SOCIAL EVENTS and CLUB NEWS

Edith Hazel Nice, E. E. Sharer Exchange Vows at Church Rites

FILER, March 30—The Filer East Memorial church was the setting at 7:30 p. m. Saturday for the wedding of Miss Edith Hazel Nice, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. G. Nice, Filer, and Elmer Edwin Sharer, Sheridan, Ore.

Rev. Samuel Honderich and Rev. L. J. Miller, pastors of the church, were in charge of the service. Rev. Honderich read the impressive ceremony and this was followed by a short sermon by Rev. Miller.

Following the ceremony and while the bride party was entering the church a quartet composed of Letta Justice, Leo and Robert Miller sang "Love You Truly." During the service they sang "Perfect Love."

The bride wore a white satin street length model and carried a jubilee bridegroom, Miss Pauline Nice, sister of the bride, wore a rose-colored gown with a long train and a bouquet of roses in various shades. The flower girl, Betty Lou Nice, also a sister of the bride, wore a rose colored gown of silk and her bouquet was sweet peas in pastel shades.

Clifford Blatter acted as best man. Following the ceremony, a reception was held at the home of the bride's parents, three tables northwest of Filer. During the reception Mrs. E. E. Sharer acted as hostess and served the wedding cake.

The bride is a graduate of the Filer rural high school and was born in this community. Her father, E. E. Sharer, left Monday for Sweet Home, Ore., to make their home.

Out-of-town guests were Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Wolfer, Mr. and Mrs. Cliff Collett and Allen Sharer, all of Sweet Home, Ore.

CHAPTER I

FRANKLY, I DON'T feel quite right about this, even yet. Ever after Kay wired me to go ahead.

It's Allan's story, I keep telling myself. Allan's—and the state departments—although no longer the secret he made me swear to last September.

And there are all the loose ends I've no way of tying together. I don't even know where Allan himself is now.

What happened to Asia, and was she as beautiful as he said? Did they find Baron Sagozi? I thought of him when I saw those news pictures of Kurusu, smiling so warmly and innocently, clutching that modest black brief case so mockingly symbolical of good will, as he arrived in Washington to discuss our difficulties with Japan.

And Escobar! His even more enigmatic smile, brighter in his handsome face. I wonder about Escobar, sometimes—wonder how clearly it all came back to him the day Pearl Harbor was struck and a continent awakened to war. Finally, I'm ashamed of myself. How smug I must have sounded! "Those Japs down there—probably operating on the same level I had said to Allan. They're specialists in two-bit intrigue, sure. But you make three and a quarter fear rats in cages than your 'yellow devils'."

Allan's story or not, there are those who think it should be told—Kay not the least among them. It was just last summer . . .

SHIMMERING heat waves almost hid the sandy road as Allan Steele, in his trademark sedan, created a hill and came thankfully in sight of his journey's end. At the foot of the slope, hardly a mile ahead, nestled the small fishing village of San Salsador, a slumbering, deserted town, the buildings on each side of him were shuttered and no visible sign of life met his roving gaze.

"Siesta," he murmured aloud. "Everybody's asleep."

Yet he questioned the notion even while voicing it. He had an uneasy feeling as he drove slowly through the village that eyes were peering at him from behind the bolted doors and shuttered windows. Hostile eyes, sinister, calculating.

He gripped the wheel more firmly as he analyzed it and traced it accurately to its source. It obviously derived from the nature of the errand which had brought him to this off-track corner of the world.

THE heat was something you had to feel to believe. He drove doggedly for half a mile, climbing another low rise of land. At its top he halted the car in the welcome shade of an old gnarled pine.

Meanwhile, he took advantage of his present elevation to study the lay of the land spread out before him. He followed the winding road with observant gaze to the point where it dove into a thicket of eucalyptus trees and vanished.

Set far back in the grove was a rambling structure of adobe which he assumed was the hotel he was seeking. The Inn of One Thousand Delights was the modest name bestowed on it by its Chinese proprietor, Sun Su. Allan glanced nervously. Right now he'd settle for just two dollars if they'd take the shape of a long cold drink and a long cold bath.

He thumbed in a pocket of the car, pulled out a pair of field glasses and trained them on the building.

A movement caught his eye. A man had come out of the front entrance. The glances revealed him as tall, slender, and fairly young—about 32 or 33, Allan's own age. He was wearing a uniform which the American recognized as that of the Rurales, the Mexican mounted police, and the glint of metal on his tunic marked him as an officer.

Slightly surprised by the spectacle of another lunatic abroad at such an hour on such a day, Allan watched him swing lightly into the saddle of a horse that had been tethered near the door. He put his sled in motion and came up the road in the direction of San Salsador, riding with the easy grace which Allan had long since concluded was every Mexican's birthright.

ALLAN was about to set the car rolling down the gentle slope ahead when he paused to watch the Mexican again.

The officer had reined in abruptly. He was abreast of a clump of tall cactus that edged the road, and evidently his attention had been attracted by something that lay along the narrow strip of shade at the base of the thorny mass. From where Allan was watching, the object resembled a big bundle of rope. He saw the rider dismount and walk toward it, leading his horse; he saw him stoop to his knees behind the bundle.

And then the peculiar scene exploded into the wildest melodrama. Three men on horseback came galloping from behind the cactus which had concealed them. They charged down upon the kneeling officer, shouting and waving naked machetes as they stood in their stirrups.

Either their shouts or the pounding of hoofs had given warning to their intended victim—warning and the fraction of time he needed to defend himself. Litho as a panther, he sprang erect, turning in the air as he did so. When he caught his balance he was facing his attackers, his rear protected by the clump of cactus. In the same moment he whipped out his straight, military machete and got it up in time to turn aside a sweeping blow from the first horseman to reach him. Quick as a snake strike, he followed the parry with a lightning lunge. The point of his blade drove into the flank of the man's horse; the animal screamed, reared and tried to bolt. The officer swung to meet the others as they arrived, his sword playing before him in a semi-circle of flame from the reflected rays of the sun.

"Hot tamale!" gasped Allan. "A holdup!" (To Be Continued)
