TWIN FALLS • Three finalists have been named for the College of Southern Idaho presidency — one from Montana, another from Salt Lake City and one a veteran administrator at CSI.

The finalists are:
• Jeff Fox, executive vice president and chief academic officer at CSI since 2008.
• D. Ryan Carstens, associate provost for education and community partnerships at Salt Lake Community College since January 2012.

• Daniel J. Bingham, chief executive officer of Helena College-University of Montana since 2005.

Citizens and CSI staff are urged to attend a public forum Oct. 15, at which each candidate will have 50 minutes to address the audience in the CSI Fine Arts Theater.

Carstens will speak from 2-2:50 p.m.; Fox, 3-3:50 p.m.; and Bingham, 4 to 4:50 p.m.

Each candidate will make brief opening and closing statements but mostly will field questions from the audience. Everyone who attends will get a comment card to rate the candidates' strengths and weaknesses.

After the forums, the candidates will be interviewed individually and privately by the CSI Board of Trustees.

"The board does want to consider the feedback that they get from the forums," said Doug Maughan, CSI public relations director.

The trustees will choose the president in a vote during an open meeting that has yet to be scheduled.

Bingham received a bachelor's degree in community college teaching and a master's in educational leadership from Northern Arizona University in Flagstaff. He earned his Ph.D. in community college leadership from the University of Texas at Austin.

Government Shutdown Ripples Across Idaho

BY KIMBERLEE KRUESI
kkruesi@magicvalley.com

TWIN FALLS • The U.S. government shutdown that started Tuesday has led to thousands of furloughs for Idaho federal employees, forced closures to beloved campgrounds and recreation sites and may threaten crucial services to pregnant women and small children.

Most of the Gem State's federal employees were given strict instructions on how to shut down, ordered to hand over their cell phones and then go home to wait for the U.S. House and Senate to agree on a bill to fund the government.

It's unclear how long the shutdown will continue. Congress didn't make any progress Tuesday toward passing a bill. Instead, many lawmakers, including U.S. Sen. Jim Risch, R-Idaho, voiced their intention to waive their shutdown-exempt salaries until a bill is passed.

The federal government has about 650 to 700 employees in south-central Idaho and nearly 13,600 statewide. Not everyone, however, was asked to leave. Skeleton crews spread throughout the agencies will remain in offices to process applications and permits

SNAKE RIVER CANYON JUMP

City, Beckley Roll Up Sleeves to Ready for Jump

A view of the jump Evel Knievel used in 1974 during his attempt to cross the Snake River Canyon.

ASHLEY SMITH • TIMES-NEWS

BY BRIAN SMITH

TWIN FALLS • Building.

That seems to be the theme echoed after Friday's blockbuster auction in which Texas daredevil Big Ed Beckley won a lease to land his motorcycle on the north side of the Snake River Canyon — the first step to reenacting Evel Knievel's famous 1974 attempt at the same.

Beckley must build his body. He must construct a motorcycle and ramp capable of achieving the feat. He must foster the capital and media contracts required to finance the endeavor. And he must build the trust of Twin Falls city officials.

All the while, those same Twin Falls officials are building their plans, constructing the proper permitting processes and building public trust that such a stunt will not destroy the city's reputation or be a repeat of the Knievel fiasco.

In other words, the real work has just begun.

For at least a decade, City Manager Travis Rothweiler has talked with as many as nine groups interested in recreating Knievel's jump attempt. There was always a lot of interest, but none could complete the initial steps to secure the rights to land on the north side.

"Now the pressure is on us," he said.

The city's priority is public health and safety, Rothweiler said, and it won't hesitate to reject an application. The city has been clear that having a state permit to land doesn't make any jumper a shoe-in to use the city's newly purchased jump site.

Despite the economic gains the city would see, if a jump is not done right, "it is more damaging to us as a community than us just saying, 'No,'" he said.

The city's other priorities, Rothweiler said, are:

- Annexing the jump site. The city owns the jump site land and the existing dirt ramp outside city limits in Twin Falls County, Rothweiler said. The city soon will start annexing — bringing the land under its legal jurisdiction — so it can use its police powers and regulate activities through a special event permit.

- Make the jump at no cost to taxpayers. Improvements to the facility will be paid for by whomever is permitted to jump. Taxpayers will not foot any cost except for the salary of public officials working on permitting.

- Protect the "brand and image" of Twin Falls. If a jump is done right, it will create positive marketing exposure for the area and state, he said. "For those that say we should just say no, I think it is important to say that we haven't said yes," he said.

- Ensuring that public feedback is heard. The city's proposal to annex the property first will be mulled by the Planning and Zoning Commission and also will go before the City Council. The public may comment on the plan during those steps, as well as the special event permit process that will go before the City Council.

Rothweiler said the city also may seek more public comment and hold meetings, specifically for neighbors or other stakeholders.

"They can contact any members of the council or they can contact me," he said. "They can share their thoughts, their ideas, their concerns, and we would encourage that because maybe some of their thoughts and concerns are things we might miss."

The Idaho Department of Lands owns the 1,147 acres on which Beckley bid $943,000 on Friday in Boise for a two-year lease. Lands Department spokeswoman Emily Callihan said the state has not received the

Idaho Insurance Exchange Hits Snags on Opening-day

ASSOCIATED PRESS

BOISE • Idaho's insurance exchange hit opening-day snags, with online applications being processed more slowly than anticipated with high volume.

Amy Dowd, the director of the Internet insurance marketplace, on Tuesday directed people seeking to enroll to contact its call center, insurance agents or in-person assistants to help navigate the process. A list is available at www.yourhealth-idaho.org.

Despite the troubles, Dowd called the process "a marathon, not a sprint," adding that open enrollment continues through March 31.

As long as people enroll by Dec. 15, she said, their coverage will start Jan. 1.

Insurance exchanges are a key part of President Barack Obama's health care overhaul and are meant to connect individuals and small businesses with federally subsidized insurance, depending on their income.

Exchanges across the country opened Tuesday.

THE MARKET AT A GLANCE

Markets Rise even as US Government Shutdown Starts

NEW YORK (AP) • Investors stayed calm on the first day of a partial shutdown of the U.S. government Tuesday and sent the stock market modestly higher. A long-running dispute in Washington over President Barack Obama's health care law caused a deadlock over the U.S. budget, forcing about 800,000 federal workers off the job and suspending all but essential services. With the Republican-controlled House of Representatives and Democratic-controlled Senate locked in a stalemate, it was unclear how long a temporary bill needed to finance government activities would be stalled.

Dad in Cancer Fraud Case Sentenced to Probation

BY ALISON GENE SMITH
alismith@magicvalley.com

Holley

TWIN FALLS • Ongoing mental health help is the key to Michael Wayne Holley's success on probation, District Judge Randy Stoker said Monday.

The Buhl man, who pleaded guilty in July to helping hold a fraudulent cancer fundraiser, was sentenced Monday to supervised probation on a count of grand theft by deception.

Stoker sentenced Holley, 54, to four years of probation. If unsuccessful on probation, Holley could serve three to 10 years in prison.

Stoker waived reimbursement of the public defender's office, despite the tremendous time spent on the case, because of Holley's financial situation. That's an unusual waiver, the judge noted.

Holley, and his wife, Lisa Holley, 44, were accused in August 2012 of holding the fundraiser car wash for a daughter they said had leukemia.

They were charged after Idaho State Police said the two accepted $1,200 in cash from an undercover officer. Police said the girl was not sick.

Last October, prosecutors filed an additional charge against Lisa Holley. Police said she faked being pregnant with triplets and took $1,435 in money and gifts from members of a Buhl church.

In court Aug. 16, Lisa Holley changed her plea to guilty on two charges of grand theft by deception in the cancer fraud case. In exchange, prosecutors dropped the charge in the fake pregnancy case. She is to be sentenced Oct. 21.

Both Holleys entered Alford pleas, meaning they agreed to the facts of the case but not to every accusation police made.

At previous court hearings, Michael Holley was argumentative with attorneys and a judge, even storming out after nearly hitting his attorney with his cane.

Initially, prosecutors made a deal with Michael Holley saying they would suggest probation if he successfully applied for and participated in Twin Falls County's mental health court.

He applied to the court but was denied.

"The mental health court window is pretty narrow," said his attorney, George Essma.

Essma said in court Monday that his client had been seeing a counselor weekly and would continue.

"I have seen a real change for the positive in Mr. Holley in the time I've represented him," Essma said.

Deputy Prosecutor Rosemary Emory said probation was the appropriate sentence for Holley.

Emory said she hopes he takes probation seriously and continues to participate in mental health counseling.

Michael Holley described how his psychiatrist helps him deal with ramifications of a brain injury and apologized for the fundraiser and raffle that led to his arrest.

"Lisa was just wanting to get (their daughter) home," he said. "That was the whole thing about the car wash and the raffle. She wanted her home."

Stoker said Michael Holley's success on probation depends on him continuing to work with mental health counselors and asking lots of questions.

"Be candid with your probation officer," Stoker said. "They don't want to send you to the penitentiary, and neither do I."

Lewis told the deputies he became angry, went outside with his shotgun and "did something bad."

According to deputies, Lewis changed his story a few times, saying he fired his semi-automatic Remington shotgun twice, then four times.

While Lewis talked with deputies, his children played on the lawn in front of the house.

"I told Christopher if he would keep his cool I would not place him in handcuffs in front of his children," the deputy wrote in the report.

Lewis agreed and he and the deputy waited for Lewis' wife to return home to take their children inside. Lewis was arrested and booked into the county jail where he posted a $1,000 bond.

A preliminary hearing is scheduled for Oct. 11.

Plea Deal Expected for T.F. Bank Robbery Suspect

BY DYLAN WOOLF HARRIS
Elko Daily Free Press

ELKO, Nev. • A Carlin, Nev., man shot by law enforcement last month after he allegedly pointed a gun at a cop likely will reach a plea deal on three unrelated felonies, his attorney said Monday in Elko District Court.

Jake Rowe and his wife, Linda, are accused in a Twin Falls bank robbery.

Jake Rowe faces Nevada charges of possession of a short-barrel shotgun, possession of stolen property and possession of a controlled substance. His jury trial is scheduled for mid-November.

Carlin police allegedly found an illegal short-barrel shotgun, suspected stolen property and methamphetamine in Rowe's home in April 2012.

But the local case against Rowe should be resolved before it goes to trial.

"It's my understanding from the state and Mr. (David) Buchler from the district attorney's office that we probably will be receiving an offer by the end of this week or next week," said defense attorney Sherburne Macfarlan III.

Jake Rowe's extradition hearing is set for 4 p.m. today in Elko Justice Court. Linda Rowe was transported to Twin Falls, Idaho, last week.

The District Attorney's Office dismissed two counts second-degree kidnapping, assault with a deadly weapon, two counts of coercion and conspiracy to commit kidnapping charges against Rowe last December.

Those charges stem from an alleged November 2011 incident.

The alleged victims, Michael Freed and Rebecca Rigglesworth, could not be found for a preliminary hearing, said District Attorney Mark Torvinen. Testimony from at least one of the victims "was necessary to substantiate the charges pending against Mr. Rowe," Torvinen wrote in a reply to an Elko Daily Free Press information request.

The D.A. explained in the written response that victim cooperation is a frequent problem that arises in disputes over controlled substances, as alleged in this case.

The charges can be re-filed up to November 2014.

Jake Rowe is still being held in lieu of a $1 million bond in the Twin Falls bank robbery.

Linda Rowe, accused of being his accomplice in the heist, is being held in the Twin Falls County Jail in lieu of a $500,000 bond.

Police say Jake Rowe entered Zions Bank at 11:45 a.m. July 9, showed a teller a black, semiautomatic handgun and demanded money. The teller handed over a stack of cash totaling $1,573.

Jake Rowe then hopped on a red dirt bike and sped to Linda Rowe, who was waiting in the couple's blue pickup, police say. The two deposited $820 in a nearby Wells Fargo Bank and made their way to La Quinta Inn on Pole Line Road, less than a mile from Zions Bank.

On Sept. 4, Twin Falls police went to Carlin, Nev., to serve warrants to the Rowes. That led to a 20-mile off-road chase and ended when a police officer shot Jake Rowe after he allegedly pointed a rifle at officers.

He was treated at a Boise hospital before being taken to the Elko County Jail.

Coroner: Four Bodies Inside Jet that Crashed near LA

BY JUSTIN PRITCHARD
Associated Press

LOS ANGELES • Forensic specialists worked to identify the remains of four people pulled Tuesday from the charred wreckage of a private jet that crashed into a hangar after landing, while federal safety investigators curtailed their work due to the partial government shutdown.

The Los Angeles County coroner's office took the remains from the aircraft at Santa Monica Airport and tried to match new dental X-rays with X-rays of people believed to be aboard, Lt. Fred Corral said. That process could be completed Wednesday.

Among the likely deceased were Mark Benjamin, CEO of a prominent Southern California construction company, and his son, Luke Benjamin, a senior project manager with the company.

"We are heartbroken at the loss of Mark Benjamin and his son Lucas in a tragic accident," Charles Muttillio, vice president of Santa Monica-based Morley Builders, said in a written statement.

According to the company's website, past projects include Southern California landmarks such as the Roman Catholic Cathedral of Our Lady of the Angels, the Getty Villa art museum and parts of the Hollywood Bowl.

engine Cessna 525A crashed shortly before sunset Sunday as it arrived from Hailley, Idaho.

Several people who knew Mark Benjamin told The Associated Press he would typically pilot the plane between Southern California and Idaho, where he owned homes, though they did not know whether Benjamin was at the controls Sunday.

Mark Benjamin lived in Malibu but would frequently spend weekends in the outdoors that he loved around the Sun Valley area, said longtime friend John French of Ketchum.

French, also a pilot, said that Benjamin started flying the Cessna about six years ago.

"He flew a lot," French said. "He was not a casual pilot."

Benjamin was an avid nature photographer who would rise early to make pictures while others slept, French said. He also loved the stars, and built a home in Ketchum with a retractable roof so that a large telescope could take in the night sky. His other son, Matt, works at the University of Colorado planetarium.

An active philanthropist, Benjamin had a particular interest in nature conservation and youth programs. Executives with the Idaho Conservation League and the Boys & Girls Club of Malibu praised a man they said practiced generosity for its own sake — not the recognition some seek. After listening intently, he often would conclude a group discussion with a trenchant suggestion or observation, friends said.

During Sunday's flight, there was "no communication with the pilot indicating there's a problem with the aircraft at any time," Van McKenny, lead investigator with the National Transportation Safety Board, said Monday.

JEROME CITY COUNCIL

Jerome Hires New Fire Chief

BY KIMBERLEE KRUESI
kkruesi@magicvalley.com

JEROME • The city of Jerome filled its vacant fire chief position Tuesday after nearly a month since former department head Jack Krill suddenly resigned.

Jerome City Council members appointed Deputy Fire Chief Tom Hughes to the fire department's top spot.

Hughes has been working for the city since April. His background includes serving as a firefighter and emergency medical technician in New Jersey, Connecticut and as a fire officer in Oklahoma.

"We put him through a pretty thorough vetting process," said Mayor John Shine. "We went over his credentials in case a situation would arise where he would be he would need to be the chief and it has risen."

Tuesday's City Council meeting got heated after members questioned how they should fill the empty city administrator position.

Councilman Chris Barber requested the city extend the application deadline several weeks after the Nov. 5 elections. That way, Barber said, the new council can be included in the hiring process.

Shine, however, cautioned that the city shouldn't wait too long before hiring a new city manager.

"We need a new administrator," he said.

Councilman Dale Ross, one of three candidates challenging Shine, also asked to push back the application deadline.

"We gotta get it right," he said.

The city has been without a city manager since mid-September when Polly Hulsey resigned for personal reasons.

After interrupting each other several times, Shine and the council agreed to move the deadline from Nov. 20 to Dec. 5.

EDUCATION

Luna Seeks 5.9 Percent Increase in Education Budget

BOISE (AP) • Idaho public schools chief Tom Luna is seeking a nearly 6 percent increase in funding next year for schools and teacher salaries.

Luna is also proposing helping high school juniors and seniors pay for dual-credit classes that help earn college credit before graduation.

The Republican unveiled his $1.37 billion budget for 2014-15 on Tuesday. He said the spending increase mirrors recommendations spelled out earlier this year by an education task force assembled by Gov. C.L. "Butch" Otter.

If approved by lawmakers, the proposed 5.9 percent spending increase would be the biggest bud-et for the Department of Education since 2009.

Of the $77 million in new money, Luna's budget recommends using an additional $16.5 million for classrooms to help offset $82 million in cuts made during the economic downturn.

MISSING WOMAN

Family Asks Experienced Hikers to Help Find Woman

BOISE (AP) • The family of a woman who has been missing since she left for a short day hike in central Idaho last week is asking for hikers with backcountry experience to help in the search.

Sixty-three-year-old Jo Elliott-Blakeslee and 69-year-old Amy Linkert were last seen near Arco on Sept. 19. Officials believe the two went for a short hike at Carters of the Moon National Monument, where their pickup was found parked with their phones, purses and dogs inside.

They were reported missing Sept. 23 when Elliott-Blakeslee, a physician, didn't show up for work at the Snake River Correctional Institution in Ontario, Ore. Searchers found the body of Linkert on Wednesday; she appeared to have died from exposure.

Searchers scaled back efforts on Sunday as a storm with heavy winds moved in to the area.

On Monday, Elliott-Blakeslee's family released a statement thanking all those who have helped in the search, and saying that while they realize the chances of finding Elliott-Blakeslee alive are growing slim, they remain hopeful. They also noted that the search area is in rugged and often dangerous territory and prone to unpredictable weather.

"Either way, we are committed to bringing her home and are actively recruiting volunteers with backcountry experience to keep the search going. But we will not chance injury or loss of searchers," the family's prepared statement said. "In that vein, at a minimum, those interested in participating should be able to hike 10 to 12 miles and climb

1,000 feet at a time in treacherous terrain."

The families of both Elliott-Blakeslee and Linkert are working with the Butte County Sheriff's Department and officials with Carters of the Moon National Monument in the search. The family said that it's critical for command center officials to be able to map every step the trained volunteers take with the help of radios and GPS technology, and they're accepting donations for equipment and other resources needed by the volunteers.

Police: Woman Writes $10K in Bad Checks

BY ALISON GENE SMITH
alismsmith@magicvalley.com

TWIN FALLS • A Kimberly woman went on several shopping sprees this spring using checks on empty or closed bank accounts, Twin Falls police say.

Police accuse Sheryl Ann Sebren, 40, of writing more than $3,000 in bad checks at the Twin Falls Costco Wholesale; hundreds of dollars in bad checks at King's, Fred Meyer and Grocery Outlet; and thousands of dollars worth at fast-food restaurants and other local businesses.

The total? Just more than $10,000.

Sebren was arraigned in Twin Falls County Magistrate Court on Monday on 17 counts of writing a check with insufficient funds and one count of grand theft.

Preliminary hearings in her three cases will be Oct. 11.

It all started March 24, when Sebren walked into Grocery Outlet in Twin Falls, filled a cart and wrote a check for $190.47, police reported. The check was returned for insufficient funds.

Three police reports detailed the cases against Sebren:

Later on March 24, she spent $100 more at Grocery Outlet, about $55 on gas and cigarettes at Fred Meyer Fuel and about $75 inside Fred Meyer. Those checks, too, were returned.

Fred Meyer employees told police Sebren tried to pass another bad check there for more than $1,000 that day. She had selected two LCD TVs, a Kindle e-reader and a printer, but a cashier declined to take the check because it was so large.

Over the next few days, Sebren spent about $900 at King's Discount Store, again paying with checks that were returned, police reported.

One police report listed 30 checks written to businesses including Big Smoke, Twin Stop, Pizza Hut, Sprint, Domino's Pizza, Mister Burger, Oasis Stop 'N Go, Taco Time, Sizzler and Depot Grill, totaling $1,924.52.

On April 15, Sebren went to Costco, paid for a $110 membership with a bad check, then returned three times on the same day to buy a TV, two laptops and a tablet computer, for a total of more than $3,000 in bad checks, police say.

The next day, Sebren allegedly pawned some of the electronics for less than $300 in cash.

Her checking account at Pioneer Federal Credit Union was closed because of a negative balance. On May 2, Sebren opened an account at Bank of America with $100 in cash.

During May, Sebren wrote more than $3,000 in bad checks at stores including T-Mobile, CenturyLink, Addison West Restaurant and Norm's Cafe.

The Bank of America account was closed once the negative balance reached nearly $3,000.

Police reported speaking to Sebren a number of times about the checks, and she admitted she knew she didn't have money in her account.

Public Health District Concedes Defeat in Disciplinary Spat

BY MYCHEL MATTHEWS
mmatthews@magicvalley.com

TWIN FALLS • A former South Central Public Health District employee won her 18-month battle with the agency in late September, after she claimed her boss drove her out of her post.

Patricia Scott's complaint against Health District Director Rene LeBlanc has swung back and forth for the better part of two years, with state reviewers first deciding that the Health District was correct when it disciplined Scott for insubordination only to overturn its own decision. The Health District appealed the state ruling, sending the matter to 5th District Court.

Judge Randy Stoker in September ordered the Health District to pay Scott $394 in withheld pay.

"This isn't about me winning (the case). It is about what happened and what is continuing to happen there," Scott said about the treatment of Health District employees.

At a personnel meeting in February 2012, Scott kept her distance from LeBlanc for fear of being bullied, she said. LeBlanc ordered Scott to sit in a chair close to his desk and she refused. LeBlanc then notified Scott of her pending termination, prompting Scott to resign, according to court documents.

The state regulators concluded that LeBlanc wrongfully withheld Scott's pay prior to her departure.

Scott and other former employees allege Scott's case is merely an example of rampant mistreatment of employees by Health District management.

"We observed (LeBlanc) yelling at employees and endured some of his rages ourselves" former employee Margaret Machala, who worked at the Health District with her husband, said in a statement filed with the Idaho Personnel Commission during the proceedings. "The hostile work environment began to affect our health and we felt forced to retire early."

LeBlanc on Tuesday declined to discuss accusations by other employees.

"We (the health district) believe in due process and the personnel system, and we uphold the decision," LeBlanc said. "It's a good system. It protects the employee and the employer. We made restitution and we're happy it's over."

And Scott hopes her case brings necessary change at the agency.

"People have walked away from 25-year careers," Scott said. "I've worked as a supervisor for many years before coming to Idaho. I couldn't imagine treating employees that way."

faculty positions at Salt Lake Community College, the University of Texas - Austin, Coconino Community College in Flagstaff, and Northland Pioneer College in Winslow and Hopi, Ariz.

When the Times-News sought comment on his performance at Helena College, marketing and communications coordinator Barb McAlmond declined to comment.

Carstens received his bachelor's in German and his master's in curriculum and instruction from Oklahoma State University in Stillwater. He earned a doctorate in education degree in community college leadership and educational administration from the University of Texas at Austin.

He has held administrative and faculty positions at Lone Star College in Tomball, Texas; Eastern Idaho Technical College in Idaho Falls; Rio Salado College in Tempe, Ariz.; El Centro College in Dallas; Yavapai College in Prescott, Ariz.; Central Arizona College in Coolidge, Ariz.; the University of Houston at Victoria; and Oklahoma State University.

"We noticed that there are two candidates (Carstens and Bingham) who have Salt Lake Community College ties," said Joy Tlou, director of public relations at SLCC. "We're very proud of the work we do here and wish them well in their endeavors."

Fox has been the executive vice president and chief academic officer at CSI since 2008. He received his bachelor's and master's degrees in English from California State University at Sacramento and his Ph.D. in Higher Education Administration from the University of Idaho.

Before coming to CSI, he taught at California State at Sacramento; Nichibei Gakuin in Matsuyama, Japan; Kenmei Women's Junior College in Hemiji, Japan; and Cosumnes River College in Sacramento. He became a professor in the CSI English department in 1987, director of the CSI academic development center in 2001 and chairman of the CSI English department in 2003.

"I know that he has a passion for students and CSI. He has an open-door policy, and I've always felt welcomed," said Merry Olson, career readiness facilitator at CSI. "I looked at all their (finalists') experience, and it looks like they have a lot of community college experience."

The CSI presidency became available in June, when Jerry Beck announced that he would retire because of health problems. Curtis Eaton has acted as interim president since Beck's announcement.

The number of people who applied for the presidency will not be released, Maughan said.

"The response was very good, and they (presidential search committee) were pleased with the process," he said. "It has run precisely on schedule and has all gone like clockwork. ... Now we are going to see how they do in a public forum."

"I just want to urge people to come out. It is a very important part of the process. We wanted to include the CSI family and the public because we believe the position of the president is both a college and community position that everyone has a stake in."

OBITUARIES

Pete T. Cenarrusa

Dec. 16, 1917-Sept. 29, 2013

BOISE • Pete T. Cenarrusa was born in Carey, Idaho, on Dec. 16, 1917. He passed away at the age of 95 on Sunday, Sept. 29, 2013, in Boise after a three-year battle with cancer.

His parents were Joe Cenarrusa and Ramona Gardoqui, who immigrated to the United States from the Province of Bizkaia in the Basque Country of Spain. Pete's father was from Munitibar and his mother from the Basque symbolic capital city of Gernika. Although the two cities were only eight miles apart, his parents did not meet until 1914 in Shoshone, Idaho, where they later were married. Pete's mother's sixth generational grandfather was Diego Gardoqui, who was the first Spanish Ambassador to the United States. Ambassador Gardoqui was an ocean shipping magnate who furnished George Washington with munitions during the Revolutionary War against Great Britain. He also furnished a boatload of clothing for Washington's army at Valley Forge during the freezing winter.

Joe Cenarrusa worked as both a shepherd and sheep foreman for several years before purchasing his own sheep business along with range land north of Carey. He added a home in Bellevue, where this wonderful couple reared a family of five children. Pete was the second child born and the last to die as his younger brother and three sisters predeceased him. All five children learned the Basque language at home prior to entering primary school in Bellevue, where they learned English. Pete's love and promotion of the Basque language was life-long.

Pete graduated from Bellevue High School in 1936 and from the University of Idaho in 1940, with degrees in agriculture and animal husbandry. He was a National Collegiate Boxing Champion at the university. After college, he was a high school teacher in Cambridge, Carey and Glens Ferry, Idaho. Pete taught both agriculture and chemistry and served as the football coach. He enlisted in the United States Marine Corps in 1942. As an officer in the V-5 Naval Aviation Corps, he received flight training in Seattle and Pasco, Wash., and subsequently Corpus Christi, Texas, where he received his basic and advance training. In 1942, he received his Navy Wings of Gold and was commissioned a 2nd Lieutenant in the Marine Corps. Pete was an instructor in Naval Aviation in Corpus Christi (known as the University of the Air) for 18 months. He finally received his long anticipated orders to go to the fleet. After completing the required aircraft carrier landings in an F4U fighter on the aircraft carrier Wolverine in Lake Michigan, he was ordered to El Toro Marine Base in Santa Ana, Calif., where he was attached to Marine Aircraft Fighter Squadron 462. That is where he learned that President Roosevelt had died, which he recorded in his flight logbook on April 12, 1945. He was then ordered to Cherry Point, N.C., to train in an SB2C-4 "Helldiver" dive bomber in preparation for the invasion of Japan. President Truman ordered the atomic bomb attacks on Hiroshima and Nagasaki in 1945, thus ending the war. Pete himself saw an atomic bomb explosion in 1955, where he witnessed a 30-kiloton detonation of a bomb at Yucca Flats, Nev. He then went into the inactive reserve, where he flew with VMF 216 Squadron in Spokane, Wash., until his retirement in July 1963 with the rank of major. Pete followed as a private pilot who flew for 59 years without an accident. He logged more than 15,000 hours of flight time, most of which were in the operation of his family business.

In 1946, Pete was hired to teach institutional on-farm training in Blaine County to veterans of the war who had subsequently gone into farming and livestock operations. In 1947, he married the love of his life, a sheep man's daughter, Freda Coates. Their marriage produced a son, Joe Cenarrusa, a graduate of the University of Idaho in 1970; husband, father, a successful Boise businessman and avid pilot. Joe and his wife, Jean, added two grandsons to the Cenarrusa family, Andrew and Tyler. Joe died in a tragic aircraft accident in 1997. Pete and Freda owned and managed a successful sheep operation from 1954 until 2000, operating in Idaho, Nevada, Arizona and California. In 2000, they left the sheep business when they sold their entire operation to Lava Lake Land and Livestock.

Pete was encouraged to enter politics in 1950 and was elected as a representative to the Idaho House of Representatives. He served nine terms, three of which he was selected as Speaker of the House. On May 1, 1967, he was appointed as the Idaho Secretary of State by Gov. Don Samuelson to fill the vacancy created when incumbent secretary Edson Deal died. Pete was elected and served as secretary of state for almost 36 years. Upon his retirement, he was the longest serving state official in the history of the state of Idaho. His last election was in 1998, retiring on Jan. 6, 2003 at age 85. He was succeeded by his longtime chief deputy and current secretary of state, fellow Basque, Ben Ysursa.

As secretary of state, Pete published the first edition of the "Idaho Government Blue Book," which has been published every two years through to the present Secretary Ben Ysursa's publications after Pete's retirement. A quote from Secretary Ysursa in his dedication to Pete in an edition of the book reads, "Pete is the epitome of a true public servant and is respected and admired by all Idahoans for his integrity and passionate devotion to making government more accessible and responsive to citizens' needs." At the time of his death, Pete was the longest serving secretary of state in the history of the entire United States.

He was inducted into seven halls of fame: Agriculture, Athletic, Republican, Basque of the World, Idaho Hall of Fame, U of I Alumni Hall of Fame and, in 2010, was awarded the illustrious recognition "Light of Bizkaia" Basque Country Hall of Fame by the government of Bizkaia. He was appointed to the first Idaho Human Rights Commission in 1971. He is listed in "Who's Who in America" and "Who's Who in the West." Pete served as chairman of the first Idaho Legislative Council and as president of the Idaho Flying Legislators. The state's largest government building was named after him in thanks by Gov. Phil Batt in 1998. Pete also volunteered for Republican Party service and was selected as the chairman of the Idaho Ronald Reagan Committee of Idaho in 1968 and again in 1984.

Pete is survived by his wife, Freda; his daughter-in-law, Jean Cenarrusa-Jacobson and her husband Greg; two grandsons, Andrew and great-grandson, Joey; and Tyler and his wife, Lindsay and new baby great-grandson, Kepa, all of Boise; as well as numerous nephews and nieces in Idaho, California and Washington. He was preceded in death by his parents; four siblings, and his son, Joe.

The public are all invited to pay their respects from noon until 6 p.m. Wednesday, Oct. 2, at Summers Funeral Homes, Boise Chapel, 1205 W. Bannock St. in Boise. Pete will lie in state from noon until 7 p.m. Thursday, Oct. 3, at the State Capitol. A vigil service will be held at 7:30 p.m. Thursday at St. John's Cathedral. Funeral Mass will be celebrated by the Rev. W. Thomas Faucher at 10 a.m. Friday, Oct. 4, at St. John's Cathedral, with a luncheon to follow at the Euzkaldunak Boise Basque Center. A graveside service will be held at 11 a.m. Saturday, Oct. 5, at the Bellevue Cemetery in Bellevue, Idaho.

In lieu of flowers, the family suggests donations be sent to the Fund for Joe's Kids in care of the Idaho Community Foundation or the Basque Museum and Cultural Center in Boise or your favorite charity.

Condolences and memories may be shared with the family on Pete's memorial webpage at www.summers-funeral.com.

Theo (Greco) Harris

Oct. 1, 1916-Sept. 27, 2013

BURLEY • Theo Greco Harris was born Oct. 1, 1916, in Richfield, Sevier County, Utah, the middle one of seven children born to John Olaf and Laura Ann Sorensen Greco. All of her siblings preceded her in death. Just four days short of her 97th birthday, Theo passed away Friday evening, Sept. 27, 2013, at the Rosetta Assisted Living facility surrounded by her loving family. This amazing lady was never a patient in a hospital until after her 90th birthday!

Theo spent her earliest years in Richfield until the family moved to Idaho by train when she was 5 years old. She began her education at the Southwest School. Theo married Myron Phillips Harris on Oct. 1, 1939, in Burley. Their family was blessed with seven children, JoAnn (Gary) Thomas of Greeley, Colo., Ray (Shirley) Harris of Twin Falls, Patti (Mike) Blankenship of Murtaugh, Sharon (Milton, deceased) Davidson of Burley, John G. Harris (deceased), Gary (Helen) Harris of Wellsville, Mo., and Michael (Peggy) Harris of Woodland, Wash. As a devoted lifetime member of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, she served her church in many ways — as a Primary teacher, a Young Women leader, as well as several years of service to the Family History Library in Burley.

Theo helped prepare for the opening of the new Merc Department Store when it opened in Burley, and then worked in the fabric department there for all the years it was open and even helped with the closing inventories. Her associations there helped fuel several handiwork hobbies. She left a legacy of handmade treasures — crocheted bedspreads, doilies, afghans, clothing, Christmas tree ornaments and tablecloths, stuffed dolls and teddy bears, hand-tied quilts and handmade clothing. Over the years, she tried her hand at almost any and every handcraft that she found a pattern for! The handmade teddy bears and dolls that she donated to the police department found their way to children who were injured in accidents, so her talents were shared far beyond her personal family. Although she never obtained a driver's license of her own, she found great joy in traveling any time she had the opportunity. Whether it was a long vacation to distant states, camping or a picnic in the mountains — or even a ride around town, she was always happy to go! Her children and grandchildren provided many of these excursions for her, creating a wealth of happy memories. Theo is survived by six of her children as well as 24 grandchildren; 65 great-grandchildren; 60 great-great-grandchildren; and four great-great-great-grandchildren.

Theo's family would like to thank her many kind friends for their care and concern for her, especially the past few years. The staff at Rosetta Assisted Living is an exceptionally special group of wonderful people who took care of Mom/Grandma with tender compassion and love for more than five years. They have become like family, and we cannot thank them adequately.

The funeral will be held at 11 a.m. Monday, Oct. 7, at the Burley LDS Stake Center, 2050 Normal Ave. in Burley. Burial will be in the Pleasant View Cemetery in Burley. Friends may call from 5 until 7 p.m. Sunday, Oct. 6, at the Rasmussen Funeral Home, 1350 E. 16th St. in Burley, and from 10 until 10:45 a.m. Monday at the church.

ENDORSEMENT: ELECTION 2013

Dale Ross: the Right Man for Jerome Mayor

The fact that three candidates are challenging Jerome Mayor John Shine underscores the troubles to the north.

But the mayoral field is a strong one and, after vigorous debate, we concluded that Dale Ross is the best candidate for the job.

If elected Nov. 5 though, the one-term city councilman must prove that he hasn't been part of the problem.

Joe Skaug, a former teacher, councilman and founder of Joe Mama's Car Show, is a charmer, a personality well suited for a city with high turnover and a populace with no confidence in City Hall.

Bank manager David Davis is a political neophyte who's running because he sees the problems and thinks he can change them. His motivations are admirable.

But Ross addressed specifics, while Davis and Skaug offered relatively vague, hazy fixes for Jerome's major issues with its wastewater plant.

In a city at war with its own residents, specifics are needed. The details will make or break Jerome's future.

Ross, a master cheesemaker at Jerome Cheese Co., offered a nuanced view of how to right the city, where distrust seems to dominate.

He suggested using his contacts to work out a deal by which private companies, which substantially tax the system, help pay to expand the wastewater plant or, at least, treat part of their own waste.

Local government, under Shine, only recently began talking with the city's three big manufacturers — and the companies initiated those discussions.

Coalition-building is three years overdue and should have been done by City Hall.

We're confident that Ross, a retired

Marine and longtime dairyman, could use his contacts and understanding of industry to effect real change to the city's biggest barrier to economic growth.

We liked how Skaug vowed to reach out to Hispanics, who make up at least one-third of the city's population but have no role in government — even though undocumented Hispanics can't vote. (Ross: Take note.)

Davis' sincerity impressed us, but he's too green to take the reins of a community in upheaval. We hope he considers a run for City Council. After a term or two, he would make a good contender for the mayor's seat.

Shine is a good man, and industrial pushback against wastewater plant expansion surely undermined his efforts.

But the one-term mayor has proven ineffective, and the number of gaffes that have so wounded Jerome over the past 12 months can't be excused. The next mayor will have to find a new city administrator, for one, and Shine isn't the person to do it.

Each of the challengers mentioned a lack of "communication" between the mayor, council and residents. Each brought up an unapproachable City Hall where dictatorial style rules. The lack of transparency is a real problem, one that has taken root under Shine's watch. It's bush-league government, and the people of Jerome deserve better.

Councilman Ross isn't completely clean in all this. He must prove that he can do better.

If Ross is going to win back the populace, City Hall must take an entirely different approach from day one. Ross must follow through with his promises for more openness and a willingness to listen to others.

Jerome has issues, in its brick and mortar and in its collective soul. Dale Ross is the right man to begin the exorcism.

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

Idaho's Health Exchange a Real Benefit

This week, Idaho citizens stand to benefit greatly from the launch of the state-run health insurance exchange, officially named, "Your Health Idaho."

The health exchange will offer 161 health insurance plans that we can choose from to buy coverage if we don't currently have insurance or are dissatisfied with what we have. The exchange has individual health and dental plans, as well as plans for small businesses. Since we'll be able to compare plans and their costs easily, insurance companies will have to compete for our business in a more transparent way.

The exchange will also help Idahoans understand the monthly premiums and how premium assistance can make coverage affordable.

What does that really mean for Idahoans? It means that many of Idaho's uninsured families will have protection from huge medical bills if an emergency occurs. In Idaho, more than three-fourths of our uninsured are in a working family. With Idaho having the highest percentage of minimum wage workers in the nation, it is understandable how so many families have nothing left to pay for health insurance.

"Your Health Idaho" is a step in the right direction to help Idaho families access preventative care versus costly emergency room visits and mounting medical bills.

Iranian Clerics Checkmate Obama, U.S.

“Down is up and up is down. I feel like we have passed through the looking glass and are looking back at a backwards world,” a military historian of the modern Middle East wrote in a recent note to me about the hectic diplomacy over Syria and Iran. “Where did all the realists go? It's as though the Cold War never took place.”

The logic of familiar things has been overturned. Iran President Hassan Rohani comes to New York for a meeting of the United Nations General Assembly preceded by a brilliant publicity campaign. There was an interview with NBC, with a female correspondent at that. There was an op-ed article under his name in the Washington Post. His foreign minister, Mohammad Javad Zarif, sent Rosh Hashanah greetings to Jews worldwide via Twitter.

The Iranian president stepped forth in the nick of time, right as the Obama administration was reeling from the debacle of its Syria policy. We have been here before with the skilled and tenacious guild that runs the Iranian theocracy.

An attractive cleric with a winning smile, Mohammad Khatami, cultured and literate, preaching the notion of a “dialogue of civilizations,” was elected president in a landslide in 1997; he was re-elected four years later. Great hopes were pinned on Khatami. He delivered an oration at the Washington National Cathedral, and his ascent was seen on both sides of the Atlantic as evidence of the mellowing of Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini's revolution of 1979.

But the hopes invested in Khatami were to no avail. Iran pushed on with its nuclear weapons program and with its bid for greater power in neighboring states. At home, a student rebellion animated by unmistakable liberal sentiments that broke out in 1999 was crushed without mercy.

Khatami was either a man powerless to defend the movement or a faithful son of the Khomeini order who was given leeway by the regime's powers that be. He couldn't defy the supreme leader, Ayatollah Ali Khamenei, or run afoul of the Islamic Revolutionary Guard.

Fouad Ajami

Bloomberg News

The case is now being made that Rohani is no freelancer, that he is a player of standing in the regime, and that the olive branch he carries with him has the consent of the supreme leader himself. The regime has been humbled, brought low by draconian sanctions, this line of argument goes, and has come to a reckoning with its weaknesses. There are serious and obvious flaws in this view. These begin with Rohani's biography. As pointed out by Sohrab Ahmari in the Wall Street Journal, Rohani, who was secretary of Iran's Supreme National Security Council for 16 years, starting in 1989, “led the crack-down on a 1999 student uprising and helped the regime evade Western scrutiny of the nuclear-weapons program.”

Indeed, from 2003 to 2005, Rohani was Iran's chief negotiator over the nuclear program. To paraphrase Winston Churchill, who once proclaimed that he hadn't become the king's first minister in order to preside over the liquidation of the empire, Rohani hasn't risen to the presidency of Iran to barter away the regime's nuclear assets.

The assertion of the Obama administration and its chorus that the theocracy is now at a low point in its fortunes can be turned on its head. Iran has been fighting a proxy war with the United States over Syria, and can be said to have prevailed in that contest.

The regime of Bashar Assad hasn't fallen; in a moment of peril for the Syrian dictatorship, Iran dispatched the fighters of the Hezbollah militia deep into the war. They and the Revolutionary Guard turned the tide of war in Assad's favor. Rohani had the indecency of shedding crocodile tears for Syria in his Washington Post article, speaking of it as a “jewel of civilization” that had turned into a “scene of heart-breaking violence, including chemical weapons attacks.” So much of this violence, he doubtless knew, has been the work of the Revolutionary Guard and Hezbollah, its Lebanese satrap.

Iran's clerics have nothing to lose from the diplomacy entrusted to Rohani. They bought time for their nuclear program and for their client regime in Damascus. Let Obama have his boast about the efficacy of the economic sanctions imposed on Iran. The theocracy can live with that. Since its conquest in 1979, it has had the perfect level of enmity with the U.S. just enough to serve as the ideological glue of a regime built on paranoid xenophobia without triggering a military campaign that could do it damage.

American officials now say that Iran can't draw comfort from the reticence of Obama on Syria, that American vigilance would be greater on Iran's nuclear assets than had been the case thus far over Syria's chemical weapons.

But on that diplomatic chessboard, and before a big crowd that has gathered to watch the protagonists in a standoff with high stakes, it is easy to see the American player being decisively outclassed. There is cunning aplenty in Persia, an eye for that exact moment when one's rival has been trapped.

Dennis Leon Knowles

Feb. 25, 1948-Sept. 29, 2013

SHOSHONE • Dennis Leon Knowles, a 65 year old former Carey, Idaho, resident, passed away suddenly Sunday, Sept. 29, 2013, with his family by his side in Spokane, Wash.

He was born Feb. 25, 1948, in Wendell, Idaho, the first born child of Leo Thomas and Gloria (Holt) Knowles and attended schools in Shoshone, Idaho. He lived in Shoshone until moving to Carey in the 1970s, where he continued to work for the Idaho Department of Transportation. He retired 10 years ago from IDT and continued living in Carey until he moved to Moses Lake, Wash., this past year to live with his daughter and her family.

Dennis was an avid hunter and fisherman. He enjoyed salmon and steelhead fishing along the Salmon River and trout fishing in the streams, creeks and reservoirs throughout the region. He loved hunting deer and elk all over the area's sagebrush uplands and forested mountains and chased the elusive chukars across the foothills of southern Idaho. His pickup and camp trailer could be seen parked at a fishing hole or a hunting spot during all four seasons of the year. Dennis loved the outdoors immensely and sought the peace and serenity he found there.

He loved his time with his daughter, grandkids and son-in-law and shared many of the same interests with them including hunting, fishing, camping, Dutch-oven cooking, Chipotle Tabasco sauce and relentlessly teasing one another. It was a joyous occasion in his life when he moved from Carey to live with them. He will be missed by all who knew him.

Dennis is survived by his mother, Gloria Knowles of Kimberly, Idaho; his "one in a million" daughter, Jessie Lee (Dave) Pelham; and his two grandchildren, Ashlyn Lavon Hayes and Johnathan Randall Hayes, all of Moses Lake, Wash.; his brother, Ken (Ruth) Knowles of Burley, Idaho; and his sister, Debbie Keller of Twin Falls, Idaho. He was preceded in death by his father, Leo Knowles.

A memorial graveside service will be held at 11 a.m. Saturday, Oct. 5, at the Shoshone Cemetery in Shoshone.

In lieu of flowers, the family suggests memorial contributions in Dennis' name be made to any lung or heart organization.

Arrangements are under the care and direction of Demaray Funeral Service, Shoshone Chapel. Condolences may be sent to the family by visiting the obituary link at www.demaray-funeralservice.com.

Gene married Berta Exon on May 17, 1957. Together they raised three children. Gene and Berta were married for 33 years. They moved to Bliss in 1969. Gene and Berta were inseparable during their years together. Working side by side, they spent practically every hour of every day together. Berta passed away in 1990, and Gene retired in 1997 and moved to Wendell.

While living in Wendell, Gene became best friends with Helen Christofferson. Gene and Helen enjoyed each other's company and spent many hours visiting and having coffee with friends.

Ruth JoAnn Williams

Feb. 19, 1930-Sept. 29, 2013

CALDWELL • Ruth JoAnn Williams, 83, of Caldwell, passed away unexpectedly after a brief illness at her daughter, Janie's, home in Heyburn, Idaho.

She was born in Jewel County, Kan., on Feb. 19, 1930, to Archie and Lula (Risewick) Philippi. She attended schools in Montana and later moved to Twin Falls, where she graduated from high school. Ruth married Paul Martin and had a daughter, Ginger. She later married Perry Hickman and to this union, Dennis, Carol and Janie were born. She then married John J. Williams on Feb. 18, 1968.

She worked for Mountain Bell Telephone (as a telephone operator on the old switchboards). While there, she put herself through Link's Business School to receive her degree in accounting/bookkeeping. She moved to the Nampa-Caldwell area in 1963 and began working for Clark's Flying Service (full time) and VanAuker's Construction (part time) through 1975. Ruth traveled with John throughout the Northwest. They committed their hearts and lives to the Lord in 1968, working faithfully preparing for their ministry in the Northwest. Being the strong (yet fairly quiet) person behind her man, she worked to support their ministry. In 1991, they came back to Idaho to be near Ruth's aging mother, settling back into the Caldwell area. She retired at age 76. Ruth was an avid crafts person, working with crafts when the children were little, sewing endlessly for herself and her children.

She is survived by her children: Ginger Bagley, Dennis Hickman, Carol (Ed) Hagan and Janie (Jay) Greenwalt; stepchildren: Sherry (Mike) Turner, Marian (Paul) Ericson, Michael (Nancy) Williams and Shawna Scott; 18 grandchildren; and 32½ great-grandchildren. Ruth was preceded in death by her parents; husband, John; and a grandson, Michael Grimes.

Ruth's viewing will be from 6 to 8 p.m. Thursday, Oct. 3, at Flahiff Funeral Chapel in Caldwell. The funeral will be held at 2 p.m. Friday, Oct. 4, at Flahiff Funeral Chapel. Interment will follow at the Canyon Hill Cemetery in Caldwell.

Condolences can be made at www.flahifffuneralchapel.com.

Hikers in Trouble on Pacific Crest Trail

SEATTLE (AP) • Rescuers were searching for four hikers Tuesday in remote parts of southwest Washington, including three people who walked all the way from Mexico on the Pacific Crest Trail only to run into early season snowfall on their trek to the Canadian border.

Skamania County Under-sheriff Dave Cox says two of the Pacific Crest Trail hikers, Matt Margiotta and Kyla Arnold, wisely called for help Monday after snow obscured their route. Six ground searchers had obtained their GPS location and expected to reach the pair later Tuesday.

"The problem with all the snow on the ground is you can't even tell where the trail is," Cox said. "Some folks try to push on and wind up getting lost."

Another Pacific Crest Trail hiker, Alejandra Wilson, was reported overdue after she failed to call her father, Dane Wilson, of Portland, Ore., to check in as expected. She was believed to be about a day's hike ahead of the other pair, or about 20 miles farther north. Searchers from Lewis County were headed south on the trail, hoping to run into her.

Her father reported that he last heard from her Friday as she was leaving Trout Lake, a tiny hamlet south of Mount Adams, for White Pass, Cox said.

Meanwhile more than three dozen rescuers continued looking for Kristopher Zitzewitz, 31, of Portland, who became separated from his partner in the Big Lava Beds area of Gifford Pinchot National Forest on Saturday.

Margiotta, Arnold and Wilson all kept online journals of their travels. Arnold last updated hers on Friday and described having recently encountered Wilson.

Arnold also wrote of having nearly run out of food after storms forced her and Margiotta to huddle under a tarp for four days — long delaying their arrival in Trout Lake.

"We finally made it to Trout Lake today and another huge storm is rolling in," Arnold wrote. "Everyone says we can't make it because of the weather situation, and to be honest it's quite terrifying, but I can't fathom coming this far and giving up."

Shutdown

and perform other tasks.

But the search for the hiker who went missing at Craters of the Moon National Monument last week will be particularly challenging. The park's 19 employees were told they had four hours Tuesday to shut the park down. Immediately afterward, 16 employees were furloughed, and three will remain, said park spokesman Ted Stout.

"It's complicating the search, certainly," he said.

The park is now relying more than ever on volunteers — including time from the park's furloughed employees — to continue the search for Jo Elliot-Blakeslee, 63. She was last seen near Arco on Sept. 19 and was reported missing Sept. 23.

"The search will go on," Stout said.

Nearly half of the Idaho National Guard's employees were given furlough notices Tuesday.

That means about 850 of those 1,750 employees will be banned from duty until the shutdown is lifted, said Col. Tim Marsano, National Guard spokesman.

Furloughed employees will not be allowed to serve as unpaid volunteers and will be prohibited from performing any of their duties.

Ground equipment and aircraft maintenance will be postponed, and training missions will be halted, Marsano said.

It is unclear whether weekend drill for National Guard members will be cut.

"It's a very stressful and difficult time for those who will be furloughed," he said. "There's a lot of unanswered questions."

U.S. District Court in Boise has enough funding to continue hearing cases for the next 10 business days if Congress doesn't resolve the budget impasse.

But the effect of a shutdown on other agencies — and on participants in court cases — could mean that some cases are put on hold anyway. And if the lack of funding extends beyond 10 business days, the court will look at what changes in functions or schedules are needed.

U.S. Attorney for Idaho Wendy Olson said about half of her staff has been furloughed, and attorneys expect to file motions to temporarily halt court proceedings in environmental lawsuits, tort cases and other civil matters.

The asset forfeiture unit — which helps federal prosecutors recover proceeds from drug trafficking and other crimes to help repay crime victims — also is stalled for now.

Roughly 42,500 pregnant women, infants and children may lose food benefits under the WIC program next week if the shutdown continues, said Tom Shanahan, spokesman for the Idaho Department of Health and Welfare.

Benefits were continuing for now only because the program had enough carry-over funds to last about a week, Shanahan said.

"They're monitoring it on a day-to-day basis right now," he said. "So on Monday, if it isn't resolved by then, then they would have to quit issuing vouchers and ask vendors not to accept vouchers after that."

During the past fiscal year, the average WIC recipient in Idaho got about $53 worth of vouchers a month. That money could be used toward certain foods such as breakfast cereal, milk and baby formula. The program is designed to ensure that pregnant women and children get the nutrition they need for adequate growth and brain development.

If the shutdown continues, local health districts will work to connect WIC recipients with local assistance programs when possible, Shanahan said.

For Idaho's hunters, anglers and wildlife watchers, the government shutdown has caused the following changes:

- Fish and Wildlife Service: National Wildlife Refuge lands and facilities are closed, as are federal hatcheries.

- Bureau of Land Management: Non-developed BLM lands with no controlled access will remain open. Campgrounds, boat ramps, visitor centers and other developed recreation sites will be closed or posted as closed in areas where public access cannot practically be restricted. BLM is giving campground occupants 48 hours to vacate, with the area to be shut down as the last visitor leaves.

- U.S. Forest Service: Non-developed lands without controlled access will remain open. Developed facilities are closed. Fire suppression, law enforcement and other activities essential to protect life and property will continue.

- National Park Service: All national parks and NPS-managed lands are closed, with all park entrances closed and secured. While the national parks are closed, roads that serve as throughways will remain open. The Park Service is giving campground and lodging occupants 48 hours to vacate the premises.

- U.S. Bureau of Reclamation: Recreation areas on Reclamation land and water bodies may be directly managed by Reclamation, by another federal agency, or by a non-federal managing partner. Recreation areas managed directly by Reclamation, and funded through appropriations, will be closed and may include areas at American Falls, Black Canyon Reservoir, Little Wood Reservoir and Warm Springs Reservoir.

Those not funded by appropriations will remain open. Decisions on whether areas managed by another federal partner will remain open will be made by each federal managing partner. Those recreation areas managed by a non-federal partner will remain open at the discretion of the partner. To determine the status of any Bureau of Reclamation recreation area, contact the local recreation area.

money. Beckley has through Friday to wire the funds, which would benefit Idaho public schools.

If Beckley doesn't pay, the lease will be offered to the second-highest bidder, which was Adrenaline Nation and jumper Scott Smith for $942,000.

Beckley said he plans to finance the jump through television rights, sponsorships and ticket sales.

He said he is confident that he can ink a lucrative television deal. Not more than an hour after winning the auction, he said he had numerous phone messages from area codes in New York and Los Angeles and an offer "from a network with a 'C' on the end of it."

"We're smiling, let's put it that way," he said.

Beckley said he is pushing for a plush 13-week series deal, called perhaps "The Road to Snake River," to precede a two-hour live special for the jump. He plans to jump a rocket-powered motorcycle — not a steam-powered rocket with wheels — over the canyon at 230 mph and parachute to safety.

"We're going to film a stunt plane going to the edge and pulling up so I can get used to these 'Gs' and get used to looking at the wow factor of that canyon as I go from 40 to 50 feet high up to 400 feet high," he said.

Beckley has designed but not yet built his rocket-powered motorcycle. He is soliciting sponsorships for the engines. Once an engine is received, his team will build around it to achieve proper weight balance.

"We know that from the first bolt to the last bolt is 60 days, and we'll be ready to test," he said.

The daredevil has had a physical with various blood and stress tests.

"They couldn't believe that I came out of it like a 38-year-old man," said the 63-year-old daredevil.

He said he has lost about 100 pounds over the past year or so and has another 40 to go. At least 20 pounds is simple "water weight," he said.

"Now here comes the elliptical," he said.

Beckley said he also must raise, lengthen and pave most of the ramp. The pavement will allow him to jump in all weather conditions.

"We are going to have 30-some GoPros, 20-some big cameras, the moon truck that shoots it to the satellite and all over the world — you are not going to be able to be rained out," he said. "It's not going to happen. We are going for it."

The daredevil and decades-long monster truck rally promoter said he also has fielded many questions about other events to coincide with a jump attempt. There have been "surface conversations" about concerts and other attractions to keep spectators in town longer.

"Right now our concerns are the networks' concern — they don't care if we put on a concert or have a chicken-plucking contest," he said.

Beckley said he wasn't

Anthony Bourdain Admits Mistake on NM 'Frito Pie'

BY RUSSELL CONTRERAS
Associated Press

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. • Insults dished out by food critic Anthony Bourdain on an episode of CNN's "Parts Unknown" have stirred up outrage in New Mexico — and now he acknowledges that he was wrong.

The sharp-tongued chef and writer lashed into the "World Famous" Frito pies sold at Santa Fe's Five & Dime General Store's snack bar. The store is a tourist attraction and a mainstay in the city's historic plaza.

The dish, according to Bourdain, was made with canned Hormel Chili and a "day-glow orange cheese-like substance."

But Bourdain spokeswoman Karen Reynolds told The Associated Press on Monday that the writer was incorrect in his description of the chile used by Santa Fe's Five & Dime General Store's snack bar to make the Frito pies.

"He admits that 'we got it wrong' about the chile," Reynolds said in an email. "And we'll try to correct it for future airings."

In his critique, Bourdain also said that the local favorite isn't even a New Mexico meal, but rather a Texas creation. He said New Mexicans should leave the recipe to the Texans.

"New Mexico, you have many wonderful things," Bourdain said. "I think, let Texas have this one."

Mike Collins, store manager of the Five & Dime, says Bourdain was "completely wrong" on the store's Frito pie. He said their version is homemade from chile grown in New Mexico and remains popular.

"I don't have any idea where he got that from," Collins said. "I mean, if we're using canned Hormel Chili then I'd like to buy stock in that because what we have is good."

Still, Collins said he and the staff don't have any ill feelings toward Bourdain. He said during the taping of the visit, Bourdain was nice and a pleasure to be around.

Reynolds also said Bourdain enjoyed the pie, something that wasn't clear from the show.

"Contrary to the impression left by some reports of the show, I, in fact, very much enjoyed my Frito pie in spite of its disturbing weight in the hand. It may have felt like (expletive) but was shockingly tasty," Bourdain said in a statement.

The food critic wasn't all negative toward New Mexico on the episode. Bourdain is seen driving on Route 66 through New Mexico and speaks of the famous highway's different cultures and cornucopia of food. He also is shown enjoying some "level 3" green chile and having to "wait it out" while the spicy effects wear off.

Garibaldi's Restaurant in Twin Falls Opening Sooner than Expected

BY JOE CADOTTE
jcadotte@magicvalley.com

TWIN FALLS • When fire tore through Garibaldi's in Twin Falls five weeks ago, owner Jose Perez said it would take six to eight months before they could reopen. Today, construction workers are putting up trusses for the roof, said Assistant Manager Peggy Kidd on the restaurant's Facebook page.

Despite only the foundation surviving the Aug. 24 fire, Kidd said the restaurant is expected to open Dec. 1.

"As soon as we put the roof up, everything else will go fast," said Perez.

The possibility of opening before Dec. 1 depends on a restoration company and the weather, Kidd said. Once the roof is on, most of the needed construction will no longer be weather dependent, she said.

"Once the roof goes on, once the city gives us permission and everything looks good, we can start working on the inside," Kidd said.

Insurance will probably cover all of the construction costs, but won't cover profit loss during the restaurant's closure, she said. Fall is one of their most busy times of year, so they expect to take a hit in October and November. In the meantime, fans of the locally famed Mexican cuisine are showing support.

"People contact us everyday and say how much they miss us and ask, 'When are you guys reopening? Where's the salsa?'" Kidd said. "We have customers begging us to open sooner than later."

One positive that came from the fire is that the restaurant will be practically brand new once it opens. Perez said he had plans to remodel much of the restaurant before it burnt down.

"The building was built in 1996, and I don't think it had any remodeling done since then," Perez said.

Can't wait until Dec. 1? Garibaldi's has a location in Jerome and the Magic Valley Mall in Twin Falls.

If they find out the flagship location will open sooner than Dec. 1, Kidd said she'll make an announcement on the

No Changes at the Top for Michelin Guide New York

BY J.M. HIRSCH
AP Food Editor

The Michelin Guide's menu of top tier restaurants in New York City tastes a lot like it did last year. And the year before that.

For a third year running, just seven restaurants earned the organization's coveted three-star rating — the same seven that got the nod in 2012 and 2013: Daniel, Per Se, Masa, Le Bernardin, Eleven Madison Park, Jean Georges and Chef's Table at Brooklyn Fare.

"I wouldn't take that as a sign of lack of creativity," Michael Ellis, director of the Michelin guides, said by telephone Tuesday. "There's some fascinating things that are going on in New York. It's only a matter of time before we have some new three-star candidates."

Michelin guides, which cover 23 countries, are considered among the premier ratings of the restaurant world. Based on the experiences of anonymous inspectors, the guides award ratings of one, two or three stars using criteria including quality of ingredients, mastery of technique, how the chef's personality is expressed in the food, and consistency.

A total of 930 restaurants spanning 61 cuisines were included in the 2014 edition of the New York City guide, which was released Tuesday. Only 67 of them got a star rating. The city's five two-star restaurants include Matthew Lightner's seasonally focused Atera; Soto, Sotomihiko Kosugi's sushi bar; David Chang's tasting menu-driven Momofuku Ko; Marea, Michael White's ode to high-end Italian seafood; and newcomer Nine new restaurants earned one-star ratings, including Asko, Babbo, Carbone, Caviar Russe, Ichimura, Le Restaurant, Lincoln, the Musket Room and Telepan. A total of 55 restaurants earned one Michelin star.

New York is one of three American cities that have Michelin guides to their restaurants. The others are Chicago and the San Francisco Bay Area and Wine Country. New editions of the guides to those areas will be released later this year.

Small Number of Schools Drop out of Lunch Program

BY MARY CLARE JALONICK
Associated Press

WASHINGTON • The Agriculture Department says 524 schools — out of about 100,000 — have dropped out of the federally subsidized national school lunch program since the government introduced new standards for healthier foods last year.

The new standards have met with grumbling from school nutrition officials who say they are difficult and expensive to follow, conservatives who say the government shouldn't be dictating what kids eat and — unsurprisingly — from some children who say the less-greasy food doesn't taste as good. But USDA says the vast majority of schools are serving healthier food, with some success.

According to USDA data released Monday, around a half-percent of schools have dropped out since last year. Ninety of those 524 schools that have dropped out said specifically that they did so because of the new meal-plan requirements. Most of the rest did not give a reason.

Eighty percent of schools say they have already met the requirements, which went into place at the beginning of the 2012 school year.

"It's important to remember that some schools weren't as close to meeting the new standards, and they may need a little more time for their students to fully embrace the new meals," said Dr. Janey Thornton, the USDA deputy undersecretary in charge of the school meals. She said it is clear that the majority of schools think the new standards are working.

In an effort to stem high childhood obesity levels, the new guidelines set limits on calories and salt, and they phase in more whole grains in federally subsidized meals served in schools' main lunch line. Schools must offer at least one vegetable or fruit per meal and comply with a variety of other specific nutrition requirements. The rules aim to introduce more nutrients to growing kids and also to make old favorites healthier — pizza with low-fat cheese and whole-wheat crust, for example, or baked instead of fried potatoes.

If schools do not follow the rules, or if they drop out, they are not eligible for the federal dollars that reimburse them for free and low-cost meals served to low-income students. That means wealthier schools with fewer needy students are more likely to be able to operate outside of the program.

Some school nutrition officials have said buying the healthier foods put a strain on their budgets. A study by the Pew Charitable Trusts' Kids' Safe and Healthful Foods Project, also released Monday, said that 91 percent of school food officials the group surveyed said they face challenges in putting the standards in place, including problems with food costs and availability, training employees to follow the new guidelines, and a lack of the proper equipment to cook healthier meals.

The group said almost all schools they surveyed had expected to meet the requirements by the end of last year. Even though some schools are still working out the kinks, "It shows that this is certainly doable," said Jessica Donze Black, director of the Pew project, which has lobbied for healthier foods.

Leah Schmidt, president of the School Nutrition Association and director of nutrition programs at a Kansas City, Mo. school district, said any schools that would consider forgoing the federal funds would have to have very few students eating the free and reduced-cost meals.

She said it is to be expected that some schools have met challenges.

"Any time you have something new, you're going to have some growing pains," she said.

Dr. Howell Wechsler, the CEO of the Alliance for a Healthier Generation, a group that is aiming to reduce childhood obesity, said that though some schools are still working to catch up, many have exceeded the standards. The alliance has worked with more than 18,000 schools in all 50 states, and Wechsler says many are thinking of creative ways to encourage healthy eating, like holding walk-a-thons or farmers' markets to raise money instead of bake sales.

He said that many of the schools have reported better academic performance and less student sick days as a result.

"Just about all of the schools that participate with us they say there is a difference," Wechsler said.

As some schools struggled to follow the new guidelines at the beginning of the last school year, USDA relaxed some of the original requirements. In December, the department did away with daily and weekly limits on meats and grains that school nutrition officials said were too hard to follow.

Congress has also had its say on the standards. In 2011, after USDA first proposed them, Congress prohibited the department from limiting potatoes and French fries and allowed school lunchrooms to continue counting tomato paste on pizza as a vegetable.

The school lunch rules apply to federally subsidized lunches served at reduced or no cost to low-income children. Those meals have always been subject to nutritional guidelines because they are partially paid for by the federal government, but the new rules put broader restrictions on what could be served as childhood obesity rates have skyrocketed.

Schoolchildren can still buy additional foods in other parts of the lunchroom and the school. Separate USDA rules to make those foods healthier could go into effect as soon as next year.

Gas Stations Target Foodies

BY MICHAEL S. WILLIAMSON
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON • Dorothy Goldstein had just visited her late husband at the cemetery. Now she and her son were hungry for a nice lunch. So, on a beautiful autumn afternoon, they headed for a gas station.

At the Exxon station in downtown Olney, Md., they stepped up to the counter of Corned Beef King, where they'd dined before. To their left: a beef jerky display. To their right: keno on TV. All around them: the delish aroma of a New York deli.

Goldstein, a retiree in Dolce & Gabbana glasses, ordered pastrami. Her son got the Angry Turkey Racheal. They ate at a high-table with an exquisite view of the gas pumps.

"It's a big, juicy, delicious sandwich," Goldstein said after finishing the first half and pondering the second. "I need a toothpick."

Gas stations have not historically inspired confidence as palate pleasers. Day-old (or longer) doughnuts or hot dogs rolling (and rolling) on a spinner grill come to mind.

But there is a long history between the road and food. Truck stops. Rest stops. Drive-ins. Stuckey's has sold gazillions of pecan log rolls to travelers. A fellow named Colonel Sanders got his start selling fried chicken at his service station in Corbin, Ky. Things turned out well for him.

Today, there are hundreds, perhaps thousands, of gas stations across the country serving a variety of food not sold in a vacuum-sealed bag, from Sheetz's fresh sandwiches to ribs at Oklahoma Joe's in Kansas City, Kan., to pork belly sandwiches, highlighted not long ago by Gourmet magazine, at a North Carolina filling station.

Al Hebert, a medical journalist who blogs at GasStationGourmet.com about his eating adventures, once ate Cornish hen prepared by a classically trained chef in a Chevron station.

"The average person just fills up their tank, pays with a credit card and drives off," Hebert said. "But if you just walk a few feet from the pump to the store, you might discover one of the best eating experiences of your life."

Gas station cuisine is partly being driven by popular food truck operators — Corned Beef King started as a truck in 2011 — seeking permanent locations for the evolution of their brands and to meet strict regulatory requirements to have a licensed base of operations. Other eateries are looking to gas stations for low start-up costs, guaranteed foot traffic and a little bit of kitsch.

The chefs and dreamers have found willing partners in gas station owners. Some have volunteered to cover the cost of building kitchens to tap new sources of revenue — from rent and increased foot traffic — as the margins on gas sales shrink even further and retailers such as Best Buy encroach on their quick-bite turf by stocking soda and snacks at the register.

Across Maryland, Northern Virginia and Washington, at least a dozen eateries serve delectable, sometimes organic, fare near the pump. There's Korean bibimbap in Wheaton, Md., authentic Mexican in Jessup, Md., Thai in Leesburg, Va., and Latin American in the District of Columbia. Corned Beef King cooks its meat for 11 hours.

Jeff Lenard, vice president for strategic initiatives at the National Association of Convenience Stores, is planning to highlight the Washington region's flourishing gas station food scene at his group's annual trade show next month. He's seeking to inspire a wave of innovation at the nation's 149,000 gas stations and convenience stores, which generate 160 million transactions a day — plenty of opportunity to sling chorizo tacos.

Lenard quotes Chevy Chase in the 1983 movie "Vacation" as a sign of the changing times. The actor delivered this memorable line: "I'm so hungry I could eat a sandwich from a gas station."

MICHAEL S. WILLIAMSON • WASHINGTON POST PHOTOS

(TOP) Corned Beef King, which sells sandwiches from a gas station in Olney, Md., feeds its lunch crowd on Sept. 28. (ABOVE) The Italian Stallion sandwich in this Sept. 28 photo is sold by Corned Beef King, in Olney, Md. The sandwich has imported ham, mortadella, capicola, peppers, provolone cheese, lettuce, tomato and Italian dressing. Although Corned Beef King has a food truck, it also sells food from inside an Exxon gas station.

"That was very funny back then," Lenard said, "but I'm not sure how many people would be in on the joke now. We think food is the future of gas stations. People now know they can get a great meal from a truck, and it has expanded the horizons where people no longer expect a good meal can only be found at a place with a tablecloth."

Goldstein ate her pastrami on rye while the loud, spiky-haired sandwich king — his name is Jon Rossler and he looks like Guy Fieri from the Food Network show "Diners, Drive-ins and Dives" — operated his food truck in Rockville, Md. Rossler started the truck after a falling-out with his father at their Falls Church, Va. deli business. The corned beef is a family recipe. The gas station owner stripped out the service garage to make room for the restaurant.

"I like it here," Goldstein said, packing up her leftovers. "It's clean — a lot cleaner than other delis. I'm a widow. I wouldn't go on a date here, but it's nice."

In the Washington area, the discoveries are often quintessentially ethnic, no doubt owing to the region's booming immigrant population, especially outside the Capital Beltway.

J.P. and Anna Goree opened Seoul Food DC, an offshoot of their popular food truck, in June, serving bibimbap bowls and other Korean specialties at an Exxon station in Wheaton, Md. J.P. grew up in Wisconsin; Anna grew up in Korea. They met working at Whole Foods, where he was a meat cutter and she was pastry chef. They were approached by the station's owner, Hank Kim, who went to the same college as Anna.

Most gas stations see about 1,100 customers a day, according to the National Association of Convenience Stores. The largest revenue driver is gas, accounting for 72 percent of cash flow but only 35 percent of profit. Gas station owners need to squeeze more money from their space to thrive, and foodies are an untapped well of income and appetites.

"I need more traffic in the store to sell more things," Kim said. "They bring more traffic to me, and I bring more traffic to them."

The Gorees invested thousands of dollars in the restaurant, instead of the hundreds of thousands it would have taken for a standalone place. They have no debt. The tables and chairs are from Ikea. They buy local food. The flowers on the tables are from the farmer's market. A Yelp reviewer wrote, "Atmosphere is actually quite nice for a gas station."

Marla Bilonick, who works with small businesses at the Latino Economic Development Center, dropped by for lunch the other day — her first time eating in a gas station.

"It definitely adds a certain amount of intrigue," she said, halfway through her bibimbap bowl with beef. "But it's insanely delicious." Putting on her small-business hat, Bilonick said, "When you work with limited resources, sometimes it comes out better than when you have unlimited resources."

But most gas station chefs are dreaming bigger, hoping to use the quirky locations to build their brands for franchising inside other gas stations or opening a flagship restaurant, sans gas pumps.

"Literally see these things in gas stations all over the country," said David Trachtenberg, the proprietor of Great American Hot Dogs, which started with a food truck roaming Montgomery County, Md. offering dozens of different hot dogs.

The grind of loading and unloading and finding new locations wore Trachtenberg out, so he parked it permanently at a BP station in the area. He hopes to move inside soon and then open dozens of other locations, perhaps becoming the hot-dog equivalent of the Five Guys hamburger chain, which started in Arlington, Va. and grew across the Washington area before embarking on a nationwide expansion.

One popular gas station eatery in Howard County, Md. is already expanding out of its original home at a Shell station: R&R Taqueria.

Turning the South's Sweet Tea into a Chicken Brine

BY ELIZABETH KARMEI
Associated Press

I was writing my cookbook on different ways to flavor food called "Soaked, Slathered and Seasoned" and I decided to write a whole chapter on brining. That is how much I believe in brining.

Because my favorite sweet tea is half lemonade and half tea, my tea brine has strong lemon undertones that make it a perfect complement to grilled chicken. I also add a touch of cinnamon to the brine to make it slightly spicier and more complex, helping it stand up to the heat and smokiness of the grill. If you don't like cinnamon, you could substitute a teaspoon of black peppercorns.

The result is my go-to brine when grilling chicken pieces. I like to serve the sweet-tea brined chicken with classic sides, like potato salad and grilled green beans in summer, and cornbread and sweet potato mash in the fall and winter. You'll find that it is versatile and goes with just about anything.

And don't worry — the chicken doesn't taste like iced tea. But it is juicy and well-seasoned. And if you like lemon chicken, like I do, grill a couple of sliced lemon halves and squirt the warm grilled juice over the chicken just before serving. Or for a tropical twist on the brine, substitute green tea for the black tea, and apricot nectar for the lemonade and you have an exotic tea brine that also works with pork.

When brining, remember the brine needs to be cold. And the smaller the piece of food, the less time it will take to brine. You don't want to over-brine and make the food salty. After the chicken has brined, pat it dry, but don't rinse it. Brush all over with olive oil but do not season it further. The chicken already is seasoned. I recommend grilling all bone-in chicken pieces over a medium indirect heat — about 350 F to 400 F — so they are cooked on the inside at the same time they are golden brown on the outside. Cooking bone-in chicken pieces over direct heat can result in a raw interior and a burned exterior.

When you use this brine, you'll see that besides delicious chicken, the brine also promotes a beautiful caramelized color thanks to the sugar and the tea that is absorbed by the chicken. Since we all eat with our eyes first, that is a win-win chicken din-din in my book.

SWEET TEA-BRINED AND GRILLED CHICKEN

Start to finish: 2 hours 15 minutes (30 minutes active)
Servings: 8
4 cups hot water
1 cup kosher salt
1/2 cup granulated sugar
1 cinnamon stick
12-ounce can frozen lemonade concentrate
4 cups strong freshly brewed black tea, cooled

1 lemon, cut into slices
6 cups ice
8 bone-in chicken thighs
Olive oil

In a large saucepan over high heat, combine the water, salt, sugar and cinnamon stick. Bring to a boil, stirring to dissolve the sugar and salt. Set aside to cool until just warm. Add the frozen lemonade and tea, then stir well. Add the lemon slices and ice. Stir well. Add the chicken to the brine, then cover and refrigerate for at least 1 hour and up to 3 hours. When ready to cook, prepare a gas or charcoal grill for medium, indirect cooking. On a charcoal grill, this means banking the coals to one side and cooking on the cooler side. On a gas grill, turn off the burners in one area and cook the chicken there.

Remove the chicken from the brine. Pat it dry with paper towels, then brush it lightly all over with oil. Arrange the chicken on the grill grate, bone side down. Cover and grill for 35 to 45 minutes, or until the meat reaches 170 F at the thickest part. There is no need to turn the chicken during cooking. Remove the chicken from the grill and let it rest for 5 to 10 minutes before serving. If grilling the lemons, do this while the chicken rests and squirt the hot grilled lemon juice over the chicken pieces before serving.

Rudy's Recipe of the Week

Argentine Meat Empanadas

1/2 cup shortening
2 onions, chopped
1 lb. lean ground beef or any other meat cut into tiny pieces
2 teaspoons Hungarian sweet paprika
3/4 teaspoon hot paprika
1/2 teaspoon crushed red pepper flakes
1 teaspoon ground cumin
1 tablespoon distilled white vinegar
1/4 cup raisins
1/2 cup pitted green olives, chopped
2 hard-cooked eggs, chopped
Salt to taste
1 (17.5 ounce) package frozen puff pastry sheets, thawed

Directions:

1. In a sauté; pan melt the shortening and add the chopped onions. Cook the onions until just before they begin to turn golden. Remove from the heat and stir in the sweet paprika, hot paprika, crushed red pepper flakes and salt to taste.

2. Spread the meat on a sieve and pour boiling water on it for partial cooking. Allow meat to cool. Place meat in a dish; add salt to taste, cumin and vinegar. Mix and add the meat to the onion mixture. Mix well and place on a flat to dish to cool and harden.

3. Cut puff pastry dough into 10 round shells. Place a spoonful of the meat mixture on each round; add some of the raisins, olives and the hard boiled eggs. Avoid reaching the edges of the pastry with the filling because its oiliness will prevent good sealing. Slightly wet the edge of the pastry, fold in two and stick edges together. The shape should resemble that of a half-moon. You should have a 2/3 to 1/2 inch flat edge of pastry to work with. Seal by twisting edge, step by step, between thumb and index finger, making sure to add pressure before releasing the pinch and moving on to the next curl. Other sealing procedures like pinching without curling or using a fork to seal will not prevent juice leaks during baking, and empanadas must be juicy.

4. Preheat oven to 350 degrees F (180 degrees C). Place empanadas on a parchment paper lined baking sheet. Be sure to prick each empanada with a fork near the curl to allow steam to escape during baking. Glaze with egg for shine and bake until golden, about 20 to 30 minutes.

Marcella Hazan, Famed Cookbook Author, Dies

BY TAMARA LUSH

Associated Press

LONGBOAT KEY, Fla. • Marcella Hazan, the Italian-born cookbook author who taught generations of Americans how to create simple, fresh Italian food, died Sunday. She was 89.

Hazan died in the morning at her home in Florida, according to an email from her son, Giuliano Hazan, and posts on Facebook and Twitter from her husband and daughter-in-law.

Hazan was best known for her six cookbooks, which were written by her in Italian and translated into English by Victor, her husband of 57 years. The recipes were traditional, tasty and sparse — her famous tomato sauce contained only tomatoes, onion, butter and salt — and mirrored the tastes of her home country, where importance is placed on the freshness of food, rather than the whiz-bang recipes inside a chef's mind.

She eschewed the American-style Italian food that suffocated mushy pasta in grainy meatballs and tasteless cheese. She begged home cooks to use more salt and once wrote that if readers were concerned about salt affecting one's life expectancy, to "not read any further." On the topic of garlic, Hazan took a sharp view.

"The unbalanced use of garlic is the single greatest cause of failure in would-be Italian cooking," she wrote in her 2004 cookbook "Marcella Says..." "It must remain a shadowy background presence. It cannot take over the show."

Marcella Pollini was born in 1924 in Cesenatico in the Emilia-Romana region of Italy. She didn't intend to be a professional cooking teacher or author; she graduated from the University of Ferrara with a doctorate in natural sciences and biology.

But then she met Victor Hazan, who was born in Italy but raised in New York. The couple married in 1955 and moved to the U.S., and she realized she needed to feed her husband, who longed for the flavors of Italy. One year, she went to take a Chinese cooking class, but the instructor canceled the class; the other students decided they wanted Hazan to teach them to cook Italian food.

So she began offering cooking classes from her New York City apartment. Those classes blossomed into a lifelong business of teaching. She and Victor opened a cooking school in Bologna, then in Venice, where classes took place in a 16th century palazzo with a custom designed kitchen.

Hazan gave birth to a son, Giuliano, in 1958. He shared his parents' love of food and also became a cookbook author. Giuliano and his wife run a cooking school in Verona. He also makes frequent visits to the Today Show, teaching his mother's recipes. Earlier this year, Giuliano Hazan published "Hazan Family Favorites," drawing on his memories of his parents and grandparents and the food they ate for decades.

"The world of cooking has lost a giant today," daughter-in-law Lael Hazan tweeted Sunday afternoon.

It was Hazan's 1973 cookbook, "The Classic Italian Cookbook," that led gourmands to draw comparisons between Hazan and another larger-than-life cookbook author: Julia Child.

The two women were longtime friends; Child told People Magazine in 1998 that Hazan was "forbidding because she's rough ... that's her manner, and she's got a good heart."

In 2000, Hazan was awarded the James Beard Foundation Lifetime Achievement Award.

Marcella and Victor Hazan retired to a condo on Longboat Key, Fla., in the late 1990s. There, the couple renovated the kitchen, which overlooked the languid blue waters of the Gulf of Mexico. Punctuated by calls and visits from fans and reporters — and occasionally making appearances in her son's cookbooks and at cooking classes in the northeast — Hazan returned to the thing she loved doing most: cooking for her husband.

On Sunday, Victor Hazan wrote on Facebook: "Marcella, my incomparable companion, died this morning a few steps away from her bed. She was the truest and best, and so was her food."

In 2004, Marcella Hazan wrote, "Simple doesn't mean easy. I can describe simple cooking thus: Cooking that is stripped all the way down to those procedures and those ingredients indispensable in enunciating the sincere flavor intentions of a dish."

Hazan said the Roman dish spaghetti ai oio — thin spaghetti with garlic, oil, parsley, chili pepper and nothing else — embodies the simple-yet-complex nature of Italian food. Dishes should nourish and please, she added, not "dazzle guests with my originality or creativity."

"I am never bored by a good old dish and I wouldn't shrink from making something that I first made fifty years ago and my mother, perhaps, fifty years before then," she wrote. "I don't cook 'concepts.' I use my head, but I cook from the heart, I cook for flavor."

A Healthy, Grapey Pan Sauce with Pork Chops

BY SARA MOULTON

Associated Press

When I was in high school, my mom and I threw all kinds of dinner parties.

OK, she threw the parties and I helped with the cooking. Our go-to entree was veal scaloppini. I liked it no matter how we cooked it. At the time it seemed so fancy. Now I realize that it was all about the sauce. In its velvety blandness, veal really is little more than an excuse for sauce, a cake in search of frosting.

This recipe substitutes pork chops for veal. A generation ago, this switcheroo wouldn't have worked; the chops would have been too rich and fatty. But modern-day engineering has turned pork chops into that other white meat. They have very little fat and, consequently, very little flavor. Fat is a conductor of flavor, as well as a provider of moisture.

Accordingly, one of today's standard-issue supermarket pork chops is nearly as suitable as veal as a vehicle for sauce — and it's cheaper, too.

Fine, you say, but isn't it going to take me a ton of time and effort to make a good sauce? Not necessarily. There are, of course, a world of sauces to choose from, and many of them are indeed big productions. But pan sauces, as I discovered during my restaurant days, are speedy to make, and that's what this recipe calls for.

A pan sauce is built from the concentrated bits of juice left in the bottom of a skillet after you've seared a protein. Transforming those flavorful little nuggets into a sauce requires nothing more intricate than dissolving them with the aid of a liquid, usually wine and stock, and adding some extra flavor, often in the form of sauteed shallots or onions. This template works not just for pork, but for all thin cuts of chicken, lamb, veal and beef.

Still, you're going to want to thicken this sauce. If I were working with a home-made chicken stock, this wouldn't be a problem. But I'm trying to get dinner on the table on a weeknight, so I typically use store-bought chicken broth, which lacks the gelatin that thickens a sauce.

What to do? Coat the chops with flour, preferably Wondra, an instant flour that Granny used to use. It will not only thicken the sauce, but keep the meat from drying out even as it provides a crisper crust than regular all-purpose flour. Good old Wondra will also come in handy when you're making pan gravy at Thanksgiving because it's been formulated not to lump up.

The big flavor in this sauce comes from the grapes and the mustard. I never knew how "grapey" a grape could be until I first made sole Veronique — sole served in a cream sauce with peeled (!) green grapes — in cooking school. You'll see for yourself. Though we've skipped the pesky peeling part.

Pure pleasure aside, grapes are also a terrific source of resveratrol, the powerful antioxidant found in wine. So, in one quick, economical and widely adaptable recipe you get big flavor, good health and a pan gravy. Maybe that's pretty fancy after all.

SAUTEED PORK CHOPS AND GRAPES WITH MUSTARD SAUCE

Start to finish: 25 minutes
Servings: 4

Four 1/2-inch-thick boneless pork chops (about 1 pound total), trimmed of any fat.

Kosher salt and ground black pepper

Wondra flour, for dredging the pork chops

1 1/2 tablespoons vegetable oil, divided

1/4 cup finely chopped yellow onion

1 cup seedless red or green grapes, halved

1/4 cup dry white wine

3/4 cup low-sodium chicken broth

1/2 teaspoon packed dark brown sugar

Preparation: 1 tablespoon Dijon mustard

Season the pork chops on both sides with salt and pepper. One at a time, dip the pork chops in the flour, coating them well on both sides, but shaking off the excess.

In a large skillet over medium-high, heat 1 tablespoon of the oil. Add the chops to the pan and cook until lightly browned on the first side, about 2 minutes. Add the remaining oil to the skillet, turn the chops and cook for 1 minute on the second side. Transfer them to a plate and cover loosely with foil.

Add the onion and grapes to the skillet, reduce the heat to medium-low and cook, stirring often, until the onions are golden brown, about 3 to 4 minutes. Increase the heat to high, add the wine and bring to a boil. Simmer, stirring, until the wine is reduced to 1 tablespoon. Add the stock and sugar and simmer until the broth is reduced by half.

Reduce the heat to medium-low, return the pork to the skillet, along with any juices that have accumulated on the plate and simmer very gently, turning the pork several times, for 1 minute. Transfer each pork chop to a serving plate. Add the mustard to the sauce, whisking, then season with salt and pepper. Pour the sauce evenly over each portion and serve right away.

Go For the Food: Portland Tempts with Endless Eats

BY J.M. HIRSCH

AP Food Editor

PORTLAND, Ore. • Getting a great meal in Portland is harder than you'd think.

Not for lack of talented chefs creating world-class food. Rather, too many of them. Deciding where to dine among the many contenders can quickly leave you overwhelmed.

I know. First-world problem. But it's true. Portland's dining scene has such a delicious glut of talented, creative chefs, you may find yourself calculating how many dinners — if one started early — could be jammed into a single evening. Gluttonous, perhaps, but nonetheless the best way to make the most of a short visit.

And if you were to attempt said gluttony, consider starting the evening at Gabriel Rucker's Le Pigeon, where the rustic French-inspired food — including a jerked take on the namesake bird — simply astounds. Le Pigeon is ideal for an early dinner because it's likely the only way you'll get in the door. Reservations for this tiny restaurant are tough, but 10 seats at the chef's bar are reserved for walk-ins. Get there 10 minutes before they open at 5 p.m. and you'll be good to go.

And don't even think of leaving without getting the foie gras profiteroles for dessert. They are, simply, an intensely rich and decadent dessert that will leave you so very happy.

For dinner No. 2, try like mad for a reservation for the 8:45 p.m. seating at Naomi Pomeroy's Beast, where diners enjoy a six-course prix fixe dinner built around massive flavors and the chef's penchant for butchering whole animals. The rustic, yet refined menu changes weekly, but you can expect the likes of charcuterie plates with steak tartare and mains of braised pork belly.

But what about the rest of the day?

While planning your multiple dinners, you'll probably be walking around the city. And it would be a shame to do that on an empty stomach.

For breakfast, head to Kenny & Zuke's Delicatessen, a wonderful ode to the classic Jewish deli. Though they have ample seating and a full — and deliciously tempting menu — consider trying the take-out counter.

Spend a moment admiring the wall of vintage-style and artisanal sodas, then move to the deli case. Grab some of the house-cured gravlax to go (sold by the deliciously thin slice). It is savory and salty with a wonderful chew that teases an almost jerky flavor and texture. Don't be afraid to ask for a sample.

There is no shame in eating the gravlax straight up. But you also could get a bagel — the salt bagel would be a delicious choice — or a potato and onion knish. Have them heat the knish for a rich, flaky, yet substantial breakfast.

Now take your deli goodies next door to a Portland institution, Stumptown Coffee Roasters. The coffee — particularly when served up as a gorgeous whole milk latte — is as good as its reputation suggests, smooth, yet bold in a way that a certain national chain could only wish to be.

After you grab your coffee, head into the adjoining lobby of the Ace Hotel, where chairs and couches welcome you and an oversized (massively so) coffee table anchors the room. And if the caffeine leaves you feeling feisty, the lobby has a fun old-school photo booth.

Ready to explore? Start by crossing the street, where in an architecturally stunning alley-like mall is hidden the tiny candy shop known as Quin. But this is no ordinary sugar load.

This is artisanal candy of the highest order, all dreamed up by candy maker Jami Curl and made from local ingredients. Grab a bag of the Jacobsen sea salt caramels (made with Oregon salt by local producer Ben Jacobsen), and maybe some of the strawberry gumdrops.

A HAM AND CHEESE FRENCH TOAST BUILT BY THE LOAF

BY J.M. HIRSCH

AP Food Editor

How do you make a big, bold, savory French toast even bigger, bolder and more savory? Instead of building it a slice at a time, you build it by the loaf.

My inspiration was a pillow-soft loaf of unsliced sandwich bread. Looking at it, I wondered what would happen if instead of cutting it into traditional slices and frying it a piece at a time — or even assembling it in a layer as a casserole — I instead cut the entire loaf horizontally into a few thick planks, stuffed it, then re-assembled it in a loaf pan.

This recipe is the delicious result of that wondering.

Since French toast is such a perfect fall dinner — warm and comforting — I kept the fillings savory with ham, cheddar cheese and turkey. But if you'd rather go sweet, you could substitute jam, peanut butter, cream cheese, fresh berries, even chocolate chips.

While this dish can be assembled and immediately baked, it is even better if you give it time to soak. You can assemble it the night before, then refrigerate until the following day an hour before dinner. Just pop it in the oven when you get home from work.

HAM AND CHEESE STUFFED FRENCH TOAST LOAF

When selecting your bread, first take a look at the loaf pan you plan to use. You'll want a loaf that fits comfortably in your pan with a little wiggle room. If you can only find loaves that are too big, just use a serrated knife to trim the loaf to fit before beginning the recipe.

Start to finish: 1 hour 15 minutes (10 minutes active)

Servings: 8

1 loaf white sandwich bread, not sliced
3 eggs
1/2 cup milk
1 teaspoon dried thyme
1/2 teaspoon salt
1/4 teaspoon ground black pepper
4 ounces deli sliced ham
8 ounces deli sliced turkey breast

1 cup grated cheddar cheese

1/2 cup grated Parmesan cheese

If baking right away, heat the oven to 400 F. Coat a deep loaf pan with baking spray.

Use a bread knife to cut the loaf horizontally into thirds, creating bottom, middle and top layers. Set aside.

In a medium bowl, whisk together the eggs, milk, thyme, salt and pepper. Place the bottom layer of the bread in the prepared loaf pan. Drizzle about a third of the egg mixture evenly over the bread, then use a fork to gently press the bread all over to help it absorb the liquid.

Arrange half of the ham in an even layer over the bread. Top the ham with half of the turkey, followed by half of the cheese. Place the middle section of the bread over the ingredients, then use your hand to gently compress the bread and fillings. Drizzle another third of the egg mixture over the middle layer of bread, then press it gently with a fork to help it absorb the liquid.

Repeat the layering of ham, turkey and cheese, then top with the final layer of bread. Compress the bread and fillings as before, then carefully pour the remaining egg mixture over the top. Some will run down the sides between the bread and the pan; this is fine. Press the top of the bread with a fork to help it absorb the liquid.

Scatter the Parmesan cheese over the top of the loaf. Coat a sheet of foil with cooking spray, then use it to cover the pan. The stuffed French toast can be baked immediately, or refrigerated overnight.

When ready to bake, set the pan on the oven's middle rack and bake for 1 hour, or until it reaches 155 F at the center. Uncover the pan and bake for another 5 minutes. Let cool slightly before serving.

To serve, cut the loaf into thick slices as you would a pound cake.

Celebrating Your Oktoberfest at Home

BY SALLY ANN SHURMUR

Star-Tribune

Oktoberfest is a 16 to 18 day festival held each year in Munich, Germany. It is the largest (public) festival in the world, each year attracting over 6 million visitors.

Traditionally, the festival begins on the first Saturday after Sept. 15 and ends on the first Sunday in October.

The festival in Munich consists of lots of beer and food, served in huge tents owned by different breweries, restaurants, and other establishments. There are bands playing traditional Bavarian music, as well as modern bands in the evening hours that play rock, pop, and dance music. To keep with tradition, many visitors wear the traditional clothes — Lederhosen for men, Dirndl dresses for women. Source: germanfoodguide.com

You may not be able to find an oompah band, or have a pair of Lederhosen that fit, but with these recipes, you can plan your own Oktoberfest this weekend.

Potato and Beer Soup

4 cups chicken stock

3 large russet potatoes, peeled and cut into 1/2-inch cubes (about 4 cups)

1 tablespoon Dijon mustard

8 ounces sliced smoked bacon

2 carrots, 1/2-inch dice (about 1 cup)

Kosher salt and freshly ground pepper

3 stalks celery, 1/2-inch dice (about 1 cup)

2 bay leaves

1 small bundle fresh thyme, tied together with kitchen twine

1 leek, green top trimmed, 1/2-inch dice (about 1 cup)

1 cup light German beer, such as Pilsner

1/4 cup sliced fresh chives

Combine 2 cups of the chicken stock and one-third of the potatoes in a small saucepan. Bring to a boil, and then reduce to a simmer until fork-tender, 15 to 18 minutes. Stir in the mustard to combine, and then blend to a smooth puree using an immersion or regular blender.

Meanwhile, cook the bacon in a large Dutch oven or stock pot over medium heat until crispy and most of the fat has been rendered, 12 to 15 minutes, and then transfer to a paper-towel-lined plate to drain. Pour out the bacon fat, reserving 3 tablespoons in the pot.

Turn the heat up to medium-high and add the carrots. Sprinkle with salt and pepper and cook for 3 minutes, and then add the remaining potatoes, celery, bay leaves, leeks and thyme and season with salt and pepper. Cook until the leeks are soft, 4 minutes, and then pour in the beer and bring to a boil until the beer has cooked down to about 2 tablespoons, 2 to 4 minutes. Pour in the remaining chicken stock and the reserved potato puree. Stir to combine and bring the mixture to a boil. Reduce to a simmer and cook uncovered until the vegetables are just tender, 6 to 8 minutes. Season with salt and pepper.

Moosewood Turns 40, Offers Fresh Take on Veg Life

BY MICHELE KAYAL

Associated Press

In the bearded, Birkenstocked '70s, the Moosewood Restaurant in upstate New York was more than a vegetarian eatery. It was the standard-bearer of a movement, iconic of a lifestyle, an ethic and an ideal. And like so many hippies from that era, Moosewood has grown up.

"The image was definitely crunchy granola back in the day," says Mary Margaret Chappell, food editor of Vegetarian Times magazine. "It has a much more sophisticated image than it did then. Because vegetarianism has a much more sophisticated image than it did then. You don't have to be part of a commune and eating tofu. We have former presidents who are vegans. The world has changed and Moosewood has changed with it."

Since it opened in 1973, the Ithaca, N.Y., restaurant has evolved from a group of 20-somethings cooking for friends into a mature business with a line of cookbooks and an international clientele. The group's 40th anniversary cookbook, "Moosewood Restaurant Favorites" (St. Martin's Press, 2013), showcases a more sophisticated cuisine that is lighter, more diverse, and attuned to concerns about gluten, dairy and potential allergens.

Quite simply, today's Moosewood is not the vegetarian menu of four decades ago. Recipes for dukkah-crusted fish and Turkish borekas extend the restaurant's reputation for introducing international concepts and lighten the load on the obligatory tofu recipes; brown rice has been joined by trendy grains such as quinoa.

"The perception of Moosewood then and as it remains is authentic, honest food," says Wynnie Stein, co-owner of Moosewood Restaurant. "We've never changed that aspect of who we are. We're not interested in tiny little portions or over-decorated plates. That's not who we are. We serve generous portions of very satisfying delicious food."

The original "Moosewood Cookbook," published in 1977, was the point of entry for many of today's older vegetarians (though not all of the restaurant's dishes were vegetarian). Penned by cookbook author Mollie Katzen, a member of the restaurant's founding group, it had hand-lettered pages and whimsical illustrations. It was the book that introduced a generation of college students to meat-free cooking. And to cooking in general.

"The first recipe I ever cooked was from Moosewood," says Dana Cowin, editor-in-chief of Food & Wine magazine, who was a college student in the early 1980s. "It was all part of a scene. And it really introduced cooking to so many people who were young and had never cooked and that lifestyle really spoke to them."

Though Katzen has been gone from Moosewood for more than 30 years, she may still be its best-known voice. The cover of her new cookbook, "The Heart of the Plate" (Houghton Mifflin Harcourt, 2013), proudly touts her as "author of 'Moosewood Cookbook'."

Which only speaks to the strength of the brand. Moosewood has survived an onslaught of gluten-free upstarts and celebrity vegans to emerge as a quiet stalwart of the movement it helped launch. That credibility, according to many food world observers, provides the foundation of its past — and future — success.

"As more people are trying to eat more and more vegetables, and reducing the amount of meat, some of the old school veg heads have found a new audience that finds their approach credible," says Joe Yonan, Washington Post food editor and author of "Eat Your Vegetables" (Ten Speed Press, 2013).

"Because it's not based in any fashion. It's just an honest approach to cooking that comes from a pretty rich background and lot of years in the kitchen," he says. "It's not a gluten-free cake pops in the slow cooker."

THAI BUTTERNUT SQUASH SOUP

Start to finish: 1 hour (30 minutes active)

Servings: 6

2 tablespoons vegetable oil

2 cups chopped yellow onions

2 cloves garlic, chopped

1 teaspoon salt

1 tablespoon peeled and grated fresh ginger

1 teaspoon Thai red curry paste, or more to taste

2 1/2-pound butternut

squash, peeled, seeded and chopped (about 6 cups)

3 cups water

1 lime

1 cup unsweetened coconut milk

2 cups baby spinach, cut into chiffonade

Sugar

1/4 cup chopped fresh cilantro (optional)

In a stock or large soup pot over medium-low, heat the oil. Add the onions, garlic and salt and cook until the onions have softened, about 10 minutes. Stir in the ginger and curry paste and cook for a minute or two more. Add the squash and water and bring to a boil. Reduce the heat and simmer until the squash is tender, 15 to 20 minutes.

While the squash is cooking, zest and juice the lime. Add about a teaspoon of the zest and 1 tablespoon of the juice to the pot (reserving the extra). When the squash is tender, stir in the coconut milk.

Transfer the soup to a blender or food processor, then puree until smooth. Be careful when blending hot liquids.

Return the soup to the pot and reheat. Taste and adjust the flavor with spoonful of sugar, if desired, as well as additional lime juice and/or curry paste. Stir in the spinach and cilantro and heat until just wilted.

Shutdown to Idle US-based Military Commissaries

NORFOLK, Va. (AP) • Members of the Armed Forces will still be paid in the partial government shut-down, but their food bills could soar if Washington's political brinkmanship drags on.

Commissaries in the U.S. where military families can buy inexpensive groceries tax-free are shutting doors Wednesday due to the shut-down. And that could create a financial hardship for those who depend on the stores' steeply discounted prices to make ends meet — particularly young service members with families to feed or retired veterans on fixed incomes.

About 12 million people — including military personnel, retirees and their families — are eligible to shop at the 246 commissaries on military installations worldwide. The commissaries typically carry everything a national supermarket chain would — including brand-name products — but at much lower prices than their commercial competitors.

The military is required to sell goods at its commissaries at cost. While there is a 5 percent surcharge on all products to help pay for new commissaries and improve existing ones, there is no sales tax on the products sold.

But starting Wednesday, many customers will have to find another place to shop until Congress can come to a funding agreement. The military is closing all of its domestic commissaries, although overseas stores will remain open.

"They think groceries are available everywhere, and there are places where retirees don't have access to the commissary. But their budget isn't built on that savings. We've become accustomed to paying X amount for groceries and that's what our budget is built around. So yes, this will have a real negative impact if it goes on beyond a week or two," said Scott Whitmore, a Navy retiree who lives in

Marysville, Wash.

"I actually went shopping on Sunday because I saw the handwriting on the wall," said Whitmore, who regularly shops at his nearby commissary.

On social media, there were widespread reports of long lines and empty store shelves at commissaries nationwide Tuesday as military families scrambled to buy groceries before their local stores closed. Whitmore and his wife are raising their 9-year-old granddaughter and said he mentioned the closings to another military parent at the bus stop on Tuesday, urging her to stock up.

"We go to the regular grocery stores in town and go, 'How do these people do this?'" Whitmore said.

The Defense Commissary Agency based at Fort Lee, Va. says its shoppers save more than 30 percent, on average, compared with commercial prices. The agency says a family of four that shops at a commissary year-round has an annual savings of about $4,500. That's significant, given that many entry-level members of the military make about $20,000 a year, excluding bonuses and allowances for housing and meals, under certain conditions.

"We are acutely aware of the hardships placed on all our customers if we cannot deliver their commissary benefit," Joseph H. Jeu, the Defense Commissary Agency's director and CEO, said in a statement. "However, because of their geographic location, our service members and their families overseas have a more critical dependence on commissaries, and we are prepared to continue that support."

Among members of the military community, commissaries are seen as a major perk.

The Defense Commissary Agency noted in its 2012 annual report that it exceeded $6 billion in sales for the first time since 1992, when it had 411 stores. As of Tuesday, the agency will have 178 domestic stores and 68 overseas commissaries. The Defense Department considers commissaries a major recruitment tool that helps supplement military incomes.

Marissa Trudo, an Air Force military spouse who lives near Langley Air Force Base, Va., said she takes the grocery bill into account in budgeting for her family. Shopping at a commissary helps make a government paycheck go a bit further.

"I find it to be way cheaper than the local grocery stores," Trudo said.

Trudo lives in Hampton, Va., but she said when she was visiting family in Rhode Island earlier this summer that she noticed that cereal cost twice as much in grocery stores there as she paid at her local commissary.

"You know that you can get more for your money here," she said. "It is definitely a perk."

Even though she and her husband live in military housing off base, she said it is worth it to drive through security to shop at the commissary instead of at a civilian store.

The same is true for retirees.

Many of the top performing commissaries in terms of sales are in urban areas where there are large numbers of retirees who regularly shop there, rather than those with the largest number of military personnel or those in isolated areas with few competitors.

The top five commissaries by sales are in northern Virginia, San Diego, Hawaii and southeast Virginia, according to 2010 sales figures, the most recent readily available. The military-retiree rich region of southeast Virginia had two of the top ten performing stores, with No. 4 at Naval Air Station Oceana in Virginia Beach and No. 10 at Langley Air Force Base in Hampton.

"I love the commissary. I've grown up with it. I've been married 40 years and used the commissary for 40 years. It is worthwhile, it really is. I hope they can resolve the issue with the closure of the government," said Susan Searles, a military retiree who was shopping at a commissary at Langley Air Force Base in Virginia on Monday.

While the partial shutdown began Tuesday, domestic commissaries stayed open an extra business day in an effort to clear out produce. Kevin Robinson, a Defense Commissary Agency spokesman, said any perishable goods that are left unsold may eventually have to be thrown away if the shutdown continues.

"Our contingency plan is to have two store managers on call to handle storage alarms, refrigeration alarms, and periodically discard product" for sanitary issues, Robinson said in an email to The Associated Press.

Sour Food, Shattered Glass: Cleaning Kenya's Mall

NAIROBI, Kenya (AP) • The sour odor of rotting food overwhelms the senses. Shattered glass crunches underfoot. And evidence of looting is ever-present, including in Westgate Mall's chandelier-filled casino.

Shop owners on Tuesday boarded up stores and removed merchandise even as Kenyan, U.S. and European investigators moved through the mall's rubble in search of answers to the four-day terrorist attack. A soldier inside said that two bodies had been found Tuesday, one likely a soldier. The other was burned so badly it was too difficult to say, he said.

Those cleaning up their shops wondered: Can the mall reopen? If so, when?

A mall official told The Associated Press that such questions won't be answered until the Kenyan government gives back control of the mall to its owners, a legal hold-up that may take months to resolve as the forensic investigation to find bodies and reconstruct events continues.

An Associated Press reporter on Tuesday spent about two hours inside Westgate, the site of a terrorist siege that killed at least 67 people. Kenya's government says five attackers are dead — perhaps under the mall's rubble — but officials acknowledge that some of the attackers may have changed clothes and walked out with fleeing, frightened shoppers.

The mall walk-through showed vast destruction where the mall caught fire and where it collapsed, but also SWAT-like tactics during the rush to rescue those inside when the grenades and bullets began flying. Many workers wore masks to cut the stench. Surgical gloves littered the floor, and foreign and Kenyan investigators, some wearing white moon suits, worked through the rubble.

AP also saw evidence of looting, thefts that many in the mall blame on Kenyan security forces: Cash registers yanked open and the money taken, jewels from display cases gone. Dozens of empty beer bottles — apparently enjoyed by security forces — prompted one restaurant employee to ask: "How do you expect them to kill someone if they are totally drunk?" and then wonder if maybe it was a post-siege celebration.

Carrying flashlights through the dark gaming area, Millionaires casino management walked carefully into the back room, where they found their main safe with several holes and gouges from bullets on it. The door remained closed, and those trying to open it would have been disappointed if they had succeeded. It was empty.

"Look, they tried to get into the vault," said a manager who squatted beside the green safe and pointing at the bullet scars. "The other day when we came in and took the money out, this wasn't here."

THE ACES ON BRIDGE®

Bobby Wolff

*"But satire, ever moral, ever new,
Delights the reader and instructs him, too."*

— Nicolas Boileau-Despreaux

I am always happy to receive full-deal problems from my readers. Ray Dufour posed today's declarer-play problem. He asked how to play three no-trump on the lead of the heart five, and how declarer's strategy would vary, depending on what happened in the early tricks.

The first issue is what to play from dummy at trick one. It looks right to put up the queen — if you don't, you cannot get any use out of that card. Let's say the queen loses to the ace and the heart three comes back. Now it looks likely that hearts were 4-4, so you win the heart king (for fear of a spade shift) and run the club 10. If West puts up the queen, duck it. If East had returned a high heart spot (so that the suit appeared to be 5-3), duck the second heart, win the third, and try to sneak the club 10 past West — hoping he will forget to cover if he began with queen-third of clubs. If he covers, you will need the clubs to split 2-2.

Things are rather more complicated if the heart queen holds the first trick. Your possession of the heart four and two means that you can assume that if the heart three is played by East, then hearts are 4-4. So lead a low club from dummy. If you judge from East's play to the first trick that hearts are 5-3, then play clubs from the top and hope the suit breaks.

ANSWER: Some play that one should pass over the double with no club stopper and wait for your partner to ask again by redoubling. A more mainstream position is to pass with moderate clubs, redouble with great clubs, and otherwise to respond as if the opponents had not acted. So you would bid two spades now and expect your partner to check for a club stopper if he felt the need to do so.

TODAY IN HISTORY

On this date:
In 1780, British spy John Andre was hanged in Tappan, N.Y., during the Revolutionary War.

In 1835, the first battle of the Texas Revolution took place as American settlers fought Mexican soldiers near the Guadalupe River; the Mexicans ended up withdrawing.

In 1941, during World War II, German armies launched an all-out drive against Moscow.

In 1944, Nazi troops crushed the two-month-old Warsaw Uprising, during which a quarter of a million people were killed.

In 1950, the comic strip "Peanuts," created by Charles M. Schulz, was syndicated to seven newspapers.

In 1958, the former French colony of Guinea in West Africa proclaimed its independence.

In 1970, one of two chartered twin-engine planes flying the Wichita State University football team to Utah crashed into a mountain near Silver Plume, Colo., killing 31 of the 40 people on board.

In 1971, the music program "Soul Train" made its debut in national syndication.

In 1985, actor Rock Hudson died at his home in Beverly Hills, Calif., at age 59 after battling AIDS.

In 2001, NATO Secretary-General Lord Robertson said the United States had provided "clear and conclusive" evidence of Osama bin Laden's involvement in the attacks on New York and Washington.

In 2002, the Washington, D.C. area sniper attacks began as a resident of Silver Spring, Md., was shot and killed in a store parking lot in Wheaton; the next day, five people were shot dead, setting off a frantic manhunt lasting three weeks.

In 2006, an armed milk truck driver took a group of girls hostage in an Amish schoolhouse in Nickel Mines, Pa., killing five of them and wounding five others before committing suicide.

Ten years ago: The Los Angeles Times published allegations that California gubernatorial candidate Arnold Schwarzenegger had sexually harassed six women in the past; the actor acknowledged "bad behavior" on his part, and apologized. The House voted 281-142 to prohibit doctors from carrying out what abortion opponents called partial birth abortion. South African J.M. Coetzee won the 2003 Nobel Prize for literature. Former Labor Secretary John Dunlop died at age 89.

Five years ago: Republican Sarah Palin and Democrat Joe Biden sparred over taxes, energy policy and the Iraq war in a high-profile vice-presidential debate at Washington University in St. Louis, in which Palin sought to reclaim her identity as a feisty reformer and Biden tried to undercut the maverick image of GOP presidential hopeful John McCain. More than a year after millionaire adventure Steve Fossett vanished on a solo flight over California's rugged Sierra Nevada, searchers found the wreckage of his plane but no body inside. (Fossett's remains were discovered in late Oct. 2008.)

One year ago: Vice President Joe Biden said the middle class had been "buried" during the last four years, a statement that Republicans immediately seized upon as an unwitting indictment of the Obama administration. A judge in Pennsylvania ruled that the state's tough new voter identification requirement could not be enforced in the upcoming presidential election.

DEAR ABBY: I have been dating Mr. Right for two years. "Phil" is the man I want to spend my life with. When we are together privately, everything is perfect.

DEAR ABBY
Jeanne Phillips

The problem is, Phil hangs out with his old college buddies every few weeks or months, and it often involves his ex-girlfriends. They don't hang out alone. There is always at least one other person there. The situations usually include drinking, which worries me.

In my opinion, Phil should not be seeing his exes, even though his college friends are still buddies with them. Phil doesn't understand why I think this is so wrong. I am uncomfortable and think he should avoid these situations.

Am I overly jealous, or should I call it quits because he won't respect my feelings on the matter?

— HOME ALONE IN KOKOMO

DEAR HOME ALONE: I don't think you are overly jealous, but I do think you may be overly insecure. Has Phil given you any reason to think he has cheated on you? If not, you should trust that he is doing nothing more than hanging out occasionally with old friends.

You say he is encountering exes (plural) when he sees his male friends. If it was just one, you might have cause to worry. Remember, these women are exes for a reason. Unless you want to be another ex, you should lighten up because insecurity and possessiveness are unattractive traits.

DEAR ABBY: We have lived next door to a couple, "Evie" and "Earl," for five years. I thought we were good friends. Over the years, I vented to Evie about my relationship with my daughter-in-law, "Cate." I watch my two grandkids most of the week and have complained to her about Cate's poor parenting skills.

Last summer, my daughter-in-law made a concerted effort to befriend Evie, and they now socialize together — even though Cate flirted with Earl and Evie didn't like it. This has pretty much killed my friendship with Evie and worsened my relationship with my D-I-L.

This has affected me emotionally and physically to the point that I either want to cut off ties with my son and/or move — neither of which is really an option. I have tried talking to both parties to no avail. I don't know what to do. Please help.

— BETRAYED IN PENNSYLVANIA

DEAR BETRAYED: If you had concerns about your daughter-in-law's parenting skills, the person you should have discussed them with was Cate. And if Evie was as good a friend as you thought, she wouldn't be hanging around with your daughter-in-law to the exclusion of you.

I assume that you, your son and Cate are still on speaking terms and you're still watching the kids "most of the week." If that's not true and you have been cut off by everyone, then the most important thing you need to do is take care of your mental and physical health. Accept that Evie will never be your buddy again and start socializing with others.

If you are no longer watching your grandchildren, your son and D-I-L will have to make alternative arrangements for childcare, which will cost them money they may be reluctant to spend. Then it will be in their interest as well as yours to make peace.

IF OCTOBER 2 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: Your path ahead may be blissful if you remain realistic and keep your feet planted firmly on the ground. During the upcoming six weeks, a romantic encounter or a business offer could be compelling, but committing to either one might create turbulence in your life. Let time pass and be sure you can trust your feelings. In December, those who are not good for you will have a tough time getting close, so use that as a measuring stick to gauge how important a new person or idea should be. Mr. or Ms. Right might knock on your door in December, but if you're already in a committed relationship this is a good time to interview for a new job or make an important change in your life.

HOROSCOPE

Jeraldine Saunders

ARIES (March 21-April 19): You may be called upon to perform a juggling act. One-on-one situations might emphasize the different hats you must wear and the numerous tasks you must manage. Cope with a three-ring circus with style.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Put on your captain's hat and navigate through a sea of information. Where finances are concerned, you could be blind to drawbacks or only see what you want to see. Watch which way the wind is blowing.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): You can't hit two targets with one arrow. Don't spread yourself too thin or switch horses in midstream. Be flexible enough to listen, but hard-headed enough to make your own decisions based on the information.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Employ the skill set needed to handle uncontrollable changes with aplomb. Try boning up on the latest techniques or methods. Contact friends who can offer support, enlightenment or encouragement.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Fly by the seat of your pants. You're in your comfort zone when given a chance to put unique ideas into motion. You'll be most successful by ignoring the status quo and experimenting with the untried or untested.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Add to your credentials. You'll be more effective if you let people know about your talents and show that you're willing to gain experience. Explore options, but don't make an irrevocable financial decision.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Capitalize on a sudden shift to superstar status. Enjoy a positive "buzz," but don't be tempted to make irrevocable changes based on fleeting popularity. Your reputation gets a shot in the arm from an unknown source.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Roller coasters can be thrilling or terrifying. Much might depend upon whether you're on the receiving end of a dramatic situation or someone else's irrational unpredictability, or if you're the one dishing it out.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Be open to participating in discussions or brainstorming sessions. Write down your ideas for further scrutiny. Once you've visualized what you want to accomplish, it is possible to achieve it.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): It might be rebellion against cultural expectations that causes you to make an unwise or impetuous choice. You may refuse to repeat tried-and-true patterns or to follow others along a well-worn and familiar rut.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): A significant other might surprise you by trying something out of character or having a sudden change of plans. Play the part of the entrepreneur rather than remaining stagnant as a traditionalist. Go with the flow.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Shake, rattle and roll. Shake off unnecessary limitations and bypass obstacles by getting right to the point and using your dynamic leadership skills. People tend to see you as trustworthy and will listen to your opinion.

NO FOOTBALL ALLOWED

David Bashore
Sports Editor

WARNING: THIS COLUMN IS A FOOTBALL-FREE ZONE.

While there has always been a great deal of response to the Times-News football coverage — be it preps, college or NFL — there's always been an advocate for the other sports. You've seen photos, stories and leader boards for all sports. Now it's time to get caught up, with one month left to go before those sports hand out state hardware.

Here are some things you may have missed from the first "half," as it were, of the fall sports season (helmets optional).

Bruins, Riverhawks Rising in Boys Soccer

Long doormats of the Great Basin Conference, both Twin Falls city schools have turned it on under (relatively) new leadership. Second-year coach Derek Riddle has the Riverhawks sitting pretty atop the Great Basin Conference standings with two games to play, and they've gotten there on the strength of slick soccer that carves other teams open — death by 1,000 short passes. Twin Falls is in its first year under new coach J.J. Stagge, and the Bruins have started to play some quality soccer themselves, highlighted by sweeping the regular-season series with perennial frontrunner Jerome. If both teams take care of business tonight in their penultimate conference game, Monday's matchup at Sunway Soccer Complex will decide the league's regular-season title.

Underrated Sidekicks

Twin Falls outside hitter Sierra Starley and Filer outside hitter Sarah Sharp are both NCAA Division I commitments. Their accolades have been well documented in these pages over the last year or so. But they've each got a less heralded No. 2 helping them dominate this season. Twin Falls sophomore middle blocker Hailey Wright has come into her own over the course of the season and, once she grows into her athletic frame, will be the next name people are talking about when they think of Bruin volleyball. Over in Filer, middle blocker Katie Trammel lines up alongside Sharp to provide a monster block — Trammel is 6-foot-1 and Sharp is three inches taller. Teams that can get it through that block tend to have to success, but it's often a case of "return to sender."

Canyon Ridge's Om Basnet battles for the ball against Twin Falls' Axel Pihl during their game Aug. 28 at Canyon Ridge High School in Twin Falls.

DREW NASH • TIMES NEWS

3A Boys Soccer is Very Interesting

Gooding looks to be asserting itself as the team to beat in the High Desert Conference, but just a week or so ago four teams — Gooding, Buhl, the Community School and Wendell — were all tied atop the league table, well ahead of Bliss, Declo and Filer. Now it's the Community School and Wendell trying to keep pace with Gooding, with Buhl slipping off the pace a bit. But the real intrigue will start at the district tournament, where those four frontrunners will be expected to advance out of the elimination round and vie for three — yes, three — state tournament berths. District IV is looking even more formidable in 2013 than usual, and that's saying something.

Bruins Again Cruising

The Twin Falls volleyball team is on cruise control through the Great Basin Conference season, once again controlling the matches against all comers. That's not a good thing for anybody, though, as evidenced by last weekend's showing at the Bonneville-Hillcrest Classic. Twin Falls views itself as a contender for the state championship, but it will have to break through against Bonneville (knocked Twin Falls out of that tournament in the quarterfinals), Skyview (won the tournament) or Century (three-time reigning state champions). Twin Falls has been stuck on fourth place the last three years, and it looks like there's still some room to go to crack that top three. Fortunately for the Bruins, there's still almost another month of play to find another gear. Even last week, Twin Falls runners dominated the top of the District IV leader board in the boys cross country time charts. While the Bruins still have two top runners in Jeremy Stark and Matt Schenk, along with rising runner Colton Biedenbach, it's Jerome that has made the biggest move of late, pinning two of its own runners in the top six. Twin Falls has three runners in the top five, however, and has a fourth in the top 10. This sport, perhaps more than any other, is about peaking late, however. Twin Falls has thrown down its marker as the team to beat in the district, but the Tiger front-runners are at least making the Bruins think about it a little bit.

SPORTS SHORTS

Govt. Shutdown Puts Service Academy Sports on Hold

WASHINGTON • Army, Navy and Air Force might be forced to skip their football games next weekend because of the budget impasse in Congress.

The Defense Department temporarily suspended sports competition at the service academies Tuesday as a result of the partial government shutdown.

A Pentagon spokesman, Army Col. Steve Warren, said the decision was being reviewed by lawyers to determine whether the funds used for such activities are congressionally appropriated.

Meantime, the suspension put a pair of college football games in jeopardy: Army at Boston College, and Air Force at Navy.

The U.S. Naval Academy said in a statement that a decision will be made by noon Thursday about whether the Midshipmen will play the Air Force. Navy's football team did practice Tuesday.

Air Force associate athletic director Troy Garnhart said travel for his sports teams was being halted — including for Saturday's football game at Annapolis, Md.

RSL Falls in Open Cup Final

SANDY, Utah • Lewis Neal scored in the 45th minute and D.C. United won its third U.S. Open Cup title with a 1-0 victory over Real Salt Lake on Tuesday night.

United last won the Cup in 2008.

RSL controlled the possession and had more scoring chances during the first half, but couldn't crack United's defense.

Neal collected a loose ball in the box and the midfielder slotted it inside the right post past a diving Nick Rimando.

Salt Lake kept attacking in the second half.

Sebastian Velasquez unleashed a left-footed shot from distance that hit off the crossbar in the 59th minute. That set up a corner kick that RSL couldn't convert.

United goalie Bill Hamid deflected Alvaro Saborio's volley in the 81st minute and caught Devon Sandoval's bicycle kick in the 94th.

Indy Officials Announce Details of New May Race

INDIANAPOLIS • The Indianapolis Motor Speedway will open two days earlier than expected to accommodate the new Grand Prix of Indianapolis road race.

Track officials announced Tuesday that the inaugural May 10 race will be televised by ABC. Practice begins May 8 with qualifying scheduled for May 9.

The current road course will undergo major changes, including new corners, longer passing zones and bigger, taller mounds so fans can see more racing. A second road course configuration is expected to be added for the MotoGP. Hulman & Co. CEO Mark Miles said the entire project is expected to cost about $5 million, which could come out of the $100 million fund approved by the state government last spring and that speedway officials hope to increase overall attendance by 50 percent by 2018.

Presidents Cup Can Do Without the Comparisons

ASSOCIATED PRESS

DUBLIN, Ohio • The Presidents Cup is a lot like The Players Championship. No one really talks about it until it's time to play. And too much time is spent comparing it with something it will never be instead of enjoying it for what it is.

At least no one can joke the Presidents Cup is match play between the United States and Florida.

This year, only four players on this International team have homes in Florida. One lives in North Carolina, one in Virginia, another in Idaho. And it's a home game for Jason Day of Australia, who lives about 10 miles away in Westerville and is an honorary member at Muirfield Village.

But it has nothing to do with where these guys live or where they play. Remember, the most recent Ryder Cup at Medinah was a home game for Luke Donald of England. And only two players from Europe's team are not PGA Tour members.

The Presidents Cup can never equal the passion, pride and excessive hype of the Ryder Cup, just like The Players Championship can have all the trappings of a major championship without ever being considered one. Those vested in the Presidents Cup — mainly anyone who works for the PGA Tour — will argue that it's only a matter of time. No one paid that much attention to the Ryder Cup when it was first starting out. Now it rivals the Masters as must-see TV.

That's missing the point. Europe has a real flag, not one that someone designed exclusively for a golf tournament.

More than playing for a flag, Europe plays for its tour. Pdraig Harrington said it best a decade ago when he referred to the European Tour as the “country cousin” of the PGA Tour. It's not as big, not as rich, not as popular. They have something to prove one week every two years. It's the success of the Ryder Cup — and that success comes from beating up on the Americans every other year — that pumps much-needed money into the European Tour.

Golf fans from European countries build their year-round travel to the Ryder Cup, home and away. The International team comes from Argentina and Japan, South Africa and Australia. The biggest draw this week in Ohio might be Graham DeLaet of Canada, a proud golf nation and not terribly far away from central Ohio.

“We are going to have a lot of support from the Canadians, and I think we're going to have a lot of people down here from Canada in the next four or five days, so good for him,” International captain Nick Price said.

Safe to say there hasn't been a big rush for tickets from Zimbabwe. Or Argentina.

So why bother with the Presidents Cup?

Mainly because it's an opportunity, and that should be enough.

“When we started out with the Presidents Cup, the initial guys — myself, Greg (Norman) and Ernie (Els) — we so enjoyed watching the Ryder Cup and so wanted to be a part of the Ryder Cup-type format,” Price said. “And then the Presidents Cup came along, and that was fantastic.”

Shutdown May Stretch into Debt-limit Fight

THE WASHINGTON POST

WASHINGTON • Washington began bracing for a prolonged government shutdown on Tuesday, with House Republicans continuing to demand that the nation's new health-care law be delayed or repealed and President Barack Obama and the Democrats refusing to give in. There were signs on Capitol Hill that Republicans — knowing that blame almost certainly will fall most heavily on them — are beginning to look for ways to lift some of the pressure.

House GOP leaders pushed a new approach to end the impasse, offering to fund some parts of the government — including national parks, veterans benefits and the District of Columbia government. The goal was to put Democrats on the spot by trying to make them vote against programs that are popular among their constituents.

Senate Democrats and the White House quickly rejected the piecemeal strategy. And in a series of evening votes, Democrats helped defeat the measures on the House floor.

Obama made his second appearance in as many days to call on Republicans to fund the government. He was flanked in the White House Rose Garden by about a dozen uninsured people who will be eligible for benefits under the Affordable Care Act, which took effect Tuesday. The legislation, often derided by critics as Obamacare, remains unpopular, but polls suggest that the idea of closing the government to stop it is even more so.

employees were left to wonder when they would return to work.

The first government shutdown in 17 years took hold Tuesday in ways large and small.

About 800,000 federal employees were sent home — a number greater than the combined U.S. workforces of Target, General Motors, Exxon and Google.

“After next week, if we’re not working, I’m going to have to find a job,” said Robert Turner, a building mechanic at the Smithsonian’s American History museum in the nation’s capital. He was called in for part of the day to take out the trash, turn off the water and help close up the place.

The effects played out in a variety of ways, from scaled-back operations at federal prosecutors’ offices and the FBI to revoked permits for dozens of weddings at historic sites in Washington.

Campers and hikers at the was off-limits as well.

In Philadelphia, Paul Skilling of Northern Ireland wanted to see the Liberty Bell up close but had to settle for looking at the symbol of democracy through glass. And he wasn’t optimistic about the chances of visiting any landmarks in Washington, the next stop on a weeks-long visit.

“Politics is fantastic, isn’t it?” he said ruefully.

In New York, tourists who had hoped to see the Statue of Liberty were instead offered an hour harbor cruise.

“There has to be better ways to run the government than to get to a standstill like this,” said Cheryl Strahl, a disappointed visitor from Atascadero, Calif. “Why take it out on the national parks?”

The government closings did not stop the launch on Tuesday of the enrollment period for the online insurance marketplaces established under President Barack Obama’s health care overhaul — the program at the very heart of the dispute that produced the shutdown.

Obama Channels Clinton in Shutdown Showdown

BLOOMBERG NEWS

WASHINGTON • As President Barack Obama and Republicans maneuver to avoid taking the blame for the closing of the government, some of Obama’s top aides are drawing from a familiar playbook: the one they used during the last shutdown.

Five administration officials, including Treasury Secretary Jack Lew and budget director Sylvia Burwell, were central figures during the shutdowns of 1995 and 1996. That two-stage battle pitted a House Republican majority against Democratic President Bill Clinton and resulted in a public relations defeat for the Republicans.

Now, like Clinton, Obama is casting his Republican rivals as partisan warriors willing to put the country’s economic future at risk to score political points with their base.

While Clinton chided Republicans for putting “ideology ahead of common sense” in a 1995 address, Obama Tuesday accused House Republicans of waging an “ideological crusade” that threatens the entire economy.

“One faction of one party in one House of Congress in one branch of government shut down major parts of the government, all because they didn’t like one law,” he said.

He sought to reinforce for voters who is to blame in the standoff, calling it a “Republican shutdown.”

“There are certainly some echoes in the message,” said Leon Panetta, Obama’s former defense secretary who was Clinton’s chief of staff during the shutdowns. “We learned some very hard lessons.”

Among the other veterans of the Clinton White House who are now Obama advisers are Gene Sperling, director of the National Economic Council — a post he held under Clinton — as well as Bruce Reed, a former Clinton domestic policy adviser who’s now chief of staff to Vice President Joe Biden, and communications chief Jen Palmieri, who was deputy press secretary.

Mideast’s Old Recipe for Social Peace Backfires

ASSOCIATED PRESS

KHARTOUM, Sudan • Sudan’s deadly street riots, provoked by a near-doubling of fuel prices, highlight a problem that has become critical across the Middle East — the subsidies that for decades have kept down the cost of basic needs for societies where poverty is rife.

They pose a growing challenge to governments in the region, particularly in the aftermath of the Arab Spring uprisings. Fuel and food subsidies have become increasingly unaffordable, taking huge bites out of national budgets, and international lenders want to see such spending scaled back, but governments fear violent backlash.

The elimination of Sudan’s fuel subsidies last week hiked the price of such basics as bread, cooking gas and bus fares. The result was the worst unrest in the capital Khartoum in two decades, with a harsh government response and dozens reported killed.

Many Sudanese worry that their livelihood won’t survive without subsidies.

A widowed mother of seven who sells tea and home-made custard on the streets of Khartoum said she has switched from cooking with gas to coal, but that overall “life has become unbearable.”

Another vendor who had laid out colorful rings and necklaces on a sidewalk said his main challenge now was paying for transport, school fees and sandwiches for his three children. “There was nothing like this before,” the tall, slim man said of Sudan’s economic crisis, glancing nervously at a bank guard nearby.

Both vendors spoke on condition of anonymity for fear of getting caught up in the government’s crackdown.

Critics say the government has mismanaged the economy, using up resources during an oil boom while investing little in education, hospitals or agriculture. Sudan took a further hit with the secession of oil-rich South Sudan in 2011 while fighting rebels on three fronts. Faced with empty coffers and spiraling inflation, the government was finally forced to hit subsidies.

The case of Sudan, a vast country with one of the world’s poorest populations, is perhaps extreme. But the problem is widespread.

In Sudan, a country of 38 million people, the government had been promising since January to increase minimum wage and public sector salaries. After last week’s riots it announced one-time aid payments of $21 each to 500,000 families.

Suit Seeking Fast and Furious Documents Can Proceed

BLOOMBERG NEWS

WASHINGTON • The House Committee on Oversight and Government Reform's lawsuit seeking documents on Operation Fast and Furious can proceed after a federal judge denied the Justice Department's request to dismiss the case.

"The fact that this case arises out of a dispute between two branches of government does not make it non-justiciable," U.S. District Judge Amy Berman Jackson in Washington said on Monday.

"Supreme Court precedent establishes that the third branch has an equally fundamental role to play, and that judges not only may, but sometimes must, exercise their responsibility to interpret the Constitution and determine whether another branch has exceeded its power."

The Republican-controlled House committee sued to enforce a subpoena in the panel's inquiry into so-called gun walking. That practice allowed illegal gun purchases in the U.S. in an effort to link the weapons to Mexican gangs.

The committee is seeking documents describing internal Justice Department discussions about a February 2011 letter to lawmakers that U.S. Attorney General Eric Holder later said mistakenly contained incorrect information.

Representatives of the Justice Department didn't immediately respond after regular business hours to a phone call seeking comment on the ruling.

The case is Committee on Oversight and Government Reform v. Holder, 1:12-cv-01332, U.S. District Court, District of Columbia (Washington).

Clinton Praises Release of Bosnian War Papers

ASSOCIATED PRESS

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. • Gaining support for U.S. intervention in Bosnia two decades ago wasn't an easy sell for President Bill Clinton, even with some of his closest advisers, before he was backed by NATO and its airstrikes helped end ethnic killings in the region, according to newly released documents.

The CIA recently posted online more than 300 declassified documents related to the conflict, which Clinton is scheduled to discuss during a symposium Tuesday at his presidential center in Little Rock. Former Secretary of State Madeleine Albright and retired Gen. Wesley Clark also are scheduled to speak at the event, called "Bosnia, Intelligence, and the Clinton Presidency."

Bosnia's 1992-1995 war following the breakup of Yugoslavia left more than 100,000 people dead. Bosnia remained independent after the war ended, with the Day-pean support for military missions in bombing Bosnia in 1994 and 1995.

That's a contrast to President Barack Obama's current efforts to gain international support to intervene in Syria.

But the newly released documents show that it wasn't an easy sell for Clinton. At a February 1993 "principals" meeting at the White House, then-White House National Security Adviser Tony Lake cautioned that if they went ahead with air strikes "at the end of the road, we would be under great pressure to help implement a settlement including with forces on the ground."

Albright, then the U.S. ambassador to the United Nations, told the group that "deciding to use American forces in Bosnia would be crossing the Rubicon. But we should think about whether sweeping the problem under the rug creates more problems" according to notes from the meeting.

AT A GLANCE

Netanyahu: Israel Won't Let Iran Get Nuclear Weapons
UNITED NATIONS (AP) • Israeli Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu played the spoiler Tuesday to any easing of Iran's relations with the West, telling world leaders his country will do whatever it takes to prevent Tehran from developing nuclear weapons, even if it has to stand alone.

Speaking at the U.N. General Assembly, Netanyahu asserted that Iranian President Hassan Rouhani must have known about a terror attack on a Buenos Aires Jewish community center in 1994, as well as the 1996 bombing in Saudi Arabia that killed 19 Americans, because he was national security adviser at the time.

Last week, President Barack Obama and the Iranian leader spoke on the phone, the highest level contacts between their countries in 34 years.

Netanyahu said Israel's future is threatened by a "nuclear-armed" Iran seeking its destruction and urged the international community to keep up pressure through sanctions.

"Israel will not allow Iran to get nuclear weapons," he said. "If Israel is forced to stand alone, Israel will stand alone, but in standing alone Israel will know that we will be defending many, many others," Netanyahu added.

Manufacturing Expands at Best Pace in Years
WASHINGTON (AP) • U.S. factory activity expanded last month at the fastest pace in 2 1/2 years, an encouraging sign that manufacturing could lift economic growth and hiring in the coming months.

The Institute for Supply Management, a trade group of purchasing managers, said Tuesday that its manufacturing index rose in September to 56.2, the highest since April 2011. That's up from 55.7 in August and the fourth straight increase in the index. A reading above 50 indicates growth.

Manufacturers added jobs last month at the fastest pace in more than a year and ramped up production, the survey showed. They also received new orders at a healthy pace, though slower than in August.

US Home Prices Rise 12.4 Percent from Year Ago
WASHINGTON (AP) • U.S. home prices climbed 12.4 percent in August from a year ago, fueled by more buyers bidding on a limited supply of houses.

Real estate provider CoreLogic says prices also increased 0.9 percent in August from July. But the gain was half the 1.8 percent increase in July from June. The group said higher mortgage rates and the end of the summer buying season likely slowed the gain.

Prices rose in every state compared with the previous year, and in 99 of the 100 largest cities. Akron, Ohio was the only area to report a decline.

Mortgage rates have risen about a full percentage point since May. Some analysts worry that higher rates could slow home sales.

Motorcyclists beat SUV driver
NEW YORK (AP) • A man driving with his family along a New York City highway was attacked and beaten by a large group of motorcyclists who first surrounded his SUV and stopped it on the road, then chased him for miles after he plowed through the blockade of bikes in an attempt to escape.

One biker suffered two broken legs and other severe injuries when the SUV ran over him, police said. A second biker suffered a leg injury. The driver, who was traveling with his wife and toddler, was taken to a hospital where he required stitches to his face.

The frightening assault on the 33-year-old man began around 1:30 p.m. Sunday on Manhattan's West Side Highway and was partially captured on a helmet-mounted video camera worn by one of the riders involved in the chase.
