Low Reservoirs Worry Next Year's Water Users

Low water levels are shown at Jackson Lake in Wyoming on Aug. 30.

Levels haven't been this low since 2007, official says.

TWIN FALLS • If Idaho's upcoming winter season fails to provide a strong snowpack, water users could face crippling water shortages next year.

The Upper Snake River Valley, from Jackson, Wyo. to Twin Falls, is nearly hitting the bottom of its eight-reservoir system. While reservoirs are always low in October, water users are noticing an alarmingly large absence of carry-over water.

Water users made up of farmers, anglers and recreationist must now wait and see, being completely dependent on what Mother Nature decides to dump on the mountains in the next few months.

Early, long-range forecasts predict average-to-above-average precipitation levels for Idaho starting from now until December, said Dave Groenert, meteorologist with the National Weather Service.

"So far, it's a neutral year. No strong signal that we're going to have an El Nino or La Nina. That's driving the forecast for the precipitation to be near normal in the next three months."

Dave Groenert, meteorologist with the National Weather Service

More detailed information on Idaho's snowpack won't become available until November, he said.

"So far, it's a neutral year," Groenert said. "No strong signal that we're going to have an El Nino or La Nina. That's driving the forecast for the precipitation to be near normal in the next three months."

Yet an average snowfall might not be enough to drench the Magic Valley's thirsty crops next summer, said Brian Olmstead, manager of the Twin Falls Canal Co.

In a good year, Jackson Lake Reservoir has an average of 75,000-acre-feet of water for carryover until the next year. This year, the reservoir is holding about 23,000-acre-feet. (An acre foot is enough water to cover one acre of water one foot deep.)

As of Friday, American Falls was just 4 percent full, holding 6,000-acre-feet of water when on average it should hold 40,000-acre-feet this time of year. Palisades Reservoir was holding about 9,000-acre-feet when it typically contains 55,000-acre-feet.

The last time the reservoirs dropped to such a low level was in 2007, Olmstead said. The canal company was forced to reduce delivery rates immediately rather than being able to hold off to the remainder of the season.

Drought also plagued south-central Idaho from 2001-2005, teaching farmers the importance of rotating crops that rely on less water in the hotter months like June or July.

"I'm hopeful we'll have a good year," Olmstead said.

Last year's low snowpack led to even lower streamflow levels. If the weather patterns are repeated this winter, anglers and recreationists will also feel the effects of the lack of water.

Many state-managed fisheries rely solely on reservoirs for water, said Doug Megargle, regional fisheries manager for the Idaho Department of Fish and Game.

Yet in low water years, reservoirs are often drained to meet irrigation needs and leave fisheries depleted. The fisheries learn to adapt to the amount of water they are given each year, but it does make difficult to support healthy fish, Megargle said.

"Everybody is watching snowpack," he said. "It's a frustrating game because there's nothing we can do about it."

Wishes Just Might Come True

Twin Falls High School Senior wants to help with your bucket list.

BY TETONA DUNLAP

TWIN FALLS • What do you want to do before you die?

Kelley Jund, 17, a senior at Twin Falls High School wants to know. She may be able to help you accomplish it.

This summer, Jund decided that her senior project should center on finding ways to help people accomplish items on their bucket list. Senior projects are a graduation requirement and students either have to choose a project that is career-focused, community-oriented or academically beneficial. Students then present their projects to the public at the end of the school year.

"People make bucket lists as they contemplate the end. My goal for this fundraiser is to help people achieve their bucket lists today, instead of waiting until it's too late," Jund wrote on her project's website. "I want people to realize their dreams and find the true meaning in their lives now."

Jund came up with the idea for her project "Reasons Why I Live" after coming across "The Buried Life" on Netflix.

"The Buried Life" aired for two seasons on MTV before it was canceled

Move to Learn, Play to Grow

Annual education conference focuses on the importance of movement in the classroom.

TWIN FALLS • The day's lesson: Get your students out of their desks and onto the floor.

And why not join in? After all, teachers need to get a brain boost as well.

That was the theme of one morning session called "Play to Grow" Saturday at the Snake River Association for the Education of Young Children's fall conference on the campus of the College of Southern Idaho.

The topic of this year's SRAEYC conference was "Move to Learn, Play to Grow" and featured Christine Roberts, founder of Nurturing Pathways, an early childhood dance program based out of Seattle that promotes healthy development and strong bonds between parents and infants.

Aubrie McArthur, CSI toddler- and preschool-lab facilitator and conference organizer, said she decided to invite Roberts after seeing her present

Cable ONE Replaces Some Missing Turner Channels

TIMES-NEWS

TWIN FALLS • Cable ONE is temporarily replacing missing Turner Networks programming that was dropped last week with previews of new channels, said Trish Niemann, public relations manager, in an email to the Times-News.

The Hallmark Channel will be shown temporarily on the Turner Classic Movie Channel, Science Channel will temporarily air on TNT, and the Game Show Network will be shown on Cartoon Network, Niemann said. These channels will start previewing in most markets by Wednesday, she said. Cable ONE is continuing to examine possible channels to be shown on CNN and TBS. The company will provide more information about that programming as it becomes available.

Cable ONE announced the removal of Turner Network channels CNN, CNN en Espanol, Headline News, Turner Classic Movies, TruTV and Boomerang following the expiration of the Cable ONE/Turner Network contract Oct. 1.

Following this announcement, Turner Network deauthorized signals to TNT, TBS and the Cartoon Network, despite the fact that Cable ONE has a valid contract to continue carriage of these channels, Niemann said.

“Turner has chosen to punish our customers by deauthorizing the signals for these channels so that they will no longer receive them,” Niemann said. “We believe that they have deauthorized these channels in retaliation for us dropping their less popular programming.”

In a statement on Turner’s website, the company claims that Cable ONE is not authorized to broadcast TNT, TBS and the Cartoon Network.

“We are simply asking that Cable One pay the established and accepted rates already in the marketplace for our portfolio and remain willing to discuss a new agreement that recognizes the strength and value of our networks and the popular programming they offer,” www.turner.com.

Cable ONE has announced that they will be crediting customers based on how many channels they lost. Customers do not need to call in to receive their credit – it will automatically be applied to an upcoming billing statement.

For more information about this negotiation, access www.StopProgrammingHikes.com/turner.

Two Girls Hospitalized After ATV Crash

Mormon Leader Defends Stance vs. Same-sex Marriage

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) • More states and nations may legalize same-sex marriage, but human laws cannot “make moral what God has declared immoral,” a top Mormon leader said Sunday.

Apostle Dallin H. Oaks, in an address at the Mormon church’s biannual general conference in Salt Lake City, said the faith’s stance against same-sex marriage might be misunderstood or prompt accusations of bigotry.

But he urged members to remember that their first priority is to serve God, and The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints’ policies are based on God’s decrees, The Salt Lake Tribune reported.

An LDS eternal perspective does not allow members “to condone such behaviors or to find justification in the laws that permit them,” Oaks said.

Cassia County law enforcement used a Drug Enforcement Administration helicopter to airlift 3,300 marijuana plants from the Rock Creek Canyon of the Sawtooth National Forest.

Investigation Continues into Summer’s 3,300-Plant Pot Bust in Cassia

BY C. COLT CRANE
ccrane@magicvalley.com

BURLEY • Hikers in the Cassia County portion of Rock Creek Canyon happened upon a large marijuana grow operation last spring and it was their tip to authorities that led to the eradication of 3,300 plants with an estimated street value of $6.6 million.

No arrests have been made but the case remains under investigation.

Cassia County Sheriff Jay Heward said grow sites are uncommon to Cassia County and several years have passed since the last large grow operation was discovered.

“We have some leads from some good sources, but that’s about all I can say right now,” said Cassia County Sheriff Detective Sgt. Dan Renz.

“I personally suspect that there are more grows around. We have a lot of land to cover in Cassia County and it would take days to cover it all with a helicopter.”

Heward talked about the difficulty in tracking down the people responsible for the marijuana sites.

“The investigation will continue, but it’s tough to find them,” he said. “A lot of these operations use foreign nationals to run the sites. Once a week, someone will come up and drop a foodstuff on the side of a road in the weeds and they’ll collect it and just stay on the site. They just live up there and it’s hard to track.”

With the eradication operation behind them, Cassia County law enforcement officials shared more details about the raid Aug. 22.

“In the spring time, hikers came across a grow that was underway. The site had been moved from where the hikers had found it, but we had a good idea that it hadn’t been moved to far from that initial site,” said Renz.

Renz said the site was only visible from the air and to find a site would have taken a person on foot days to walk through the entire canyon in hopes of finding it.

“These guys know what they’re doing. They know how to disguise it and how to keep it hidden pretty well. The only way to really find it is to locate it from a helicopter.”

“These guys know what they’re doing,” Renz said. “They know how to disguise it and how to keep it hidden pretty well. The only way to really find it is to locate it from a helicopter.”

Cassia County narcotics officers were able to fly over the foothills and find the grow site. Heward said the federal government is a big part of making these operations possible.

“It’s the Drug Enforcement Administration that’s paying the bill,” Heward said. “If it wasn’t for the federal funding, Cassia County wouldn’t be able to put a helicopter in the air and pay for all of that.”

The Cassia County Sheriff’s Office, with the aid of state and federal law enforcement, identified and removed an expansive marijuana grow site from the Sawtooth National Forest.

“When we get these tips, we follow up on them and quite often we find evidence of grow sites and other activities,” said Cassia County Undersheriff George Warrell. “We had a lot of cooperation. We work close with these other agencies and it really helps.”

The August eradication was completed with cooperation from the Minidoka County Sheriff’s Office, Idaho State Police and the Drug Enforcement Administration.

Sheriff’s offices from Twin Falls County and Gooding County also assisted in the drug removal.

“A key component of this operation was the assistance we received from the DEA,” Heward said. “We used a helicopter to find the site and remove the plants. In the past it’s typically been through the military or the DEA hiring contractors to come fly for marijuana in as many Idaho counties as they can. Cassia’s been fortunate to get the use of a helicopter because we have a lot of BLM and federal forest land in our county.”

Public safety is a big concern for law enforcement officials when it comes to marijuana grow sites. According to Renz, large operations typically have protection in the form of booby traps and other safeguards.

“Luckily, we didn’t find any traps, but we are trained to deal with that type of security,” Renz said. “Our main priority is public safety. We have a public concern for civilian safety because these sites are fairly easy to come across. It’s rugged terrain. I broke my leg going in there, but it’s accessible.”

Renz also stated that the grow site was watered by a complex system of pipes tapped directly into natural springs and water sources in the Rock Creek Canyon.

“That time of year, there’s no shortage of water,” said Renz. “All a person would need to do is just dam up the water and funnel the water through a pipe and they’d have all the water they’d need.”

After the site was located, officers spent the next day removing the plants from the area with the help of the DEA helicopter.

National Guard Members to Return to Work

BOISE (AP) • Most Idaho National Guard members furloughed due to the government shutdown will return to work this week.

Col. Tim Marsano in a statement on Sunday says some members will return to work Monday, and most will return on Tuesday.

The move comes after Defense Secretary Chuck Hagel ordered nearly all 350,000 furloughed Defense Department civilian employees back on the job.

Hagel says he based his decision on a Pentagon interpretation of a law called the Pay Our Military Act, which was passed shortly before the partial government shutdown began.

About 850 Idaho National Guard employees were placed on furlough.

A World War II Veteran Who Cut Hair for 70 Years

BY JULIE WOOTTON
jwootton@magicvalley.com

BURLEY • Orvis Dilworth's barbershop in Burley is all closed up now, but inside it looks like he never left.

Behind two old barber chairs, there's a long counter with an antique cash register sitting on top of it.

The floor is worn out behind one of the chairs — a reminder of how many years Orvis spent in that position cutting hair.

As they stood inside his shop Friday, two of his daughters — Dena Bodily and Deborah Rogers — recalled that a lot of Mini-Cassia residents got a haircut from their father over the years.

Even though Orvis' barbershop is closed now, a sign in the window next to a swirling barbershop pole reads "Yes, We're Open."

Over the years, Orvis took his wife and six children on trips, but they'd have to be back by Monday night or Tuesday morning so he could be at work.

"Very seldom did he miss a day of work," Deborah said. Dilworth, 94, died Sept. 29.

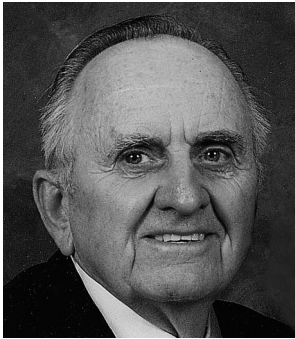

Orvis was a lifelong south-central Idaho resident, except about three years serving in World War II.

He experienced a shift in the way of life in the area, Deborah said, such as from horse and buggy to cars.

Deborah said her father had a good sense of humor. And Dena recalled that her father had a lot of "cute little sayings."

He had a lot of stories he used to tell, such as from his childhood and time serving in World War II.

After growing up in Carey,

Orvis Dilworth

he served a church mission and then enlisted in the U.S. Marines when he was 23 years old.

Before the war, he planned on being a farmer. But one comment to a fellow Marine led to a change in plans.

While he was serving, the Marines needed a barber. Orvis commented to a man next to him during a routine inspection that he sheared a sheep once.

Once the general heard that, he hired Orvis as a barber.

That was just the start of his work cutting hair for 71 years. He didn't retire until age 93.

As a barber in the military, he gave men a haircut and made sure they were cleaned up before going into combat.

He was paid 25 cents for each haircut and was able to send some of that money home to his parents.

While he was in the Marines, Orvis also made sure his troops got decent food if they received spoiled surplus meals.

While on the ship, he also volunteered to conduct services for The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

Many documents, articles and pictures from Orvis' time in World War II are kept in sheet protectors in a binder.

His career as a barber started in Carey and continued Mountain Home Air Force Base and in Burley.

Over his 51-year career in Burley, Orvis' barbershop moved several times after buildings burned down.

Now, his barbershop on East 21st Street sits empty. But nearby in an adjoining building, customers come in for haircuts, including from Dena.

Deborah said her father was a friend to everyone.

"He always had a nice word to say to people," Dena said.

Orvis fixed up the barbershop to make it wheelchair accessible, Deborah said. And he'd make sure people could walk safely back to their car.

Orvis provided many free haircuts over the years, including for missionaries and for those who couldn't afford to pay.

And he gave haircuts in exchange for items, ranging from tools to potatoes.

A number of his family members have followed in his footsteps and are cutting hair for a living.

Deborah said her father was great with children and had lots of trinkets in the shop to keep them entertained.

A bookshelf in the corner is full of little items, including a couple of paper fans and rudimentary wooden toys.

Clothes to Colorado Flood Victims

Mini-Cassia drive to help residents of devastated area.

BURLEY • Mini-Cassia volunteers are stepping up to help Boulder, Colo., flood victims replace lost clothing.

Wildfires destroyed hundred of homes near Boulder over the past two years, and recent flooding spurred by the fires "has had a devastating effect on that area," said Cindy McWilliams, an organizer of the Caring for Colorado clothing drive.

Fellow organizer Joan Parr said the group is seeking winter clothing, but all new or gently used items will be accepted. New personal care items, linens and pillows will be accepted, along with gently used blankets.

"But if someone is cleaning out their closet and they have summer clothing, we'll take that also," said McWilliams.

The clothing drive will be Oct. 12 and 19 in Mini-Cassia, with tax-deductible receipts available. Donations also can be dropped off during regular business hours at six locations in Mini-Cassia.

The items will be shipped Oct. 20 to the Colorado

Caring for Colorado volunteers Cindy McWilliams, right, and Joan Parr sort donated clothing that will benefit Colorado flood victims.

Caring for Colorado

A clothing drive to help Boulder, Colo., flood victims replace lost clothing is underway. Tax-deductible receipts will be available for clothing taken to the McGregor Center, CSI or the Ambulatory Surgery Center of Burley on Oct. 12 and Oct. 19. To have donations picked up, call Peggy Moore, 208-436-0750. For information on how to donate money or volunteer, call Joan Parr at 208-431-4065.

Once, Orvis ended up with a rotator cuff injury after skiing with an exchange student who was staying at his house.

While he was injured, he couldn't lift his arms very high while cutting hair.

As she sat in one of the barber chairs, Deborah demonstrated how the customers would have to move in different positions so her father could cut their hair.

Some customers came to the barbershop for decades, she said.

Orvis's wife Florence — who died one-and-a-half years ago — had dementia toward the end of her life. He didn't want to leave her at home by herself.

Deborah pointed out a dark turquoise chair in the barbershop where her mother would sit and watch.

"She would always be there right by him," she said.

Deborah said her father was a compassionate man and would hold Florence's hand as they walked in and out of the barbershop.

When he wasn't working, Orvis tended to a large vegetable garden.

"He just had a green thumb," Deena said, and could grow anything.

The only year he didn't plant a garden was this year since he broke his hip in May.

Dena said her father enjoyed crafting knives and made many during the last few years of his life.

In a room just off the barbershop, there's a large shop filled with equipment and saw blades hanging on the wall. It's a place where Orvis worked on projects.

"If he wasn't cutting a head of hair, he was definitely doing something else," Deborah said.

Bucket List

in 2011. The show followed four friends who went around the country crossing items off their lists while helping strangers accomplish their dreams.

Lund said one component of her project is to raise the $11,000 needed to bring the guys from the "The Buried Life" to speak in Twin Falls. So far, Jund raised $3,200 from local sponsors. She has a "Celebrity Teacher Night" fundraiser scheduled from noon to 10 p.m. Oct. 19 at Dairy Queen, 805 Blue Lakes Blvd. N. in Twin Falls. Teachers from TFHS will serve ice cream cones and part of the money will go toward her project.

On Lund's website, people are invited to submit their own bucket list and a biography. Current bucket lists on the website are from family and friends, but Lund said submission is open to the community.

"I'm going to have a small committee and we will decide who we will help," she said. "When you submit, tell me why you want to do it. Obviously, I don't want to do it if it's not that important to you."

On Wednesday, Lund made her first bucket list dream come true.

Lund's friend, Victoria Sefcsik, a senior at Twin Falls High School, always wanted to meet Josh Groban.

So Lund said when she found out Groban was performing in Idaho, she called the Taco Bell Arena and talked with Groban's tour manager.

They looked at her website and liked her project so much they invited Lund, Sefcsik and four friends to the concert to meet Groban. They also offered tickets to anyone in the high school's choir program.

"I still can't believe it," Sefcsik said. "I grew up with Josh Groban. My parents played his music when I was little. I always looked up to him as an idol. ... It's incredible to meet and shake hands with your idol, an experience that I won't forget."

Sefcsik submitted a bucket list to help her friend get the project going, but she had no idea she would actually be Lund's first project.

"(Lund's project) is really unique. I wouldn't have thought of it at all," Sefcsik said. "I looked at her and said, 'So, who are we going to contact next?' Because it was really fun. I think it will inspire others and be a nice little reaction."

For now, Lund said she will try to help those she thinks she can.

"A lot of people want to go sky diving or surfing. I've called places around here," she said. "One girl wants to get in a food fight and wants to get hit with mashed potatoes. I want to make that happen."

Lund said her project has the ability to connect people who can help with those looking to fulfill a lifelong dream.

Some items on Lund's bucket list: Swim with dolphins, impact someone's life, perform with Ed Sheeran and bring "The Buried Life" to Twin Falls.

This summer, she marked one off her list and started taking guitar lessons.

"At first, it just seemed so big I was kind of overwhelmed. I thought, 'Oh my gosh, how is she going to get this going?' But she really sold me on it," said Gail Richardson, Lund's senior project mentor. "I can't believe how much she's accomplished with this project. She's a go-getter."

In the process of helping Lund with the project, Richardson said it made her reflect on her own goals in life. Some items on her bucket list included learning to paint and writing stories down for her children.

As a result, Richardson started taking art classes.

"That's one unique thing about the bucket list. Some people have exotic things on their lists, but some of mine were not that far fetched. It was things I didn't really think about wanting to accomplish. It's not just about thinking about it, but doing it."

Police Identify Suspect in Fatal Hit and Run

BOISE (AP) • Police in Boise say they have identified the driver of a vehicle that struck and killed a pedestrian on State Street and then fled the area.

Police say an arrest warrant has been issued for 24-year-old Adam D. Weinert. He faces a charge of leaving the scene of a crash resulting in injury or death.

Police say Weinert struck the person at about 1:15 a.m. Friday and then drove away.

The person was taken to a local hospital where he died of his injuries.

Helping Others

Lighthouse Christian students volunteer in refugee community, learn about their neighbors.

BY TETONA DUNLAP
tdunlap@magicvalley.com

TWIN FALLS • Elly Manley tapped the shoulder of Hawng Lum Tangbau. Elly, 8, wanted to know how to ask a young Burmese girl to play. “Gasarmae,” Tangbau, an interpreter and English teacher at the College of Southern Idaho Refugee Center, replied. Moments later, Manley and other third and fourth-grade students from Lighthouse Christian School joined hand in hand to play “Ring Around the Rosie” with refugee children on the lawn. On Friday, 155 elementary students from Lighthouse Christian School did their part to better the lives of Twin Falls’ refugee population. Some first and second-graders washed the windows of police cars, while other students in grades 3-5 raked leaves, mopped floors and read books to children living at two Twin Falls apartment buildings that house about 40 refugee families. Bishnu Siwakoti, a refugee from Bhutan, watched as her grandson ate a cookie and read a book with some of the Lighthouse students. “I’d like to thank the kids for doing this,” Siwakoti said through an interpreter. This is the 19th year the Lighthouse Christian School has held a community service day, said principal Allison Hamilton. The school performs two service days a year, in the fall and spring. This was the first year students had the opportunity to volunteer in the refugee community, Hamilton said. “I wanted the kids to be educated and, in order to make a difference in society, they need to know how to help,” Hamilton said. “I want our kids to be selfless. We don’t have to go across the world to help. The world is right here.” Fifth grade teacher Nicole Tabb said, even though the refugee summer school program is housed inside Lighthouse, staff and students wanted to be further involved with the refugee community. “The kids started asking questions like, ‘What is a refugee?” Tabb said. “Some of the kids didn’t know what that was.” Refugee center staff members Tara McFarland and Ben King visited the students to give a presentation on the refugee center and the people it helps. They also assisted in coordinating the day of service Friday at Town Crest Manor apartments and the 203 Eden St. building, where students washed windows. “We went to the school and introduced them to the process these guys have to go through to get to America. They learned to appreciate what American kids have growing up,” McFarland said.

But McFarland said the students wanted to learn more than who a refugee was. They wanted to know how they could help and how they could welcome them. “They had a lot of insightful questions. I was surprised how intelligent the questions were,” McFarland said. King said each year the center helps an average of 300 refugees resettle in the Magic Valley. Lauren Gomez, 10, a fifth-grader at Lighthouse said she had an idea what a refugee was, but didn’t know where they lived until her visit. “I learned that just because they might be (from another country) they are like me and I can still play with them,” Gomez said. Chance Gaskill, 10, said he didn’t know who or where refugees lived. But, after playing a couple rounds of tag, Gaskill had a better understanding of the refugee community in Twin Falls. “It’s just full of fun people and just because they are not from America they are not any different,” he said.

Bingham County Sheriff Wants More Court Security

POCATELLO (AP) • Increased security measures are planned for the Bingham County Courthouse, Sheriff Craig Rowland says. Rowland told the Idaho State Journal that he’s planning to hire two full-time and two part-time employees. He’s hoping to obtain money for a metal detector and a machine to scan bags and other items. “I think that with society nowadays, it is important to have security at the courthouse,” Rowland said. “I want (court) employees to feel safe and the public to feel safe.” Rowland said court officials have felt threatened during some incidents in the past. He said the changes likely won’t be in place until next year. He said the new employees would run the metal detector and scanner, and also be available to respond to disturbances in the courthouse. They’d also help out in the jail. In the nearby Bannock County Courthouse, a metal scanning system has been in place for years. Bannock County Sheriff Lorin Nielsen said court marshals use a camera to monitor the systems and unlock doors to let through those who have been cleared. The court marshals are also assigned to protect judges and citizens, and to make sure prisoners don’t try to escape. That courthouse had a shooting in the 1980s when a man upset with his ex-wife fired off rounds inside. No one was injured, Nielsen said. “We have not had anything like that since we established this security,” he said.

Police Investigating after Man Found Shot

POCATELLO (AP) • Police in eastern Idaho say they are investigating after a pickup crashed off Interstate 15 in Pocatello and the man inside had a gunshot wound. Pocatello Police Sgt. Justin Buck tells the Idaho State Journal that a weapon was recovered inside the vehicle and it appears the wound was self-inflicted. He says there’s no evidence the gunshot came from outside the vehicle before the crash about 6:30 p.m. Saturday. The man was taken to Portneuf Medical Center and underwent surgery. Buck says witnesses to the crash reported the man was alone in the vehicle before it went off the road. The vehicle went through a fence and stopped in at the back of a business.

OBITUARIES

Lyle Richard Piper

June 2, 1932 - Oct. 3, 2013

RICHFIELD

• On Oct. 3, 2013, Lyle Richard Piper, 81, started on his final horse-back ride in a lifetime filled with amazing rides to the top of nearly every mountain in Idaho.

Lyle was born June 2, 1932, to S.J. “Joe” Piper and Alice (Johnson) Piper, in Richfield. A true Idaho native, Lyle lived his whole life and died only four blocks from the house he was born in. His father owned and ran Piper’s store, and Lyle started working from a very young age. He delivered groceries from age 7, and spent his entire life serving the Richfield community.

Lyle graduated from Richfield H.S. in 1950, where he was a star in basketball and football, as well as a champion boxer. He then joined the Air Force to serve his country during the Korean War in 1951. He married his Richfield high school sweetheart, Betty J. Wood in 1954, and on his return from the Air Force in 1955, went to work at Piper’s Store. He purchased the store from his dad in 1957, where he worked as a grocer and custom meat cutter for another 41 years, until he sold the store to his son Mike in 1998.

Betty and Lyle, who were married for 59 years, were blessed with three children, Pamela, Kent and Mike. Lyle served on the Richfield City Board for many years, was an active member of the Lions Club and American Legion, where he initiated many community service projects, and was the Fire Chief for several years. For years before the town had a QRU, people called Lyle for all medical emergencies and he was instrumental in starting the original Quick Response Unit here.

Lyle was an avid and successful horseman, hunter and fisherman, who loved to ride his horses on the Idaho trails. With Gary and Boots Hubsmith, Leon Hubsmith, Ray Clayton, Son Mike and many friends, Lyle always rode to the top of the mountain, saying he felt closer to heaven up there. Lyle loved the outdoors and took his children and grandchildren to the hills often to go camping. He spent many days with grandson Trever cutting firewood. Lyle was a great basketball player and played Richfield Outlaw basketball league for over 30 years, with Gale Hansen, Pete Appell, Grant Flavel, Jay Ward and many other friends. He was also a great bowler and he spent many happy years bowling with La Rae Brown, Tim Sanders, Jerry Davis and Burl Akins. The Pipers loved a good poker game and Lyle played with many of his friends over the years, taking anyone’s money that he could get to play.

Lyle and Betty traveled extensively through the years with family and friends, going south for the winter and seeing most of North America.

Lyle is survived by his brother, Carl Piper (his partner in crime!) and family, his beloved wife, Betty Piper, his three children, Pam Piper, Kent Piper and his wife Debbie Piper and Mike Piper, as well as his six grandchildren, Trever, Cassey, Drew, Derek, Max and Lea; and 4 great-grandchildren, Ryelee, Nash, Payton and Paige.

Lyle never liked to ride back down the same trail, so we know for sure that he’s headed to the top to see what’s on the other side.

A celebration of life will be held at 3 p.m., Wednesday, Oct. 9, 2013, at the L.D.S. church in Richfield, with dinner to follow. Arrangements are under the care of Farnsworth Mortuary of Jerome. In lieu of flowers the family would suggest a donation to the Richfield Senior Citizen center, P.O. Box 195, Richfield, 83349.

Clara Dee Ostrander

Jan. 6, 1956 - Oct. 2, 2013

TWIN FALLS • Clara Dee Ostrander, age 57, passed away Wednesday Oct. 2, 2013, in Twin Falls. Clara made her final journey with her courageous daughter Lindsey, beside her, holding her hand in the final moments. Clara was born in Twin Falls on Jan. 6, 1956. She was adopted and raised by parents, Porter Harold “P.H.” Pringle and Mabel Stase Pringle. Along with her brother Porter Pringle, the Pringle family shared time between the Kimberly family farm and La Jolla, Calif.

After graduating high school in La Jolla, Calif., Clara attended the College of Idaho in Caldwell. It was there that she would meet her husband of 20 plus years, Steven Michael Ostrander. Clara and Steve would eventually bring in to this world, three loving children, Anthony “Tony” Ostrander, Lindsey Mae Ostrander and Rose Antoinette Ostrander. Steve and Clara would raise their three children on a family farm/ranch south of Hansen. Clara devoted her life to raising her children, and always found a way to be actively involved in their academic and athletic pursuits. Steve and Clara would eventually divorce in 1997. Clara chose to not remarry after this.

Clara was preceded in death by her father and mother, P.H. Pringle and Mabel Pringle.

Clara is survived by her three children, Tony (Shannon) Ostrander, Lindsey Ostrander and Rose Ostrander; two grandchildren, Kenna Ostrander, and Avery Ostrander, who also share a birthday with Clara on January 6; her brother, Porter Pringle; ex-husband, Steve Ostrander and her two dogs, Bernie and Bubba.

It was Clara’s wish that she not be grieved for in a funeral of death, but rather celebrated in a remembrance of her life. The time for this celebration will be determined for a later date, and following this, her ashes will be spread on a beach in the La Jolla, Calif. area that she loved so much.

Arrangements and cremation are under the care and direction of Heidi Heil and Serenity Funeral Chapel & Life Celebration Center in Twin Falls.

Federal Employees

US Government Work is Losing Cachet for Some

BY SAM HANANEL
Associated Press

WASHINGTON • There was a time when being a federal employee meant a steady paycheck, great benefits and pride in serving the country.

But these days, many federal workers are frustrated, anxious and growing tired of being pawns in a never-ending political struggle over government funding.

“The pay has fallen behind, the uncertainty of having a job from day to day, the stability which was a drawing factor for a large portion of the people is gone now,” said Tommy Jackson, an Air Force acquisitions manager in Warner Robins, Ga., who has spent 30 years in government.

Jackson, 54, is going through his second furlough of the year. He and his wife, Debbie, also a government employee, lost about $6,000 in wages this year when they were furloughed for six days each. Now the shutdown, and he said they are considering options to move into the private sector.

“That six-day furlough cost us a good bit of money,” he said. “I’m sitting out right now, I don’t know if it’ll be for a day, a month or two months. I don’t want to operate that way.”

Jackson spoke before the House voted 407-0 Saturday to reimburse federal workers for lost pay during the shutdown. The Senate has indicated that it will go along, and President Barack is expected to sign the bill.

For many, working for the government has long been a ticket to a middle-class lifestyle. Federal jobs offered flexibility, security, solid health care and pensions. Raises and promotions were common. Whatever happened to the economy, Uncle Sam never went bankrupt or threatened to close down.

But federal employees today are working under a three-year pay freeze. Earlier this year, many were furloughed when automatic spending cuts took hold, and about 800,000 were told not to report the money during the current shutdown. There are proposals in Congress to increase retirement contributions for government workers and politicians regularly lash out at federal workers as lazy, overpaid and unnecessary.

For Marcelo del Canto, a budget analyst for the Substance Abuse and Mental Health Services Administration in Rockville, Md., working for the government was supposed to be a respite from the ups and downs of the technology industry.

“I worked for some pretty big companies and a lot of these Internet companies that got hit by the dot com bust, so I went through a lot of bankruptcies, laying off workers,” del Canto said. “My wife said ‘You really need to get out of the private sector, the federal government is really the way to go.’”

Both del Canto and his wife, who also works for the government, have been furloughed and they worry about making the next mortgage payment on a house they purchased in March. He says he still loves his job, but “it’s a very uncomfortable and uneasy situation when you never know if we’re going to shut down. It’s just not something you can plan for and it impacts you on a real basis every day.”

Dan Delgado, a furloughed equipment mechanic at the Minneapolis-St. Paul Air Reserve Station, wonders if he should look for a backup job. Delgado, 49, a military veteran, said he had assumed Congress would avert a shutdown at the last minute.

Boehner: No Idea When Shutdown Ends

WASHINGTON (AP) • House Speaker John Boehner says he doesn’t know when the government shutdown will end and says it’s up to President Barack Obama to start negotiations.

The Ohio Republican said Sunday that he will not allow his GOP-led House to vote on a bill re-opening the government without serious talks about spending. He also says he will not go forward with a bill increasing the government’s borrowing authority without a similar conversation.

The government partially shut down last week amid Washington gridlock and faces a make-or-break deadline later this month about the nation’s borrowing power. Republicans have refused to budge without concessions on Democrats’ health care law. Democrats have resisted GOP efforts to dismantle that health care law.

House Approves Back Pay for Workers

BY JEFF SIMON
The Washington Post

As the fifth day of the federal government shutdown began, members of the House came together in a moment of rare bipartisanship to pass a bill, by a vote of 407 to 0, approving back pay for furloughed government workers.

President Obama has expressed his support for the measure.

Senate Majority Leader Harry M. Reid supports the measure, but said Saturday that if furloughed workers are guaranteed back pay, there’s no reason to keep them out of work.

“It’s really cruel to tell workers they’ll receive back pay once the government opens and then refuse to open the government,” Reid said on the Senate floor, suggesting that House Republicans have authorized a “paid vacation” for furloughed workers.

After the House vote, Republican leaders called on Senate Democrats and the president to extend the same courtesy to other groups of Americans hurt by the shutdown.

“If it’s important to ease the pain for [federal employees], what about the vets?” House Majority Leader Rep. Eric I. Cantor (R-Va.) said. “Do the Democrats not feel it’s important to ease the pain on them?”

The House has passed several bills providing funding for the National Institutes of Health and other areas of the federal government that have been financially weakened since the shutdown began Tuesday. The Senate has rejected each bill, insisting on a so-called “clean” funding bill that will reopen all parts of the government.

President Obama cancelled his scheduled trip Thursday to Indonesia for the Asia Pacific Economic Cooperation conference, citing his need to remain in Washington to help undo the congressional deadlock.

we’re going to pass one. The votes are not in the House to pass a clean debt limit, and the president is risking default by not having a conversation with us.”

Boehner also said he lacks the votes “to pass a clean CR,” or continuing resolution, a reference to the temporary spending bill without conditions that would keep the government operating. Democrats argue that their 200 members in the House plus close to two dozen pragmatic Republicans would back a so-called clean bill if Boehner just allowed a vote, but he remains hamstrung by his tea party-strong GOP caucus.

“Let me issue him a friendly challenge. Put it on the floor Monday or Tuesday. I would bet there are the votes to pass it,” said Sen. Chuck Schumer, D-N.Y.

In a series of Sunday television appearances, Lew warned that on Oct. 17, when he exhausts the bookkeeping maneuvers he has been using to keep borrowing, the threat of default would be imminent.

“I’m telling you that on the 17th, we run out of the ability to borrow, and Congress is playing with fire,” Lew said.

Lew said that while Treasury expects to have $30 billion of cash on hand on Oct. 17, that money will be quickly exhausted in paying incoming bills given that the government’s payments can run up to $60 billion on a single day.

Trade Official: Shutdown Hinders Effort to Seal Deals

BLOOMBERG NEWS

BALI, Indonesia • The partial U.S. government shutdown is hindering American efforts to negotiate trade deals with Asian and European nations and has put the promotion of exports on hold, the top U.S. trade official said.

“We’ve had to pull back on our negotiations, we’ve had to stop some of our enforcement efforts, we’re not able to monitor a lot of our existing agreements,” U.S. Trade Representative Michael Froman said in an interview Saturday with Bloomberg Television at the Asia-Pacific Economic Cooperation summit in Bali, Indonesia. The shutdown is “hurting the American economy and the creation of American jobs,” he said.

President Obama was to lead talks this week at the APEC summit with the presidents of 12 nations negotiating a Trans-Pacific Partnership trade agreement that the U.S. wants to complete this year. Instead, he canceled his trip in order to seek an end to the impasse with Republicans in Congress who demand changes to Obama’s health insurance legislation before approving a budget to keep the U.S. government operating.

First Cracks Appear in Tea Party as Some Begin to Yield on Affordable Care Act

BLOOMBERG NEWS

WASHINGTON • The first cracks are appearing in the tea party’s push to dismantle the nation’s health law as three House lawmakers with ties to the movement said they’d back a U.S. spending bill that doesn’t center on the Affordable Care Act.

Republican Reps. Blake Farenthold of Texas, Doug Lamborn of Colorado and Dennis Ross of Florida, all of whom identify with the tea party, said they’d back an agreement to end the government shutdown and lift the debt ceiling if it included major revisions to U.S. tax law, significant changes to Medicare and Social Security, and other policy shifts.

Meanwhile, House Speaker John Boehner, R-Ohio, said he doesn’t have the votes to pass an increase to the debt ceiling without packaging it with other provisions. There isn’t enough support to pass a “clean debt limit” provision, Boehner said in an interview on ABC’s “This Week” program Sunday.

The government remains shut down for the sixth day and just 11 days from when Treasury Secretary Jacob Lew told lawmakers the U.S. will exhaust measures to avoid breaching the debt limit. The budget standoff started when Republicans insisted on choking off funding for President Obama’s Affordable Care Act, which they often call Obamacare. The president has refused to negotiate.

“The president seems unwilling to give an inch on Obamacare, so, alright, where can we find other reforms?” Farenthold said in an interview at the Capitol Saturday, just after a vote on giving furloughed workers retroactive pay. “If we can make the same or bigger difference doing something other than Obamacare, I don’t see why we wouldn’t do it.”

Rep. Raul Labrador, R-Idaho, a leading voice in the fight against the health-care plan, said a change to the law “has to be on the table.”

“A one-year delay is still reasonable to ask for,” Labrador said in an interview.

Lawmakers tied to the tea party pushed Boehner last month to fight for major changes to the plan as part of the budget debate. That stalemate led to the first government shutdown since 1996 and is now bleeding into a debate over the nation’s $16.7 trillion debt limit, which must be raised before Oct. 17 to avoid a U.S. default. Other lawmakers backed by the tea party movement, including Rep. Jim Jordan, R-Ohio, are refusing to budge. House Majority Leader Eric Cantor, R-Va., said Saturday that Republicans want “fairness” under the health-care law.

Libya Bristles at Raid That Captured Militant

ASSOCIATED PRESS

A suspected Libyan al-Qaida figure nabbed by U.S. special forces in a dramatic operation in Tripoli was living freely in his homeland for the past two years, after a trajectory that took him to Sudan, Afghanistan and Iran, where he had been detained for years, his family said Sunday. The Libyan government bristled at the raid, asking Washington to explain the “kidnapping.”

The swift Delta Force operation in the streets of the Libyan capital that seized the militant known as Abu Anas al-Libi was one of two assaults Saturday that showed an American determination to move directly against terror suspects — even in two nations mired in chaos where the U.S. has suffered deeply humiliations in the past.

Hours before the Libya raid, a Navy SEAL team swam ashore in the East African nation of Somalia and engaged in a fierce firefight, though it did not capture its target, a leading militant in the al-Qaida-linked group that carried out the recent Kenyan mall siege.

“We hope that this makes clear that the United States of America will never stop in the effort to hold those accountable who conduct acts of terror,” U.S. Secretary of State John Kerry said Sunday at

Raids Suggest Future of Counterterror Efforts By US

WASHINGTON (AP) • The U.S. commando raids in Libya and Somalia suggest the future shape of U.S. counterterrorism efforts — brief, targeted raids against highly sought extremist figures — and highlight the rise of Africa as a terrorist haven.

The strikes also raise questions about where to interrogate and try captured terrorist suspects such as Abu Anas al-Libi, accused by the U.S. of involvement in the 1998 bombings of two American embassies in Africa.

an economic summit in Indonesia. “Members of al-Qaida and other terrorist organizations literally can run but they can’t hide.”

Nazih Abdul-Hamed al-Ruqai, known by his alias Abu Anas al-Libi, was accused by the U.S. of involvement in the 1998 bombings of the U.S. Embassies in Dar es Salaam, Tanzania, and Nairobi, Kenya, which killed more than 220 people. He has been on the FBI’s most wanted terrorists list since it was introduced shortly after the Sept. 11, 2001 attack, with a $5 million bounty on his head.

51 Killed in Bout of Egyptian Violence

CAIRO (AP) • Security forces and Islamist protesters clashed around the country Sunday, leaving 51 dead, as a national holiday celebrating the military turned to mayhem. Crowds from Egypt’s two rival camps — supporters of the ousted Islamist president, Mohammed Morsi, and backers of the military that deposed him — poured into the streets and turned on each other.

Several neighborhoods of the capital, Cairo, resembled combat zones after street battles that raged for hours. Morsi supporters fired birdshot and threw firebombs at police who responded with gunshots and tear gas. Streets were left strewn with debris, and the air was thick with tear gas and smoke from burning fires, as the crack of gunfire rang out.

An Associated Press photographer saw nine bodies lying on the floor of a clinic in the Cairo district of Dokki, scene of some of the heaviest clashes. Most of the bodies had gunshot wounds to the head or chest.

Sunday’s death toll of 51 was the highest on a single day since Aug. 14 when security forces raided two sit-in protest camps by Morsi supporters, killing hundreds.

Even as fighting continued in the streets, the military went ahead with lavish celebrations for the holiday marking the 40th anniversary of the start of the 1973 Mideast war with Israel.

“There are those who think the military can be broken, el-Sissi said in an address at the concert. “You see the Pyramids? The military is like the pyramids, because the Egyptian people are on its side.

Freed Canadians Unable to Leave Egypt

TORONTO (AP) • Two Canadians released from an Egyptian prison after being held without charges since mid-August were barred from flying out of the country on Sunday, Cairo airport officials said.

John Greyson, a Toronto filmmaker and York University professor, and Tarek Loubani, a physician from London, Ontario, had checked in for a flight to Frankfurt, Germany, but were prevented from boarding the plane after their names appeared on a “stop-list issued by prosecutors, the airport officials said.

The two Canadians retrieved their luggage and were free to leave the airport, the officials said, speaking on condition of anonymity because they were not authorized to brief reporters.

AT A GLANCE

Syrian Chemical Program Being Dismantled

BEIRUT • International disarmament experts on Sunday began dismantling and destroying Syria’s chemical weapons arsenal and the equipment used to produce it, taking the first concrete step in their colossal task of eliminating the country’s chemical stockpile by mid-2014, an official said.

The inspectors from the Organization for the Prohibition of Chemical Weapons have about nine months to purge President Bashar Assad’s regime of its chemical program. The mission, endorsed by the U.N. Security Council, faces the tightest deadline in the watchdog group’s history and must simultaneously navigate Syria’s bloody civil war.

Sunday marked the fifth day that an advance team of around 20 inspectors have been in the country and the first day that involved actually disabling and destroying weapons and machinery, an official on the joint OPCW-U.N. mission said.

The team oversaw Syrian personnel who used cutting torches and disc saws to destroy and disable a range of items, including missile warheads, aerial bombs, and mixing and filling equipment, the OPCW said in a statement.

The Syrians are responsible for the actual physical demolition of the materials, while OPCW inspectors monitor the process and verify what is being destroyed, the official said. He declined to provide details or say where the work took place. The official spoke on condition of anonymity because of the sensitivity of the matter.

This is just the beginning of a complicated process to eliminate Syria’s estimated 1,000-ton chemical weapons stockpile and the facilities that created it. Damascus developed its chemical program in the 1980s and 1990s, building an arsenal that is believed to contain mustard gas and the nerve agents sarin VX and tabun.

Sudan: Another Arab State Feels Heat From Street

KHARTOUM, Sudan • In recent times Sudan has gone through two major civil wars, the loss of its rebellious southern oil region, and the indictment of its president for war crimes. Now, with its economy in disarray, it’s the latest Arab country to be feeling heat from the street.

The crunch came with the government’s elimination of the subsidies that had long sustained cheap prices for fuel and other basic needs. The near-doubling of prices that resulted set off a week of rioting beginning Sept. 22, in which at least 50 protesters are estimated to have died.

The vast security machine whose buildings dominate the skyline of Khartoum, the capital, is expected to prevail, for now. But the government is overloaded with debt — estimated by the International Monetary Fund at $46 billion in 2013 — and unable to borrow from international lenders. Inflation has reached nearly 50 percent in 2013, with the Sudanese pound weakening and foreign reserves down to just 1.2 billion dollars.

So Sudanese activists predict a resurgence of protests and ultimately a repeat of a 1985 uprising that also resulted from an economic crisis and ended up toppling the government.

It’s a sorry contrast to the days when Sudan was considered a rising oil power. Adding to the disarray, President Omar al-Bashir is wanted by the International Criminal Court for war crimes and crimes against humanity committed while putting down a rebellion in the Darfur region, where UN says 300,000 were killed and 2.7 million displaced.

The rundown capital reflects what many say is vast mismanagement of Sudan’s oil revenues, estimated at more than 80 billion dollars over a decade, and the investment of 60 to 70 percent of the state budget in the military and security arsenal instead of agriculture, Sudan’s other big potential export market.

Oil revenues were also wasted by corruption while al-Bashir fought armed rebellions in east, west and south Sudan.

The oil boom days ended when South Sudan became an independent state in 2011, taking two thirds of oil production with it. The rest of Sudan went from oil exporter to importer. Sudan controls the export pipelines but disputes over transit fees prompted the South Sudanese government to halt oil production in 2012. South Sudan gets nearly all of its revenue from oil.

“The nation's credit is at risk because of the administration's refusal to sit down and have a conversation,” — Speaker John Boehner, R-Ohio, in an interview with ABC News.

Jerome County Jail Project Progressing with Voters’ Support

The past four months have gone by quickly it seems since Jerome County voters put their trust in county government and passed the $11.2 million bond to build a new jail.
 Steady progress has been made as updates are scheduled on the weekly agenda for the commissioners to discuss and make necessary decisions on the jail project.
 One of the first decisions made was selecting design/build as the construction delivery method. I recommended that we also incorporate an architect to draft “bridging documents,” which we did. This means the county hires and works with an architect to develop 40 percent to 60 percent of the design prior to going to bid for a contractor who would then complete the design and build the facility. The value of a “bridging” architect is that it allows the owner (the county) to be more involved in the planning process and have more control over the project. The Request for Qualifications for the bridging architect has been advertised and the deadline for submissions is October 18th. For those interested in looking at the Request for Qualifications, it is available on the county website at www.jeromecountyid.us. Click on the link under Jerome County Jail Project.

 Next, a building site was selected. Originally, the pre-construction design showed the jail site on Victory Lane, near the Idaho State Police facility. However, upon further inspection, the cost of getting city water and sewer to the site added additional expense that could be avoided if a location were found with services readily available. After researching several more available properties, an offer was made and accepted by North Side Development and Holding Company, LLC for eight acres, located directly north of Idaho Milk Products on the 100 East Road.

 A contingency to complete the sales transaction was that the jail must be approved by the Jerome City Planning and Zoning Commission as the property is within Jerome City limits. The county has submitted the Special Use Permit application to Jerome City with the hearing scheduled for Oct. 22 at 7 p.m. The only change to the original plan was a request from Sheriff McFall to include a helicopter pad and a fuel island. These were included in the Special Use Permit as secondary uses and not critical to the function of the facility. It was decided the two items should be included now so they could be approved in the long-term future if funds were available. I agreed to the “future plans” but will not support spending any of the bond monies to build a helicopter pad or fuel island. There may be many other unforeseen necessities required as we go forward.

 Soon, the commissioners will consider people for the Selection Committee to review the bridging documents submitted by architect firms. Once chosen, the committee will use the scoring criteria as listed in the Request for Qualifications as they evaluate each proposal. In addition, a project manager will need to be selected and brought on board in the very near future.
 Many thanks again to Jerome County voters for approving this much-needed facility. It is a privilege to serve and be a part of this project. My motto for the new jail is “Turn Key, Under Budget.” Jerome County citizens deserve no less.

Shutdown Will Ripple Through Idaho

If we're fortunate, the federal government shutdown will be over before you read this. Since the likelihood is otherwise, let's put an Idaho lens on its practical effect.
 You might get the impression via some reports that the shutdown closes a few campgrounds and admission to some monuments, and some paper-shuffling bureaucrats may be sent home. Passports will be harder to get. Not so bad: And at first, it isn't. But as the closure persists, effects accumulate.
 In Idaho, Governor C.L. “Butch” Otter pointed out that in impact, “Gowen Field, Mountain Home, and probably the Idaho National Lab would be the biggest and the civilians that may be assigned to those.” Yes, together with Idaho's massive national forests and Bureau of Land Management property.
 But the nearly 12,000 Idahoans who work for the federal government (Idaho politicians tend to forget many constituents are also those hated feds) pull down around $800 million in a year in pay – a big driver in Idaho's economy. A BSU news report quoted a state researcher as estimating those jobs have an economic multiplier of 4.74. For every federal job eliminated in Idaho, five non-federal jobs could be lost. Also remember, many “essential” federal workers on the job are working without pay.

 While the Forest Service, the Bureau of Land Management, the Department of Defense (at Mountain Home Air Force Base) and the Department of Energy (Idaho National Laboratory) are the biggest federal employers, many other agencies do work in the state. Bear in mind that even the less popular are there for a reason. The Environmental Protection Agency in Idaho, just from April to June this year, stopped a half-dozen businesses dumping waste into waterways, pumping filth into the air, violating pesticide rules and more – threatening the health of Idahoans. That protection largely goes away with the shutdown. Along the same lines are massive cuts in the Department of Health and Human Services, which tracks toxic substances and remedies for them, disease information, Indian health services, substance abuse, services for Medicare and Medicaid – services to protect the health of actual people.

 But the shutdown affects more than just federal agencies. When you see reports about Idaho's state budget, most attention is on the “general fund,” about $2.7 billion fed by state taxes and fees. Did you know that nearly as much – another $2.4 billion this fiscal year – is “federal funds”?
 There's more. Call your county courthouse or city hall, or school district office, or highway district office, and ask how much federal money they get. You might be surprised.
 Still more. The people who get direct payments from the federal government, such as Social Security, veterans, disability and other payments, are still getting them for now. But they may not if the debt ceiling increase isn't passed by Congress later this month. As it might not.
 Nor is that all. Many business contractors depend on federal money. The largest, defense contractors like Boeing and Northrup, take in tens of billions. But there are other levels. Disclosure: Several federal agencies subscribe to publications from my small company, Ridenbaugh Press. The shutdown may cost both Boeing and me. Along with hundreds of Idaho businesses. The largest with a big Idaho presence may be Hewlett-Packard (it's in the billion-dollar range), but many, many more do work from providing office supplies to firefighting-related services.

 There are many reasons many big D.C. business lobbyists are opposing the shutdown.
 This federal shutdown isn't just a few campgrounds, war memorials and bureaucrats. Remember that as the D.C. battle over futile gestures drags on.

Hotter and Bigger

Humans, nature adapting to changing face of wildfires.

BY ROCKY BARKER
Idaho Statesman

Firefighters say they've never seen fires burn the way they did in 2013.

That sentiment has been heard before. In 1988, 2000 and 2007, fires grew in size and ferocity across the American West, exceeding the experience and knowledge of firefighters and scientists alike.

This year, fire returned to places that had burned before: Colorado Springs, Pine, Ketchum, Yellowstone and Yosemite. The fires of 2013 burned through many of our previous ideas about how we can live with fire.

What's different this time? Science is connecting hotter, bigger fires and a longer, more intense fire season with changes in the climate.

- Long before fire season, the mountains are undergoing change. Winters are warmer, meaning smaller snowpacks that melt sooner. That means runoff ends earlier and the forests dry out earlier; fire season starts earlier and lasts longer. When summer arrives, hotter, drier Julys get fires started earlier and bigger. In August and September, low humidity, wind and other unstable atmospheric conditions create erratic burning that overwhelms the best prevention and firefighting tactics.

- During fire season, fire bosses are changing tactics. They might pull their crews out of the way of extreme fires and evacuate communities more promptly. The bosses work to "herd" fires into previously burned areas, making them easier and cheaper to fight. Communities can clear brush and other fuels away from homes, providing firefighters with "defensible space." But those measures have to be regularly renewed. In some rural residential areas, topography and fuel still make them nearly indefensible, as the Fall Creek area west of Pine found this summer. And once homes in the "urban interface" do start burning, wildland firefighters have to adopt urban tactics.

- After the fires, forests face tougher conditions in which to recover. Fires in parts of the Northern Rockies now burn so frequently or so hot that the trees don't get a chance to grow big enough to produce seeds for the next generation. Even in forests with enough trees, hotter, drier conditions cause fewer seeds to germinate and more seedlings to die.

Some won't be forests again: Sun-baked south slopes are turning from forests to brush, as can be seen near the Lowman-area fires of 1989. Over time, more low-elevation forests could return to brush and grasslands. Low-elevation species such as ponderosa pines will move higher and farther north to cooler, moister conditions; high-elevation species such as Douglas firs will recede as fire frequency increases.

The bottom line: Nature is adapting to changing conditions. The fires of 2013 taught us that humans have to adapt to new realities about fires and forests, too. Our practices and our developments were designed for conditions that no longer exist.

Stephen Pyne, noted fire historian from Arizona State University, says we can't "solve" the fire problem in any technical sense because it will always be changing.

"Our task is not to fix what can't be fixed," Pyne wrote recently, "but to pass between the flames as best we can."

Ghost Trees

Long, straight piles of ash covered the hillside of Greenhorn Gulch near Hailey in August days after the Beaver Creek Fire roared into the exclusive neighborhood.

These ghost trees showed how hot the fire got on its two-mile run through the living forest. Forty miles west, similar ash piles covered the hillsides around Fall Creek, for hundreds of years in the relatively wet conditions of the High Sierra.

This year, they turned to ash.

"Really big logs take a really long time to dry out," said Smith, fire ecologist at Yosemite National Park. "They are indicators that something bigger is going on."

Idaho's Elk Complex burned through trees in an area that had just been logged and through thousands of acres of state forest land that had been aggressively managed for 20 years. In the moister Sierra forest, Smith watched the Rim Fire burn through foothills with four different forest types up to the high-elevation lodgepole pine.

"If four different types of forest wouldn't stop the fire, no fuel treatment would," Smith said.

What We've Learned from 25 Years of Fire

Fire scientists say that the West's ecosystems evolved with fire. We can't stop it. When we do temporarily, we end up triggering the even bigger fires we see today.

In Southwest Idaho, most of the landscape has burned in the past 30 years. More than 56 percent of the Boise National Forest has burned since 1985 and 71 percent of the Payette, according to Forest Service numbers compiled by the Idaho Conservation League.

The forests have grown back where many of the older fires were, presenting land managers with new challenges. They not only have to mechanically thin and prescribe-burn to lessen fire risk in unburned areas, they also have to do the same with forests that have grown back from earlier fires.

"If we do not do these treatments outside of the fire season, it will be impossible to catch up," said Paul Bryant, Boise National Forest resource and planning officer.

Some previously burned areas are burning again on their own. The Pony Fire burned young ponderosa pines that were growing back after the Foothills Fire of 1992. Foresters are watching whether the forest will shift to brush.

On the Elk Complex, the fire burned so extreme in many areas that all of the seed source is gone, said Boise Forest silviculturist Ray Eklund. He's determining now where the agency should try to replant ponderosas, where it can expect natural regeneration and where it should let the area change to rangeland.

He looks back to the 1989 Lowman Fire area, where replantings died within a couple of years. Foresters planted ponderosa again on the north slopes, which have wetter soils. Many survived.

But the south slopes have now largely converted to brush.

'Changing Faster'

Eklund's decisions are based both on ecology and economics: With tight budgets, there isn't the money to replant every acre when many trees won't survive.

"We have to be more judicious where we plant," Eklund said.

Monica Turner, a landscape ecology professor at the University of Wisconsin, has studied the forests of Yellowstone National Park since 1988. She has seen reduced regeneration where fires occur before the trees grow big enough to produce sufficient seed and where post-fire drought prevents germination.

She hopes to expand her studies to the entire Northern Rockies to determine how climate change will transform the forests. Right now she and agency scientists have little data on which to make predictions for the future.

Overall, she expects the brush and rangelands to replace some of the region's forests. She expects ponderosa pine to replace Douglas fir in the higher elevations as the frequency of fires there increases.

"Aspen may be one species that benefits from more frequent fires," Turner said. "I think we will see more areas of no forest or areas turn to a woodland scrubland. That doesn't mean we'll lose our native species or our wildlife."

Boise State University geomorphologist Jen Pierce has been studying the changes in the ponderosa pine forests in Southwest Idaho historically and agrees with Turner on the trend.

"They always have been adapting to change," Pierce said. "They're just changing faster."

Time for Humans to Adapt

Gov. Butch Otter sparked a debate in August when he said that the Fall Creek area burned in the Elk Complex was "an almost indefensible area."

Since the 1980s, firefighters have urged residents to make their homes safer. Fire science now shows that most homes are ignited by flying embers thrown as far as a mile and a half ahead of a crown fire, or when the ground fire reaches brush and trees within 100 feet of buildings.

The homes themselves burn especially hot, but the trees nearby are often left with their green canopies intact.

Research has shown that fires can be fought within the communities, and that raging fires on public lands don't need to be stopped in the wilderness to protect private property. But when you get hundreds of homes threatened, there just aren't enough firefighters to save them all.

And when crown fires are especially extreme, the fuel thick, the topography steep and the wind blowing, it becomes too dangerous to try to protect some areas, Forest Service officials say.

Pierce, who owns a cabin in the heavily forested Big Hole Mountains in Teton County, said knowing what she does has prepared her in a different way.

"The best thing we can do to mitigate for fire damage is make sure our insurance is up to date," Pierce said. "Adapting to climate change is just accepting our house may burn down."

Furry Creatures at Church

TETONA DUNLAP • TIMES-NEWS

Deborah Hergenreder and Brody Hergenreder, 9, brought their dogs Lollipop and Popsicle to be blessed by the Rev. Deb Seles at the 10th Annual Blessing of the Animals at the Episcopal Church of the Ascension Oct. 6 in Twin Falls. The free public event was in remembrance of St. Francis of Assisi, the patron saint of animals and ecology.

last year in Coeur d’Alene. “The audience was enraptured with her,” McArthur said.

McArthur credited the high number of participants — 96 total — to the conference’s timely topic of incorporating more movement in the classroom.

She said the theme mirrors what professors at the College of Southern Idaho are teaching students in the early childhood education department and the play-based learning philosophy of the CSI preschool program.

“Especially with the emphasis that testing has in schools and all the time that is lost for teachers to incorporate it (movement),” McArthur said. “We are developing a whole being and not just a test-taker.”

In 2012, the American Academy of Pediatrics released a statement which said “recess is a crucial and necessary component of a child’s development and, as such, it should not be withheld for punitive or academic reasons.”

According to the Nurturing Pathways’ website, the program was designed to develop the whole child during the formative years. Roberts founded the program in 2001 after years of teaching dance and performing professionally. She now serves 150 families at her studio in Seattle and offers a certification program to teachers. Nurturing Pathways currently offers classes in seven states, as well as Canada and Mexico.

Rhythm and Rhyme

“We should be speaking in rhymes and chants to our kids all day,” Roberts told the group Saturday. “Rhythm is your friend. A really good thing is the sequence of three. Do the chant three times over. Their motor muscle memory starts to kick in.”

Roberts said rhythm is a good way to calm children who have a hard time standing still and focusing.

One teacher from the group shared an example of a rhyme that could be used as children walk down the hallway: “Now I’m walking down the hallway. Tip toe, tip toe. Don’t fall.”

Even obstacle courses, Roberts said, is like brain candy for preschoolers.

“Don’t bore them. Keep them engaged. Challenge them physically,” Robert said. “An obstacle is all about motor planning. It’s all about what’s next. The brain uses the same neurons as it does for thinking as it does for doing.”

Then she shared the story of her son, Sam, who suffered a brain injury and paralysis on his left side at four months from the pertussis vaccine. Roberts said if he had received early intervention, he would have seen far more gains in his physical and mental development. Today Sam, 18, has special needs but Roberts told the audience he has good balance and leads a very active lifestyle.

“Samuel is my prime example of six learning blocks. We have to take this seriously,” she said.

The six learning blocks are: sight, sound, touch, movement, posture and olfactory — or taste and smell.

Roberts quoted Dr. A. Jean Ayres, an occupational therapist and educational psychologist known for her work in the area of sensory integration dysfunction, who said more than 80 percent of the nervous system is involved in processing or organizing sensory input, making the brain primarily a sensory processing machine.

Ana Nail, a teacher in the Twin Falls School District’s English language learners program, said movement is often sidelined in education.

“It needs to be part of the day,” Nail said. “We need to make room for it.”

Pam Popa, a preschool teacher in the Twin Falls School District, said the conference gave her several ideas she could implement in her classroom.

“We already do a lot of movement but not so much of the pushing and pulling to develop upper and lower body strength,” Popa said.

Overall, Nail said she enjoyed the conference because it emphasized the need for physical movement rather than just “paper and pencil skills.”

“Invest your time in play-structured movement activities,” Roberts said. “You never know where the answer is going to come from, so open every door.”

Hikers Hop Gate at Zion Park to Protest Shutdown

SPRINGDALE, Utah (AP) • Despite being warned about possible federal citations, 16 hikers hopped a gate at closed Zion National Park in southern Utah to protest the partial government shutdown.

James Milligan, manager of Springdale’s Zion Outfitter store, said he helped organize Saturday’s peaceful act of civil disobedience called “Occupy Zion” to let the government know what locals think about the shutdown.

“Obviously, I’m not too happy about it,” he told The Salt Lake Tribune. “This shop is my livelihood here, and I haven’t had a customer in a week. Rangers will get their back pay, but what will people in these communities get?”

Park rangers greeted protesters at the gate, photographed them, and advised that the park was closed and they may be cited. People who enter the park during the shutdown can face a federal misdemeanor charge of trespassing, but no citations were immediately issued, said Zion National Park spokeswoman Aly Baltrus.

“We are simply observing and taking pictures,” Baltrus told The Spectrum of St. George. “We are trying to let people know they can get tickets and can be cited later.”

Ignoring a “Do Not Enter” sign on the gate, the protesters walked about 2 miles up the Pa’rus Trail and then turned around. They filled a garbage bag with trash along the way.

Protester Melissa Norris, of St. George, called the empty park both eerie and beautiful, “like Zion used to be 20 years ago.” She said her visit was worth any ticket she might face.

“I’m concerned, of course, but I knew there were consequences coming in,” she told the Deseret News. “Shoot, if I have a record at 47 because I made a statement, then I have a record at 47.”

Boy Sneaks onto Airplane

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) • A 9-year-old runaway went through security, boarded a plane at the Minneapolis-St. Paul International Airport without a ticket and flew to Las Vegas, an airport spokesman said Sunday.

Security officials screened the Minneapolis boy at the airport shortly after 10:30 a.m. Thursday after he arrived via light rail, Metropolitan Airports Commission spokesman Patrick Hogan said. The boy then boarded a Delta flight that left for Las Vegas at 11:15 a.m.

The flight was not full, Hogan said, and the flight crew became suspicious midflight because the boy was not on their list of unattended minors. The crew contacted Las Vegas police, who met them upon landing and transferred the boy to child protection services, Hogan said.

FOUR DOWNS For Week Five

We're past the halfway point in the high school football season, and teams have pretty much formed their identities. That, and we're getting a clearer picture of what should happen down the stretch. Four things to watch for going forward in this week's Four Downs.

TWIN FALLS MAY APPEAR BE OVERLY RELIANT ON ONE PLAYER, BUT IT'S NOT COMPLETELY THE CASE.

Jacob Johnson is embodying the definition of a workhorse running back, and the Twin Falls senior seemingly has it all. Fast, agile and powerful, Johnson has piled up 965 yards and 16 rushing touchdowns in just five games, and he added a 17th on a kick return in the season opener against Hillcrest. What that means is that Twin Falls hasn't needed to rely on quarterback play to carry the team, but it has gotten enough from its two quarterbacks, Kordell Williams and Kaleb Jones, to keep opposing defenses honest. Barring a recurrence of the back trouble that plagued him during the offseason, or another injury, Johnson figures to have a shot to eclipse 2,000 yards and 30 touchdowns this season. With increasing effectiveness and consistency from the two junior quarterbacks, this offense should continue to drop big point totals the rest of the regular season, at the very least.

WYATT WILLIAMS IS ESTABLISHING HIMSELF AS GOODING'S "NEXT ONE."

Gooding seems to be churning out at least one standout player per class. This graduating class it's Cole McGinnis and Torin Brunson, along with a strong supporting cast that goes largely unheralded. The juniors have Josh Finley as the headline act, and the sophomores appear to have Williams, who's won the starting gig after battling with Clancy Cockerham in the preseason. He's got a little bit of pinball wizard in him, in that he zigs and zags with his running ability, sometimes losing yardage but just as often popping a big run. It adds an extra layer to Gooding's offense, which was retooled in the offseason to become more explosive (sound familiar?). All these things bode well for the Senators long-term, not just in this season but potentially in the years beyond.

WENDELL TOOK CONTROL OF THE CANYON CONFERENCE — OR DID IT?

With a 7-6 win over Declo on Thursday, it looked like the Trojans not only had exorcised its Hornet Hoodoo — Declo had won every game since the series resumed in 2006 — they seized the Canyon Conference by the proverbial scruff of the neck. To yank a phrase from a famous Saturday morning college football expert: Not so fast, my friends! While Wendell's win was doubtless impressive, there's one more hurdle for the Trojans to get over, and that comes in two weeks when they go to an Oakley team that's seemingly improved in leaps and bounds over the last few weeks. Those Hornets blew out Glenns Ferry, expectedly, but dominated a Valley side that Wendell struggled against. Home field could provide an advantage for the Oakley Hornets, and could also lead to a way back into the conference reckoning for the "other" Hornets at the same time.

EVEN IN A LOSS, MURTAUGH PUT ITSELF SQUARELY IN THE PLAYOFF RACE.

It wasn't a second straight surprise win for Murtaugh, but its 60-40 loss to Raft River wasn't the letdown I thought could happen after the previous week's upset of then-No. 1-ranked Butte County. Plainly, it's starting to look like Murtaugh could be about as good a team as there is (not named Hagerman or Troy) in the 1A-1 ranks, and that puts the Red Devils in the playoff hunt. Should they beat Challis this week in their final home game, they've got two eminently winnable road games at Grace and Shoshone to end the season, and that should be good enough to at least snatch the fourth playoff berth out of five from the Snake River Conference, and possibly third if Butte County slips up against Hagerman and/or Raft River. And it'll be well deserved. Bottom line is this merger between Hansen and Murtaugh, while contentious in some sections of the communities, has worked out about as well as anyone could have hoped.

the team's backup quarterback Dylan Henslee went down with injuries.

With much of the same core of players that won the 2011 state championship, Hagerman has averaged over 60 points a game while giving up 12.6 points per contest.

Hagerman's Hernan Sandoval can't hold onto the ball as Butte County's Randy Hjelm tackles him during the 1A-1 quarterfinal in November 2012 at Jerome High School.

Indianapolis Colts running back Donald Brown, top, goes over Seattle Seahawks middle linebacker Bobby Wagner to score a touchdown on Sunday in Indianapolis.

Indianapolis Rallies Late to Beat Seahawks, 34-28

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) • Andrew Luck spent most of Sunday's game watching Russell Wilson and Marshawn Lynch run around. So when the Colts' quarterback finally got a chance to make some plays, he rallied Indianapolis in the fourth quarter for yet another victory. He threw two touchdown passes and led the Colts on two time-consuming scoring drives in the fourth quarter, taking the lead on Donald Brown's 3-yard TD run with 8:55 to play, to hand Seattle its first loss of the season, 34-28. "This is the most resilient team that I've ever been around," coach Chuck Pagano said. "They've got more grit than anybody, any team I've been around." This season has certainly tested the Colts (4-1). Since a closer-than-expected Week 1 win over Oakland, the Colts have lost three offensive starters with season-ending injuries and a Week 2 game for their first home loss in nearly a year. Somehow though, Indy rebounded with three straight wins, including victories over NFC powers San Francisco and Seattle. Now they have sole possession of the AFC South lead for the first time in the post-Peyton Manning era, too. And all this came on a wacky day. Both teams scored off a blocked kick. The Seahawks (4-1) ran for 218 yards, averaged 6.4 yards per carry, had better field position and ran more than three dozen plays in Colts territory as they played keep away through the first three quarters. None of it mattered to Luck. He still found a way to win. On the decisive drive, he took advantage of a pass interference call against Richard Sherman, got another break when Pagano won a challenge on a third-down spot that turned fourth down into a first down. After consuming nearly seven minutes, he gave the ball to Brown, who squirted through the middle for the go-ahead score. Luck then hooked up with his favorite receiver Reggie Wayne on a 2-point conversion pass and took nearly five more minutes off the clock to set up Adam Vinatieri for a game-sealing 49-yard field goal.

Denver Broncos running back Ronnie Hillman (21) finds running room against the Dallas Cowboys on Sunday in Arlington, Texas. The Broncos won 51-48.

Prater's FG Lifts Broncos Past Cowboys, 51-48

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) • Peyton Manning spent all afternoon putting the Broncos in the end zone during a wild shootout with Tony Romo and the Dallas Cowboys. The last time he got the ball, Manning kept Denver out of the end zone — and that was the best way to win the game. The four-time MVP kept up his record pace for touchdown passes, Matt Prater kicked a 28-yard field goal as time expired after an interception by Romo spoiled the first 500-yard game in Dallas history, and the Broncos stayed unbeaten with a 51-48 victory Sunday. "It was pretty amazing that it came down to the defense making a big play at the end," Denver coach John Fox said. "Thank God our offense kept us in the game all day long." In the waning seconds of one of the highest-scoring thrillers in NFL history, Manning ensured that his kicker — not Romo — had the last chance to score. And with that, the Broncos ran their total to 230 points this season — the most by an NFL team through the first five games. The Broncos (5-0) had moved the ball to the Dallas 2 after Danny Trevathan's diving interception at the 24 in the final 2 minutes. Needing a first down but not a touchdown so they could run out the clock, Manning and Knowshon Moreno shouted at each other in the backfield just before the snap. "He basically was asking me, 'How am I supposed to do that? How can I get a half a yard but not get a yard and a half?'" said Manning, who threw for 414 yards and four touchdowns to give him a record-setting 20 in the first five games.

SAN FRANCISCO • Tramaine Brock intercepted Matt Schaub's first pass of the night and returned it 18 yards for a touchdown, Schaub threw three interceptions in all before the embattled quarterback got replaced in the fourth, and San Francisco pounded Houston 34-3. Colin Kaepernick threw a 64-yard touchdown pass to Vernon Davis and Frank Gore ran for 81 yards and a score in his second straight impressive prime-time game. The 49ers (3-2) are right back in the NFC West race with Seattle after the Seahawks (4-1) lost at Indianapolis. Each team has beaten the Texans (2-3) and lost to the Colts, and Seattle still must visit San Francisco on Dec. 8. Anthony Dixon added a 2-yard touchdown run for the NFC champions, while Brock had a second interception and nearly a third.

SAINTS 26, BEARS 18 CHICAGO • Drew Brees threw two touchdown passes to Pierre Thomas, Jimmy Graham tied an NFL record with another 100-yard game and the New Orleans Saints remained unbeaten. Brees was 29 of 35 for 288 yards in his first victory in four career games at Soldier Field. Garrett Hartley matched a career high with four field goals as New Orleans (5-0) picked up its first win in Chicago since a 31-10 victory on Oct. 8, 2000. Graham continued his torrid start for the Saints (5-0), catching 10 balls for 135 yards in his fourth consecutive 100-yard game — matching an NFL record for a tight end. Tony Gonzalez was the first to accomplish the streak in 2000, and Graham matched it in 2011. Jay Cutler threw for 358 yards and two touchdowns for Chicago (3-2), which has lost two in a row. BENGALS 13, PATRIOTS 6 CINCINNATI • BenJarvus Green-Ellis ran 1 yard in the fourth quarter for the game's only touchdown, and the Cincinnati Bengals ended Tom Brady's long streak of touchdown passes in defeating the previously unbeaten New England Patriots. The Bengals (3-2) sacked Brady four times and kept New England (4-1) out of the end zone on a first-and-goal from the 1-yard line late in the fourth quarter. Adam "Pacman" Jones picked off Brady's desperation pass inside the 5-yard line with 16 seconds left to clinch it. Brady had thrown a touchdown pass in 52 straight games, second-longest in NFL history behind Drew Brees. The Patriots were held out of the end zone for the first time since a 16-9 loss to the Jets on Sept. 20, 2009. CHIEFS 26, TITANS 17 NASHVILLE, Tenn. • Jamaal

Charles scored a 1-yard touchdown with 6:23 left, and the Chiefs rallied to keep up their perfect start. The Chiefs (5-0) are off to their best start since 2003, when they won their first nine games. This win came despite blowing a 13-0 halftime lead in this early AFC showdown between these surprising teams bouncing back after losing seasons. The Titans (3-2) couldn't have been more out of synch in the first half with Ryan Fitzpatrick starting for Jake Locker, sidelined with his sprained right hip. He missed his first five passes and went three-and-out on his first five series before guiding Tennessee to 17 straight points in the second half. Charles put the Chiefs ahead to stay, and they intercepted Fitzpatrick twice in the final 6:14. Ryan Succop kicked four field goals, including a 48-yarder. RAVENS 26, DOLPHINS 23 MIAMI GARDENS, Fla. • Justin Tucker kicked a 44-yard field goal to put the Baltimore Ravens ahead with 1:42 left, and they withstood a frantic comeback bid. Ryan Tannehill completed a 46-yard pass to Brandon Gibson on fourth down to keep Miami's hopes alive, but Caleb Sturgis then missed a 57-yard field goal attempt wide left with 33 seconds to go. The Ravens (3-2) bounced back from a loss last week at Buffalo and won on the road for the first time this season. The Dolphins (3-2) lost their second game in a row. PACKERS 22, LIONS 9 GREEN BAY, Wis. • James Jones caught a long touchdown pass from Aaron Rodgers, and the Packers defense contained the undermanned Lions. Mason Crosby kicked five field goals. The Packers' offense struggled to get into the end zone until Rodgers found Jones on an 83-yard completion down the left sideline for a 16-3 lead late in the third quarter. It provided enough of a cushion for a defense that had the luxury of facing the Lions minus star receiver Calvin Johnson, out with a knee injury. Penalties also bogged down Detroit. The Packers extended their winning streak in Wisconsin over the Lions to 23.

EAGLES 36, GIANTS 21 EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. • Nick Foles threw for two touchdowns and led four scoring drives after taking over for an injured Michael Vick late in the second quarter, and Philadelphia kept the Giants winless. Foles threw fourth-quarter touchdown passes of 25 yards to Brent Celek and 5 yards to DeSean Jackson as the Eagles (2-3) snapped a three-game losing streak by forcing three interceptions by Eli Manning in the fourth quarter. Vick left the game with a hamstring injury late in the second quarter. LeSean McCoy added a 1-yard touchdown run and Alex Henery kicked five field goals for the Eagles, who gained 439 yards in total offense. David Wilson scored on a 5-yard run for the Giants (0-5) and Manning threw two touchdowns to Rueben Randle in the third quarter to give New York a 21-19 lead. CARDINALS 22, PANTHERS 6 GLENDALE, Ariz. • Arizona sacked Cam Newton seven times, once for a safety, and intercepted him on three occasions to overcome a sluggish offensive performance. Daryl Washington, back after serving a four-game suspension for violating the NFL's substance abuse policy, had two sacks and an interception for Arizona (3-2). Calais Campbell had two sacks, one for Arizona's first regular-season safety in nine years, the other forcing a game-clinching fumble. Karlos Dansby also had two sacks and an interception. Carolina (1-3), playing for the first time since a 38-0 victory over the New York Giants two weeks ago, managed only Graham Gano's field goals of 22 and 51 yards. Arizona's Carson Palmer threw for a touchdown but was intercepted three times. RAMS 34, JAGUARS 20 ST. LOUIS • Sam Bradford threw three touchdown passes and Matt Giordano's 82-yard interception return was one of several big plays from the St. Louis defense against winless Jacksonville. Boise State University alum Austin Pettis' 31-yard TD catch with 5:45 to go was his second of the day and put the Rams (2-3) up by two scores. St. Louis, which had trailed by double digits in every game, established control with a 17-point second quarter after Jacksonville (0-5) had a pair of early leads. Jaguars quarterback Blaine Gabbert injured his left hamstring in the third quarter.

Harvick Wins Wreck-filled Race

KANSAS CITY, Kan. (AP) • Kevin Harvick didn't simply have his hands full with the rest of the Sprint Cup field Sunday. He also was trying to tame a squirrely surface at Kansas Speedway.

He handled both better than anybody else.

Harvick pulled away from Kurt Busch and Jeff Gordon on a late restart to win a wreck-filled race over the recently repaved track, keeping his No. 29 Chevrolet out of trouble all afternoon and making a big move in the Chase for the Sprint Cup championship.

"It was an interesting weekend, to say the least," said Harvick, who moved into third in points behind leaders Matt Kenseth and Jimmie Johnson. "Everybody was battling the tires and the track, and I think it was like driving on a razor blade."

Harvick sat on the pole for the first time in 254 races, and that should have given him some confidence. He also won the last time he qualified first, at New Hampshire in 2006.

"These guys just did a great job all weekend," Harvick said. "To have a car fast enough for me to qualify on the pole says a lot about how fast this thing is."

Harvick was chased across the line by Busch and Gordon. Joey Logano finished fourth, Carl Edwards was fifth, and Johnson finished sixth despite a hiccup with his engine on the final lap that cost him a spot on the track.

Kenseth held onto his lead in the Chase with an 11th-place finish. Johnson narrowed the gap to three points, while Harvick closed to within 25 points heading to Charlotte.

"We just got to keep doing what we did today to be a contender," said his car owner, Richard Childress. "I don't think top 10s will win a championship when you're racing Jimmie Johnson and the group of guys that are up there."

Kyle Busch was the big loser after crashing out of his third straight Sprint Cup race at Kansas. He dropped from third in points to fifth, 35 out of first place.

"All-in-all just a crazy day," said Johnson, who shaved five points off of Kenseth's lead. "Wacky restarts, a lot of chaos there, and caution after caution for who knows what."

There were 15 cautions in the race, breaking the record of 14 set in last year's race. The first came when the race wasn't even a lap old and Danica Patrick slammed into the wall, and most of them occurred when cars got loose coming out of Turn 2.

Kenseth both called the race "treacherous," pointing to the combination of a repave last year and Goodyear's new "multi-zone" tires that made it seem as if they were skating across a smooth, glasslike surface most of the afternoon. All of it was compounded by temperatures in the 50s at the start, more than 30 degrees cooler than practice earlier in the week.

Stanford Staying Mentally Tough

Cardinal survives for 13th-straight victory Saturday.

STANFORD, Calif. (AP) • Stanford rarely wins pretty. In the last two years, though, the Cardinal just always seem to win.

Fifth-ranked Stanford survived for its 13th straight victory late Saturday night, withstanding Keith Price's prolific passing performance and benefiting from an overturned call late in a 31-28 win over then-No. 15 Washington. Stanford (5-0, 3-0) showed that the same kind of might and muscle that propelled the program to a Pac-12 title and a Rose Bowl victory last season might be good enough to contend for another conference championship and maybe even more.

"We are a tough, mentally tough team, which of all the things you can ask for as a coach, that's what you want," Stanford coach David Shaw said. "You want guys that don't blink."

Shaw should know.

In the last two years, Stanford is 7-1 in games decided by six points or fewer, with the loss coming at Washington last Sept. 27 when the Cardinal were still transitioning to life without Andrew Luck. The only other loss during that stretch came two weeks later in a 20-13 overtime defeat in a controversial finish at Notre Dame.

The rematch was another game Stanford did just enough to win. Washington's offense outgained Stanford's 489 to 284 yards. The Huskies had 30 first downs, while the Cardinal finished with 14. And both quarterbacks threw one interception.

The difference? Special teams.

Ty Montgomery had a school-record 290 all-purpose yards and two touchdowns. He caught three passes for 56 yards, ran 30 yards on two carries and racked up 204 yards returning kicks, including going 99 yards on the opening kickoff to put the Huskies (4-1, 1-1) behind for the first time all season and keep them there every time the game got close.

"We showed that we can stand in there and we can finish a game and win in a fight if we have to," said Montgomery, who was slowed — and sometimes sidelined — by a nagging knee injury as a sophomore last season.

The victory kept the Cardinal on a collision course with No. 2 Oregon (5-0, 2-0) in what could shape up as one of college football's biggest games this season on Nov. 7 at Stanford Stadium. But the Cardinal still have to play at Utah on Saturday and at Oregon State, with a home date against No. 11 UCLA squeezed in between.

At the very least, Stanford's style has put the program on firm footing in the Pac-12 North again.

The Cardinal have toppled two of the conference's rising challengers — Arizona State and Washington, which dropped one spot to No. 16 in the latest Associated Press poll released Sunday — and look every bit like the team that can win close games again.

"This is the way it's going to be from here on out," Shaw said. "There's going to be a one-score lead in the fourth quarter, maybe a 10-point lead in the fourth quarter. Either we're going to be up or we're going to be down, and that is just the way it's going to be. So mentality-wise for us, we don't change anything."

Unlike last year, Stanford has eased the burden on its defense.

Stanford has scored at least 30 points in all five games this season. The Cardinal scored 30 in only four games all of last season.

Kevin Hogan, who completed just 12 of 20 passes for 105 yards and a touchdown against Washington, is 10-0 as the starter — including 6-0 against ranked opponents.

Defense carried the Cardinal most of the way, though, and likely will throughout the season.

Stanford sacked Price five times, tallied 11 tackles for losses and forced the Huskies into some big-time blunders. Washington committed 10 penalties for 89 yards.

Stanford still sweated out one final series — and a video review — just as it did so many times last season. Price threw for 350 yards and two touchdowns on an injured thumb, but officials overturned his pass to Kevin Smith on fourth down in the final minutes as Stanford escaped again.

"You find out things about yourself when you have to push through adversity," said linebacker Shayne Skov, who had 14 tackles and 1½ sacks against the Huskies. "You have to rise up to the challenge. So if it's a learning moment for us — and it's part of college football — we have to be introspective and figure out what we have to do week to week. The more difficult the games are, the better we'll become."

Americans Make It Five in a Row at Presidents Cup

DUBLIN, Ohio (AP) • Fred Couples, the coolest guy in golf, never really looked that way until he stood on the edge of the 18th fairway Sunday and saw everything going his way.

The Americans needed only one more point to win the Presidents Cup.

And there was Tiger Woods, who has a history of delivering the winning point, in the middle of the fairway at Muirfield Village, where he has won a record five times.

The Presidents Cup ended just the way it always does.

Woods found the green and two-putted for par and a 1-up victory over Richard Sterne, the third straight time he has won the clinching point in the Presidents Cup. The Americans won for the fifth straight time — and eighth time in 10 tries — against an International side that showed some fight when it was too late to matter.

The Americans, who finished strong Sunday morning in the rain-delayed foursomes for a 14-8 lead, only needed to win four singles matches.

It took longer than anyone expected.

"I must have asked 500 times, 'How are we getting this fourth point? Where is the fourth point coming from?" said Couples, a three-time winner as U.S. captain. "You're nervous. Not for the players — the players know what they're doing. But we knew we needed 18 points, and we got them. It was a very, very good match today. And the matches were all close. At no given time was I a nervous wreck. But it was nice when Tiger two-putted that last green to get the 18th point."

IF OCTOBER 7 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: Responsibilities may be easy to handle, but be cautious about lingering loose ends from the past that could test your patience and come back to haunt you during the upcoming six weeks. In the schoolroom of life, once you pass your exams you can use your knowledge to prosper and make sound financial and business decisions in December. Patience will be rewarded if you keep an eye open for important opportunities in December and January that could have a positive impact on your future.

HOROSCOPE
Jeraldine Saunders

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Be a team player. You'll prosper by being a cooperative member of the community rather than a maverick who sets off on his own path. Do your best and take steps that add to the common good.
TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Duty calls with a megaphone, loud and clear. Take joy in doing what you're supposed to be doing. You could feel satisfaction if you follow through on a commitment that could try anyone else's patience.
GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Changes at the workplace could mean you must take on more than your fair share of the workload or are inundated with extra duties. Count your lucky stars that this gives you a chance to demonstrate your talents.
CANCER (June 21-July 22): Don't take anyone or anything for granted. Conditions and situations may change swiftly, so remain on your toes. When you find someone who supports you and wants the best for you, keep them close.
LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Your best path to success is found by sticking to traditions and being as organized as possible. Rule your roost with a gentle hand, as a partner might be quick to rebel against unreasonable restrictions.
VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Put on your thinking cap, and then plug it into the flash drive. Obtain advice from friends or acquaintances before you act. You have the pluck to survive small setbacks and the ability to turn a deficit into an asset.
LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): You could feel like you're operating in a strait jacket financially, so do the best you can under the circumstances. Partners or those closely connected could seem unpredictable or unreliable.
SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): You can't pull all the strings. Fight off the urge to control or micro-manage everything. Trust that others can think for themselves. A tolerant outlook coupled with perceptive business skills will win the day.
SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): There is safety in numbers. Get a consensus of opinion from a large number of people rather than making a lone decision. Flirtations in group situations should not be given too much weight.
CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): You may be affected by extremist politics but it won't hurt your wallet. You have the drive, ambition and shrewdness to deal with any sudden changes. Your impressive business skills earn you respect from peers.
AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Your mind races on jet skis. Your thoughts may flit from subject to subject, so it may be necessary to exert some self-discipline when financial decisions are on the table.
PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): This is a good time to talk over your plans with family members or discuss duties or promises made in the past. It might not a good time to start a new creative project or pursue a new romantic attraction.

Today is Monday, Oct. 7, the 280th day of 2012. There are 85 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight:
On Oct. 7, 1929, former Interior Secretary Albert B. Fall, one of the main figures of the Teapot Dome scandal, went on trial in Washington, D.C., charged with accepting a bribe from oil tycoon Edward L. Doheny. (Fall was found guilty and sentenced to a year in prison and fined $100,000; he ended up serving nine months. Ironically, Doheny was acquitted at trial of offering the bribe that Fall was convicted of taking.)

TODAY IN HISTORY

On this date:
In 1612, Italian poet Giovanni Battista Guarini died in Venice.
In 1777, the second Battle of Saratoga began during the American Revolution. (British forces under Gen. John Burgoyne surrendered ten days later.)
In 1849, author Edgar Allan Poe died in Baltimore at age 40.
In 1858, the fifth debate between Illinois senatorial candidates Abraham Lincoln and Stephen Douglas took place in Galesburg.
In 1910, a major wildfire devastated the northern Minnesota towns of Spooner and Baudette, charring at least 300,000 acres. Some 40 people are believed to have died.
In 1949, the Republic of East Germany was formed.
In 1960, Democratic presidential candidate John F. Kennedy and Republican opponent Richard M. Nixon held their second televised debate, in Washington, D.C.
In 1982, the Andrew Lloyd Webber-Tim Rice musical “Cats” opened on Broadway. (The show closed Sept. 10, 2000, after a record 7,485 performances.)
In 1985, Palestinian gunmen hijacked the Italian cruise ship Achille Lauro in the Mediterranean. (The hijackers, who killed Jewish American tourist Leon Klinghoffer, surrendered two days after taking over the ship.)
In 1991, University of Oklahoma law professor Anita Hill publicly accused Supreme Court nominee Clarence Thomas of making sexually inappropriate comments when she worked for him; Thomas denied Hill's allegations.
In 1992, trade representatives of the United States, Canada and Mexico initiated the North American Free Trade Agreement during a ceremony in San Antonio, Texas.
In 2001, the current war in Afghanistan started as the United States and Britain launched air attacks against military targets and Osama bin Laden's training camps in the wake of the Sept. 11 attacks.
Ten years ago: California voters recalled Gov. Gray Davis and elected Arnold Schwarzenegger their new governor. Turkey's parliament voted overwhelmingly to allow Turkish troops to be sent to Iraq. Ten Southeast Asian nations signed an accord establishing a Europe-like economic community by 2020. American scientists Alexei Abrikosov and Anthony Leggett and Russian Vitaly Ginzburg won the Nobel Prize in physics for their work in how matter can behave at extremely low temperatures.
Five years ago: The misery worsened on Wall Street, as the Dow lost more than 500 points and all the major indexes slid more than 5 percent. In their second presidential debate, held at Belmont University in Nashville, Democrat Barack Obama and Republican John McCain clashed repeatedly over the causes and cures for the economic crisis. Makoto Kobayashi and Toshihide Maskawa of Japan and Yoichiro Nambu of the United States won the Nobel Prize in physics.
One year ago: Venezuela's National Electoral Council announced that President Hugo Chavez had won reelection for the third time. (Chavez died in March 2013 at age 58 after at two-year battle with cancer.)

THE ACES ON BRIDGE®

Bobby Wolff

"Think no more; 'tis only thinking Lays lads underground."

— A.E. Housman

The concept of par refers to the result achieved by both sides if neither of them makes a mistake. In today's deal, par for North-South is to play four spades, not three no-trump, since eight tricks is the limit in no-trump on a diamond lead. Many Souths might prefer to open with two no-trump or a forcing two-club call, though the lack of aces suggests the one-level opener to me. But whatever the opening, the spade game should be reached.

How should South tackle the deal in four spades? Assume West leads the heart jack and East takes the ace. He must now resist the temptation to play his singleton club — which would facilitate declarer's task considerably. Instead he returns a low heart, then wins the spade ace to play a third heart.

Able to afford the loss of one club trick but not two, South should now make the safety play of the club king to the first round. When East drops the nine, a low club toward dummy should follow, finessing the eight if West plays small. If East wins the second club, then the suit has broken 3-2. If West discards on the second round, declarer can put up the ace from dummy and lead back a club toward his jack. Most importantly, if West started with four clubs, either the eight will win, or the ace will capture an honor and the eight and jack will be equals against the queen.

ANSWER: My choice would be to lead a spade, even though my RHO bid that suit. After all, your fifth spade does suggest you might be able to set the suit up eventually. My second choice would be a diamond — both minor suits are equally dangerous, but partner might have been able to double the club bid if that were the right lead.

DEAR ABBY: My son and his wife, "Carole," have been married for two years. I was recently introduced to her father, "Ted," who has been alone for 13 years. Carole told me later in no uncertain terms that I cannot have a romantic relationship with her father. Then she repeated the same thing to him.

Do you think it's right for adult children to dictate to their parents who they can and cannot see? Ted and I are perplexed. We really like each other and would like to see where this relationship could go. We laugh easily together, cook in the kitchen well together, can talk for hours and generally are very compatible. We have both discussed our pasts and have been honest with each other. What's your opinion?

— DESERVES TO BE HAPPY IN FLORIDA
DEAR DESERVES: Before the relationship goes further, you and Ted should step back and ask yourselves what might happen if this romance doesn't work out. Would the hurt feelings disrupt the family dynamic? If this can be handled thoughtfully, with grace and maturity, I agree that you deserve to be happy. While adult offspring may try to dictate what their parents can and cannot do, as mature adults, you do not have to blindly accept it.

DEAR ABBY: I have been friends with "Kurt" for many years. We met during Little League, and as we got older we stood up in each other's wedding. He was my best man.
Kurt's marriage is in trouble because he has a gambling problem. I feel guilty because I never said anything to him about it when we were together at the casino and he was spending more money than he could afford. I was with him only a handful of times, but I still think I should have spoken up.

Should I have? Or wouldn't it have mattered if I did? Kurt is going to Gamblers Anonymous meetings now, trying to save his marriage.
— GUILTY IN WILCONSIN
DEAR GUILTY: You could have said something to your friend, but the question is, would Kurt have listened and accepted what you were trying to convey? People who have addictions are usually in denial until they have no other choice but to face it.
Your feeling guilty won't help this situation. Being supportive of your longtime friend and making sure that when you're together there is no wagering happening (i.e., on sporting events) would be helpful. The rest is up to him.

DEAR ABBY: I recently ended a two-year relationship with my boyfriend. We are both 20. He was a great boyfriend — always patient, kind, gentle and loving. However, I was often impatient, short-tempered and controlling. These issues were my personal problems. I always tried to work on them, but although it got better, I knew I wasn't treating him the way I should. I ended things with him because I felt guilty.

It has been a month now, and I'm having second thoughts about having ended it with an almost-perfect person. I miss him. Would it be unwise to reach out to him again?
— BROKEN UP BUT NOT OVER IT
DEAR NOT OVER IT: Not necessarily. But before you do, allow yourself a period of introspection during which you focus less on your missing him and concentrate on why you were abusive to him. A man with his qualities deserves to be treated with more respect than you showed him. The truism, "If you don't value what you've got, you will lose it," applies to relationships.

Shopping the Classifieds will save you time and money.
