Deer, Elk Suspected of Spreading Noxious Weed Seeds on Farmland

Organic farmer says situation has been ‘catastrophic’

BURLEY • Cassia County farmers hope to find a solution to a growing problem of deer and elk spreading noxious weeds on their farm ground. Organic farmer Cleve Smith, of Sublett, said the deer and elk herds are getting larger and they eat noxious weeds like morning glory in infested areas. The seeds pass through their digestive tracts and are distributed on the farm ground in their droppings. Smith has farmed in Sublett for 60 years. “It’s catastrophic,” Smith said, who went organic in 2001. The process farmers undergo to gain the organic label includes “jumping through numerous hoops” with the Idaho Department of Agriculture, he said. Smith has 1,150 acres of organic wheat and had to pull out 30 acres from the organic program, due to the appearance of morning glory. “I’m well on my way to pulling another 1,000 out,” he said. “If we don’t find a solution, in one to five years, there’s no way I can deal with it. I hope there is some middle ground on this.” Smith said he is not alone. In fact, he and several neighbors approached the Cassia County Commissioners with the issue. A public meeting will be held at 1 p.m., Oct. 15. Officials and farmers from Cassia County, neighboring counties and Idaho Fish and Game will discuss the issue. Fish and Game officials authorized to comment on the issue were not available for comment on Friday.

Blaine School Official Leaves with $600K Agreement

BY ALISON GENE SMITH
alismith@magicvalley.com

KETCHUM • The Blaine County School Board agreed to buyout the remaining three years of Idaho’s highest-paid superintendent’s contract in late September, only six months after re-upping his deal. Former Superintendent Lonnie Barber will receive $600,000 in cash and benefits as part of a separation agreement, the district said Thursday. His departure comes amid an ongoing lawsuit regarding contract work at the district’s buildings. “Since Dr. Barber’s employment contract was entered into in good faith, it was important to honor the contract,” Board Chairman Paul Bates stated in the school district’s press release. The district cited differences in “leadership style” as the reason for Barber leaving. “Both parties also acknowledged the changing dynamics of the relationship and recognized that a positive culture is vital to student success,” the press release said. “I cannot provide more specifics,” said Heather Crocker, communication director for the district. “That’s what the board has said.” Assistant Superintendent John Blackman has been appointed as interim Superintendent for the district. The board hopes to hire a full-time replacement by July, Crocker said.

Man Accused of Shooting Ag Worker Says He Was Only Trying to Scare Victim

ccrane@magicvalley.com

PAUL • The alleged shooter of Encarnacion Duarte-Jabalera told police he was trying to scare the farm worker when he drew a gun on him Tuesday, court documents reveal. Rogelio Munoz Chavez, 36, of Paul, said he was trying to avoid another fight with Duarte-Jabalera by pointing the pistol at his feet when it went off and struck the 31-year-old farmer in the leg, according to the account filed Friday by Sheriff’s Office investigators in Minidoka County Court. Chavez admitted to a getting into a fight with Duarte-Jabalera and said he was trying to avoid another confrontation when he drew the gun on him, reads Minidoka County Sheriff’s Office Investigator Bob Lowder’s report. Witnesses told police Chavez went to his truck and retrieved the gun after fellow workers broke up a fight between the two men, according to court documents. Duarte-Jabalera identified

Chavez as the shooter. Chavez was found not long after the shooting hiding in some bushes, police said. Chavez asked where Duarte-Jabalera was hit before fleeing, witnesses told police. Chavez allegedly reported the shooting to his employer, Steve Delis, and said Duarte-Jabalera needed an ambulance before fleeing the scene, police said. He was arraigned Wednesday in Minidoka County Court on a felony charge of aggravated battery with a deadly weapon. A preliminary hearing is scheduled for Oct. 16. Duarte-Jabalera was listed in good condition on Thursday at the Portneuf Medical Center in Pocatello.

Stocks Rise as Debt Talks Continue in Washington

Stock prices rose for a second day in a row on Friday as investors bet against a U.S. debt default. The Dow Jones industrial average rose 111 points Friday, bringing its two-day gain to 434. Its jump on Thursday was the biggest this year.

Call it the Sigh of Relief Rally. A partial government shutdown pushed the Dow below 15,000 this week before President Barack Obama and House Republicans met on Thursday to talk about the outlines for a possible deal. Obama and Republican senators met on Friday, too.

Man's Vehicle Careens Off of Cliff

KIMBERLY • A Kimberly man was in good condition Friday afternoon at St. Luke's Magic Valley Medical Center after his vehicle went over a 20-foot cliff.

Luis Nevarez, 30, was traveling north on Grandview Drive at high speed Thursday night. He failed to negotiate a 90-degree curve in the road, according to Idaho State Police.

His vehicle went through a concrete barrier and over a 20-foot cliff and landed on its top at the southern edge of Addison Avenue. Nevarez wasn't wearing a seat belt, an ISP release said.

Paula Niehus, 49, of Huron, S.D., was traveling east on Addison Avenue when debris struck her vehicle.

Nevarez was transported by ambulance to St. Luke's Magic Valley. Niehus and her passengers, Jack L. Holman, 75, and Myrna L. Holman, 70, both of Henderson, Nev., were not taken to a hospital.

The eastbound lane of Addison Avenue and both lanes of Grandview Drive were blocked for about two hours Thursday.

WEATHER

Weather Will Turn This Weekend

Brian Neudorff Meteorologist

Friday was a nearly perfect fall day, with a slight breeze, bright sunshine and pleasant coolness.

Unfortunately, the weekend won't be as nice. A storm system moving through the region will bring clouds, dropping temperatures and even a chance of rain at some point during the weekend.

Today's forecast will be fair, but with mostly cloudy skies. Temperatures should get back into the 60s later in the afternoon but the warmth will be short lived. Another storm system will work across the region Saturday night into Sunday. Most will see cooler conditions and scattered rain showers. Highs in the valleys will fall from the 60s into the low 50s.

There is the possibility of mountain snow from Saturday afternoon into Sunday evening. A winter weather advisory is in effect from noon Saturday until 6 p.m. Sunday for Blaine County and elevations above 6,500 feet. The major impact will be on hunters in the Wood River region. By Sunday evening, a total of 4 inches to 9 inches of snow are possible.

By next week, the storm system moves on, weather turns quiet and we slowly warm up back into the 60s by mid week.

Brian Neudorff is the chief meteorologist for KMVT-TV and KWTW.

Private Investment Jumps in T.F.

Uptick in building permits is sign of improving economy.

BY JOE CADOTTE
jcadotte@magicvalley.com

TWIN FALLS • The more than $13.1 million in various private investments in Twin Falls since Aug. 1 is in the middle of one of its most expansive economic growth cycles since it was founded 105 years ago.

Commercial investments in the city range from small business improvements to multi-million dollar expansions, reported the city's building department.

The uptick in commercial building permits filed in August and September are not a coincidence, said Shawn Barigar, Twin Falls Area Chamber of Commerce president and CEO.

"That kind of commercial investment is a key indicator to improvement in the overall economy," Barigar said. "While we've been feeling

What's Going Up

Some of the investments made in Twin Falls since Aug. 1 include:

- $4.3 million for a Fairfield Inn & Suites
- $3.2 million expansion of a First Federal Savings location, not including multiple projects throughout town.
- $1.6 million expansion of a second Idaho Central Credit Union location, not improvements to the economy for sometime, this is a pretty good bump in that activity."

Commercial development naturally follows industrial development, such as yogurt giant Chobani moving its largest plant to Twin Falls, said Jan Rogers, Southern Idaho Economic Development Organization director.

Recently, on the ground, commercial investments add to an already impressive year for south-central Idaho, Rogers said.

including plans for a third.

- $716,483 remodeling of ADM bean drying warehouse
- $750,000 for a Helicopter Hangar at St. Luke's Magic Valley
- $710,425 for a "shell building" that will be used an office building or outdoor strip mall
- $587,981 for a new dialysis clinic in town, Davita Dialysis

Roughly $650 million in capital investments and 850 new jobs were generated in south-central Idaho since November 2012, Rogers said. Those figures don't include the recent jump in investment in Twin Falls over the last two months.

"Thirteen million in private dollars for Twin Falls doesn't surprise me," she said. "It's all about balance. The economy for us in southern Idaho has definitely made the corner as we continue to attract more and more manufacturing and industrial business and the food science sector. As we continue to grow those sectors, the commercial and residential will grow substantially."

Part of the reason the economic growth in south-central Idaho outpaces much of the nation is because area communities are interconnected, Rogers said. The commercial investments made in Twin Falls over the last two months will benefit the whole region in an "economic circle."

"When we're talking about industrial growth, those are the core jobs in the community," Barigar said. "When you look at small businesses and the service sector, that too is a huge part of the community. When you have those services available here, it draws people throughout the region to flow dollars through business which translates into the bigger picture of the whole economy."

Idaho Afterschool Programs Due More Federal Cash

BOISE (AP) • School kids looking for something to do after class could benefit from another $1.5 million in federal funding headed Idaho's way.

The State Department of Education says it plans to divvy up the money for next year, but now is the time for districts to apply for a cut of the cash.

It's coming through the federal 21st Century Community Learning Centers program, which aims to boost art, music, sports and drug and violence prevention during the non-school hours — when some kids might otherwise get into mischief.

Public schools chief Tom Luna praised the federal program, saying it has "a long history of supporting the academic success of students outside of the school day"

Luna says his agency now funds 93 afterschool centers throughout Idaho, serving 6,128 youth daily.

Company Agrees to Pay Idahoans for Bogus Membership Clubs

BOISE (AP) • Idaho Attorney General Lawrence Wasden says a Connecticut company has agreed to pay more than 7,000 Idahoans restitution as part of a settlement over bogus club memberships.

The settlement announced Thursday comes in a case brought by Idaho and 46 other states against Affinion and its subsidiary companies. The refunds are part of a $32 million settlement with the company, which was accused of tricking consumers into signing up and paying for discount clubs and memberships.

Wasden estimates there are 7,600 members of such clubs in Idaho. Wasden estimates that Idahoans affiliated with the clubs and memberships will be eligible to receive an estimated $500,000.

Affinion and its subsidiaries operated multiple discount clubs and membership programs, with names such as Buyer Assurance, Complete Savings, HealthSaver and PrivacyGuard. The clubs offered services like credit monitoring, roadside assistance and discounted travel.

Consumers eligible for a refund will be notified by Affinion, Trilegiant and Webloyalty. Those who believe they are eligible but receive no notice from those companies can file a complaint with the Attorney General.

Pilot Denies Flying While Under the Influence

SANDPOINT (AP) • A Utah pilot who crashed a plane at the Sandpoint airport has denied charges he was flying under the influence of prescription medication.

The Bonner County Daily Bee reported the attorney for 55-year-old Donald Moss Muirhead of Orem, Utah, filed a written plea of not guilty in Bonner County Magistrate Court.

Muirhead was charged after the Piper Aerostar he was flying went off the end of the runway and crashed on Sept.

23. Muirhead and his two passengers weren't injured.

Sandpoint Police said Muirhead reported the plane's brakes weren't working, but the passengers told investigators Muirhead was flying too fast and touched down too far down the runway.

A sheriff's deputy said Muirhead appeared lethargic and spoke slowly and he determined Muirhead was under the influence of intoxicating substances. A breath test showed he had not been drinking.

Weeds

Smith said hunters on his land reported there are currently 25 head of elk on his fields. The numbers of wild animals foraging on farm ground has been increasing in the past few years, he said.

A couple years ago, 70 elk camped out in his fields for months.

Smith said Fish and Game have made efforts to keep the animals off the farm ground.

"But they just crash through the fences," Smith said.

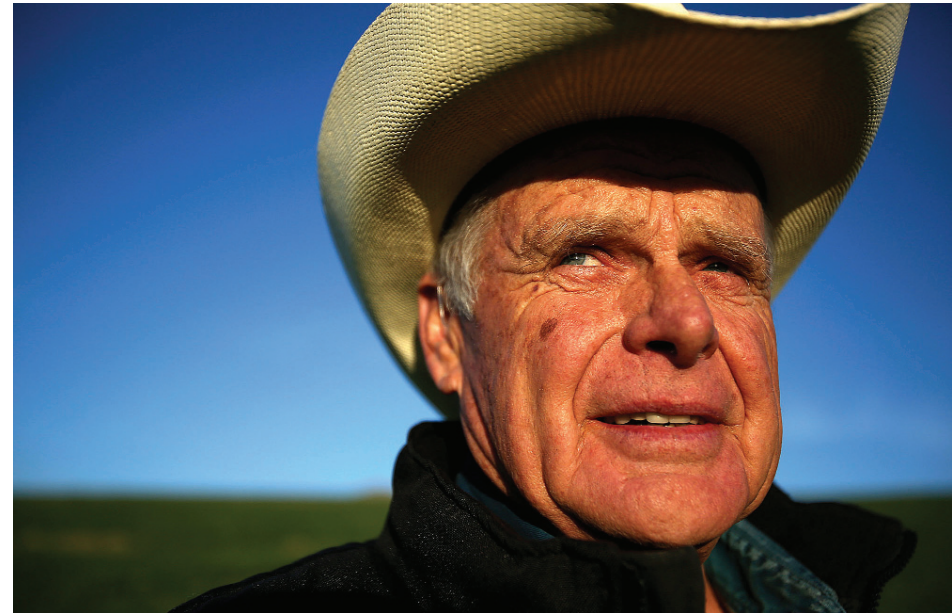

Gordon Edwards, weeds superintendent for Cassia County, said the problem is devastating to organic farmers, who must take ground out of the program while the weeds are eradicated, then they have to wait three years before they can start using the land again.

"Cleve is one of the best farmers we have. He is so conscientious. He wants to leave the county better than he found it," Edwards said.

Smith said he found 20 spots of morning glory this year, which he had to dig out by hand before it went to seed.

If farmers do not catch it before it seeds, they face 30 years of misery, Smith said.

Edwards said the issue not only affects organic farmers, but alfalfa farm-

Cleve Smith is afraid morning glory weeds on his organic farm could put him out of business. Smith is hoping the Idaho Department of Fish and Game will move an elk herd that he believes is spreading the weeds on his farm east Malta.

When 400 head of elk to the alfalfa field, "It's like they're going to the candy store," Edwards said.

A herd of elk can completely wipe out a farmer's third and fourth crop of hay.

"If the farmers don't raise that crop, they have to buy it," Edwards said. "We have to find a solution to this."

Edwards said, on top of the lost crop production, there is added expense for the farmers because state law mandates that farmers control their weeds.

The problem is widespread and includes other weeds, he said. The issue also affects other counties and neighboring states.

"It has a pretty big financial impact for me," Smith said. "The difference in being organic and non-organic is $90,000 a year."

"In plenty of time for the new school year," she said.

Crocker said Blackman has been with the district for decades and is a former art teacher and football coach.

"He's familiar with the community," Crocker said. "He's very capable of stepping into these shoes."

According to the separation agreement, obtained by the Times-News, the school district will pay Barber $600,000 in two payments. One payment of $250,000 will be made on Nov. 1 and the second, $350,000 will be no later than Jan. 6.

Crocker said the money comes from the school district's general fund.

"We recognize that this is a substantial sum of taxpayer money, but felt that the leadership considerations outweighed the financial consideration," Trustee Kathryn Graves said in the release.

A message left for district board Chairman Paul Bates was not returned by deadline Friday.

The district also must pay one month's COBRA premiums for Barber and his family and give him an Apple iPad, Dell Laptop and Apple laptop.

"Those items belonged to the school district and were for his use while he worked for the district," Crocker said.

In the agreement, Barber agrees to cooperate with the school district's process in resolving the McKinstry lawsuits, including possible future litigation. In May 2012, the school district and Seattle-based company McKinsty Essention Inc. filed civil complaints against each other. Then, in December, the district sought more damages.

The dispute is over the amount the company will be paid for a multimillion-dollar project to update heating, ventilation and air conditioning systems in eight school district buildings

"The parties understand and agree that any future statement from BCSD regarding inquiries about (Barber) will be limited to verifying dates of employment," the agreement says.

Barber's contact had been scheduled to last until July 2016. His annual salary was $158,575, making him the highest paid Superintendent in Idaho.

Ellen Mandeville has a second grader and six grader in the school district and runs the blog blaineparents.org.

Mandeville said it was time for Barber to go.

"I feel he was a weak hand at the helm," Mandeville said. "He wasn't leading us where we want to go."

Mandeville said she felt Barber lacked leadership, could be dismissive and had a temper.

In the future, Mandeville said, she hopes the board picks someone who can make Blaine County School district a "world class" district.

Barber told the Times-News Friday he is proud of every minute of the six years he was in the post.

"We did some amazing things," he said. "I think I worked with amazing people."

Barber said he disagreed with statements about him lacking in leadership, but didn't want to detail differences with the district.

"As far as leadership style, I can only comment on mine," he said.

Barber said he made his decisions as superintendent based on what was best for all student, from the highest achieving to the most challenged.

"Every board has the right to choose their own CEO," Barber said of the decision by the school district board.

"I've never seen a board that wanted to keep a superintendent and paid him to go," he said.

In March, the board voted unanimously to extend Barber's contract by another year, against an effort by a group called the "No on Barber Campaign."

Holmes Lundt had three children go through the school district and headed up the campaign as an anonymous forum for people to express their feelings about the proposal to extend Barber's contract.

"The community input was NOT saying 'he must go now,' Lundt wrote in an email to the Times-News. "Instead the community seemed to prefer that in the midst of lawsuits, the recession, issues with academic performance and other operational uncertainties, it was unwarranted to tack another year onto what was already a three-year contract."

Lundt said new board members are likely a reason for the sudden change.

"The tenor of the board has changed with new membership and the new board seems less comfortable with the status quo," Lundt wrote.

A good relationship between a superintendent and a school board is vital for, Barber said, adding his has a great relationship with prior boards and that he's never received a discipline letter or reprimand in his career.

Barber said he hasn't made plans yet for what he'll do next, but has a daughter still in the school district.

"I'm going to dwell on the kids and the teachers and great people I worked with here," he said.

Organized Crime Rings Pop Up in Northern Plains

BILLINGS, Mont. (AP) • The booming Bakken oil patch that's given a major boost to U.S. energy production has emerged as a new front in the fight against drug trafficking.

Organized crime rings are popping up in the Northern Plains, with traffickers sensing opportunity in the thousands of men and women lured there by the hope of a big paycheck.

Law-enforcement officers across the region have teamed up to crack down, netting one of their most significant successes this week — four arrests in North Dakota and a dozen in Montana, all but one on drug charges.

Authorities said Friday that more arrests are in the works as they unveiled an interagency partnership to combat crime in the oil patch. But with drug offenses, violence and property crimes on the upswing, they face an uphill climb to reduce the spiking crime rate.

The changes at play in once-quiet prairie communities were demonstrated this week with the shooting of an FBI agent in the small, unincorporated town of Keene, N.D. The agent, who was not seriously injured, was executing a search warrant as part of an oil patch-centered investigation, said U.S. Attorney for North Dakota Tim Purdon.

"More people equals more money equals more crime," Purdon said, adding the federal shutdown is making the situation worse.

"We're in this very, very serious fight against organized crime for control of the streets of the oil patch, and I've got about half of my employees home on furlough," he said. "We're in this fight now with one arm tied behind our back."

The law enforcement partnership announced

Friday, known as Project Safe Bakken, has been at work since last year.

Montana Attorney General Tim Fox said it could not be made public until arrests and indictments were made in the cases that were unsealed this week.

Police Chief Frank Difonzo of Sidney, Mont., where a new FBI field office was opened in July, said help from outside agencies was sorely needed. He said his officers were busy simply keeping up with routine police work, and were ill equipped to confront organized crime on their own.

A parallel Bakken-focused effort in North Dakota in July charged 22 people with conspiracy to sell heroin and other drugs on an Indian reservation in the heart of the oil patch. Authorities linked that case to a national drug trafficking ring seeking to make inroads in the Bakken. Purdon said the four arrests this week were part of the same investigation.

In the Montana case, the government alleges that 49-year-old Robert Ferrell Armstrong, aka Dr. Bob, of Moses Lake, Wash., brought in large quantities of methamphetamine from his home state and distributed them in the Bakken and elsewhere in Montana through a network of couriers.

At the time of his arrest, Armstrong was wanted for failing to check in with corrections authorities in Washington state, where he has a history of drug, gun and assault charges, said Washington Corrections spokeswoman Norah West.

Armstrong and several others among the 12 people arrested face federal drug conspiracy charges that carry potential sentences of 10 years to life in prison if they are convicted.

ASK ST. LUKE'S

Asthma Symptoms Can Reappear

By Dr. Greg Ball
St. Luke's Clinic
Pulmonology

Q. I had asthma as a child and have been symptom free for many years. Now I am experiencing some of those same symptoms again. Could my asthma be coming back?
Fred, of Hollister

A. Wheezing or asthma as a child often resolves by young adulthood. These symptoms however, can persist or even come back even after long periods of dormancy. There are many warning signs of asthma besides wheezing — are you short of breath with activity or are you limiting your activities more than you were before? Do you have a cough that you can't explain (especially at night)? Asthma can simply present as chest tightness. A personal or family history of asthma or allergies also increases the chances you might have asthma.

If you are having any of these symptoms, tell your primary care physician. Ask them if they think a pulmonary function test would be of benefit to you. It can help measure how much air you move in your lungs, how fast you move that air and if there are any potential deficits in your breathing that may be asthmatic. Another way of describing a pulmonary function test is that it is like an EKG for a lung doctor. It is used to determine the health and function of your lungs.

If you are diagnosed with asthma, a therapeutic regimen might be as simple as including an as-needed medicine like albuterol or if you are experiencing a more chronic condition, a daily maintenance medicine, such as an inhaled corticosteroid may be prescribed. Which medicine would be most applicable and what regimen would be best for you would depend upon the frequency and severity of your symptoms.

Timber Sale in SE Idaho Falls Victim to Shutdown

BOISE (AP) • An Idaho sawmill says it's being booted off a logging project on federal land because of the ongoing government shutdown that's persisting as President Obama and the Republican-led U.S. House fight over the health care overhaul.

Brad Jensen of Jensen Lumber Co., in southeastern Idaho's Bear Lake County, says his crews were ordered off a timber sale by the U.S. Forest Service.

The Idaho Statesman reports the beetle-killed timber must be harvested this year.

If it isn't, Jensen says, it will put him out of business.

House Republicans seek to use the budget impasse to block the health care law.

Jensen isn't a fan of "Obamacare," but says if it comes down to his business closing he'd rather GOP lawmakers relent and agree to a deal with the president.

Two Idaho Men Indicted for Illegally Cutting Timber

BOISE (AP) • A federal grand jury has indicted a southwest Idaho man and his son on allegations they illegally built a trail network in a national forest in Oregon and stole thousands of dollars' worth of pine logs.

The eight-count indictment was unsealed Thursday in U.S. District Court in Boise against Terry K. Burton, 46, of Wilder, and his son Brent L. Burton, 22, of Homedale.

Federal prosecutors allege the men traveled to the Malheur National Forest in eastern Oregon in May and began building illegal trails into the forest with an all-terrain vehicle and other equipment. Investigators say the pair cut more than 4,000 feet of trails and in some places the trail was as wide as 12 feet so they could transport illegally harvested Lodgepole pine logs.

The men are then accused of selling Lodgepole pine posts and poles to a company in Parma, Idaho. The indictment authorizes federal officials to seize more than $7,300 in proceeds the two men claimed in selling the illegally harvested timber. In one of the counts, they are accused of illegally harvesting trees from the Payette National Forest in southwestern Idaho.

Terry Burton did not immediately return telephone messages left by The Associated Press on Friday, and Brent Burton doesn't have a publicly listed telephone number.

According to the indictment, both are accused of one felony count of conspiring to commit theft of government property, one count of injury to government property, and six separate felony counts of theft of government property, which carry a maximum sentence of 10 years in prison and $250,000 in fines.

They are scheduled to appear in court Oct. 22.

It's at least the second federal case this year focused on Idahoans illegally cutting trees from national forest lands.

Larry Benoit, Hunter of Big Bucks, Dies in Vt.

ASSOCIATED PRESS

This 2007 family photo provided by Shane Benoit from the family hunting website shows his father Lanyard ‘Larry’ Benoit, a deer hunter who helped spawn a revival of the art of tracking, and created an empire of books, videos and seminars. Larry Benoit died Tuesday at his home in Duxbury, Vt.

BY WILSON RING

Associated Press

MONTPELIER, Vt. • Larry Benoit, a deer hunter who helped spawn a revival of the art of tracking and created an empire of books, videos and seminars, has died. He was 89.

Benoit, whose given name was Lanyard, died Tuesday at his home in Duxbury at 89. The cause of death was not released, but his son Shane said his father’s health had been declining.

In the past 40 years, the name Benoit has become synonymous with deer hunting and the bagging of huge bucks, many weighing more than 200 pounds. During a lifetime of hunting, his family estimated, Benoit shot at least 200 bucks.

“He has been my hero since I was 12 or 13,” said Scott Smolen, 56, a farmer from Mondovi, Wis., who invited Benoit to hunt his farm last November, when Benoit shot his last buck. Smolen first came to know Benoit by buying hunting supplies from him.

“In my opinion,” Smolen said, “he was the greatest deer hunter that ever walked the face of the Earth.”

The Benoit name moved beyond just the local hunters of central Vermont after a local photographer and author noticed that during every autumn’s hunting season, several large deer would be hanging outside the Benoit home along Route 100 just outside Waterbury.

“People just couldn’t believe that we could successfully keep shooting huge bucks every year,” Shane Benoit said Friday.

Peter Miller, the photographer and author, worked with the hunter to produce the first Benoit hunting book, “How to Bag the Biggest Buck of Your Life,” published in 1975. A hardcover version of the book is still in print.

Since then, most of the publishing has been done by Benoit’s children, also accomplished deer hunters. A website, benoitbigbucks.com, offers videos, books and hunting gear, and even deer rifles autographed by Larry Benoit and three of his sons.

Nazi War Criminal Erich Priebke Dies in Italy

BY NICOLE WINFIELD

Associated Press

ROME • Erich Priebke, a former Nazi SS captain who evaded arrest for nearly 50 years after taking part in one of the worst atrocities by German occupiers in Italy during World War II, died Friday, his lawyer said. He was 100.

Priebke was finally extradited to Italy from Argentina in 1995 to face trial for the 1944 massacre, and he was sentenced to life in prison. However he served that sentence under house arrest at the Rome home of his lawyer, Paolo Giachini.

Giachini announced the death and released a final interview conducted with Priebke in July during which the German denied that Nazis gassed Jews during the Holocaust and accused the West of having fabricated the crimes to minimize the Allies’ own abuses during the war.

Priebke was tried and convicted for his role in the 1944 massacre of 335 civilians by Nazi forces at the Ardeatine Caves outside Rome. The massacre was carried out in retaliation for an attack by resistance fighters that killed 33 members of a Nazi military police unit a day earlier.

Priebke admitted shooting two people and rounding up victims, but insisted he was only following orders.

He long felt like he had been scapegoated, since many other Germans who had participated in the massacre weren’t convicted, another lawyer, Carlo Taormina, told The Associated Press.

“The dignity with which he withstood his persecution made him an example of courage, coherence and loyalty,” Giachini said in the statement.

Priebke had escaped in 1946 from a British prison camp in Rimini, a resort town on Italy’s Adriatic coast, and had lived in Argentina for nearly 50 years before a U.S. television program reported that he was living freely in the country.

That started a lengthy extradition process that ended with him boarding a plane in Argentina on Nov. 20, 1995, the 50th anniversary of the start of the Nuremberg trials, to stand trial in Italy.

The country’s highest appeals court upheld his conviction and life sentence in 1998. He was allowed to serve the term under house arrest due to his age, but was subsequently given small freedoms such as going to church and doing personal shopping _ concessions that outraged Rome’s Jewish community.

Efraim Zuroff, the Simon Wiesenthal Center’s chief Nazi hunter who just this year launched a new push to search for unpunished war criminals, said Priebke’s case proves it is never too late to seek justice.

“Priebke’s death at the age of 100 should be a powerful reminder that some of the worst perpetrators of the crimes of the Holocaust live to a healthy old age and that a person’s chronological age should never prevent them from being held accountable for their crimes, if they are healthy enough to be brought to justice,” he said in a telephone interview from Jerusalem. “Priebke was a classic example of a totally unrepentant Nazi war criminal.”

In his final interview, Priebke denied that gas chambers were used in Nazi concentration camps and that generations have been “brainwashed” into believing that they were. He acknowledged he could be prosecuted for denying the Holocaust, but said such laws “demonstrate fear of the truth coming out.”

Sen. Marco Rubio, R-Fla. passes at left as Sen. Jeff Sessions, R-Ala., right, talks with reporters on Capitol Hill in Washington, Friday as Republican returned to the Capitol after a two-hour meeting at the White House with President Barack Obama, trying to come up with a bipartisan solution to the budget stalemate.

Accelerated Efforts, No Agreement

House Republicans, Senate Make Separate Offers in Budget Battle.

WASHINGTON (AP) • With time running short, President Barack Obama and House Speaker John Boehner accelerated efforts Friday to prevent the U.S. Treasury from default and end a partial government shutdown that stretched into an 11th day. The latest impacts: New aircraft grounded, military chaplains silenced and a crab harvest jeopardized in the Bering Sea.

“Let’s put this hysterical talk of default behind us and instead start talking about finding solutions,” said Senate Republican Leader Mitch McConnell of Kentucky.

Republicans in the House and Senate separately made proposals to the White House for ending an impasse that polls say has inflicted damage on their party politically.

Each offered to reopen the government and raise the $16.7 trillion debt limit — but only as part of broader approaches that envision deficit savings, changes to the health care law known as Obamacare and an easing of across-the-board spending cuts that the White House and Congress both dislike. The details and timing differed.

“We’re waiting to hear” from administration officials, said House

G-20 Finance Officials Focus on US Budget Talks

World finance officials said Friday the United States needs to take urgent action to address its budget problems that are creating economic uncertainties for the global economy.

Finance ministers and central bank leaders for the Group of 20 major economies wrapped up two days of discussions in Washington with a joint statement expressing concern about the ongoing budget stalemate between Congress and the Obama administration.

Russian Finance Minister Anton Siluanov told reporters at a news conference that issues of the partial government shutdown, and the need to raise America’s borrowing limit before a Thursday deadline, were addressed by Treasury Secretary Jacob Lew. Federal Reserve Chairman Ben Bernanke also participated in the talks.

Majority Leader Eric Cantor.

Hopes remained high on Wall Street, where investors sent the Dow Jones industrial average 111 points higher following Thursday’s 323-point surge.

In meetings with lawmakers over two days, Obama left open the possibility he would sign legislation repealing a medical device tax enacted as part of the health care law. Yet there was no indication he was willing to do so with a default looming and the government partially closed.

Obama called Boehner at midafternoon, and Michael Steel, a spokesman for the leader of House Republicans, said, “They agreed that we should all keep talking.”

Jay Carney, the president’s press secretary, said Obama “appreciates the constructive nature of the conversation and the proposal that House Republicans put forward. At yet, the spokesman said, “He has some concerns with it.”

In Congress, the man certain to be involved in any final agreement, Senate Majority Leader Harry Reid, gave no indication of his plans.

While the impact of the shutdown varies widely, lawmakers seemed to be taking care of their own needs.

The members-only House gym remained in operation, and enough Senate staff was at work to operate the aging underground tram that ferries senators and others from the Russell Office Building to the Capitol a short distance away.

The shutdown sent ripples nationwide.

The aerospace industry reported that furloughs at the Federal Aviation Administration have resulted in a virtual stop to certification of new aircraft, equipment and training simulators.

The Senate passed legislation instructing the Pentagon to permit military chaplains to conduct worship services. House approval was still needed.

And Keith Colburn, a crab fisherman, told lawmakers during the day that a lucrative, one-month crab harvest set to begin Oct. 15 in the Bering Sea is in jeopardy because the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration is not assigning quotas to boats.

Obama met at the White House for more than an hour with Senate Republicans, the last in a series of four presidential sit-downs with the rank and file of each house and each party.

He has said repeatedly in recent weeks that he is willing to negotiate with Republicans on budget, health care or other issues, but only after the government is reopened and the threat of default eliminated.

The White House seemed to wobble on that point on Thursday, until Senate Majority Leader Reid emphatically reinforced that it was his view, too.

Republicans have just as insistently demanded that Obama negotiate with them in exchange for passage of legislation that both sides agree is essential.

That left the White House and congressional leaders looking for a way to negotiate their way out of an impasse without appearing to negotiate _ with the health of the nation’s economy dependent on their political dexterity. The administration says the government will bump up against its borrowing limit next Thursday, raising the specter of an unprecedented default.

At Obama’s meeting with Senate Republicans, Sen. Susan Collins of Maine laid out a proposal to raise the debt limit until the end of January, reopen the government and take a slice out of the health care law.

Under a proposal she and other GOP senators have been developing, a medical device tax that helps finance the health care law would be repealed, and millions of individuals eligible for subsidies to purchase health insurance under the program would be subject to stronger income verification.

At the same time, federal agencies that have been affected by across-the-board cuts would gain greater flexibility in the use of their remaining funds.

Any other items could be negotiated later.

Kerry in Afghanistan for Security Talks

KABUL, Afghanistan (AP) • The future of U.S. involvement in Afghanistan after the last troops leave at the end of 2014 may depend on whether U.S. officials like Secretary of State John Kerry can allay Afghan President Hamid Karzai’s worries about sovereignty, Pakistan and the safety of Afghan citizens at the hands of Western troops.

Kerry began urgent talks Friday with Karzai as an end-of-October deadline loomed for a security deal that would allow American troops to remain in Afghanistan after the NATO-led military mission ends next year.

Kerry’s unannounced visit to Kabul comes as talks on the bilateral security agreement have foundered over issues of Afghan sovereignty despite a year of negotiations. Discussions have stalled over Karzai’s demand for American guarantees against future foreign intervention from countries like Pakistan and U.S. demands for any post-2014 residual force to be able to conduct counterterrorism and counterinsurgency operations.

U.S. officials insist they are optimistic about a deal, but the continuing deadlock leaves it doubtful that any agreement will be reached by the deadline. If no deal is signed, there will be no U.S. forces in Afghanistan after 2014.

They said uncertainty caused by the lack of a signed agreement by the deadline would make it more difficult to plan the next phases of withdrawal from Afghanistan and could erode the resolve of NATO allies that are considering leaving troops there for training.

Without the United States on board, it is unlikely that NATO or any of its allies would keep troops in Afghanistan. Germany has already indicated it will not commit the 800 soldiers it has promised.

“That’s why we’re pressing,” said one of the officials traveling with Kerry.

However, the officials, who spoke on condition of anonymity because they were not authorized to publicly preview Kerry’s discussions with Karzai, stressed that Kerry is not expecting to clinch an agreement during his visit.

Instead, the trip, which Kerry and Karzai set up in an Oct. 5 phone call, is meant to build momentum for the negotiators who will continue their talks after Kerry departs, the officials said.

The atmosphere surrounding the talks has been soured by recent angry comments from Karzai complaining about the conduct of NATO forces.

One possible reason for the complaints could have been the capture of a senior Pakistani Taliban commander by U.S. forces on the same day Kerry and Karzai last spoke.

Nobel Peace Prize Goes to Chemical-weapons Watchdog

BEIRUT (AP) • The watchdog agency working to eliminate the world’s chemical weapons won the Nobel Peace Prize on Friday in a powerful endorsement of the inspectors now on the ground in Syria on a perilous mission to destroy the regime’s stockpile of poison gas.

In honoring the Organization for the Prohibition of Chemical Weapons, the Norwegian Nobel Committee said “recent events in Syria, where chemical weapons have again been put to use, have underlined the need to enhance the efforts to do away with such weapons.”

The prize came 10 days after OPCW inspectors started arriving in war-torn Syria to oversee the dismantling of President Bashar Assad’s chemical arsenal.

While world leaders and former Nobel laureates praised the group’s selection, some in Syria lamented that the prize would do nothing to end the bloodshed, most of which is being inflicted with conventional weapons.

“The killing is continuing, the shelling is continuing and the dead continue to fall,” said Mohammed al-Tayeb, an activist who helped film casualties after the deadly chemical attack in August that the rebels and the government have blamed on each other.

The peace prize, he added, should have gone to “whoever helps the Syrian people get rid of Bashar Assad.”

After focusing on such themes as human rights and European unity in recent years, the Norwegian Nobel Committee this time returned to the core purpose of the 112-year-old Nobel Peace Prize — disarming the world.

The Way Out

Charles Krauthammer

Washington Post

For all the hyped indignation over GOP “anarchism,” there has been remarkable media reticence about the president’s intransigence. He has refused to negotiate anything unless the Republicans fully fund the government and raise the debt ceiling — unconditionally.

For all his protestations about protecting the full faith and credit of the United States — jittery markets are showing that his brinkmanship could have precisely the opposite effect — the president’s real intent is to score a humiliating victory over the GOP.

So far, so good. Republicans have fallen to 28 percent approval, the lowest level ever for either party in 21 years of polling and a staggering 10-point drop in the last month. Democrats have also declined, but only four points and, in the end, partisan politics is a zero-sum game. If you lose less than the other guy, you win — because every seat in Congress will be allocated to one party or the other, no matter how disgusted the country is with both.

To be sure, the administration has, as always, overplayed a good hand, with punitive shutdowns — such as of the World War II Memorial — clearly intended to be blamed on the GOP.

People aren’t that stupid. They know a gratuitous abuse of government (lockout) power when they see it. Moreover, Republicans have been passing partial funding bills for such things as national monuments and cancer research, forcing Harry Reid’s Democratic Senate to kill them with a stone cold heart.

Even worse for Democrats, their current partisan advantage is a wasting asset. The rule is simple: shutdown good, debt ceiling bad. Every day the debt ceiling approaches, President Obama’s leverage diminishes.

Obama insists he won’t negotiate on the debt ceiling as a matter of principle. It’s never been used as leverage for extraneous (i.e., non-budgetary) demands, he claims.

Nonsense. It’s been so used dozens of times going back at least to 1973 when Ted Kennedy and Walter Mondale tried to force campaign finance reform on President Nixon. Obama himself voted against raising the debt ceiling when he was a senator in 2006.

So much for principle. Moreover, should Obama miscalculate the brinkmanship, he’ll become the first president to ever allow a default. Precisely opposite to the principle he pretends to be espousing — and ruinous to what’s left of his presidency. Breaching the debt ceiling would indeed, as he claims, be an economic disaster, aborting an already historically anemic recovery. As president, he would take the blame. He can’t allow it.

It’s a bluff. He will blink. That’s why, as the debt ceiling approaches, the initiative will increasingly swing to House Speaker John Boehner. The real question is: What will Boehner do with it?

His answer thus far has been peculiar: He simply wants the president to sit down and negotiate.

Negotiate what? “There’s nothing on the table,” said Boehner on Tuesday. “There’s nothing off the table.”

Stranger still. You cannot negotiate if you don’t know what you want. The Republicans need to present a simple, broadly popular set of demands to attach to the debt ceiling. The president will deal. In his Tuesday press conference, he’d already abandoned his original ultimatum of give me a long-term extension or I don’t budge. Now it’s: Give me an extension of any length and I’ll come to the table.

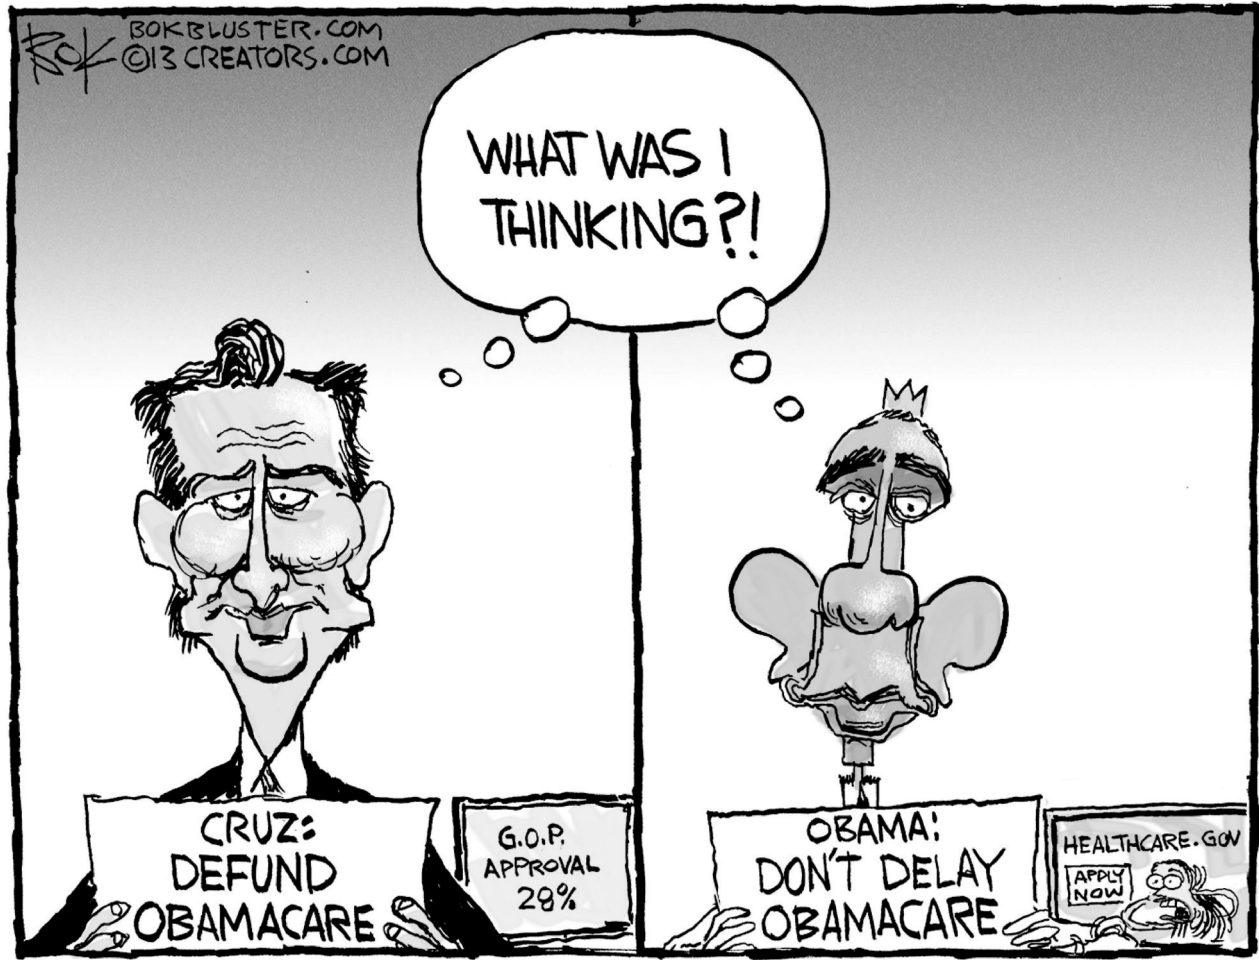

On Thursday, Boehner took that exit ramp, offering Obama a six-week debt-ceiling extension during which negotiations would be conducted. Unless Obama reverses himself and refuses, his “no negotiations” posture evaporates.

What, then, to ask for? Paul Ryan, as usual, points the way with a suggestion that would turn the partial and imperfect success of the last debt-ceiling fight — the automatic spending cuts (“sequester”) that seriously reduced discretionary spending — into the larger success of curbing entitlements, which is where the real money is.

After all, Social Security, Medicare, Medicaid and other health programs (plus interest payments) already claim more than half the federal budget. And they are poised to explode, eating up (estimates the Congressional Budget Office) 97 percent of revenues within 25 years.

Raising (and indexing) the retirement age while changing the inflation measure for entitlements would alone be major achievements. Democrats could be offered relief on the sequester — which everyone agrees needs restructuring anyway, since it cuts agency budgets indiscriminately, often illogically, by formula.

It’s win-win. A serious attack on the deficit — good. Refiguring sequestration to restore some defense spending and some logic to discretionary spending — also good. Forcing the president off Mount Olympus — priceless.

CHEERS & JEERS

CHEER

Cheers to Gov. C.L. “Butch” Otter for pivoting and taking a hard look at the future of Idaho Correctional Facility near Boise.

The prison has been privately operated for years, but the company, Corrections Corp. of America, pulled out after a rash of issues.

Otter’s long been a champion of privatization and small government, so his statement this week that the state should look at taking on the prison were out of character. Some may call this flip-flopping, but we view Otter’s sudden stance as a display of political flexibility.

JEER

Jeers to state Rep. Lance Clow, R-Twin Falls, for flippantly dismissing any consideration of an increase to the state’s minimum wage.

Clow parroted the standard dogma that increasing

Idaho’s $7.25-an-hour minimum wage would be bad for business and decimate available jobs. The impacts on minimum wage hikes are far more complex than Clow’s black-or-white response. Idaho residents are some of the nation’s lowest paid and, while job creation is important, we hope legislators are open to all avenues of bettering the lives of their constituents.

While we appreciate Clow’s commitment to Main Street, a $14,500 annual income is not a living wage.

CHEER

Cheers to No. 1-ranked Hagerman Pirates football squad.

National prep website MaxPreps.com has the Pirates atop all other eight-man squads in the nation.

Hagerman is 27-1 over the last three seasons and regularly crushes the opposition.

Feds to Reopen Idaho Refuge Areas Used to Hunt Waterfowl

WASHINGTON (AP) • The Fish and Wildlife Service says it is reopening 3 million acres in wildlife refuges to allow hunting of pheasants and waterfowl. The sites, in 10 states, have been closed since Oct. 1 because of the partial government shutdown. The agency said Friday that despite limited staffing, allowing public access to Waterfowl Production Areas on wildlife refuges will not cost any money or jeopardize public safety. North Dakota Gov. Jack Dalrymple had threatened to sue unless lands in his state were opened. Dalrymple says pheasant hunting should begin as scheduled this month. He says a government shutdown is not legal justification to close unstaffed, public lands. The decision opens hunting areas in 10 states: North and South Dakota, Montana, Minnesota, Iowa, Wisconsin, Michigan, Nebraska, Idaho and Maine.

Nampa Carjacking Suspect Escapes on Trip Back to Idaho

BOISE (AP) • A Nampa carjacking suspect who eluded authorities for more than a week before being arrested in Montana briefly escaped from custody as he was being returned to Idaho to face charges. The Ada County sheriff's office said Rodney Seiber, 36, ran away when a private security company's transport vehicle stopped to let him use the restroom along Interstate 84 southeast of Boise shortly before 6:30 p.m. Thursday. Officials said Seiber was shackled and handcuffed when he fled. Officers shut down the freeway and set up a perimeter. At about 7 p.m., Seiber stepped out of a brushy area and surrendered to officers. Prosecutors said at some point during his escape, Seiber brandished a knife and tried to get inside a vehicle, KBOI-TV reported. It was not clear where he got the knife. Seiber's bail was set at $500,000 on the felony escape charge. Seiber was being returned to Idaho to face charges for a Sept. 18 carjacking in Nampa. Police say he threatened an employee of a welding supply company and took a company van. He fled into a corn field after the van crashed. His whereabouts were unknown until a motel clerk 670 miles away in Hardin, Mont., called to report trespassers on Sept. 23. Seiber's 18-year-old girlfriend was arrested in Hardin.

National Parks in Utah Reopen in Deal with Feds

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) • Four of Utah's five national parks began welcoming visitors again Friday after being closed as part of the government shutdown then reopening when the state agreed to cover the operating costs. The move drew cheers from antsy tourists and relief from beleaguered shop and hotel owners whose sales tanked during the closures. Utah Gov. Gary Herbert sent $1.67 million to the U.S. government late Thursday - enough to keep the national parks in the state open for 10 days. If the federal government shutdown continues and Utah wants to keep its national parks open beyond those 10 days, the Legislature would have to meet for a special session to consider spending $167,000 a day. Zion National Park was the first site to reopen, with Bryce, Arches and Capitol Reef set to open later in the day. The Natural Bridges national monument also opened. Lake Powell was partially opened and will be fully open by Saturday. Canyonlands will reopen Saturday. "We're kind of scrambling to get staff back on board," said Paul Henderson, assistant superintendent of Arches and Canyonlands national parks. Federal workers were not allowed to use their government emails during the shutdown, he said, so supervisors spent Thursday night and Friday morning tracking down workers on personal emails and cell-phone. Henderson expects large crowds this weekend with many people off for Columbus Day Monday and lured by the draw of the crisp autumn temperatures. "There is probably a bit of pent-up energy with folks wanting to come to the park, too," Henderson said.

Enrollment Drop at Utah Colleges Not as Bad as Feared

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) • Enrollment dipped slightly this fall at Utah colleges and universities — but not nearly as much as first feared after the Mormon church announced last year it was lowering the minimum age for missionaries. Six of the eight schools reported decreases from the year before, with overall enrollment down about 2 percent from the same time in 2012, official figures from the Utah System of Higher Education show. Enrollment at the University of Utah, the state's flagship school, was down by just 1 percent. Salt Lake Community College reported an enrollment increase of 3 percent and Snow College an increase of less than 1 percent. Some schools, such as Utah State and Weber State, used a waiver created earlier this year by the Utah

Legislature that allowed them to give in-state tuition to high-performing students from other states has helped some schools to withstand the exodus of missionaries from The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints. "They have undertaken significant and targeted efforts to recruit new students and encourage others to remain enrolled until they leave for missionary service," said

David Buhler, Utah's commissioner of higher education, in a statement. With about two-thirds of Utah residents being LDS church members, college leaders began preparing for major revenue losses after church leaders announced in October 2012 that they were lowering the minimum age for missionaries: from 21 to 19 for women; and from 19 to 18 for men.

BSU GAME DAY

Utah State Can Make Inroads, but Boise State is Still Big Dog

From 1981 to 2011, spanning play as an independent and in four different conferences, Utah State's football program had two winning seasons. They've had two in a row, and suddenly became the preseason talk of the Mountain West conference in their inaugural year in it.

Over 100 years old, the Aggies are much less storied than Boise State, which has played above the junior college for 45 years.

Utah State's rise the last two years is stunning, an irregular spike on a long trend line.

To say the Aggies want to be like Boise State is to make a false analogy. The Broncos' rise to prominence has been a steady one full of obstacles gradually and sequentially overcome.

New Aggies coach Matt Wells recently said that from the moment it got into the Mountain West that Boise State was the program it "wanted to model ourselves after."

From the high elevation views looking down on Logan, they've got a ways to go. If the Aggies win Saturday, and are embraced as the top dog in the Mountain Division, it'll be like climbing Mt. Everest on the same trip they discovered it.

Utah State's answer to Chris Petersen, Gary Andersen left before the fruits of his labor could be picked, four years into the project.

It's hard to know whether the transcendent Chuckie Keeton is the tail on the comet, or the comet itself.

If the Aggies dissolve on approach into the atmosphere that Boise State has occupied for so long — we'll know. Or if they breach it intact, despite losing so much of its velocity (three losses and minus Keeton), we'll know, too.

But we'll know they've only made a dent.

It'll still be Boise State's world, the Aggies will just be living a little larger in it.

4 Grades from Southern Miss, 4 Tasks for Utah State

BY NICK RULAND
nruland@magicvalley.com

LAST ASSIGNMENT: TWO PUNTS OR LESS

The Broncos punted three times against the Golden Eagles — on its first two possessions and in the fourth quarter. They scored 60 points in-between.

Grade: A
THIS WEEK'S ASSIGNMENT: BALANCE

In Utah State's three wins, they've forced opponents one dimensional, with a 1.76:1 play type ratio. In Utah State's three losses, the ratio between run and pass has been much closer— 1.47:1. The Aggies are easier to throw than run against, but Boise State will have to make sure they mix it up as often as the circumstances allow. If they do, the Aggies two losses to teams with good offense show they're susceptible to lots of points and yards.

LAST ASSIGNMENT: TURNOVER HABIT

Going into their game against Southern Miss, the Broncos had forced seven turnovers in their two wins and one combined turnover in their two losses. They forced three against the Golden Eagles. If they do that to the Aggies, chances of victory skyrocket. Utah State has five turnovers in losses, and two in wins.

Grade: A
THIS WEEK'S ASSIGNMENT: INTERCEPT UTAH STATE'S BACKUP QUARTERBACK TWICE

Its stands to reason that neither Craig Harrison or (and) Darell Garretson are capable of playing as efficiently as Chuckie Keeton has through his first three years — the list of those around the country who can is very small. In 27 games, Keeton has an amazingly low 13 interceptions. In 18 of his 27 starts, he's thrown zero interceptions. Among the top 30 quarterbacks in the country in passing yardage, Keeton is surpassed by only Marcus Mariota of Oregon (who has zero interceptions). Last year among the top 25 quarterbacks in passing yardage, Keeton finished eight in interceptions — and last year was his down year. To put that into perspective, Kellen Moore threw the exact same amount of interceptions, 13, in his first 27 starts at Boise State.

LAST ASSIGNMENT: SIX YARDS A CARRY

As a team, the Broncos averaged 4.4 yards a carry. But take away quarterback Joe Southwick's three rushes for minus-18 yards, one a fluke play and two kneel-downs, and Boise State rushers averaged 6.3 yards a tote.

Grade: A+
THIS WEEK'S ASSIGNMENT: SIX EXPLOSIVE PLAYS

In the Aggies three wins, opponents have combined for just six plays of 20 or more yards. In their three losses, opponents have 13, including seven by BYU. Boise State cannot expect to use long drives to march down the field. They'll need big plays to beat Utah State's defense.

LAST ASSIGNMENT: GET TO THE QUARTERBACK

The Broncos got four sacks and numerous pressures against Southern Miss quarterbacks two weeks ago.

Grade: A
THIS WEEK'S ASSIGNMENT: DARE UTAH STATE'S

QUARTERBACK(S)

The Aggies have a good offensive line and a dangerous running game, with Joey DeMartino replacing the injured Joe Hill, averaging 6.7 yards per attempt on 63 carries. But how much was Utah State's success on the ground created by the presence and playmaking of Keeton? Boise State needs to find out for itself by selling out on the run.

Brigham Young defensive back Daniel Sorensen reaches out to tackle Utah State wide receiver Bruce Natson (9) during their game Oct. 4, in Logan, Utah.

Gooding’s Josh Finley carries the ball as Filer’s Kris Wiedmeier tackles him Friday night, at Filer High School.

Gooding Cruises to SCIC Title

BY NICK RULAND
nruland@magicvalley.com

FILER • Among athletic activities, there can be none crueler than American football.

On Friday in Filer, there was no place on the 120 by 53 yard field, on which much time was spent by Gooding exploring its two ends, to hide a jarring disparity in size, strength and speed between the Wildcats and the Senators.

Final score: Gooding 77, Filer 12. It was 63-0 at halftime. The Senators officially clinched the SCIC title with the victory.

“We came into the game wanting to better ourselves,” 6-foot-4, 280 pound Division I prospect Cole McGinnis said. “We focused on Filer, didn’t underestimate them, but we tried to beat ourselves.”

To make it through an obstacle-laden championship course, there can be no loss of momentum; any easing on the gas pedal is a subtle act of self-sabotage.

The Senators have state title aspirations.

As such, Gooding coach Cameron Andersen could not tell his players to “hey, stop, calm down,” he said afterward.

With many of its back-ups in the game in the first half and using a handful of plays, Gooding could still yield little mercy, and to some, made a 2 1/2-hour case for the mercy rule in 11-man football in Idaho.

Andersen disagrees, and gave good reason — not just for his team, the physically superior one, but for the opposite sideline. Gooding played its underclassmen and used all three deep on the depth chart. Filer found the end zone late.

“I wouldn’t be in favor of a mercy rule,” Andersen said. “I don’t think there should be one in eight man. I think there should be a running clock. It’s a valuable time and opportunity for kids to get repetitions. For (Filer) it would have been 77-0 if it was a run rule. Instead they got 12. Some of them left with smiles on their faces. If its a run-rule, they are blanked on the scoreboard and demoralized. If the coaches do it right its fine.”

Andersen said his team used five plays on offense, focused on staying focused and fundamentals.

All players played, and five scored touchdowns, totaling 11.

“This week we were really looking at what we could do to get better,” Andersen said. “We didn’t have a specific opponent in mind. We were very crisp, very fluid tonight.”

If nothing else, Gooding showed it might be deeper than it appeared on paper coming in.

While Wyatt Williams and Josh Finley combined for seven touchdowns, it was another impressive showing by running back Kaden Barrus, following a typically dominant offensive line.

“He runs downhill,” McGinnis said. “He doesn’t have many moves. I like that.”

Wayde Gazafy and Jorge Mireles both looked like what is becoming the prototype for a Gooding back — strong and relentlessly physical.

Speedster Torin Brunson returned from a knee injury for a few carries, but came out after appearing to re-injure it. Brunson said he was fine afterward, and walked normally on the sideline, though he will be examined this weekend.

Zach Sharp and Preston Hurd each scored a touchdown for the Wildcats.

Burley wide receiver Scott Pilling celebrates a touchdown during the Bobcats’ 35-13 homecoming win over Kimberly on Friday at Burley High School.

Burley Savors Homecoming Victory over Kimberly

BY RYAN HOWE
rhowe@magicvalley.com

BURLEY • Burley High students attending their homecoming dance to-day will finally have something to celebrate.

“We haven’t won (a homecoming game) in I don’t even know how long. Nobody can remember,” Bobcat quarterback Zander Cook said after his team’s 35-13 nonconference victory over Kimberly on Friday evening. “It feels great.”

Cook felt great in the pocket all night long, completing 18 of 21 passes for 264 yards and four touchdowns — each to a different receiver.

“Our wide receivers played great tonight,” the senior QB said. “They were able to get open and I had all the time in the world to throw. ... If anybody has that much time they can do anything they want. ... Best game pass-wise we’ve had this year.”

The win moves the Bobcats’ record to 4-2. The last time Burley had at least four wins in a season was 2005.

Cook’s stellar performance was complemented by Travis Osterhout rushing for 116 yards.

Burley’s defense held Kimberly to 168 total yards, but the Bobcats committed several mental lapses — penalties and turnovers — that won’t be as forgivable in the coming weeks against Great Basin Conference foes Jerome, Twin Falls and Wood River.

“We have mental mistakes here and there, but we kept it together and we played hard as a team. We play as a like to be in their future (and former) league with a road game against the back-to-back Sun Belt champions. The Red Wolves, in their first year under former Boise State assistant Bryan Harsin, are 24.5-point favorites. Idaho coach Paul Petrino said this matchup will give his team a good read of where it's at as it ramps up to rejoin the Sun Belt next season. The Vandals are coming off their worst home loss in program history, and they've allowed 537 yards per game, second-worst in the FBS behind New Mexico State.

Burley scored on its opening drive of the game as Cook zipped a 25-yard touchdown pass to Tanner Sprenger.

After Kimberly’s Tristan Kulhanek intercepted a Cook pass that was tipped, the Bulldogs converted two fourth-down plays on their 62-yard scoring drive. Riley Carlton packed it in from a yard out to tie the game 7-7 early in the second quarter.

But Burley responded immediately, marching 75 yards in 12 plays and Cook completed a 40-yard touchdown pass down the middle of the field to R.J. Nevarez.

A bad snap on a punt by Kimberly set Burley up at the Bulldog 17-yard line with just 35 seconds left in the first half. The Bobcats capitalized on a TD from Cook to

Fresh Expressions of Christianity

Ascension Episcopal Church recently celebrated 10 years in our current building. While doing some historical research, I found that the baptismal font we use came from another Ascension Church in New Haven, Conn. more than 100 years ago. Our namesake in Connecticut is now the sight of urban ministry and the place for a ‘neo-monastic community.’

‘Neo-monastics’ are (generally) young people who are answering God’s call and in the process are discovering new ways to live faithfully (and often communally) as Christians.

These are residential programs where young adults commit to programs of spiritual discernment and formation and service to the communities around them. They are mentored by more experienced Christians as they work, pray and play together. In this way, they put their faith into action, explore their gifts and discover the way they are called by God to live.

The existence of these communities was foretold by Lutheran theologian Dietrich Bonhoeffer, who said in 1935 “the restoration of the church will surely come only from a new type of monasticism, which has nothing in common with the old but a complete lack of compromise in a life lived in accordance with the Sermon on the Mount in the discipleship of Christ.” These communities are marked by prayerful, contemplative and communal lives; a focus on hospitality to others and on practical engagement with the poor.

Dread-locked evangelical Shane Claiborne outlines his transformation in his book, “The Irresistible Revolution: living as an ordinary radical.” A graduate of Billy Graham’s alma mater, Wheaton College, Claiborne served as an intern at that granddaddy of mega-churches, Willow Creek (Bill Hybels) and followed a call to serve with Mother Teresa and later, the Iraq Peace Team. The experience converted and convicted him, so that when he returned to the United States, he sought out his own ‘fresh expression’ of Christianity and found himself amidst poor people ‘squatting’ in an abandoned cathedral in Philadelphia.

Deb Seles, pastor of Ascension Episcopal Church in Twin Falls, may be reached at 733-1248.

The Quotable Pope

Pope Francis blesses a child during the weekly general audience in St. Peter’s Square, at the Vatican, Wednesday.

Casual pope puts Vatican on alert with his quips.

VATICAN CITY (AP) • Pope Francis has grabbed headlines with his off-the-cuff homilies, crowd-pleasing one-liners and lengthy interviews during which he has pontificated on everything from the church’s “obsession” with rules to how he won’t judge gays. But his chattiness has gotten him into some trouble, and the Vatican has gone into damage-control mode to clarify, correct or put his comments into context. Here’s a look at some of Francis’ more eyebrow-raising comments, and the efforts by the Vatican’s spin doctors to address them.

Did Francis Really Consider Turning Down the Job?

In an interview with the Rome daily La Repubblica, editor Eugenio Scalfari quoted the pope as saying he was “seized by a great anxiety” moments after his election and asked the cardinals in the Sistine Chapel to give him a few minutes time to think things over.

“To make it go away and relax, I closed my eyes and made every thought disappear, even the thought of refusing to accept the position, as the liturgical procedure allows,” he was quoted as saying. “At a certain point I was filled with a great light. It lasted a moment, but to me it seemed very long. Then the light faded, I got up suddenly and walked into the room where the cardinals were waiting.” The pope was quoted as saying he signed the acceptance form and went out on the balcony to be introduced to the world as Pope Francis.

But the Rev. Thomas Rosica, who helps with Vatican media relations,

Filer Church Hosts 30th Annual International Sale

BY TETONA DUNLAP

FILER • Looking for a unique gift from another country?

Then consider stopping by the 30th Annual International Gift Sale sponsored by the Filer Mennonite Church, 109 Fifth St. in Filer.

The event is from 9 a.m. to 8 p.m. Oct. 17 and 18. It goes from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Oct. 19.

The gift sale features work from Ten Thousand Villages, one of the world’s largest fair trade organizations and a founding member of the World Fair Trade Organization (WFTO). The company strives to improve the livelihood of tens of thousands of disadvantaged artisans in 38 countries, according to the Ten Thousand Villages website.

“Fair trade was really new 30 years ago,” said Lois Hooley, sale coordinator for the Filer gift sale. “People in this valley have been so supportive of this fair trade sale, so we just keep doing it.”

Lyman Mueller, another sale coordinator, said 100 percent of the proceeds from the gift sale goes back to Ten Thousand Villages and other fair trade organizations.

“This is not a fundraiser for the church,” Hooley said.

The past five years, the sale has raised $30,000 each year, Mueller said.

The event is popular with more than 1,000 people coming through the doors during the three-day event, he said.

“It’s grown over the years. Two reasons is word of mouth and the variety of handcrafts that are available,” Mueller said.

Some of the crafts you can find include olive oils, metal work, furniture and lots of jewelry.

“There’s scarves, pottery and we have a room that is just Christmas ornaments,” Hooley said. “It’s just three days of fun.”

Mueller said, beyond the crafts — which run from $10 and higher — buyers are also helping people in foreign countries that often work 14 hours or more a day for little pay.

“It’s good for us to think about the world as a place where we can help each other. What can one person do?

Bishop Wants Mass Accessible to Hearing-impaired

FORT WAYNE, Ind. (AP) • Bishop Kevin C. Rhoades hopes the Day of Reflection for the Deaf the Catholic Diocese of Fort Wayne-South Bend will offer Saturday is the beginning of what becomes an active deaf Catholic community in the diocese.

“Eventually, I would like to see Masses where the celebrant is signing,” Rhoades said.

Working toward that goal, Rhoades has asked two of the diocese’s current seminarians to learn American Sign Language so they can celebrate Masses and provide sacraments to deaf Catholics in sign language.

He also hopes the Day of Reflection will draw out deaf Catholics and let them know the church wants to serve them.

“We know there are deaf Catholics who have not been well served because they speak a language we are not speaking,” said Mary Glowaski, the secretariat of the diocese’s office of Evangelization and Special Ministries.

In the last two years, however, the diocese has become more intentional in reaching out to people who are deaf or have other disabilities, Glowaski told The News-Sentinel. The goal is to welcome them to the church and to encourage their “full and meaningful participation” in parish life, including in Catholic schools.

For the deaf community, that has included offering a sign language interpreter at Mass once a month at the Cathedral of the Immaculate Conception in Fort Wayne.

Questions About the Bible?

BURLEY • Unlike anything that originates with imperfect man, the Bible has the power to transform us, bringing our thoughts and ways into harmony with God's will. Just how powerful is the word of God? How can we fully utilize its power in our lives? How can we use it more effectively to assist others, such as family members?

We are confident that all will be built up spiritually as these points are considered during the special assembly day, which has as its theme, "God's Word Exerts Power," drawn from Hebrews 4:12. The program will be held to-day from 9:50 a.m. to 4 p.m. at the King Fine Arts Center at the Burley High School.

Approximately 800 Jehovah's Witnesses and others from the south-central Idaho area will be in attendance. The entire program is open to the public and no collections will be taken.

For more information on this subject or any question related to the Bible, contact Jehovah's Witnesses locally by calling 208-647-0997.

World Communion Sunday

TWIN FALLS • World Communion Sunday will be celebrated at the 8:45 a.m. worship Sunday, Oct. 13, at the First United Methodist Church, 360 Shoshone St. E. in Twin Falls. The Rev. David Childress will serve Holy Communion, at which breads from a variety of cultures will be offered.

World Communion Sunday calls the church to reach out to all people and model diversity among God's children. The offering benefits World Communion scholarships, the Ethnic Scholarship program and the Ethnic In-Service Training program. United Methodists relate to World Communion Sunday by informing qualified people, especially youth and young adults, to apply for scholarships and by giving generously to the special offering, which often enables first-generation students to attend college.

Gifts to World Communion Sunday offers to equip racial and ethnic minority students in the United States and international students to transform the church and communities.

The choir will sing "At the Table of the Lord" by Jay Althouse.

Childress will lead a Bible study and sermon discussion at 6:30 p.m. Sunday in the church library.

The First United Methodist Church Conference will be held at 6:30 p.m. Tuesday, Oct. 15, in the church library. All committee chairpersons should attend and all church members are invited.

Sunday school at 9 a.m. is studying what the Bible says is a life of generosity; it's not just about money.

Worship begins at 10 a.m. where contemporary and classic hymns of the faith are sung at a comfortable volume. Fellowship that is only possible in a smaller church begins after worship downstairs.

A Bible study on the New Testament Book of James will be at 2:30 p.m. Tuesdays.

Learn about Zen Buddhism

TWIN FALLS • Ryan Terry will host the discussion on Zen Buddhism when the Magic Valley Unitarian Universalist Fellowship meets at 10:30 a.m. Sunday, Oct. 13, at the Twin Falls Senior Center, 530 Shoshone St. W.

Zen Buddhism is a branch of Mahayana Buddhism. Zen emphasizes enlightenment and personal expression of direct insight. In the Zen tradition, there is less emphasis on sutras or doctrine. In the western world, people often talk about Zen moments. But what is a Zen moment? A Zen moment is a moment of great awareness or enlightenment. It is a moment where you begin to understand what is truly most important and deserving of one's attention in life. Zen moments occur during times when we place lots of effort into completing a task and in the end have nothing tangible to show for it.

Terry will present a few Zen moments from his life and ask members of the congregation to share some of their personal Zen moments Street West in Twin Falls.

Newcomers are welcome. Child care is available. The building is handicapped accessible.

Members of the the Parley 7th Ward mingle as they file out of church after sacrament meeting, on Sept. 22 in Salt Lake City.

Distinct Mormon Wards Help Singles Stay in Faith

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) • Mormon congregations don't typically require members to have transportation, commit to active participation, accept assignments, be employed and forgo any church welfare.

But LDS wards for "mid-singles" are anything but typical.

These congregations — where such rules can be in play — are made up exclusively of nonmarried Mormons ages 31 to 45. They offer no programs for children or teens. Their main purpose is to provide a haven for LDS singles in a marriage-dominated faith and to help them meet potential mates.

Such wards seem to be flourishing in Utah and other urban centers — Boston, Los Angeles, San Francisco, Washington, D.C. — and the governing LDS First Presidency has approved the creation of new ones.

In the Beehive State, mid-singles wards have grown large and unwieldy — some as big as 650 regular attendees. Their geographical boundaries are vast — one ward extends from 2100 South in Salt Lake City to 6200 South — and their all-volunteer clergy is stretched to the limit.

Salt Lake City's Parley's Seventh Ward has an average weekly attendance of 650 — out of 693 on the roll, 264 males and 429 females — divided into six female Relief Societies and three male Elders Quorums (most Mormon wards have one of each). The ward also has smaller groups that assemble for Monday night activities. In the past year, it has had 60 weddings.

The east-side congregation, which meets in the historic Granite Tabernacle, at 2005 S. 900 East, is not a place for casual commitment, and the rules are in place "for sheer manageability," says Bishop Chris Nielson, who owns a construction company.

"We are hoping to give everyone the best experience," Nielson explains. "We are so geographically dispersed. If members have financial problems, for example, we will take care of them. But it would be taxing for this ward, so they would be better off having a bishop (who lived nearby)."

Members of the the Parley 7th Ward talk after church services on Sept. 22. LDS wards for 'mid-singles' are anything but typical. These congregations, where such rules can be in play, are made up exclusively of nonmarried Mormons ages 31 to 45.

Other mid-singles bishops say the rules help keep deadbeat dads, sexual predators and the less committed from preying on their members.

The Parley's congregation is so well-organized, with so many ward leaders assigned to help the bishop look out for everyone, Nielson says, that it provides a feeling of safety and security — especially for the women.

The membership requirements at some of these wards — described at times as "wards of privilege" — are not about wealth but participation. Still, those expectations may have kept away potential joiners.

"I understand what they are trying to accomplish with the rules, but without any context, they seem heartless," says Jared Brenner, a Salt Lake City Mormon in that age who now goes to his local family ward. "These rules are not from the church handbook. It's local leaders adapting as they think they need to, but it's strange not to feel welcome at church."

Whether they worship with other singles or with families, the number of Mormons in this demographic is rising. Like many Americans, more and more of them are divorced and more and more of them are tying the knot later.

And many are slipping away from the Utah-based Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

Why? Well, some older singles hand him a wedding announcement for the coming Wednesday.

"I personally love the size of the ward," Nielson says. "That gives our members more opportunities to meet others. There is so much power and energy in this ward. The amount of good this ward does is off the charts. I have never seen a group of people so willing to do for others."

A Mormon congregation might provide one or two "subs for Santa" to needy children, he says. His singles took care of 125, raising more than $40,000 in one night.

A group of the singles works with Salt Lake City's Calvary Baptist Church to provide breakfast every Sunday at Pioneer Park, says Nielson's wife, Heidi.

"You can find anything you want to find here," says Jordan Callister, Elders Quorum president No. 1. "There are so many people here for the right reasons. It's like a mecca of single people coming together."

Kristen Rushton, one of the Relief Society presidents, says the size can be overwhelming "but we are organized for interaction with smaller groups."

Callister and Rushton say the rules help manage the ward, but the bishop has wide discretion to make exceptions.

There is no stigma for divorced members, says Rushton, who works at Myriad Genetics. "We make an effort to reach out to everyone."

The goal, they say, is not just pairing off, but worshipping together.

"We have a lot of very talented people," Rushton says. "It's a spiritual experience every Sunday."

Not a group, they say, to be pitied.

Mormonism is about "uplifting each other," Henderson says, not beating anyone down. "We don't really need advice on dating — I think we have that covered — as we much as we need the uplifting gospel message, love and support."

Pope

later said the interview didn't reflect Francis' real words. He said Scalfari neither recorded the conversation nor took notes, reconstructing the conversation from memory and printing it as a verbatim interview. The Vatican doesn't dispute the overall thrust of the interview, which Scalfari said he submitted to Francis for review and which the Vatican newspaper reprinted verbatim. But Rosica said the purported "mystical" experience recounted by Repubblica after the election didn't happen, though Francis himself has said previously and in public that "I didn't want to be pope."

Can Atheists be Saved?

One of the novelties introduced by Francis has been his daily 7 a.m. Mass in the Vatican hotel, to which groups and individuals are invited. Francis delivers homilies each day, the contents of which are summarized by Vatican Radio.

On May 22, he caused no shortage of confusion when he suggested that even atheists could find salvation.

According to church teaching, the Catholic Church holds the "fullness of the means of salvation" — a message that has long been taken to mean that only Catholics can find salvation. But in his homily, Francis said: "The Lord has redeemed all of us, all of us, with the Blood of Christ: all of us, not just Catholics. Everyone! 'Father, the atheists?' Even the atheists. Everyone!"

Rosica issued a lengthy "explanatory note" a few days later after being inundated with questions about whether Francis was changing church doctrine on salvation. He noted that church teaching also holds that "those who through no fault of their own" don't know about Jesus but seek God and try to do his will can also attain eternal salvation.

"Always keep in mind the audience and context of Pope Francis' homilies," Rosica cautioned. "His words are not spoken in the context of a theological faculty or academy nor in interreligious dialogue or debate. He speaks in the context of Mass."

Should the Vatican Bank be Saved?

On April 24, Francis invited members of the Vatican bank to join him for Mass in the hotel. The Institute for Religious Works, as the bank is known, has been plagued by scandals — most recently over the arrest of a Vatican monsignor on charges he tried to smuggle some $26 million into Italy from Switzerland without declaring it at customs.

Given the scandals, the arrival of a reform-minded, non-nonsense pope has prompted a flurry of speculation that Francis might shut the bank down.

Archbishop Angelo Becciu, under secretary of the Vatican secretariat of state, told the Vatican newspaper a few days later after comments by the pope that Francis was by no means hinting that he might shut down the Vatican bank.

LOGAN, Utah • By now you’ve heard Utah State star quarterback Chuckie Keeton suffered a season-ending knee injury last week. But there’s much more to the Aggies than No. 16. “I know we have guys this year who are not going to back down from the challenge,” Keeton said before this season. “We have a team full of fighters, we have a team full of competitors. That’s all you can really ask from a football team, as long as they compete for a full four quarters, you’re always going to be in the game.”

Offense

Sure, Keeton ranked second in the nation in touchdown passes, but he’s only half of the pitch-and-catch equation. Seniors Travis Reynolds and Travis Van Leeuwen lead a deep, talented and experienced group of wide receivers. Boise State will also face the best tight end it’s seen this season with senior D.J. Tialavea. Perhaps the biggest strength of Utah State’s offense is its offensive line. The Aggies had all five starting offensive linemen return this season, and despite an injury to guard Kyle Whimpey, USU boasts one of the strongest and most experienced O-lines in the Mountain West, led by center Tyler Larsen (two-time first-team all-WAC). The Aggies lost starting tailback Joe Hill to a season-ending knee injury two weeks ago. But depth at this position isn’t much of a problem for a program that’s had three NFL running backs drafted the past two years. Joey DeMartino is USU’s go-to guy now and averages 6.7 yards per carry. Who will fill in at quarterback? “You’ll know on game day,” said USU coach Matt Wells at his Monday press conference. “That’ll be about the last time I answer that.” We do know, however, it will either be Craig Harrison or Darell Garretson. Harrison, a 24-year-old junior who’s been the back-up to Keeton the past two seasons after transferring from Snow (Utah) Junior College, played three-plus quarters after stepping in after Keeton’s injury against BYU. Garretson, a 19-year-old freshman, is the apparent future of Aggie football as a highly sought-after recruit from Arizona. Neither quarterback has the pinpoint passing precision, mobility or escape-ability of Keeton, who had USU ranked among the top 15 in the nation in third-down conversions. How well Harrison or Garretson handle USU’s varying-tempo offense will dictate the Aggies’ fortunes the rest of this season.

Defense

Wells said his team will “have to play elite defense” against the Broncos. That’s mostly what the Aggies have done all season. USU ranks 25th in the nation — and first in the Mountain West — in total defense, holding opponents to 335.8 yards per game. The Aggies also rank first in the Mountain West in scoring defense (19.3 points per game) and rushing defense (132.2 yards per game). The team ranks sixth in the country in fumbles recovered and 24th in third-down stops.

Utah State running back Joey DeMartino (28) carries the ball as Brigham Young defensive back Robertson Daniel defends during an NCAA football game Oct. 4, in Logan, Utah.

The strength of USU’s defense begins with the linebackers, led by senior Jake Doughty, who ranks 10th in the nation in tackles. He’s joined by Zach Vigil and Kyler Fackrell, who were all-WAC performers last year. USU has shown inconsistency in the secondary. Opponents only average 203.7 passing yards per game against the Aggies, but last week they allowed BYU quarterback Taysom Hill — a below-average passer at best — 278 yards and three touchdowns through the air.

On the defensive line, USU has senior end Connor Williams, who led the team in sacks last year, back from injury. “They’re a big-time effort team,” Williams said of Boise State. “The offense as a whole is a lot of technicians. They’re very committed, hard working guys, so they’re a lot like us. It’s going to be a hard-fought battle.”

Coaching

for Wisconsin at the end of last season. The Aggies promoted Matt Wells, a USU alum who was serving as Andersen’s offensive coordinator. Wells was an Aggie quarterback (1993-96) and has other assistant coaching experience at Navy, Tulsa, New Mexico and Louisville.

Overview

It will take a few weeks to measure the full effect of season-ending injuries to offensive standouts Keeton, Hill and Whimpey. But with a 2-0 record in MW play, the Aggies’ goals of a conference title and bowl game are still very much in reach. A loss to Boise State, however, could begin to derail what most expected to be a promising season, with USU coming off its most successful season (11-2) in school history in 2012. “Obviously, when you have key players go down the rest of the team has got to pick up the slack,” Williams said. “Defensively, offensively and on special teams, we’re going to have to be more sound. I don’t doubt our crew; I think we’ll be able to pull it off.”

The Edge: Boise State at Utah State

BY NICK RULAND
nruland@magicvalley.com

QUARTERBACKS

Boise State: Joe Southwick has the third highest completion percentage in the country, yet the 35th best quarterback rating. His critics’ arguments largely lack merit. Southwick has been really good. Had his receivers made more plays for him up to this point, he’d be having one of the best seasons in college football. Utah State: Matt Harrison, a Snow College transfer, is thought to be a game-manager. True freshman Darrel Garretson was the best quarterback recruit out of the state of Arizona, and thought to be a potential difference-maker down the road. Boise State could see either or both. Regardless, with Chuckie Keeton out, the Broncos find themselves with a positional strength they wouldn’t have had a week ago.

Edge: Broncos

RUNNING BACKS

Boise State: True freshman Aaron Baltazar is done for the year. That hurts, but sophomore Jack Fields has long been considered a good option to back up Jay Ajayi. Of all the places to suffer a season-ending injury atop the depth chart, running back was a position better able to absorb that kind of blow. Utah State: Joe Hill was considered the next Aggie in line to make the NFL, but shared the same fate as Baltazar. Back-up Joey DeMartino is averaging 6.7 yards per carry and is a power-speed combo back.

Edge: Even

WIDE RECEIVERS/TIGHT ENDS

Boise State: Kirby Moore and Aaron Burks may be on the shelf, but no further information on their statuses can be gleaned from coach Chris Petersen. Gerald Boldewijn has quietly put together a good season, surpassing the 100-yard mark

Predictions

David Bashore: Boise State 30, Utah State 28
Ryan Howe: Utah State 24, Boise State 21
Nick Ruland: Boise State 40, Utah State 27

the last two weeks. Sophomore Troy Ware is likely to be a bigger part of the mix with injuries to Burks, Moore and tight ends Holden Huff and Gabe Linehan, as he’s moved to second on the depth chart. Utah State: Travis Reynolds was considered the short-range option coming into the season but is averaging more than 14 yards a catch thus far, while Travis Van Leeuwen is a sizeable X receiver with the speed to separate downfield. Boise State has faced better receiving groups, but the Aggies group is solid and will pose problems. Utah runs two-tight end sets with D.J. Tialavea and Keegan Andersen as reliable safety valves in the passing game.

Edge: Boise State

OFFENSIVE LINE

Boise State: Questions remain about the health of road-grading right tackle Rees Odhiambo after he went down against Southern Miss. Boise State’s line has played well but has not dominated, especially against the two good defenses it’s faced so far — Washington and Fresno State. Utah State: The Aggies rank 50th in the nation in sacks allowed and have opened up holes all season, allowing their running backs (not including quarterback scrambles) to average more than five yards per carry. Right guard Kyle Whimpey is out for the season, but his brother Kevin (left tackle) and all-Western Athletic Conference center Tyler Larsen still make the offensive line a strength for the Aggies.

Edge: Aggies

Boise State’s Jack Fields carries against Southern Miss during the second half Sept. 28, at Bronco Stadium in Boise.

DEFENSIVE LINE

Boise State: Is this the big game where Demarcus Lawrence finally shows up? The Broncos picked up the pass rush in its last game against Southern Miss, but their performance against the Aggies could be the most important they have all year. They can’t allow the Aggies back-up quarterback(s) to get comfortable. Utah State: The Aggies rotate their two-gap lineman in their 3-4 schemes, hoping to ensure they hold the point and allow their star linebackers to shine. Conner (The Barbarian) Williams returned from injury last week against BYU and is the best of the bunch, tallying six sacks last season.

Edge: Broncos

LINEBACKERS

Boise State: Redshirt freshman Ben Weaver is turning into a star. Against its two top opponents this season, the Broncos linebackers have struggled tackling, flowing to the ball and in coverage. Facing the Aggies’ two tight-end sets and what is likely to be a run-heavy approach, the Broncos’ linebackers will likely be on the hook if the Aggies have a big day. Utah State: The Aggies linebackers are the best in the conference, with Zach Vigil and Jake Doughty controlling the middle and the athletic Kyler Fackrell lining up and attacking different parts of the offense. Zach Vigil’s brother Nick made his first start of the year last week and may have more promise than his senior sibling.

Edge: Aggies

SECONDARY

Boise State: Dillon Lukehart steps up to take the second spot on the safety depth chart with Ebo Makinde out for the season. The Boise State secondary breathes a sign of relief now with Chuckie Keeton’s injury, but has performed miserably in its two big tests on the season. Coach Petersen believes the group is gaining confidence and will show the promise the staff sees in them. Utah State: All four of the Aggies are upperclassmen, and they’re good. Utah State has held opposing quarterbacks to a completion percentage of 52.

Edge: Aggies

SPECIAL TEAMS

Boise State: Against Southern Miss, Donte Deayon (48 yards), Bryan Douglas (21) and Shane Williams-Rhodes (39) each had punt returns of more than 20 yards. Dan Goodale has been a better kicker than Sean Wale and Trevor Harman have been punters. Utah State: Nick Diaz has made seven of nine kicks on the season after making 10 of 13 last year. Jaron Bentrude is averaging less than 40 yards a punt, with just five of 33 making it inside the 20 yard line. Devonta Glover-Wright and Kenn Williams each have returns of 40 yards or longer, but the unit’s return average isn’t great, and the Aggies haven’t been explosive on punt returns.

LEGAL NOTICE

The Idaho Department of Fish and Game was informed by the Bureau of Fisheries that the overall return of steelhead to the Clearwater River drainage is less than forecasted and numbers of large steelhead in the 2013-2014 return to Dworshak Hatchery are lower than anticipated and the fishery must be constrained to facilitate the hatchery meeting their broodstock goal. The Fisheries Bureau recommends reducing the daily and possession limits for steelhead caught in all sections of the Clearwater River open to steelhead angling and restricting maximum length of steelhead caught in waters of the North Fork Clearwater River and the Mainstem Clearwater River downstream of the Orofino bridge.

Pursuant to his authority under Idaho Code Section 36-106(e)(6) (A), the Idaho Department of Fish and Game Director hereby reduces the daily bag and possession limits on steelhead harvested in the Clearwater River during the Fall 2013 and the Spring 2014 steelhead seasons to 1 fish per day and 2 in possession. Furthermore, in waters of the North Fork Clearwater River and the Mainstem Clearwater River downstream of the Orofino bridge steelhead harvested must be less than or equal to 28 inches total length. These changes become effective the start of fishing on October 15, 2013.

Copies of Order 13-47 are available at the Idaho Department of Fish and Game headquarters, 600 South Walnut, P.O. Box 25, Boise, ID 83707.

DATED this 8th day of October, 2013.

Today's Highlight:

On Oct. 12, 1962, the devastating Columbus Day Storm, also known as the “Big Blow,” struck the Pacific Northwest, resulting in some 50 deaths.

TODAY IN HISTORY

On this date:

In 1492 (according to the Old Style calendar), Christopher Columbus arrived with his expedition in the present-day Bahamas.

In 1810, the German festival Oktoberfest was first held in Munich to celebrate the wedding of Bavarian Crown Prince Ludwig and Princess Therese of Saxe-Hildburghausen.

In 1915, English nurse Edith Cavell was executed by the Germans in occupied Belgium during World War I.

In 1933, bank robber John Dillinger escaped from a jail in Allen County, Ohio, with the help of his gang, who killed the sheriff, Jess Sarber.

In 1942, during World War II, American naval forces defeated the Japanese in the Battle of Cape Esperance. Attorney General Francis Biddle announced during a Columbus Day celebration at Carnegie Hall in New York that Italian nationals in the United States would no longer be considered enemy aliens.

In 1960, Japanese Socialist Party leader Inejiro Asanuma was stabbed to death during a televised debate in Tokyo by an ultranationalist student, Otoyama Yamaguchi, who hanged himself in jail.

In 1971, the rock opera “Jesus Christ Superstar” opened at the Mark Hellinger Theatre on Broadway.

In 1986, the superpower meeting in Reykjavik, Iceland, ended in stalemate, with President Ronald Reagan and Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev unable to agree on arms control or a date for a full-fledged summit in the United States.

In 1997, singer John Denver was killed in the crash of his privately built aircraft in Monterey Bay, Calif.; he was 53.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE®

“Think? Why think! We have computers to do that for us.”
— Jean Rostand

Here is another example of how well computers can play, given the right circumstances. The computer known as GIB can generally find the best line when it understands the constraints imposed by the bidding.

Today’s deal comes from Deauville, in 1996. Herve Mouiel won the prize for the best-played hand here, declaring six no-trump on a spade lead. So how do you make two diamond tricks in your slam? You can play for a stiff honor somewhere, or a doubleton honor in either hand, but you may well have to guess which defender to play for shortage.

The chances of a 5-2 diamond break did not seem especially good, with both opponents having shown a long suit, so Mouiel played East for both diamond honors. Since he had opened a weak two with such a feeble suit, he rated to have some side-values. Mouiel cashed two spades, then all five hearts and both his clubs.

At this point dummy was left with a small spade and three diamonds, South had the master spade and three diamonds. West was irrelevant, and East had to come down to king-queen-third of diamonds and thus just one spade.

Now declarer played the spade king, stripping East of all but his three diamonds, and next led a diamond to the 10 to endplay him. Nicely done! At the other table, the French defender found the devastating lead of the diamond nine. GIB duplicated Mouiel’s line, but no one gave it a prize.

ANSWER: There is no point in trying to thread the needle by trying to stay out of game here. Your aces and fifth trump coupled with your builders in diamonds make this hand too good for an invitation. It is worth a straightforward jump to game.

DEAR ABBY: I am 19, and because of some traumatic events in my past, I'm afraid of the dark and sleep with my baby blanket. I went to counseling about it, but eventually stopped because it didn't help. I haven't had any real problems as a result of the issue because I live at home and my boyfriend has been supportive in accommodating my needs when I stay with him. Plus, I don't need my blanket when I'm with him.

DEAR ABBY Jeanne Phillips

My concern is about the upcoming semester. I will have to move to the main campus of my university in order to continue my education. This means I'll be living in a shared dorm. The two times it came up during high school, I was teased mercilessly until something else came along. While I have reached the point where I can go without my blanket for a few nights, any longer and it starts to get to me.

I don't want to have problems when I move to the main campus because I'm already going to stand out for moving in the middle of the year, but I don't know how to keep training myself to give up my blanket.

— STILL SCARED IN DELAWARE

DEAR STILL SCARED: You might not have to. I have a suggestion that might be helpful, but it would require having your blanket converted into a "huggie pillow." That way you can still sleep with it but it would no longer resemble a baby blanket. Many people sleep with an extra pillow, so it wouldn't appear to be odd at all.

DEAR ABBY: My vegetarian, won't-harm-a-fly husband owns two handguns. They were bought before I met him. He knows I don't approve. I have always felt strongly about not raising children in a home where guns are kept. His argument for having them is that he distrusts our government. He claims the guns will protect our family if there is ever an uprising or a riot.

While I support his desire to protect our family, I'm frightened by the much more immediate possibility of an accident happening, or the children finding them and harming themselves or someone else.

We plan to start a family in the near future, and I have tried to talk him into either getting rid of the guns or storing them elsewhere. Every time I raise the subject, it turns into an argument and he insists he won't get rid of them. I'm at a loss about how to resolve this problem. Any advice?

— UNWILLING TO GIVE UP IN PENNSYLVANIA

DEAR UNWILLING: Would your vegetarian, wouldn't-harm-a-fly husband consider trigger locks for his weapons or a gun safe? If not, then perhaps you should consider raising your children with a man who isn't already married to his guns.

DEAR ABBY: What do you do if you like a teacher? Do you just hide it? He always comes to my table and I can't focus because I get so distracted. I think he's very good-looking. I'm 13 and he's 23. What should I do?

— CRUSHING IN CALIFORNIA

DEAR CRUSHING: What you're experiencing happens in countless classrooms and it's perfectly normal. Unless you're an accomplished actress, hiding your feelings would be like trying to smuggle dawn past a rooster. Function as best you can, and don't stare at him because it could be embarrassing for him. If you want to impress him, be his top-achieving pupil. The strong emotions you're feeling will fade once an attractive young man your age appears on the horizon. Trust me on that, because I'm speaking from experience.

IF OCTOBER 12 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: You may be poised to enjoy a peaceful period of bountiful opportunities and can settle into a comfortable groove during the next several weeks. You're enthusiastic, fearless and unlikely to experience any surprises, so you can concentrate on achieving your deepest ambitions in December. December is a focal month when you'll have the vision, as well as the expertise, to make sound business or financial decisions. End-of-the-year tax strategies can make a world of difference. However, if the opportunity for an amorous escapade arrives in December or February, don't pass it up.

HOROSCOPE

Jeraldine Saunders

ARIES (March 21-April 19): When you accidentally go overboard, you find that the water is fine. You may be drowning in a sea of ideas, but a special someone is nearby to throw you a life jacket. A sense of humor is useful this weekend.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Feeding your fantasies feels good. People may perceive you as better than you really are, so this might be a good weekend to go to the mall and get glamour shots, visit a local carnival, or meet new connections.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): You may get a nibble but can't get a byte. Your mind tends to prefer logic, so when people dangle invitations or assurances in your direction you want to take them at their word. Casual promises may not pan out.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): "Happy as a clam" is an odd expression. You may not be sure if anyone has ever done a study on why clams are so happy, but you really don't care. You may find life very exciting and satisfying, with or without a study.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Following well-meant advice might land you in a pickle. Work and career matters could come to a culmination point and you may be forced to follow through on off-hand promises.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): A creative roadblock may fall away and you're likely to be optimistic about the future. Get necessary paperwork done and take care of all details. A friend might exaggerate an ability to assist you.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): It's called a fling because it isn't likely to happen again. You throw your heart into something, but never actually let go and can reel it back if necessary. Have a romantic weekend without consequences.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): You can exercise good judgment without being judgmental. You may discover that others are frittering away resources or not following through on promises. Put the brakes on spending without putting a lid on fun.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Act on the cue cards from "Gone with the Wind" and think about it tomorrow. Your optimism might be grounded in reality, but you can have a great time living out a fantasy for a few hours.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Social niceties and good manners win respect and extra appreciation, even when you must fly by the seat of your pants. The tendency to be businesslike keeps personal boundaries posted with new people.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Once day, your fantasies will come true. A break from routines could be great fun and offer an exciting escape from reality. Just remember that passing pleasant experiences are not permanent.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Use broad strokes instead of tiny ones and you won't paint yourself into a corner. This isn't the best time to go over minor details with partners or a significant others. Maintain an optimistic, helpful attitude.

Weeds

Smith said hunters on his land reported there are currently 25 head of elk on his fields. The numbers of wild animals foraging on farm ground has been increasing in the past few years, he said.

A couple years ago, 70 elk camped out in his fields for months.

Smith said Fish and Game have made efforts to keep the animals off the farm ground.

“But they just crash through the fences,” Smith said.

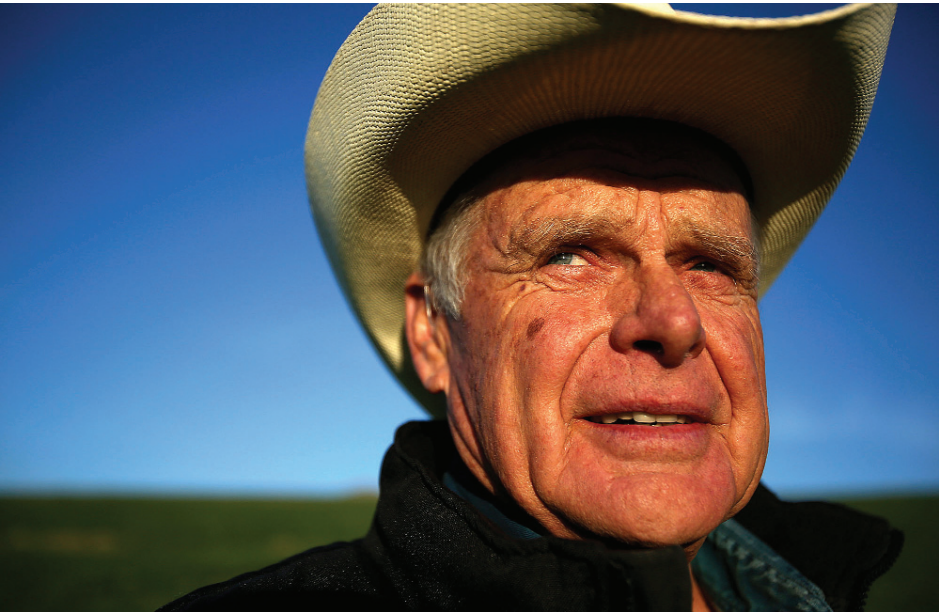

Gordon Edwards, weeds superintendent for Cassia County, said the problem is devastating to organic farmers, who must take ground out of the program while the weeds are eradicated, then they have to wait three years before they can start using the land again.

“Cleve is one of the best farmers we have. He is so conscientious. He wants to leave the county better than he found it,” Edwards said.

Smith said he found 20 spots of morning glory this year, which he had to dig out by hand before it went to seed.

If farmers do not catch it before it seeds, they face 30 years of misery, Smith said.

Edwards said the issue not only affects organic farmers, but alfalfa farmers, too.

When 400 head of elk to the alfalfa field, “It’s like they’re going to the candy store,” Edwards said.

A herd of elk can completely wipe out a farmer’s third and fourth crop of hay.

“If the farmers don’t raise that crop, they have to buy it,” Edwards said. “We have to find a solution to this.”

Edwards said, on top of the lost crop production, there is added expense for the farmers because state law mandates that farmers control their weeds.

The problem is widespread and includes other weeds, he said. The issue also affects other counties and neighboring states.

boards and that he’s never received a discipline letter or reprimand in his career.

Barber said he hasn’t made plans yet for what he’ll do next, but has a daughter still in the school district.

Contract

“In plenty of time for the new school year,” she said.

Crocker said Blackman has been with the district for decades and is a former art teacher and football coach.

“He’s familiar with the community,” Crocker said. “He’s very capable of stepping into these shoes.”

According to the separation agreement, obtained by the Times-News, the school district will pay Barber $600,000 in two payments. One payment of $250,000 will be made on Nov. 1 and the second, $350,000 will be no later than Jan. 6.

Crocker said the money comes from the school district’s general fund.

“We recognize that this is a substantial sum of taxpayer money, but felt that the leadership considerations outweighed the financial consideration,” Trustee Kathryn Graves said in the release.

A message left for district board Chairman Paul Bates was not returned by deadline Friday.

The district also must pay one month’s COBRA premiums for Barber and his family and give him an Apple iPad, Dell Laptop and Apple laptop.

“Those items belonged to the school district and were for his use while he worked for the district,” Crocker said.

In the agreement, Barber agrees to cooperate with the school district’s process in resolving the McKinstry lawsuits, including possible future litigation. In May 2012, the school district and Seattle-based company McKinstry Essention Inc. filed civil complaints against each other. Then, in December, the district sought more damages.

The dispute is over the amount the company will be paid for a multimillion-dollar project to update heating, ventilation and air conditioning systems in eight school district buildings

“The parties understand and agree that any future statement from BCSD regarding inquiries about (Barber) will be limited to verifying dates of employment,” the agreement says.

Barber’s contact had been scheduled to last until July 2016. His annual salary was $158,575, making him the highest paid Superintendent in Idaho.

Ellen Mandeville has a second grader and six grader in the school district and runs the blog blaine4parents.org.

Mandeville said it was time for Barber to go.

“I feel he was a weak hand at the helm,” Mandeville said. “He wasn’t leading us where we want to go.”

Mandeville said she felt Barber lacked leadership, could be dismissive and had a temper.

In the future, Mandeville said, she hopes the board picks someone who can make Blaine County School district a “world class” district.

Barber told the Times-News Friday he is proud of every minute of the six years he was the was in the post.

“We did some amazing things,” he said. “I think I worked with amazing people.”

Barber said he disagreed with statements about him lacking in leadership, but didn’t want to detail differences with the district.

“As far as leadership style, I can only comment on mine,” he said.

Barber said he made his decisions as superintendent based on what was best for all student, from the highest achieving to the most challenged.

“Every board has the right to choose their own CEO,” Barber said of the decision by the school district board.

“I’ve never seen a board that wanted to keep a superintendent and paid him to go,” he said.

In March, the board voted unanimously to extend Barber’s contract by another year, against an effort by a group called the “No on Barber Campaign.”

Holmes Lundt had three children go through the school district and headed up the campaign as an anonymous forum for people to express their feelings about the proposal to extend Barber’s contract.

“The community input was NOT saying ‘he must go now,’ Lundt wrote in an email to the Times-News. “Instead the community seemed to prefer that in the midst of lawsuits, the recession, issues with academic performance and other operational uncertainties, it was unwarranted to tack another year onto what was already a three-year contract.”

Lundt said new board members are likely a reason for the sudden change.

“The tenor of the board has changed with new membership and the new board seems less comfortable with the status quo,” Lundt wrote.

A good relationship between a superintendent and a school board is vital for, Barber said, adding his has a great relationship with prior

Pilot Denies Flying While Under the Influence

SANDPOINT (AP) • A Utah pilot who crashed a plane at the Sandpoint airport has denied charges he was flying under the influence of prescription medication.

The Bonner County Daily Bee reported the attorney for 55-year-old Donald Moss Muirhead of Orem, Utah, filed a written plea of not guilty in Bonner County Magistrate Court.

Muirhead was charged after the Piper Aerostar he was flying went off the end of the runway and crashed on Sept. 23. Muirhead and his two passengers weren’t injured.

Sandpoint Police said Muirhead reported the plane’s brakes weren’t working, but the passengers told investigators Muirhead was flying too fast and touched down too far down the runway.

A sheriff’s deputy said Muirhead appeared lethargic and spoke slowly and he determined Muirhead was under the influence of intoxicating substances. A breath test showed he had not been drinking.
