Powerful American and Jap Fleets Battle in Pacific

Navy Withdraws Details of Fight Until Conclusion

WASHINGTON, Nov. 14 (AP)—Powerful groups of American and Japanese warships were slugging it out in the vicinity of the Solomon islands today in an aftermath of a heavy American naval bombardment of enemy positions on Guadalcanal.

Both sides have "suffered losses," a navy communique said, but it added that no details would be reported while the battle continues because of the value of such information to the foe.

The communique described the battle as "a series of naval engagements." This was a shortcoming in that it meant that the battle was a series of engagements, rather than a single mass fight.

It seemed probable that aircraft were participating fully both as weapons of attack and as eyes of the opposing fleet. The communique made no mention of them.

Word of the fresh outbreak of sea warfare in and around the battle-scarred islands—where the United States and the Japanese are determined to hold—came from Tokyo.

The Japanese broadcast that they had lost two destroyers and that at least one had been badly damaged. They claimed "wholly successful" operations.

Except for sporadic bombardment of our positions by light Jap warships and attacks by American planes on Jap air bases, there had been no naval attacks of consequence in the Solomon area since Oct. 13.

The rapid advance, made possible by the recent encirclement and complete destruction of more than 500 Japs at Oivi and Gorari, represented the allies' first bid for a major foothold on the north coast—a step toward running the Japs out of all New Guinea.

French Defenses Battle Nazis in Key African City

LONDON, Sunday, Nov. 15 (AP)—Powerful American and British forces struck toward Tunis, by land, sea and air today for a showdown clash with German and Italian troops who continued to land in increasing numbers despite resistance of French forces reportedly led by Gen. Henri Giraud.

The exact position of the allied vanguard was not known, but some reports said U. S. and British ground troops were pouring over the Tunisian border, only 80 miles from Tunis, and that parachute troops were preparing to land in the capital.

These reports also said the German forces were being ordered to establish themselves in Tunis and Bizerte before the allies arrived, were rushing reinforcements both by sea and air.

REMEMBER WHAT CLAPPER SAID?

Raymond Clapper, whose column appears daily on the Times-News editorial page, is recognized by newspaper correspondents in Washington as the outstanding writer of his kind in the country.

His comments are quoted frequently by the leading news magazines because these publications recognize the weight and authenticity of the opinions he expresses on issues of major importance.

Clapper is an individualist by nature, who recognizes the right to express his views without fear or favor. His fairness and impartiality are characteristics that have won him widespread respect among his millions of newspaper readers.

Yet, Raymond Clapper might be included in the "Yes Men" category of those who, against whom much criticism has been directed by individuals high in administrative office.

Now that the major activity in the present world war centers in North Africa, it is interesting to recall that Raymond Clapper foresaw this development many months ago.

Readers of the Times-News will remember that he decided as early as last March to make a plane trip to Cairo which he regarded as the greatest point in the war from which to view what he saw in the offing. They will recall also a number of his predictions:

"After the war is over, when the full story can be told of the air supply route across the jungles and deserts of Africa. It will make a chapter in the legends of American oceanography."

"The war has taken a turn that will make the middle east the critical center of the United Nations' effort. The middle east has been a background for ages. It is the bridge connecting Europe and Africa. It is the east of the Libyan desert battleground and west of the Japanese advance. It is the route to Russia, India and China. Thus the middle east is the center where supplies can be assembled and shifted to any front. It is the place where the United Nations can get the inside position, instead of being outside on the rim.

"If it seems to many of you in America that the middle east is a remote and inaccessible area, it should be shifted to your mind that it has the great advantage of getting around the problem of fighting a two-ocean war with a one-ocean navy."

"The way that Raymond Clapper, one of the 'Yes Men' strategists, wrote from Cairo on March 19 and 20, judging the military developments, the readers of the Times-News can determine for themselves if Raymond Clapper knew what he was talking about.

CAN'T TAKE THE GAFF

No proposed legislative restriction on the army's conduct of the war thus far has aroused the same amount of protest as the brain-child of Sen. W. Lee "Poppy" O'Daniel of Fort Worth, Tex., requiring that all 18 and 19-year-old soldiers be given a full year's training before being sent overseas.

O'Daniel's idea was presented to the senate just before the congressmen went home to vote, in the form of an amendment to the amendment of the selective service law which would lower the draft age from 20 to 18. It was among the first things to be taken up when the senators got down to business again after the election headache was over. It was finally rejected.

You can get pretty maddened over the idea that headless boys should not be sent to the front, and you can collect a lot of sinners who are not from the front. These boys protesting against sending their "babies" to the war. Pappy O'Daniel, who has never been averse to jerking a tear or pulling a gag for an emotional buildup, undoubtedly got a lot of support for his amendment from this element.

Sure, there was an argument to be made in favor of drafting the old coots first... sending off to war the old men of 35 and 45 who have already lived half their lives and haven't made much out of them. Why couldn't these men go first and give the boys half their age a chance to stay at home a little longer and make up for the mistakes of their seniors?

Right at this point that the argument against drafting the young men of 18 and 19 fell down. For the experience of the army thus far is that too many of these old men of 40 and more simply can't take the gaff.

FIRST, STOP THE WASTE

Arguments in favor of manpower mobilization legislation are being made. They will gain weight, however, when the WPA is abolished completely. So long as the federal government is making work with which to support employable men and women, it is hard to convince Americans that they should be shifted into and out of jobs like cards in a deck.

HERO—The working and winning of the famous General Giraud to our side demonstrated to the world that the French people favor the allied cause over the Vichy government and will welcome a triumph of the democracies. The history is one of the stirring individual exploits of the war.

The famous commander, who escaped from a German prison at the last minute, found himself out of an enemy fortress six months ago. His ability to rope a step wall at his age inspired suggestions that his getaway was when and where he was being used by the Nazis. But they placed a price on his head and demanded his return from Petain and Darlan. He was too popular with the people to be used for the marshall and admiral to hand him back to Berlin. Despite the reward for his recapture he moved about freely in Vichy.

He immediately went on the radio with a request that he should be allowed to return to France as a liberator. His action, which may account for the speedy fall of the key city, started the old man in motion. He landed in Algiers, and he was warmly greeted, assured the home folks that Giraud was loyal and gave out a letter in which he was supposed to be talking to the Vichy government. Dear Pot Shots: Now ain't that a load? This war is getting awfully long and I can see right now that a lot of people are going to endure terrible privation. According to a front page item from Duke, Illinois, rationing starts Monday in that community. We have two quarters of distilled spirits per year. How are people going to get by on this drastically restricted supply of liquor? How are they going to keep happy, keep on their toes, keep plugging away at the war effort when all they can buy is two quarters of liquor? I tell you citizens are getting awfully fed up.

What a splendid idea! I tell you citizens are getting awfully fed up. I tell you citizens are getting awfully fed up. I tell you citizens are getting awfully fed up. I tell you citizens are getting awfully fed up.

The hatred of the war lords is not so much a result of wanting to emigrate as it is being told by Uncle Sam that they are not wanted.

WARM RECEPTION

CHAPTER XXVIII

"Quiet! Straighten up! Oh, hurry, everybody, hurry! The dinner table—I had everything set. The chairs—my clothes—my hat—my hat—my hat was incoherent but she was working furiously too. Suddenly the others picked up. The living room looked like a wreck one moment and looked neat the next. In the case of Blythe and Duane's fight with the two detectives, things hadn't been broken, the detective called Ed over to the window and peered out.

"So that's them, eh?" he said.

"Know them, by gosh!"

"I don't get it," Duane Hogan began. "Do you mean to tell me, Nancy, or Ed, that you've seen them?"

Nancy looked desperate. "I tell you we haven't time to talk now! Duane, dump those clothes back in the closet. And Scott's boys, I've got to get an apron and look calm! Don't you understand? Calm!"

"But how can—"

The detective spoke again. "Mr. Hale's right. Help her get through with it. We got to have proof! Evidence!"

"Yes! Oh, Duane—you and Blythe, come with me!"

Practically none the back to herd all of them right back into that same closet.

What the puzzled Duane in. Then Nancy, next the two detectives themselves. All the while she was steep-whispering to the others.

"You must be absolutely quiet!—they're coming around the building. They'll be carrying a radio with them start up the stairs. You get back in the closet. Way back! It's big. They need to store your equipment there. Back against the wall, all of you. Remember the gambler's rule to hide in there, too, and they may come snooping, so you—"

"Mrs. Hale, you make 'em talk again, get a detective asked. Make 'em repeat what they said to you before. Everything! And don't give 'em a chance to leave you. They'll have guns that ain't loaded with blanks!"

"Bly-th-h-h-h!" warned Nancy.

Next moment the closet door closed.

It was horrible. But she wasn't trying to do anything mean. Instead, she was—

"I wasn't talking about Nancy,"

Nancy's footsteps again were tripping nervously around outside. One of the detectives felt back through the darkness and touched Blythe in warning to be still. But Duane didn't know that.

"Bly-th-h-h!" said he, whispering ever so low, right at her cheek, "you had the courage... to come up here alone! To try 'em!"

"Bly-th-h-h!" the detective ventured, just in time.

All four of the people here in the closet were suddenly tense again. Nancy was opening her front door!

"Hello!" they heard Nancy say, flat tone. "Come in."

There was quite a long pause.

"You're in the closet room, aren't you?" the new arrivals talked in the living room, so vivid was the drama in their minds.

"What about it?" they heard a man's voice ask. "Everything all right?"

"You wanted to see for yourself," Nancy reminded them.

"Two men slowly entered her room and closed the door, careful to conceal the lock that Duane Hogan had broken. Blythe recognized the voice of the man. It was the same brassy gent who had first called.

"Did you bring the money?" Nancy was admirably cool now.

"New mind about the money? We got it, all right. We want to see you bring your act first. We don't intend to get ripped this time."

"What do you mean?"

"Miller took the money! First, they didn't fix the game. You better fix it! Get me?"

"I understand," Nancy said.

"He's got a payoff coming to him. We ain't had time yet. But you— you stick by us, see and you'll have everything like. Get me? You got what it takes, like I told you. I like your mood."

"Do you?"

"Sure—sure—kidd! You got clunk. Know what I mean? You'd say, 'Hi, Blythe!'"

"You want to him?" said the man Blythe, "Aluminum!"

"Can you use me in the camera-filage department?"

10-12 CENT GAIN IN TURKEY PRICE

BALT LAKE CITY, Nov. 14 (AP)—This year's Thanksgiving turkey cost the average American family 10 to 12 cents more a pound than last year, but the quality was 20 to 30 cents above average and there are more birds available, according to Herbert Meyers, Salt Lake City marketing expert.

The price of turkeys already has been frozen under a compulsory schedule by the office of price administration to prevent unwarranted price increases.

"There's a very good crop this year—about one per cent larger than last year," Meyers said today.

In explaining that prices would be 10 to 12 cents more a pound this year than in 1941, Meyers explained that an arbitrary price for the birds had been fixed by the OPA and that actual sales prices would fluctuate only within the fixed ceiling.

The ceiling is determined by the weight and grade of the bird. For example, the growers' price, FOB New York, for a grade B, "light" turkey of 16 to 20 cents is 33½ cents a pound. To this may be added a maximum of 15 per cent for delivery and handling charges and a retailer's charge of not more than 20 per cent.

The price paid for turkeys of other weights and grades, FOB New York, to growers ranges from 46 cents a pound for prime birds to 40 cents a pound for 3½ cent grade C or "commercial" grade turkeys weighing 20 pounds and over.

Only one per cent of the turkeys grown weigh 10 pounds or less. Most hens weigh from 12 to 14 pounds; toms from 20 to 25 pounds. The demand for the big tons, usually, is high and they are the object of purchases by the armed forces.

PROTESTS FILED ON SPUD CEILING

BOISE, Ida., Nov. 14 (AP)—Idaho OPA Director C. C. Anderson said today he would recall immediately to the Denver regional office the apparently numerous protests of Oem state potato growers against recently imposed price ceilings on potatoes.

Anderson conferred today with James Newport, state commissioner of agriculture, and potato dealers and growers. Earlier he had been in contact with Idaho Falls where growers held a mass meeting in protest against the ceilings last night.

"OPA administrators explained that the ceilings on all varieties of Idaho potatoes, U. S. No. 1 grade, has been fixed at $1.05 per cwt. of a bopping point.

"The ceiling in Montana is $2.25 and for Wyoming $2.15, said Anderson.

"OPA producers cannot understand why their ceiling has been placed under the Montana and Wyoming when the freight rates are almost identical.

"They feel discrimination against Idaho potatoes, and as OPA administrators are not releasing their protests and certain facts in the matter to the Denver regional office where a meeting of price administrators is now in session."

No Ruling for Tie Vote—So AAA Convention Postponed

A lot of water has flowed down the Snake river since the agricultural adjustment administration act was passed in Washington, but it has taken all this time to discover that the fellow who wrote the book covering its operation forgot a really important matter. He forgot to write in what a community election a delegate to a county AAA convention should do in case of a tie.

For that reason, there was no county convention at the AAA office here yesterday, as scheduled. And neither will there be until the AAA chief in Boise inform Walter Boser, present chairman of the county AAA committee, what to do in the matter.

East End Tie

The tie vote realized at the Hanover-Kimberly community meeting in the agricultural building of the Kimberly high school early last week, was decided to hold an alternate meeting Friday night but in the meantime it was learned that 10 days had elapsed between meetings and that there was no provision in the AAA regulations for breaking the tie.

However, the convention might have been postponed anyway because the Boise committee had forgotten to send in the names of its committee members and delegate to the convention.

All the other communities held meetings with the following results: Twin Falls community: A. S. Mavin, two, chairman and delegate; to the convention; R. C. Warwick, route three, vice-chairman; S. B. Cron, route one, first alternate member; Roy J. Evans, route one, second alternate member, and Don Albini, secretary.

Filer Choices

Filer community: Fred Lutz, Filer, chairman and delegate; Earl V. Johnson, route one, Filer, vice-chairman, secretary and alternate delegate; Claude F. Oliver, route two, Filer, regular member; Roscoe

Christmas Seals Will Go Out Soon

Christmas seals, which citizens of Twin Falls will receive in the mail Nov. 23, have been received here and Mrs. E. R. Spafford, local chairman of mail sales, has been busy the past several days preparing them for mailing.

Other Christmas seal sales chairmen throughout the county have also received their allotment of the seals.

The annual Christmas seal sale, the sole support of the Idaho Anti-Tuberculosis association, is the only appeal for funds made during the year.

Christmas seals on Twin Falls county's holiday mail has become such a tradition that few people think of sending out packages, letters and greeting cards without their bearing the seals, according to Mrs. H. E. DeLia, county chairman.

PATRIOTS

The feasting on candy and "goodies" that the pupils of the Marrow country school are doing these days is wide of their eyes — through show windows only.

That's what Ralph L. Brown, principal of the school, said today, as he reported that his 74 pupils had purchased $206.60 in war bonds and stamps in the last four weeks.

The money for the bonds and stamps principally from the children's spending money — money that would have gone to the candy and "goodies."

Blaine Pair Wins Grazing Land Title

BOISE, Nov. 14 (AP)—Title to 640 acres of grazing land in Blaine county was ordered retained by George N. and Theima Falls in a federal district court opinion written today by Judge C. C. Cavanah.

The decision cited a suit brought by the government seeking to void the certificate and patent issued in 1907 on an original survey in violation of continuity of residence.

The court ruled the nature of the property made it impossible to reside there all the time.

Treasurer Ernest F. Stettler, in the sole support of the Idaho Anti-Tuberculosis association, is the only appeal for funds made during the year.
