: Boise State gets a “get better” game against FCS outfit Tennessee Martin. A dismal performance against Washington will live long in the memory, but the Broncos have a chance to take out some frustration this weekend — though they should take note, as an Ohio Valley Conference team has already beaten a Mountain West team this season. Eastern Illinois pasted San Diego State 40-19 last week, on the Aztecs' home field.

No Ruling yet for USA in America's Cup Case

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) •

The 34th America's Cup starts Saturday afternoon and defending champion Oracle Team USA still doesn't know how severely it will be punished for illegally modifying prototype catamarans in warmup regattas last year and earlier this year.

Organizers said late Monday afternoon that an expected decision by the international jury had been pushed back until Tuesday afternoon.

The penalties could be the harshest in the 162-year history of sailing's marquee event, adding another stain to a regatta marred by the death of British sailor Andrew "Bart" Simpson when challenger Artemis Racing capsized during a training run on May 9.

While the jury has worked in confidentiality, there's been speculation that Oracle Team USA could be docked a point or two in the best-of-17 America's Cup match against Emirates Team New Zealand on San Francisco Bay. It's also possible that some sailors could be barred from competing.

If the jury docks Oracle Team USA points, it's believed that the powerhouse sailing team would be forced to start the regatta in a negative position. That would require it to win more than nine races to retain the oldest trophy in international sports.

Team New Zealand would still need to win nine races to take the Auld Mug back to the Royal New Zealand Yacht Squadron in Auckland, its home from 1995-2003.

Oracle Team USA is owned by software tycoon Larry Ellison, one of the world's richest individuals.

The illegal modifications to three 45-foot catamarans came to light in late July when the boats were being prepared for the Red Bull Youth America's Cup, which began Sunday. The AC45s, sailed in the America's Cup World Series, were prototypes for the high performance, 72-foot catamarans being sailed in this summer's America's Cup regatta.

Russell Coutts, a four-time America's Cup winner who's the CEO of Team Oracle USA, has said that the illegal modifications were done without the knowledge of management or the skippers. The modifications consisted of adding about five pounds of ballast.

Coutts has called the illegal modifications a "ridiculous" mistake that didn't affect the boats' performance.

The case has been before the jury since Aug. 4.

In mid-August, the measurement committee said that one of the boats previously believed to have been illegally modified was found to be within regulations.

Coincidentally, that boat was Oracle Coutts 5, which was skippered by Coutts in some of the regattas in question. The boats that were illegally modified were ones sailed by Jimmy Spithill, Team Oracle USA's skipper, and Ben Ainslie, an Olympic star who's sailing with Oracle this summer in hopes of launching a British challenge for the 35th America's Cup.

Oracle Team USA forfeited its overall championships in the first two seasons of the America's Cup World Series.

The jury has investigated individual syndicate employees under Rule 69 of the Racing Rules of Sailing, which deals with gross misconduct, and the syndicate is being investigated under Protocol Article 60, which is aimed at protecting the reputation of the America's Cup.

KEY WEST, Fla. • Looking dazed and sunburned, U.S. endurance swimmer Diana Nyad walked ashore Monday, becoming the first person to swim from Cuba to Florida without the help of a shark cage.

The 64-year-old Nyad swam up to the beach just before noon, about 53 hours after starting her journey from Havana on Saturday. As she approached, spectators waded into waist-high water and surrounded her, taking pictures and cheering her on.

"I have three messages. One is, we should never, ever give up. Two is, you're never too old to chase your dream. Three is, it looks like a solitary sport, but it is a team," she said on the beach.

"I have to say, I'm a little bit out of it right now," Nyad said. She gestured toward her swollen lips, and simply said "seawater."

Her team said she had been slurring her words while out in the water. She was placed on a stretcher on the beach and received an IV before she was taken by ambulance to a hospital. But her doctor later declared her essentially healthy and expected her to recover quickly from dehydration, swelling and sunburn.

"I just wanted to get out of the sun," she said after coming ashore on a scorching, sunny day amid calm seas.

It was Nyad's fifth attempt and what she had said would be her last try to complete the approximately 110-mile swim. She tried three times in 2011 and 2012. Her first attempt was in 1978.

"It's historic, marvelous," said Jose Miguel Diaz Escrich, the Hemingway Marina commodore who helped organize the Cuba side of Nyad's multiple attempts.

"I always thought she could do it given her internal energy, her mental and physical strength, her will of iron," said Diaz Escrich, whom Nyad has called a longtime friend.

"More than the athletic feat, she wants to send a message of peace, love, friendship and happiness ... between the people of the United States and Cuba," he added.

President Barack Obama was among a flurry of public officials and celebrities who tweeted congratulations. The president's tweet read: "Never give up on your dreams."

Nyad's previous try was cut short amid boat trouble, storms, unfavorable currents and jellyfish stings that left her face puffy and swollen.

This time, she wore a full bodysuit, gloves, booties and a mask at night, when jellyfish rise to the surface. The new silicone mask caused bruises inside her mouth, making it difficult for her to speak, she told her team as she neared land.

Doctors traveling with Nyad had been worried about her slurred speech and her breathing, but didn't intervene, according to Nyad's website.

"She was incredible to watch the whole way through," said one of her doctors, Derek Covington, speaking with The Associated Press afterward.

Covington said Nyad was given IV fluids on her arrival to combat dehydration and was resting and being checked out at a medical center as a precaution.

Although she had some swelling of the lips, tongue and the airway near the mouth, Nyad wouldn't need a long recovery, the doctor said, calling her stable and "very healthy."

Nyad jumped from the seawall of the Hemingway Marina into the warm waters off Havana Saturday morning to begin swimming. She paused occasionally for nourishment, but never left the water.

The support team accompanying her had equipment that generated a faint electrical field around her, designed to keep sharks at bay. A boat also dragged a line in the water to help keep her on course.

Sumaya Haddin, of Miami, had been tracking Nyad's swim before her family's weekend trip to Key West. She was surprised to see Nyad's flotilla from a parasail off Smather's Beach on Monday morning, thinking she wouldn't arrive for another day.

"You couldn't see her, you could just see the boats. It was very exciting," she said.

Haddin said Nyad still had her fighting spirit when she arrived: "Getting into the ambulance, she had her peace sign up, her fist up. She was still fired up."

Australian Susie Maroney successfully swam the Strait in 1997 with a shark cage, which besides protection from the predators, has a drafting effect that pulls a swimmer along.

In 2012, Australian Penny Palfrey swam 79 miles toward Florida without a cage before strong currents forced her to stop. This June, her countrywoman Chloe McCordel made it 11 hours and 14 miles before jellyfish stings ended her bid.

In 1978, Walter Poenisch, an Ohio baker, claimed to have made the swim using flippers and a snorkel. Critics say there was insufficient independent documentation to verify his claim.

Nyad first garnered national attention in 1975 when she swam the 28 miles around the island of Manhattan in just under eight hours. In 1979 she swam the 102 miles from North Bimini, Bahamas, to Juno Beach, Fla., in 27.5 hours.

Nyad is also an author of three books, a motivational speaker and has been a reporter and commentator for NPR.

Henrik Stenson Finally Cashes In at TPC

NORTON, Mass. (AP) • The final round of the Deutsche Bank Championship had something for everyone on Labor Day — mostly a trophy, finally, for Henrik Stenson.

He was runner-up to Phil Mickelson at a major and Tiger Woods at a World Golf Championship, and he tied for third at the PGA Championship to keep climbing in the world ranking. Stenson was doing just about everything right this summer except winning, usually because someone simply played better.

Not this time.

Stenson surged past a fast-fading Sergio Garcia with three straight birdies, seized control with a 5-iron into 15 feet for another birdie right before the rain delay, and then put away Steve Stricker by holing out from the bunker for birdie late in the final round at the TPC Boston.

He wound up with a 5-under 66 and a two-shot win, and suddenly his summer is looking better than ever.

"Pretty perfect timing, I guess," Stenson said. "There's never a bad time to win a golf tournament, I know that much."

The 37-year-old Swede moved to the top of the FedEx Cup standings after two playoff events, assuring him his first trip to the Tour Championship and a clear shot at the $10 million prize.

"I'm just pleased I won here," said Stenson, who tied the tournament record at 22-under 262. "This was a big goal of mine to win a golf tournament after all those nice finishes. My family is here. I'm going to see my kids in a little bit. It's all good."

Stenson's win was only part of the high drama Monday, so much that Woods became an afterthought. He closed with a 73 and tied for 65th. The best image of him all day was walking back out to the course after a rain delay with he and his 6-year-old daughter dressed in matching red.

Federer loses to Robredo in fourth round of US Open

NEW YORK (AP) • Right from the start, Roger Federer looked very little like, well, the Roger Federer who routinely reached the final weekend at Grand Slam tournaments.

In the opening game of his fourth-round match at the U.S. Open, the owner of 17 major titles got passed at the net twice, sailed a backhand long, then missed two forehands to get broken. In the second game, the man who has spent more weeks ranked No. 1 than anyone else dumped a backhand into the net, then shanked two other backhands several feet wide.

No longer the dominant presence he once was, Federer lost in the round of 16 at Flushing Meadows for the first time in a decade, surprisingly beaten 7-6 (3), 6-3, 6-4 by 19th-seeded Tommy Robredo of Spain on Monday night.

“I kind of self-destructed, which is very disappointing,” said Federer, who made 43 unforced errors and managed to convert only 2 of 16 break points. “It was a frustrating performance.”

Only the latest in a series. This caps a poor-by-his-standards Grand Slam season for Federer, whose record Grand Slam trophy collection includes five at the U.S. Open.

He exited in the semifinals at the Australian Open in January, the quarterfinals at the French Open in early June, and the second round of Wimbledon — against a player ranked 116th, to boot — in late June. That ended Federer’s record run of reaching at least the quarterfinals at 36 consecutive Grand Slam tournaments.

Now, thanks to Robredo,

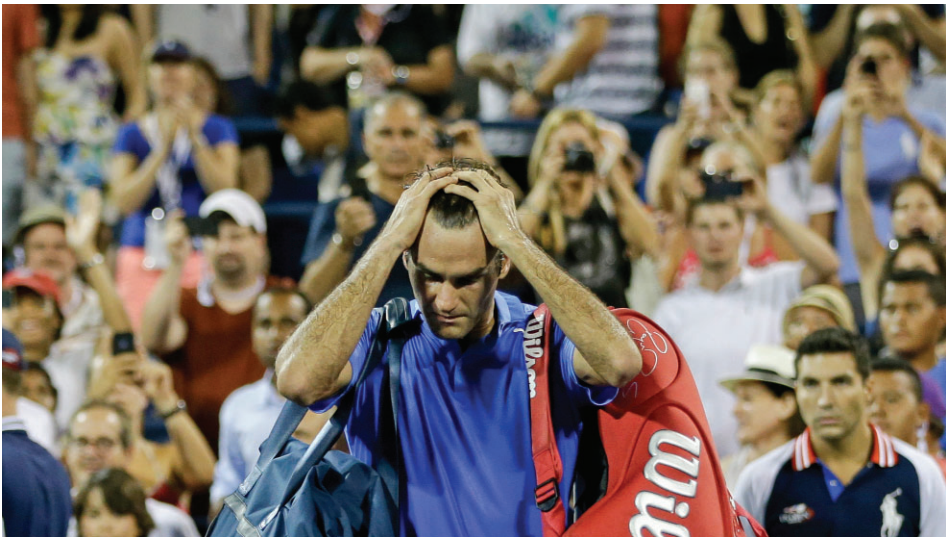

Federer has a new, unwanted streak: Two consecutive losses before the quarterfinals at majors.

This is the first season since 2002 that Federer did not reach at least one final at any of the four Grand Slam tournaments. That year also marked the last time Federer was ranked lower than he is now at No. 7.

“The story of my life: When I lose, people are shell-shocked to see me play this way,” Federer said.

At age 32, Federer has struggled with a bad back and experimented with a larger racket head, and all along, he’s had far more trouble winning matches than he usually does — particularly against the sort of players he barely broke a sweat against at his peak.

That this defeat came against Robredo made it all

Associated Press
Roger Federer, of Switzerland, walks off the court after losing to Tommy Robredo, of Spain, during the fourth round of the 2013 U.S. Open Monday in New York.

the more stunning. Not that Robredo is a slouch. He’s been ranked as high as No. 5, albeit back in 2006, and this is his seventh trip to the quarterfinals at a major. He made it that far at this year’s French Open by doing something no man had done since 1927, winning three matches in a row after dropping the first two sets of each.

Italian Women Make Strong Showing at Open

NEW YORK (AP) • Italian tennis fans can count on a celebration almost every day at the U.S. Open.

The women from Italy have, once again, infiltrated a Grand Slam draw, and for the second straight year, at least one is guaranteed a spot in the semifinals at Flushing Meadows.

Flavia Pennetta defeated Simona Halep 6-2, 7-6 (3) on Monday to set up an all-Italian quarterfinal against her friend, 10th-seeded Roberta Vinci, who beat — who else? — Italian Camila Giorgi in another fourth-round match.

“It’s going to be nice for us because one of us is going to have the chance to be in the semifinal,” Pennetta said. “In the other way, it’s always not easy to play with your friend.”

Nobody’s dealing with that feeling more these days than Vinci. Her match against Pennetta, a showdown between 30-somethings who have known each other since they were 8, will be her third straight match against another Italian.

Pennetta, meanwhile, knocked out fourth-seeded Sara Errani of Italy in the second round.

With five of the six Italians clustered in one quarter of the draw, there were three all-Italian matches over a five-day period, with the fourth coming later this week in the quarterfinal.

Giorgi, a 21-year-old who is ranked 136th, made a surprise visit into the second week by knocking off No. 6 Caroline Wozniacki on her way to the fourth round.

“I always thought I could do it, reach this level,” Giorgi said. “So it’s not like the victory over Wozniacki surprised me. I had been waiting for that.”

Vinci celebrated her win over Giorgi with a huge fist pump — not so much, she said, because she relished beating someone from her own country, but because she knew her opponent was swinging freely, playing with nothing to lose.

Four years ago, Vinci played the role of the underdog, while Pennetta was at the head of the Italian tennis renaissance — the first woman from that country to reach the top 10. Now, Pennetta is on the comeback from a wrist injury that sent her down the rankings. She’s in her fourth U.S. Open quarterfinal. She had partnered on and off in doubles with Vinci, when Vinci was still up-and-coming.

“I got better. I matured. I was maybe a little more insecure, a little more resigned” to being behind Pennetta in singles, Vinci said. “When we were together, she was the stronger one, the singles player. I felt like more of a doubles specialist. And

Busch Headed Back to Chase

After missing out on the playoffs in 2012, No. 18 driver has secured a shot at NASCAR’s Cup.

HAMPTON, Ga. (AP) • Kyle Busch can rest easy going to Richmond.

His spot in the Chase for Sprint Cup championship is secure.

Now, he’s eager to win a title.

One year after missing out on the playoff — a bitter blow for a driver of his talent — Busch locked up his berth with a victory Sunday night at Atlanta Motor Speedway.

More important, the 28-year-old has some much-needed momentum after his fourth Cup win of the season.

“A heck of a lot different than 365 days ago, I’ll tell you that much,” he said.

This was the volatile Busch at his best. Early on, he spit out some salty complaints over his radio, the No. 18 Toyota not performing like he wanted. At one point, he called his car “a joke.” But the crew kept making adjustments until the driver liked the way it handled.

“I appreciate them hanging in there with me, although I was pretty graphic sometimes,” Busch said. “I’m passionate about winning, man.”

Then, after a rapid-fire series of caution flags near the end, Busch emerged from the pits with the lead. He held off hard-charging Joey Logano by a comfortable 0.740 seconds.

Busch has 16 victories this year over NASCAR’s top three series, also winning nine times in Nationwide and three times in trucks.

But he’s still chasing the prize he really wants — that first Cup title.

“The championship is number one on anybody’s list,” he said. “I’ve yet to collect the big prize. One of these days it will happen. Maybe it’ll be 2013.”

Martin Truex Jr., racing with a broken right wrist, finished third on the 1.54-mile trioval, followed by Kurt Busch and Ryan Newman. The rest of the top 10 was Jeff Gordon, Juan Pablo Montoya, Dale Earnhardt Jr., Kevin Harvick and Brian Vickers.

Kyle Busch was among four more drivers locking up their spot in the Chase heading to Richmond next weekend, where the 12-car field will be set for the playoff. He was joined by Harvick, Carl Edwards and Kasey Kahne, the latter assured of at least a wild card.

Points leader Jimmie Johnson, Clint Bowyer and Matt Kenseth had already claimed playoff berths before Atlanta.

That means the final five will be determined at Richmond. Logano is one of the top contenders for those remaining spots, going into Richmond eighth in the points and also holding a victory as a wild-card backstop. He had the fastest car on the track at the end of the race, but ran out of time to run down Busch.

“It’s just frustrating,” Logano said. “But in the grand scheme of things, it’s a big points day for us to get into the Chase going to Richmond. This helps us a lot. A win would’ve helped a lot more.”

The rest of the top 10 includes Earnhardt (seventh), Greg Biffle (ninth) and Kurt Busch (10th). Gordon is 11th, but he’s yet to win a race. For now, the wild cards belong to 12th-place Kahne (two wins) and No. 13 Truex (one win).

“The last couple of weeks, we’ve been battling and passing and having a great time out there,” said Gordon, a four-time Cup champion. “We didn’t do that earlier in the year, which is why we’re in the position we’re in.”

Bowyer was dominant through the middle of the race, leading 48 laps, but he radioed his crew that that something seemed amiss in his No. 15 car. On Lap 193, those fears became reality when smoke started pouring from the back of his Toyota going into Turn 1. He managed to creep back around to pit road, but he headed straight for the garage, any hope of winning the race snuffed out.

“I don’t think they wanted to believe me,” Bowyer said about his crew. “But I was pretty sure what I was hearing.”

At least Bowyer won’t have to worry about the poor finish — he wound up 39th — costing him a spot in the Chase.

That wasn’t the case for defending Cup champion Brad Keselowski.

Winless for the year and on the Chase bubble, he took over the lead and looked as if he had a shot at a much-needed victory. But a couple of cylinders failed and he began dropping back, finally sputtering to a stop 18 laps from the finish. He finished 35th and will go to Richmond knowing he likely needs a victory to even have a shot at taking a second straight title.

He slipped to 15th in the standings, 28 points behind Kurt Busch.

“There’s just some things you can’t control,” Keselowski said. “I guess we’ll look at the positive. We were leading the race when it broke. We were doing all the right things. We just didn’t put all the pieces together.”

Busch knows how that feels. He was in that same position a year ago.

“This is a humbling sport,” Busch said. “Look at what last year’s champion, what he’s going through. You’ve got to take the highs with the lows. Certainly I’m not very good at taking the lows. I’ll be the first to admit it. But when you get the highs, you’ve got to treasure ‘em, because you don’t know how many more you’ll get.”

“This,” he added, “was a fun night.”

Ketchum Citizens to Go Back to the Ballot to Improve Tourism

TIMES-NEWS

KETCHUM • Ketchum citizens recently formed a campaign committee to advocate for a ballot measure voters will consider this fall.

The measure fell just short of approval in last fall’s election but again calls for a 1 percent increase to the local option tax, LOT, to increase air service to Friedman Memorial Airport.

The Ketchum Tourism and Jobs Initiative campaign formed because of the pivotal role increased air service and marketing of new and existing flights plays in improving tourism, the backbone of the local economy, said a statement from the Wood River Economic Partnership.

Better air service will help keep local jobs in the valley; increase tourism by helping local businesses grow and create more jobs, the partnership reports.

The new San Francisco flight that will serve the airport this winter and in the next summer season, for example, was heralded as great news for the Wood River Valley.

The proposed ballot measure would generate nearly $1.6 million annually in Ketchum. Those dedicated funds will ensure the community can keep the new nonstop San Francisco flight for more than the one year the contract covers, effectively market all flights and pursue more non-stop destinations.

The vote will be Nov. 5. To learn more about the campaign, visit KetchumTourismandJobs.com.

Ketchum Bookstore Owner Talks Economic Fallout from Beaver Creek Fire

BY JOE CADOTTE

KETCHUM • Sarah Hedricks’ local bookstore has lost a lot of money to wildfires in recent years, but — like other local merchants — she’s determined to keep her business alive.

In 2007, Iconoclast Books and Cafe survived the 46,000-acre Castle Rock Fire, which cost the Wood River Valley $3.5 million in sales.

A year later, Hedrick’s husband and business partner was killed in a car accident.

This year, the 111,488-acre Beaver Creek Fire drove thousands of people out of the Wood River Valley during the peak of the summer tourism season, stopping a multi-million-dollar cash flow in mere days.

Today In Ketchum, the air is cleared of smoke, and the streets are full.

But the losses are immeasurable.

“We talk about how this fire has changed the face of Ketchum, Sun Valley, for maybe 15 or 20 years,” Hedrick said.

She said the Beaver Creek Fire cost her more than one-third of her annual income in less than two weeks this summer.

“It was immediate. My sales stopped,” she said.

Hedrick said another one-tenth of her revenue was lost through the cancellation of Hedrick said she can’t take out a Small Business Administration loan because she still owes on one she took out after the Castle Rock Fire.

“I’m in a position, with the way Amazon has changed people’s book-buying habits, that I can’t make it on my local business anymore. I can’t. I absolutely am dependent on the tourism. And without that, that’s where I feel like I can’t recoup this.”

But ski season is on the horizon, she said, another time of tourist generosity in the Wood River Valley.

Forgotten Treasure? 75 People in Magic Valley with Valuable Unclaimed Property

TIMES-NEWS

When people move, divorce, close bank accounts or make other lifestyle changes, they sometimes leave behind forgotten property. Unclaimed property usually means money — checking or savings accounts, stock dividends, mutual funds and utility refunds. Or it can be things left in safety deposit boxes or at hotels or hospitals, items such as coins, gems, jewelry and stamps.

Honest businesses surrender those assets to the state, which tries to reunite the stuff with its owner or heirs. The Idaho Treasurer’s Office provided this sampling of 75 people who own unclaimed property valued at more than $100. Their last known addresses were in south-central Idaho. But many other people are on the list, too. Be proactive by searching for your name at the office’s website, sto.idaho.gov

You might be surprised by what you find.

Drug Agents Plumb Vast Database of Call Records

BY GENE JOHNSON AND EILEEN SULLIVAN

Associated Press

SEATTLE • For at least six years, federal drug and other agents have had near-immediate access to billions of phone call records dating back decades in a collaboration with AT&T that officials have taken pains to keep secret, newly released documents show. The program, first reported Monday by The New York Times, is called the Hemisphere Project. It’s paid for by the U.S. Drug Enforcement Administration and the Office of National Drug Control Policy, and it allows investigators armed with subpoenas to quickly mine the company’s vast database to help track down drug traffickers or other suspects who switch cellphones to avoid detection. The details of the Hemisphere Project come amid a national debate about the federal government’s access to phone records, particularly the bulk collection of phone records for national security purposes. Hemisphere, however, takes a different approach from that of the National Security Agency, which maintains a database of call records handed over by phone companies as authorized by the USA Patriot Act. “Subpoenaing drug dealers’ phone records is a bread-and-butter tactic in the course of criminal investigations,” Justice Department spokesman Brian Fallon said in an email. “The records are maintained at all times by the phone company, not the government. This program simply streamlines the process of serving the subpoena to the phone company so law enforcement can quickly keep up with drug dealers when they switch phone numbers to try to avoid detection.” The Associated Press independently obtained a series of slides detailing Hemisphere. They show the database includes not just records of AT&T customers, but of any call that passes through an AT&T switch. The federal government pays the salaries of four AT&T employees who work in three federal anti-drug offices around the country to expedite subpoena requests, an Obama administration official told the AP on Monday. The official spoke on the condition of anonymity because he or she was not authorized to discuss the program, and said that two of the AT&T employees are based at the High Intensity Drug Trafficking Area office in Atlanta, one at the HIDTA office in Houston, and one at the office in Los Angeles. The Hemisphere database includes records that date back to 1987, the official said, but typical narcotics investigations focus on records no older than 18 months. To keep the program secret, investigators who request searches of the database are instructed to “never refer to Hemisphere in any official document,” one of the slides noted. Agents are told that when they obtain information through a Hemisphere program subpoena, they should “wall off” the program by filing a duplicative subpoena directly to target’s phone company or by simply writing that the information was obtained through an AT&T subpoena. It wasn’t immediately clear what percentage of U.S. calls are routed through AT&T switches and thus have records captured in Hemisphere. One slide says the program includes records “for a tremendous amount of international numbers that place calls through or roam on the AT&T network.” “While we cannot comment on any particular matter, we, like all other companies, must respond to valid subpoenas issued by law enforcement,” AT&T spokesman Mark Siegel said in an email. According to the slides, the program is useful for investigators trying to track down drug traffickers or other criminals who frequently change phones or use multiple phones. If agents become aware of a phone number previously used by a suspect, they can write an administrative subpoena, with no judicial oversight required, for records about that number. Hemisphere analysts can track the number’s call history or other characteristics and compare it to the history and characteristics of phones still in use — thus winnowing down a list of possible current phone numbers for the suspect, along with their location. “Hemisphere results can be returned via email within an hour of the subpoenaed request and include (call detail records) that are less than one hour old at the time of the search,” one slide said. A Washington state peace activist named Drew Hendricks provided the slides to the AP on Monday. He said he obtained them in response to a series of public records requests he filed with West Coast police agencies, initially seeking information about a law enforcement conference that had been held in Spokane. In the Northwest, the DEA and Department of Homeland Security make most of the Hemisphere requests through administrative subpoenas, one slide noted. Since late last year, AT&T has also accepted requests by court orders from local police agencies in Washington state. As of June, Hemisphere had processed 679 requests from the Northwest High Intensity Drug Trafficking Area. And since 2007, the Los Angeles Hemisphere program had processed more than 4,400 requests. In connection with the controversy over the NSA’s sweeping up of call records, some lawmakers have suggested that phone companies store the records instead, and allow federal agents or analysts to request specific data when necessary.

Emmett’s Fortunes Take Hit with Sawmill Bankruptcy

EMMETT (AP) • A sawmill’s resurrection in southwestern Idaho with help from millions in taxpayer money was supposed to bring a much-needed infusion of jobs into a depressed region. Instead, the Emerald Forest Products mill in Emmett is in bankruptcy and could be soon seized by creditors. Meanwhile, its owner in Montana says he’s trying to cobble together a plan to save the project. The Idaho Statesman reports Dick Vinson got $4 million in federal economic stimulus money and says he’s invested another $7 million of his own money in the project. But the mill has never really worked — its machinery never functioned as envisioned — and Emerald owes more than $1.9 million to bankers. A trustee’s sale was delayed until September, in part to give Vinson time to secure additional funding. “We’re not entirely out of it,” he said. “We’re still in there, still trying to put something together.” Emmett, on the Payette River in a lush valley in the midst of Gem County, has a history that’s tied to the fortunes of the timber industry. Hundreds of people once worked at mills operated by Payette Lumber Co., which later became Boise Cascade. But its operation in Emmett closed in 2001, putting many out of work in this town of about 6,500 people. Vinson’s designs for his mill, once projected to employ about 45 people, were seen as a means of rejuvenating at least a portion of Emmett’s wood-products glory days. Now, people aren’t so sure. “Naturally, I hope someone would buy and reopen the mill with the monetary backing to carry them through at least for a few years,” said Gem County Commissioner Carlos Bilbao, a former Republican state legislator from Emmett. “They will have to do a bit of remodeling to make it more productive. Whoever buys it is going to have to invest some money into it.” The public trustee sale is Sept. 13. Northwest Bank, owed the $1.9 million by Emerald, would gain control of the mill if no buyer emerges.

not give up. “It’s a town that really doesn’t want to see anybody sink. They really care for each other. They really look out for one another,” she said. “But at some point, how much can we do for each other? I’m very hopeful, but I have no idea what my plan is right now. I’m not a quitter. I have no intentions of locking up my doors this week. “You look at places where there were fires four or five years ago, the growth is beautiful. I don’t feel that doomsday-ish. Winters after fires are some of the best. We’re poised for one of the best ski seasons ever. It might be our best September on record, with everything rescheduling and everyone so determined to come and support this area.” Public and private development leaders still are working to measure the direct and indirect losses from the Beaver Creek Fire, which now has been fully contained.

Newtown Parade Crowds Cheer Students, Firefighters

NEWTOWN, Conn. (AP) • Thousands of spectators turned out Monday for Newtown's Labor Day Parade, capping months of organizing in the aftermath of a shooting rampage that killed 20 first-graders and six educators last December.

The Sandy Hook Volunteer Fire and Rescue Co. and Sandy Hook Elementary School students received the loudest applause from spectators along the parade route. "This is a great example of how the town comes together," parade organizer Beth Caldwell told WFSB-TV. "The strength of the community really has shown today."

Gov. Dannel P. Malloy, U.S. Sens. Richard Blumenthal and Christopher Murphy, Newtown First Selectwoman Pat Llodra and other officials participated in the 52nd annual parade.

Sandy Hook mother Courtney Schroeder said: "We just moved here a little over a year ago, and then everything happened. The way the community came together is just amazing."

Organizers were wary about a parade, a fixture in Newtown since the early 1960s, so soon after the shootings at Sandy Hook Elementary School. A gunman who had shot his mother to death at their home went to the school and killed 26 people before killing himself as police arrived.

Early in the planning for the parade last winter, organizers settled on the slogan "We are Newtown, marching strong."

"It was a delicate balance, a delicate balance between an avenue of celebration and respect for the tragedy that happened in our town," Caldwell said.

Today is Tuesday, Sept. 3, the 246th day of 2013. There are 119 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight:
On September 3, 1943, Allied forces invaded Italy during World War II, the same day Italian officials signed a secret armistice with the Allies.

TODAY IN HISTORY

On this date:
In 1189, England's King Richard I (the Lion-Hearted) was crowned in Westminster Abbey.

In 1658, Oliver Cromwell, the Lord Protector of England, died in London; he was succeeded by his son, Richard.

In 1783, representatives of the United States and Britain signed the Treaty of Paris, which officially ended the Revolutionary War.

In 1861, during the Civil War, Confederate forces invaded the border state of Kentucky, which had declared its neutrality in the conflict.

In 1868, the Japanese city of Edo was renamed Tokyo.

In 1923, the United States and Mexico resumed diplomatic relations.

In 1939, Britain, France, Australia and New Zealand declared war on Germany, two days after the Nazi invasion of Poland.

In 1951, the television soap opera "Search for Tomorrow" made its debut on CBS.

In 1967, Nguyen Van Thieu (nwen van too) was elected president of South Vietnam under a new constitution. Motorists in Sweden began driving on the right-hand side of the road instead of the left.

In 1972, American swimmer Mark Spitz won the sixth of his seven gold medals at the Munich Olympics as he placed first in the 100-meter freestyle.

In 1976, America's Viking 2 lander touched down on Mars to take the first close-up, color photographs of the planet's surface.

In 1999, a French judge closed a two-year inquiry into the car crash that killed Princess Diana, dismissing all charges against nine photographers and a press motorcyclist, and concluding the accident was caused by an inebriated driver.

Ten years ago: Paul Hill, 49, a former minister who said he murdered an abortion doctor and his bodyguard to save the lives of unborn babies, was executed in Florida by injection, becoming the first person put to death in the United States for anti-abortion violence. President George W. Bush signed legislation to begin free trade with Singapore and Chile.

Five years ago: Alaska Gov. Sarah Palin, John McCain's choice of running mate, roused delegates at the Republican National Convention in St. Paul, Minn., as she belittled Democrat Barack Obama and praised her new boss. Thousands of New Orleans residents who had fled Hurricane Gustav forced the city to reluctantly open its doors, while President George W. Bush returned to the scene to show that the government had turned a corner since its bungled response to Katrina. Baseball's first use of instant replay backed an onfield call of a home run for Alex Rodriguez during the ninth inning of a New York Yankees game against the Tampa Bay Rays. (The Yankees won the game, 8-4.)

One year ago: President Barack Obama consoled victims of Hurricane Isaac along the Gulf Coast and stoked the enthusiasm of union voters in the industrial heartland, blending a hard political sell with a softer show of sympathy on the eve of the Democratic National Convention. Prolific character actor Michael Clarke Duncan, 54, died in Los Angeles. Sun Myung Moon, 92, a self-proclaimed messiah who founded the Unification Church, died in Gapeyeong, South Korea.

WWW.MAGIC VALLEY.COM/ CLASSIFIEDS

DEAR ABBY: Congratulations to “Trying to Be Nice” (June 6) for her random acts of kindness. The world needs more of it. Let me point out, however, that being nice isn’t just about doing specific charitable tasks. It is something that applies every moment of every day, and as the axiom says, “Charity begins at home.”

DEAR ABBY
Jeanne Phillips

It can mean paying a compliment to a family member or friend, refraining from a hurtful comment at work or in school, smiling to a stranger on the street, willingly doing a chore at home (even if it’s “not my job”), or something as simple as cleaning up one’s own mess after lunch. To quote another axiom: Little things mean a lot.

— RHEAL IN OTTAWA, CANADA

DEAR RHEAL: I agree. Sometimes they can be the simplest things, opportunities we take for granted that are right in front of us. I was touched by the responses I received from readers suggesting other acts of kindness:

DEAR ABBY: Animal shelters often need volunteers to walk dogs. Rescue organizations could use foster families for pets, or even pet food donations or supplies. Veterans organizations such as the Wounded Warrior Project welcome volunteers to help with events, or mentor or assist vets in writing a resume.

If you sign up with Volunteers of America, they can match you with organizations that suit your skills — reading to the elderly in nursing homes, etc. Youth shelters can sometimes use volunteers to help teens learn basic life skills such as balancing a checkbook, smart grocery shopping or meal planning.

Around the holidays, my husband and I visit the cemetery and clean/maintain headstones that look neglected, especially those of veterans.

— LYNN IN BOTHELL, WASH.

DEAR ABBY: As an avid teenage volunteer, I have some suggestions! Donating your hair to Locks of Love is one of my favorite acts of kindness. Your hair will help make wigs for women with cancer. Donating blood is another great way to help strangers.

If you prefer to give your time instead, nursing homes are always looking for people to play bingo with patients. Shelters for women and children need volunteers to come and play with the children, so the moms have time to talk with counselors.

— SARAIN SUGARLAND, TEXAS

DEAR ABBY: “Trying” could join a neighborhood watch or help with Meals on Wheels, take the newspaper to an elderly person’s front porch, or start a recycling program in her neighborhood.

— LUCY IN ST. LOUIS

DEAR ABBY: I decided, after a self-imposed seclusion (my daughter passed away at a young age), to go back out in the world and spread the joy of flowers. I contacted a local supermarket and asked them to save me their wilting flowers that would have been thrown out. I took the best, arranged them in vases, and distributed them to local nursing homes, memory-care facilities and hospice. In this way I have brightened people’s last days on Earth with something that would have otherwise been discarded.

My “mission” has expanded now and includes another store and a shelter for abused women and children.

— KATHY IN NAPLES, FLA.

DEAR ABBY: Volunteer to drive people to vote on Election Day. And the easiest — call the aging members of your family regularly and let them talk your ear off!

— MARY IN EAST HARTFORD, CONN.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE®

Bobby Wolff

“I never laughed, being bashful. Lowering my head, I looked at the wall. Called to a thousand times, I never looked back.”

— Ezra Pound

There are three basic ways of reaching a slam, and I have seen them abbreviated by the acronym “BBC.” Bashing is the unsophisticated approach; Blackwood and Cue-bids are the more subtle ones. Here South opted to follow the route that gave away the least information. Perhaps deservedly, he reached a poor contract, but he was able to set a trap, into which East fell.

Against six hearts, West chose a passive trump lead, and South immediately realized that his best chance seemed to lie in finding East with the diamond ace in a relatively short holding. Then he could lead a diamond to his queen, followed by ducking the next diamond. If no ace appeared, a diamond ruff might next establish the diamond king for the 12th trick.

As you can see, this approach should not have worked today. However, after winning the trump lead in dummy, declarer duly led a diamond to his queen, which held the trick, but now instead of playing another diamond from hand, South crossed to dummy with a trump and advanced the diamond six. East, afraid that South might have started with the doubleton Q-J, went in with the ace, and now it was all over.

East should have reflected that if indeed South had this holding, playing the ace would simply establish dummy’s king for a valuable discard later. To rise with the ace would probably have been right only if the defenders had another quick trick to come — which was unlikely on the bidding and play so far.

ANSWER: There are people who will tell you not to open balanced 12-counts; not I. When you open a suit, then rebid in no-trump, you show a balanced 12-14 points, and this hand qualifies for that action. I can’t tell you that it will work, but when you have a way to describe your hand, go ahead and take it.

IF SEPTEMBER 3 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: Nervous energy and sudden changes of plan could put you off your feed for the next three to four weeks. A key relationship might undergo stress, but if it's solid it will survive. November is the best month to make crucial decisions or changes, such as a new job or career. You'll not only have better luck than usual, but you'll also possess more than enough wisdom. Vacations taken during December might bring you the greatest satisfaction, but with all the ambition churning inside you, you may funnel your inspiration into putting a business plan into action successfully.

Jeraldine Saunders

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Once you have the right tools, it's easy to right a wrong. You may be given an opportunity to fix a past mistake or make repairs to your reputation. Use a critical eye for perfection.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): You can use the past as a stepping stone rather than a blockade. Your past mistakes are like the wall of a swimming pool. A smart swimmer pushes off from the wall to win the race.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Opinions have nothing to do with the facts, so don't use them as a focus point. What everyone says about you is irrelevant. What you think about yourself is the only thing that is relevant.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Once the genie is out of the bottle, the only thing to do is make a wish. You will feel less vulnerable and more in control of a situation once you admit that you must accept it.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Wake up, sleepyhead. If a gentle tap on the arm doesn't work, then someone might shake you. You may be forced to face up to a state of affairs that you've been trying to ignore.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Your bids for attention may be ignored. You are the center of the universe to someone, but not everyone. Knuckle down and concentrate on making concrete progress.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Never underestimate the power of love. Someone may be working hard to reach mutual goals. It's up to you to be supportive rather than complain that you aren't the center of attention.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Once the water is over the dam, the best thing to do is to swim in it. You can take a calculated risk if you accept the past and use everything at your disposal to make it a success.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Learn to earn. You can hit the target if you aim and learn from experts. If you simply pick up the bow and arrow and hope for the best you'll be left behind in the dust.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Fear can make you fumble the future. Sudden changes that occurred in the past might hold value if you use them as learning tools rather than as deterrents. Build on them as you move forward.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): A discouraging word spoken to a loved one can be forgiven. Where your credit report is concerned, however, you can't erase the past. Separate harsh facts from wishful thinking.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Keep your head when all about you are losing theirs. Someone might think you're ignoring a commitment when you're really working hard to accomplish something of great importance.
