Five Lost Fliers Reach Safety as Hunt Seeks Rest

Battered Bomber Comes Home

CHALLIS, Ida., April 6 (AP)—Five of nine airmen who parachuted from a Flying Fortress over the Idaho primitive area when its gas supply was nearly depleted, were safe in the middle fork ranger station today and all planes and ground crew were concentrating search in the area for the other four.

The five telephoned out through the station's one-way line last night and contacted their commanding officer, Maj. Harry E. Gilmore at the Walla Walla, Wash., airbase.

A hunt also began for a single-engine army biplane which failed to return to the Challis airport from a searching flight last night. Lieut. B. F. Rogers, public relations officer for the Pocatello airbase, said, "Two army men and one civilian were aboard the plane, but their names were not released by the army."

The five who announced themselves as being safe were: Flight Officer Austin Finley, Broken Bow, Okla., navigator; Staff Sgt. Morris Becker, Orem Park, N. V., radio operator; Staff Sgt. E. Wiegand, Walla Walla, assistant radio operator; and Sgt. E. W. Grundman, Compton, Calif., gunner.

Hit Heavy Weather
Finley told the United Press by telephone that the big plane, a B-24 Liberator, was shot down at Walla Walla late on March 20, had run into heavy weather and was ordered to fly to Gowen field at Boise.

Over the high mountains of central Idaho the compass went out and the plane flew in a big circle for several hours before the pilot, Second Lieut. Joseph R. Bretneger, of Fairfield, Ala., discovered the other. During the entire flight the plane spun and overcast.

Finally, said Finley, the plane almost struck a mountain. Bretneger, secured there was enough gas to last 10 minutes and ordered the crew to bail out. He was the last to parachute.

The telephone connection with the rescue party was erratic and the conversation was relayed back and forth by Mt. Hood, owner of a ranch located 14 miles below the ranger station on middle fork of the Salmon river, but the following facts were obtained by telephone as they are known.

Bailed Out at 14,000
The five bailed out at 14,000 feet in a minute and a half from the time the first one, Staff Sgt. H. A. Pope, Athens, Ga., assistant engineer, parachuted out the door into the pine forest.

Four of the five who finally made it to the ranger station, landed on the east side of the middle fork canyon high up in the pines. (Continued on Page 3, Column 3)

"Suicide" Airmen Raid Italy Bases
CAIRO, April 6 (AP)—Three volunteer American crews flying Liberator bombers carried out "suicide" attacks on Axis Mediterranean bases last Friday, but all returned safely, ninth air force headquarters announced today.

The attacks were made at extremely low altitude on Italian bases at Mesitah (Italy), San Giovanni and Crotona (Italy).

A heavy fighter opposition was encountered in the Mesitah attack, but the American bombers caused tremendous damage to the base from a low altitude on specific targets.

Mesitah and San Giovanni are key supply ports for the Axis forces in Sicily. Crotona also is a port on the south of the Italian boot.

First Lieut. E. H. Miller, right, navigator, of Ridgeland, S. C., who saw a German VV-102 way down the hill off the Flying Fortress ahead of him in a raid on St. Nazaire, France, thought the hole was big enough to walk through. Back home he had a chance to prove it. The pilot who brought the bomber back was First Lieut. Donald E. Stockton (left), of Redmond, Ore. (Army air force photo)

By VIRGIL PINCKNEY
ALLIED HEADQUARTERS, TUNIS, North Africa, April 6 (AP)—Powerful allied air forces smashed all records in the north African theater, when they made more than 1,000 sorties Monday against the axis, destroyed 48 airplanes, blew up a destroyer and set fire to supply ships en route to Tunis.

While American and British ground troops held the initiative in Tunisia, aerial operations, the air forces scored their greatest victory over the Luftwaffe in the Monday fighting at the cost of only 12 of our aircraft.

Twelve reported phase of the air attack was the destruction of 18 enemy JU-52 air transport planes carrying supplies to the forces of Marshal Erwin Rommel in Tunisia. ## TUCKER'S NATIONAL GIG

FORELLO—When the United States and British forces drove Hitler out of the sea, they did not intend to repeat the mistake Hitler committed after the disaster at Dunkirk. Allied generals have always regarded his failure to follow up that victory as the greatest strategic blunder he has made.

The Anglo-American high command is making behind-the-scenes preparations to launch an attack on the locale of which cannot be revealed against the confidant as soon as it has destroyed axis forces in north Africa. Far behind the lines of present fighting it is mobilizing men, planes, ground weapons and supplies for a push across the Mediterranean.

With German and Italian shores off their feet so far under the terrific air strafing they will suffer, it is believed that defensive units and centers will be thrown into confusion. Then the time will be ripe to strike swiftly and effectively.

Aggressive action as to specific landing places, the La Guardia appointment suggests it due's displaced country will figure in all blueprints of the contemplated invasion. By that time it is probable that New York's mayor will be a lieutenant-general, and he will approach his ancestral lands and peninsulas as easily as human descendants.

With the assistance of General Eisenhower, Montgomery and Alexander, will be a modern Mazzini!

DESTRUCTION—The myth of Japanese military power, created amid the oriental secrecy prevailing after World War I, has been shattered. While our experts do not overrate the enemy's strength, they have a more realistic conception of it than examination of captured weapons and prisoners.

In the series of British retreats, the seizure of the Dutch East Indies, and the sinking of the Prince and the Prince of Wales, Anglo-American observers switched from earlier beliefs that the tide were moving to the conviction that the tide were moving.

The zero was lauded as a wonder plane. Their 29 caliber rifle was regarded as ideally devised for enabling a formation to carry more ammunition in the field. Their strategists were ranked as minor Napoleon; their soldiers as particularly hardy and resourceful.

Closer study, according to our ordinance manufacturers, shows that not a single air, infantry or armor piece is worth copying, because it is not a copy itself. The famous 29 had some merit, but it would not reproduce a well-planned American assault.

Today is now replacing it with a heavier weapon, not quite so good as our Springfield and far below the standard of our Gatling.

Their light machine guns have neither range nor hitting power. They are inferior patterns of French and United States make. Heavier types resemble our 42 caliber machine guns, but are made of such poor steel that they will not stand up under hard usage.

Their grenades, mortars and light tanks are revealing as shoddy, second-rate material. Their motorized equipment is based on French designs of the middle twenties. The zero's construction is revealingly but it frequently falls apart from a single well-placed machine gun bullet.

Japan's great advantages in the initial stages were the element of surprise, our unpreparedness and her own superior supply lines. But now we witness the admittedly difficult mission of coming to close quarters with Hirohito's troops on a showdown scale, their ultimate destruction becomes just a question of time.

RATIONING—Charles C. Dwyer's first task will be to dispel the confusion regarding food prospects which his predecessors created. General uncertainty over the future of the rationing program has been the result of statements that have been made since the outbreak of the war in Europe.

Glider Girl

By OREN ARNOLD Copyright, 1943 NEA Service, Inc.

WELL-BOUNDED FINISH CHAPTER XXXX

When the glider train had first left Sky Harbor in Phoenix, two minutes later had taken off its passengers. They carried gentlemen of the newsreels and gentlemen of the press.

They were turned back by the Superintendent Mountain storm. Later, though, the sky train came again, but with only nine of its original 10 gliders.

"Something happened!" The news men began to shout about it. "That glider plane—it had the girl pilot. Captain Carr's plane!"

They got good photos of the glider cutting loose, and when Jim Carr's motor plane headed back to look for Number 10, the photo-capturer's ship followed him. Half an hour later, one of the greatest aviation films on record was being made.

It showed Jimmy's ship dipping dangerously into the canyon of a wooded mountain. It showed him spotting a white callplane on a high and narrow slope. It showed him climbing up for safety in jumping, then leap out in a parachute.

When Jimmy leaped, his chute didn't open. Then he began to rock and tug. Thump! When he struck the slope he scrambled and rolled in loose rocks.

"Jimmy! . . . Jimmy!"

Pat was 40 yards or so away. Jim unclimbed from the chute and ran toward the girl.

"Pat, are you all right? Are you hurt?" He was shouting frantically. "Yes I mean, not I mean—I'm all right are you?"

They were in more, for a time. Partly because Pat Friday quite lost control of herself. She was shouting at Jimmy Carr's arms. Sobbing and hugging him, and pressing her head to his shoulder.

"Little girl . . . little girl," he was saying, ever so gently.

But the crying didn't last long. He kissed her tender on top of her head. Then he lifted her chin, bloodied tears with a handkerchief, and leaned to kiss her full on the lips.

"Pat darling," he said, then.

She had clung to him while the world swung around and around.

"Were you hurt at all, little girl?" he asked.

"No, Jim. But I—I guess I was very foolish."

"You're the bravest kid in the country."

"No."

"Yes! Chucking off into that storm—brave, Pat!"

"I thought I was near Globe. But I was scared silly. Jim, I—I got up to 10,000! And when I was forced down I couldn't see a thing until around 5,000 feet. And the first thing I saw was—there!" She pointed to the sheer rock wall as big as a mountain.

"My ship was headed right into it. And—and I did what you taught me to do. I put her over, quickly. Then—panicked right down. I knew I must be in a canyon, or at least a narrow one. Jimmy, that callplane is a dream! I don't believe it's damaged at all!"

He lifted her for a kiss once more. This time she returned it, with a wild surge of ecstasy and abandon. It was midnight before the two young adventurers were rescued from Superstition Mountain. Plans rolled over the best ground route from time to time, dropping flares, to guide cowboy Bill Barker and others on horseback, with spare animals for Pat and Jimmy to ride. There was no place for an airplane to land within six miles of the mountains, but there was a paved highway, and five billion pounds of fish.

LIFE'S LIKE THAT

"Life is like that," she looked quickly, and self-consciously, and fearfully, as well as the other men. Big Ed Bryan was smiling broadly.

"She and the captain," Ed drawled, "we done some running around this morning. Miss Pat, before you got up. Down to the courthouse, and the florists, and our little place, and another, yes'm. Mr. I get to be a best man!"

Pat said, "Jimmy, it's—Lorraine!"

"Lorraine is headed back for New York. Private Friday," Jimmy said. "But I'm not. My part of that noon wedding is still on. You're the other part of it."

"Mel Oh Jimmy! Not I—I have no clothes, or—"

"You want me to court-martial you, Private Friday? Don't be inquisitorial!"

"And anyway, Jimmy you kissed me—but you never asked me to marry you at all!"

"I'm not asking you, I'm telling you! I'm marrying you at noon, and I'm kissing you again right now!"

The news-reel men and the paper photographers recorded that for posterity. They like to have a well rounded out film for a news story.

The End

Commercial fisheries of the United States and Alaska provide nearly two billion pounds of fish.

"I don't know where you'll get the money to pay for it . . . I'm your wife, not your financial adviser."

BEETS VIEWED AS VITAL FOR STOCK

The importance of sugar beet growing to the livestock industry is pointed out by Dorell D. Watson, member of the Idaho state AAA committee, in a statement received by officials of the Unamalgamated Sugar company here. "The production of food is one of the most important phases of the war," says Watson. "It is necessary that we produce to the fullest capacity of our land."

"Among the more essential foods needed is meat. The by-product of the sugar beet from an important part of livestock feeding in Idaho. The sugar beet by-product takes the place of other feed, freeing land needed for the production of our essential war crops."

The sugar beet industry offers the farmer a dependable cash income, the use of by-products in livestock feeding, and, at the same time, the sugar beet fits well into a well-rounded crop rotation system.

"I would like to urge Idaho farmers to consider the planting of sugar beets in planning their 1948 wartime food production."

CONSTIPATION WORRIES GONE!

You're trouble is gone and so are the hard purgatives it used to take. It's like this. I found my constipation was due simply to a lack of "bulk" in my diet. Medicinal laxatives were giving me only temporary relief. So I tried KALOG's ALL-ARM regular. That did the trick. Got at the cause of my constipation and corrected it. I eat less dairy now, drink plenty of water—and stay regular.

If that's your trouble, try ALL-ARM. It's a well-tasting breakfast cereal, and you can get it at your grocer. Made by Kellogg's in Battle Creek, Michigan.
