Hardest Fighting Of War Rages at Mareth Line Gap

By VIRGIL PINKLEY

ALLIED HEADQUARTERS, NORTH AFRICA, March 26 (U.P.)—The hardest fighting of the north African war is raging in the bloody breach that the British eighth army has driven in the Mareth line, and front reports indicated today that Marshal Erwin Rommel has been forced to split his armored forces into four units to oppose allied columns.

Critical Spot

The British eighth army, though its first breach in the Mareth line was nearly wiped out by combining pressure in Tunisia with American forces to win Rommel's Afrika korps. The map above shows the British action on the Mareth line.

Controlling ships

The allied air force is winning control of the Tunisian skies. Yesterday's score was 10 enemy planes shot down, 10 destroyed, 10 captured. In addition, the allied bombers carried out destructive raids on enemy supply lines and bases.

One of the heaviest raids was on the Tunisian coast. Bombers escorted by P-38 Lightnings and British Spitfires, attacked the docks and air bases near the coast. One raid on a ferry pilot described the "Potters" bombing as the most accurate he had ever seen. One medium and two small bomber ships were hit and flames leapt 100 feet into the air from the stock area.

In some cases the hits could not get the planes off the ground in time to escape the raiders.

Strike at Airport

Three yesterday afternoon B-24 Mitchell medium bombers and Mustang fighters attacked the Tunisian coast. On the first raid the pilots of the Mitchell group were shot down, one of the Mustangs was shot down, and the other two were shot down.

It is believed that the Tunisian coast is now under allied control. The enemy is being driven back to the sea.

Earth Subsidence Damages Homes

PITTSBURGH, Pa., March 25 (AP)—The main movement of a destructive earth, cracking mine subsidence stopped today after damaging between 100 and 200 homes, a 4000-foot high school building and streets, and causing damage running into the thousands of dollars in this eastern Pennsylvania anthracite city of 18,000.

Inspector Daniel Connolly informed Mayor John J. Reilly of the stoppage after touring mine workings under the foot of the affected area, where sections of earth had sunk throughout the night in one of the semi-caves in the eastern part of the city.

Inspector Connolly said that further "puffs" could be expected.

Puffs spread among many residents when the mine began to rumble and crack about 7:30 last night over the No. 8 mine of the Pagnottelli enterprises in the heart of the residential area. Yawning crevices opened in pavements and lawns. Hoars to 20 feet deep appeared in cellar floors. Homes were twisted, plaster cracked and windows broken.

A NEW TREND IN LABOR

To the credit of many who are working under the ironclad rules of the labor unions, there is growing threat of being herded around by unscrupulous leaders.

There are increasing numbers of workers returning from the production centers for the reason that they have found the dictatorship over labor altogether too unsavory.

Men who at first reconciled themselves to the fact that they could not secure war work without becoming members of a union, have too much American blood in their veins to be treated as they were puppets.

Not only do they object to the initiation fees and dues, but they resent the tendency toward being denied a voice in union affairs. Being idle while rival unions wrangle over jurisdictional matters, when they would much prefer to be working, is another condition of which they disapprove.

As a good example of this reaction that is coming about, 33 members of the Chicago elevator operators' union have brought suit to end control of their organization by the C. I. O. building service employees' international union, alleging that the international has given their union "a reputation as a gangster-ridden labor organization."

In demanding an accounting of union funds, they charge the defendants with depredation of the union treasury, exploitation of the members, and a denial of freedom of speech at union meetings.

Unfortunately, union labor as a whole is being subjected to a growing stigma as a result of its leadership, and it is for this reason that the laborers themselves are not responsible.

It is only reasonable that a large percentage of union labor is eager to work and serve the country, and that the laborers themselves are not responsible.

THOUGHTLESSNESS THAT HURTS

We were moved by a conversation we had the other day with a Twin Falls mother who has several sons in the service. Almost tearfully, she told of her heart-breaking experience when someone makes a slighting remark about our armed forces, or complains about civilian inconveniences.

This mother, as loyal and patriotic as any you will find in the country, is like all other mothers who have sons in the service of the United States. The welfare of her sons naturally is foremost in her mind.

And like many of such mothers, she is devoting considerable of her time in comforting her boys in the war effort in every way she can, in the belief that by no doing she is not only adding to the comfort, morale and safety of her own sons, but to all other men in the service as well.

They know what our boys might be going through, right at this very moment, she said, "And when you hear the remarks that some people make so thoughtlessly, it really hurts."

Knowing that we are now surrounded by fathers of boys who are making the supreme sacrifice, isn't this a point that every last one of us should consider seriously? Shouldn't we be doubly careful in what we do and say, lest these mothers and fathers believe we are faith in the very principles for which their sons are fighting?

A DUCK THAT CAN'T FLY

The height of something or other in lame-duck appointments was achieved when the Honorable Josh Lee, ex-senator from Oklahoma, was named as a member of the civil control board.

Up to the time he was put on the board he had never been up in an airplane. When he went to Mexico City to attend a recent international conference on air travel, he went by train.

The official explanation is that the new board member's family doesn't want him to fly.

But Josh has tackled his new job with vim and enthusiasm, has hired a smart young man as his assistant, and is boning up on all that pertains to aviation, though strictly on a ground school, pre-flight basis.

Almost any day now, you can expect Josh to make his maiden flight in one of them airplanes. Maybe they're to stay.

MARINES IN SKIRTS

Women who are joining the marine corps' new auxiliary have struck a refreshing note by not inventing some intricate name in order that the initials might spell out an appropriate nickname.

Major Ruth Cheney, auxiliary commander, said that the "marines" are actually proud of their capitalizing the word with her intention, name and the fact that they wanted to share with us showed that they really wanted to be.

Applying the good judgment of marines in skirts, we still wonder how long it will be before somebody dubs them "marinettes."

TUCKER'S NATIONAL CHIRLIGIG

MONEY—House members oppose almost unanimously John L. Lewis's demand for a two-dollar-a-day increase for his coal miners. The ground that the extra pay would stimulate inflation.

Meanwhile, all save four men in the House have agreed to the second measure, which would provide an additional two billion dollars for the treasury.

The political watchdogs of the treasury on both sides of the aisle are themselves hoarse in favor of a 3 1/2 per cent raise in the compensation of postal clerks. Fifty per cent, however, is the figure proposed in the 40 minutes allocated for debate.

RAY TUCKER, the patriotic Minority Leader Joseph W. Martin Jr., John Tamm, ranking Republican on appropriations, Allen Treadway, ranking Democrat on the same committee, and Assistant Speaker "Bill" Dwyer of Pennsylvania, head majority leaders also endorsed the proposal, which is that the $200 annual salary for postal clerks after the war. It also restores the 40-hour week and provides time-and-a-half for overtime.

Other workers for Uncle Sam will apply pressure for more money as a result of passage of this bill. If their requests are granted, the federal pay roll will be upped two billion dollars yearly.

DUCE—The office of war information's least popular critics is the radio bureau. Enter David Granger and crew to monopolize the short-wave channels from dawn to dusk and then around the clock again. They are telling dirty, neutral and hostile stories of allied victories and the mounting production total of weapons.

The OWI broadcast more than 2500 programs a week in 23 languages, and against only 10 speeches every seven days at the start of 1942. The federal agency has taken over all short-wave stations and radio stations, including men skilled in recording and making transcriptions. In countries like Turkey, Spain and Portugal we advertise in the newspapers the time and content of these broadcasts so that folks there will turn on their dials. Our strategists estimate that if only one person out of a thousand hears the pro-United Nations news, it will help break down enemy morale.

Laters will talk. The microphone outpourings were so explosive in the few weeks after our troops landed in North Africa that Berlin described it as "propaganda on a scale never heard before." Hitler immediately launched a new drive against "radio criminals," which his propaganda minister, Joseph Goebbels, said was "a new and more effective way of attacking the enemy."

The Italians are particularly nettled by Major P. H. H. Guards of New York, who speaks at least once a week. He appeals to Mussolini's spirit to repudiate the Axis and to join the fight for the freedom of Rome. In retaliatory attacks they characterize Hinton as "an imbecile and a common scoundrel."

RIENANZING—No member of the international quartet will admit it, but the authors of the senate resolution committing the United States to postwar policing and financing of the allies—Senators Ball of Minnesota, Burton of Ohio, Hatch of New Mexico and Hiram Bingham of Utah—have been given the credit that they had full White House support for their scheme. As comparatively inexperienced statesmen, they proceeded on the assumption that they would get along. Now it appears that they may be forced and let down in a big way.

Now it appears that they may be forced and let down in a big way. The D. R. wants to condition national thought to the idea which they espouse, although he shies away from the responsibility of promoting such a program. He is not alone in this. He is joined by a conglomerate lot with nothing in common—not even prestige or influence—called the Presidential torch which they are to carry.

They are to be guided by the assignment, believing it would win them headlines and votes. What they did not realize was that the assignment was to be a conglomerate lot with nothing in common—not even prestige or influence—called the Presidential torch which they are to carry.

No Hams for White House Sauerkraut!

By MARGARET KERNOLLE
WASHINGTON, March 25 (AP)—A hamoked ham? No, it's a hamoked ham! The White House for eight months.

It was the exclamation of the nation's No. 1 housekeeper, Mrs. Nellie D. Galt, as she stood at the side of the White House kitchen.

"I haven't even seen a hamoked ham," the housekeeper said, explaining that she's kept account of all meat in the first family's kitchen for a year.

Meatless Days
Folks at the White House face meatless days too, she insisted, because it's the best way to work meat rationing.

First she'll stretch meat as far as she can. But even in advance of meat rationing, White House cooks have skidded against the scarcity which caught other kitchens occasionally. Until recently they couldn't get corned beef. There's been less and less poultry lately, and the size of chickens changed from an average of four and five pounds to 2½ pounds. No broilers were available lately, and roasting chickens were used for fried chickens at the White House.

Butter for breakfast—only three days, the White House no longer has food saved in butter. It substitutes lard. Coffee's been kept to one cup a day for everybody but foreign visitors, Mrs. Nesbitt asserted.

Few Desserts
Days for desserts dwindle. If a White House recipe has a dessert, it gets no salad or the other way around. Not even formal dinners go beyond three courses after last fall. Pies and ice creams are fairly rare desserts but fruit ice creams take precedence over creamy ice creams and are better anyway, Mrs. Nesbitt said.

Last month the first hush of this land checked its sugar count. Because the White House had a surplus of sugar. Not a pound more than the regular allowance was used, the housekeeper explained proudly.

Her shopping has to be the same "catch as catch can" as any other American housekeeper's. She goes out a little while now and then to build that backlog she must have for visitors, even though the number of visitors has been cut.

Her "Stretches"
Here are favorite foods which will be White House menu-stretches: Stuffed peppers, stew, ham, scalloped potatoes, and mushrooms with chicken scraps, spaghetti with meat sauce, cut down from the "good old American size" to mere nibbles, curries or omelets with meat tidbits.

Croquettes for a satisfying meal in themselves; miniature soup or fish chowders, "both good meals in themselves," creamed chenevies (which are not rationed) for a satisfying light meal, gumbo (shakes "good light meal even for children if less spiced), stuffed eggs (merely bits of stuffing), baked beans with any kind of beans, deviled meat and cereals.

USO Center Will Stage Open House

The Twin Falls USO will hold open house for the public from 3 to 6 p.m. Sunday, March 28, according to announcement by Mrs. W. C. Clouche, chairman of the USO council.

The USO here is one of 1,200 such organizations operating in 41 states.

The District of Columbia, and off-shore bases. Since opening last September, the Twin Falls USO has served 1,011 members of U.S. military forces. This number includes men from the Wendover air base and from Boise, men home on furlough or passing through, and the regular patrons from the military police unit at Hunt.

"We have provided countless shaves, many pounds of writing paper, and countless incidents," said Mrs. Clouche. "We have heard tales of tragedy and tales of adventure. We have had dances and parties. We have made these men feel that Twin Falls likes them all and that they are most welcome to be here. In other words, we have tried to do for these men what you are doing that someone else is doing for your own."

The Twin Falls USO center is not a national affair. It is the product of the efforts of all the people of the county. Everything we have is the result of your generosity. We think it is high time that you all come to see it at the same time that the nation's fathers and mothers, wives, sisters and brothers are visiting USO centers from coast to coast.

Those who will greet visitors and conduct them around the center, in addition to Mrs. Clouche, are Mrs. Robert Haller, Mrs. R. P. Parry, other members of the county council, and several hostesses.

Camp Fire Shows Work on Honors

Those girls had on exhibition, aprons, handkerchiefs, shirts, saltwater posters and jars of apple sauce. Perhaps the most outstanding article was the beaded headband, which has been awarded a national Shasta honor, while a pair of salt and pepper shakers made from a double section of bamboo was unique.

YANK RAID PUTS U-BOAT BASE OUT

UNITED STATES EIGHTH BOMBER COMMAND HEAD-QUARTERS, England, March 23.—The United States Flying Fortress-laborator raid on the Vegesack submarine and shipbuilding yards last Thursday night, which had been for a considerable period, Brig. Gen. Newton Longfellow, chief of the eighth bomber command, said today.

The raid on the U-boat supply center and railroad yards at Vegesack, a "perfect example of the most devastating raid of its kind in the war," Longfellow said.

Longfellow's disclosures were made in a message to the personnel of his command a day after Maj. Gen. R. C. Eaker's pronouncement that the American high-altitude precision daylight bombing had passed the experimental stage with the Vegesack raid.

Longfellow described the March 4 raid on Hamm, when many direct hits inflicted heavy destruction in the railroad yards, as a "perfect example of what Germany may expect from this command."

"In the future," he said, "we hope to have sufficient force to make comfortable beds during daylight hours to those now being made by the RAP during hours of darkness."

"You have learned many important lessons. You have developed a new aerial technique and made adaptations in your equipment that has increased its effectiveness."

Rationettes

By The Associated Press

A Boston resident tried making his own butter from milk—and found it would cost $1.70 to $1.80 a pound.

Meat ration coupons will be in the same class as "not sufficient funds" checks if the markets haven't enough to sell, said Secretary T. W. Tinger of the Seattle Retail Meat Dealers association.

"The way people have been buying food would think they hadn't had meat in weeks," observed an Okla. City dealer. Heavy buying there early this week cleaned out stocks of beef and most of the pork.

Rumors that soap sales would be suspended—called fantastic by OPA officials—caused a run on Osmia stores.

St. Paul packers received telephone calls asking where sizable cuts of beef or ham could be bought. They said they didn't know, either.

A national chain, with San Francisco headquarters, said point rationing means slowing up sales. It estimated a salesman who took in $500 trade a day could handle only $100-$125 a day when the point system begins.

Governors Will Confer April 9

SALT LAKE CITY, March 25.—Gov. Herbert B. Maw said he had received letters from the governors or their representatives from Montana, Wyoming, Idaho, Nevada, California, Washington, Oregon and Colorado would attend a conference here April 9 and 10 to discuss mutual problems.

Governors of Arizona and New Mexico have not replied to his invitation, he said.

SPUD ACRES MAY SET IDAHO MARK

BOISE, March 21.—Planting of potatoes, which Idaho is nationally renowned, plus acreages of barley and dry peas may set all-time records this year.

The federal bureau of agricultural economics said increases over last year's acreages also were expected for spring wheat, oats and dry beans.

Acreages sown in sugar beets, corn and late hay will be smaller than in 1942. Department of agriculture puts for 1943 probably will be exceeded in wheat, oats, barley and potatoes, but fall short in corn, dry beans, dry peas, beets, hay and flax.

The bureau's report stressed the importance of increases forecast in the face of "serious production difficulties such as shortages of labor and machinery."

Acreages for this year and last include: beans, 155,000, 141,000; dry peas, 311,000, 271,000; potatoes, 759,000, 640,000; corn, 103,000, 135,000.

MEAT PERMIT IN EFFECT APRIL 1

BOISE, March 25.—Campaign of the U. S. department of agriculture to stamp out the black market in meat with a federal stamp on each wholesale cut, will begin April 1, according to a statement issued by the department today.

"The stamp any meat buyer can demand to see on the wholesale cuts in his butcher's cabinet," said the department, "is the permit number issued to each slaughterer, including farmers who slaughter for sale."

"After April 1, any meat sold not bearing a permit stamp will be black-marketed meat."

He said permits are issued without charge by the county USDA boards to farmers who slaughtered less than 10,000 pounds of live weight in 1942; butchers who killed between 10,000 and 50,000 pounds in 1942; and packers who killed more than 50,000 pounds are already operating under a quota system.

Farmers without records will be allowed to kill 200 pounds of meat for sale, or three head of livestock, which may not include more than one head of cattle. Farmers who kill for home consumption do not need to obtain permit.

Nazis March East—in Russia—As Prisoners

—NEA Photo, Passed by Censor— In an attitude reminiscent of a vanquished Napoleon, German General von Daniel (second from right) is shown striding across the snow after the surrender of Hitler's sixth army at Stalingrad. These Questions and Answers Clarify Meat Point-Rationing

WASHINGTON, March 25 (UP)—Questions and official answers about meat point-rationing.

Q. How many pounds of meat will I be able to buy for each point in my family ration book?

A. You are not on a "per pound" meat ration. What amount you get depends on the cut of meat you buy, and what other rationed foods you wish to buy with your ration stamps. You will have 16 points per person to spend each week for meat, cheese, canned fish, and fats and oils together.

Q. Will I get more meat for my stamps if I buy cuts of higher point value? A. Not necessarily. Point values are determined by a number of factors in addition to the amount of edible meat per pound. Porterhouse steak, for example, worth eight points per pound, has a large bone, but weighs only six points, has no bone at all.

Q. When rationing begins, can I be sure that I will find all the cuts of meat listed on the table of consumer point values in every store? A. Probably not. In localities where there have been shortages of meat, it may take a little time before markets will have a complete assortment.

Q. Will chain stores, as well as high-priced meat markets, all charge the same number of points per pound for the same cut of meat? A. Yes. The values are the same all over the country.

Q. What should I do if the butcher cuts off a larger piece of meat than I asked for and that costs more points than I want to spend for meat? A. As a rule, the butcher will be able to reduce the cut to conform to the available points. Where this is impossible, you may be asked to choose another cut.

Q. How will the butcher set the point value of a boned rolled roast? He will weigh the roast with the bone in to determine its point value. He may then remove the

Sturdy Pigeons Help to Fight Axis Subs in American Area

By HAMILTON FARON
WASHINGTON, March 25 (AP)—Pigeons are helping to fight Axis submarines off the coasts of North America, according to a statement today from the War Relocation Authority.

The hasty little birds, which can fly hundreds of miles a day, also are saving lives and winning decorations.

Despite the mechanization of modern warfare, pigeons are still used in the air force.

Radio for a time threatened to push them aside. Walkie-talkies took their place for short distance communications. Short-wave radio handled messages over longer distances more speedily.

But there was a hitch or two. For one thing, radio could go out of order and repairs couldn't be made on the spot.

Can Intercept Signals

More important, though, was the fact that the enemy always could pick up radio signals. Maybe he couldn't read the codes, but he could tell a message was being sent.

That's important in anti-submarine work. A plane flying high over the sea can spot a sub beneath the surface. But the sub isn't always ready to dump bombs. Sometimes he has to call for help. He already used his bombs. When he radioed the sub's location to his base, the sub heard his signals and headed away—fast.

Now, when a sub is sighted, the pilot doesn't have to open his radio key. Instead, he opens a hatch and releases a pigeon. The bird heads for home at better than 40 miles an hour—some with favorable winds have done close to 100—and delivers the information on latitude and longitude of a sub. Other planes arrive without radio silence being broken. They'll get the sub.

It's a Secret

Just how many times pigeons have played a part in ridding the seas of another underwater raider can't be made known. Air force men merely smile—"They're doing their work."

They're doing a lot more than battle the subs, too. Under the recently established program to use pigeons in the air force, pigeons are working in the ferry command, the transport command, with aerial troop transports, with paratroopers, and in the big bombers that are smashing at Axis industry and shipping. Prison they'll soon fly with all those jobs their principal work.

But this information in the event of radio failure or under conditions when radio silence must be maintained.

600 Miles a Day

In their new assignments the pigeons are expected to fly home this information in the event a plane is forced down at sea or in the wilderness. They can travel an average of 600 miles a day over the sea, and when they tire, they'll go to the nearest ship and perch in the rigging.

"If Captain Rickenbacker had had pigeons and had released them, they would have landed on the first ship and rescue parties would have reached Rickenbacker in possibly a couple of days," said Captain Thomas MacClure, who is directing the pigeon program for the air force. Rickenbacker was at sea in a rubber raft for 21 days.

MacClure, a Scot who has raised carrier pigeons big since he was eight years old, has every statistic at his fingertips about the use of the feathered members of the air force. Most of the figures are military secrets. They include data on heights at which pigeons can be released from planes—well above the height where humans must don oxygen masks; speed of planes at the time pigeons are released—"We haven't found too fast a speed yet"; the number of pigeons to be used by the air force—"You can say thousands of thousands."

Thousands of the birds already are in service outside the United States, he said, and before long they'll be sent to Europe to expect to have these birds.

There's no secret about the manner of release. MacClure says that birds will get along all right so long as they are put out of a plane nose forward and downward. They drop like a bullet for a time, then begin soaring and head for home.

Their training is simple. Young birds are developed a method of training birds to fly for two-way birds of the air corps. MacClure has developed a method of training birds to fly for two-way birds of the air corps. MacClure has developed a method of training birds to fly for two-way birds of the air corps. Major Says Mareth Line Fight Fiercer Than Alamein Battle

By DON WHITEHEAD
WITH THE BRITISH EIGHTH ARMY AT THE MARETH LINE, March 24 (Delayed)—"The German's hand may have trembled a little as he pulled the trigger, or the confusion of crashing shells may have jarred his rifle the slightest ripple—anyway the bullet missed the young English major's heart by an inch or so.

It drifted near toward his through his left arm and side and warm blood ran down.

The wound was painful but not serious, so the major led his men through a hell of gunfire to drive the first wedge into Field Marshal Erwin Rommel's Mareth line in a remarkable display of courage.

We found him in a medical dressing station near the front a few hours after he had returned from a mission.

Enemy Shelling Was "Hell"

The major began to talk in a low voice:

"I can't understand it. I can't understand how we lost so few men. The enemy's shelling and machine-gun fire were hell. At Alamein? It couldn't compare with what we went through tonight and here.

"We got into position at 11:30 last night near the enemy positions along the West Wall. The moon was very bright. No cover was there than the Germans began pouring out of the position with their hands up—200 of them, some Germans, most of them Italian. They had had enough.

"An Italian doctor among the prisoners directed my wound. He said he expected Rommel's army to be driven from Africa and the war would end by next October. He wasn't a bad chap.

"By 3 o'clock we were dug in to hold the position and we were using the strong point taken from the enemy. I was able to send back here for medical assistance.

"But there is one thing I can't understand—why we lost so few men."

Cross Minefield

"We crossed an enemy minefield in a gap made by the sappers. Then we came to the wall and we slid down the side. We ran through machine-gun fire to the shelter of the west bank in pyramid fashion—you know three men on the bottom, two standing on their shoulders and one on top of them.

"We had practiced scaling banks like this so we knew what to do. I went over first, the others followed me.

"We crossed an anti-tank ditch the same way and then they saw us coming. They opened up with rifles and machine-guns through all in the concrete.

"There was barbed wire around the positions. We sawed us and cut our way through and jumped into the ditch surrounding the position like a moat. We were throwing land grenades, aiming at the concrete silos. Some of them went inside.

"And then they cracked. A few minutes before they had been fighting like mad. Suddenly they came

Sailor Kills Japanese foe In Sea Fight

BOSTON, March 25 (AP)—Wounded and drowsy overboard when his transport sank, a 23-year-old coast guardman choked and drowned a Japanese sailor after a terrible struggle in Guadalcanal waters, the first naval duel disclosed.

Marine Major George T. Rhodes

if Amdenau, B. C., told how despite three shrapnel wounds he swam to a struggling figure by mistaking for a shipmate.

Tap Grabs Throat

A sudden burst of flame from his burning ship "blinded the swimmer as a Japanese seconds before the other grabbed his throat and attempted to tear off his lifejacket."

"It was so weak from loss of blood and couldn't do much at first," Rhodes said. "We fought in the water and under it for I don't know how long and I could hear him muttering in Japanese.

Rhodes said he finally loosened the sailor's grip and swung at him with his fist.

"It was kind of hard swinging in the water with my lifejacket on but I managed to give him a good wallop on the chin and he gurgled and went down. That's the last I saw of him," Rhodes added.

Sharks Peril, too

After he saw the Japanese sink, Rhodes said, he "didn't feel so well" but realized that he had to swim out of the way of circling sharks to a liferaft.

As soon as he reached the liferaft some hours later, searchlights from Japanese warships concentrated on it, and Rhodes and three companions had to dive overboard to escape machine gun, shell and mortar fire.

It was only after an invasion boat picked him up at dawn that he realized that shrapnel had wounded him three times—in the jaw, foot and leg.
