STUDENT OPENS FIRE IN SPARKS, NEV. Two Students Wounded and One Teacher is Dead; Shooter Commits Suicide.

BY SCOTT SONNER
Associated Press

SPARKS, Nev. • A student at a Nevada middle school opened fire with a semi-automatic handgun on campus just before the starting bell Monday, wounding two 12-year-old boys and killing a math teacher who was trying to protect children from their classmate.

The unidentified shooter killed himself with the gun after a rampage that occurred in front of 20 to 30 horrified students who had just returned to school from a weeklong fall break. Authorities did not provide a motive for the shooting, and it's unknown where the student got the gun.

Teacher Michael Landsberry was being hailed for his actions during the shooting outside Sparks Middle School.

"In my estimation, he is a hero. ... We do know he was trying to intervene," Reno Deputy Police Chief Tom Robinson said.

Both wounded students were listed in stable condition. One was shot in the shoulder, and the other was hit in the abdomen.

The violence erupted nearly a year after a gunman shocked the nation by opening fire in Sandy Hook Elementary School in Newtown, Conn., leaving 26 dead. The Dec. 14 shooting ignited debate over how best to protect the nation's schools and whether armed teachers should be part of that equation.

veteran and leaves behind a wife and two stepdaughters. Sparks Mayor Geno Martini said Landsberry served two tours in Afghanistan with the Nevada National Guard.

"He proudly served his country and was proudly defending the students at his school," Martini said.

On his school website, Landsberry posted a picture of a brown bear and took on a tough-love tone, telling students, "I have one classroom rule and it is very simple: 'Thou Shall Not Annoy Mr. L.'"

"The kids loved him," his sister-in-law Chanda Landsberry said. She added his life could be summed up by his love of his family, his students and his country.

"To hear that he was trying to stop that is not surprising by any means," she said.

Police said 150 to 200 officers responded to the shooting, including some from as far as 60 miles away. Students from the

Hartgen's Delayed Recovery May Result in Substitute

BY KIMBERLEE KRUESI

TWIN FALLS • Sitting in a wheelchair waiting for his physical therapy, state Rep. Stephen Hartgen, R-Dist.24, ticked off the events he has missed over the past three months.

"I missed the county fair. I've missed birthdays," he said, turning to his wife, Linda. "I missed our anniversary. ... Time stops for no man, even for legislators."

The Twin Falls Republican spoke in a soft, raspy voice. Twelve weeks ago, staff at St. Luke's in Boise accidentally nicked his vocal cords by inserting a breathing tube while prepping Hartgen for a triple bypass.

For Hartgen, 69, it's one of the minor complications he's faced in recovery.

Not long after going under the knife, he was diagnosed with Guillain-Barre syndrome, a rare viral disease that left him unable to walk for weeks and forced him to stay nearly three months in the St. Luke's Magic Valley Medical Center.

Magic Valley's Love-hate Relationship with Crop Dusters

BY MYCHEL MATTHEWS
mmatthews@magicvalley.com

HAZELTON • A disgruntled neighbor fired a 10-gauge shotgun at a Ken-Spraying LLC crop duster in August as it flew over his house south of Filer.

He was tired of the crop duster flying over his home.

Christopher V. Lewis, 42, told deputies that his neighbor brought his children into Lewis' home, because the neighbor was frightened by how close the crop duster was flying to the ground. Lewis told the deputies he became angry, went outside with his shotgun and "did something bad."

He was arraigned in Twin Falls County District Court on one count of discharging a firearm at an aircraft, a felony.

A preliminary hearing for Lewis was delayed until Nov. 1.

Incidents like that are "really rare — and really extreme," said Rod Weeks, flight office manager of Ken-Spray Inc. People have a love-hate relationship with crop dusters, those low-flying acrobats in the sky.

"Some love to pull over and watch our planes in the air," said Clay Jurak, manager of Red Baron Ag Service. "Others think we are

Idaho Lawmakers Call for Contract Cancellation

BY JOHN MILLER
Associated Press

BOISE • Two state lawmakers called Monday for cancellation of a nearly $375,000 no-bid contract awarded to one of the Your Health Idaho insurance exchange's own board members.

Sen. Jim Rice, R-Caldwell, and Rep. Kelley Packer, R-McCammon, both of whom sit on the board, said the exchange's $180-per-hour contract with Frank Chan was overpriced, inappropriate and not in the interest of taxpayers.

The now-18-member board — Chan resigned last Wednesday, when he was awarded the deal by exchange director Amy Dowd — is meeting Tuesday at 11 a.m. in Boise.

There, Rice and Packer say they'll seek to discard the contract with Chan, who earns only $95 per hour for work his computer company performs separately for two state agencies, the Department of Insurance and the Department of Health and Welfare.

"When somebody is going behind everyone's back, negotiating a contract for themselves at $180 an hour when they've got current contracts with the state at $95, I don't think that's even ethical," Rice said. "It's not in the interest of the citizens of Idaho and it's a violation of the fiduciary obligation of a member of the board."

The Your Health Idaho exchange, created under President Barack Obama's health care overhaul, allows people to shop for insurance and learn if they qualify for federal subsidies.

Chan, who didn't return a phone call, had led the Your Health Idaho board's technology committee before he was selected by Amy Dowd to oversee the exchange's technology vendors, who during the next year are slated to replace the glitch-plagued federal enrollment system with state-based software.

The money for that would come from a $50 million, taxpayer-funded grant that Idaho is now seeking from the federal government.

Dowd consulted with exchange chairman Stephen Weeg on the decision to hire Chan but not with the rest of the board.

She contends that it's within her authority to award contracts.

However, the exchange since May has been operating under only a "draft" procurement policy that doesn't specify just when competitive bidding is required. The board had initially planned to finalize the procurement policy, but that hasn't happened, so far.

Dowd, who didn't immediately comment Monday, has said it was necessary to hire Chan without publicly advertising the contract or seeking alternative bids because Idaho is under tight deadlines to complete its exchange.

S&P 500 Ekes Out a Small Gain to Set a New Record

NEW YORK (AP) • The Standard & Poor's 500 index eked out the smallest of gains to set a record high Monday as investors assessed third-quarter earnings news. Earnings will hold investors' attention this week as major U.S. companies including McDonald's, Boeing and Procter & Gamble report their results. Curious Mind
Idaho has Several Equine Firsts

I was taught in school that the Spanish introduced horses to the Americas. But while the Spanish did bring them, plenty of horses were here before the Spanish arrived.

“The Spanish did indeed introduce the modern horse to the Americas, although one could argue that it was a re-introduction,” said Laura Walkup, a ranger at Hagerman Fossil Beds National Monument and the Minidoka National Historic Site.

The Hagerman Horse remains mark the largest sample of this extinct species found in one area. Although remains of the same species have been found in several states, they're all much younger. Hagerman's is the oldest.

The first appearance of the modern genus Equus — which includes modern horses, donkeys, zebras, etc. — was Equus simplicidens, also known as the Hagerman Horse, Walkup said.

“Horses originally evolved in North America, and specimens of Equus simplicidens as well as many earlier horse ancestors have been found throughout the continent,” she said. “The first specimens of the Hagerman Horse ever described by paleontologists was not found in Idaho; it was found and named in Texas by paleontologist Edward Drinker Cope in 1892. However, the most complete specimens ever found were found here in Hagerman — hence the nickname

A Hagerman Horse replica grins at visitors to the Hagerman Fossil Beds National Monument visitor center.

‘Hagerman Horse.’ “The earliest ancestor of the horse was a small, dog-sized creature that lived in North America about 52 million years ago. The oldest known fossils are about 3.2 million years old, and they were found in Hagerman.”

The Hagerman Horse “spread out to the Old World as well as South America, because at the time they were connected by land bridges,” Walkup said. “They continued to exist in North America until about 12,000 to 15,000 years ago when they went extinct in North America, along with a number of other megafauna. The exact causes for this extinction event are unclear, but the extinctions occurred around the same time that the most recent glacial advance ended, which was also about the same time that big game-hunting humans arrived in North America.”

After their extinction, no horses were in North America for thousands of years. They returned to the Americas with the Spanish in the 1400s and 1500s. “Horses would eventually be lost or stolen from Spanish explorers and missionaries. These horses survived, reproduced and formed large herds of feral horses known as wild mustangs.”

WEATHER

Preparing for Winter Weather Part One

Oct. 20-26 is Winter Weather Awareness Week across Idaho and the rest of the Pacific Northwest. Although our weather continues to be very nice, sunny and even mild, winter weather is just around the corner. It is important to start planning and preparing for the long Pacific Northwest winters.

Each day, the National Weather Service will focus on a particular aspect of winter weather and how you can prepare to stay safe. While many people prefer to curl up and stay warm indoors during winter, a lot of us enjoy what winter has to offer outdoors. Even those who would rather stay indoors have to go out to travel or shovel snow off the walkway.

Exposure to cold can cause frostbite or hypothermia, which can be life-threatening. Infants and the elderly are the most vulnerable. If a winter storm is approaching, it is best to stay indoors. If you are caught outdoors during a storm, seek shelter immediately. Try to stay dry and cover all exposed body parts. If no shelter is available, build a lean-to, windbreak or snow cave to protect yourself from the wind, try to build a fire for heat and attract attention for rescue.

Don't drive in a storm lest you get stranded. Check the forecast and any advisories or warnings before you go. Tell someone your exact route and how long it should take. Be prepared with an emergency travel kit in your car.

The forecast for the next several days is more of the same: lots of sunshine with cool mornings warming into the mid to upper 60s in the afternoons today through Thursday.

Thomas Bourn

July 27, 1923-Oct. 19, 2013

JEROME • Thomas Bourn peacefully slipped the bonds of earth at his home in rural Jerome County surrounded by his loving family Saturday, Oct. 19, 2013, at the age of 90.

Tom was born in Woodland, Calif., on July 27, 1923. He was the firstborn son of Thomas Henry and Mae Turner Bourn. He attended Spring Lake, a one-room school house, for his grade school years, followed by graduation from Woodland High School in 1941. He was farming with his father when World War II started; he enlisted in the Navy and served in the Pacific arena as a torpedo man on the sub-tender USS Bushnel. Upon his honorable discharge from the Navy, he continued farming and married Doris Richter of Yolo, Calif., in the Woodland Methodist Church on June 20, 1946. They have five daughters, Dora Jean (Alan) Myers, Patricia Diane (Delbert) Klundt, Laurie Ann Bourn, Christy Irene (Charles) Clark and Karen Mae Bourn.

In 1964, Tom and his family moved to Winnemucca, Nev., to manage a ranch, and when that was sold, they decided Idaho was the place for them where he continued farming and raising cattle. Tom's greatest enjoyment in life, other than his family, farming, his red cattle and little Lady Beagles, was hunting with his lifelong buddies. They not only enjoyed the actual hunting trips but spent many hours at Tom's home reliving them.

He is survived by his wife of 67 years; five daughters; seven grandchildren; 11 great-grandchildren; brother, Beverly; and sister, Dolores Hart. He was preceded in death by his parents; brother, Glen; sister, Marilyn; and granddaughters, Sharon Eliza Myers and Kimberly Dawn Myers.

The respectful care given to Tom by Donna and Heidi of Idaho Home Health and Hospice was so very much appreciated.

Cremation was handled by Parke's Magic Valley Funeral Home of Twin Falls.

She attended school in Ohio and Idaho, graduating from high school in Twin Falls, Idaho, in 1941. Bette was working at a hotel in Twin Falls as a clerk when she met Gordon Cathro at the county fair in Filer, Idaho, in 1941; they were married in Tucson, Ariz., in 1942, where Gordon was taking naval training. Son, Ronald Andrew Cathro, was born in September 1943 in Twin Falls, Idaho, and daughter, Susan Diane Cathro, was born in February 1950 in Long Beach, Calif. Calif. When President Nixon was a patient at the hospital in 1974, Bette was the only person allowed to handle his mail.

In 1972 Bette met Carl Meyers, and they spent many happy years together until his passing in 1990. After she retired, she moved to Cherry Valley, Calif., to live with her brother, Bob, and help take care of their mother. After Mary's passing in 1995, she continued living with her brother until moving to Broadus, Mont., in May 2007 to be closer to her daughter and grandchildren. Susan was always the apple of her mother's eyes, and she loved

She loved animals of all kinds (especially her brother's, Kairn terrier dogs), the LA Lakers, Christmas and ballroom dancing. Bette also had a love for butterflies, acquiring quite the collections over the years. Carol was an animal lover; she loved horses and was devoted to her three dogs, Joseph, Buddy and Skeeter. Carol also loved gardening and tending her flowers, decorating her home for the holidays, camping with family and friends; and she was a baker and excellent cook. She had three nieces that were just like her grandkids. She loved to cook and bake cookies, doughnuts and cakes with these girls. ## Nadene Meyer Gillespie

Oct. 3, 1940-Oct. 18, 2013

TWIN FALLS • Nadene Meyer Gillespie passed away peacefully at home Friday, Oct. 18, 2013, and entered into eternal rest with Jesus.

Nadene was born Oct. 3, 1940, at home in the Buhl-Castleford area to Ernest and Nada Kimbrough. She attended schools in and around the area, including Jerome High School, where she met and later married Bobby Lavern Meyer. Bob and Nadene were married April 9, 1957. Bob and Nadene had one son, Dennis, born in 1958; and one daughter, Anna, who they adopted in 1968 at the age of 10.

She was a longtime resident of Jerome, attended and graduated from cosmetology school and had her own business, Nadene's Beauty Salon, for 56 years. Doing hair was her passion, so to her it never felt like work. Her smile and strong, positive attitude had a huge impact on many lives and touched many hearts. She had dedicated clients who followed her to her new location in Twin Falls after marrying James Gillespie on Feb. 13, 2001. The two of them enjoyed traveling abroad to Ireland, Europe and many other locations. They also enjoyed the simple pleasures of life like riding their scooters, going to the hot baths and gazing at the stars.

Her family and grandchildren were the joy of her life. She was her family's ray of sunshine and their family rock. Her most recent highlight was being a part of her granddaughter's wedding in September and making more than 800 mints. Attending church and having a relationship with the Lord were also very much a part of her life. Nadene enjoyed spending time with her friends, scrapbooking and taking care of her pets.

Nadene is survived by her husband, James Gillespie of Twin Falls; son, Dennis (Melanie) Meyer of Clarkston, Wash.; and daughter, Anna Moon of Boise. She is also survived by her grandchildren, Patrick, Nathan, Noah, Leah, Zane, Jesse, Chelsea (Blake) and Corey; her great-grandchildren, Nadine, Rachelle, Griffin, Oliver, William, Walter, Ella and Max; her sister, Darlene Johnson; and many extended family members and friends. She was preceded in death by her parents, Ernest and Nada Kimbrough; and two brothers, Clifford and Marvin Kimbrough.

Until we meet again, she will be missed very much. May she rest in peace.

A funeral will be conducted at 2 p.m. Thursday, Oct. 24, at Farnsworth Mortuary, 1343 S. Lincoln in Jerome, with Pastor Jim Pollard officiating. Interment will follow in the Jerome Cemetery. A visitation will be held from 6 - 8 p.m. Wednesday, Oct. 23, at Farnsworth Mortuary.

Betty Lou DeForest

April 30, 1937-Oct. 18, 2013

BUHL • On Oct. 18, 2013, Betty Lou DeForest joined her parents; her sister, Lillie; her daughter, Frances; and her grandson, Billie Joe in God's wonderful light after a stroke took her from us here on earth.

From beginning to end, Betty's life was a hard scramble; she was born in a tent next to a set of railroad tracks in Ballinger, Texas, and those tracks would come to symbolize her life as she wandered from place to place before she finally called Buhl, Idaho, her home. She would often tell stories of how her mother, Lydia, would shoot possum and squirrel just so she, Lillie and her other siblings, Faye and Bud, would have food on the table, or would boil sour milk so they could have something to drink. She would also talk about living near the river banks and putting watercress on bread so her own children, Jimmy Ray, Edward and Frances, would have something in their bellies as well.

However, through the tough times, there were the great times as well; she loved to embarrass her grandson, Richard, by telling everyone who would listen how her Richie would follow her everywhere dragging along his little yellow "bug," or about how she shot her 5x5 buck uphill with a lever action open site 30/30 — the one no one thought she could hit.

For Betty, God and family were everything; she never recovered from the heartbreak of losing her daughter to cancer last year, so now it is time to lay her to rest next to her beloved Frances. Her children, Jimmy Ray and Renee Conn and Edward and Cindy Baker, along with the rest of her very extended family, will hold her close in our hearts until it is time for us to join her.

A celebration of Betty's life will be held 1 p.m. Friday, Oct. 25, at Farmer Funeral Chapel in Buhl, with interment to follow at the West End Cemetery. A gathering will be held after the service at Jess O. Eastmann Park. In lieu of flowers, please bring a side dish and a memory to share.

middle school and neighboring elementary school were evacuated to the nearby high school, and classes were canceled. The middle school will remain closed for the week.

At the evacuation center, parents comforted their children.

“We came flying down here to get our kids,” said Mike Fiorica, whose nephew attends the school. “You can imagine how parents are feeling. You don’t know if your kid’s OK.”

The shooting happened on the school’s campus and ended outside the school building, according to police.

“I was deeply saddened to learn of the horrific shooting at Sparks Middle School this morning,” Nevada Gov. Brian Sandoval said in a statement extending his thoughts and prayers to those affected. About 700 students in 7th and 8th grades are enrolled at the school, in a working class neighborhood.

“It’s not supposed to happen here,” Chanda Landsberry said. “We’re just Sparks — little Sparks, Nevada. It’s unreal.”

The mayor praised the quick response from law officers who arrived at the scene within three minutes of a flood of 911 calls to find the gunman already dead from a self-inflicted gunshot wound.

“They got it under control very quickly and shut down the scene,” Martini said.

A statement from Nicole Hockley, whose son Dylan was killed in the Connecticut shooting, appeared on the website of gun control advocacy group Sandy Hook Promise. “It’s moments like this that demand that we unite as parents to find commonsense solutions that keep our children _ all children _ safe, and prevent these tragedies from happening again and again,” the statement said.

The Washoe County School District held a session in the spring in light of the Newtown tragedy to educate parents on its safety measures. The district has its own 38-officer police department. No officers were on campus at the time of the shooting. Sparks, a city of roughly 90,000 that sprung out of the railway industry, is just east of Reno.

“You see it on TV all the time. You just don’t think it’s going to happen to you,” Martini said.

Hartgen

But Hartgen said he expects to participate in the Idaho Legislature, which starts in early January.

“I’m making good progress, but I may be in a wheelchair or need a walker or a cane,” he said.

He said his presence there hinges on making a full and speedy recovery. If he needs more time, Hartgen said, he has selected substitutes to take his place until he can make it to Boise. He declined to identify his choices, though.

It’s not unusual for lawmakers to need a temporary replacement for several days or even months during the session, said House Speaker Scott Bedke, R-Oakley.

“It can happen,” Bedke said. “I’ve seen a substitute stay for a whole session. It’s within the bounds of the law.”

Bedke said he has found acting chairmen for the committees Hartgen oversees.

For example, he appointed Rep. Fred Wood, R-Burley, to head the Millennium Fund Committee until Hartgen can resume the position.

Bedke also has found a lawmaker to fill Hartgen’s seat on the legislative Public Lands Interim Committee, assigned to study the transfer of federal lands.

“I think it’s important for him to get better first,” Bedke said. “He’s a very effective chairman. We’ll miss him. When he gets better, those positions are waiting for him.”

The disease attacked the protecting coating to nerves in the lower half of Hartgen’s body. While doctors are still unsure what triggers the virus, it is typically found after a person is under extreme stress or right after surgery, said Dr. Cheri Wiggins of St. Luke’s Magic Valley.

“I’ve seen patients recover in weeks, and then I’ve seen some need nine months,” she said.

Hartgen was elected as representative for District 24 in 2008 and was re-elected in 2012. The Twin Falls native is the former publisher of the Times-News.

Linda, who visits her husband every morning and evening, said the past few months have been an “eye opener.”

“I think we used to take each other for granted,” she said. “We don’t do that anymore.”

Hartgen said he’s determined to walk out of the hospital, but he doesn’t know when. He’s been undergoing three hours of physical therapy Monday through Friday to rebuild his muscle and balance.

“I’m getting stronger every day,” he said.

But Packer, a freshman House member from southeastern Idaho, said she believes the velocity at which Dowd is moving ahead has outstripped the volunteer board’s ability to adequately monitor staff’s decision-making and make sure money is being spent appropriately.

“Things have been out of control because we were in a hurry,” Packer said. “It’s time to have a longer thought process, to get things back in line.”

In addition to Packer and Rice, at least five others on the board of directors asked for Tuesday’s special meeting.

Among them, House Minority Leader John Rusche, D-Lewiston, said he wants to learn more about what led to Chan’s contract — and the rationale behind paying him nearly double what he’s paid by the state — before arriving at a conclusion about the appropriate resolution of the matter.

“There are usually at least two sides to every issue,” Rusche said Monday. “That said, the appearances are certainly not helpful to the exchange and deserve investigation.”

Crop Dusters

out to kill the planet.”

But chemical pesticides used today are not as toxic as in the past, Jurak said. And modern planes are safer, too.

Clay’s parents have owned Red Baron for more than 30 years. His dad, Mike Jurak, has flown since he was 18.

“I used to run the business,” Mike Jurak said, “but I really just like to fly.”

While it might appear that crop dusters fly with reckless abandon, they don’t. Pilots must follow strict FAA regulations, as well as federal chemical applicator laws, he said.

Wind speed and direction, time of day and temperature all play into when and how fields are sprayed.

Communication between farmers and their neighbors “is the backbone of any crop dusting business,” he said. That’s where Clay comes in.

“I have a master’s degree in plant pathology,” Clay said. “But I spend most of my day talking to all the neighbors (of sprayed ground) to let them know what we are doing.”

“I encounter a lot of folks with respiratory issues, and I’ll stand out in their yard with them, talking to the pilot on the radio as he sprays.”

Weeks said his company also tries to be proactive.

“The most common complaint I hear is, ‘Why do they have to fly so low to the ground and pull up right over their house or trees?’” Weeks said.

Most times, pilots have no other choice, he said.

Only experienced pilots with more than 1,000 hours of flight time are hired to fly crop dusters, because of insurance requirements, he said. Many of them were military pilots.

Weeks said he understands where some fears come from. In the past, fields sprayed with some toxic chemicals had to be posted and quarantined for a few days.

“Today’s chemicals are very safe compared to even

10 years ago,” Weeks said. “If you read the label, the basic ingredients are the same stuff sold off the shelf in a gardening store.”

Considering how many hundreds of thousands of acres one plane covers over the course of a year, the industry is a safe one, said Clay Jurak.

One field will be sprayed a dozen times in one season, he said. “We hit potatoes with fungicides and insecticides five or six times, then another five or six times with fertilizer.”

One advantage to aerial application over ground spraying, said Mike Jurak, “is a farmer doesn’t have to shut off the irrigation and dry out the field just to get a ground sprayer in.”

On top of that, with GPS installed in the planes, crop dusting is as precise as ground spraying, he said.

But sometimes, things get sprayed that aren’t supposed to.

“I had some problems when they first sprayed pesticides,” said Randy Stock of Jerome. “I have a field of hay on one side of me and a potato field on the other. And I didn’t want them to spray on my property.”

Stock called Clay Jurak.

“He was very accommodating, very responsible,” Stock said. “We live in a farming community and I make a living from that farming community.”

High Noon for Idaho’s Republicans

There’s a gun-fight forming between predominantly “common sense conservative” Republicans and the zealots further to the right loosely lumped under the tea party label.

The stakes are high, for it is a battle for the soul of the Grand Old Party, and if the tea party elements prevail, the Republican Party will begin the slow fade into oblivion.

If the recent shutdown of the federal government and the showdown over raising the debt ceiling did nothing else, it should have demonstrated to the public in graphic detail that tea party Republicans and weak-kneed “fellow travelers,” such as Idaho’s two senators, Mike Crapo and Jim Risch, are willing to place partisan positioning and interest ahead of the national interest. None of these folks subscribe to the historic notion of the greatest good for the greatest number.

Their votes and conduct only serve to hasten the day when Idaho’s GOP morphs into a new ultra-conservative party made up of only true believers who adhere to radical notions like returning the election of U.S. Senators to the state legislature, returning to the gold standard, abandoning the United Nations, defaulting on paying bills due and owed for already incurred expenses, punishing illegal immigrants already here, and so on.

Chris Carlson

The Carlson Chronicle

Already having seized control of several key counties, including Bonneville, these fanatics are blind to the fact that they are narrowing their party’s base, a sure prescription for eventual consignment to the ash heap of history. In Idaho, not satisfied with a closed primary system, they are pushing for a closed caucus system, virtually guaranteeing that only the pure zealots can carry the party label into a general election.

Therein may be an opportunity for Idaho’s Democrats, however, especially in the state’s 2nd Congressional District. The tea party and its financial backers, such as the Club for Growth and the Koch brothers, are backing Idaho Falls attorney Bryan Smith’s primary challenge to eight-term “common sense conservative” incumbent Rep. Mike Simpson.

The May primary is restricted only to registered true blue Republicans and some observers believe Smith has a real shot at taking out Simpson given the expected dampening effect of the new rules on voter participation. Reports out of the 2nd District say the prospect of Smith defeating Simpson is causing former Democratic 2nd District Congressman Richard Stallings (1985-1993) to consider making a bid for his old seat.

A former history professor at BYU-Idaho, Stallings is a true pro-life conservative Democrat with proven appeal to the voters of the 2nd District. Were he to run, his strategy would be to build a coalition of Democrats, independents and disgruntled Simpson supporters.

Two other items also are working for the demise of the Republican party as we know it; Or, finally, a rejection of the tea party. One is the wrong-headed stance of both the GOP and the tea party on the issue of illegal immigration. Rather than working constructively to view those already here, whether legal or not, as potentially good, hard-working taxpayers, Republicans seem hell-bent on being punitive.

Hispanics already constitute 12 percent of Idaho’s electorate and are a growing force throughout the West. Quite frankly, they are more and more seeing the Democratic Party as working for their best interests, not the Republicans. Thus, one can conclude that “demographics” are also against the tea party Rs.

The final item that will ensure the Republican demise is the probability that the moderates will continue to pander to the zealots and embrace the politics of hate.

Some folks, this writer included, have a hard time reconciling the claim of the tea party to love their country, but hate their government. Instead of seeing their federal government as the Forest Service supervisor down the street, or the Idaho Nuclear Lab clerk climbing on a bus out to the site at 5 a.m., or the Marine captain home on leave, they see faceless bureaucrats who get more special privileges.

Rather than convey respect for public servants, they spout disrespect.

These folks, motivated more by hate, invoke the U.S. Constitution and claim the right of a state to secede from the union, or to nullify federal laws they don’t agree with.

Yet, they will stand at attention and recite the Pledge of Allegiance not recognizing their hypocrisy when repeating the words “One nation, Under God, indivisible, with liberty and justice for all.”

Here’s hoping the GOP wakes up and eliminates the life-threatening cancer in its midst.

Kellogg native Chris Carlson was the longtime press secretary for former four-term Gov. Cecil D. Andrus.

Will GM Labels Make Food Industry Ill?

James Greiff

Bloomberg News

At some point, the food industry has to ask if the expensive battles it has fought against states’ efforts to require labels on genetically modified products are worth it.

The latest example: a lawsuit Washington state filed last week against the Grocery Manufacturers Association. The complaint by the state’s attorney general says the trade group laundered more than $7 million and passed it along to its anti-labeling political action committee to skirt campaign-finance reporting laws ahead of a state ballot initiative next month on GM labeling. The group says it did nothing wrong.

No matter the merits of the suit, it isn’t exactly the kind of publicity you want in the midst of an election campaign. And surely the industry has to be thinking about the fallout from the methods it used in a successful fight against a similar measure last year in California. There, as in Washington, the same themes were invoked by anti-labeling forces: Labeling would increase the cost of food; jobs would be lost at a time when the nation could ill afford that; and the public would be misled into believing that the food it consumes isn’t safe.

In California, those arguments — backed by $45 million in campaign contributions — tipped the balance in favor of the anti-labeling forces after polls showed the proponents ahead during much of the campaign.

But the industry engaged in some uncharacteristic introspection after the fight. Earlier this year, a group of major food producers and retailers gathered in Washington, D.C., to take up the question of whether continued opposition to labeling was a viable stand. Led by the likes of Wal-Mart Stores, the country’s biggest retailer, the group considered getting behind a national labeling law.

At least, that was what news reports at the time suggested. Now, based on what’s going on in Washington state, it should be pretty clear what the group concluded in that meeting.

There is something to be said for the food industry’s core argument — that there is no evidence indicating that GM foods are scientifically different from other foods or pose a threat to human health. But in an era when people are more aware than ever about what they eat, opposition to labeling is at odds with public demand for transparency. Mark Lynas, a vocal proponent of GM food — and formerly one of its most ardent and articulate foes — made just this point to a food-industry convention last week.

The industry needs to do a hardheaded cost-benefit analysis. So far in 2013, 23 states have introduced labeling legislation. Some bills have stalled in committee, while others are working their way through the legislative digestive system. Eventually, some probably will be adopted; polls routinely show large majorities of the public want labeling. And where will that leave the food industry? Dealing with a patchwork of state laws with different labeling standards? That can’t be what the industry wants.

One option the industry has considered is going to Congress and pushing for a national no-labeling law that preempts whatever the states do. Who knows — given how much money the industry seems willing to spend, that might work.

A better idea, though, is to make it clear to consumers what’s in the food they eat. The intimation that somehow this would be a huge cost burden hardly seems credible: Processed foods of all kinds bear ingredient labels and nutritional values, not to mention plenty of fancy graphics designed to entice consumers.

Then the industry should use the money now being spent on fighting label laws to educate and convince the public that there’s no known threat from food ingredients that are genetically modified to resist pests, grow with less fertilizer or contain beneficial nutrients.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Hawkins Deserves Full Council Term

When Mayor Lanting appointed Suzanne to fill the vacancy created by Lance Clow’s election to the Idaho Legislature, the council became a more diverse mix of community-minded members.

Suzanne has shown she is an individual who makes decisions based on her commitment to our community and what is in the best interest of the city of Twin Falls residents. Her experience as a private business owner is invaluable helping to understand the issues facing a growing city and the financial matters involved in running a city. She is very involved other community events and activities, helping her keep a good perspective on the needs of our community.

Although she has only been on the council for less than two years, she is already a capable, knowledgeable member of the city council. There is no question she is the most qualified and dedicated candidate of the three individuals seeking this position.

Please vote for her in November.

BRAD WILLS
Twin Falls

Skaug Suited for Leadership

This letter is in support of Joe Skaug for the position as mayor of the city of Jerome.

My wife and I have known Joe and his wife, Lois, for almost 20 years. When we first met Lois, she was one of our son’s favorite teachers and through her, we met Joe. Our relationship with those two individuals has been very rewarding.

During that period of time, we have found Joe to be very people oriented, willing to listen and, in difficult situations, will work toward a resolution of the issues communicating with those involved so there is no surprise in the end.

There have been times when I have asked Joe for his opinion dealing with issues in the region. I have always found him to be very honest and direct in his responses. He has a thoughtful approach to problems and while one may not always agree with the final resolution, one can be assured that all sides were considered before the decision was made.

Joe accepts responsibility for his decisions and recognizes that if one is truly exercising the responsibility of leadership that not everyone will be pleased with every decision that is made but that is a sign of true leadership.

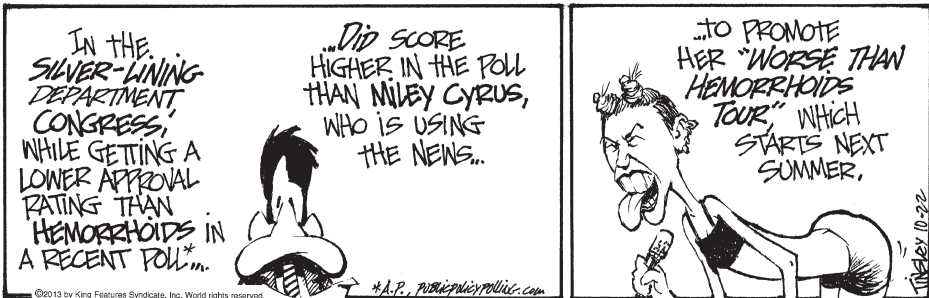

While we are not residents of the city of Jerome and therefore are unable to vote for Joe, we would urge those city residents of Jerome to vote on election day for Joe.

Witnesses Reject St. Luke's Assertions

As testimony ended in the antitrust trial, experts sought to refute St. Luke's arguments for buying Nampa's biggest medical practice.

BY AUDREY DUTTON
adutton@idahostatesman.com

BOISE • The clock ran out Monday on a trial scheduled to last exactly 5,340 minutes. Lawyers for St. Luke's Health System and its opponents raced to make final points about the system's multimillion-dollar acquisition of the Saltzer Medical Group last year.

The Federal Trade Commission and Saint Alphon-sus Health System called witnesses who rebutted St. Luke's claims that owning Saltzer is critical to the sys-tem's plans to improve health care and control rising health-insurance costs.

David Dranove, a health-industry management and strategy professor at Northwestern University, rejected an argument by a St. Luke's economist that patients will simply leave a health system if that system raises prices above competitive levels.

"We just can't expect pricing pressure to be im-posed by patients," he said. Patients may not pay atten-tion to prices paid by insur-ers and whether those prices have risen, he said. Those who do may discover it's hard to shop around for a cheaper doctor, he said.

Dranove said that if St. Luke's is allowed to keep Saltzer and employ its more than 40 doctors, "We'll be stuck with a dominant provider with none of the benefits" that St. Luke's has promised.

Kenneth Kizer, a former emergency doctor and a for-mer undersecretary for health in the U.S. Depart-ment of Veterans Affairs, downplayed the assertions by St. Luke's executives that the system is on track to make transformational changes to health care.

"There's nothing special St. Luke's is doing that isn't being done elsewhere in the country," he said. The sys-tem's "quality claims are speculative and not merger-specific," he said.

Kizer pointed to industry studies and reports that, he said, cast doubt on whether St. Luke's can achieve its goals. A key study found that independent doctor groups provided higher-quality, lower-cost care than hospi-tal-employed groups.

But later, a St. Luke's lawyer dug up that study and pointed to sentences that seemed to contradict Kizer's assertions and to support St. Luke's theory of primary-care focused integration.

More than 25 lawyers were in court for Monday's ses-sion. Many are health-care antitrust specialists flown in from Chicago, Detroit, California and Washington, D.C. They spent the past four weeks sparring before U.S. District Judge B. Lynn Winnill, with an occasion-al dust-up over time limits or surprise witness testi-mony — only to talk and laugh with their rivals when court is in recess.

Before he left, Winnill praised both sides for the "absolute highest quality of lawyering that I saw in this courtroom," adding that he wished the press and public could have been present for the entire trial, since "it truly was of the first order."

The trial ran several min-utes longer than the time Winnill allotted. Lawyers will return to the courtroom Nov. 7 for closing argu-ments. Winnill could issue his verdict before Christmas.

Twin Falls Council Approves $3 Million Wastewater Contract

TIMES-NEWS

TWIN FALLS • Twin Falls City Council members awarded a $3 million con-tract Monday to improve the city's aging wastewater dewatering system.

The contract went to Performance Systems Inc., based in Fruitland.

The project began in 2011 when the city received judicial confirmation to borrow money to rehabili-tate the dewatering system at the city's wastewater treatment plant.

In February, the council awarded a preselection bid for two belt presses to be in the dewatering improve-ment design. In May, city voters backed a special bond election to fund more improvements and expand the plant, which included an installation of a third belt press.

The council agreed that it would be cheaper to in-stall all three presses at once using the rest of the judicial confirmation funds along with some of the bond money.

The council unanimously approved the multi-million dollar bid on condition that the city's attorney ensures there are no legal obstacles to combining the funds.

Council members also approved posting a 35 mph speed limit along Minidoka Avenue from Shoshone Street to Second Avenue.

That stretch previously had no posted speed limit.

Mini-Cassia Distinguished Young Woman Tops State in Shoe Donations

BY C. COLT CRANE
Times-News

BURLEY • Meghan Ander-son is a busy girl.

Anderson collected 4,199 pounds of shoes that will be refurbished and sent to third world countries. "The effort was amazing," said the winner of the 2014 Mini-Cassia Distinguished Young Woman award. "The com-munity helped out so much. Our goal was originally 1,000 pounds and we left that in the dust."

Anderson's haul was the highest in the state, the or-ganization announced.

The shoe drive was part of a national effort through the Distinguished Young Women program and its "Be Your Best Self" platform. Participants were required to meet a goal of 1,000 pounds of shoes for the drive.

Anderson

Anderson received a $500 scholarship for her efforts in the shoe drive. Anderson's total scholarship sum was $1100 for her participation and performance in the DYW program.

"It's just wonderful," said Anderson. "It's a really good feeling and it's beautiful to see people come together and accomplish something like this."

The Distinguished Young Women program is a nation-al organization dedicated to helping high school age girls prepare themselves for suc-cess. The program focuses on scholastics, fitness, self-expression, talent and inter-view skills.

The DYW program col-lected 75,000 pounds of shoes this year. The shoes will be refurbished and donated to third world countries.

"We were a part of that," Anderson said. "It feels real-ly good."

Chairwoman of the Mini-Cassia DYW program, said the initiative is a world-ex-panding experience for the region's young women.

"The girls from here get a pretty unique experience," said Jones. "Girls are judged in a number of different cat-egories from scholastics to fitness to self-expression."

Jones has been a part of the DYW program for nine years. Since competing in the program herself as a jun-ior in high school.

Jones said Anderson dove right in to her shoe-gather-ing effort.

"She put herself out there and people got to know her," Jones said. "She represented Mini-Cassia and she did great."

The DYW program was or-ganized in 1958 in Mobile, Al-abama. It is the largest and longest standing national scholarship program for high school girls. The program provided more than $108 million in college opportuni-ties in 2013. Participants compete at a local level, a state level and a national level.

Twin Falls Mechanic Sentenced For Unemployment Insurance Fraud

BY ALISON GENE SMITH
alismith@magicvalley.com

TWIN FALLS • A Twin Falls mechanic was sentenced Friday on several counts of felony unemployment in-surance fraud.

District Judge Randy Stoker sentenced Richard Henry Ratliff, 45, to the Idaho Department of Correc-tion's rider program.

Stoker sentenced Ratliff to 10 years in prison with the court retaining jurisdic-tion over the case. That means that after a short pe-riod of treatment by the Idaho Department of Cor-rection, a judge will decide if Ratliff should serve the sentence or be released on probation for the five felony counts Ratliff pleaded guilty to.

Stoker recommended the transitional rider, which fo-cuses on behavior issues and typically lasts 120 days.

According to the Idaho Department of Labor, Ratliff admitted he took nearly $7,000 in unemploy-ment benefits while he was still working.

Stoker also ordered Ratliff to report all "off-the-clock" wages he has been paid to the Idaho Tax Commission and the Inter-nal Revenue Service for as-sessment of state and feder-al income taxes.

Ratliff was working as a mechanic in the Twin Falls area but claimed to be un-employed with no earnings between mid-August and mid-December 2010 the Department of Labor said. He collected almost $7,000 in unemployment benefits during that time while he earned more than $9,200 at his job.

The Idaho Department of Labor discovered the fraud during its routine cross-matching of worker Social Security numbers in the wage reports filed every quarter by all Idaho employ-ers with the unemployment benefit payments made to workers.

In September, Ratliff pleaded guilty to five of the fraud counts and prosecu-tors dropped 13 counts.

Primarily through past wage garnishments, the de-partment has recovered just over $1,900 from Ratliff, who still must repay nearly $6,700 in overpaid benefits and penalties.

Pot Trafficking Investigation at Jerome Bar Detailed in Court Documents

BY ALISON GENE SMITH
alismith@magicvalley.com

JEROME • A confidential informant and undercover detectives made three marijuana buys from a Jerome bar owner before he was arrested last week, court documents show.

Douglas W. Peters, who owns the Dog House Bar and Grill, was arrested Oct. 14 and charged with one felony count of trafficking 1 to 5 pounds of marijuana and one felony count of trafficking 5 to 25 pounds.

The affidavit of probable cause gives this account of the investigation:

On July 1, a confidential informant bought a little

Peters

An undercover detective and the informant bought about 1 pound of marijuana from him Aug. 15, paying $3,200. At the bar, the informant was given a small amount of marijuana. Then the two drove to a house near East Avenue C and South Adams Street in Jerome for the rest of the purchase.

In September, police obtained positive lab results from the marijuana Peters more than 1 ounce of marijuana for $175 from Peters at the Dog House, at 204 W. Main St. in Jerome.

About 10:40 a.m. Oct. 15, police watched Peters and Tyler Wille meet at the Dog House. Peters took a box out of his pickup and put it in Wille's car. Then they left in Peters' pickup. When they reached the Stinker Station at 700 W. Main St. in Jerome, Peters got into the undercover detective's vehicle.

Wille went back to the Dog House and got his car, with the box, before returning to the gas station.

There, Peters took the box out of the car and gave it to police. Police counted out $14,500 in cash and handed it to Peters.

Then they arrested Peters and Wille.

The box contained 10 food-storage tins, each filled with marijuana. The total weight was 5.35 pounds.

Peters posted $75,000 bond Thursday, and a preliminary hearing is set for this Friday.

Wille was charged with one felony count of trafficking between 5 and 25 pounds of marijuana. His bond was set at $10,000, and his preliminary hearing also is scheduled for Friday.

Buhl Woman Injured in Collision Friday Upgraded to Good Condition

TIMES-NEWS

TWIN FALLS • A Buhl woman injured in a head-on collision on Pole Line Road was upgraded on Monday to good condition, a St. Luke's hospital spokeswoman said.

Joyce Bartlett, 57, was eastbound on Pole Line at about 12:30 p.m. Friday, Oct. 18, when Timothy Kellogg slammed into her, said Twin Falls County Sheriff's Office spokeswoman Lori Stewart.

Kellogg, 27, of Jerome, was headed west in his late-model Chevrolet pickup when he apparently crossed the centerline at Pole Line and 2600 East, and smashed into Bartlett's Pontiac G6, Stewart said.

Both Kellogg and Bartlett were transported to St. Luke's in Twin Falls.

Bartlett's injuries were characterized as "serious," Wendy Slane, administrative supervisor at St. Luke's, said Saturday evening.

Kellogg suffered only "non-life threatening" injuries, Stewart said.

Slane had no information on Kellogg on Saturday.

Monday morning, Stewart said, deputies were still investigating the crash and no charges had been filed.

BOISE (AP) • Two Romanian nationals living in Boise have been fined $2,000 and face deportation for entering into fraudulent marriages to obtain immigration benefits.

lently obtaining a U.S. Visa while 34-year-old Claudia Beian pleaded guilty to unlawful procurement of citizenship. They were sentenced to two years' probation Monday by U.S. District Judge Edward Lodge, who said they also would be subject to U.S. Immigration and Customs Enforcement.

Deaths of Five Wolves Worry Yellowstone Wolf-watchers

JACKSON, Wyo. (AP) • Wolf-watchers say they're concerned that hunters participating in Wyoming's second annual wolf hunt may have killed five members of the Lamar Canyon Pack, a well-known wolf pack whose territory includes part of Yellowstone National Park.

Officials with the Wyoming Game and Fish Department say it's impossible to determine if the two male and three female wolves were members of the Lamar Canyon Pack. The five were killed in a hunt area northeast of Cody over three days in mid-October.

Recent counts put the number of wolves in the pack at 11, meaning almost half the pack might have been killed.

Twin Falls, Wood River Teams Reach District Third Round in Volleyball

TIMES-NEWS

TWIN FALLS • The Twin Falls and Wood River volleyball teams will contest a state tournament berth tonight at Baun Gymnasium. Twin Falls brushed aside Minico 25-15, 25-20, 25-14 Monday evening to get to within one match of a return trip to the state tournament. Sierra Starley was a dig short of a triple-double with 11 kills, 11 aces and nine digs. Taylor Winson had 13 digs, Kaiya Moffitt added nine and Morgan Harshbarger had eight. Regan Harr dished out 27 assists for the Bruins. Hannah Bailey had five kills and 11 digs in the loss for Minico, which beat Burley 25-16, 16-25, 25-17, 25-18 in the first round of play earlier Monday. Kailee May had eight kills, Chloe Bradford added seven blocks and Becca Child had six blocks and eight kills in the Spartan win. Wood River got to the third round by rallying from a set down to beat Canyon Ridge 25-22, 23-25, 17-25, 25-23, 15-13 in a match that ended just before the deadline for this report. The Wolverines topped Jerome in the first round 25-20, 26-28, 14-25, 25-21, 15-11. In the loss for Jerome, Jessica Praegitzer had 12 kills and 36 digs, and Kassidy Giles had eight kills. Giles had another eight kills in Jerome's 25-18, 25-23, 25-23 win over Burley, which eliminated the Bobcats from the tournament. The second phase of play is today at Twin Falls High.

MONDAY PRESSER

HEDRICK GETS CHANCE TO TAKE OVER BRONCOS OFFENSE

Southwick expected to miss at least 5 weeks with broken ankle.

ASSOCIATED PRESS

BOISE • Grant Hedrick has spent years playing the role of backup and situational quarterback, taking the occasional snap from the wildcat formation just to keep opposing defenses guessing. Life is about to change for the redshirt junior, and with it the expectations that come with holding the keys to Boise State's high-scoring offense. Hedrick got his first taste of the starring role last Saturday, taking over for Joe Southwick, who broke his right ankle on the first offensive play of the game. After a slow start, Hedrick got the offense rolling in the second half, completing 18 of 21 passes for 150 yards and a touchdown and rushing for 115 yards and two scores in leading the Broncos (5-2, 3-1 Mountain West Conference) to a 34-17 comeback victory over Nevada. Southwick was undergoing surgery Monday and is expected to miss at least five weeks, leaving Hedrick in charge of an offense averaging 39.9 points per game heading into Friday's matchup with BYU and a defense that could be the toughest Boise State has faced so far.

"There is no substitute for experience," coach Chris Petersen said of Southwick, a senior who compiled a 16-4 record as a starter. "But Grant's been doing a great job of preparing for a long time. And he answered the bell with flying colors. "That's not an easy situation to be thrown in there. But he's been here a long time and he understands what we're doing, and he'll do just fine," Petersen said. Hedrick is also likely to cause some defensive coordinators to work overtime preparing for a different quarterback skill set. Compared to Southwick, Hedrick is a much better runner. He's fast, quick and can make tacklers miss. Last week, he scrambled out of the pocket for 49 yards to help set up the Broncos' first touchdown. In the second half, he helped put the game away with rushing TDs of 20 and 14 yards. His 115 yards rushing made him the first Boise State quarterback to eclipse 100 yards since 2004. While Petersen played down any significant changes in the playbook tailored to Hedrick's threat as a runner, opposing defenses could see a bigger diet of read-option schemes and a quicker exit from the pocket on passing plays. Teammates say Hedrick's speed and elusiveness add another dimension to an offense that has put up at least 34 points in the last six games and rushed for 407 yards overall against Nevada. "Joe is a good runner, but Grant is on a whole different level," said Matt Miller, the team's second-leading receiver and one of Hedrick's roommates. "I think we're just as dangerous with him as we are with Joe." Before Saturday's game, Hedrick played in spot roles. When offensive coordinator Robert Prince sought to keep the defense off balance, he'd bring in Hedrick for a play or two each quarter. But Hedrick has also proved a capable passer. So far this season, he is 30 of 37 for 264 yards and a passer rating of 144.5 and one interception. Earlier in the season, he entered the game in the second quarter against Fresno State and confidently zipped an 18-yard touchdown pass to Troy Ware streaking wide open through the middle of the defense. "He's got one of the best work ethics on the team and his film preparation is one of the tops," Miller said. "He's been waiting there in the shadow for four years, and when he had the opportunity ... to have that whole game to himself, he really played well."

Vandals Have QB Quandary Ahead of Ole Miss

BY JOSH WRIGHT
For the Times-News

MOSCOW • Idaho football coach Paul Petrino hasn't ruled out Chad Chalich and Josh McCain for Saturday's game at Mississippi. But with both quarterbacks ailing with shoulder injuries, it seems likely senior Taylor Davis will get his first start of the year. Chalich, who has started all seven games for the 1-6 Vandals, went down in the second series against Arkansas State on Oct. 12 and didn't return. The week prior, McCain left in the fourth quarter of a blowout loss to Fresno State. Petrino said both QBs are "day-to-day" after resting through a bye week. "If we played today, they wouldn't be playing," Petrino said Monday in his weekly news conference. He later added that "it would be great to get at least one of them back as a backup"

Davis, a senior who started four games the last two seasons, spent the first half of the season as the Vandals' third quarterback. He got a similar number of reps during spring camp and most of fall camp before Chalich and McCain separated themselves. But he was thrust into action two weeks ago after getting little practice time, and Petrino was pleased with his effort in rallying the Vandals from a 31-7 deficit at Arkansas State. "Taylor came in and played real hard," Petrino said. "(The) third quarter was probably as good a quarter as we've played, and (he) did a real good job of moving us. Had a nice drive going in the fourth quarter and we got the penalty. And I think he'll just get better and better." If Davis gets hurt and Chalich and McCain are unable to go, Petrino said the Vandals will turn to true freshman Matt Linehan, who is redshirting this season. The coach said he's spoken with Linehan about burning his redshirt. Petrino noted that Linehan's father, former Idaho QB Scott Linehan, stepped in for the injured Ken Hobart his freshman year at Idaho, which wiped away his redshirt. "We would not like to have to do that, but we've got Matt a lot of reps, so he would be ready to go if that happens," Petrino said. Chalich, a former Coeur d'Alene High standout, leads the Vandals with 1,224 passing yards and is second in rushing with 204 yards. Idaho is a 41-point underdog to Ole Miss (4-3), which upset LSU last week. This will be the third season in a row that Petrino, the former Arkansas offensive coordinator, encounters Rebels coach Hugh Freeze, who previously coached at Arkansas State.

Imperfect Broncos Fall to Second Place

Previously undefeated Denver is downgraded in AFC West after loss to Indianapolis.

ASSOCIATED PRESS

ENGLEWOOD, Colo. • The Super Bowl shoo-ins woke up Monday as a second-place team.

And all those little flaws and imperfections that Peyton Manning glossed over with a steady stream of points — well, those couldn't be glossed over this week.

Manning and the Denver Broncos returned home with their first regular-season loss in 378 days, which left them looking up at Kansas City in the AFC West standings and glowering over a game film that exposed problems in virtually every phase of their game.

To name a few: An offensive line that can't absorb any more injuries; a defense that needed more than Von Miller's return to repair its problems; turnovers; penalties; play calling.

"You're concerned with all of it," coach John Fox said.

His biggest concerns were the penalties and turnovers. The Broncos (6-1) got flagged for 103 yards; defensive lineman Kevin Vickerson uncharacteristically lost his cool and hit the trifecta — one flag each for unsportsmanlike conduct, unnecessary roughness and roughing the passer. The Broncos were a minus-2 in turnovers, and that didn't include the blindside sack on Manning by Robert Mathis that resulted in a fumble and a safety.

"We need guys to grow up and play the way they need to," receiver Wes Welker said Sunday night after the game. "I have no doubt we are going to do that."

The offensive line got pushed around all night. Mathis added two sacks to his total to give him a league-leading 11½. Denver's newest starter is Chris Kuper, who took Louis Vasquez's spot at right guard, while Vasquez moved over to tackle to replace injured Orlando Franklin. Left tackle Chris Clark, the permanent replacement for injured Ryan Clady, was overmatched by Mathis.

Manning got sacked four times and hit 10, which left him looking as skittish as he has in the pocket since he arrived in Denver. Fox wrote off the line's lackluster play to the circumstances of the game.

"I think when you get into a chuck-and-duck kind of game when you're one dimensional, especially on the road with the crowd noise and against maybe the best pass rusher in football, it doesn't go real well when you're down 19 points or 16 points," Fox said.

Though the Broncos allowed 39 points, Fox actually said he saw "makings of a championship defense" during the second half. Indeed, Denver allowed Andrew Luck only 228 yards passing and the Indy offense played on a short field most of the night. Still, the Broncos walked out of the game in the same place they were when they came in — ranked last in the league in pass defense.

"It definitely gets you mad but nobody really runs the ball on us," cornerback Chris Harris said. "Each week, everyone's trying to throw the ball. We're up every game. People are trying to get garbage yardage on us. We know that. We just focus on trying not to give up touch-downs."

But Denver has allowed 39-plus points twice in the last three weeks. The 28.1 points per game the Broncos allow are more than all but five teams, two of which have faced Denver's high-scoring offense.

Miller's return was uneventful. He finished with two tackles, one for a loss, and two quarterback pressures.

On the turnover front, one of Denver's lost fumbles came from one of the team's most slippery handed players — Trindon Holliday — while the other came from Ronnie Hillman, who is built more like a third-down back, but found himself with the ball in a critical goal-line situation.

Asked if there's anything else he can say to Holliday, who has fumbled six times in 18 games with Denver, while also scoring on six kick returns, Fox replied: "Maybe say it differently. He understands that. ... We've got to find a way to come up with the ball and hand it to the official."

Fox has been taking heat around Denver for the decision to hand the ball to Hillman on first-and-goal from the 2 with 3:15 left and the Broncos trying to cut into a 39-30 deficit. Hillman lost a fumble and the game was essentially over at that point. Hillman has fumbled three times and lost two over his year-plus career.

"If you follow the game and look around the league, most of your top backs have two or three fumbles," Fox said. "It's not anything we like, not anything we're happy about."

Leyland Steps Down as Detroit Tigers Manager

ASSOCIATED PRESS

DETROIT • A picture of Jim Leyland's face stared out from the video board at an empty Comerica Park, next to that familiar Olde English "D" and a message that said simply: "Thank You Jim."

After eight seasons managing the Tigers, including three division titles and two American League pennants, Leyland stepped down Monday. His voice cracking at times, wiping away tears at others, he announced his departure two days after Detroit was eliminated by Boston in the AL championship series.

"It's been a thrill," the 68-year-old Leyland said during a news conference at the ballpark. "I came here to change talent to team, and I think with the help of this entire organization, I think we've done that. We've won quite a bit. I'm very grateful to have been a small part of that."

Leyland made his managerial debut with the Pittsburgh Pirates in 1986, and from Barry Bonds to Miguel Cabrera, he's managed some of the sport's biggest stars and been involved in some of baseball's most memorable games over the past quarter-century.

In 1992, his Pirates lost Game 7 of the NLCS when Atlanta rallied in the bottom of the ninth inning. Five years later, Leyland won his only World Series title as manager when his Florida Marlins beat Cleveland in an 11-inning thriller in Game 7.

He's experienced some of the highest highs the game has to offer, but he also endured difficult rebuilding periods in both Pittsburgh and Florida.

After one season with the Colorado Rockies, Leyland didn't manage at all from 2000-05 before Detroit hired him. Leyland led the Tigers to the World Series immediately after taking over in 2006, losing to St. Louis in five games. The Tigers went to the World Series again in 2012 but were swept by San Francisco.

Leyland worked under one-year contracts the last couple years, saying he was content to wait until after the season to address his status. He was reflective late this season, mentioning to reporters that he had already managed the Tigers longer than he had expected they would keep him, but he also said in September that he still loved the atmosphere, the competition and his team.

In fact, he'd actually told general manager Dave Dombrowski in early September that he didn't want to return as manager. He expects to remain with the organization in some capacity after going 700-597 as a manager.

"I'm not totally retiring today, I'm just not going to be in the dugout anymore," Leyland said. "I hope and pray that you give the next manager the same respect and the same chance that you gave me."

Leyland says his health is fine, but it's time to stop managing. He said he started weighing his decision around June.

"I started thinking this was getting a little rough. I thought that the fuel was getting a little low," Leyland said. "I knew that I'd get through it because I knew we'd be playing for something."

Detroit's players found out about Leyland's departure after Saturday night's game in Boston, when the Red Sox won Game 6 to take the series.

Money You Forgot?
South Central Idaho Residents Leave Money Behind

Many Idahoans' names, for one reason or another, end up on the state's unclaimed property list.

People get divorced, get remarried or move out of state. And sometimes they don't leave the bank a forwarding address.

"Unclaimed property" usually doesn't refer to land or a house. Rather, it's money — checking accounts, savings accounts, stock dividends, mutual funds and utility refunds — or items stored in a safety deposit box. Coins, gems, jewelry and stamps are reported unclaimed by hospitals, hotels and financial institutions.

Businesses turn those assets over to the state, which tries to reunite the stuff with its owner or their heirs.

The Idaho Treasurer's Office provided this sampling of 75 people who own unclaimed property valued at more than $100. Their last known addresses are in south-central Idaho.

But many others are on the list, too. Be proactive by searching your own name at sto.idaho.gov. You might be surprised by what you find.

Nonprofit program improves the global view of western culture by puting students from around the world to work in Sun Valley.

SUN VALLEY • An international student work-exchange program is improving Sun Valley business, raising cultural awareness and teaching young adults the American work ethic.

About 200 students, most from South America and the former Soviet Union, work at the Sun Valley Lodge during summer and winter tourism seasons.

InterExchange, the national nonprofit that brings the students in, is having record success improving the global view of western culture.

Forty percent of Russians expressed unfavorable views of U.S. culture in a 2012 survey by the Pew Research Center.

But 86 percent of Russians who participated in InterExchange returned home with a positive impression of the U.S., said program spokesman Ron Hernandez.

That success is reflected in Sun Valley, where international college students see that all Americans aren't like what the media portray.

"It definitely helps increase awareness for people

"It definitely helps increase awareness for people who haven't been in the U.S. ... They have a preconceived notion from the media or other things. To have them experience our culture greatly improves their understanding. Anytime anyone can learn about another culture, it broadens their horizons. It goes both ways."

said Katherine Welch, human resources recruiter for Sun Valley Resort.

who haven't been in the U.S.," said Katherine Welch, human resources recruiter for Sun Valley Resort. "They have a preconceived notion from the media or other things. To have them experience our culture greatly improves their understanding. Anytime anyone can learn about another culture, it broadens their horizons. It goes both ways."

International work experience does wonders for an exchange student's resume, too, Welch said. At Sun Valley Resort, students do everything from housekeeping to shadowing management.

"A lot of students mention that when they do interviews, they say it's great for their resume when it wasn't regarded highly before," she said. "It's something that they always mention. To be able to come here, work and learn English allows them to be marketable when they're job seeking in their home country."

Although the students benefit most from the program, the Sun Valley economy improves, too. Without the extra help, a worker shortage would be evident during tourism seasons, said Matt Parke, the resort's human resources director.

"It helps fill a void for seasonality," Parke said. "When the season's over, it's nice for them to return home, and we don't have to worry about positions that don't exist because they're filled by the students. And it's good for them because a lot of them are interested in careers in tourism and hospitality."

Well-dressed workers with Russian accents enhance the old-school elegance of the resort, which is adorned with pictures of Frank Sinatra and other celebrities who have frequented the lodge.

"We have a European flair that our guests like and are accustomed to," Parke said. "They see these international employees and ask where they're from. It provides more culture to our property than guests expect."

Groups of about 100 students from 30 countries travel to Sun Valley twice a year. One group stays from December through March; the other, from June to September.

To apply for work at Sun Valley Lodge, students must be enrolled in a college or university full-time in their home country and be 18 to 28 years old.

Idaho Tax Commission Sets 2014 Homeowner’s Exemption

TIMES-NEWS

TWIN FALLS • The maximum homeowner’s exemption for 2014 will increase to $83,920, up from $81,000 this year, said Renee Eymann, Idaho Tax Commission spokeswoman.

The maximum amount is based on the Idaho House Price Index – All Transactions, which is published by the Federal Housing Finance Agency.

“The current index shows a 3.6 percent increase in house prices for Idaho,” said Alan Dornfest, the tax commission’s bureau chief for property tax policy. “This is the first increase following four years of decreases.”

Idaho provides a partial property tax exemption to qualified homeowners for their primary dwelling and up to 1 acre of land. The law exempts 50 percent of the assessed value from taxation, but the exemption can’t exceed the maximum value that changes each year.

“The impact of the exemption on property taxes will depend on 2014 taxing district budgets, as well as how much 2014 property values change for homes and other properties,” Dornfest said. The commission will provide an online calculator to help residents estimate their property taxes. The estimator will be available once 2014 assessments are set next June.

Idaho’s homeowner exemption began in 1980, with a maximum of $10,000. In 1983, it was raised to $50,000 by voter initiative. The 2006 Idaho Legislature raised the exemption to $75,000 and tied future limits to the House Price Index. See tax.idaho.gov/news for more information.

Zions Bank Exceeds 1 Million Meal Goal During 10th Annual Food Drive

TIMES-NEWS

TWIN FALLS • Zions Bank has exceeded its goal of donating 1 million meals to food banks in Idaho and Utah since 2003 with support from the community and employees throughout Idaho and Utah, said bank spokeswoman Nicola McIntosh.

“Let’s Reach a Million Meals” was the theme of the bank’s 10th annual food drive, which ran Sept. 9-27 in conjunction with Hunger Awareness Month.

This year’s food drive brought in 205,514 meals for the Idaho and Utah food banks, bringing the total raised to 1.033 million meals over the 10-year period, McIntosh said. The bank generated more than $60,000 in cash donations as well as nearly 3,000 pounds of nonperishable items.

As part of its 140th anniversary, Zions Bank offered to match donations dollar for dollar, up to $140,000. The match totaled $7,391.

“We would like to thank our employees, clients and members of the community who donated cash or nonperishable items to help support Idaho and Utah families,” said Zions Bank President and CEO Scott Anderson. “We know that many of our neighbors struggle with food insecurity, and we understand the important role that our local food banks play in supporting families.”

In Idaho, 1 in 6 adults and 1 in 5 children don’t always know where they will find their next meal, reported FeedingAmerica.org.

Zions Bank operates 26 full-service financial centers in Idaho and 101 centers throughout Utah. In addition to a wide range of traditional banking services, Zions Bank is also a leader in small business lending and has ranked as the No. 1 lender of U.S. Small Business Administration 7(a) loans in Idaho’s Boise District for the past 11 consecutive years. BlackBerry’s Bidders Weigh Patent Stockpile

BLOOMBERG NEWS

TORONTO • Even as BlackBerry’s sales tumbled in recent years, the company continued amassing patents, building an intellectual-property hoard that’s now central to its effort to entice bidders.

The struggling smartphone maker received 986 patents last year, a 49 percent increase from 2011, according to figures compiled by the Intellectual Property Owners Association. BlackBerry’s patents are valued at anywhere from $1 billion to $3 billion, depending on how many of them have already been licensed out, analysts and patent experts estimate.

The patents cover similar technology as Apple’s intellectual property, and much of the portfolio is only a few years old. But the market for such assets has cooled. Previous patent buyers such as Apple and Google amassed broad portfolios in patent deals two years ago.

“This is an incredibly volatile market,” said Ron Laurie, managing director of Palo Alto, Calif.-based Inflexion Point Strategy, who advises companies on patents. “It all depends on perceived demand and strategic value.”

A higher patent valuation would help the company as it seeks offers better than Fairfax Financial Holdings Ltd.’s tentative $4.7 billion buyout proposal, even if it means breaking the company up to get the fullest value for the assets.

Apple, whose iPhone is now the best-selling smartphone, cites BlackBerry’s technology 1,295 times in its own patent applications, according to MDB Capital Group LLC, a Santa Monica, Calif.-based patent-investment bank. The rivals credit each other more than any other two North American device makers. Companies are required to identify competing technology to ensure they aren’t claiming something already patented.

Lisette Kwong, a Waterloo, Ontario-based spokeswoman for BlackBerry, and Kristin Huguet, a spokeswoman for Apple, declined to comment.

Given its connections to Apple and an average patent age of just 3.4 years, the portfolio may fetch $2 billion to $3 billion, according to MDB. That value may be lower if BlackBerry has already licensed much of its technology, said Erin-Michael Gill, managing director of MDB Capital. Widely licensed patents have less use for new deals or court challenges.

SUPREME COURT

High Court to Look at Death Row Inmate with Low IQ

BY MARK SHERMAN
Associated Press

WASHINGTON • Eleven years after the Supreme Court barred states from executing mentally disabled inmates, the justices said Monday they will take up a Florida case over how authorities determine who is eligible to be put to death.

The outcome could answer a question left unresolved by the court's 6-3 decision in Atkins v. Virginia, the 2002 case that spares the mentally disabled from the death penalty. The ruling essentially left it to states to decide whether an inmate is mentally disabled.

The case under review is an appeal of a Florida Supreme Court ruling that upheld the death sentence for Freddie Lee Hall, who scored just above the state's cutoff for mental disability as measured by IQ tests.

Hall was sentenced to death for killing Karol Hurst, a 21-year-old pregnant woman who was abducted leaving a grocery store in 1978.

Florida law prohibits anyone with an IQ of 70 or higher from being classified as mentally disabled, regardless of other evidence to the contrary. Hall's scores on three IQ tests ranged from 71 to 80.

Florida is one of nine death penalty states with a strict IQ limit, said Florida Supreme Court Justice Barbara Pariente. The others are: Arkansas, Delaware, Idaho, Kentucky, North Carolina, Tennessee, Virginia and Washington.

Pariente voted with the majority to uphold Hall's sentence, but noted there is no national consensus on how to determine mental disability.

Hall's case has bounced around the Florida courts for decades. In 1989, the Florida Supreme Court threw out Hall's original death penalty and ordered a new sentencing hearing. A judge then re-sentenced Hall to death, but declared he was mentally disabled. That took place before the 2002 U.S. Supreme Court ruling that said executing a mentally disabled inmate violates the Eighth Amendment's ban on cruel and unusual punishment, and before Florida passed a law setting the IQ limit.

NATIONAL SECURITY

Obama calls French President Hollande amid Spying Concerns

WASHINGTON (AP) • President Barack Obama called French President Francois Hollande on Monday to discuss France's anger over reported aggressive surveillance tactics by the National Security Agency.

The call came after a French newspaper said the NSA swept up 70.3 million French phone records in a 30-day period. France summoned the U.S. ambassador to explain and called the practice "totally unacceptable."

The White House says some recent disclosures about the NSA have been distorted but that some raise legitimate questions for U.S. allies about how America's intelligence capabilities are used.

Obama told the French president that the U.S. was reviewing its intelligence-gathering to ensure a balance between security and privacy.

The French president's office said in a statement that Hollande told Obama he strongly condemned the practices and found them unacceptable between allies. Hollande also asked Obama to specify all the information that former NSA systems analyst Edward Snowden may possess. Documents leaked by Snowden have been behind a series of revelations about NSA surveillance programs.

The White House said both presidents agreed they should continue diplomatic discussions about the issue.

COLORADO SHOOTING

Defense, Prosecutors In Holmes Trial Resume Evidence Battle

BY DAN ELLIOTT
Associated Press

CENTENNIAL, Colo. • Attorneys in the Colorado theater shooting case debated Monday whether defendant James Holmes' bank and phone records should be used as evidence in his trial.

The arguments at a pretrial hearing were part of a larger battle over any evidence that might strengthen or weaken Holmes' claim that he was insane at the time of the 2012 attack on a suburban Denver theater.

Holmes has pleaded not guilty by reason of insanity to multiple counts of murder and attempted murder. His attorneys say he was having a psychotic episode during the attack, which left 12 people dead and 70 injured.

Prosecutors, who are seeking the death penalty, want to use any evidence they can find that might show Holmes planned the attack and knew it was a crime. But the defense argued Monday that the bank and phone records were obtained with flawed warrants.

The defense also contends that police illegally kept Holmes from seeing an attorney for more than 13 hours, and that anything he told officers in that time can't be used against him. A former Holmes attorney has testified she tried to tell police they could not speak to him. Police said they questioned Holmes anyway, without his attorney present.

Last week, police acknowledged they knew that two attorneys had asked to speak with Holmes after his arrest and that Holmes had asked for an attorney.

Prosecutors argue police had a duty to ask Holmes about possible accomplices and about bombs found at his apartment because lives were in danger. They said police couldn't wait until after Holmes met with a lawyer.

Attorneys are also expected to argue this week about whether items seized from Holmes' apartment can be used as evidence in his trial, which is scheduled to begin in February.

HEALTH CARE

Obama Offers 'No Excuse' for Health Care Signup Problems

BY JULIE PACE
AND JACK GILLUM
Associated Press

WASHINGTON • President Barack Obama on Monday offered "no excuses" — and little explanation — for the computer bugs still frustrating Americans who are trying to enroll online for insurance plans at the center of his health care law. But software developers tasked with building the site said they saw signs a year ago that the debut could fail.

One source of the troubles appears to be the testing procedures employed before the rollout three weeks ago. Several developers of the HealthCare.gov website told The Associated Press they were worried for months about the system's readiness and whether the software meant to link key computer systems was being properly put through its paces.

In addition, congressional investigators raised concerns before the rollout that the Centers for Medicare and Medicaid Services had taken on the job of testing the computer systems for the new markets during the final weeks before the sign-ups opened Oct. 1. That job is often handled by specialized software companies.

Obama, who emphasized the website's simplicity in the week's leading up to the insurance sign-ups, admitted there could now be "no sugarcoating" the problems even as he talked up the benefits of the law at a Rose Garden event that had the feel of a pep rally.

"The website that's supposed to make it easy to apply for and purchase the insurance is not working the way it should for everybody," he said.

He insisted that the problems would be fixed and all Americans seeking insurance would be able to sign up. But it was not clear how quickly that would happen. The administration is beefing up call centers and encouraging more people to enroll over the phone while the website problems persist.

The flood of computer problems since the website went online has been deeply embarrassing for the White House. The glitches have called into question whether the administration is capable of implementing the complex policy and why senior White House officials — including the president — appear to have been unaware of the scope of the problems when the health insurance markets, known as exchanges, opened.

Obama stopped short of apologizing for the failures, saying instead that "nobody is more frustrated than me."

Even as he spoke, more problems came to light. The administration acknowledged that a planned upgrade to the website had been postponed indefinitely and that online Spanish-language signups would remain unavailable, despite a promise to Hispanic groups that the capability would start this week.

The White House says additional technology experts from both inside and outside the government are being brought in to work on the failures.

GAY MARRIAGE

N.J. Governor Ends Gay Marriage Fight

BY GEOFF MULVIHILL
AND KEN THOMAS
Associated Press

TRENTON, N.J. • Gov. Chris Christie dropped his fight against gay marriage in New Jersey on Monday, framing the decision in a pragmatic way: No point in fighting a losing battle.

Just hours after gay couples began exchanging vows with the blessing of New Jersey's Supreme Court, Christie announced he was withdrawing his appeal to the high court.

New Jersey is the 14th state to legalize gay marriage.

As the Republican governor seeks re-election two weeks from now and ponders a run for president in 2016, Christie's decision holds both risks and benefits for him.

It delighted gay rights activists and could enhance Christie's appeal to independents and moderates of both parties. But it angered members of the GOP's conservative wing, which already distrusts Christie and wields outsized influence in some state primaries.

Bob McAllister, a veteran Republican strategist in South Carolina, said Christie's latest move "is absolutely going to hurt him."

"Abandoning foundational principles that go beyond politics is not the way to get positive attention in South Carolina," he said.

Brian Brown, president of the conservative National Organization for Marriage, said he was "extremely disappointed" with Christie's decision, which he portrayed as "effectively throwing in the towel on marriage."

Last year, the New Jersey Legislature passed a bill to legalize gay marriage, but Christie vetoed it. The issue ended up before Christie again after a trial-level judge ruled last month that the state must allow same-sex couples to wed.

Iraq Veteran's SpongeBob Gravestone Removed

BY AMANDA LEE MYERS
Associated Press

CINCINNATI • An Iraq war veteran's towering SpongeBob SquarePants headstone has been removed from her final resting place because officials at the historic Cincinnati cemetery deemed it inappropriate for their traditional grounds.

The headstone of Kimberly Walker, 28, was made in the likeness of her favorite cartoon character and erected at Spring Grove Cemetery on Oct. 10, almost eight months after she was found slain in a Colorado hotel room.

Despite getting the cemetery's prior approval of the headstone's design — a smiling SpongeBob in an Army uniform, with Walker's name and rank — her family said Monday that cemetery staff called them the day after it was installed to say it would have to come down.

The 7-foot headstone, along with a near-exact duplicate erected for Walker's living twin sister, have been removed and will not be allowed back up, cemetery President Gary Freytag said Monday.

"We've decided that they aren't appropriate for our historic cemetery and they can't be displayed here," Freytag said, adding that the employee who approved the headstones made an inexplicable error in judgment, given the cemetery's traditional, stately appearance.

He acknowledged that the cemetery is at fault and that staff members would be meeting with Walker's family Tuesday to try to find a solution, which could include a more traditional gravestone bearing small likeness of the character.

Freytag also said Spring Grove is prepared to reimburse the family for each headstone, which cost a combined $26,000, and pay for new ones.

"I feel terrible that it got to this point but I'm hoping we can come out at the other end of the tunnel with a solution," he said.

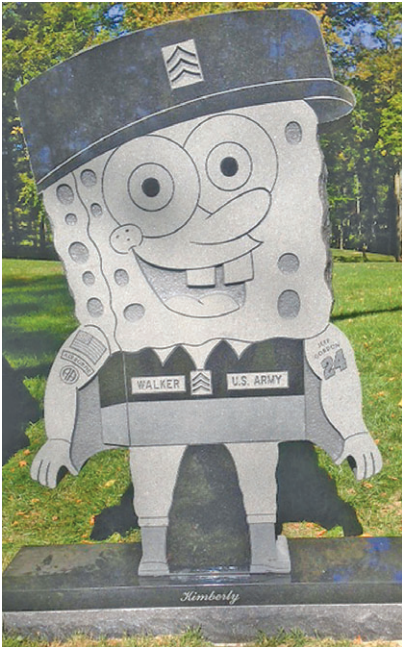

Walker was an Army corporal assigned to the 2nd General Support Aviation Battalion and served two year-long tours Iraq in 2006 and 2010 as a petroleum supply specialist, her family said.

Walker was found dead in a hotel room in Colorado Springs on Valentine's Day this year, strangled and beaten to death. Her boyfriend, an Army sergeant stationed nearby, was arrested and charged with her killing.

Walker's twin sister, Kara Walker, said the family is beyond distraught. A lot of thought went into the grave-stones, which she said were chosen because her sister loved SpongeBob, even outfitting her entire bedroom with the cartoon character's decorations.

"It is frustrating that you entrust a cemetery to have your best interest at heart and accommodate you and your family at a hard time ... and because they don't like it they're going to take it down," said Kara Walker, 29, an information technician for the U.S. Navy stationed in Naples, Italy.

"My sister served our country and most people try to accommodate veterans and try to take care of them," she said. "For them not to accommodate and respect what my sister sacrificed, not only for my family, but for everyone else in this country, really bothers me."

She said the only way the cemetery can make it up to the family, which she said pre-paid for six plots for $29,000, is to put the headstones back.

"They already brought enough grief and pain to the family," she said. "We want what we paid for and what I know my sister would have wanted."

Syrian President Casts Doubt on Peace Conference

BY BASSEM MROUE
AND RYAN LUCAS
Associated Press

BEIRUT • Syria's president cast doubt Monday on the chances of holding a long-delayed international peace conference to end the country's civil war, saying the factors that would help such talks succeed do not currently exist.

The United States and Russia have been trying for months to convene a conference in Geneva to negotiate a political solution to a conflict that has killed more than 100,000 people and forced some 2 million more to flee the country. The U.N. chief has set mid-November as a target for the proposed gathering, but both Damascus and the opposition are skeptical and no final date has been announced.

President Bashar Assad brushed aside the renewed efforts to coax the government and its opponents to the negotiating table, telling Lebanon's Al-Mayadeen TV in an interview that "the factors that would help in holding it (the conference) are not in place if we want it to succeed."

He said it's not clear who would represent the opposition, or what credibility the opposition's representatives would have inside Syria.

"Who are the groups that will participate? What is their relation with the Syrian people? Do they represent the Syrian people or they represent the country that made them?" Assad asked, alluding to his government's claim that the rebels are agents of Western and Arab powers. "There are many questions about the conference."

For its part, Syria's fractured opposition has yet to decide whether to attend the proposed Geneva conference.

The main Western-backed opposition umbrella group, the Syrian National Coalition, is scheduled to meet Nov. 1-2 in Istanbul to decide whether to take part in the talks. One prominent faction within the Coalition, the Syrian National Council, has said it has no faith in negotiations with Assad's regime and won't participate in any Geneva negotiations.

The Funny Math of Clothing Sizes

BY MAE ANDERSON
AP Retail Writer

NEW YORK • When it comes to women's clothing sizes, there's some funny math going on.

The average American woman is about 25 pounds heavier than she was in 1960. Yet women's plus-size clothing, generally defined as size 14 and up, still makes up only about 9 percent of the $190 billion spent annually on clothes.

What's wrong with this equation? It's not that plus-size women aren't into fashion. Rather, the fashion industry doesn't seem interested in them.

The fashion industry has long spent more time, money and marketing on clothing for taut bodies than for curvier ones because it's easier and more profitable to do so. But retail analysts and plus-size women say there's something else at play: Stereotypes about larger women not wanting to dress fashionably keep companies from making clothes that are flattering to them. And in turn, that discourages them from spending more.

"There is still an interesting stigma attached to plus-size fashion and the woman who wears it," says Marie Denee, who wears a size 16 and studies the industry via her website TheCurvyFashionista.com. "Many think 'Oh, she doesn't want to draw attention, live life, date, be confident, wear fitted clothes with bold colors and patterns,' when the exact opposite is true."

Carmen Barrington, 32, says that attitude has resulted in fewer plus-size options. Barrington, who wears around a size 22, lamented recently after a day of shopping at Forever 21, Lane Bryant and other stores that she sometimes can't even find decent plus-size clothing at retailers that specialize in it.

"It was a hot, annoying day, and I spent it trying on stuff, and came up with nothing," Barrington, who works in human resources, says. "There's this aversion to being associated with plus-size clothes."

To be sure, sizing is an inexact science. Women's sizes were developed in the 1920s as catalogues became popular and ready-to-wear clothing replaced tailor made or self-sewn items.

But while a system of men's standard sizing based on chest sizes in the Army had worked well, a similar attempt to base women's sizes on bust measurements wasn't as reliable. Women's bust sizes are more variable.

In the 1930s, retailers began adopting even-numbered sizes commonly ranging from 14 to 24, says Alaina Zulli, a dressmaker who studies costume history. But those sizes bore little resemblance to those used today — a size 24 back then, for instance, would be a size 14 today — so the issues of not having enough plus-size fashions likely was not as pronounced.

The sizes stayed the same but the numbers decreased gradually, Zulli says, about 1 size a decade. This is known as "vanity sizing" because it gives women the illusion that they're fitting into a smaller size.

Women's sizes, which today range from 0 to 24 but vary from store to store, haven't evolved much for decades. And for the most part, neither have the range of plus-size fashions.

As a result, the amount spent on women's plus-size clothing annually has only risen by one percentage point to 9 percent since 2011, the furthest back plus-size data available from research firm NPD Group.

DEAR ABBY: I'm never happy with just one partner. It's not that I want to go out and have a different man every night of the week — just some options. I'm currently in a polyamorous relationship, so seeing other men is OK. But my boyfriend is now asking me why I feel the way I do because he is considering becoming monogamous again.

I crave something different from man to man and seek whatever the other one doesn't have. I have been with my fair share of guys, yet there doesn't seem to be one person who has all the qualities I need in my life. Should I just stay single and noncommittal forever?

— FICKLE IN FORT WAYNE

DEAR FICKLE: Perhaps not forever, but for now, yes, until you meet someone who has more of the qualifications you're looking for. When you do, you may finally realize that in successful relationships some degree of compromise is always involved.

DEAR ABBY: I recently married a wonderful woman I have been friends with for years. I was always secretly in love with her. We are very happy together.

The only problem is that her ex-husband, from whom she has been divorced for four years, was violent. If I try to brush her hair away from her face or make a sudden movement of any kind, she flinches or panics.

I have never been violent with anyone, and I know she has PTSD from her past marriage. How should I sensitively broach the subject of counseling to deal with this serious issue?

— CONCERNED IN THE MIDWEST

DEAR CONCERNED: When it happens again, tell your wife calmly that you know it's a reflex and see if you can get her to tell you why it happens. At that point you could suggest she talk to a counselor because you love her and would never hurt her, and when she flinches, it hurts YOU that she's still carrying around this heavy baggage.

DEAR ABBY: I am 25. My husband is 50, and we have been married for three years. We are in a healthy relationship, raise his 12-year-old together and are trying for our own children. We have plans for the rest of our lives, are in good health, have regular checkups, and our life insurance and estate planning are in order.

But, Abby, sometimes I find myself worrying about his age. I cry when I contemplate spending a chunk of my life alone because I don't think I could ever love anyone else as strongly as I do him. My husband is my rock, my reason for living, and I'm grateful for every moment I have with him.

I'm psychologically well otherwise. These sad feelings don't last longer than a few hours. Is this normal? Should I talk with someone about it? Should I just tell my husband my feelings and remind him how much he means to me?

— HAPPILY MARRIED IN HENDERSON, NEV.

DEAR HAPPILY MARRIED: Your feelings are normal for a woman who is fully invested emotionally in her husband. However, if your anxiety over the possibility of losing him increases, by all means talk to a licensed mental health professional about it.

As to your last question, whether you should confide your feelings to him, it would be a beautiful compliment to let him know you don't take his importance in your life for granted or the joy he has brought you. But don't be surprised if, when he hears you say it, he says the same thing back to you. You both are truly blessed.

"Life always gets harder toward the summit — the cold increases, the responsibility increases."
— Friedrich Nietzsche

In today's deal North's three-diamond cue-bid showed a spade raise. Later, when South made a forcing pass of five clubs, North's five-diamond call showed the diamond ace and suggested slam interest. That was all South needed to take a shot at the spade slam.

On the top-club lead declarer realized he was short of intermediates in the diamond suit, but he appreciated the significance of the fact that West was a Scotsman. The diamond nine, traditionally known as the Curse of Scotland, would play an important part in South's plans.

South won the club lead in hand, drew trump in two rounds, ending in dummy, then ruffed a club, cashed the three top hearts, and ruffed a heart. He now had three diamonds and two trumps in each hand, with the lead in North.

Declarer called for a low diamond from dummy, and when East played low, he put in the nine, endplaying West either to lead a diamond back around to South's queen, or to give him a ruff and discard, whereupon the diamond loser would go away. It would have done East no good to hop up with his diamond 10 on the first round, though this is the best defense. (What if the diamond nine and eight were switched?) Had East gone up with the 10, South would have covered with the queen, and his possession of the diamond nine would have brought about an identical endplay on West.

ANSWER: Here a jump to four no-trump is unusual, suggesting this pattern and approximately these values. You may not be able to make game, or you may be cold for slam, but you don't have to decide that. Let your partner make the decision on where to play and at what level, once you have told him what you have.

IF OCTOBER 22 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: Get on the ball and make an effort at work before the end of the month while you have the competitive edge. Your ambitions build exponentially throughout December when you're inspired to follow your dreams. Those dreams might include a new romantic partner or success in the outer world. If you need a job, the perfect opportunity might drop into your lap. Some of your prayers could be answered in January, when your grasp of financial matters is at its best. Your love life and career take a turn for the better in December and January. Push to reach your goals while the stars are in your favor.

HOROSCOPE

Jeraldine Saunders

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Get up close and personal with your most trusted playmate and toss the ball of love back and forth. Don't neglect responsibilities, get too involved with group dynamics, or start new business ventures.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): You could seek warm human interactions, even in a business setting. Be aware, though, that trying to forge a friendship while in a professional situation or group setting can confuse some essential issues.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): When business calls, you answer. You might be in the spotlight because of your job performance or your achievements. You're the apple of someone's eye or the obvious object of someone's affection.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Amorous adventures and pleasant business networking get a thumbs-up, but avoid starting a new project or business deal. Keep your eye on long-term trends where investments are concerned.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Some super-romantic "stars-in-your-eyes" encounters are a distinct possibility. Finish up business projects, but don't make any sudden changes or impulsive financial decisions. Take the time to think things through.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): A spate of popularity and a feeling of trust can create some tender moments in a close relationship. This however, isn't a solid foundation upon which to launch a brand-new business or sign a crucial agreement.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Put a seductive spin on your work. If you've already captured someone's heart, you can really make the wheels go 'round. This isn't a good time to start a new business relationship or job.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Hugs and harmony heighten your happiness. Bonds of affection can strengthen under these stars and it's a breeze to prove true love and devotion to a special someone. Put a damper on wheeling and dealing.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): The stars are conducive to affectionate one-on-one playtime. Light-hearted amusement with your one-and-only is your best bet. Avoid initiating new business endeavors or yielding to peer pressure.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Coordinate and conquer. It will be easy to keep in step with others in the outer world without losing touch with home base. Some of your past ideas about how to achieve your ambitions may begin to bear fruit.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Your inner magpie loves to collect shiny objects and chatter with a crowd of admirers. If you remain perched on a virtual balance beam, you can do things your own way without stepping on anyone's toes.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Love birds take flight, so bill and coo with that a significant other. If you have a special sweetheart, love is a sure thing. Avoid spur-of-the-moment business agreements or gambling with your cash.

middle school and neighboring elementary school were evacuated to the nearby high school, and classes were canceled. The middle school will remain closed for the week.

At the evacuation center, parents comforted their children.

“We came flying down here to get our kids,” said Mike Florica, whose nephew attends the school. “You can imagine how parents are feeling. You don’t know if your kid’s OK.”

The shooting happened on the school’s campus and ended outside the school building, according to police.

“I was deeply saddened to learn of the horrific shooting at Sparks Middle School this morning,” Nevada Gov. Brian Sandoval said in a statement extending his thoughts and prayers to those affected.

About 700 students in 7th and 8th grades are enrolled at the school, in a working class neighborhood.

Law enforcement personnel gather at the scene of a shooting at Sparks Middle School in Sparks, Nev. on Monday.

Landsberry said. “We’re just Sparks — little Sparks, Nevada. It’s unreal.”

The mayor praised the quick response from law officers who arrived at the scene within three minutes of a flood of 911 calls to find the gunman already dead from a self-inflicted gunshot wound.

“They got it under control very quickly and shut down the scene,” Martini said.

A statement from Nicole

Hockley, whose son Dylan was killed in the Connecticut shooting, appeared on the website of gun control advocacy group Sandy Hook Promise. “It’s moments like this that demand that we unite as parents to find commonsense solutions that keep our children _ all children _ safe, and prevent these tragedies from happening again and again,” the statement said.

The Washoe County School District held a session in the spring in light of the Newtown tragedy to educate parents on its safety measures. The district has its own 38-officer police department. No officers were on campus at the time of the shooting.

Sparks, a city of roughly 90,000 that sprung out of the railway industry, is just east of Reno.

“You see it on TV all the time. You just don’t think it’s going to happen to you,” Martini said.

Hartgen

But Hartgen said he expects to participate in the Idaho Legislature, which starts in early January.

“I’m making good progress, but I may be in a wheelchair or need a walker or a cane,” he said.

He said his presence there hinges on making a full and speedy recovery. If he needs more time, Hartgen said, he has selected substitutes to take his place until he can make it to Boise. He declined to identify his choices, though.

It’s not unusual for lawmakers to need a temporary replacement for several days or even months during the session, said House Speaker Scott Bedke, R-Oakley.

“It can happen,” Bedke said. “I’ve seen a substitute stay for a whole session. It’s within the bounds of the law.”

Bedke said he has found acting chairmen for the committees Hartgen oversees.

For example, he appointed Rep. Fred Wood, R-Burley, to head the Millennium Fund Committee until Hartgen can resume the position.

Bedke also has found a lawmaker to fill Hartgen’s seat on the legislative Public Lands Interim Committee, assigned to study the transfer of federal lands.

“I think it’s important for him to get better first,” Bedke said. “He’s a very effective chairman. We’ll miss him. When he gets better, those positions are waiting for him.”

The disease attacked the protecting coating to nerves in the lower half of Hartgen’s body. While doctors are still unsure what triggers the virus, it is typically found after a person is under extreme stress or right after surgery, said Dr. Cheri Wiggins of St. Luke’s Magic Valley.

“I’ve seen patients recover in weeks, and then I’ve seen some need nine months,” she said.

Hartgen was elected as representative for District 24 in 2008 and was re-elected in 2012. The Twin Falls native is the former publisher of the Times-News.

Linda, who visits her husband every morning and evening, said the past few months have been an “eye opener.”

“I think we used to take each other for granted,” she said. “We don’t do that anymore.”

Hartgen said he’s determined to walk out of the hospital, but he doesn’t know when. He’s been undergoing three hours of physical therapy Monday through Friday to rebuild his muscle and balance.

“I’m getting stronger every day,” he said.

Crop Dusters

out to kill the planet.”

But chemical pesticides used today are not as toxic as in the past, Jurak said. And modern planes are safer, too.

Clay’s parents have owned Red Baron for more than 30 years. His dad, Mike Jurak, has flown since he was 18.

“I used to run the business,” Mike Jurak said, “but I really just like to fly.”

While it might appear that crop dusters fly with reckless abandon, they don’t. Pilots must follow strict FAA regulations, as well as federal chemical applicator laws, he said.

Wind speed and direction, time of day and temperature all play into when and how fields are sprayed.

Communication between farmers and their neighbors “is the backbone of any crop dusting business,” he said. That’s where Clay comes in.

“I have a master’s degree in plant pathology,” Clay said. “But I spend most of my day talking to all the neighbors (of sprayed ground) to let them know what we are doing.

“I encounter a lot of folks with respiratory issues, and I’ll stand out in their yard with them, talking to the pilot on the radio as he sprays.”

Weeks said his company also tries to be proactive.

“The most common complaint I here is, ‘Why do they have to fly so low to the ground and pull up right over their house or trees?’” Weeks said.

Most times, pilots have no other choice, he said.

Only experienced pilots with more than 1,000 hours of flight time are hired to fly crop dusters, because of insurance requirements, he said. Many of them were military pilots.

Weeks said he understands where some fears come from. In the past, fields sprayed with some toxic chemicals had to be posted and quarantined for a few days.

“Today’s chemicals are very safe compared to even 10 years ago,” Weeks said. “If you read the label, the basic ingredients are the same stuff sold off the shelf in a gardening store.”

Considering how many hundreds of thousands of acres one plane covers over the course of a year, the industry is a safe one, said Clay Jurak.

One field will be sprayed a dozen times in one season, he said. “We hit potatoes with fungicides and insecticides five or six times, then another five or six times with fertilizer.”

One advantage to aerial application over ground spraying, said Mike Jurak, “is a farmer doesn’t have to shut off the irrigation and dry out the field just to get a ground sprayer in.”

On top of that, with GPS installed in the planes, crop dusting is as precise as ground spraying, he said.

But sometimes, things get sprayed that aren’t supposed to.

“I had some problems when they first sprayed pesticides,” said Randy Stock of Jerome. “I have a field of hay on one side of me and a potato field on the other. And I didn’t want them to spray on my property.”

Stock called Clay Jurak. “He was very accommodating, very responsible,” Stock said. “We live in a farming community and I make a living from that farming community.

Contract

But Packer, a freshman House member from southeastern Idaho, said she believes the velocity at which Dowd is moving ahead has outstripped the volunteer board’s ability to adequately monitor staff’s decision-making and make sure money is being spent appropriately.

“Things have been out of control because we were in a hurry,” Packer said. “It’s time to have a longer thought process, to get things back in line.”

In addition to Packer and Rice, at least five others on the board of directors asked for Tuesday’s special meeting.

Among them, House Minority Leader John Rusche, D-Lewiston, said he wants to learn more about what led to Chan’s contract — and the rationale behind paying him nearly double what he’s paid by the state — before arriving at a conclusion about the appropriate resolution of the matter.
