

PRICE CONTROL COMPLIANCE REPORTED NEARLY COMPLETE

RETAIL STORES FALL INTO LINE

WASHINGTON, May 23 (AP)—The close of the first week of controlled prices today found officials here highly gratified with the results. They reported a continuing and encouraging degree of compliance, and that almost all of the small number of violations were due to misunderstanding and not to any disinclination to cooperate.

The office of price administration was deep in an educational campaign which it estimated had already reached half of the nation's retailers, particularly the chains and larger stores, which could be expected to understand the regulations, through the newspaper, the radio and mailed literature.

Alm at All Notes

Entering the second phase of the campaign, the agency is endeavoring to reach the smaller retailers. Henderson, the price administrator, said, "down to the last cross-street store."

The week brought surprisingly few complaints from consumers. Officials said and there were largely given a stock answer: "Go back to your retailer and explain it to him." This response was based upon the assumption that either the customer or the retailer was misinformed. The price freeing order, and that the retailer was anxious to comply.

Cue Price Rise

The order specified that after May 18, retailers could not charge prices in excess of the highest price charged for specific articles during the month of March. This meant the raising of the price rise since March, which on some items had been estimated at three to four percent. Some consumers felt that the price rise in prices had been less than that ration, and expressed dissatisfaction.

PRICE CEILING ON UNLISTED ITEMS

Cost-of-living commodities are not the only ones subject to the general maximum price regulation and as a result the regulation applies to all items, not specifically listed.

This fact was announced here Saturday night by Carl N. Anderson, chairman of the Twin Falls county rationing board, after information had been received from the office for emergency management.

The cost-of-living commodities are those for which "stable markets" are posting of maximum is required. Anderson said. "All other commodities not named as exceptions are also subject to the price ceiling. In the case of these other commodities the retailer, while not required to post the ceiling, must nevertheless keep a record of the ceilings available for inspection by the post office after July 1.

The cost-of-living commodities are important items of food, clothing, furniture and so forth. Under the regulation, the storekeeper must display the maximum prices prominently. The regulation requires ceiling prices on these cost-of-living items to be marked "for the consumer's information" and "for the purchasing public." A seller's ceiling price, in general, is the highest price charged for a product delivered in March of this year.

It's True: No More Rubber Before 1944

It came along with the impression that in spite of all efforts in Washington and Akron to replace synthetic rubber for natural rubber, it's going to be a long pull. And that Jesse Jones' estimate of 800,000 tons of synthetic rubber for 1943 is not only impossible but fantastic.

As Harvey Branson, Jr., said, "It can't be done in an short a time."

The best answer from conversations with the rubber executives was that neither the rubber industry, nor the petroleum industry which supplies the basic components for the manufacture of the synthetic products, nor governmental agencies in Washington have as yet been able to get together on a clearly defined program.

After these conversations one felt that it was not think or even wish to get it, at least not before 1944, if then.

JAPANESE LABOR OUTLOOK BETTER

BOISE, Idaho, May 23 (AP)—Prospects were improved today for hiring of Pacific coast Japanese for farm work in Idaho, Gov. Chase A. Clark reported.

He said reports from Sugar companies operating in Idaho indicated "nearly 2000 Japanese will be brought in time to work on the sugar beet crop."

Previously, the U. S. employment service said Oregon Japanese evacuees, except for a group of 15 youths, had declined to volunteer for the best farming work. The 15 Japanese youths were at work in fields near Nixa, Ore., and they were reportedly sent to "test" local sentiment and working conditions in the fields.

The youths said that if they found the labor to their liking and living conditions suitable, they would be back on several hundred thousand from the Oregon assembly center to join them in the fields.

Meanwhile, the labor shortage had become so acute in the area near Nixa that several hundred Japanese were called upon to drop their usual work and help in the fields. About 1000 acres of sugar beets.

Merchants agreed to close their establishments each morning next Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday to work in the fields and help meet a crop loss.

CLARK ASSURES JAP PROTECTION

BOISE, May 23 (AP)—Unexpected difficulty in obtaining volunteer Japanese workers to labor in Idaho sugar beet fields brought new attention today to secure the evacuated help.

Failure of Oregon Japanese to come in large numbers—only 15 came to Nixa, Ore., Thursday—caused in-employment service efforts to find Washington and California Japanese.

Prompted by unconfirmed reports of mistreatment and near-violence, Governor Clark assured federal officials the Japanese would receive "the very finest treatment" and full protection.

Despite the slow response to the request for 2000 laborers the governor expressed belief "things will probably work out."

Take Field Labor

He said many men had gone into the Jerome area expecting work on construction of the Eden relocation center and had accepted field labor pending start of the evacuee camp.

Weather delayed work in the southwest Idaho area, where thousands of acres of beets will be lost unless they are planted and blocked soon.

Mr. J. T. Tiltman, Idaho employment service director, said permission had been granted to bring in California evacuees to work in the fields. He expected to know by Monday the extent to which labor would be available from the fields.

Reports which have come to my office indicate the Oregon Japanese are not only willing to work but are anxious on the coast under army protection," Tiltman continued.

Here's How Store Men Can Dispose Of Old Tin Tubes

Twin Falls and McCall valley retailers have been collecting squashed and discarded toothpaste and shaving cream tubes since April 1. What are they supposed to do with them?

The question was finally solved by the county relieving board through the offer of emergency management at Salt Lake City. According to the W.P.B., the Tin Salvage Institute, Newark, N. Hail of Fire Met U.S. Planes In Hawaii, Vivid Letter Says

By JEAN DINKELACKER

While Japanese planes were attacking Pearl harbor during the Dec. 7 sneak raid, a number of unsuspecting American bombers arrived from the United States to find a hail of fire.

Among the men aboard was Capt. Raymon J. Jolin, radio operator, son of Mr. and Mrs. L. E. Jolin, Twin Falls.

His eye-witness account of the "hail of fire" that turned out to be a hail of bullets, was relayed by letter to his parents a few days after the bombing of the Hawaiian Islands but has been withheld until now by his family pending the release of complete government reports.

Spot Black Specks

The bombers took off from Honolulu field Sunday night, Dec. 6, and long before land was sighted the next morning, the co-pilot and Jolin spotted a lot of black spots in the sky, high above the clouds.

These later turned out to be anti-aircraft fire, Jolin explained. At the time he was flying over the island of Oahu, they came upon a scene which he described as "first believed to be a battle."

A lot of yellow ships were circling around, around a bunch of destroyers and the destroyers were shooting up at them, and the sky was filled with black puffs of smoke, was Jolin's description.

As they passed over Hickam field, Jolin saw a flying fortress, its tail burned clear off to the wing. "It was one of ours that had landed just ahead of us."

When he saw two or three other fortresses scattered all over, he knew it was no "play-battle."

"I tried to tell the crew chief and pilot but they only laughed at me," Jolin declared.

BattleShip Down

Next he saw a battleship sink to the decks and another completely on fire.

Soon he saw a Japanese plane dive straight down into the ground, and immediately a burst of flame and black mushroomed up.

Then two Japanese planes "got on our tail and started shooting at us from our side window open and I stuck out my head, looking back. A big cloud of tracer came up from the ground and the ships were driven off."

Because the pilot couldn't see what some of the others could observe, owing to his position in the plane, the pilot circled through it all three times and came in for a landing.

The lower signalman knew the bomber wasn't carrying ammunition, so he didn't alarm the pilot by telling him that we were being fired. Instead he directed him to pull out into the middle of the field so as to scatter out the planes and prevent them from making too good a target.

Dive Bombers Sweep

It was not until the men all got off the plane that he realized that the battle was real. Here's the welcome they received to Hawaiian soil.

USO Kitchens Give Men Chance to Try Cookery

The heart of a USO center is its kitchen. Or at least that is so of the three USO buildings that Mrs. Sturgeon McCoy visited recently in Bremerton, Wash.

For it is here that the enlisted and selective service men, on shore leave or on furlough, can connect the "goulashes" that are typical of their several nationalities.

The kind that mothers used to make, but the sort that no restaurateur seems to know about.

Patricia Cunningham, a Catholic chaplain, who took Mrs. McCoy through one of the three centers she visited at the naval base, pointed out that the boys can bring anything cookable. Sometimes it looks hardly edible, when the lady have finished cooking it, but they usually lap it up with relish.

The one rule is that they must have well-equipped kitchen as clean or cleaner than they found it.

Mrs. McCoy learned that the USO centers at Bremerton are particularly valuable because they are the only place—except here and there—where the men on shore leave can get a recreation.

Bremerton and San Diego are the only two west-coast ports where runs and ships are brought for repairs, and at intervals the peninsula is literally congested with sailors.

USO to the Rescue

On Saturday night before Mother's day in Seattle, hundreds of young army and navy men, on leave, walked the streets all night because no beds were available.

"The USO was the one and only organization that did something about the situation," Mrs. McCoy said. "They got hundreds of cots from private homes and put the boys to bed in relays."

In the state of Washington, the USO centers are under the general supervision of the Salvation Army, with various churches and other organizations cooperating.

One of the Bremerton centers now occupies the Sunday school room turned over to the USO by the Swedish Lutheran church.

When the boys are out for a good time, they don't want a mother, they want a girl of their own age, or thereabouts, and the USO provides this companionship in a well-chaperoned manner," Mrs. McCoy declared.

Girls who are invited to the USO centers are carefully catalogued; their backgrounds are known, and if they can "pass muster," they are invited to attend the parties as junior hostesses, being chaperoned always.

Juke boxes and pianos are always on hand, and there is a juke box so fragile as when a "juke box goes on the blink"—momentarily.

Books and magazines of all kinds are available for those who want to catch up on their reading.

Support Extended

Quick to respond to the USO's appeal for funds for an extended program, made necessary by the ever-increasing numbers of men entering various branches of the service, Twin Falls county has been giving generously to the campaign, now being conducted, according to Mrs. Emma Clouche, county chairman.

Recreation from various organizations are beginning to come in, adding to the amounts contributed by individuals contacted during the campaign, Mrs. Clouche said.

Among the group contacted, Twin Falls was $23 received from the Catholic Women's league USO benefit tea.

SENATE-HOUSE COMMITTEE AGREES ON $42 PAY IN SERVICE

$50 PLAN GETS FULL REJECTION

WASHINGTON, May 23 (AP)—Rejecting proposals to set the lower pay in the fighting forces at $50 monthly, a senate-house committee today agreed on a $42 minimum.

This, the figure approved by the senate, is exactly double the $21 monthly now paid army privates and navy seamen when they first enter the service.

While the house voted for a $50 minimum, Chairman May (D-Ky.) of the senate military committee said he expected the joint committee's decision to win house approval.

Both senate and house must ratify the committee's action. If President Roosevelt then signed the legislation, the pay boost would become effective one month later.

Women's Status Uncertain

Legislation said they were uncertain whether the raise would apply to the women's army auxiliary corps in which it was originally announced pay would start at $21 a month.

The cost of the pay boost was estimated at $205,000,000 annually. However, Johnson said this estimate probably was considerably short of the actual figure since there had been huge increases in the armed services since Jan. 1.

SURVEYS SLATED IN CUSTER, LEMHI

BOISE, May 23 (AP)—Approximately 200 Idaho mining concerns will be asked next week to check their Custer and Lemhi county deposits in a move toward large-scale development of the eastern Idaho area.

Public Works Commissioner Allen G. Merritt said if results of the survey were favorable, negotiations would begin for securing extensive road improvements and construction of a smaller at Twin Buttes, east of Arco.

Reconstruction finance corporation funds would be sought, he added.

Field surveys are planned in the two counties this summer, supervised by Dr. A. L. Anderson, University of Idaho geologist.

The RFC funds will be available if the government can be convinced that the area is rich in mineral deposits, Merritt said. Recent discoveries of rich mercury deposits near Yellow Pine in Valley County have attracted federal attention.

He asserted the government had expressed interest in a plan whereby mining men would form a non-profit corporation through which to apply for RFC development funds. Roads would be developed as strategic or access routes.

A small area at Twin Buttes, Merritt pointed out, would eliminate high ore transportation costs that have handicapped mining operations in the two counties.

20th CENTURY PIRATE

CHAPTER VII

JUNE PATERSON moved feverishly, slipped into the blue-colored slacks, threw on a blouse and jacket, whipped a tricorne bandana about her tousled hair. With more speed than judgment she packed her overnight case, groping in the darkness for the things that were necessary to her. Her trunk, she decided, could wait. The least that Bill Talbot could do for her could be to see that it followed her home.

Her sole thought was of escape from Abas, from the horrible heat and odor, from the grim, silent intrigue that had settled on the place, turning them all into taciturn, suspicious strangers. There was a boat of some kind attempting to land at the pier now. It was in all probability a government boat; from what June Paterson had seen on her brief stay, she gathered from the words of Leonard Halsey, the law would soon come to Abas, and thus she thought this gray, close-cruising action must be its conveyance. She had no idea as to whether the boat was Dutch or American; where it was going or whether it had come. She knew only that she wanted to get away, to breathe clean air again, and forget the horrible memories of the past few hours. Resolutely she seized her trunk and with never a backward glance slipped through the darkened house into the outer dawn.

Distant stars showed dimly through blanketing clouds; the thin moon had set and the dark sky was fringed with a breath of light. Blindly she stumbled down the hill, shaking off unseen fingers of verdant growth that pawed in silent challenge at her passage. She was very near hysteria when a strong hand brought her to the cleared slope and she saw the lights of the pier. In the deep shadow of a frangipani tree she collided head on with a standing figure. It was MacDowell, and when he had picked himself up and got some of his wind back he grunted, "Miss Paterson! I almost shot you! What in Tele's name is going on down there?"

She glared, more in shock than anger. Why don't you investigate," she blurted. "You have a pistol. Are you afraid?"

MacDowell grunted. "I ain't afraid, Miss. But I got a wife and two kids here in New York, and that gang on the dock is making a little too free with knives."

Another form came hurtling down the slope and Halsey, pyjamas slung beneath a robe, skidded to a halt. "I hear a shot," he panted. "Are you all right? Have you seen Struthers? He wasn't in his room—What's happening?"

A booming roar engulfed his words; the deep-throated bark of a heavy caliber gun. It ripped through the night, reverberating against the rocky hills, dying with swinging his head gently. "So you want to make trouble, hey? You no like Cap Jackson to visit your island, hey?"

Talbot responded. "You and your gang have brought me endless trouble. The poor, frightened people you dump here are penniless and many of them are sick. It gets me in all kinds of jams with the authorities. It endangers the residents of the islands. Now, for the last time, clear out of here!"

The man with the shotgun scowled. "Meester Talbot, you are in no position to dictate terms. Is the word 'damn' racial in the Caribbean, make my own terms. So now I have two more for you. One is a very lovely woman; I would take her to San Tommas myself but I am too much busy. So you will take her in the gentleman. There weel be no trouble—they've papers. Hot when you put up my men, that I do not like. So I think one day you an' me will have a very grand fight, Meester Talbot. Som, I hope."

"No. And if you have two more people, you keep them. And I advise you to get going before the black men of this island come swarming down that hillside to kill us all!"

At his words the dark rogue turned an involuntary glance toward the path and had not MacDowell spoken then, June Paterson's presence might have gone unnoticed. MacDowell, however, growled, "Refugees smugglers, hey? Okay. Get going, and don't leave nobody behind!"

The muzzle of the shotgun turned toward the path and, with a kempt and fell in a tangle behind his ears, dazzling white teeth opened a gash in his dark face. He wore no shirt and his boxlike chest was furry and his long, heavy arms were scrooled with faded designs in tattoo.

"So, Meester Talbot!" the man with the shotgun laughed,

"I'll never bring up my kids to do this!"

"I'll never bring up my kids to do this!"

"I'll never bring up my kids to do this!"

"I'll never bring up my kids to do this!"

Twin Falls All Set as U. S. Okays High School Air Study

Twin Falls high school yesterday found itself several steps ahead of the United States civil aeronautics administration in the introduction of basic training courses on aeronautics in the high schools of the nation.

Announcement that the aeronautics administration, in cooperation with the U. S. office of education, would sponsor a course in flying was made by Dr. Clark M. Prader of the Eastern State college of Washington at a meeting in the local high school Friday afternoon. Dr. Prader, in an educational consultant of the civil aeronautics administration and the national office of education.

Education Attended

Attending the meeting here, which was called by J. W. Condie, state high school supervisor, were the superintendents of eight counties in the southeastern Idaho education district and 25 city school superintendents and principals in the area. Condie presided.

Dr. Prader announced that one of the 21 high schools in the nation selected by the government as primary flying schools under the direct supervision of the war department was Idaho Falls high school. However, he said that the aeronautics administration was endeavoring to induce all high schools to install a basic training course as a part of its regular curriculum. This could be accomplished.

The Twin Falls high school has already done, Supt. A. W. Morgan reported, provisions having been made six months ago for the installation of the course at the beginning of the 1942-43 school year.

"We will be more fortunate than most schools in the introduction of the course inasmuch as we already have an instructor," said Mr. Morgan. "The instructor is Miss Gladys White, who has been granted special permission by the government to complete her solo flying course by flying the 15 hours that she needs during the summer vacation period."

Morgan said that Miss White was an instructor in mathematics which he added to her adaptability as an instructor in the course. She has another who is a major in the U. S. air corps and, being a woman, she will be best suited to the high school facility through induction into the military service as the case might be if the instructor were a man.

Will Follow Program

Twin Falls high school's aeronautics course will follow that laid down by the civil aeronautics administration. Mr. Morgan declared. The course will be open to juniors and seniors, both boys and girls. It will be for a full year and will be regarded as any other high school laboratory science course and carry the same credit toward graduation.

The meeting also discussed substitute teachers' certificates, the University of Idaho summer session, an Americanism and recommended that a two weeks' course to train teachers in teaching aeronautics be instituted during August at University of Idaho, southern branch.

China Mop-Up Is Next Jap Move

By KIRKE L. HIMPSON
Wide World War Analyst

Even without the spur provided by this misadventure American flying officer, General Doolittle, and his men Japan's mop-up campaign in China has seemed the most logical Japanese move since China's Burma road was blocked.

The dangerous possibility of air attacks on Japan from bases in the great eastern body of China was too obvious to be ignored. The bomb attacks on Doolittle's planes scattered on Japanese cities merely made the danger more immediate than Tokyo had anticipated.

Yet, by Chinese estimates of the size of Japanese ground forces engaged, the Chinese clean-up campaign represents a relatively small troop concentration compared to the size of the job in hand. There is no reason for Chinese spokesmen to minimize the Japanese strength, quite the contrary. They are surely asking more Anglo-American help.

"Small" Force

Yet available Chungking advice places the aggregate force involved in the four-pronged Japanese offensive in China's eastern provinces at less than 150,000 men. And with that force, flanked by a relatively heavy air power concentration, the Japanese appear to be setting out to complete a job of breaking Chinese resistance or at least to sweep the United Nations frontier in China back far enough to safeguard Japan, Formosa and vital China sea traffic from air attack.

The greatest threat implied in American handling of Japanese cities, assuming that Doolittle's planes took off from China, was that the Japanese are convinced they did it to Formosa, a target the American fleet passed by. It lies in the China sea just across the narrow Formosa strait from the southeastern bend of the Chinese mainland coast.

Heavily fortified

Formosa is both heavily manned and deeply fortified. The nearness of Chinese mainland positions still in Chinese hands represented no serious threat to that Japanese Gibraltar or the China sea was traffic it protects until American air power became a factor in the war. China did not have the means to blast it.

Nevertheless, if the Japanese forces thrown into the rearguard China campaign are not far greater than yet indicated, either an early knockout for Chinese armies or elimination of the bombing threat from Chinese bases is impossible.

8,000 WILL TAKE PRE-FLIGHT WORK

GOING: May 23 (City)—Next fall approximately 8,000 students in almost all of Idaho's 180 high schools will be enrolled in courses pointing them toward service as military pilots. Dr. Prader, in an educational consultant of the civil aeronautics administration and the national office of education.

CHINA MOP-UP IS NEXT JAP MOVE

By KIRKE L. HIMPSON
Wide World War Analyst

Even without the spur provided by this misadventure American flying officer, General Doolittle, and his men Japan's mop-up campaign in China has seemed the most logical Japanese move since China's Burma road was blocked.

The dangerous possibility of air attacks on Japan from bases in the great eastern body of China was too obvious to be ignored. The bomb attacks on Doolittle's planes scattered on Japanese cities merely made the danger more immediate than Tokyo had anticipated.

Yet, by Chinese estimates of the size of Japanese ground forces engaged, the Chinese clean-up campaign represents a relatively small troop concentration compared to the size of the job in hand. There is no reason for Chinese spokesmen to minimize the Japanese strength, quite the contrary. They are surely asking more Anglo-American help.

"Small" Force

Yet available Chungking advice places the aggregate force involved in the four-pronged Japanese offensive in China's eastern provinces at less than 150,000 men. And with that force, flanked by a relatively heavy air power concentration, the Japanese appear to be setting out to complete a job of breaking Chinese resistance or at least to sweep the United Nations frontier in China back far enough to safeguard Japan, Formosa and vital China sea traffic from air attack.

The greatest threat implied in American handling of Japanese cities, assuming that Doolittle's planes took off from China, was that the Japanese are convinced they did it to Formosa, a target the American fleet passed by. It lies in the China sea just across the narrow Formosa strait from the southeastern bend of the Chinese mainland coast.

Heavily fortified

Formosa is both heavily manned and deeply fortified. The nearness of Chinese mainland positions still in Chinese hands represented no serious threat to that Japanese Gibraltar or the China sea was traffic it protects until American air power became a factor in the war. China did not have the means to blast it.

Nevertheless, if the Japanese forces thrown into the rearguard China campaign are not far greater than yet indicated, either an early knockout for Chinese armies or elimination of the bombing threat from Chinese bases is impossible.
