Daredevils Vie to Perfect Evel Knievel’s Famous Snake River Canyon Jump

BY KIMBERLEE KRUESI
lkruesi@magicvalley.com

TWIN FALLS • It’s been nearly 40 years since Evel Knievel rolled into Twin Falls hoping to jump across the Snake River Canyon, but it’ll be at least one more year before another daredevil might accomplish what the famous stuntman failed to do.

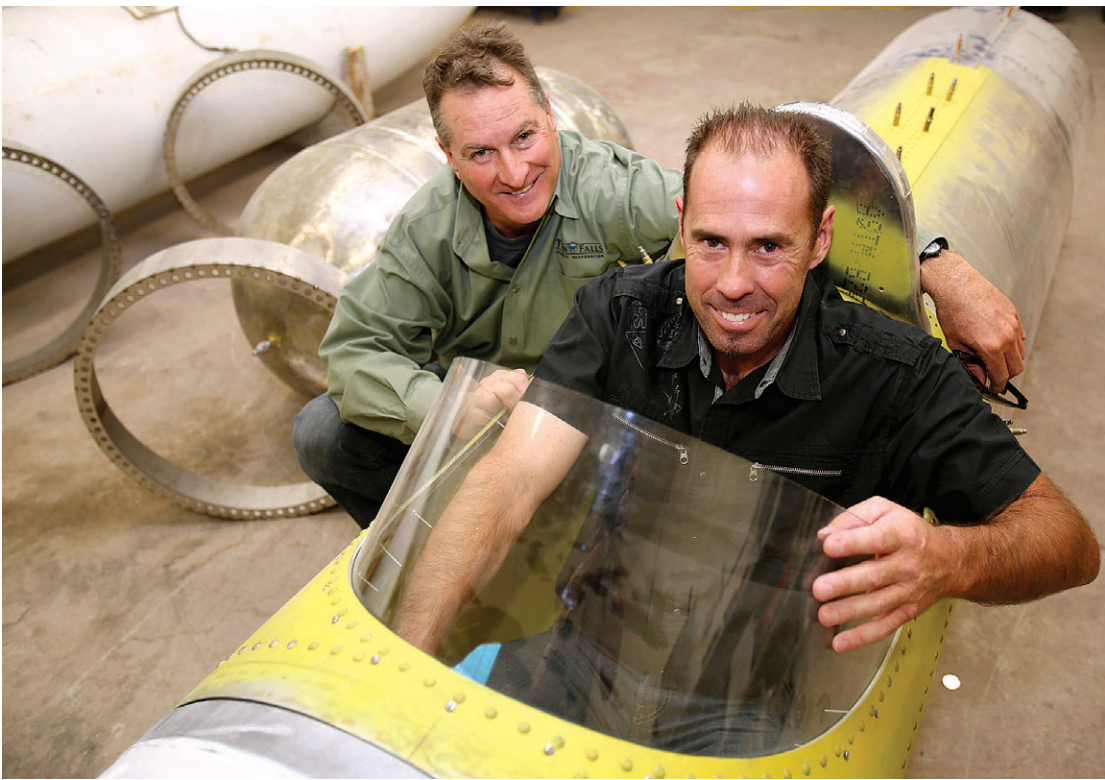

At least five Knievel admirers are vying for a chance to launch a rocket across the canyon starting from Twin Falls.

In the past, city officials refrained from establishing a formal permitting process for approving a launch site, instead telling interested parties to first acquire the required permits on the landing side of the canyon.

Like Knievel, most applicants over the years never made it to the other side. Most gave up or ran out of money before completing the complicated permit process outlined by the Idaho Department of Lands.

Yet now that the 40th anniversary

Company Retrieving Bad Beef in Local Schools

BY BRIAN SMITH
bsmith@magicvalley.com

Beef that may contain small pieces of plastic is being retrieved from 78 Idaho school districts, including 14 in the Magic Valley area, as well as juvenile detention centers and a children’s home.

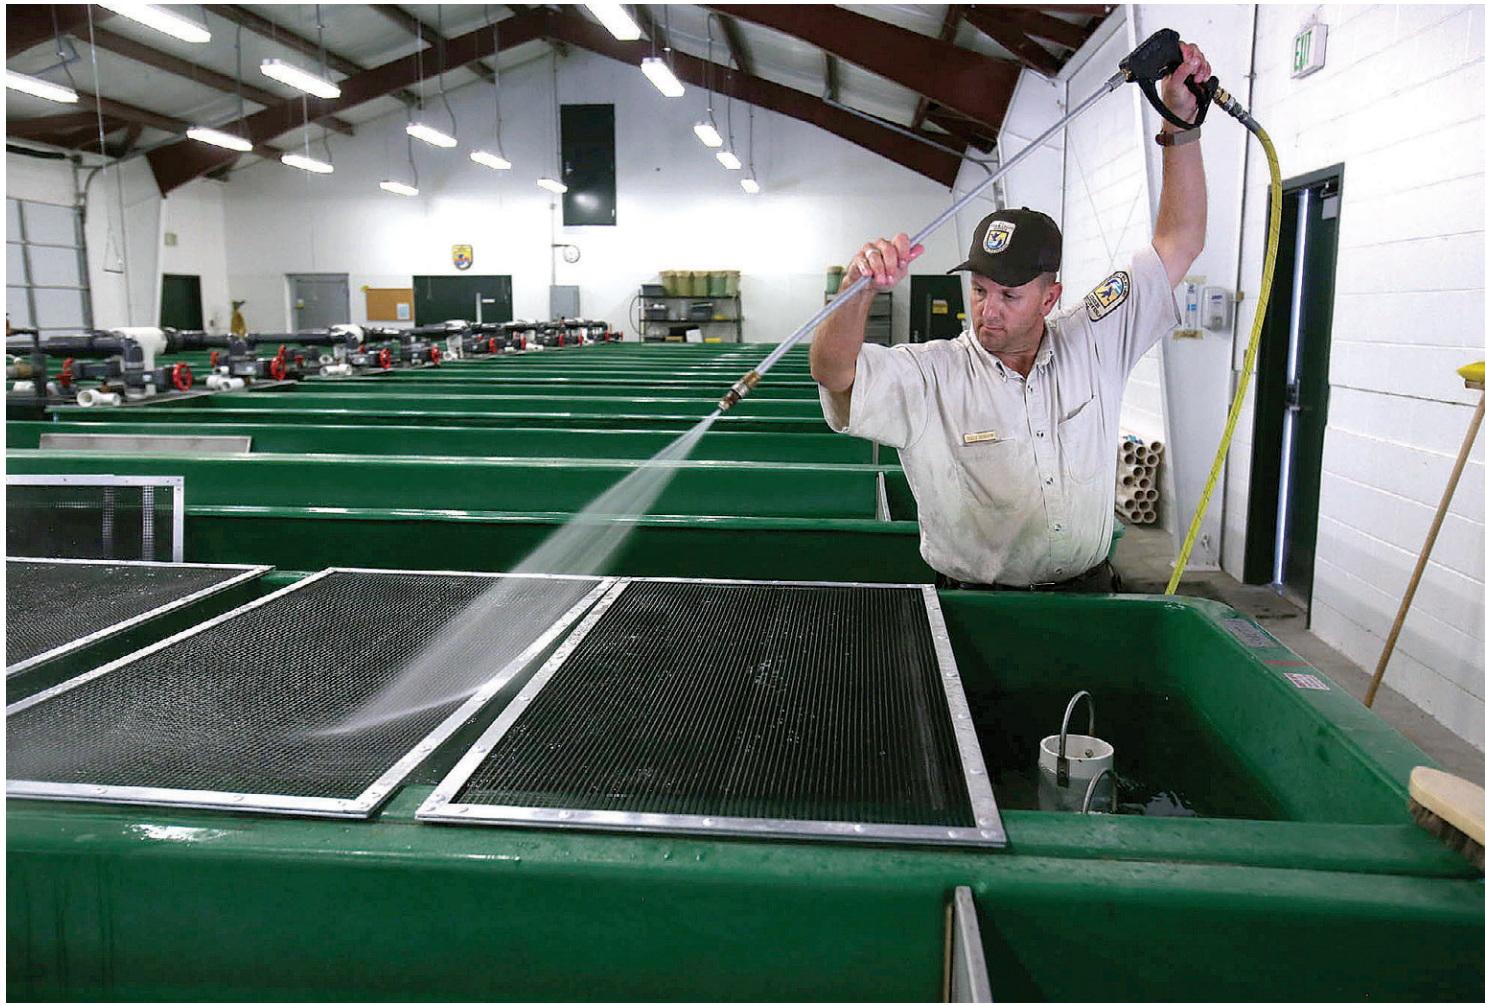

Central Valley Meat Co., of Hanford, Calif., issued a product retrieval for ground beef sent to Idaho schools between July 2 and Sept. 6, reports the Idaho Department of Education. The beef was lot number 6063A3089A and had a production date of March 30.

Local school districts that may have received the product include those in Blaine County, Bliss, Camas County, Castleford, Glenns Ferry, Hagerman, Hansen, Jerome, Heritage Academy, Kimberly, Minidoka, Murtaugh, Richfield and Valley.

No Idaho schools have reported problems with or concerns about beef, said Melissa McGrath, department spokeswoman. Schools that may have received the beef were notified and asked to identify and segregate it so it could be collected by the Hatchery is at the forefront, installing some of the newest technology to help produce healthier fish.

Hagerman Hatchery Celebrates 80 Years

HAGERMAN • The millions of smolts that grow up to attract anglers from all over the country would be almost nonexistent without the help of federal fish hatcheries, including one critical facility in southern Idaho’s backyard.

The Hagerman National Fish Hatchery opened its raceways 80 years ago. At the time, it was used to produce trout for recreational fishing in eastern Oregon, Idaho and Nevada. Today, the facility still grows some trout, but most of its 120 raceways are used to produce more than 1.4 million steelhead smolts.

The fish are released in the Salmon River Basin in May to travel down the Lower Snake River with the hope that they will return as healthy full-grown fish in April.

In the early 1900s, four hydropower dams built along the Snake River severely reduced the number of young fish that survive the swim to Columbia Basin.

With an increase in fishing and more dams in place, steelhead and salmon populations have dropped, said hatchery Manager

Craig Eaton.

Federally managed hatcheries have been critical in helping to keep beloved fish species from becoming endangered.

“In my opinion, steelhead would be extinct or close to extinction in Idaho without the help of federal hatcheries like us,” Eaton said.

Despite operating in the Thousand Springs valley for 80 years, Eaton joked that the facility often faces an identity crisis with the state-run fish hatchery that opened next door many years after.

The Hagerman National Fish Hatchery will celebrate its 80th year anniversary Saturday. The family friendly celebration will include hatchery tours, informational booths from local and federal agencies and salmon mini-golf. Jerome Sheriff’s Office Settles with Injured Guard Member

BY ALISON GENE SMITH
alismith@magicvalley.com

JEROME • Jerome County agreed to pay an injured Idaho Army National Guard member $150,000 as part of a settlement announced Friday.

Guard member Mervin Jones sued in January, saying the sheriff’s office violated his employment rights under the Uniformed Services Employment and Reemployment Rights Act. Jones was recuperating from a knee injury sustained during military service.

The payment includes $75,000 in lost wages. The county also agreed to provide a letter requesting Jones’ return to the state’s employment eligibility registry.

The county did not admit to all the allegations.

“Even though I am an honorably discharged veteran of the United States Army, I was not aware of all details of USERRA,” Sheriff Doug McFall said in a Monday statement. “I acted on good faith and consulted with attorneys from the county’s insurance carrier.”

McFall said he could not release details of actions leading to Jones’ termination unless Jones signs a legal release.

The county admits to no liability leading to the settlement, McFall said.

“This settlement demonstrates our vigilant protection of the employment opportunities of our service members, and our commitment to vigorous enforcement of the laws that protect them,” Jocelyn Samuels, acting assistant attorney general for the U.S. Department of Justice, said in a news release. “The department is pleased that we were able to work cooperatively with Jerome County to resolve this matter without the need for contested litigation.”

THE MARKET AT A GLANCE

Stocks Rise on Mergers, Homebuilder Outlook

NEW YORK (AP) • The stock market got a boost on Monday from mergers, homes, and phones.

Stocks posted their biggest gains in almost two months. Two big deals suggested growing confidence in the economy: Luxury retailer Neiman Marcus was sold for $6 billion, and Koch Industries bought electronics component maker Molex for $7.2 billion.

Homebuilding stocks were some of the biggest gainers in the Standard & Poor's 500 index after Hovnanian Enterprises said home prices are rising and its backlog jumped almost 27 percent from a year earlier.

Curious Mind
Fires are Part of Life Cycle
for Native Pine Trees

As a resident who lives near Redfish Lake in Stanley, I am very curious why, when hundreds of lodgepole pine fell under very strong winds a few years ago, the Forest Service chose to let them lie along the roads into and surrounding Redfish Lake. This amazing stockpile of dead trees would only make the fire, if it reaches the road and begins fueling off of these piles of deadwood, an inferno that will tarnish the look and enjoyment of this spectacular lake. Thousands upon thousands of visitors come to Redfish and Stanley each year, and these businesses have only a few precious weeks to make enough money to sustain them through the long, harsh economic winter. Why doesn't the press try to get some concrete answer to why the Forest Service doesn't take economics and its taxpaying citizens into account when making these decisions that are only making fires worse for all the poor folks that live here and need to make a living, the working families from Boise and other cities that are hot, wanting to come, camp inexpensively, and enjoy what is not the Forest Service's private property but the people who pay taxes for use of this land. I am sorry but from someone who lives here, I don't feel this forest is being managed correctly by the ones we entrust to manage for the future and, most importantly, the present usage and enjoyment of its human inhabitants as well as the animals who are also being negatively impacted by fires. Hope you can help get some concise answers instead of the usual, "It's the natural look" that's important spin from Forest Service officials. Something is very wrong with this picture. That's not even getting into why the Forest Service, when the Halstead Fire first took hold, refused to really engage in firefighting until it was well on its way. I have seen video of their standing around discussing it and choosing to just wait and see. By then of course, it was a long-gone fire of destruction.

The Sawtooth National Recreation Area is almost completely dominated by lodgepole pine (Pinus contorta), a species commonly referred to as "the weed of the pine world," said Barbara Garcia, deputy area ranger of the Sawtooth National Recreation Area and Stanley Ranger Station.

"It is most often associated with high elevation, cold and dry climates. Lodgepole pine is a fire- or disturbance-dependent species. It typically has a lifespan of about 100 to 200 years. This means that through disturbance like beetle infestations or fire, the species regenerates itself. The past 10 to 15 years have been very challenging for not only the SNRA, but many other areas of the West where mass mortality caused by drought and beetle epidemics have killed over 90 percent of the lodgepole overstory," said Garcia.

"As you can imagine, like most ecological systems, it is not easy to predict or to treat this kind of event." The SNRA has been conducting many treatments (including mechanical and hand thinning) behind homes, businesses and resorts in order to alleviate some of the fuel load concerns as well as the hazard.

"We are happy to share this work with anyone that would like to see it. It is a never-ending effort, though. For every tree we cut and take, three more replace it," said Garcia. "Our saw, trail and fire crews do their best to keep up with the work but that requires a great deal of prioritization and manpower. Additionally, there is a very small market for dead lodgepole pine, and firewood gathering is just not getting the job done. Many of these operations leave more slash and fuel on the ground than in the overstory.

"Although I do not deny there are areas where the lodgepole is quite dense," Garcia continued, "we are constantly striving to maintain a balance between the values in which the NRA was originally created and the concerns addressed. Despite what you may see on the ground at Redfish, we are making great strides in this effort"

A collaborative of many businesses, homeowners and state and local officials are working on these very concerns, she said.

"These lands are not the private property of the U.S. Forest Service; they are the right of the American public. We could not agree more, and with that statement that means everyone in the U.S. has the right to their opinion and their perception of how these lands should be managed. You can imagine that many people view things very different than you do," Garcia said.

The USFS manages land by regulatory laws and land-use management plans written based on scientific data. "These plans are then offered to the public for comment. These laws and plans are written with the health of the forest in mind for legacy...the future," said Garcia. Many of them are written for the wildlife and fish, taking into account events necessary for the sustainability of these important values.

"I do agree that high-intensity fire of the magnitude we are seeing in current years has been difficult. However, the native species of the area evolved with fire and disturbance," she said. "Many wildlife species actually rely on fire and other disturbance as part of their life cycle. There are many scientific resources available to the public that explain these processes.

"As far as the Halstead fire, I can tell you that I spent July to December working on that fire, and at no time did I see anyone standing around in a capacity that was not directly related to fire suppression strategy."

"Here are few surprises I found in the old dictionary: "We in Twin Falls use the word 'silo' wrong. Silos are not tall towers where grain is stored, but underground pits where corn and turned into silage.

"The word 'granary' was not pronounced 'grain-ery' in 1939. According to the old dictionary, 'granary' was derived from the Latin 'granarium' and not from the English word 'grain.' WEATHER

Plenty of Sunshine
Today

After below normal temperatures Monday, temperatures will be higher and closer to normal today and Wednesday. Today will bring plenty of sunshine with temperatures climbing into the lower 80s. Clouds will increase Wednesday as moisture continues to increase and pull north out of the Southwest. As more moisture pools across southern Idaho, showers and thunderstorms will develop later in the day and into the evening. More storms will be possible Thursday and into Friday. As of Monday evening, it appears the best chance for widespread showers and thunderstorms will be Thursday afternoon into the evening.

Temperatures during the entire forecast period through the weekend will hover in the lower to middle 80s. Temperatures each day will be dependent on how much cloud cover we see.

The rain will break Saturday with mostly sunny skies before another little weather system brings a chance of storms back to southern Idaho Sunday. By mid-September to late September, we could see a major pattern change with below-normal temperatures.

The event at Twin Falls City Park will benefit four Magic Valley animal shelters. It's being held by the Snake River Canyon Kennel Club of Idaho.

Shelters in Buhl, Twin Falls and Jerome, along with Paws with a Cause, all will receive donations from the event's proceeds.

The festival, which is promoting responsible ownership and care of dogs, includes a dog walk, contests for "cutest canine, ugliest Fido and coolest trick" and a vaccination clinic. Microchipping will be available for $25 plus registration costs, though quantities are limited.

There also will be vendors, demonstrations of dogs at work and play and pet photos available for $6.

All dogs must be leashed, and the hosts suggest that participating puppies have had their second vaccination round.

Festival Schedule

9 a.m. Dog Walk, $15 per dog.

FDA Receives at Least 89 Reports of Illness from Moldy Chobani Yogurt

BY JOE CADOTTE

jcadotte@magicvalley.com

TWIN FALLS • At least 89 people have gotten sick from eating Chobani yogurt, which is under a voluntary recall, the FDA reported Monday.

Some have described nausea and cramps after eating the yogurt, said spokeswoman Tamara Ward of the U.S. Food and Drug Administration.

No cases have been confirmed.

The FDA is not investigating Chobani but is working with the company to hasten the recall, Ward said.

The yogurt giant sent orders to grocery stores throughout the U.S. last week to destroy 35 varieties of yogurt reported to have been contaminated by a mold associated with dairy, fruits and vegetables.

Last Thursday, Juaristi said 95 percent of the tainted product had been destroyed.

The affected yogurt cups have the code 16-012 and expiration dates Sept. 11 to Oct. 7.

Public health officials said the moldy yogurt was not a public health threat, but a statement by the company last week read: "The mold can act as an opportunistic pathogen for those with compromised immune systems."

In an email late Monday afternoon, Chobani said: "We identified the source of the issue in the plant, and have taken corrective action designed to prevent this from happening again," said Amy Juaristi in an email, company spokeswoman.

The company has failed to release specifics about where and how the outbreak occurred in its Twin Falls plant or how the problem would be remedied to ensure it does not recur.

Julia Kaye Jensen Baxter

Dec. 8, 1942-Sept. 6, 2013

HOLLADAY, Utah • We sadly announce that Julia Kaye Jensen Baxter passed from earthly life on the evening of Friday, Sept. 6, 2013, at about 9:10 p.m. from causes related to ALS. She was 70 years old.

Julia was born to Loy and Mona Jensen on Dec. 8, 1942, in Glendale, Calif. Six months later, the Jensen family moved back home to Rexburg, Idaho, where Julia enjoyed a very active childhood. Her teenage years were filled with music studies which would shape the rest of her life. She normally practiced the piano two to three hours per day, while also traveling the region performing in dance bands and playing on a regular basis for Ricks College devotionals.

While in college, Julia met a handsome young man named Dale Baxter. The happy couple wedded on June 2, 1965. They were blessed with four children and made their home in Glenns Ferry, Idaho, and eventually relocated to Salt Lake City, Utah. Over the course of 50 years, her influence profoundly impacted the lives of hundreds, perhaps thousands, of music students. It was truly a long career in changing lives. While in Glenns Ferry, Julia began a second career path of music composition. Her complex and rich personality easily comes forth through her sweet melodic creations. Through her music, Julia was a storyteller — excelling in painting resonant pictures in the listeners’ minds. And, even in death, she yet lives through enduring song and her music will continue to touch the lives of many.

She is survived by her husband, Dale; her children, Derald Clinton of American Fork, Utah, Russell Layne of Kaysville, Utah, Tonya of Salt Lake City, Utah, and Kendra Ellen of Richland, Wash.

The funeral will be held at 11 a.m. Friday, Sept. 13, at the Parliament LDS Park Ward, 1510 W. Parliament Ave. in West Valley City, Utah. Friends and family may call from 6 - 8 p.m. Thursday, Sept. 12, and one hour prior to service Friday at the church. Interment will be at Holladay Memorial Park. Condolences may be shared with the family at www.holladaycottonwoodmortuary.com

Cal Worthington, Car Dealer Famed for TV Ads, Dies at 92

LOS ANGELES (AP) • Cal Worthington, who built a fortune from a series of West Coast auto dealerships and became a TV fixture thanks to folksy car lot commercials urging customers to “Go see Cal,” has died. He was 92.

Worthington died Sunday after watching football with family at his Big W Ranch in Orland, Calif., north of Sacramento, said Dave Karalis, general manager of Cal Worthington Ford in Long Beach.

The cause of death has not been determined, family attorney Larry Miles said.

The Oklahoma native, who was a decorated bomber pilot during World War II, founded his first dealership in the late 1940s in Southern California and quickly took advantage of broadcast advertising.

As his business empire grew to other western states and Alaska, Worthington starred in a series of TV and radio spots that featured him in his ever-present big white cowboy hat and his “dog” Spot — which would turn out to be animals ranging from tigers to elephants.

He also wrestled a bear, handled a snake, rode a hippopotamus and a pig, and almost had his hand bit by a mountain lion. Viewers freof Knievel's try is approaching, the city probably soon will have applicants requesting permission to use the now iconic mound of dirt that Knievel used in 1974, Twin Falls City Manager Travis Rothweiler said during Monday's city council meeting.

Five applicants are awaiting approval from the Idaho Department of Lands to use the north side of the canyon as a landing site, he said.

"We need to ensure that should this kind of event occur in Twin Falls, it is as safe as possible," Rothweiler said. "We need to make sure it protects and serves the image of Twin Falls unharmed."

Included in the applicant list are Twin Falls natives Scott Truax and Scott Record. The two have paired to build a rocket identical to what Knievel used.

Truax's dad, Bob, built

Knievel's steam rocket in 1974. Using his dad's original drawings, Truax and Record said, they believe they have found the reason why the rocket failed to make it across the canyon.

"We have better parachute technology now that wasn't around back then," Truax said. "We know what went wrong now, so we know it'll make it across."

The steam rocket is a simple but smart option to make it across the canyon, Truax said.

"My dad picked a reason for a steam rocket," he said. "It's the cheapest and simplest reason to get across a mile-wide jump. The canyon is only a third of a mile."

Twin Falls council members agreed Monday that a permitting process is worth pursuing. Some members, however, cautioned that not everyone in Twin Falls has fond memories of the Knievel jump.

"I'm supportive of this proceeding," said Councilman Chris Talkington, who was a TV news director in 1974 when Knievel attempted his jump. "But when this happened the first time, the city was literally Mayberry, and we were bombarded. ... There were deaths by Shoshone Falls from people on the canyon, and there was a lot of debt that was never paid."

Approving a jump may help erase bad memories that some local residents associate with the old site, said Councilman Shawn Barigar.

"It's not going to be easy. It's going to take a lot of hard work, but this is an opportunity," he said.

City staff will come up with a proposed process and present it to the council in the next few weeks.

"My priority is that it definitely not cost the citizens. And more importantly, it should benefit the citizens," said Councilwoman Rebecca Mills-Sojka.

deployment to Iraq in 2004, then the injury was aggravated in 2008 during a weekend training with his Guard unit, according to the U.S. Attorney's Office. The suit alleged that in 2009, while Jones was recovering from multiple knee surgeries, the sheriff's office violated his leave provisions under the Uniformed Services Employment and Reemployment Rights Act of 1994 — eventually terminating his job.

Jones said that while he recuperated in 2009, the sheriff's office forced him to complete Family Medical Leave Act paperwork though his leave was protected under the Reemployment Rights Act; denied him light-duty work to accommodate his physical limitations; and attempted to subject him to a "fitness for duty" evaluation and physical fitness test before allowing him to return to work. Jones alleged the county terminated his employment during the two years permitted by the Reemployment Rights Act to recover from an injury incurred in the line of duty.

In his Monday statement, McFall also detailed his support for members of the military.

"As sheriff of Jerome County and a retired Idaho State Police sergeant, I understand the importance of a strong national defense, and I am committed to support that cause in any way I can,"

he said. "Six current and past deputies have been an active member of the Guard or Reserve since I took office in January 2009."

McFall said he was awarded certification as a "Patriotic Employer" by the Secretary of Defense and by the Employer Support of the Guard and Reserve for supporting his deputies who are current members of the Guard and Reserve.

Jones' case stems from a referral by the U.S. Department of Labor following an investigation by its Veterans' Employment and Training Service.

For information about the Reemployment Rights Act, see servicemembers.gov, usdoj.gov/crt/emp and www.dol.gov/vets/programs/userra/main.htm.

state's distributor and destroyed.

"The fact that it hasn't been noticed to this point, we believe that there probably hasn't been an issue with the product that was served in Idaho," McGrath said. "What we want to make sure happens is that there is not an issue going forward and that none of the products that may be in storage at a local district are not served."

If parents have concerns, they should talk to their local school food service personnel, McGrath said.

Calls to Central Valley Meat were not immediately returned.

The company delivers products to Idaho schools through a U.S. Department of Agriculture program. The beef was shipped in 40-pound cases, McGrath said, and district orders varied between one and 47 cases.

Central Valley has made headlines for its beef recently for other reasons, according to Associated Press reports. Its slaughterhouse was shut down temporarily in 2012 after federal regulators received undercover video showing cows — some unable to walk — being shocked and shot before being killed.

Environmentalists, Tribe Seek to Halt GE Megaloads

BY JOHN MILLER
Associated Press

BOISE • An American Indian tribe and environmentalists pleaded Monday with a federal judge, telling him he's the only thing standing between them and the next giant oil-field equipment shipment along a winding Idaho mountain highway toward Canada's tar sands.

Meanwhile, a lawyer for a General Electric Co. subsidiary told U.S. District Judge B. Lynn Winmill that the courts had no authority to interfere with the company's second 225-foot-long, 640,000-pound water evaporator, slated to travel on U.S. Highway 12 on Sept. 18.

Its first evaporator, shipped on the route in August, attracted numerous protesters, 20 of whom were arrested.

Winmill promised a ruling this week.

U.S. 12 is a federally designated Wild and Scenic River corridor along the Lochsa and Clearwater rivers running through the Nez Perce Tribe's reservation and U.S. Forest Service territory.

For three years, it has been ground zero in disputes between foes of big industrial shipments to the oil fields in Alberta — including the Nez Perce Tribe who says the highway isn't the appropriate route — and companies, including ExxonMobil, and now GE, who want to use the highway as the shortest, cheapest alternative.

"Unless this court acts, nobody is going to stop the next megaloads shipment in nine days," Laird Lucas, a lawyer for the shipment foes, told Winmill.

The tribe and environmentalists from Idaho Rivers United contend that allowing the next GE shipment will cause irreparable harm to the rights of the Nez Perce people and damage the corridor's environmental values. Lucas predicts additional protests, if nothing is done.

"There will be public health and safety issues," he said. "The highway will be closed down."

Though ExxonMobil resorted to other Idaho highways to get nearly all of its gear to Canada amid the protest, GE is insisting on U.S. 12, saying delays to getting its equipment to Canada on time could cost it $3.6 million in damages. Richard Boardman, a lawyer for the company's Resources Conservation Company International unit, suggested shipment foes were using the specter of further protests to pressure Winmill.

"I know this court is not going to react to that kind of mob mentality," Boardman said, arguing U.S. 12 was actually the route with the fewest impacts. "It is the most environmentally-friendly route to get this equipment to the customer," he said, prompting guffaws from a packed courtroom audience heavy with shipment foes.

Winmill warned the crowd to be quiet, otherwise he'd eject them from the courtroom.

Earlier this year, Winmill ruled the Forest Service did have the authority to intervene on whether the mega-loads could legally pass through territory managed by the agency.

During Monday's hearing, however, he raised the question of whether a federal judge could go one step further in this case: to actually put a halt to shipments, when the Forest Service hadn't already done so.

Forest Service officials argue they've only just begun study of megaloads' impacts on the U.S. 12 corridor, as well as consultations with the Nez Perce Tribe. As that process moves forward, Assistant U.S. Attorney Joanne Rodriguez said, the agency has opted not to intervene when the Idaho Transportation Department is issued state permits for the oversized GE loads to use the route.

"The Forest Service is trying to address the issue," Rodriguez said, adding the agency also had the responsibility of protecting the company's interests.

"The tribe is not the only entity that is entitled to a decision that is not arbitrary and capricious," she said.

But Michael Lopez, the Nez Perce Tribe's attorney, argued its members have so far been denied the opportunity for substantive government-to-government negotiations with the Forest Service.

"The Nez Perce Tribe has clearly suffered a procedural harm," Lopez told Winmill. "That injury to the Nez Perce people... was definitely irreparable harm that this court should consider in granting this injunction."

Two Hurt, One Held after Vegas Strip Walkway Stabbing

LAS VEGAS (AP) • A Las Vegas police gang unit was investigating the cause of a weekend stabbing on a walkway between two Las Vegas Strip casino-hotels that left two people injured and a 19-year-old Southern California man arrested, authorities said Monday.

Toan Vo, of Westminster, Calif., was being held at the Clark County jail in Las Vegas pending a Wednesday court appearance on two felony charges each of assault with a deadly weapon and battery causing substantial bodily harm, according to jail and court records.

Police Officer Laura Meltzer said detectives weren't immediately sure what prompted the brawl a little before 8 p.m. Saturday on the covered walkway between the Excalibur and Luxor hotels.

Meltzer said an argument led to punches before Vo allegedly pulled a knife and wounded two people.

The two people injured, both male, were taken to University Medical Center, Meltzer said, including one with serious stab wounds and one with injuries described as not life-threatening.

The walkway connects the two MGM Resorts International properties. Company spokesman Gordon Absher said there may have been security video of the area, and hotel officials were cooperating with the police investigation.

OPINION

"It is not Iraq, Afghanistan or Libya. This is a very concerned, concentrated, limited effort that we can carry out and that can underscore and secure our interests."

— White House chief of staff Denis McDonough making a case for a military strike on Syria.

OUR VIEW

Jerome City Hall Must Open its Doors and Start Talking

Jerome Mayor John Shine and city council members Dale Ross, Chris Barber, Dawn Sotot, Bob Culver and spokeswoman Zoe Monahan.

Call them, email them, stop them at the grocery store. Tell them you're mad as hell, and the secrecy can't continue.

Jerome city government has adopted a de-facto media blackout in recent months. Refusing to answer questions isn't only poor media relations, but also bad government.

The problems started in May after the city of Jerome, and then Fire Chief Jack Krill, billed a property owner nearly $100,000 for fire services that she's supported through taxes for years. That story got out, regardless of city attempts to quash it, and right-minded outrage quickly forced Jerome to backpedal.

Earlier this month, Jerome again decided secrecy is its modus operandi when we started hearing that Krill was on the way out or already gone.

A Times-News reporter called asking a very simple question: Does Krill still work for the city?

Shine and spokeswoman Monahan clammed. They hid behind the mantra of governments cloaked in secrecy, saying it is a "personnel issue."

Idaho's Public Records Law is unambiguous, however. A public official's employment status must be disclosed.

"That language applies to Jerome and every place else," state Attorney General Lawrence Wasden told the Times-News Monday.

Government transparency is a requirement of democracy, regardless of whether it's the White House or Jerome City Hall. It's the only way citizens can hold their officials accountable. It's the reason that, in line with the First Amendment, every state has adopted specific open meetings and public records laws.

A secretive government is an untrustworthy government, and this fact has already bitten Jerome once this year.

In May, city voters struck down a $48 million bond referendum for critical improvements to its wastewater treatment facility. We can't blame the voters. Handing that kind of borrowing power to tight-lipped government is asking for problems.

The city pays Monahan a $57,000 annual salary to facilitate communication and transparency. The result has been quite the opposite.

What Jerome officials don't understand is they're actually making the situation worse by cowering behind poor legal interpretations. One story turns into three or four. Instead of looking bad for a day or two, they're generating ongoing coverage about a secretive local government.

Jerome's secrecy is unacceptable and unbecoming of an elected government. Residents, who fund this government, should be enraged.

This is much more than a spat between the city and the media. Questions regarding an embattled fire chief, for example, are matters of public safety. The fire department is taxpayer funded.

Jerome's bush-league efforts to avoid more egg on their collective faces is antithetical to the basic tenets of open government and a true disservice to their constituents. This is the message city residents should be sending at board meetings and at the gas station.

And, should things continue unchanged, Election Day is quickly approaching.

The Lioness of Idaho

In Chapter 5 of my recently published book, Medimont Reflections, I posed the question that if Idaho's great senator, William E. Borah, was known as "the Lion of Idaho," what historical female practitioner of the political arts should we award the title "the Lioness of Idaho?"

The chapter cited several worthy contenders, but drilled down on the case for Verda Barnes, Senator Frank Church's long-time chief of staff, and Louise Shadduck, the long-time chief assistant to two governors, a senator and a congressman.

For retired former Twin Falls and Coeur d'Alene pastor, Mike Bullard, the choice was easy — hands down he believes it should be the former member of his last congregation, Louise Shadduck.

He has written an enjoyable and informative 240-page biography of the multifaceted, talented Shadduck, who grew up in Coeur d'Alene, cut her teeth in journalism and was a longtime member and former president of the National Federation of Press Women.

Always torn between a love of writing (she wrote and had published five books) and a love of politics, Bullard makes it clear she never really resolved the conflict. A creative tension always existed for her as she tried to balance feet in both worlds.

Her love of politics eventually led her in 1956 to challenge 1st District congresswoman Gracie Pfost. It became the first race for a congressional seat in the nation ever between the major parties where each nominated a woman to carry the banner.

Despite losing, Louise never regretted joining the race and called it one of her life's great learning experiences.

During an interview with Bullard about Louise, who I had known since 1972 (I did a profile from Washington.) I mentioned that I was calling one chapter "The Lioness of Idaho" and essentially the answer in my mind came down to Louise or Verda. I mentioned also that I thought there were actually two classes of contenders for the title, those that had served in Congress, and those that had not.

Of course, neither of the "finalists" served in elective office so it turned out to be a moot question.

After pondering it for awhile, Bullard decided to call his book Lioness of Idaho. He kindly asked if I minded and also said he would like to copyright it. He did both with my full blessing.

tributes that distinguished Louise during her rich and full life. Bullard's subtitle is "The Politics of Polite," and that was a key ingredient in her long 93-year span. She could and often was painfully direct, with a reporter's mind and ear for asking the central question.

However, she was always so nice about her directness because she genuinely cared about people. And like President George H.W. Bush, she wrote numerous "thank you" letters, developing an incredible set of contacts. She always especially took time for young people asking about their plans, what they were thinking and why.

Those that considered her a mentor in the world of Republican politics would fill pages, but among the illustrious list were such stalwarts as Phil Reberger, Dirk Kempthorne's chief of staff, Dirk himself, former Governor Robert E. Smylie and former Attorney General and Lt. Governor, David Leroy.

Bullard has many fine anecdotes throughout the book, one of the funnier ones being how stricken a young Idaho State policeman was when he realized he had stopped and had to ticket a speeder — his Aunt Louise. Always in a hurry to be someplace, Louise acknowledged her lead foot and took it with good humor when a traffic court judge once sentenced her to a week of driver training.

If any one in recent Idaho history would have stood a good shot at breaking the glass ceiling of Idaho never having elected a female governor, Louise is clearly that person. Only trouble is when party brass started pushing her to think about it, some balding lumberjack from Orofino, Idaho named Cece Andrus stood in the way. She would have run well, but she knew she wouldn't win.

Besides, Louise liked Cece — and I'm proud to say, she liked me — even though we were "misguided Democrats."

Bullard's book is out this week and well worth the time and money to read. I suspect too there will be a tear in your eye as you read the conclusion. I know there was in mine.

Kellogg native Chris Carlson was the longtime press secretary for former four-term Gov. Cecil D. Andrus. He resides in Medimont in southern Kootenai County.

The 2013 National Assisted Living Week is Sept. 8 to 14. The "Homemade Happiness" theme acknowledges the contributions of staff, residents and families in making the assisted living community a home for residents.

"This year's theme celebrates the bond created by staff, residents and families as they build warm, welcoming and vibrant homes for residents," said Kay Lynn Johnson, sales director at BridgeView Estates Assisted Living.

Homemade Happiness events also help us to say "thank you" to our assisted living residents, many of whom have made a significant contribution to the Magic Valley as business people, civic leaders, teachers, parents and grandparents.

Day Care Owner Charged with Felony Aggravated Battery

TIMES-NEWS

TWIN FALLS • The owner of a day-care center where a toddler walked away and was nearly hit by a car in June has been charged with beating her sister, who called Child Protective Services about the incident.

Diedre Hamann, 35, pleaded not guilty Monday to a felony charge of aggravated battery causing great bodily harm.

Police say they arrived Aug. 2 to find Hamann's sister, Amanda Tetz, standing outside Hamann's house in the 1800 block of Osterloh Avenue in Twin Falls.

Tetz told police the two were discussing her call to Child Protective Services when Hamann became upset and attacked her, a police report says. Tetz said Hamann hit her in her back, ribs, face and stomach and threw her onto the ground where she hit her head.

Hamann was originally charged with simple battery Aug. 5, but prosecutors amended the charge to aggravated battery on Aug. 15.

The criminal complaint says Tetz had damaged ligaments in her shoulder, a fracture of her left clavicle, internal organ damage and broken ribs.

Nurse Pleads Guilty to Felony Drug Charges

BY ALISON GENE SMITH
alismith@magicvalley.com

TWIN FALLS • A nurse has pleaded guilty to illegally prescribing herself pain pills at St. Luke's Mountain States Tumor Institute.

As part of a plea deal Monday, Rebecca Haskins agreed to plead guilty to three felony counts of obtaining a controlled substance by fraud.

Prosecutors will drop three other counts of the same charge and will recommend Haskins be sentenced to three years of probation, the plea agreement says. If she fails to successfully complete probation, she could serve three to six years in prison.

Haskins is to be sentenced Nov. 4.

A doctor told police that pharmacy documents show Haskins wrote prescriptions for herself for about two years.

Police said she admitted as much to them, saying it was common practice for her to write patients' prescriptions and have the doctor sign them to save him time. That's how she was able to fill prescriptions using the signature of the doctor for whom she worked eight years.

Haskins told police she was prescribed Norco after a shoulder injury and became addicted.

Bank Robbery Suspect Appears in Elko Court

BY ALISON GENE SMITH
alismith@magicvalley.com

ELKO, Nev. • The man accused of robbing a Twin Falls bank and leading Nevada police on a 20-mile chase through the desert near Carlin, Nev., appeared in court Monday.

Jake Rowe had a 72-hour hearing in Elko County (Nev.) Justice Court. In such a hearing, held for suspects unable to post bail within 72 hours after arrest, a judge explains the reasons for the arrest and the suspect's rights, says the Elko County website.

Prosecutors then have seven to 10 days to file charges.

Jake Rowe is being held on a $1 million Idaho bond for the suspected armed bank robbery, a felony.

Monday, Twin Falls police Sgt. John Wilson said local police are waiting and watching for the extradition process to start with Rowe and his wife, Linda Rowe, the suspected getaway driver.

Jake Rowe faces more charges in Nevada; Linda Rowe only has charges in Idaho. She could be brought to Idaho sooner than her husband, Wilson said.

Police say the Rowes conspired to rob Zions Bank in Twin Falls.

On July 9, a man entered the bank about 11:45 a.m., showed a teller a black, semi-automatic handgun and demanded money. The teller handed over a stack of cash totaling $1,573.

Jake Rowe then hopped on a red dirt bike and sped to Linda Rowe, who was waiting in the couple's blue pickup, police said. Then the two deposited $820 in a nearby Wells Fargo Bank and made their way to La Quinta Inn on Pole Line Road, less than a mile from Zions Bank.

On Sept. 4, Twin Falls police had gone to Carlin, Nev., to serve warrants to the Rowes. That led to a 20-mile off-road chase and ended when a police officer shot Rowe after he allegedly pointed a rifle at officers.

Rowe was transported in critical condition to an Elko hospital, then taken to Boise. He was released and taken to the Elko County Jail Friday.

Mom Pushes Stroller Out of Way before Car Hit Her

BOISE (AP) • A southwestern Idaho woman was hurt but her baby escaped injury when she pushed a stroller out of the way just before a car hit her.

The Idaho Statesman reports the woman was returning from walking her children to school in Middleton just before 8 a.m. Monday when she stepped into the street to get around an all-terrain vehicle that was partially blocking the sidewalk.

Canyon County spokesman Joe Deck says the woman walked around a recreational vehicle at about the time a car driven by a 16-year-old girl came down the street. The woman saw the oncoming car and pushed the stroller away before the car hit her.

Decker says the woman suffered a lower body injury that was not life-threatening.

No one has been cited for the collision.

Olympic Wrestling's Preservation a Win for All

TWIN FALLS • False alarm, wrestling fans. You can breathe again. After months of worrying and waiting, one of the oldest sports on record was preserved as an Olympic sport on Sunday, surviving a vote against seven other sports vying for one space in the Games.

The International Olympic Committee had proposed in February to drop one of the founding sports of the modern Olympics after the 2016 Summer Games in Rio de Janeiro. Almost immediately there was significant outcry, both locally and globally. The sport's international federation promptly sought reforms to make the sport more appealing to viewers and address perceived shortcomings in wrestling. They made reforms to their board and promised an increase in opportunities for women. The changes were enough to win the votes necessary to keep wrestling in the Olympics.

That's a good thing. Had wrestling been axed from the Olympic schedule, the effect locally might have been negligible. Idaho produces a handful of Olympians for each Games but wrestling is pretty far down the list of likely candidates. Of the wrestlers that I've seen from District IV schools in the six years I've been here, I can only remember of four who even made it to NCAA's Division I, let alone got into national team consideration. But it's still a feel-good story that wrestling has been preserved — at least for now. According to National Federation of State High School Associations figures, wrestling is the sixth most popular sport for boys at the high school level, with more than 272,000 participants nationwide. It's also the third most successful Summer Olympics medal sport for Americans, behind swimming and track and field, and there are far more medals on offer in those two as opposed to wrestling.

But each of those sports, and in truth most of the sports in the Olympics anymore, have professional career paths on offer. That was one of the key points mentioned by local coaches when asked about the potential for wrestling's ouster. Tennis, track and field, golf, swimming — all have a world tour that allows the best of the best to cash in. Soccer and rugby both have leagues where the best players can make money hand-over-fist if they're the best, and at least make very good money as a professional. For the others, wrestling included, the Olympics is the pinnacle.

There's nowhere else to go beyond dreaming of that gold medal. Take Twin Falls wrestling coach Saïid Dabestani, for instance. He was once a promising wrestler in his native Iran, but he gave up his wrestling career in favor of academic pursuits. The odds are long for any athlete to actually make an Olympics, but had the decision Sunday gone another way, wrestlers would no longer have had the privilege of agonizing over that kind of decision. For those few, Sunday's developments will ensure the future of such most welcome dilemmas.

MONDAY PRESSER

Foolish Analysts Overlook Air Force

Boise State's Chris Santini and his teammates take the field against the University of Tennessee -Martin Saturday at Bronco Stadium in Boise.

DREW NASH • TIMES-NEWS

Boise State Prepares for More Than Triple Option.

BOISE • Casual college football observers think in stereotypes.

For example, clumsy analysts still associate Boise State with trick plays, despite the Broncos rarely going to the ol' bag-o-tricks these days.

And with Air Force coming to town Friday (6 p.m., ESPN), fans will hear and read common labels for the Falcons:

Triple option. Disciplined. Can't throw the football.

A closer examination of Air Force (1-1) through its first two games this season suggests those assumptions are as lazy as mentioning "Statue of Liberty" while discussing Boise State.

Truth is, the traditional triple option is a miniscule part of what Air Force does offensively anymore.

"The problem with Air Force is, they do a lot," said BSU coach Chris Petersen during his Monday press conference. "Everybody thinks of those guys as triple option, and they're not triple option. That's a small percentage of what they do. They have a lot of offense. That's what makes it so hard to prepare for."

In its 52-20 home loss to Utah State last week (a final score which Petersen called "completely deceiving"), Air Force lined up in multiple formations, from offset-I with the quarterback in the pistol, to a modified wishbone. Working on a short week with the Friday game, preparation must be streamlined.

"We watch a ton of film. We watch what they've done this year, we watch what they've done against us (in the past)," Petersen said. "There's just a lot there; it's hard to get all those practice reps to get good at any one offense or scheme they're going to run. They seem to continue to add on."

The word "discipline" naturally came up during Monday's press conference, as it's often used to describe teams representing the service academies. Off the field, no doubt that's the case.

On the field, however, it's a different story.

Air Force committed 15 penalties in its first two games combined (In comparison, Boise State was flagged only twice in each of its first two games).

Against Utah State, the Falcon secondary missed several assignments, allowing Aggie quarterback Chuckie Keaton to toss five touchdown passes.

A quick glance at the box score suggests Air Force quarterback Jaleel Awini's is inaccurate, completing just 4 of 12 against Utah State.

However, Falcon receivers dropped at least five balls — two in the end zone.

"These guys are very good," Petersen said. "...Not tough catches, they won't drop them again. That would have completely changed the game."

So be careful while trying to pigeonhole Air Force this week, because if the Broncos aren't careful, they might need a fourth-quarter hook and lateral to sneak out a win.

Frenetic Eagles Roll Past RG3, Redskins

Philadelphia Eagles quarterback Michael Vick dives between Washington Redskins defensive end Stephen Bowen (72) and linebacker Ryan Kerrigan (91) during the second half of a NFL football game in Landover, Md., Monday.

In former University of Oregon coach Chip Kelly’s NFL debut his well known fast paced offense proved too much for the Washington Redskins as the Philadelphia Eagles crammed 77 plays into 60 minutes of football.

BY JOSEPH WHITE
Associated Press

LANDOVER, Md. • Just try to keep up with Michael Vick, LeSean McCoy and the Philadelphia Eagles this season. Robert Griffin III and the Washington Redskins sure couldn’t.

Playing at a frenetic pace that left the Redskins stumbling and stumbling, the Eagles unleashed coach Chip Kelly’s offense on the NFL and crammed 77 plays into 60 minutes of football. They had their share of miscues, of course, but they held on for a 33-27 upset of the defending NFC East champs.

Vick, running the don’t-take-a-breath attack that won 87 percent of the time during Kelly’s four years at the University of Oregon, completed 15 of 25 passes for 203 yards and two touchdowns, and he ran nine times for 56 yards and a score. McCoy had 31 carries for 184 yards, including a 34-yard TD. DeSean Jackson piled up 104 yards on seven catches.

Vick hit Jackson for a 25-yard touchdown and Brent Celek for a 28-yard score, then found the end zone himself on a 3-yard run — and that was just the first half. It would have been a bigger rout if Vick hadn’t missed three open receivers in the first quarter, or if his sideways lateral on first-and-goal at the 4 hadn’t been tipped by linebacker Ryan Kerrigan and returned 75 yards for a Redskins touchdown.

Perhaps the most remarkable accomplishment by Vick, McCoy, Kelly and the Eagles: They managed to upstage Griffin. The game was played eight months to the day since the Redskins quarterback had major knee surgery, and his return Monday was the culmination of a dedicated, high-profile rehab that included a public clash with Washington coach Mike Shanahan that barely put a dent in the fans’ fervent adoration for their franchise player.

As it turned out, they didn’t have much of a chance to chant “R-G-3!” — because the Redskins offense couldn’t stay on the field. Their first seven plays: lost fumble by Alfred Morris, 3-yard loss by Morris, penalty for illegal shift, screen to Morris that got back some yards, interception thrown by Griffin into triple coverage, pass dropped by fullback Darrel Young, safety that occurred when Morris bobbled a pitch in the end zone.

The Redskins were trailing 33-7 late in the third quarter before three consecutive touchdowns — the last coming with 1:14 to play — made the score more respectable.

Wearing a brace on his right knee, Griffin completed 30 of 49 passes for 329 yards, but 169 yards came in the fourth after the Eagles had taken control. He was also intercepted twice — the first multi-interception game of his career. He ran only five times for 24 yards. He reached down to touch his knee after he was slammed down by Mychal Kendricks late in the second quarter — Griffin was flagged for intentional grounding on the play — but the quarterback remained in the game.

Washington didn’t run a play in Philadelphia territory until the second half. At one point, the Eagles were outgaining the Redskins 146-3. There was a moment in the second quarter when the weary defense had more cramps (two) than the offense had first downs (one). Even Kai Forbath, who made 17 of 18 field goals in his rookie year, was wide right in the third quarter. Shanahan’s team also committed 10 penalties for 75 yards. Kerrigan left in the fourth quarter with concussion symptoms.

The first-half stats resembled something from an Oregon opener against a creampuff, not a game between NFC East rivals. Total yards: 322-75. First downs: 20-20-9-40. Philadelphia’s 53 plays were the second-most in a first half by any NFL team since 1991.

Both teams entered the season with concerns about pass defense. The Eagles, with three new starters in the secondary, fared well in the debut of their new 3-4 scheme. The Redskins, again without safety Brandon Meriweather (groin) and with two rookies getting extended playing time, have much work to do.

As for Griffin, he was the undisputed star of the show — at least until kickoff. He arrived at the stadium wearing an autographed T-shirt from Les Dauphins de Nice, the American football team in France that welcomed him for a workout during his honeymoon in July. When he threw warm-up passes at the 45-yard line, three camera crews were at the 40. He led a team huddle at the 10, just 5 yards from the spot where his knee gave out in January. He was greeted by baseball legend Tommy Lasorda on the sideline, then made a spectacle of an entrance when the starting lineups were announced, carrying the Redskins flag all the way to the end zone for an extended kneel-down for all to see.

No. 3 Golden Eagles Beat No. 16 Western Wyoming

TIMES-NEWS

TWIN FALLS • The No. 3 ranked College of Southern Idaho volleyball team used its best serving game of the season to defeat No. 16 Western Wyoming Monday night.

The Golden Eagles had nine service aces, including three from Puamana Danielson, two from Braiden Johnston and Natasa Savovic, keeping Western Wyoming on their heels throughout the night.

“We served extremely well,” Heidi Cartisser said. “Western Wyoming just never got into rhythm and when we had opportunities we executed. I attribute that to the good serving.”

Cartisser likes the growth she’s seen in her team the last two games.

“We are just starting to connect a little bit better with our hitters and middles and we are getting more of a shot selection. We did a good job sticking to our game plan and it was just a complete match for us all together. We have had huge growth from the Salt Lake tournament. It’s easy to be good when things are going good, but it’s harder to be good when there is pressure. We had a great start to the match and it was nice to see the growth and see better students of the game.”

CSI will travel to Florida this weekend to play in the Miami-Dade tournament.

Rodman Returning to N. Korea

NEW YORK (AP) • Dennis Rodman is going back to North Korea, and plans to bring a team of former NBA players with him.

Days after returning from his second trip to visit Kim Jong Un — in which he said he became the first foreigner to hold the leader’s newborn daughter — Rodman announced plans Monday to stage two exhibition games in North Korea in January.

The first will be Jan. 8 — Kim’s birthday — with another to follow two days later.

Rodman’s friendship with the autocratic leader has been criticized — and led to a couple of testy exchanges during his Manhattan news conference. But Rodman insists Kim is a good person, wants to have better relations with the United States and that he’s the one who can help make it happen with his plan for “basketball diplomacy.”

“Why North Korea? It’ll

open doors,” Rodman said.

Touting his friendship with Kim and taunting President Barack Obama for not talking to him, Rodman said he will go back to North Korea for a week in December to help select local players for the game. He hopes to have stars such as former Chicago teammate Scottie Pippen and Karl Malone.

“Michael Jordan, he won’t do it, because he’s Michael Jordan,” Rodman said.

Rodman, holding a cigar and wearing the shirt of a vodka company and a hat of a betting company that is funding the event, said Kim has asked him to train his players to compete in the 2016 Olympics and offered to allow the Hall of Famer to write a book about him.

Though looking like a billboard, Rodman said he’s not doing the event for money. He said the Irish betting company Paddy Power would put up $3.5 million. Power later said finances hadn’t been determined.

And Rodman, who joked that he hadn’t drawn such a crowd in New York since he wore a wedding dress to a book signing, was adamant that this venture was serious — “groundbreaking,” in Rodman’s words.

“People think this is a gimmick. I would love to make this a gimmick ... but it’s not about the money,” he said.

He rarely referred to Kim by name, frequently calling him “the marshal.” Rodman first met Kim, a basketball fan, when traveling to North Korea in February for a film project.

Though saying he didn’t want to discuss politics, Rodman raised his voice when answering a questioner about Kim’s human rights record and portrayed himself as the person who could make outsiders see the young leader as different than his father and grandfather.

“He has to do his job but he’s a very good guy,” Rodman said.

“If he wanted to bomb anybody in the world, he would have done it.”

Instead, Rodman had harder words for Obama, whom he spoke angrily of while talking to reporters last week after his trip. He talked around a question about American citizen and Christian missionary Kenneth Bae, who was arrested in November and sentenced to 15 years of hard labor for what Pyongyang described as hostile acts against the state. Kim has the power to grant special pardons under the North’s constitution.

Rodman said lobbying for the release of a prisoner wasn’t his job, blaming the president for not reaching out to ease tensions between the countries.

Race 4 Win Saves Oracle's Chance at America's Cup

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) • Oracle Team USA's heart-stopping victory in Race 4 of the America's Cup may have saved the event as well as the syndicate's chances to retain the oldest trophy in international sports.

Skipper Jimmy Spithill aggressively sailed Oracle's 72-foot catamaran to an 8-second victory against Emirates Team New Zealand in the fog, wind and salt spray on San Francisco Bay on Sunday.

Oracle Team USA, owned by software billionaire Larry Ellison of Oracle Corp., hopes the victory helps swing the momentum and allows it to learn a thing or two about what it's going to take to defeat a strong Kiwi team.

One of those things is home-water advantage.

The finish line of the five-leg course is just a few hundred yards off America's Cup Park on Pier 27-29 on the Embarcadero.

The end of the pier is packed with fans on race days, many of them waving New Zealand and American flags. On Saturday, police closed off access to the area when the crowd reached about 3,500.

Spithill wants the fans to know that the sailors can hear them cheering as the races end and the boats fly across the line on hydrofoils.

"There's something about the home court advantage, and it's very hard to put a value on, but it makes a difference," said Spithill, an Australian who lives in San Diego with his American wife and their two young boys.

"The more people we can get behind us, the more good energy they can send our way. It affects the guys on board and it lifts them. We want to keep the Cup here. We want to keep it on the bay. These guys don't," he said, referring to skipper Dean Barker and the rest of the Kiwis. "They want to take it all the way down to New Zealand, which is a long way away. So we need to use that advantage. We need all the people from San Francisco and the U.S. to get behind us."

The Race 4 victory came after Oracle — which has only two Americans on its 11-man crew — let the Kiwis come from behind to win Race 3.

Oracle trails the best-of-17 series 3 to minus-1. The syndicate was docked two points in the biggest cheating scandal in the regatta's history.

That means Oracle needs to win 10 more races to keep the Auld Mug. Team New Zealand needs to win six more to sweep the trophy away to the Royal New Zealand Yacht Squadron, which held it from 1995-2003.

Races 5 and 6 are scheduled for Tuesday.

Monday was a lay day. Oracle was out on the bay working on improving its performance upwind, where the Kiwis have shown better boat speed.

"It was good to get out there and work on a couple of things," said Oracle Team USA CEO Russell Coutts, who won the first two of his four America's Cups as skipper of Team New Zealand in 1995 and 2000. "We've got to improve our upwind performance. We were out there working on a bit of that and our tacking. We made some progress."

Fallout from Bowyer Spin Puts Newman Back in Cup Chase

Controversy dampens celebration as Newman announces move to Childress.

CONCORD, N.C. (AP) • Ryan Newman replaced Martin Truex Jr. in the Chase for the Sprint Cup championship on Monday night when NASCAR penalized Michael Waltrip Racing for manipulating the outcome of last weekend's race at Richmond.

Michael Waltrip Racing was fined $300,000, and general manager Ty Norris received an indefinite suspension. Truex, Clint Bowyer and Brian Vickers were docked 50 points apiece — but Bowyer's deduction does not affect his position in the Chase, which begins Sunday at Chicago.

"We penalize to not have this happen again," NASCAR President Mike Helton said. "It's a message from the league saying 'You can't do this.'"

Newman was leading with seven laps remaining Saturday night at Richmond, where a victory would have given him the final spot in the 12-driver Chase field. But Bowyer spun to bring out a caution, setting in motion a chain of events that ultimately led to Newman losing the race and Bowyer teammate Truex earning the final Chase berth.

While examining the situation, NASCAR reviewed communication between Bowyer and his Michael Waltrip Racing crew that seemed to indicate the spin was deliberate, as well as additional evidence that suggested MWR had Bowyer and Vickers take a dive over the final three laps so Joey Logano would knock Jeff Gordon out of Chase contention in yet another attempt to help Truex.

Bowyer denied Saturday night he intentionally spun and Truex was an unwitting participant. There's been silence from MWR officials, manufacturer Toyota and sponsors 5-Hour Energy (Bowyer) and NAPA Auto Parts (Truex), which pay millions to fund the race programs and likely owe MWR bonuses for each driver making the Chase.

The controversy surrounding Saturday's race put a damper on Newman's Monday announcement that he had reached a deal with Clint Bowyer getw sideways on the front stretch during the NASCAR Sprint Cup Series race at Richmond International Raceway in Richmond, Va., Saturday.

Richard Childress Racing to replace Jeff Burton next season in the No. 31 Chevrolet.

"What happened to me Saturday night is the toughest thing that I've ever gone through in any kind of racing in my 30 years of driving because of the way everything went down," Newman said. "I knew this announcement was coming, but in the end, I don't think it's anything to compare or contrast or say that the positive outweighs the negative or even compensates for it."

Now Newman gets the chance to compete for the title in his final races with Stewart-Haas Racing. He won the Brickyard this year and has 17 career victories overall.

"Obviously, we're very pleased with NASCAR's decision to provide Ryan Newman's rightful place in this year's Chase," SHR co-owner Tony Stewart said in a statement. "NASCAR was put in a very difficult position Saturday night at Richmond and we commend the sanctioning body for taking the time to do the necessary due diligence to ensure that the right call was made."

MWR can appeal the penalties, which included placing crew chiefs Brian Pattie (Bowyer), Scott Miller (Vickers) and Chad Johnston (Truex) on probation through the end of the year. While Norris can work through the appeal process if MWR chooses to appeal, it won't change Truex's status in the Chase.

In-car audio from Saturday night's race framed the situation as Bowyer's crew goading him into spinning his car to bring out the yellow in an effort to prevent Newman from winning.

"Thirty-nine is going to win the race," Bowyer was told over his radio.

"Is your arm starting to hurt?" Pattie asked. After a pause, Pattie said, "I bet it's hot in there. Itch it."

Bowyer's car then spun. NASCAR did not have access to that footage until well after the race, and it was presumably among the materials that were reviewed before the punishment was announced.

Also, it became apparent early Sunday morning that Bowyer and Vickers further aided Truex by taking a dive over the final three laps.

When the race resumed with three laps to go, Gordon was poised to claim the 10th spot in the Chase, and Logano was ahead of Truex in position to claim the second wild card.

But Bowyer and Vickers both made pit stops in the final three laps that allowed Logano to improve his position and move ahead of Gordon. That bumped Gordon from contention and freed the wild card for Truex. Gordon was not eligible for the wild card.

The AP reviewed team communications for Bowyer and Vickers on Sunday, and Vickers was told by Norris to pit because "We need that one point."

"We're probably going to pit here on green," Norris says.

"Are you talking to me?" a surprised Vickers asks.

Vickers continued to question the call, at one point asking, "I don't understand, pit right now?"

"You've got to pit this time. We need that one point," Norris replies.

"10-4. Do I got a tire going down?" Vickers asked.

Vickers then pitted as the field went green. When he asked after if his crew found anything with the tire, Norris replied, "I'll see you after the race, Brian, I owe you a kiss?"

Helton indicated Monday that conversation between Norris and Vickers, with Vickers' confusion over the directives he was given, was the smoking gun against MWR.

"Ty Norris confirmed the conversation most everyone has heard with the 55 driver," Helton said. Bowyer's radio communication was not as verbose, but he had already pitted twice after his spin, once to change the tire and once for Pattie to double-check for any damage. The team then called him down pit road a third time with no explanation just as the field went green.

US Open: Nadal Tops Djokovic for 13th Major Title

NEW YORK (AP) • Hard to believe this is the same Rafael Nadal who was at home during the U.S. Open a year ago, nursing a bad left knee.

Hard to believe this is the guy sent packing in the first round of Wimbledon in June, losing against someone ranked 135th.

Looking fit as can be, and tough as — maybe even better than — ever, the No. 2-ranked Nadal pulled away from No. 1 Novak Djokovic 6-2, 3-6, 6-4, 6-1 on Monday in a taut, tense U.S. Open final for his 13th Grand Slam title.

They started in sunlight and finished at nighttime, a 3-hour, 21-minute miniseries full of cliffhangers and plot twists and a pair of protagonists who inspired standing ovations in the middle of games.

There was no quit in either of them, during points that lasted 15, 25, even more than 50 strokes.

This was their 37th match against each other, the most between any two men in the Open era, and third head-to-head U.S. Open final in the last four years. Nadal beat Djokovic for the 2010 title, and Djokovic won their rematch in 2011. They know each other's games so well, and play such similar hustle-to-every-ball styles, but in the end, it was Nadal who was superior.

Barely. He improved to 22-0 on hard courts and 60-3 overall in 2013 with nine titles, including at the French Open, which made him the first man with at least one Grand Slam trophy in nine consecutive seasons. The 27-year-old Spaniard's total of 13 major championships ranks third in the history of men's tennis, behind only Roger Federer's 17 and Pete Sampras' 14.

Rafael Nadal, of Spain, hugs the championship trophy after winning the men's singles final over Novak Djokovic, of Serbia, at the 2013 U.S. Open tennis tournament, Monday, Sept. 9, 2013, in New York.

Apple is expected to unveil its latest version of the iPhone Tuesday.

Apple Expected to Expand Selection of iPhones

BY MICHAEL LIEDTKE
AP Technology Writer

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) • Apple is expected to unveil its latest take on the iPhone today during an annual ritual that will probably cast a spotlight on the gadget maker's drive to regain market share and its sluggish pace of innovation.

In keeping with its tight-lipped ways, Apple Inc. hasn't disclosed what's on the agenda for the coming-out party scheduled to begin at 10 a.m. PDT at its Cupertino, Calif. headquarters.

But this is the time of year that Apple typically shows off the latest generation of its iPhone, a device that has reshaped the way people use computers since its debut in 2007. Apple took the wraps off the iPhone 5, the current model, last September. The company has never waited longer than a year to update the iPhone, which has generated $88 billion in revenue during the past year.

Apple's timetable for rolling out products has vexed many investors who have watched the company's growth slow and profit margins decrease. Meanwhile, a bevy of smartphone makers, most of whom rely on Google Inc.'s free Android software, release wave after wave of devices that cost less than the iPhone. Those concerns are reflected in Apple's stock price, which has declined nearly 30 percent since peaking at $705.07 at about the same time the iPhone 5 went on sale last year. The Standard & Poor's 500 index has risen about 14 percent during the same stretch.

Even though Apple's market value of roughly $460 billion is more than any other company in the world, the deterioration in its stock price is escalating the pressure on CEO Tim Cook to prove he's the right leader to carry on the legacy of co-founder Steve Jobs. Since Cook became CEO two years ago, Apple has only pushed out new versions of products developed under Jobs, raising questions about whether the company's technological vision has become blurred under the new regime.

Idaho Among Top States as National Housing Market Rebounds

BY JOE CADOTTE
jcadotte@magicvalley.com

TWIN FALLS • Fannie Mae and Freddie Mac are back in the news again, but this time it's not for catastrophic reasons.

Home prices nationally jumped 7.2 percent so far in 2013 relative to last year, which equates to more valuable federally backed mortgages. In Idaho, home prices rose 9.3 percent from last year, making it the 11th strongest housing market in the nation.

"It's another sign that Idaho's economy and housing markets are gaining momentum," said Gerald M. Hunter, President of the Idaho Housing and Finance Association.

There are many complicated factors that measure housing market stability, including expanding local economies, fewer loan delinquencies and foreclosures, increased property values and "historically" low interest rates, he said.

"Idaho's economy is com-

president of the Idaho Housing and Finance Association

ing back stronger than the national average," Hunter said. "Some of it is a reflection of Idaho's overall property prices and it's resiliency during the recession."

A rebounding housing market is not good news for everyone. Some first-time home buyers are struggling more than ever in the Magic Valley because of strict down payment rules, said Magic Valley Builders Association President Brad Wills. Tighter loan requirements are in place to prevent another market bubble from bursting like it did in 2007, he said. Young and first-time home buyers are a smaller part of the local market, Wills said.

"It's just harder to get a loan for younger people because they don't have the money for a down payment or they don't have the credit yet," he said.

For higher income families, the Twin Falls housing market is doing well compared to recession levels, but new builds still don't compare to pre-recession levels, Wills said.

"We're still a third what we did in 2005, 2006," he said.

Some 664 single-family homes were constructed in Twin Falls in 2005 and 547 in 2006. A mere 93 homes were built in 2011 in Twin Falls.

Last year there were 159 homes built, there have been 131 already this year, an increase that's swamped the Twin Falls Building Department, officials said.

South-central Idaho has one of the fastest growing economies in the state with more than 30 large corporations locating or expanding their business in the region since 2001. It's not as easy to compare the Magic Valley's housing market with other regions in the state, said Hunter, because different areas in Idaho have entirely different markets. But there are similar market themes.

"Delinquencies are lower. Home sales are picking up. Pretty much every market is doing better and doing good," Hunter said. "There are different parts of the state that had different paths to get where we are today."

Skeptics of a rebounding market point to the possibility of another housing bubble burst, Hunter said. While short-term gains are clear, long-term effects of the recent Federal Reserve decision to lower interest rates to "historic lows" are uncertain.

"That's a crystal ball question," Hunter said.

Forgotten Treasure? 75 People in Magic Valley with Valuable Unclaimed Property

When people move, divorce, close bank accounts or make other lifestyle changes, they sometimes leave behind forgotten property. Unclaimed property usually means money — checking or savings accounts, stock dividends, mutual funds and utility refunds. Or it can be things left in safety deposit boxes or at hotels or hospitals, items such as coins, gems, jewelry and stamps.

Honest businesses surrender those assets to the state, which tries to reunite the stuff with its owner or heirs. The Idaho Treasurer's Office provided this sampling of 75 people who own unclaimed property valued at more than $100. Their last known addresses are in south-central Idaho. But many other people are on the list, too. Be proactive by searching for your name at the office's website, sto.idaho.gov.

Coming Year Will See Big Changes at WTC Site in NY

NEW YORK (AP) • Twelve years after terrorists destroyed the old World Trade Center, the new one is becoming a reality, with a museum remembering the attacks and two office towers where thousands of people will work set to open within the next year.

A look at the status of the trade center's major components, according to developers:

- The 8-acre memorial plaza with its twin reflecting pools where the World Trade Center towers once stood opened in 2011 on the 10th anniversary of the Sept. 11 attacks. Nearly 10 million people have visited. Construction of the accompanying underground museum was delayed by a funding dispute between the memorial foundation and the Port Authority of New York and New Jersey but officials say the museum will open in the spring. Sept. 11 artifacts including a mangled fire truck and the pieces of intersecting steel known as the Ground Zero Cross are already in place.
- One World Trade Center, formerly known as the

One World Trade Center rises above the lower Manhattan skyline in New York.

Freedom Tower, is scheduled to be completed in early 2014. The 104-story building at the northwest corner of the 16-acre trade center site is topped by a spire that reaches the symbolic height of 1,776 feet. Its anchor tenant will be Conde Nast, the publisher of magazines including Vogue, GQ and Vanity Fair. A three-level observation deck called One World Observatory will open in 2015.

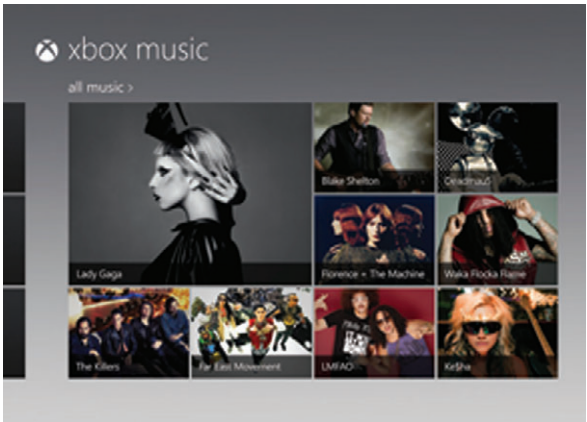

- Jumping the gun on its taller neighbor will be 4 World Trade Center, a 72-story, 977-foot building at the southeast corner of the site. Developers say it will open this November. Its main tenant will be the Port Authority, which owns the trade center site and lost its home when the twin towers fell.

- Just north of 4 World Trade Center is 3 World Trade Center, which is now a seven-story stub but will eventually reach 80 stories and 1,150 feet. Developer Larry Silverstein is required to lease at least 400,000 square feet of space before finishing the building. Silverstein is finalizing an agreement with GroupM, a media investment firm that is a division of WPP Group, for 515,000 square feet in the building. Assuming the lease is signed, the building should be completed in 2016.

- The last office tower planned for the 16-acre trade center site is 2 World Trade Center at the northeast corner. The 88-story skyscraper will not be built until the market improves enough to fill it.
- The transportation hub at the trade center is scheduled to be completed in 2015. It original cost estimate of $2.2 billion has been revised to $3.94 billion. It will connect 13 subway lines and PATH trains to New Jersey, serve 250,000 travelers a day and replace the temporary PATH station that was built after the attacks. There will be two levels of retail space.
- Plans for a performing arts center at the trade center have changed several times since the attacks. A board of directors was appointed last year and given the task of raising funds.

Microsoft Launches Xbox Music on Web

BY RYAN NAKASHIMA
AP Business Writer

Microsoft is making its Xbox Music streaming service available for free on the Web — even to those who don't use Windows 8.

The expansion beyond Windows 8 devices and Xbox game consoles starting Monday is intended to bring new customers into the software giant's ecosystem of devices and services and could help it compete with other digital music offerings like Pandora, Spotify and iTunes. It's also an acknowledgment that the music service hasn't done much to drive sales of the Windows 8 operating system.

The move represents another step toward Microsoft's goal of becoming a company that sells devices and services, rather than primarily software, said Michael Turits, an analyst with financial advisory firm Raymond James. It comes on the heels of Microsoft announcing it would buy the mobile phone handset manufacturing business of Nokia Corp. for $7.2 billion and that CEO Steve Ballmer would step down within 12 months.

"They've said they're going to be a devices and services company. We know they want to be a device company since they're buying the Nokia phone division," he said. "This kind of thing gives more credibility to the idea they'll be more of a services company as well."

Most buyers of the new Windows 8 operating system discovered Xbox Music because it's the default player for music files that people have imported from elsewhere, according to Xbox Music general manager Jerry Johnson. Opening it up to the broader public would give more people a chance to see the benefits of having multiple devices linked to Microsoft's platform. Its music service, for example, will save favorites and playlists across PCs, Windows Phones and Xbox game consoles.

"To actually build that ecosystem, we need to bring people into it," Johnson said.

Xbox Music allows people to choose from 30 million tracks and stream them for free with ads. The service sells downloadable tracks that have been kept off streaming services by artists or labels. A radio service on Xbox Music also generates song playlists automatically along genres or similar artists.

The thinking is if new consumers enjoy the free experience online, some might upgrade to pay $10 a month for the Xbox Music Pass, which allows playback on mobile phones and Microsoft's game console, Xbox 360, and its upcoming version, Xbox One. Microsoft is also launching apps for iPhones and Android devices that will allow paying subscribers to access Xbox Music. Previously, you had to have a device running the Windows Phone 8 operating system to access the plan on the go.

The decision to allow Xbox Music to run on competitors' phone platforms is in line with Redmond, Wash.-based Microsoft Corp.'s move in June to release app versions of its Office software on Apple's iPhone.

Microsoft is also updating its Xbox Music interface by reducing the size of cover art but adding tabs to make it easier to create and manage playlists.

Starting with its release Nov. 22, Xbox One users will also be able to play games while listening to Xbox Music simultaneously, a feature that isn't offered on the Xbox 360.

FDIC Selling $2.4B in Citigroup Bonds from Crisis

WASHINGTON (AP) • The U.S. government is selling $2.4 billion in bonds issued by Citigroup Inc. during the financial crisis in exchange for federal guarantees against the bank's possible losses.

The sale by the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. ends the government's holdings in the third-largest U.S. bank. Citigroup said in a regulatory filing Monday that it won't receive any proceeds from the sale.

The FDIC received the bonds in November 2008 for guaranteeing hundreds of billions in potential losses on loans made by Citigroup. Citigroup was the only bank in which the FDIC took a stake during the crisis.

New York-based Citigroup was one of the hardest-hit banks during the crisis. It received a $45 billion bailout from the Treasury Department, one of the largest of the rescue program. Citigroup repaid the bailout.

Obama: 'I Might Lose Congressional Vote on Syria'

WASHINGTON (AP) • Battling stiff resistance in Congress, President Barack Obama conceded Monday night he might lose his fight for congressional support of a military strike against Syria, and declined to say what he would do if lawmakers reject his call to back retaliation for a chemical weapons attack last month.

"I think it's fair to say that I haven't decided" on a next step if Congress turns its back, the president said in an NBC interview, one of six he granted during the day as part of a furious lobbying campaign aimed at winning support from dubious lawmakers as well as a war-weary public.

The president picked up a smattering of support but also suffered a reversal when Sen. Johnny Isakson, a Georgia Republican, announced he had switched from a backer of military action to an opponent.

"They're in tough shape. It is getting late," said Rep. Peter King, R-N.Y., after he and other lawmakers emerged from a closed-door meeting with administration officials. The New York Republican favors the legislation that Obama wants, but he said the president didn't need to seek it and now must show that a strike "is in America's national security interest."

For his part, the president sought to use a glimmer of a possible diplomatic solution — including vaguely encouraging statements by Russian and Syrian officials — as fresh reason for Congress to

Chemical Weapons Syria may possess

While the U.S. and its allies take stock of the Assad regime's announcement, here's a look at some of the chemical weapons that experts believe are in the Syrian government's arsenal:

• NERVE AGENTS

The most toxic of the chemical weapons, nerve agents affect the nervous system and are hazardous in their liquid and gas states. They can be delivered in missiles, bombs, rockets, artillery shells and other large munitions.

The Syrian regime is believed to possess tabun, sarin and VX. Absorbed through the skin or inhaled, these agents can — within seconds or minutes depending on the dose — cause extreme runny nose and salivation, blurred vision, nausea, vomiting, diarrhea and convulsions. Death is generally caused by paralysis of the respiratory system, which causes the victim to suffocate.

Germany developed the first nerve agents before and during World War II, although the Nazis did not use them during the war. The only time nerve agents are believed to have been used on the battlefield was in the 1980s Iraq-Iran war.

• MUSTARD GAS

One of the best-known chemical weapons, mustard gas is a blister agent that attacks the eyes and skin, causing severe blisters. If inhaled, it can also damage the lungs and other organs. The gas does not cause immediate symptoms, which means those exposed to it can unknowingly take high dosages. While not usually lethal, exposure to mustard gas is generally debilitating.

Mustard gas was first used by the German army in World War I against British forces. Saddam Hussein was accused of using the gas in Iraq's war with Iran, as well as in his 1987-1988 crackdown on the country's Kurdish minority. The most notorious case was on the village of Halabja, which killed some 5,000 people in what was the deadliest chemical weapons attack ever against civilians.

back his plan. Speaking of the government of Bashar Assad, he said the credible threat of a military strike led by the United States "has given them pause and makes them consider whether or not they could make this move" to surrender control of their chemical weapons stockpile.

Classified briefings for lawmakers just back from vacation, the public release of cringe-inducing videos of men, women and children writing in agony from the evident effects of chemical gas, and a half-dozen network news interviews featuring Obama were folded into the White House bid to avert a humiliating defeat over the next 10 days. Obama met with members of the Congressional Black Caucus during the day, and arranged a trip to the Capitol as well as a prime time speech from the White House on Tuesday.

As lawmakers returned from a long vacation, Senate Majority Leader Harry Reid made a statement of support for the president's request.

"Today, many Americans say that these atrocities are none of our business, that they're not our concern," the Nevada Democrat said of Assad's alleged gassing of civilians on Aug. 21. "I disagree. Any time the powerful turn such weapons of terror and destruction against the powerless, it is our business."

Others came down on the other side of the question.

"I will vote 'no' because of too much uncertainty about what comes next," said Sen. Lamar Alexander, a Tennessee Republican. "After Step A, what will be steps B, C, D and E?" he added, reflecting concerns that even the limited action Obama was contemplating could lead to a wider war. Missouri Republican Roy Blunt also announced his opposition.

So did Democrat Heidi Heitkamp of North Dakota. "I strongly believe that we need the entire world, not just America, to prevent and deter the use of chemical weapons in Syria, or anywhere else on the globe," she said.

the same time, try to block the public from social media.

The government-as-Facebook Friends initiative, reported by the pro-reform Shargh daily, is seen as part of Rouhani's efforts to give the presidency a makeover as more accountable and accessible after his combative predecessor, Mahmoud Ahmadinejad.

But it further exposes the internal tensions among Iran's leadership over whether the Internet is ultimately a force to be expanded or best kept tightly controlled. Disputes even broke out — on Web-based Iranian news sites — over the authenticity of some of the Facebook pages linked to some ministers.

Questions Persist About Standoff Death of Man, 107

PINE BLUFF, Ark. • Authorities in Arkansas halted a standoff this weekend when they shot a man who opened fire at them.

But when police announced that the incident left a 107-year-old man dead, it sparked a flurry of questions about how and why the life of such an elderly man could end at the hands of a SWAT team.

Authorities in Pine Bluff said they used negotiating tactics, a camera and gas before they shot Monroe Isadore on Saturday.

Still, that hasn't addressed concerns from some described Isadore on Monday as a pleasant, churchgoing man who was hard of hearing.

A police report The Associated Press obtained Monday said an Arkansas woman told officers she had gone to the house where Isadore was living temporarily to help him move to a new home.

After Gun Laws, Colo. Lawmakers Face Recall Test

DENVER • In a state darkened by the shadow of nightmarish mass shootings, a pair of Colorado lawmakers who voted in favor of new firearms restrictions are fighting to keep their jobs.

Senate President John Morse in Colorado Springs and Sen. Angela Giron in Pueblo face recall elections Tuesday in a battle that has attracted major players from around the nation, reflecting the sustained intensity over the issue of gun rights.

New York Mayor Michael Bloomberg has contributed $350,000 in support of the lawmakers. Recall backers, meanwhile, have raised nearly a half million dollars, most of which has come from the National Rifle Association.

Iranian Officials Encouraged to Go on Facebook

DEAR ABBY: I am a 75-year-old man who lives in a gated community. For the last eight months I have been seeing a woman who lives nearby. We are starting to fall in love.

DEAR ABBY
Jeanne Phillips

Our problem is her 95-year-old mother, who lives with her. Her mom is pretty healthy and has some money, but she's scared to be left alone. Because of this, my lady and I have difficulty finding private time.

We get out for short periods, but we'd like to go away for a weekend together. If we suggest it, Mom makes a stink and gets nasty with her daughter. We have tried talking with her about it, but she refuses, sulks and won't talk for days.

She's suffering from slight dementia, but gets around OK with a walker. Mom claims she doesn't want or need a "grandma sitter." She wants only her daughter to take care of her and be with her. Any help would be appreciated.

— COURTING TROUBLE IN ARIZONA

DEAR COURTING: If your lady friend wants to have any life of her own, she will have to stiffen her spine and deal with Mama. This includes not allowing her mother's sulking to prevent the two of you from having an occasional weekend together.

She should contact assisted-living facilities in the area and find out if they will accept guests for short stays of only a few days or a week. If the answer is yes, Mama should be offered a choice: Either someone comes to stay with her while you're gone, a friend perhaps, or she will have to stay elsewhere because being alone is not an option.

DEAR ABBY: My brother died earlier this year due to an overdose. His wife and one of my sisters lived with him. They also gave him the drugs that caused his death.

Abby, they are treating Mom, my husband and me like dirt. Mom had no say in the funeral at all. You would think that since she was the mother, the wife would have included her. They have been having parties ever since the funeral and spending the money left and right, while not paying the mortgage on the house.

They have turned my other sister against us, blocked us on social media and cut us off completely. They also turned another part of the family against us. I know it involves drug abuse on the part of all of them. We didn't do anything to them other than bring forth evidence of what they did and confront them.

I have no idea how to trust or to build a relationship with them again if they ever decide to come back into our lives. It's painful to deal with a death, and then more trials on top of that. Any advice?

— BROKENHEARTED IN TAMPA, FLA.

DEAR BROKENHEARTED: I'm sorry for your loss, but please recognize that when relatives are as dysfunctional as yours, it's safer for you, your husband and your mother to MOVE ON. And if they do decide to come back into your lives, for the sake of your sanity, run the other way.

DEAR ABBY: Are there any letters or topics you won't touch with a 10-foot pole?

— JUST WONDERING

DEAR WONDERING: None come to mind. At one point or another, this column has addressed darn near everything and may have offended almost everyone.

Dear Abby is written by Abigail Van Buren, also known as Jeanne Phillips, and was founded by her mother, Pauline Phillips. Write Dear Abby at www.DearAbby.com or P.O. Box 69440, Los Angeles, CA 90069.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE® Bobby Wolff

“One half of the world cannot understand the pleasures of the other.”

— Jane Austen

When missing five trumps, you will find they break 4-1 more than one quarter of the time. So planning against that is generally not a waste of effort.

In today's deal, had North's spade 10 been the queen, a small slam in spades would have been a reasonable contract. However, even four spades was not laydown when West led the club queen and continued with the jack. South ruffed, then laid down the spade ace and king, discovering the 4-1 break. Belatedly, declarer started on hearts, but West ruffed the first round with the trump jack and cashed the queen, which removed South's last trump, with the club 10 representing one down.

Unless you have total trump control, it is more often right than not to establish your second suit before drawing too many trumps. If at trick four, having drawn just one round of trumps, declarer had played the heart ace, West's ruff would not have fazed him. South trumps the club return, cashes the trump king, then continues with hearts from the top. West can trump in with the master spade, but that is the last trick for the defense. A club return is ruffed with dummy's penultimate trump, and the diamond entries allow declarer to ruff out hearts, then come back to hand to run the suit.

Even if hearts were not 4-0, this would be the best line — either a defender would ruff in, leaving declarer with trump control, or dummy's third club could be discarded on the hearts.

ANSWER: It looks natural to invite game with a cue-bid raise of two spades. But my preference as a passed hand would be to jump to three clubs, a fit-showing jump to indicate my source of tricks and to help my partner work out how far to compete against the opponents' spade bids. Incidentally, this hand is not worth a splinter bid in spades facing a third-in-hand opening.

Personnel Plus
Your Full Staffing Solution
Temp Position;

IF SEPTEMBER 10 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: Your financial expertise and business shrewdness rises to the surface during the next five to six weeks. You'll be delighted with results if you do everything you can to make ambitions come true and put ideas for financial security into motion. You'll be wiser and luckier than usual in January and early February, so that's a good time to make key decisions and launch important plans. After the first of the year, put physical health and exercise at the top of your priority list. Ask someone else along to participate by your side as you start new health or fitness regimens.

HOROSCOPE

Jeraldine Saunders

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Don't get carried away by the enthusiasm of others. It's easy to be swayed by someone's persuasiveness and do something against your better judgment. Focus on making a strong professional impact.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Things turn out the best for people who make the best of things. You could be distracted by flattery or appeals for charitable donations. A partner needs help to achieve ambitions.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Drive plus inspiration get you somewhere. Balance a shrewd business sense with a vision of what can be accomplished and aim high. Hold off on purchases that require good taste.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): No one is able to resist good humor and kindness, but don't go overboard. People will expect you to honor your promises, so don't be overly generous with casual assurances.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Use a discerning eye. Just because it doesn't have a designer label or expensive price tag doesn't make it less valuable. Be forgiving if a significant other exaggerates or is insincere.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): You can tie together loose ends or work well with details. You may give in to a desire for extravagant items or overspend to impress others. Remain businesslike with personal finances.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): An investment in knowledge always pays the best interest. Education is more than knowing what you must do, but may mean knowing what you can do and perhaps should not do.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): If the past calls to you, let it go to voicemail; it has nothing new to say to you. Focus on making a more secure future for your family by letting your ambitions have a free rein.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): A special someone could disrupt the even tenor of the day by spending too much or going to extremes. You must walk a balance beam between reasonable caution and optimism.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Don't regret the things you haven't done but the things you never did when you had the chance. You might be possessed by an ambitious nature, but you shouldn't pass up fun.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): If you aspire to be top gun in your profession or workplace, be as nice as possible. Handle sudden changes of plan and surprises with diplomacy. Someone may rival you for top position.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): The difference between ordinary and extraordinary is giving whatever you do something extra. Add a "can do" attitude to good humor and you'll overcome all opposition.

Environmentalists, Tribe Seek to Halt GE Megaloads

BY JOHN MILLER
Associated Press

BOISE • An American Indian tribe and environmentalists pleaded Monday with a federal judge, telling him he's the only thing standing between them and the next giant oil-field equipment shipment along a winding Idaho mountain highway toward Canada's tar sands.

Meanwhile, a lawyer for a General Electric Co. subsidiary told U.S. District Judge B. Lynn Winnmill that the courts had no authority to interfere with the company's second 225-foot-long, 640,000-pound water evaporator, slated to travel on U.S. Highway 12 on Sept. 18.

Its first evaporator, shipped on the route in August, attracted numerous protesters, 20 of whom were arrested.

Winnmill promised a ruling this week.

U.S. 12 is a federally designated Wild and Scenic River corridor along the Lochsa and Clearwater rivers running through the Nez Perce Tribe's reservation and U.S. Forest Service territory.

For three years, it has been ground zero in disputes between foes of big industrial shipments to the oil fields in Alberta — including the Nez Perce Tribe who says the highway isn't the appropriate route — and companies, including ExxonMobil, and now GE, who want to use the highway as the shortest, cheapest alternative.

"Unless this court acts, nobody is going to stop the next megaloads shipment in nine days," Laird Lucas, a lawyer for the shipment foes, told Winnmill.

The tribe and environmentalists from Idaho Rivers United contend that allowing the next GE shipment will cause irreparable harm to the rights of the Nez Perce people and damage the corridor's environmental values. Lucas predicts additional protests, if nothing is done.

"There will be public health and safety issues," he said. "The highway will be closed down."

Though ExxonMobil resorted to other Idaho highways to get nearly all of its gear to Canada amid the protest, GE is insisting on U.S. 12, saying delays to getting its equipment to Canada on time could cost it $3.6 million in damages. Richard Boardman, a lawyer for the company's Resources Conservation Company International unit, suggested shipment foes were using the specter of further protests to pressure Winnmill.

"I know this court is not going to react to that kind of mob mentality," Boardman said, arguing U.S. 12 was actually the route with the fewest impacts. "It is the most environmentally-friendly route to get this equipment to the customer," he said, prompting guffaws from a packed courtroom audience heavy with shipment foes.

Winnmill warned the crowd to be quiet, otherwise he'd eject them from the courtroom.

Earlier this year, Winnmill ruled the Forest Service did have the authority to intervene on whether the megaloads could legally pass through territory managed by the agency.

During Monday's hearing, however, he raised the question of whether a federal judge could go one step further in this case: to actually put a halt to shipments, when the Forest Service hadn't already done so.

Forest Service officials argue they've only just begun study of megaloads' impacts on the U.S. 12 corridor, as well as consultations with the Nez Perce Tribe. As that process moves forward, Assistant U.S. Attorney Joanne Rodriguez said, the agency has opted not to intervene when the Idaho Transportation Department issued state permits for the oversized GE loads to use the route.

"The Forest Service is trying to address the issue," Rodriguez said, adding the agency also had the responsibility of protecting the company's interests.

"The tribe is not the only entity that is entitled to a decision that is not arbitrary and capricious," she said.

But Michael Lopez, the Nez Perce Tribe's attorney, argued its members have so far been denied the opportunity for substantive government-to-government negotiations with the Forest Service.

"The Nez Perce Tribe has clearly suffered a procedural harm," Lopez told Winnmill. "That injury to the Nez Perce people... was definitely irreparable harm that this court should consider in granting this injunction."

New Wife Charged with Murder in Death of Husband

MISSOULA, Mont. (AP) • A newlywed wife was charged Monday with killing her husband by pushing him off a cliff in Glacier National Park during an argument just a week after they got married.

Charging documents suggest Jordan Linn Graham, 22, was having second thoughts about getting married around the time the body of her husband, Cody Lee Johnson, 25, of Kalispell, was discovered.

Graham told an FBI agent that she and her husband had been arguing July 7 as they walked in the Loop Trail area of the park.

At one point, she turned to walk away, but Johnson grabbed her arm, she said. She turned around, removed his hand from her arm and "due to her anger, she pushed Johnson with both hands in the back, and as a result, he fell face first off the cliff," an affidavit states.

Johnson was reported missing July 8 when he failed to show up for work. Graham later reported that she had spotted his body.

Graham made an initial court appearance Monday before U.S. Magistrate Judge Jeremiah C. Lynch on a charge of second-degree murder. She is currently in custody.

Her attorney, public defender Andrew Nelson, declined to comment.

Johnson's family and friends were relieved after calling for an investigation since his body was recovered July 12.

"Two months probably isn't very long for an FBI investigation, but when you're waiting for answers, that's a lifetime," family friend Tracey Maness said.

Maness said Johnson was excited about his wedding and in love with Graham.

Graham initially told investigators that Johnson left their house late July 7 with unidentified friends in a dark-colored car with Washington state license plates.

That night, she texted a friend and said she was about to talk to Johnson about her reservations about having gotten married the previous weekend.

The friend, identified only by initials, told the FBI about receiving the text from Graham just before 9 p.m. in which Graham said, "Oh well, I'm going to talk to him."

The friend responded, "I'll pray for you guys."

Graham replied, "But dead serious if u don't hear from me at all again tonight, something happened."

Another friend said Graham reported receiving an email July 10 saying Johnson had left with three friends, went hiking, had fallen and was dead.

The next day, Graham reported to park officials that she had spotted Johnson's body. A ranger thought that was unusual, but Graham explained, "It was a place he wanted to see before he died," authorities said.

Graham was interviewed July 16 and acknowledged lying about her husband's death, authorities said.

Jump

Twin Falls council members agreed Monday that a permitting process is worth pursuing. Some members, however, cautioned that not everyone in Twin Falls has fond memories of the Kniev-el jump.

"I'm supportive of this proceeding," said Councilman Chris Talkington, who was a TV news director in 1974 when Kniev-el attempted his jump. "But when this happened the first time, the city was literally Mayberry, and we were bombarded. ... There were deaths by Shoshone Falls from people on the canyon, and there was a lot of debt that was never paid."

Approving a jump may help erase bad memories that some local residents associate with the old site, said

Councilman Shawn Barigar.

"It's not going to be easy. It's going to take a lot of hard work, but this is an opportunity," he said.

City staff will come up with a proposed process and present it to the council in the next few weeks.

"My priority is that it definitely not cost the citizens. And more importantly, it should benefit the citizens," said Councilwoman Rebecca Mills-Sojka.

Hagerman Hatchery Celebrates 80 Years

BY KIMBERLEE KRUESI
 kkruesi@magicvalley.com

HAGERMAN • The millions of smolts that grow up to attract anglers from all over the country would be almost nonexistent without the help of federal fish hatcheries, including one critical facility in southern Idaho's backyard. The Hagerman National Fish Hatchery opened its raceways 80 years ago. At the time, it was used to produce trout for recreational fishing in eastern Oregon, Idaho and Nevada. Today, the facility still grows some trout, but most of its 120 raceways are used to produce more than 1.4 million steelhead smolts. The fish are released in the Salmon River Basin in May to travel down the Lower Snake River with the hope that they will return as healthy full-grown fish in April.

In the early 1900s, four hydropower dams built along the Snake River severely reduced the number of young fish that survive the swim to Columbia Basin. With an increase in fishing and more dams in place, steelhead and salmon populations have dropped, said hatchery Manager Craig Eaton. Federally managed hatcheries have been critical in helping to keep beloved fish species from becoming endangered. "In my opinion, steelhead would be extinct or close to extinction in Idaho without the help of federal hatcheries like us," Eaton said. Despite operating in the Thousand Springs valley for 80 years, Eaton joked that the facility often faces an identity crisis with the state-run fish hatchery that opened next door many years after. "People don't always know there are two facilities, we have the same name," Eaton said.

Despite its modest size, the Hagerman hatchery has been at the forefront at installing some of the newest technology to help produce better and healthier fish. For example, the 17 springs that help feed the hatchery have historically tested high in nitrogen, which in turn causes high mortality for fish. Biologists secured enough funding to install a nitrogen degasser and boosted the number of surviving fish. Nearly 30 to 40 cubic feet per second of water runs through the device and reduces the water's nitrogen to below-average levels. The water — about half of what is required

ASHLEY SMITH • TIMES-NEWS
 Craig Eaton, of the U.S. Fish & Wildlife Service, shows examples of the early stages of life of steelhead fish at the Hagerman National Fish Hatchery on Monday in Hagerman.

Attend the Celebration

The Hagerman National Fish Hatchery will celebrate its 80th year anniversary Saturday. The family friendly celebration will include hatchery tours, informational booths from local and federal agencies and salmon mini-golf. The event is to start at 10 a.m. at 3059-D National Fish Hatchery Road in Hagerman.

to operate the hatchery — is then mixed with untreated water. Eaton would like to install pumps that would cut in the amount of water needed to produce the same amount of fish by half. That all depends, however, on securing enough funds. The hatchery's water rights allow the facility to have 80 cfs of water, but it's only receiving a little more than 60 cfs, he said. "The aquifer — the water source that provides water for this hatchery — is depleting," Eaton said. "We need to find a way to produce the same amount of fish with half the water but right now, that's very expensive."
