Obamacare: Could it Make Magic Valley's Doctor Shortage Worse?

Rick Jacobs, a physicians assistant at the St. Lukes Quick Care Clinic, talks with Elnara Salvarov and her 15-month-old son Onur on Monday in Twin Falls.

TWIN FALLS • What happens when the scores of previously uninsured Idahoans seek out preventative care as the Affordable Care Act — commonly known as Obamacare — snowballs in the coming months?

What sort of stress will those newly insured patients — 20 percent, according to County Health Rankings and Roadmaps — put on an already stressed medical system? That's the million dollar question, said Neva Santos, executive director of the Idaho Academy of Family Physicians.

"I'm just hoping we have enough physicians to cover all of those patients who want to get in to a physician," Santos said.

What Santos referenced is somewhat of a blemish in the state's medical field — Idaho has struggled to maintain a healthy ratio of patients to physicians. Idaho ranks 47 of 51 in the nation in its physician / patient ratio, according to the Robert Graham Center.

The national benchmark is one physician for every 1,000 patients. Idaho's ratio is 1,491:1. In the Magic Valley's eight counties, that ratio is even worse — 1,649:1 in Cassia; 1,761:1 in Twin Falls; 2,869:1 in Minidoka; and 5,214:1 in Lincoln, according to County Health Rankings and Roadmaps.

Health in the Magic Valley has likely been negatively affected by the shortage of physicians, Santos said, and the solution — getting more doctors to the area — isn't an easy fix. Being a rural state with no medical school, Idaho has a large physician gap to fill in the next few years if it hopes to keep pace with demand.

To maintain the "status quo," the Robert Graham Center estimates the state will need 382 more physicians — or 44 percent of the current 864 physician work force — by 2030. Of that need, 21 percent will come from the burden of an aging population, 67 percent due to population growth and 10 percent — or about 40 physicians — from the Affordable Care Act changes.

Three Vie for Twin Falls City Council

BY KIMBERLEE KRUESI

TWIN FALLS • Out of Twin Falls city council's seven positions, only seat number one is coveted by three drastically, different candidates.

Incumbent Suzanne Hawkins faces former sheriff deputy Kelly Hassani and former small business owner Marilyn Dedman for the only contested council spot. Incumbents Greg Lanting and Don Hall are running for re-election unopposed

Mayor Lanting appointed

Hawkins to the council 18 months ago after former Councilman Lance Clowe stepped down to run for state office. Her brief but important time on the council was spent learning the ins and outs of the city while also giving her a chance to get involved in several city projects, Hawkins said.

"The city and citizens have invested in me," she said. "I feel like I was more useful now than I was 18 months ago."

For most of her time in office, Hawkins voted along with the majority of the council. But it was her failed opposition to decision

Jerome Woman Accused of Swindling Immigrants

A civil complaint was filed in 2010, but Celia Perez allegedly continued to run her scam.

BY ALISON GENE SMITH
alismith@magicvalley.com

JEROME • Celia Perez made her living for almost a decade cheating immigrants out of thousands of dollars, promising them a better, legal life in the United States, according to a federal indictment filed last week. A civil complaint filed in January 2010 by the Idaho Attorney General's Office didn't stop her. Even after the judge found against her in that case, she continued to run her scam, raking in millions of dollars from unsuspecting Mexican immigrants, the indictment says.

A grand jury indicted Perez Oct. 9 on 12 counts of mail fraud in U.S. District Court in Boise.

The indictment alleges that from December 2006 through July of this year, Perez bilked two families out of more than $30,000 total, after claiming to be an immigration attorney who could help them.

The indictment outlines the new charges against Perez as follows:

In December 2006, Perez contacted two people in Mexico, identified as "M.M. and A.B."

Perez told them she was an immigration attorney and said she could help them and M.M.'s daughter, "G.B." get legal permanent residence status in the U.S. for a fee.

Perez told them she handled "difficult" immigration cases and could help the whole family "fix their immigration problems" and "make the immigration process go faster."

On April 18, 2007, G.B. mailed a package from California to Perez at her post office box in Wendell, containing Visa applications and $750 in money orders.

In 2009, Perez spoke with G.B. and told her everything was on track with her family's immigration applications.

Then in December 2011, Perez told M.M. she got a letter from the government saying the family would need to pay additional fees.

Perez told the family that fees were going to increase in the near future and they should mail the money as soon as possible to Perez's Wendell post office box.

In early 2012, Perez told the family they owed more than $10,000 in various immigration fees. In response, the family mailed the money in 18 money orders, which Perez cashed in Jerome.

Through mail and email, Perez corresponded with the family, asking for various documents like birth certificates, high school diplomas, tax returns and pay stubs to be mailed to her.

When A.B. repeatedly asked why

THE MARKET AT A GLANCE

Debt Ceiling Talks Push Stocks Higher

NEW YORK (AP) • Stocks rose Monday, helped by signs that Washington was moving closer to a deal that would avert a default by the U.S. government.

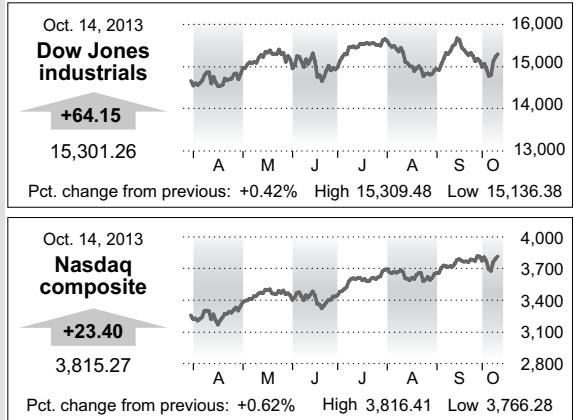

The stock market started the session broadly lower after negotiations between the White House and House Republicans broke down over the weekend. However, stocks erased those losses in early afternoon trading following news that President Barack Obama would meet with Congressional leaders.

The market extended those gains after Senate leaders in both parties said progress was being made.

Democratic Majority Leader Harry Reid opened the Senate session Monday by saying he was “very optimistic we will reach an agreement this week that’s reasonable in nature.” The Republican Senate leader, Mitch McConnell, seconded Reid’s view, saying there had been “a couple of very useful discussions.”

The Dow Jones industrial average added 64.15 points, or 0.4 percent, to close at 15,301.26. The index was down as much as 100 points earlier in the day.

The Standard & Poor’s 500 index rose 6.94 points, or 0.4 percent, to 1,710.14. The Nasdaq composite rose 23.40 points, or 0.6 percent, to 3,815.27.

Curious Mind Mock Drills and Cargo Services

I see a lot of mock training for the police, firemen, and the paramedics. I often wondered how do they get the “patients” and if they ever think of using disabled people such as deaf, blind, or mobility-impaired in their training. I am sure it will be an eye opener for them and they will know what to do in the future.

“When it comes to the mock drills, we are always looking for volunteers to help as “patients” in the scenario,” said Aaron Keyes of Keyes to Safety LLC. “I agree we need to always be ready for the unexpected. So having someone with a disability, whether it be a physical or mental, would help responders to be ready for that type of situation.”

“I can officially, and with confidence, tell you that we have used and do facilitate trainings with those volunteers or residents that have special needs,” said Jackie Frey, coordinator of the Twin Falls County Department of Emergency Services. “Whether it be at their own facility or at ‘mock’ drills in the county we have, and will continue to encourage their participation. In a real life event, the first responders and myself will be coordinating resources to support life, which includes all of the citizens in the county, including those that are disadvantaged and homeless.”

Multiple times a day I see a two-engine, old style airplane traveling toward Twin Falls or Boise. This is a common sight. I wondered maybe if it was a mail run.

“What you are most likely seeing is one of the cargo operators (United Parcel Service or Federal Express) that fly in and out of the airport, usually once in the morning and once in the late afternoon. Aviation plays a key role in moving small, time sensitive cargo in and out of the Magic Valley,” said Bill Carberry, Magic Valley Regional Airport Manager.

Nice Weather Ahead

Brandon Redmond
Weather Anchor

The weather pattern will be extremely tranquil and pleasant this week. A high pressure system will dominate the weather through the end of the week.

That means the weather is going to be very boring, which is great for all of us. Temperatures on Tuesday and Wednesday will still be a little cool, with morning temperatures starting out in the lower to middle 30s and afternoon high temperatures in the upper 50s.

The weather will get even better by the end of the week and into the weekend. The winds will shift to the South, which means we will see increasing temperatures. Afternoon high temperatures by next weekend will be in the lower to middle 60’s with plenty of sunshine. Needless to say it’s going to be a very nice weekend.

Winds this week will also remain on the light side. We could see winds 10-20 mph at times, but for the most part winds will be below 10 mph. Enjoy the nice weather and have a great week.

Brandon Redmond is a weather anchor for KMVT-TV and KTWT FOX 14.

Car Hits Cow in Twin Falls County

TWIN FALLS • A Twin Falls man was taken to the hospital Saturday after his vehicle struck a cow in the road.

Jose Aguirre-Valdez, 21, was eastbound on 3600 North in a 2003 Dodge Neon, an Idaho State Police report said. The cow-Neon crash was at about 9:45 p.m. near the intersection of U.S. Highway 93 and 3600 North in Twin Falls County.

Aguirre-Valdez was wearing a seatbelt, ISP said. He was taken by ambulance to St. Luke’s Magic Valley Medical Center, where he was treated and released. Alcohol was not involved.

Both lanes of 3600 North were blocked for about an hour while officers worked to clear the scene.

Horse Liniment Eases Arthritis Pain

Back in 1996 an ingredient derived from hot peppers that decreased inflammation in racehorse’s legs, was formulated into a product called ARTH-Rx® and developed in a strength designed for humans. Since that time this unique and original formula has been helping individuals find pain relief from disorders ranging from minor aches and pains to more serious conditions such as arthritis, bursitis, rheumatism and tendonitis. Some have also reported incredible relief from the pain associated with fibromyalgia.

Over the past 15 years copy cat formulas have come and go but Arth-Rx has continued to be the product of choice for many loyal customers.

OBITUARIES

Joyce Korb Miller
Feb. 14, 1945-Oct. 13, 2013

BURLEY • A Valentine delivered to Keith V. and Della Jeane Nelson Korb on Feb. 14, 1945, in Burley, Idaho, was returned to the sender on Sunday, Oct. 13, 2013.

She joined a big sister and soon after came a little brother. Her parents eventually divorced and remarried, and she was blessed with many brothers and sisters. She was raised and went to school in Burley. She married the love of her life, Samuel Miller, on Feb. 14, 1962. They had two daughters, Della and Kristie. They divorced after many years but have remained close. She worked at numerous jobs, from fast food to warehouse worker, until she went back to school and found her calling as a CNA. She lovingly cared for people for more than 20 years in her career and then later as a volunteer.

Her greatest joys in life were children, grandchildren and extended family. She loved yard work and a beautiful showy yard. She was very sad when she was unable to keep up her yard herself. Miss Fix-it could build, fix or repair anything. She loved fishing, dancing, picnics, crosswords, sewing clothes for her children, crocheting and knitting.

She enjoyed watching her grandchildren play sports and traveled to many states to attend their games. She never knew a stranger and was adored by many.

She was preceded in death by both her parents and is survived by her two daughters, Della Miller and Kristie (Don) Johnson; five grandchildren; and six great-grandchildren.

The funeral will be held at 11 a.m. Friday, Oct. 18, at the Burley LDS 2nd and 4th Ward Church, 515 E. 16th St. in Burley, with Bishop Clay Handy officiating. Burial will be in the Riverside Cemetery in Heyburn. Friends may call from 6 until 8 p.m. Thursday, Oct. 17, at the Rasmussen Funeral Home, 1350 E. 16th St. in Burley, and from 10 until 10:45 a.m. Friday at the church.

Vivian Ann Miles
July 3, 1934-Oct. 6, 2013

SHOSHONE • Vivian Ann Miles, 79, wife of Dale L. Miles of Shoshone, passed away peacefully at the Lincoln County Care Center on Sunday, Oct. 6, 2013, in the loving arms of Terry and Janet Hampton.

She was born Vivian Ann Hamilton on July 3, 1934, to Emery and Irma Hamilton in Montrose, Colo., where she lived and raised her five children. In 1978, she moved to Richfield, Idaho, and in 1984 to Shoshone, Idaho. In 1993, she was reunited with a high school friend and, on Nov. 27, 1993, she married him, the love of her life, Dale Miles, in Shoshone. In 1996, she and Dale moved back to Colorado to help care for her mother. They returned to Shoshone in 2004, where she resided until her passing.

Mom was the genuine article, a beautiful soul with a strong spirit. She always had a smile, a song or a kind word. She was full of humor with a beautiful smile, a great laugh and sparkling blue eyes. She had love for all who needed it and especially for her family. She was a dedicated homemaker, mother and wife. She raised her children as she lived, to be honest, hard working, self-sufficient and to be kind.

If she had her "druthers," she would be outdoors where she enjoyed raising flowers and vegetables, hunting, camping, gathering pinion nuts and firewood, her dairy cows, especially her sweet Jersey called Buttercup. She loved going to her family gatherings and the Miles family reunions, traveling with Dale and, at Seaside, gathering shells on the beach delighted her. When she had to be indoors, she canned, made bread, sewed, knitted, crocheted, worked jigsaw puzzles and raised beautiful African violets. In her lifetime, she has excelled at being a homemaker, waitress, commercial and home seamstress, dairy farmer, volunteer and CNA.

She is survived by her husband, Dale Miles of Shoshone; her five children: Emery Hampton of Glenns Ferry, Idaho, Barbara (Dan) Blackford of Wilsall, Mont., Jace Hampton of Montrose, Colo., Sheryl Hampton of Bullhead City, Ariz., and Terry (Janet) Hampton of Shoshone; stepdaughter, Tammy Prescott of Kennewick, Wash.; two sisters; one brother; 10 grandchildren; and 13 great-grandchildren. She was preceded in death by her parents, one brother and two sisters.

A memorial service will be held at 10 a.m. Saturday, Oct. 19, at the First Baptist Church, 205 E. 5th St. in Shoshone, Idaho. In lieu of flowers, the family requests memorial donations be made to the Alzheimer's Association in the name of Vivian A. Miles. Donations can be made by phone: 800-271-3900, mail: Alzheimer's Association, P.O. Box 96011, Washington, DC 20090-6011 or online: www.alz.org/join_the_cause_donate.asp.

Arrangements are under the direction of Demaray Funeral Service, Shoshone Chapel.

Arva Seamons Shaw
Sept. 28, 1924-Oct. 10, 2013

PAUL • Arva Seamons Shaw, 89, of Paul, passed away peacefully from natural causes Thursday, Oct. 10, 2013.

Arva was born Sept. 28, 1924, in Smithfield, Utah, and was the youngest child of George William Seamons and Nora Pitcher Seamons. She lived in Smithfield until the age of 11, when her family moved to Rupert, Idaho, in 1936. Arva graduated from Rupert High School and began working as a bookkeeper for a local variety store. Later, she began working at a bank in Rupert but resigned when her husband was discharged from the U.S. Navy.

She married LaMar K. Olson on Nov. 28, 1945, in the Logan Utah LDS Temple. They raised their children in Heyburn, where she spent many hours sewing, canning and loving her children. In 1953, Arva started working for the Idaho Bank and Trust Company and later became an officer — only the third woman officer in their history to that point.

She and LaMar later divorced and, on June 7, 1989, she married Cecil Shaw in the Boise Idaho LDS Temple. She and Cecil spent many happy years traveling and working in the Boise Temple. She served faithfully in The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints all her life, holding many positions in the Primary and Young Women. Arva had a deep love for her children and grandchildren. She found great joy in spoiling them all. Most of all, she set a great example for them of love, patience, forgiveness and enduring to the end.

She is survived by her three children, Dianna (Gene) Hansen of Paul, Ken (Sue) Olson of Bountiful, Utah, and Susan Kilmer of Nampa, Idaho; 13 grandchildren; and 43 great-grandchildren. She is also survived by two stepsons, Gary (Kathy) Shaw of Tofino, British Columbia, Canada, and Dennis (LaRue) Shaw of Carmichael, Calif.; plus their children and grandchildren. Arva was preceded in death by her husband, Cecil; her parents; two sisters, Anna Dixon and Georgia Moncur; one brother, Burnel Seamons; and a stepdaughter, Patsy Shaw.

band, Cecil; her parents; two sisters, Anna Dixon and Georgia Moncur; one brother, Burnel Seamons; and a stepdaughter, Patsy Shaw.

The family wishes to express their gratitude to the staff at Valley Vista Care Center in Acequia for the tender love and care they gave to Arva during the last 2¾ years of her life. In lieu of flowers, the family suggests contributions to Valley Vista in memory of Arva for its Christmas dinner.

The funeral will be held at 1 p.m. Saturday, Oct. 19, at the Paul LDS Stake Center, 424 W. Ellis St. in Paul, where friends and family may call from noon until 12:45 p.m. Officiating will be Bishop Kerry Sanford. Burial will be in the Rupert Cemetery.

My name is Brian and I was born and raised in the South and served in the United States Marine Corp. I moved to the Magic Valley over 30 years ago and met my sweetheart Janie. We have loved raising our children here and calling Twin Falls home. I have been in the Auto Industry for 20 years beginning in the detail shop. I have been at Chevrolet of Twin Falls for over 10 years and enjoy all of the relationships that I have built with my customers over the years that I now call friends. I look forward to offering my expertise and knowledge for many years to come.
Chevrolet of Twin Falls is proud to employ over 50 members of the local community. Many of our team members grew up and attended school in the Magic Valley and now have families that are following in those traditions. Several have grown their careers with us and continue to be a valuable part of what makes the Chevrolet of Twin Falls Family a welcoming place to do business.

needs,” she said.

If re-appointed, Hawkins said she would continue to advocate and support the city’s Youth Council, while also staying involved in the city’s economic development.

“I have proven myself to the council and to the citizens,” Hawkins said. “I am the only candidate running as a small business owner. I don’t think we need a third retired member and I don’t think we need a third retired law enforcement officer.”

Her opponent, Hassani, agrees that one more council member in law enforcement may bring some redundant perspectives, but he promised to carry different opinions.

Hassani worked for the Twin Falls Sheriff’s office for nearly 20 years.

“One of the biggest problems I see is that politicians get voted into office and do what they want, rather than what the people want,” he said. “The council is currently doing that.”

He opposed the council’s decision to raise the city’s property tax rate the maximum amount of three percent during the 2013-14 fiscal year. Instead, he suggested increasing sales tax to raise revenue.

“That way we’re not burdening just the people who live here,” he said. “A lot of people visit Twin Falls each day.”

Hassani would also purge certain parts of the city budget to eliminate excessive spending. When asked for examples, Hassani said he wouldn’t know what needed to be cut until he got in office.

“After being in public service for 20 years,” he said. “I can guarantee that there’s probably some stuff that needs to be cut, it just needs to be examined.”

Elected Position Sought: Twin Falls City Council, Seat 1

Age: 72

Family: Married, three daughters,

10 grandchildren

Profession: Retired small business owner

Education: Human Services certificate from the College of Southern Idaho

Volunteer Activities: Previously served nine years on the board of directors for Jump Company, a junior musical playhouse. Volunteered to do make up for local theater groups.

In 50 words or fewer, please outline what you plan to achieve if elected to the position sought: I want to do whatever the people want. I have no special interest of my own. I think we (the council) need to step back and help the community.

Council Campaign Finance Reports

Pre-general campaign finance reports for the city council candidates were due Oct. 10. So far, Councilwoman Hawkins has been the only candidate to spend any money on her campaign. According to the report, she’s only spent $20 to purchase campaign signage.

Despite posting campaign signs around town, candidate Dedman had not filed her report as of Monday.

Finally, council candidate Dedman said she’s running in order to help the city anyway she can.

“I want to do whatever the people want,” she said. “I have no special interest of my own.”

Dedman served on the city of Hansen’s council for two years. She led that city’s effort to replace its water pipes and improve its water delivery system.

“It was a project I saw I could help with,” she said. “I want to do that in Twin Falls, I want to help.”

Dedman touted her age, prior government experience and wisdom as reasons why she would make a better council member than her opponents.

If elected to office, Dedman would promote keeping the city as clean as possible and reducing the amount of vacant buildings inside the city limits. As a former small business owner, she would also like to see more collaboration between the city and business community to attract more independent business owners to Twin Falls.

“We need to make it as easy as possible for them to come here,” she said.

about accepting a job in such a rural location.

But ask teacher Dena Pollock and she will tell you she loves it.

“It’s so remote. Telephones and power are not totally dependable,” Pollock said. “The atmosphere is definitely a perk. I like the solitude.”

Pollock is in her second year as the only teacher at the school, which has seven students enrolled, including two kindergartners. She is also superintendent, principal and secretary, which means she doesn’t answer the phone often during school hours. If she did, she said there wouldn’t be enough time for instruction.

Since about 1900, Three Creek School has served students in kindergarten through eighth grade, never growing larger than 18 students. Last year, the school had eight students, with four students leaving in the middle of the year. Four years ago, the school only had one student.

An additional classroom is being built by volunteers and when it is finished will replace the 2,100-square-foot, one-room school built in about 1971. The old building will then serve as storage, Pollock said.

Last year, the school upgraded to dry erase boards instead of chalkboards and installed an interactive Smart Board.

The school is looking to hire a teacher’s aide to work about 28 hours a week.

Early this month, Three Creek was one of two school districts that didn’t meet an Oct. 1 deadline for differentiated pay plans sharing a statewide $21 million pool for teacher pay and training.

“Department staff did work to contact each school district and charter school that had not submitted,” State Department of Education spokeswoman Melissa McGrath wrote in an email to Idaho Education News.

“I didn’t even hear about it,” Pollock said.

Pollock said she is currently going to Twin Falls

once a month to attend training to become a Common Core coach for other teachers. She said she will be certified by the state to do so in June.

In 2010, Three Creek School built a multi-purpose room — a half-gymnasium with storage, two bathrooms and a kitchen — attached to the west side of the existing school building built in 1971.

Today, the new gym often serves as a community center with more than 30 people attending events.

That is a high number considering the area surrounding the school has a population of about three, Pollock said. Less than a 100 people live in a 20-mile radius. The closest ranch is about three miles away from the school.

Though one-on-one instruction is one positive, Pollock said one of the downfalls of the small class size is little socialization.

Here, children of all ages learn from one another and often classrooms are comprised of siblings. Students bring their own lunches and parents drop off and pick up students.

“They have little interaction and are pretty easily overwhelmed,” Pollock said.

To combat this isolation, once a month, students go on field trips in Twin Falls or Boise. Because there is no bus system, parents drive and serve as chaperones.

“Out here, we all work together or it would not work,” Pollock said. “I know all the parents. The kids are much more respectful and the community supports the school and that’s how it should be.”

The three members of the PTO are also mothers of children in the school.

Shannon Thompson, a parent of two students, said if she didn’t have the option of sending her children to Three Creek, she would homeschool.

“I like the teacher-to-student ratio. I like that parents get to go on field trips,” Thompson said.

And when it’s time to go to high school?

Thompson said she isn’t sure yet, and will cross that bridge when they get there.

T.F.Downtown Infrastructure Study Nears Completion

BY JOE CADOTTE

jscadotte@magicvalley.com

TWIN FALLS • Gary Haderlie, J-U-B Engineers Inc. project engineer, flipped through projector images of cracked sidewalks, rusty early 20th century sewer lines and glimpses of downtown’s deteriorating underbelly at Monday’s Twin Falls Urban Renewal Agency meeting.

“The worst roadway is all along Main Avenue,” Haderlie said. “This combines both a pavement evaluation index as well as crowing, some draining problems. There’s also bad roadways that shows up in the (study) in other areas as well.”

Haderlie’s conclusions are part of a $126,000 URA study aimed at identifying the barriers to restoring downtown Twin Falls to its pre-Magic Valley Mall days.

URA Board members were skeptical about parts of the study, which was released Monday.

“Gary, there’s no ratings on the sidewalks along any of the Second Avenues?” Asked Dan Brizee, URA board member.

“That’s a good question Dan. The one item we are going to finish up is getting some ratings along the Second Avenues,” Haderlie said. “At the time we had understood that because it’s a state route that that was a state responsibility, but it’s been clarified that that’s not the case.”

Sewer and water pipes underneath Main Avenue might not meet the standards of modern business needs, depending on how corroded they are, Haderlie said.

“The minimum fire flow required for any commercial business is 1,500 feet per second,” he said. “In talking with the fire marshal in the city he said the maximum fire flow is about 3,000 gallons per minute along Main.”

“That’s assuming it’s in reasonable shape and hasn’t corroded?” Brizee asked.

“That is correct,” Haderlie said.

Once the full study is released sometime next week, Melinda Anderson, the city’s economic development director, said it will be critical to get as many downtown stakeholders together to discuss how to use the results for a long-term plan to revitalize downtown.

“As an agency we talk about gathering that information and gathering downtown stakeholders and downtown property owners and merchants and say, ‘We’d like to get your input on how we can get these projects done over an eight year period,’” Anderson said.

After the results come in, the URA will hold a public input meeting to discuss the results.

The next URA meeting is scheduled for Nov. 12 at 1:30 p.m. at the Twin Falls City Council Chambers.

Immigrants

his work permit had not arrived, Perez continued to say that it would come soon.

From spring 2012 to 2013, Perez made and canceled appointments for the family through the U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Services “Infopass” website. The family believed they would be able to meet with an immigration employee to ask questions.

Each time, Perez would send an email or call the family confirming the appointments, then cancel them shortly before the scheduled date.

From about April 2007 to April 2012, the family paid Perez about $11,300 for immigration consultation, assistance in filing immigration paperwork, “fines and fees” and for getting immigration benefits.

Perez never filed any documents with the government on the family’s behalf and never paid any fines or fees to any government agency, but instead used the money for herself.

The documents say Perez began defrauding another family, identified as “V.J., S.J. and M.P.” in July 2012.

Again, Perez called the family saying she was an immigration attorney who could help them get immigrant visas.

Later that month, the family emailed Perez asking for an itemized invoice of what her fees would be. Perez replied with the invoice, and the family sent in cashier’s checks to Perez’s Wendell post office box.

During the correspondence, which lasted through February, Perez requested personal documents from the family, told them she made appointments for them to get fingerprints taken and have immigration interviews and told the family she was in communication with the U.S. Department of Justice and the U.S. Consulate in Juarez, Mexico.

Between July and December 2012 the family paid Perez $19,365 in cashier’s checks.

The indictment says Perez must turn over at least $30,665, which she took from the two families.

According to online court records, no hearings are scheduled.

Attorney General Civil Complaint

This isn’t the first time, Perez has been accused of stealing money from immigrants.

In January 2010, the Consumer Protection Division of the Idaho Attorney General’s Office filed a civil complaint against Perez and her business, Perez International. The complaint followed an investigation by the Jerome County Sheriff’s Office.

In August 2009, 23 people complained to the sheriff’s office, saying they’d been duped by an immigration consultant who took large sums of money from them, but never followed through on promises to help with their citizenship paperwork.

Jerome deputies searched a home and office on Aug. 27, 2009, at 325 West 100 North, where they seized enough documents to fill a truck and the back of a police car, Jerome County Sheriff’s Det. Rick Cowen told the Times-News in 2009.

At the time, deputies said, there were more than 30 victims.

According to the 2010

complaint, in 2004, one woman went to Perez for help adjusting the legal status of her family, ultimately shelling out $28,000 in fees. Nearly four years later, her husband was deported, according to the complaint.

In 2005, a man went to Perez for the same reason. He even “made trips to Salt Lake City for purported immigration interviews that Perez suddenly canceled” and ultimately paid more than $27,000 for work Perez never performed, the complaint says. A Shoshone man paid her more than $16,000.

In June 2010, Perez failed to appear at a Jerome County court hearing for the case and never mounted a defense against the complaint. The civil case was closed and a judge ruled against Perez in September 2011, according to online court records.

CSI Presidential Finalists Speak Today

TIMES-NEWS

TWIN FALLS • The public and College of Southern Idaho staff are invited to a forum today to listen and ask questions of the next potential president of CSI.

The sessions begin at 2 p.m. in CSI's Fine Arts Theater.

The finalists are: D. Ryan Carstens, associate provost for Education and Community Partnerships at Salt Lake Community College, who will appear from 2 to 2:50 p.m.; Jeff Fox, CSI's executive vice president and chief academic officer, who will take the stage from 3 to 3:50 p.m.; and Daniel J. Bingham, chief executive officer of Helena College, University of Montana, who will speak from 4 to 4:50 p.m.

If you can't attend, you still can participate.

CSI will provide a live, noninteractive feed of the session in these CSI rooms: Fine Arts 87, Taylor 276/277, Evergreen C95 and Shields 117.

The entire three-hour forum also will be streamed live online for those who would like to watch from their own computer. That feed can be found at www.csi.edu/PresidentialSearch. Online audience members will be invited to fill out and submit comment forms until 6 p.m.

Those who cannot attend the forum but would like to submit a question can do so at www.csi.edu/PresidentialSearch until 1 p.m. today.

The forum host will use those questions if there is a lull in the live audience feedback.

A recording of all three hours will be posted on the presidential search link on CSI's home page by noon on Wednesday, and the online comment link will be disabled.

Those who will attend will be encouraged to question each candidate. They also will be given cards and pens to note their observations about each candidate's strengths and weaknesses. Comment cards also will be provided at each CSI viewing location.

After brief introductions, each candidate will make an opening statement and will then field questions from the audience without help from a moderator.

Monty Arrossa, CSI's director of Human Services, will be on the stage to ensure the questions are legal and appropriate and the process is fair and equitable.

After the forum, CSI Board of Trustees members will receive the audience feedback and will conduct their own private interviews of each candidate. The president will be chosen in a public board meeting that has yet to be scheduled.

Jerome County Sheriff's Office Investigates Home Invasion

TIMES-NEWS

JEROME • The Jerome County Sheriff's Office is investigating a home invasion robbery.

Not many details were released Monday afternoon, as the sheriff's office still has concerns for the victim's safety, said Lt. Dan Kennedy.

Kennedy said the home invasion happened Sunday night in Jerome County, but he declined to give further information about the crime or location.

Kennedy declined to say whether anyone was injured in the robbery.

No one is in custody, he said.

Kennedy said he does not believe the public is in danger.

More information will be released soon, he said, and the sheriff's office might look to the public for information.

Twin Falls Canal Co. to Shut Water Flow Early

BY BRIAN SMITH
bsmith@magicvalley.com

TWIN FALLS • Area farmers will have their water cut off a week earlier than usual this year.

Brian Olmstead, general manager of the Twin Falls Canal Co., said the gates at Milner Dam will be closed Wednesday in an effort to save water for next year.

"All the other irrigators on the river have shut off now," Olmstead said. "If we can shut off now, we can start saving in the upper Snake's reservoirs. We're trying to get a little bit of a head start on the storage season because the reservoirs need it badly."

That's not to say farmers will lose water immediately — it will likely take five to seven days to drain the system, he said. Most will have water through the weekend, some will have water into next week.

"There could be a few high taps that could start running out this week," he said.

Many area farmers have already stopped irrigating, he said, but a few are still finishing some crops, such as winter wheat.

The two lakes that feed canal company's system are very low. American Falls is 7 percent full; Jackson Lake is 18 percent full. Those are the lowest levels seen since the end of a five year drought in 2005, Olmstead said.

Olmstead said he was encouraged by September's mountain rain and snowfall — a break from six months of dry weather.

"The pattern seems to have changed somewhat, but it's a long winter," he said.

Farmers with questions can call the Canal Co. at 733-6731.

Utility, Groups Reach Tentative Deal on Power

BY JOHN MILLER
Associated Press

BOISE • Idaho Power Co.'s programs to trim summer electricity use when demand skyrockets may have been saved, but customers would have less financial incentive to participate and won't get as much warning when air conditioners and irrigation pumps are being shut off.

The provisions are part of a tentative agreement announced by the Idaho Public Utilities Commission.

The measures are aimed at preserving load-reduction programs that help trim the need for Idaho Power to buy expensive electricity on the open market or build new plants.

"The programs are valuable, they cause customers to think about ways that you can (manage) electrical demand in less costly ways," Gene Fadness, a spokesman for the commission, said Monday.

The commission is taking comment through Oct. 28 on the measures announced Friday.

If the agreement is adopted by the commission, ratepayers could pay $16.7 million annually for the modified reduction programs.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

The Politics Clearly Driving the Pulpit

As I drive about town and notice all the Christian church steeples reaching toward the sky, I am thinking that Christians are abandoning their most basic beliefs. Today, politics are clearly driving the pulpit.

In the Old Testament, there is this wonderful piece, “The Sermon on the Mount,” and also there is this line — “Whatsoever you do unto the least of these, you do unto me.” Among “the least of these” are children in need of food assistance and nourishing lunches in school, families who are struggling to eat, working people in search of a way to pay for medical treatment.

It seems we are preferring to listen to the preaching heard in the “Fox News Fellowship,” and “Limbaugh’s Congregational Church,” and “The Ann Coulter Covenant,” and “The Michelle Malkin Tabernacle.”

I think, when folks make the journey for that meeting at those pearly gates they are going to be asked this question, “What did you do unto me?”

Think about it and maybe pass this on to the pastor of your Christian church.

MICHAEL JOHNSON Jerome

An Idea for Washington Reform

It’s time — the 26th amendment (granting the right to vote for 18-year-olds) took only three months and eight days to be ratified! Why? Simple! The people demanded it. That was in 1971 — before computers, before email, before cell phones, etc.

Of the 27 amendments to the Constitution, seven took one year or less to become the law of the land — all because of public pressure.

Congressional Reform Act of 2013:

1. Term Limits. 12 years only, one of these possible options: (A) two six-year Senate terms; (B) six two-year House terms; (C) one six-year Senate term and three two-year House terms.

2. No tenure/no pension. A congressman collects a salary while in office and receives no pay when they are out of office.

3. Congress (past, present and future) participates in Social Security. All funds in the congressional retirement fund move to the Social Security system immediately. All future funds flow into the Social Security system, and Congress participates with the American people.

4. Congress can purchase its own retirement plan, just as all Americans do.

5. Congress will no longer vote itself a pay raise. Congressional pay will rise by the lower of CPI or 3 percent.

6. Congress loses its current health care system and participates in the same health care system as the American people.

7. Congress must equally abide by all laws they impose on the American people.

8. No stock market inside trading. It’s illegal for everyone but Congress.

Serving in Congress is an honor, not a career. The founding fathers envisioned citizen legislators, so ours should serve their term(s), then go home and back to work.

AARON AMOS Burley

Skaug the Right Choice for Jerome

I am a business owner in Jerome but, unfortunately, live in Twin Falls so am unable to vote in the upcoming mayoral elections.

I have been friends with Joe Skaug for many years. I have never met another individual who is more concerned about the city in which he resides.

Many of you know Joe from his world famous car show. But Joe’s love of Jerome goes much deeper. He is a longtime resident and knows just about everyone in town.

The Times-News recently posted that he is a “charmer.” If it was a little bit true, it would be insulting. Joe is a charmer. He is also very open minded, a great listener, a great conversationalist and, to top it off, highly educated. He also can use his many insider connections to get things done. I’m sure the wastewater issues will not be an issue with Joe and his ability to get things done.

When the paper brought up his challenger’s qualifications as an ex-dairyman, I cringed. What does that have to do with running the city of Jerome?

Jerome needs an educated, well-known, caring man. And it has all of these things in Joe Skaug.

PATTY LYMAN Twin Falls

Fifteen Signs You’ve Drunk the Far-right Kool-Aid

There has been, to put it mildly, some mass self-delusion going on in right-wing circles. Here’s how to tell if you are suffering from the ill-effects of the echo chamber:

1. You think Sen. Ted Cruz, R-Texas, nailed it when he told the Values Voter Summit that the Democrats are “feeling the heat” in the shutdown fight.
2. You think the problem is that Virginia Republican gubernatorial candidate Ken Cuccinelli isn’t conservative enough.
3. You think if only the shutdown went on longer, the GOP would win this fight.
4. You think that if the GOP doesn’t win the shut-

Jennifer Rubin

The Washington Post

down fight, it will be because of the mainstream media.

5. You think Americans want to shut down the government to get rid of Obamacare.

6. You think the problem is that Cruz didn’t talk long enough or that the media didn’t cover his 21-hour speech fairly.

7. You think it is better to have 30 “true conservatives” than 51 Republicans in the U.S. Senate.

8. You think Sen. Marco Rubio, R-Fla., had it wrong when he backed immigration reform and right when he went to bat for the shutdown strategy.

9. You think Hispanics will never vote for Republicans so there is no use in pursuing immigration reform. You think it is fine for the GOP to win elections relying almost entirely on white voters.

10. You think Rep. Paul Ryan, R-Wis., is a sellout because he thinks repealing Obamacare can only happen by electing a GOP Senate majority and capturing the White House.

11. You think the GOP needs candidates like Cruz to run for Senate in places like Michigan, Virginia and Colorado.

12. You think the GOP would have done better with Newt Gingrich, Herman Cain, Rick Santorum or Ron Paul as its 2012 presidential nominee. You think Santorum blew it when he stopped talking about contraception.

13. You think Republicans should run hard at the national level on a constitutional amendment to ban gay marriage.

14. You think President Ronald Reagan would have decried compromise and supported primarying the Senate minority leader.

15. You think right-wing talk radio hosts are a good barometer of U.S. public opinion.

If you answered “yes” to more than half of these, it’s time to rethink your political assumptions.

Déjà vu: Jumping the Snake Canyon

It was a late summer-like day in early September of 1974. Governor Andrus and I were in a chartered twin-engine plane, flying from Preston to McCall via Boise because we also had to drop off the United Press International reporter who had covered our event in the far southeast corner of the state. Shortly after mid-day, we found ourselves flying at 10,000 feet over Twin Falls looking down on an assembled throng of thousands gathering to watch Evel Knievel attempt to jump the Snake River Canyon.

In November, Andrus’ name was on the ballot and, by September, a good chunk of our time was spent on the campaign trail. In fact, it was “personal” politics that had taken us to Preston for a 10 a.m. meeting at the Franklin County Fairgrounds with 800 ranchers and farmers.

In reviewing pre-filed bills, Andrus had come across legislation drafted by Sen. Reed Budge that he thought was inimical to the best interests of that county. In a rare move for the politically savvy governor, Andrus decided to go into Budge’s district, lay this out for the voters, and urge Budge’s defeat.

Thus, it was that we flew into the nearest airport and drove to the fairgrounds. Hundreds of people had gathered for what everyone expected to be a real showdown. Andrus was calling Budge out, as the saying goes. He had his facts down cold, made it clear what Budge was attempting and urged the crowd to vote for Budge’s opponent.

These were Budge’s voters, heavily Republican and Mormon. Budge knew he didn’t have to say a word. The governor was a “gentle” from north Idaho, a “Big City” boy and a Democrat. Ninety-minutes later, we were back on the plane and headed to Boise. Andrus hadn’t made a dent in Budge’s armor.

Being a still wet-behind-the ears press secretary, I thought I would make the smart suggestion that we divert to the Twin Falls airport and go work that gathering crowd. After all, it was a large crowd. In that way I thought we would salvage something from the day.

To my surprise, Andrus nixed the suggestion as quickly as I made it. He made several points some may find still relevant.

He said his mere appearance would be perceived as an endorsement and he did not want anyone thinking that because he did not endorse the stunt. “It’s going to cost the state’s taxpayers money for which there will be no reimbursement for items like overtime for State Police support for local law enforcement.”

Secondly, Andrus doubted the local units of government, the city and county of Twin Falls, blinded by the thought that the stunt would help generate more tourism, had begun to charge the sponsors enough in permit fees to recover their costs. “It will be a lost leader in the end,” he said.

Third, Andrus said he did not believe in lending his office as a prop for a publicity stunt, especially one that could end in disaster.

“The state shouldn’t consider giving him a permit for the landing site on the north side of the canyon. They should be considering a permit for the bottom of the canyon ’cuz that’s where he’s going to land. Nope, I hope we’re several hundred miles away by the time he makes the attempt,” he concluded.

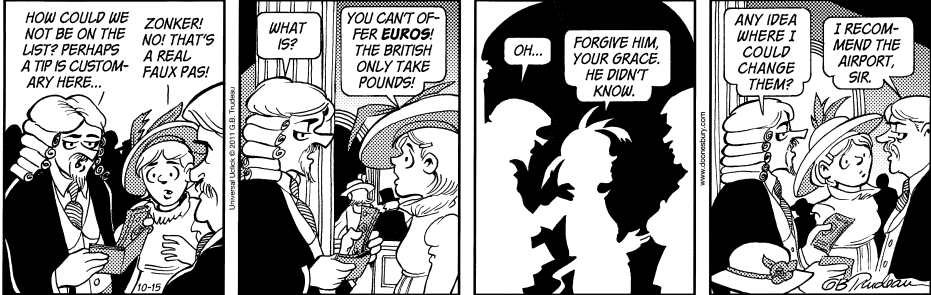

I thought about what Andrus had said then as I read the recent news that Idaho, this time around has already garnered a million dollars for the State Endowment Fund from the winning bidder for the next attempt.

Something tells me that, were Andrus still governor, he would still be several hundred miles away. Shortly after Andrus was first elected he had signs put up on state highways saying “Idaho Is Too Great to Litter.”

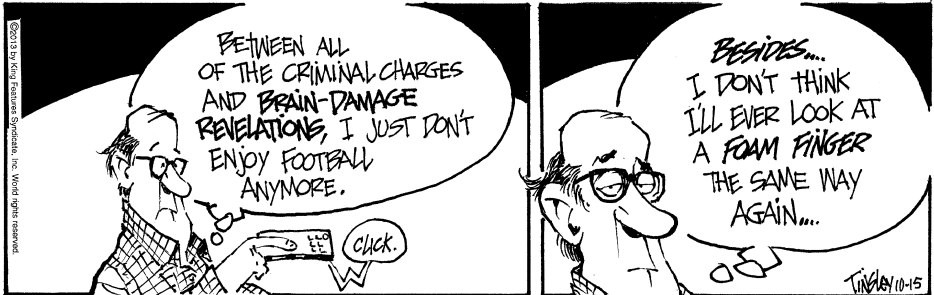

I think he rightly sees this kind of stunt as a cheap thrill attracting those hoping to see the latest entry for a “Darwin Award.” It “litters” Idaho’s grandeur and greatness.

Kellogg native Chris Carlson was the longtime press secretary for former four-term Gov. Cecil D. Andrus.

“We just keep working at it, and the numbers are going up — we are doing better — but we still need more primary care physicians,” she said.

If physician numbers don’t improve, the situation could be drastic: increased wait lines, higher cost, exacerbated acute medical conditions and a system rendered ineffective, she said.

Getting Ahead of the Wave

It’s proven that a patient having a good relationship with a primary care provider leads to the highest-quality, lowest-cost care, said Dr. Steven Kohtz, St. Luke’s medical director for primary care in the Magic Valley region.

For that reason, insurance and access are important — fewer patients will need hospitalization and fewer will land in the emergency room. But the key is making sure patients get attention when they need it, he said.

Administrators at St. Luke’s Magic Valley and Jerome have made access and recruiting physicians a top priority, said Johanna Stagge, director of primary care. St. Luke’s has added five nurse practitioners and physicians assistants, in addition to three family physicians — with a fourth on the way — and a pediatrician this year.

If St. Luke’s can expand its provider base, it may be able to get ahead of the wave of new patients.

“From the outside looking in, I understand it would be non-intuitive that you are hiring all these new primary care providers, how is that going to provide lower cost?” Kohtz said. “But it takes a very small decrease in (hospitalizations and emergency room visits) for you to offset, and then some, the cost of primary care.”

Recruiting to Rural Areas

Across the state, many physicians are aging and looking to turn their practice over to younger physicians, Santos said. If they leave now, they realize “that community will struggle,” she said.

But recruiting in rural areas like the Magic Valley is a challenge, Santos and Kohtz agreed. The top reason an area might struggle to lure doctors, Santos said, is because of a doctor’s spouse — if he or she doesn’t like the community or has a special line of work, they will go elsewhere.

“We are working with communities to help them understand what those issues are for them,” Santos said.

Kohtz said St. Luke’s leans on its rural training program for residents — if doctors train in an area, they are more likely to stay, he said. Currently, there are four St. Luke’s residents in the Magic Valley and Jerome regions, Stagge said.

It is hard to say how many new physicians St. Luke’s will need to bring to the area to meet its demand, Stagge said. A recent community-health needs assessment across eight counties indicated the need for at least 24 more physicians, Kohtz said.

But simply looking at the numbers might not be an accurate reflection of the need. Administrators must be careful, Stagge said, to not do “too much too soon.” That said, she feels the St. Luke’s system is “well poised” for the next few years.

“I’m not sure there is a magic number that we can say, ‘This is what is going to solve our access problem here in the Magic Valley,’” she said. “It is kind of a moving target, so we are watching that and looking at our access numbers, demand and determining what other needs may be unmet still.”

Stop-gap Measures

As a Band-aid, St. Luke’s recently opened its Quick Care — a small, no-appointment-necessary clinic open seven days a week to respond to patients’ acute needs outside of the emergency room.

If someone can’t see a primary care provider now or once the Affordable Care Act takes hold, patients can be seen at Quick Care in hopes of preventing a more expensive visit later. If a Quick Care patient doesn’t have a primary care provider, Stagge said, the clinic can help them find one.

Another short-term effect might be in facilities like The Wellness Tree Community Clinic where care is given free of charge to those who qualify — patients at or below the poverty level with no health insurance.

Built into the Affordable Care Act, however, are insurance exemptions for those who are homeless, unemployed, who can’t afford coverage, are illegal aliens, refugees and others, said clinic director Jonie Benson. The Wellness Tree will likely remain busy treating them, she said.

“So we are trying to figure out how the Affordable Care Act is actually even going to help the community that really needs the help,” she said.

Yet to be seen is if the more-than-30, rotating, volunteer physicians will be limited in the amount of time they have to volunteer at The Wellness Tree because of the extra Affordable Care Act workload, Benson said.

“If they have to open their practice up more broadly because there are more people on insurance and Medicaid, they may not have the time to come here,” she said. If they lose any volunteers, the clinic could be in a “terrible spot.”

Initial Headaches

The Magic Valley-based Family Health Services is also preparing for the wave of newly insured patients, said CEO Lynn Hudgens.

In the past year, the company has hired one new physician, two nurse practitioners and a physicians assistant.

However, Hudgens doesn’t expect FHS to be hit as hard as St. Luke’s or other providers, as many of the patients they treat now — 47 percent — are uninsured. For that reason, Hudgens said, FHS has hired five workers to raise community awareness, promote the new health care exchanges and help enroll local uninsured patients into the program.

Many state health care professionals, including Susie Pouliot, were optimistic about Idaho being able to meet physician demand in the long run.

Initially, providers will have headaches, but if the system works correctly, an emphasis on prevention and wellness will help level the systemic pressures, said Pouliot, CEO of the Idaho Medical Association.

“A lot of these people who have not been insured haven’t been accessing care and they are going to have more acute problems that haven’t been addressed that need to be taken care of immediately,” she said.

Possible Solutions

Santos said there are a number of things Idaho could do to increase its chances of successfully navigating the next few years.

The biggest factor is medical student’s debt load, she said. If there was a way the state could help with debt reduction, it might be able to lure more physicians to the area. Pouliot agreed and said the Idaho Medical Association has advocated for such measures, but hasn’t gotten anywhere in the Idaho Legislature.

The Idaho Medical Association has also advocated for increased access to medical schools and residency training programs, Pouliot said. “Expanding the pipeline, if you will, of getting students and physicians into it with the hopes they will end up practicing in Idaho when they train here and have exposure to our health system in Idaho.”

Idaho natives hoping to go to medical school can apply for the WWAMI program, which allows students in participating states to pay in-state tuition at the University of Washington or University of Utah. While there is no guarantee that students will return to Idaho after residency, Santos said her organization works hard to recruit those physicians back to the state.

Last year, the Idaho Legislature increased the number of seats it funded for that program from five to 25. It’s progress, but it’s far from an instant fix to the problem, Santos warned.

“It is not going to help for seven years.”

Big Win, but Not its Best Win

Coach Petersen disconcerted over BSU's play in some areas.

NICK RULAND

BOISE • Boise State may have gotten the most important win of its season Saturday night in Logan, Utah, defeating the Aggies and accelerating to the top of the Mountain Division of the Mountain West Conference, giving it full control over its future.

But it doesn't mean the Broncos played their best game.

Head coach Chris Petersen was in a jovial mood on Monday, but was candid with his discontent over the team's play in key areas in its 34-23 win over Utah State.

"There were some plays that we would really not like to make at this point in the season, some really critical negative type plays," Petersen said. "Most of it comes back to fundamental football, staying on our feet and staying on blocks."

Despite running back Jay Ajayi going for over 100 yards on five yards per carry, Boise State averaged less than three yards per tote as a team. Some of that, Petersen said, was missed blocks up front. And Petersen also alluded to Derrick Thomas and Jack Fields — the two running backs taking the carries of injured Aaron Baltazar — not playing well, either running too horizontally or fumbling, as Thomas did on a direct snap. In the first half.

"We have to get them in to a rhythm," Petersen said.

Receivers Still Not Up to Snuff

Once again, the Broncos highly touted receiving group dropped third down passes in the short and intermediate parts of the field and failed to come down with what would have been long catches. Outside of Shane Williams-Rhodes, who hauled in 13 receptions for 150 yards, the group left yards and likely points on Merlin Olsen Field.

"I still think our receivers need to play more consistent," Petersen said. "They have grown, gotten better, but there are easy plays out there that we don't make and we need to (make) across the board. They make a spectacular play that make you go 'wow,' and then they drop a ball they have no business dropping. We need to take the next step there across the board."

Coaching Blunders

After failing to run the clock out in the first half and allowing Utah State to block a punt up 24-10, Petersen took responsibility for what could have been a game-changing and therefore season-changing cascade of mistakes during a half-time television interview.

Petersen explained what happened Monday.

First, he said, quarterback Joe Southwick took the first snap of the series too early in the game clock, allowing Utah State to call its last two timeouts before the half expired.

Then, the Broncos used the wrong punt formation, which wasn't as tight as Petersen wanted, leaving them more exposed to a punt block formation, which Utah State used.

Thirdly, the Broncos missed a block on the punt play.

"It was a series of unfortunate events," Petersen said.

Luckily, Bryan Douglas batted down two ensuing passes in the end zone and left tackle Charles Leno blocked a field as time expired.

No harm done.

"I was really happy our guys weren't, 'oh, wow, now what,'" Petersen said. "I really think they were irritated. It started from Bryan Douglas knocking those fade balls down. It was great competing. Both sides were extremely fired up about it and I kind of felt bad because I was at the center of the blame, and I shouldn't have been."

Petersen said the mistakes actually had the affect of inspiring the team heading in the second half.

"There was a lot of energy in the locker room, so maybe it was good for us," Petersen said.

Diminutive Slot Receiver Shane Williams-Rhodes Making Big Plays for BSU

BY RYAN HOWE
rhowe@magicvalley.com

BOISE • Boise State's first two offensive plays against Utah State on Saturday were bubble screens to Shane Williams-Rhodes. Both went for negative-3 yards.

"I was thinking this might be a long game," Williams-Rhodes said.

It turned out to be a long night for the Aggie defensive backs who had to chase the speedy Williams-Rhodes all over Merlin Olsen Field.

The 5-foot-6, 157-pound sophomore from Spring, Texas, produced career highs in catches (13) and receiving yards (150) versus USU's man-to-man coverage.

"Loved it," he said. "I feel like I got a lot of chances to make moves in space."

Coach Chris Petersen said in all his time at Boise State, he's never seen a player quite like the quick, elusive and tough Williams-Rhodes.

Even when a play call or a pass isn't quite on target, Williams-Rhodes can still make it work.

"Shane can make it right when it's not all just right," Petersen said. "If he has any space, he's usually going to make that first guy, if he doesn't totally miss he's going to get some yards on top of it. It's nice to be able to throw the ball to a guy who can make you right all the time."

Thus far in his career at

"Loved it. I feel like I got a lot of chances to make moves in space."

Shane Williams-Rhodes, on his play against Utah State

BSU, Williams-Rhodes has primarily been used as a bubble-screen and fly-sweep guy. But the past two games — as senior wide receiver Kirby Moore has been sidelined with an injury — he's emerged into more of a downfield threat.

Against Utah State, nine of his 13 catches were quick screens to the outside. But he caught four passes of 15-plus yards downfield.

"I definitely love when I catch it downfield," he said. "I have two other (tacklers) to get by, rather than the screens where it's still the whole defense. That's nice"

With injuries to receivers Moore (reportedly day-to-day), Aaron Burks (played Saturday after missing two games but is still not 100-percent), plus tight end Gabe Linehan (undisclosed timetable for return), the Bronco passing game needs the likes of Williams-Rhodes to expand their playmaking ability.

"You never know which game will be your game, so you have to come out and play hard every game," Williams-Rhodes said.

Bolts Outplay Colts

Rivers, Novak lead Chargers to 19-9 win

SAN DIEGO (AP) • Philip Rivers and the San Diego Chargers kept Andrew Luck on the sideline most of the night, giving the Indianapolis Colts quarterback no chance at another comeback.

Rivers threw a 22-yard touchdown pass to rookie Keenan Allen and Nick Novak kicked four field goals to give the Chargers a 19-9 victory against the Colts on Monday night.

Rivers methodically moved the Chargers (3-3) on three scoring drives of at least 74 yards as he rebounded from a three-interception performance in a dismal loss at Oakland.

That, and a lot of dropped passes by Colts receivers, kept Indianapolis (4-2) from taking a two-game lead over Tennessee in the AFC South.

A week earlier, Luck helped rally the Colts to a 34-28 victory against Seattle.

He had no chance against the Bolts because of two long drives in the second quarter that helped contribute to the Chargers dominating the time of possession 38 minutes, 31 seconds to 21:29.

Allen got behind safety Delano Howell and cornerback Vontae Davis on a post route for the TD, completing a 12-play, 74-yard march that took 6:14 and gave San Diego a 7-3 lead. It was Allen's second TD catch of the season.

Novak's first field goal capped a drive that went 79 yards in 17 plays in 7:58. The drive was kept alive when cornerback Greg Toler was whistled for illegal contact for pushing receiver Lavelle Hawkins out of bounds on third-and-6 from the Chargers 45.

Luck then completed four straight passes to move the Colts into Chargers territory before Coby Fleener dropped a pass at the 25. Luck scrambled for 6 yards and threw an incompletion before Adam Vinatieri kicked a 50-yard field goal as time expired.

On the Colts' only other possession of the second quarter, Darrius Heyward-Bey dropped what likely would have been a long touchdown pass down the right sideline.

Novak also had field goals of 33, 34 and 50 yards, with the final one coming with 1:55 left. Vinatieri finished with three field goals.

Chargers cornerback Derek Cox snuffed out Indy's final chance when he intercepted a pass that was tipped by receiver Reggie Wayne with 1:07 to play.

Rivers was 22 of 33 for 237 yards and no interceptions. Luck was 18 of 30 for 202 yards.

Wayne got his 1,000th career reception in the fourth quarter.

San Diego established its running game with 147 yards. Ryan Mathews ran for 102 yards on 22 carries, his first 100-yard game of the season.

There were family ties in this one: Chargers defensive coordinator John Pagano beat older brother Chuck, the Colts' coach.

Seahawks Look to Recover after Ugly Win

RENTON, Wash. (AP) • Pete Carroll understood that from the outside, the Seahawks' win looked pretty ugly.

Whether it was the careless ball security or the Seahawks being unable to pull away until late, there wasn't much aesthetically impressive about Seattle's 20-13 victory over Tennessee on Sunday.

But within the Seahawks' 11th straight home victory, Carroll was encouraged by a better offensive performance and a Seattle defense that didn't allow an offensive touchdown for the second time this season.

"I liked the way it looked from the inside out," Carroll said on Monday.

The Seahawks improved to 5-1 for the first time since 2003 and finished their out of conference matchups against the AFC South with a 3-1 record.

Russell Wilson threw for 257 yards and ran for another 61, the third time this season he's topped 300 yards combined passing and running.

Until Tennessee's final drive of the game, the Seahawks had limited the Titans to 154 total yards.

Carroll enjoyed analyzing that part of the win.

But it was impossible to ignore Seattle's flaws, and with little time for corrections as the Seahawks travel to Arizona on Thursday night.

The Seahawks put the ball on the ground five times, although they only lost two fumbles. It was the most fumbles in a regular-season game by the Seahawks since the 2000 season.

For the second straight week, Seattle watched a field goal attempt go back the other way for a touchdown, this time due to a fumbled attempt on the last play of the first half with a backup holder and kicker.

Seattle Seahawks' Marshawn Lynch is stopped near the end zone on a carry against the Tennessee Titans in the second half on Sunday in Seattle.

While Carroll didn't seem concerned, Wilson continued to put much of the offense on his shoulders, both running and passing.

Seattle offense finally found some rhythm in the second half with 251 total yards and 17 points, but it came after a choppy start.

Seattle scored touchdowns on just 2 of 5 trips inside the Tennessee 20.

"It's nice to learn while you are winning and I think that's where we are. That's what we're hoping to continue," Carroll said.

"I don't know if we'll be able to reach the levels that we saw late last year where we were scoring points at a huge rate. That was an enormous run that we had. But that's good to expect that and I'd like to see that too.

Game plans were already being handed out on Monday for the quick turnaround and trip to Arizona.

Seattle will play consecutive division games in prime time, facing the Cardinals followed by a Monday night game in St. Louis on Oct. 28, and then not see anyone from the NFC West again until December.

The Seahawks may be without defensive end Chris Clemons against Arizona after he hyperextended his elbow late in the game getting caught in a pile.

X-rays were negative and an MRI on Monday showed Clemons had a "little issue," Carroll said, but that it would not require surgery. It'll be a pain tolerance issue for Clemons if he is to play on Thursday.

The other major question for Seattle is middle linebacker Bobby Wagner after he missed the Titans game with a high ankle sprain suffered a week earlier against Indianapolis.

Carroll said Wagner is making progress in his recovery, but might not be far enough along to go against the Cardinals.

If Wagner can't go, K.J. Wright would move from the outside and start his second straight game at middle linebacker.

"We're very fortunate to have the depth to be able to withstand that," Carroll said. "It's worked out well for us."

Seattle is expecting tight end Zach Miller to practice and play after missing the past two games with a hamstring injury.

Miller was close to being able to go on Sunday, but with the quick turnaround, the Seahawks felt it best to hold him out until Thursday.

And while wide receiver Percy Harvin is eligible to come off the physically unable to perform list and start practicing, it's not expected to happen this week because of the limited practice time.

10 Questions with Gage Moore, Cross Country Runner with Filer High School

- Strengths: I get my strengths from my grandpa; ability to motivate self.
- He's working on: I have a feeling I'm going to break the 16 minute barrier at state.
- Favorite T.V. show: Big Bang Theory. They are trying to act like it's a smart funny, but it's kind of dumbed down. Almost like a stupid funny.
- School subject: Tie between science and hands-on courses; technology and building things.
- Favorite Music: Dubstep.
- Favorite Movie: Stand By Me.
- Most-Used App: The one I use quite a bit is called DreamPro. It records me while I sleep. If I talk or make noises in my sleep, it will actually record it. I have actually caught myself talking in my sleep.
- Admired Athlete: Steve Prefontaine.
- After high school: College, competing as a runner. I've received letters from Idaho State and other private schools.
- Post-meet ritual: Complex carbohydrates.

World Doping Agency to Probe Jamaica

ASSOCIATED PRESS

A year after Usain Bolt made history at the London Olympics and declared himself "a living legend," a bombshell dropped largely unnoticed in The Gleaner, the Caribbean's oldest newspaper: A former director of the Jamaica Anti-Doping Commission alleged the island didn't drug-test its athletes for entire months before they dazzled at the Summer Games.

Statistics compiled by former JADCO Executive Director Renee Anne Shirley indicated a near-complete breakdown in the agency's out-of-competition testing from January 2012 to the July opening of the Olympics.

In an interview with The Associated Press, JADCO chairman Herbert Elliott dismissed Shirley's figures as lies and described her as "a bit demented" and "a Judas."

But the World Anti-Doping Agency confirmed to AP that there was, as Shirley asserted, "a significant gap of no testing" by JADCO as athletes trained for London, and that it would launch an "extraordinary" audit of the Jamaican agency.

What's more, International Olympic Committee medical chiefs, WADA and Britain's anti-doping agency, which also worked on London's massive drug-testing program, told the AP that they were kept in the dark about Jamaican testing lapses that Shirley exposed in her August letter to The Gleaner.

"There was a period of ... maybe five to six months during the beginning part of 2012 where there was no effective operation," WADA Director General David Howman said in an interview. "No testing. There might have been one or two, but there was no testing. So we were worried about it, obviously."

Jamaican stars didn't go completely untested before London. Track and field's governing body, the IAAF, says it extensively tested elite Jamaicans, including Bolt more than 12 times last year. History's fastest human has never failed a drug test.

Jamaica won eight of 12 individual sprint medals in London. Bolt became the first man to win both the 100 and 200 meters at consecutive games and anchored Jamaica's relay victory in world-record time.

It isn't possible to judge with any certainty whether the gaps in Jamaica's testing opened a door to cheating, particularly because other agencies refuse to say how many tests were conducted on the Jamaicans in 2012.

The revelations by Shirley, however, were alarming enough to prompt action.

While WADA has audited Jamaica's testing regime before, Howman said its new action is a direct response to the problems Shirley exposed and to positive doping tests this year for five athletes who competed for Jamaica in London. They include former world 100 record holder Asafa Powell and Sherone Simpson, an Olympic 4x100-relay gold and silver medalist.

"It's an extraordinary visit," Howman said. Jamaica is "a high priority. ... They're on our radar."

Magic Valley
Residents with Unclaimed Property

Many Idahoans’ names, for one reason or another, end up on the state’s unclaimed property list.

People get divorced, get remarried or move out of state. And sometimes they don’t leave the bank a forwarding address.

“Unclaimed property” usually doesn’t refer to land or a house. Rather, it’s money — checking accounts, savings accounts, stock dividends, mutual funds and utility refunds — or items stored in a safety deposit box. At times coins, gems, jewelry and stamps are reported unclaimed by hospitals, hotels and financial institutions.

Businesses turn over those assets to the state, which tries to reunite the stuff with its owner — or its heirs.

The Idaho Treasurer’s Office provided this sampling of 75 people who own unclaimed property valued at more than $100. Their last known addresses are in south-central Idaho.

But many other people are on the list, too. Be proactive by searching your own name at sto.idaho.gov. You might be surprised by what you find.

Shoppers in Kimberly are pictured on Monday. Downtown revitalization projects are among many indicators of a growing economy. Five businesses opened in Kimberly this summer, including Family Health Services downtown. A steady stream of residential building permits are flowing through the city since Chobani opened next to Kimberly last December.

Strengthening its Economic Core

Increasing population, revitalization boosts Kimberly.

BY JOE CADOTTE

jcadotte@magicvalley.com

TWIN FALLS • The population is growing, infrastructure is revitalizing and new businesses are sprouting throughout the City of Kimberly as the town of around 3,300 strengthens its economic core.

More than 1,000 people have moved to Kimberly since 1990 and dozens of residential construction projects throughout town are underway, said Larry Hall, city administrator.

A streetlight installation on Red Cap Corner, the city’s most dangerous intersection at 3500 East and Kimberly Road during the first week of September saw business follow and fill an empty building that had sat unoccupied for five years, Hall said.

If Kimberly is a microcosm of a regional economic uptick, the success of a hot dog stand turned restaurant on the infamous corner is testament to the local economy.

“This corner has just been a huge explosion as far as growth in industry,” said Billy Elser, Cactus Grill owner. “Standlee Hay moving their corporate office here was huge for them, Farm Bureau Insurance moved in, Five Star Builders, the combination of everybody being here is making everybody successful not just us. It’s like that old saying, how do you make a business successful? Location location location.”

Elser knows location. His hot dog stand outside Home Depot in Twin Falls attracted around 300 hungry patrons daily. When Home Depot kicked them out earlier this summer, Elser got lights in his eyes when he saw a nearly vacant Red Cap corner, which at the time was gearing up for its own set of stop lights.

Elser’s stand evolved into a sit-down restaurant after the move.

“Business is smokin’ man, just incredible and then some,” Elser said. “We did half a year’s sales in four weeks.”

But according to Elser and his patrons, the streetlights haven’t been all that effective in reducing drivers’ need for speed. A glance out the grill’s wide, square windows reveals cars zipping passed the new lights, seemingly ignoring the posted 45 mph limit.

“I haven’t seen a difference,” he said. “The speed limit they had up there, if you stand out front and look, anyone can see people still zooming past me.”

A collaborative effort between the city and community is beautifying a growing downtown. Sidewalks, curbs, gutters and bulb-outs are being installed to maximize the city’s recent economic growth, Hall said.

“We’ve gone through and done street repair on numerous streets in the city, $200,000 worth of repair, chip sealing and overlay,” Hall said. “Taking large sections of streets and getting a large amount of our downtown revitalization plan accomplished. We’re anticipating doing it again next spring.”

There has been a steady stream of people moving to, and building in, Kimberly since yogurt giant Chobani moved in just a few miles away.

There have been 60 building permits issued in Kimberly since Jan. 1, compared to 14 during the entire year of 2012, Hall said. And beautifying downtown is important to keep people coming, he said.

“Cohesiveness, it’s engaging our community in things that send us in the right direction,” he said. “It all fits together. There’s not one thing that’s wonderful. It’s all wonderful. The light, especially, is a lifesaver.”

The cherry on top?

In September, Nerdwallet.com, a national financial consulting firm aimed toward young adults, named Kimberly the third best Idaho town to raise a family, mostly because of its strong school system.

“It fits very well because that’s what we’re doing in our community,” Hall said. “We’re a clean community. People have pride in where we live. We have pride in our downtown and businesses. We have a business friendly leadership.”

Idaho Business Opportunity Conference to be Held in Coeur d'Alene

BOISE • The 25th annual Idaho Business Opportunity Conference will take place on Thursday, Oct. 24, in Coeur d'Alene. The conference offers Idaho manufacturers, contractors and distributors an opportunity to meet with purchasing professionals from many of the Northwest's largest corporations and government agencies, said Megan Ronk, Idaho Department of Commerce spokeswoman.

Attendees will also have the opportunity to individually connect with one another and learn how various products and services can match up with purchasing needs, Ronk said.

Attendees to the Idaho Business Opportunity Conference include any Idaho business looking for new customers and expanded sales. The conference will give attendees many opportunities to network, as well as attend informative seminars that offer techniques and ideas to improve various aspects of business.

The seller registration will begin at 7:30 a.m. at the Coeur d'Alene Resort, 115 South Second Street. The conference will be held from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. and is sponsored by the Idaho Commerce Procurement Technical Assistance Center, PTAC, Idaho National Laboratory, Idaho Treatment Group, URS, and CH2M. .

Conference registration for Idaho businesses is $55 per person on Oct. 15, and $65 per person on or after Oct. 16. The registration fee covers all seminars, access to all buyers and purchasing agents, breakfast and lunch. Cancellations are accepted until Oct. 20.

For more information about the Idaho Business Opportunity Conference or the Idaho Procurement Technical Assistance Center, visit <http://ptac.idaho.gov>

Glanbia Foods Recognized by Idaho Power for Energy-Efficiency Efforts

TWIN FALLS • Glanbia Foods has been recognized by Idaho Power as one of its top 10 Energy Efficiency Program Participants for 2012, said Peggy Watland, Glanbia spokeswoman, in an email to the Times-News.

Glanbia Foods' energy-saving measures will save more than three million kilowatt-hours per year — which placed the company second on Idaho Power's Top 10 List, Watland said.

Because of extensive energy upgrades Glanbia made at their Twin Falls and Gooding processing plants, Idaho Power paid Glanbia more than $235,000 in incentives, she said.

"Glanbia Foods has been one of our greatest partners in our efforts to encourage energy effectiveness," said Chris Pollow, Idaho Power senior engineer. "Their engagement in energy efficiency practices helps them reduce their energy use and helps us keep rates among the lowest in the nation."

Numerous energy efficiency upgrades were made at these facilities last year to help conserve electricity and qualify for Idaho Power incentives, said Steve Maughan, senior project manager at Glanbia.

"At our Twin Falls plant, we upgraded the refrigeration systems and installed motor controls that enabled our processing systems to run more efficiently," Maughan said. "In Gooding, we upgraded lighting and building systems. As a result of these changes, we saved over 3 million kilowatts in 2012, enough electricity to power 750 average-sized Idaho homes in one year."

Glanbia Foods has participated in Idaho Power's energy efficiency programs since 2007, saving more than nine million kilowatts, Watland said.

"A portion of the money we save on our electricity use is returned by Idaho Power which in turn allows us to use that money for business growth and investment," said Glanbia CEO/president Jeff Williams. "We are keen on being energy conscious and we will continue to do whatever we can in the future to save energy. We know that saving energy is not only good for Glanbia, but it helps to offset Idaho Power's energy demand and future plant needs. Energy savings is a win-win for everyone."

McCain Foods in Burley Earns EPA ENERGY STAR Certification

BURLEY • McCain Foods USA's Burley facility earned the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency's ENERGY STAR® certification, which signifies that the industrial facility performs in the top 25 percent of similar facilities nationwide for energy efficiency and meets strict energy efficiency performance levels set by the EPA, said company spokeswoman Cathy Sharifi, in an email to the Times-News.

"McCain Foods USA is pleased to accept EPA's ENERGY STAR certification in recognition of our energy efficiency efforts," said Jeff McCray, Burley Plant Manager. "Through this achievement, we have demonstrated our commitment to environmental stewardship while also lowering our energy costs."

Earning ENERGY STAR certification highlights McCain Foods Burley's status within the top 25 percent of frozen fried potato plants in the nation with regard to energy performance. McCain Foods USA has systematically improved its energy performance by managing energy strategically across the entire organization, McCray said.

"We were guided by a strong engineering team that sought out, developed and installed cost effective enhancements to Burley," he said. "Our operations teams worked together to come up with innovative ways to reduce water and energy costs-and they remain committed to environmental stewardship."

"Improving the energy efficiency of our nation's industrial facilities is critical to protecting our environment," said Jean Lupinacci, Chief of the ENERGY STAR Commercial & Industrial Branch. "From the plant floor to the board room, organizations are leading the way by making their facilities more efficient and earning EPA's ENERGY STAR certification."

To earn the ENERGY STAR®, McCain Foods Burley did this:

- Reduced energy consumption through several continuous improvement activities
- Installed advanced LED lighting in strategic areas of the facility to reduce energy consumption
- Increased employee awareness of resource conservation through the facility environmental management system

Idaho Hispanic Chamber of Commerce and Wells Fargo Partner for Education

BOISE • The Idaho Latino Scholarship Foundation, a sister organization of the Idaho Hispanic Chamber of Commerce, IHCC, and Wells Fargo announced $25,000 in total funds awarded to 11 students to further their education goals in the 2013-14 school year, said chamber spokeswoman Julie Fogerson.

In addition, the United States Hispanic Chamber of Commerce, USHCC, received $700,000 in Wells Fargo grant monies, with distributions planned for local chambers, Fogerson said.

The Idaho Latino Scholarship Foundation was organized in 2006 and has given more than 20 scholarships to help overcome the financial barriers that many Latino students face, she said. Relying mainly on individual and corporate donations, the foundation saw a dramatic increase in award opportunities this school year, she said.

"We were able to award only one $5,000 scholarship per year over the last four years," said Trudy McGavin, treasurer for the foundation and founding president. "We grew exponentially in 2013, with partners in giving like Wells Fargo, and we're so pleased to award more funding to our youth for their hard work and see them pursue secondary education."

Also contributing to training and educational programs, the USHCC announced a $700,000 grant from Wells Fargo during National Hispanic Heritage Month, as part of a $1.8 million Wells Fargo commitment. USHCC will provide more than 350 local chamber leaders across the country with educational opportunities and micro grants to sustain and grow their businesses through the Chamber Training Institute, which is in its fifth year, Fogerson said.

"The world is getting more competitive, making resources for our Latino community even more important," said Carmen Gonzales, executive director for the IHCC. "Attending the USHCC's Chamber Training Institute event in Chicago, it was rewarding to see grant funds being used in support of small businesses, taking education and training opportunities even further."

As the nation's number one small business lender for 10 years running, Wells Fargo has a track record of facilitating access to capital and financial services, Fogerson said. Since 1997, Wells Fargo has loaned more than $6 billion to Hispanic business owners specifically, and more recently, Wells Fargo also committed to lend a cumulative total of $55 billion to women-owned businesses by the year 2020, she said.

Idaho Bucket List Author Wins Statewide Contest

BY MARY KEATING

Contributing Writer for Southern Idaho Tourism

TWIN FALLS • Southern Idaho Tourism proudly announces their First annual Southern Idaho Blog Contest Winner, Monica McCue. Her short and 'sweet' article about Fredrickson's Fine Candy captures the heart of Idaho living — tradition, family and celebration. Her winning entry is currently featured at www.visitsouthidaho.com/blog/fredericksons-fine-candy. While it was her entry that earned her top honors, it is the story behind the box of chocolates that sheds light on a true Idaho gem.

McCue is the founder and author of the Idaho Bucket List, www.idahobucketlist.blogspot.com. Through pictures and personal stories, it is clear McCue has an exceptional passion for everything Idaho.

"I have lived in Idaho my whole life and from time to time I hear either about fun events and places in the state that I did not even know existed or I hear people complain that there is nothing to do," McCue said. "My goal is to seek out events in the surrounding areas, presently in the lower part of the state, and let everyone know about them."

McCue, accompanied by her husband, Jacob, enthusiastically and poignantly shares their Idaho adventures. Her pages are filled with photos and tales of events, local eateries and recreational explorations. Since February of 2013, McCue has covered everything from Wild Asparagus to the Winter Carnival in McCall; Miracle Hot Springs in Hagerman to the Morrison Performing Arts Center in Boise; the Historic Theatre in Glenns Ferry to Basque bread in Wendell; camping in Stanley to swimming at Lava Hot Springs; and from Trailing of the Sheep event in Ketchum to Thunder Mountain train rides in Horseshoe Bend. The site shows the diversity, splendor and recreation that can only be found in the great state of Idaho. In addition to her unique quest to catalog events, local hot spots and recreational opportunities, she also maintains an Idaho calendar of events that is both compact and comprehensive.

"We love the recreation, climate, people, businesses and hidden gems of Idaho," McCue said. "Places and recreational spots are so accessible and when it comes to community events, if people know about them and what they can expect when they go, more people will put a note on their calendars and attend."

McCue is a self-professed "frequent flyer" on a number of Idaho Chamber of Commerce websites, the library, visit-southidaho.com, as well as thisisboise.com.

"When I go somewhere, I want to know, in advance, how much money I will need, what to pack, what rentals are available in the area and great places to find good food," McCue said. "Online there are maps so we can plan our routes, information so we can know what is happening and loads of other helpful details that can help us really enjoy our travels. It takes a little research and planning to get prepared for each trip. All that I learn, I share with others on my blog."

As the weather changes, McCue's quests are trending toward autumn activities like the Corn Maze in Meridian, the Haunted Tours in Old Town Pocatello, Oktoberfest in Boise, as well as the many harvest events and Christmas parades.

"To see what you may have been missing in Idaho, consider looking at our blog or friend us on Facebook at 'The Idaho Bucket List,'" McCue said. "My husband and I love to travel around and go places we have never been before. The more we explore and research, the more we really see that Idaho has it all and then some. Idaho is a place where anyone and everyone can fill their bucket list."

If you have a special place or event to add to her calendar or find out if she will feature your event on her blog, contact her online or on Facebook. McCue is open to suggestions and looks forward to building new friendships around the state.

Gooding Chamber of Commerce Hosts Legislative Meeting

GOODING • The next Gooding Chamber of Commerce meeting will be Thursday, Oct. 17, at noon at the Gooding County Museum, the Chamber's new location.

State Senator Michelle Stennett and State Representative Steve Miller will be on hand to discuss the upcoming Idaho State Legislative Session. Lunch will be provided by the Gooding Chamber of Commerce and the Gooding County Historical Society, chamber officials said.

In addition to being able to exchange ideas with representatives in state government, this will be the last opportunity to see the Basque Exhibit before it moves to another site, the chamber reported. The chambers invites everyone to take advantage of this last opportunity to see this special exhibit that was once displayed at Ellis Island.

The chamber officials ask that you RSVP by leaving a message on the Chamber's voice mail at 208-358-3038 so they can be sure to have enough lunch available for everyone.

CSI Offers Forklift Operation and Safety Course

TWIN FALLS • The College of Southern Idaho Workforce Training Network is offering a non-credit Forklift Operation and Safety Course, taught by Corey Hobbs, on Thursday, Nov. 7 from 2 to 6 p.m., at the College of Southern Idaho Campus, said Stacy Madsen with CSI's Community Education Center.

Forklift Operation and Safety addresses the requirements of the OSHA standard 29 CFR 1910.178(1), Madsen said.

The course will prepare the new operator in forklift safety, safe operation, and prepare participants for the written exam. This course will include proper operating instructions; warnings and precautions; controls and instrumentation; safe operation, capacity and stability; inspection and maintenance; operation limitations and other related topics. The final forklift certification will be offered by an industry trainer at the participant's place of employment.

The registration cost for the Forklift Operation and Safety class is $85 and students may register at communityed.csi.edu or 208-732-6442. Class size is limited so early registration is suggested.

The College of Southern Idaho Workforce Training Network, CSI WTN, offers comprehensive training programs dedicated to producing workers with the competencies needed to meet ever-changing area employment demands by matching skills to employers, providing training opportunities and reporting the needs and demands of the labor market, she said.

The CSI WTN provides customized job training courses for new entrants into the labor market, dislocated workers and currently employed workers, professional development, skills upgrades and vocational and industry specific certifications, customized non-credit training, testing and assessments, and online classes. All trainings are available to the public and as customized programs. For more information about the CSI Workforce Training Network, visit online at <http://workforce.csi.edu>

On the horizon is a forum called the "Kimberly Enhancement Team." Hall said city officials are conducting a survey for residents to have input in how the city uses its growth.

"The survey asks, 'what do you want to see when you come home after five? What is the experience that keeps you in town when you come home from work?' Recreation, arts, bike trails, all kinds of things," Hall said. "That's the kind of input we want instead of saying, 'this is what the city is going to do.'"

But it's not all easy sailing from here.

One of the biggest obstacles facing Kimberly is its use and stigma as a bedroom community to Twin Falls, Hall said. People work and play in Twin Falls and go home to Kimberly to sleep and shower.

As Twin Falls is expected to double in population within the next 20 years, Hall said they are doing everything they can to prevent Kimberly from becoming a suburb.

"We don't want to have that attitude as a bedroom community," Hall said. "We want to have an attitude of being self-supportive and have the kind of activities that make our citizens want to stay home when they get home from work."

Libyan Arrives in US to Face Trial on Terrorism Charges

WASHINGTON (AP) • After a weeklong interrogation aboard a U.S. warship, a Libyan al-Qaida suspect is now in New York awaiting trial on terrorism charges, U.S. officials said Monday.

Abu Anas al-Libi was grabbed in a military raid in Libya on Oct. 5. He's due to stand trial in Manhattan, where he has been under indictment for more than a decade on charges he helped plan and conduct surveillance for the bombings of U.S. embassies in Africa in 1998.

Al-Libi

was transferred to law enforcement custody over the weekend. Al-Libi was expected to be arraigned Tuesday, Bharara said.

President Barack Obama's administration took criticism years ago when it decided to prosecute admitted

Preet Bharara, the U.S. attorney for the southern district of New York, confirmed that al-Libi

9/11 mastermind Khalid Sheikh Mohammed in New York, rather than at the naval prison at Guantanamo Bay. After reversing course, however, the government has successfully prosecuted several terrorism cases in civilian courts.

A federal law enforcement official and two other U.S. officials said al-Libi arrived in New York on Saturday. The officials insisted on anonymity because they were not authorized to publicly discuss the matter.

Intelligence officials interrogated him for a week aboard the U.S.S. San Antonio in the Mediterranean. Interrogations at sea have replaced CIA black sites as the U.S. government's preferred method for holding suspected terrorists and questioning them without access to lawyers.

Al-Libi's al-Qaida ties date back to the terrorist group's early years, according to court documents. That would make him a valuable source of information about the group's history.

AT A GLANCE

Official: UK Arrests Thwart Kenya-style Plot

LONDON • British law enforcement agencies averted a plot to orchestrate a large-scale terror attack similar to the assault on Kenya's Westgate mall, an official said Monday.

Police were questioning four men in their 20s on suspicion of terrorism after they were detained Sunday in pre-planned, intelligence-led raids.

A British security official said the men were planning a shooting spree akin to the Westgate attack in Nairobi, in which at least 67 people died.

The official — who spoke on condition of anonymity because he was not authorized to speak to the media on the record — said it was not clear how advanced the planning was but that any attack was not imminent.

Metropolitan Police did not identify the suspects or say what, if any, charges, they may face. But in a series of statements, the force said the men were all British nationals between the ages of 25 and 29, with roots in Turkey, Pakistan, Algeria and Azerbaijan.

The force confirmed that the London police firearms unit took part in the arrests. British police rarely carry weapons and their involvement suggested concern that men might have been armed.

Police Investigating Dry Ice Explosion at LAX

LOS ANGELES • Los Angeles police have taken over the investigation into who was responsible for planting a plastic bottle containing dry ice that exploded in an employee bathroom at Los Angeles International Airport.

Air traffic was back to normal Monday after the Sunday evening explosion caused a commotion in LAX's terminal 2. Up to four flights were delayed after airport police halted security screening for more than an hour.

Los Angeles Police spokeswoman Sally Madera said no injuries were reported, and "there was no threat to the public area."

The bathroom was in an area of the terminal that isn't accessible to the public, according to FBI spokeswoman Laura Eimiller. She said there was "no stated threat associated with the incident."

Investigators are trying to determine how the bottle wound up there.

Economists Win Nobel Prize

Ordinary investors don't stand much chance of beating the market. It moves way too fast and efficiently. Or it behaves in ways that make no sense at all.

Three Americans won the Nobel prize in economics Monday for their sometimes-contradictory insights into the complexities of investing.

Eugene Fama and Lars Peter Hansen of the University of Chicago and Robert Shiller of Yale University were honored for shedding light on the forces that move stock, bond and home prices — findings that have transformed how people invest.

Fama's research revealed the efficiency of financial markets: They absorb information so fast that individual investors can't outperform the markets as a whole. His work helped popularize index funds, which reflect an entire market of assets, such as the Standard & Poor's 500 stock index.

Hunter Found in California Forest Ate Squirrels

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) • The 72-year-old hunter who was lost for more than two weeks in a California forest survived by eating squirrels and other animals he shot with his rifle, and by making fires and packing leaves and grasses around his body to stay warm, his family said Monday.

Gene Penaflor of San Francisco was found Saturday in Mendocino National Forest by other hunters who carried him to safety in a makeshift stretcher, the Mendocino County Sheriff's Office said in a statement.

Penaflor disappeared after heading out with a partner during the first week of deer hunting season in the rugged mountains of Northern California, a trip he takes annually. The forest is about 160 miles north of San Francisco.

"He goes hunting every year, and he comes home every year," his daughter-in-law Deborah Penaflor said Monday outside Gene Penaflor's small home in the Bernal Heights neighborhood. "We'd gotten a little complacent that he would always come back."

Gene Penaflor separated from his hunting partner for a couple of hours as usual to stalk deer. While they were apart, Gene Penaflor fell, hit his head and passed out, Deborah Penaflor said.

He woke up after spending what appeared to be a full day unconscious, with his chin and lip badly gashed. He noticed fog and morning dew and realized he'd been out for a while, Deborah Penaflor said.

Gene Penaflor had a lighter, a knife and water with him when he went hunting. But his daughter-in-law said the knife and water bottle somehow got lost in the fall. She had no further details.

Still, he was able use his rifle to kill squirrels to sustain him while he awaited rescue. He also found water in a nearby drainage.

To stay warm, Gene Penaflor made small fires and packed leaves and grasses around his body. When it rained or snowed, he crawled under a large log and managed to stay dry, authorities said.

"He knew at some point he was going to die, but he figured he'd last as long as he could," sheriff's Detective Andrew Porter told the Ukiah Daily Journal.

Gunmen in Syria Release 4 Aid Workers, Hold 3

BEIRUT (AP) • Gunmen in Syria released three Red Cross staffers and a Red Crescent volunteer who had been kidnapped in rebel-held territory, the international agency said Monday.

The fate of three other Red Cross workers who were also seized Sunday in the northwestern Idlib province remained unclear, the International Committee of the Red Cross said.

Syrian opposition activists said the seven aid workers were taken at a rebel checkpoint outside the town of Saraqeb, manned by an al-Qaida affiliate, the Islamic State in Iraq and the Levant. There was no claim of responsibility.

About two dozen miles away, near Turkey, a car bomb went off in the market of the town of Darkoush on Monday, while it was crowded with people shopping for the four-day Muslim holiday of Eid al-Adha holiday. The blast set cars on fire and sent people running.

Observatory for Human Rights said 27 people were killed, while another activist group, the Local Coordination Committees, put the death toll at 15.

It was not clear who carried out the bombing and why they attacked a civilian target in a rebel-held area. Syria's conflict has seen an increasing use of car bombings, but most have been carried out against regime targets, usually by jihadi fighters among rebels.

Ancient Bug's Last Supper of Blood Still in Fossil

WASHINGTON (AP) • In a steamy tropical forest 46 million years ago, a prehistoric mosquito bit a critter, drew blood and was blown into a lake in what is now northwestern Montana. Belly full, she died and sank.

Flash forward to the present. Researchers found the minuscule female insect fossilized in a paper-thin piece of shale — which had sat in someone's basement for 25 to 30 years with other rocks — and concluded it still contains its last supper. A study in the Proceedings of the National Academy of Science reports a first for biology: a blood meal found intact in a fossil.

While the scenario sounds eerily similar to the Michael Crichton book and movie "Jurassic Park," no new T. rexes will result.

Unfortunately for would-be dinosaur cloners, the mosquito flew long after dinosaurs went extinct, and its meal was probably blood from a dino descendant, a bird. And an even bigger blow to the "Jurassic Park" scenario is that scientists have long known that DNA from other critters couldn't survive in insect fossils, said study lead author Dale Greenwalt, a retired biochemist who collects and analyzes insect fossils from Montana for the Smithsonian Institution.

So this is more a scientific curiosity, a look-what-we-found, that starts out like early chapters of the sci-fi thriller.

"It's following Crichton's script in that we're using a blood engorged fossil mosquito and in this case we're using the direct descendant of the dinosaurs, given that we're 20 million years late," Greenwalt said.

Reid, McConnell Optimistic on Deal

GOP, Democrats make ‘tremendous progress’ to avoid default.

WASHINGTON (AP) • Racing the clock, the Senate’s Democratic and Republican leaders closed in on a deal Monday night to avoid an economy-menacing Treasury default and end the two-week partial government shutdown.

“We’ve made tremendous progress,” Senate Majority Leader Harry Reid declared after an intense day of negotiations with Senate Republican Leader Mitch McConnell and other lawmakers. “Perhaps tomorrow will be a bright day,” he said, suggesting agreement could be announced soon after weeks of stubborn gridlock.

McConnell also voiced optimism — but the emerging accord generated little if any satisfaction among rebellious House conservatives.

Officials said that under the discussion to date, the $16.7 trillion federal debt limit would be raised enough to permit the Treasury to borrow normally until mid-February if not a few weeks longer.

The government would reopen with enough money to operate until mid-January at levels set previously, and agencies would be given flexibility in adjusting to reduced funding levels imposed by across-the-board spending cuts.

There was also an increasingly strong likelihood that any agreement would include a one-year delay in a $63 fee imposed on companies by the health care law known as Obamacare for everyone covered under an employer-sponsored plan.

Also, individuals seeking subsidies under the health care law to pay for coverage would be subject to stronger income verification measures.

The government has been partly closed since Oct. 1, and the administration says the Treasury will run out of borrowing authority to fully pay the nation’s bills on Thursday.

The result has been a partisan showdown that polls show is alienating all sectors of the electorate except tea party supporters — and has been a big political loser for Republicans.

As a midweek deadline for raising the debt limit neared, the stock market turned positive on bullish predictions from the two longtime antagonists at the center of the talks, Reid and McConnell.

Though McConnell expressed optimism about an agreement, his words were not as strong as Reid’s. “We’ve made substantial progress, and we look forward to making more progress in the near future,” he said as the Senate adjourned for the evening.

Visiting a charity not far from the White House, President Barack Obama blended optimism with a slap at Republicans.

“My hope is that a spirit of cooperation will move us forward over the next few hours,” he said. And yet, he added, “If we don’t start making some real progress both in the House and the Senate, and if Republicans aren’t willing to set aside some of their partisan concerns in order to do what’s right for the country, we stand a good chance of defaulting.”

Stock prices, which had risen strongly late last week on hopes of an agreement, were down at the start of the day but then pushed higher as the Senate leaders voiced optimism. The Dow Jones industrial average rose 64 points.

Reid and McConnell met twice before midafternoon, their sessions sandwiched around a White House announcement that Obama was calling them and the party leaders in the House for the second time in less than a week to discuss the economy-threatening crises. The meeting was subsequently postponed and it was not clear when it might be rescheduled.

Any legislation would require passage in the Senate and also in the House, where a large faction of tea party-aligned lawmakers precipitated the shutdown two weeks ago despite the efforts of both McConnell and Republican Speaker John Boehner.

Boehner met with McConnell during the day, then with other House GOP leaders. His spokesman, Michael Steel, later said, “If the Senate comes to an agreement, we will review it with our members.” A closed-door session was set for Tuesday morning.

One conservative with a seat at the GOP leadership table, Oklahoma Rep. James Lankford, said that based on what he had been told, the emerging package contained no policy victories for his party. As for raising the debt limit until February, he said, “That’s a lot of dollars.”

As US Default Nears, Investors Shrug Off Threat

NEW YORK (AP) • Warren Buffett likens it to a nuclear attack. Economists warn that government spending on programs like Social Security would plunge. The Treasury says the economy would slide into a recession worse than the last.

Yet you wouldn’t know that a U.S. debt default could amount to a nightmare from the way many companies and investors are preparing for it: They aren’t. The assumption seems to be that in the end, Washington will find a way to avert a default.

“Doomsday is nigh, and everyone shrugs,” said Nicholas Colas, chief market strategist at Cowi Group, an investment brokerage in New York.

Brian Doe, a wealth adviser at Gratus Capital Management in Atlanta, has 35 clients who’ve entrusted him with $50 million for safekeeping. He isn’t losing sleep over a potential default. Neither are his clients, apparently. Not one has called him about the issue, he said.

“I’ve not done anything,” he said. He puts the odds of default very low. “People in Washington are stupid but not that stupid.”

Marcello Ahn, a fund manager in Seoul, is more prepared, sort of. He doesn’t think the U.S. will default. But if it does, the economically sensitive stocks of shipbuilders and chemical companies will get hit especially hard. So he’s held off buying them.

But he hasn’t sold a single stock or made any big moves to protect his portfolio.

“We are not taking actions based on the worst-case scenario,” he said.

That worse case is inching closer. The Treasury says it will run out of money to pay its bills if Congress doesn’t increase its borrowing authority by Thursday. That includes paying interest and principal on already issued U.S. Treasuries, considered the most secure financial bet in the world.

Treasuries are used as collateral in trillions of dollars of loans rolling over every day. They are also the standard against which the riskiness of stocks and bonds are measured. A default would cast doubt on the value of those assets and throw the global financial system into chaos.

Which is a key reason many seem unprepared for it: Why bother if you can’t really protect yourself? Or, as an official response from France’s Total oil company put it, “Nobody can imagine the consequences, so we don’t have any plans.”

Neither apparently does Sony Corp. “There isn’t a whole lot that one company can actually do,” CEO Kazuo Hirai said Friday at the company’s Tokyo headquarters.

Still, the business world isn’t entirely unprepared. Big U.S. companies have been hoarding cash since the financial crisis for fear of another credit crunch. And financial regulators, major banks and mutual funds have moved to shore up their defenses, too.

One area of concern is Treasury bills that mature shortly after Thursday. The fear is that owners of those bills may not get their money returned to them in case of a default.

Claims That US Has Never Defaulted on Debt Fall Short

WASHINGTON (AP) • You hear the same proud claim every time Washington wrestles with the debt limit: The United States has never defaulted. But the record’s not that clean. America has stiffed creditors on at least two occasions.

Once, the young nation had a dramatic excuse: The Treasury was empty, the White House and Capitol were charred ruins, even the troops fighting the War of 1812 weren’t getting paid.

A second time, in 1979, was a back-office glitch that ended up costing taxpayers billions of dollars. The Treasury Department blamed it on a crush of paperwork partly caused by lawmakers who — this will sound familiar — bickered too long before raising the nation’s debt limit.

These lapses, little noted outside financial circles in their day, are nearly forgotten now.

Indeed, Treasury Secretary Jacob Lew frequently declares that the United States has always met all of its obligations; a Treasury spokeswoman declined to discuss any possible exceptions. President Barack Obama, reminding Congress of the urgency of raising the debt limit before a Thursday deadline, warned of “the chaos that could result if, for the first time in our history, we don’t pay our bills on time.”

Historian Don Hickey isn’t surprised the default in November 1814 gets overlooked. After all, he titled his book, “The War of 1812: A Forgotten Conflict.”

“He doesn’t know his history,” Hickey said of the president. “It’s that simple.”

To be fair, not many people do. When it comes to the War of 1812, naval heroics and the rockets’ red glare get the ink. The failure to pay some bondholders on time doesn’t make it into many history texts, said Hickey, a professor at Wayne State College in Nebraska.

And the narrow lapses of the past don’t compare with the kind of turmoil Lew predicts would occur these days if Treasury couldn’t borrow enough money to pay what it owes to all sorts of people, from overseas bondholders to retirees on Social Security. If that’s a financial hurricane, the 1979 Treasury bill glitch was more like a draft of chilly air.

Still, there are lessons in history: Tea party Republicans weren’t the first to make the debt limit a bargaining chip. Over the years, congressional Democrats and Republicans alike have held it up for strategic reasons.

In 1979, it was lawmakers determined to attach a strong balanced budget amendment to the bill. They finally relented, the day before Social Security checks were expected to start bouncing.

The tumult contributed to Treasury’s failure to redeem $122 million in maturing T-bills, touted as one of the world’s safest investments.

Some investors that April and May waited more than a week for their money. Treasury blamed problems with its newfangled word-processing equipment. The system was stressed, officials said, when the booming popularity of T-bills collided with the last-minute debt ceiling increase from Congress.

Investors called it a “default” and sued for interest to cover the gap. Treasury called it a “delay.”

MOBILE READY.

IF OCTOBER 15 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: Friendships and business success can be especially important to you during the upcoming six to eight weeks. You might put the two together and join a club or business organization to further your ambitions by networking among your peers. Wait until December to make major financial changes or decisions, as that's when your financial expertise is at a peak. Your next best chance to make a sound career move or a key financial change is April, but a romantic idea or wild goose chase could spoil your concentration.

HOROSCOPE

Jeraldine Saunders

ARIES (March 21-April 19): You may be in your element where the deer and the antelope roam. Mixing with people from different backgrounds can give you a refreshing sense of freedom. Friendliness can be mistaken for romance.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): You can whistle while you work rather than whittling away the day on time-wasting activities. Your need for social interaction might be satisfied by being part of a group engaged in a new project.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): You might be tempted to make up the rules when faced by new concepts, people and situations. If you can't find common ground by appealing to logic, seek support by emphasizing popular views.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Chess is a thinking person's game. Four-leaf clovers might grow in your garden, but they don't produce strategic luck. You need to be rational and appreciative when nice people beat a path to your door.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Remain levelheaded. Unexpected reactions or unforeseen changes in your professional life or relationships are possible. Use poise to handle emerging situations and be prepared to try something new and daring.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Simplify rather than sensitize. Something you hear might hit too close to home and ruffle your feelings. Take a time out for crossword puzzles instead of trading cross words with a lover or partner.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): You need more than one for fun. Your sign is known for being happiest when paired with a congenial other. Today you might be poised to spread your wings and search for more exciting companions.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Don't let a temporary breakdown in communications bar your way. A misunderstanding with a romantic partner could upset plans. Give your partner room to roam before returning to the roost.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Off with the old and on with the new. Impulsive mood swings result in a tendency to jump from the frying pan into the fire. Your actions are subject to misinterpretation, so consider appearances carefully.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): The serenity prayer makes the point that you must be wise enough to know the difference between the things you can change and those you can't. Focus on making your ambitions come true.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Togetherness doesn't require chains. Friends, by definition, may come and go. Sometimes a circle of friends shifts for the better. Adhere to your principles even if you're challenged to bend them.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): The carrot held in front of your nose may be unattainable. Make agreements, but don't gamble cash. Have faith in your talents, as well as your friends, and your best interests will be protected in the end.

SUDOKU

Sudoku is a number-placing puzzle based on a 9x9 grid with several given numbers. The object is to place the numbers 1 to 9 in the empty squares so that each row, each column and each 3x3 box contains the same number only once. The difficulty level of the Conceptis Sudoku increases from Monday to Sunday.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE®

Bobby Wolff

"I am not a pessimist; to perceive evil where it exists is, in my opinion, a form of optimism."

— Roberto Rossellini

Plan the play in a team game if you declare three no-trump on the lead of the club six.

The only danger to your contract is if the clubs are 5-2. If the suit is 4-3, you should be able to survive almost any misguess. But if clubs are 5-2, there is a chance that you may lose four club tricks and the diamond ace. If you put in the club jack at the first trick, then if East wins the trick with a doubleton queen or ace, he can simply return the suit. Now whenever West has the diamond ace, he will get in and cash out his five winners.

Much better is to go up with the club king at trick one. Now if East has the doubleton club queen, the defenders' club holding is completely blocked, and declarer can set up the diamonds in comfort. But as the cards lie today, with East holding the doubleton club ace, this play would not succeed. East would capture the club king with the ace and set up the suit for his partner, so long as West overtakes the club nine on the second round.

The only way to be certain of avoiding that fate is to play low from dummy at trick one. Play it through and see for yourself. East can win the first club cheaply but cannot continue the suit effectively, and declarer has time to set up the diamonds.

ANSWER: In this auction it is not clear that three spades would be forcing — although maybe it should be, since with a limit raise you might have shown it at your first turn. Regardless, with no great slam potential facing a hand that cannot bid over three clubs, you might as well simply drive to four spades by bidding it directly.

Today is Tuesday, Oct. 15, the 288th day of 2013. There are 77 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight:
On Oct. 15, 1917, Dutch dancer Mata Hari, convicted of spying for the Germans, was executed by a French firing squad outside Paris.

TODAY IN HISTORY

On this date:
In 1858, the seventh and final debate between senatorial candidates Abraham Lincoln and Stephen Douglas took place in Alton, Ill.

In 1860, 11-year-old Grace Bedell of Westfield, N.Y., wrote a letter to presidential candidate Abraham Lincoln, suggesting he could improve his appearance by growing a beard.

In 1928, the German dirigible Graf Zeppelin landed in Lakehurst, N.J., completing its first commercial flight across the Atlantic.

In 1937, the Ernest Hemingway novel "To Have and Have Not" was first published by Charles Scribner's Sons.

In 1945, the former premier of Vichy France, Pierre Laval, was executed for treason.

In 1946, Nazi war criminal Hermann Goering fatally poisoned himself hours before he was to have been executed.

In 1951, the classic sitcom "I Love Lucy" premiered on CBS with the episode "The Girls Want to Go to the Nightclub."

In 1964, it was announced that Soviet leader Nikita S. Khrushchev had been removed from office.

In 1969, peace demonstrators staged activities across the country as part of a "moratorium" against the Vietnam War.

In 1976, in the first debate of its kind between vice presidential nominees, Democrat Walter F. Mondale and Republican Bob Dole faced off in Houston.

In 1991, despite sexual harassment allegations by Anita Hill, the Senate narrowly confirmed the nomination of Clarence Thomas to the Supreme Court, 52-48.

In 1997, British Royal Air Force pilot Andy Green twice drove a jet-powered car in the Nevada desert faster than the speed of sound, officially shattering the world's land-speed record. NASA's plutonium-powered Cassini spacecraft rocketed flawlessly toward Saturn.

Ten years ago: Eleven people were killed when a Staten Island ferry slammed into a maintenance pier. (The ferry's pilot, who'd blacked out at the controls, later pleaded guilty to 11 counts of manslaughter.) Doctors in Florida removed the feeding tube of Terri Schiavo, a severely brain-damaged woman at the center of a right-to-die battle. (The tube was reinserted, then removed again, as the legal battle played out, ending with Schiavo's death in March 2005.) An explosion ripped apart a U.S. diplomatic vehicle in the Gaza Strip, killing three Americans. China launched its first manned space mission. The Florida Marlins won the National League championship with a 9-6 victory over the Chicago Cubs in Game 7.

Five years ago: Republican John McCain repeatedly assailed Democrat Barack Obama's character and campaign positions on taxes, abortion and more in a debate at Hofstra University; Obama parried each accusation, and leveled a few of his own, saying "100 percent" of McCain's campaign ads were negative. The Philadelphia Phillies beat the Los Angeles Dodgers 5-1 to win the NL championship series 4-1 for its first pennant since 1993. Pop star Madonna and movie director Guy Ritchie announced they were divorcing after nearly eight years of marriage. Actress-singer Edie Adams died in Los Angeles at age 81. Longtime game show host Jack Narz died in Los Angeles at age 85.

One year ago: In interviews with CNN and Fox News, Secretary of State Hillary Rodham Clinton took responsibility for security at the U.S. consulate in Libya, where the U.S. ambassador and three other Americans were killed in a Sept. 11, 2012, attack.

Available for Adoptions:

"Jack" Male young adult Dachshund mix. He is black and white and has a huge personality! Gets along with other dogs well too.

"Chopper" Male 5 month old Border Collie/Heeler/Husky? mix puppy. He is currently in a foster home with a great family. He was very abused when he came to us. He is learning how great a loving home can be. Call us to set up a meeting with this sweet boy. He is house trained and is working on his leash training. Great with cats and children too.

"Benny" Male young adult Shih Tzu/Lhasa. He is tan colored and very friendly. Come meet him today. He won't last long!

"Mazie" Female Chihuahua Min Pin mix young adult. She is shorthaired and black with a little white. She has really cute curly tail too! House trained and such a sweetie.

"Bullet" Male young adult Heeler mix with a docked tail. He has a black coat with a little white on paws and under his chin. He is very friendly and will make a great companion.

"Vinny" Male Schnauzer & Westie mix young adult. Medium length coat white with cream and brown markings. This is a super cute dog! Come meet him today.

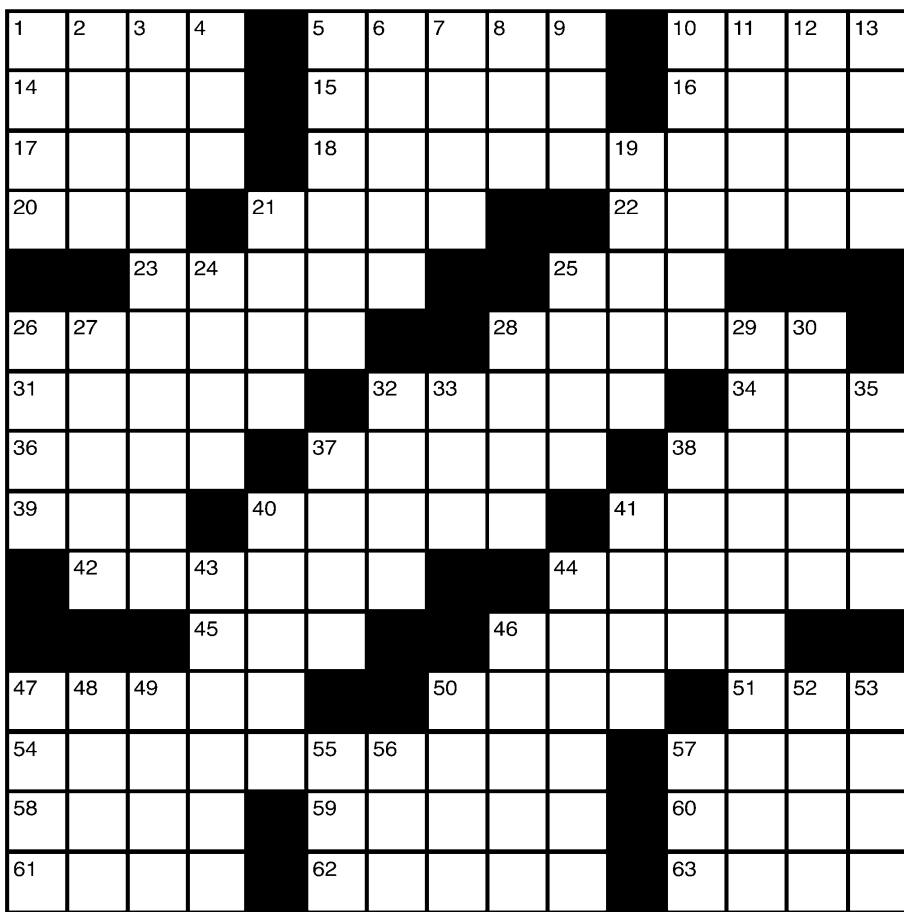

"Henry" Male young adult Pointer. Really friendly and seems to know some commands. Come meet this handsome guy today!

"Holly" female young adult Ivory Labrador. She is great with kids, other dogs, house & leash trained.

"Joey" Male young adult Smooth Coated Border Collie mix. He is great with kids and other dogs...just not a home with any cats!

If someone would be willing to just foster a dog if they are unable to adopt, it would really help us out when the shelter is full. We also have a Facebook Page. Adoption fee is $75, including spaying/neutering & first set of vaccinations.

DEAR ABBY: I'm a 19-year-old girl in my third semester of college. My boyfriend, "Tom," attends a community college nearby. Both of us live with our parents. I have had only three boyfriends in my life, and Tom was my high school sweetheart.

Tom just proposed. I immediately accepted, but now I'm second-guessing my decision. We're just starting our adult lives, and I'm still learning what that entails. I want to study abroad during college to enhance my experience of the world. Also, because neither of us has ever moved beyond our childhood homes, I think we should both have more exposure about the world beyond.

Everyone is supportive of us, including our parents. I will always be committed to Tom and I trust him completely, but I feel that by prematurely locking ourselves in, we're setting ourselves up for failure. Am I overreacting?

— FLEDGLING FIANCEE IN LOUISIANA

DEAR FIANCEE: Not at all. The points you have made in your letter are well-reasoned. You ARE very young to be making a permanent commitment, and you're both entering a period of growth — and possible divergence in your level of life experience. Tom may have proposed because he was afraid if he didn't, he might lose you now that you're attending different schools.

Tell Tom you care for him deeply, but think you jumped the gun. Make it clear that you would like to keep seeing him, but on a nonexclusive basis until you return from your studies abroad. I agree that by prematurely locking yourselves in, the odds of the relationship not lasting are high. Be sure Tom understands that you aren't trying to end the relationship, only postponing the engagement.

DEAR ABBY: I was always a laid-back and easygoing person. But I was in a terrible car accident, and ever since I have suffered from post-traumatic stress disorder. I have received counseling and function pretty well as long as I remain in a calm environment.

My problem is that my husband's family comes to visit each year from anywhere from four to eight days, and when they're here my stress level is very high. Their last three visits resulted in my getting migraine headaches, which I had never experienced before, as well as TMJ (pain in my jaw) and painful neuropathy, which the doctor explained was brought on by stress. It has lasted two months.

I like my in-laws, but I am unwilling to deal with more pain as a result of their visits. My husband doesn't want to send them to a hotel, which I understand. Therefore, I feel that since this is MY problem, I should move to a hotel during their visits. What do you think, Abby?

— PUSHED TO THE LIMIT

DEAR PUSHED: Unless this is handled delicately — and by that I mean carefully explained to your husband's family — it could cause hurt feelings. Surely your in-laws are aware of your car accident. What they may not be aware of is the lingering damage it has caused. Your husband should explain this to his relatives and ask if they would mind staying elsewhere BECAUSE OF YOUR MEDICAL CONDITION. If you can tolerate their "tumult" on a limited basis, this might solve the problem. If not, then I agree you should stay elsewhere so they can have a good time together. However, this should happen with full disclosure and preferably no hard feelings. If you can see any of them individually for a short time, you should make every effort so they won't feel you are avoiding them for any other reason.

SUBARU

TETONA DUNLAP • TIMES-NEWS
Will Brackett, a third-grade student, asks teacher Dena Pollock a question while sister Katie Brackett, a second-grader, waits her turn.

Teacher

about accepting a job in such a rural location.

But ask teacher Dena Pollock and she will tell you she loves it.

“It’s so remote. Telephones and power are not totally dependable,” Pollock said. “The atmosphere is definitely a perk. I like the solitude.”

Pollock is in her second year as the only teacher at the school, which has seven students enrolled, including two kindergartners. She is also superintendent, principal and secretary, which means she doesn’t answer the phone often during school hours. If she did, she said there wouldn’t be enough time for instruction.

Since about 1900, Three Creek School has served students in kindergarten through eighth grade, never growing larger than 18 students. Last year, the school had eight students, with four students leaving in the middle of the year. Four years ago, the school only had one student.

An additional classroom is being built by volunteers and when it is finished will replace the 2,100-square-foot, one-room school built in about 1971. The old building will then serve as storage, Pollock said.

Last year, the school upgraded to dry erase boards instead of chalkboards and installed an interactive Smart Board.

The school is looking to hire a teacher’s aide to work about 28 hours a week.

Early this month, Three Creek was one of two school districts that didn’t meet an Oct. 1 deadline for differentiated pay plans sharing a statewide $21 million pool for teacher pay and training.

“Department staff did work to contact each school district and charter school that had not submitted,” State Department of Education spokeswoman Melissa McGrath wrote in an email to Idaho Education News.

“I didn’t even hear about it,” Pollock said.

Pollock said she is currently going to Twin Falls

once a month to attend training to become a Common Core coach for other teachers. She said she will be certified by the state to do so in June.

In 2010, Three Creek School built a multi-purpose room — a half-gymnasium with storage, two bathrooms and a kitchen — attached to the west side of the existing school building built in 1971.

Today, the new gym often serves as a community center with more than 30 people attending events.

That is a high number considering the area surrounding the school has a population of about three, Pollock said. Less than a 100 people live in a 20-mile radius. The closest ranch is about three miles away from the school.

Though one-on-one instruction is one positive, Pollock said one of the downfalls of the small class size is little socialization.

Here, children of all ages learn from one another and often classrooms are comprised of siblings. Students bring their own lunches and parents drop off and pick up students.

“They have little interaction and are pretty easily overwhelmed,” Pollock said.

To combat this isolation, once a month, students go on field trips in Twin Falls or Boise. Because there is no bus system, parents drive and serve as chaperones.

“Out here, we all work together or it would not work,” Pollock said. “I know all the parents. The kids are much more respectful and the community supports the school and that’s how it should be.”

The three members of the PTO are also mothers of children in the school.

Shannon Thompson, a parent of two students, said if she didn’t have the option of sending her children to Three Creek, she would homeschool.

“I like the teacher-to-student ratio. I like that parents get to go on field trips,” Thompson said.

And when it’s time to go to high school?

Thompson said she isn’t sure yet, and will cross that bridge when they get there.

Immigrants

his work permit had not arrived, Perez continued to say that it would come soon.

From spring 2012 to 2013, Perez made and canceled appointments for the family through the U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Services “Infopass” website. The family believed they would be able to meet with an immigration employee to ask questions.

Each time, Perez would send an email or call the family confirming the appointments, then cancel them shortly before the scheduled date.

From about April 2007 to April 2012, the family paid Perez about $11,300 for immigration consultation, assistance in filing immigration paperwork, “fines and fees” and for getting immigration benefits.

Perez never filed any documents with the government on the family’s behalf and never paid any fines or fees to any government agency, but instead used the money for herself.

The documents say Perez began defrauding another family, identified as “V.J., S.J. and M.P.” in July 2012.

Again, Perez called the family saying she was an immigration attorney who could help them get immigrant visas.

Later that month, the family emailed Perez asking for an itemized invoice of what her fees would be. Perez replied with the invoice, and the family sent in cashier’s checks to Perez’s Wendell post office box.

During the correspondence, which lasted through February, Perez requested personal documents from the family, told them she made appointments for them to get fingerprints taken and have immigration interviews and told the family she was in communication with the U.S. Department of Justice and the U.S. Consulate in Juarez, Mexico.

Between July and December 2012 the family paid Perez $19,365 in cashier’s checks.

The indictment says Perez must turn over at least $30,665, which she took from the two families.

According to online court records, no hearings are scheduled.

Attorney General Civil Complaint

This isn’t the first time, Perez has been accused of stealing money from immigrants.

In January 2010, the Consumer Protection Division of the Idaho Attorney General’s Office filed a civil complaint against Perez and her business, Perez International. The complaint followed an investigation by the Jerome County Sheriff’s Office.

In August 2009, 23 people complained to the sheriff’s office, saying they’d been duped by an immigration consultant who took large sums of money from them, but never followed through on promises to help with their citizenship paperwork.

Jerome deputies searched a home and office on Aug. 27, 2009, at 325 West 100 North, where they seized enough documents to fill a truck and the back of a police car, Jerome County Sheriff’s Det. Rick Cowen told the Times-News in 2009.

At the time, deputies said, there were more than 30 victims.

According to the 2010 complaint, in 2004, one woman went to Perez for help adjusting the legal status of her family, ultimately shelling out $28,000 in fees. Nearly four years later, her husband was deported, according to the complaint.

In 2005, a man went to Perez for the same reason. He even “made trips to Salt Lake City for purported immigration interviews that Perez suddenly cancelled” and ultimately paid more than $27,000 for work Perez never performed, the complaint says. A Shoshone man paid her more than $16,000.

In June 2010, Perez failed to appear at a Jerome County court hearing for the case and never mounted a defense against the complaint. The civil case was closed and a judge ruled against Perez in September 2011, according to online court records.

the animal to be a type of carp, Peterson said.

Idaho Fish and Game was unavailable for comment.

Peterson said she plans to keep the fish in her freezer to show to her son when he returns from a hunting trip in Tennessee.

“I’m not going to have a fish fry,” Peterson said. “I want to save it so my son can see it.”

When Peterson found the fish, she used a kitchen strainer to scoop it up before putting it in her freezer.

“I looked out my back window later and realized I’d forgot to turn off the water,” Peterson said. “I was really shook up.”

“I’ve lived here since 1983 and I’ve irrigated every time the water comes down the ditch. When that fish come out of there and onto the lawn I couldn’t believe my eyes. It was alive and it just came flopping out onto the grass.”

Peterson moved to Declo from Nevada in 1983. Previously a school teacher, the Declo resident is now retired.
