TUCKER'S NATIONAL WHIRLWIG

HASTY—The Truman Committee has uncovered sensational evidence that many plane crash-ups and other accidents have resulted from structural defects which should have been caught by inspection before the planes were in the air.

It is estimated by the legislators that at least one-third of the aerial accidents inside the United States are traceable to imperfect motors and that some of these defects could have been avoided by more thorough inspection of the planes.

RAY TUCKER, chief test pilot at the factory, Senators have talked with pilots, engineers and mechanics throughout the country and learned that certain types have a bad name in the industry, as some have known as bad actors to pilots and engineers.

The models known to be susceptible to unexplained malfunctions will not be given on the open road for fear of the psychological reaction on other pilots. But the data have been turned over to the army and navy officials, and those agencies have promised to take immediate steps to correct the situation.

Approximately 15 per cent of our merchant marine ships are listed as "unaccounted for" in which category are a number of freighters which failed because of poor materials or improper welding. The balance of the casualties is laid to substandard workmanship from the air and known sea hazards.

The committee's unofficial conclusion is that, in the rush to win planes and aircraft, care to the inspectors have changed raw and finished work which they would reject in normal times.

AFTER THE WAR

It is too early yet to tell whether John L. Lewis, formerly a coal miner, will be named to the United States, yet he emerges with substantially what he went after.

If he loses this fight, it will be the first he has lost, although before, when things looked blackest for him, he has managed to Houdini himself and his mine workers out with pecuniary benefits, however might claim the superficial honors.

John Lewis or President Roosevelt wins this strike, labor unionism already has lost. Hundreds of unions, millions of workers who are in no way involved, who respect labor's principles against strikes, who would not think of hampering our soldiers and sailors and marines by holding up production, are victims of Lewis' attitude.

In Hawaii, where the Japanese started this war, American service men are reported to be amazed and infuriated that any man or any union should dare stab the United States in the back at a time like this.

Said Mr. Otto Ostrom of Goose Creek, Tex.: "I class this strike, or any strike, along with sabotage." Said Sgt. John S. Hanson of Seattle: "I feel no one should exercise the constitutional right to strike as long as there is an American soldier laying down his life on a battlefield."

EDUCATION FOR THE HANDICAPPED

By ANGLO PATRI

Should a partially deaf child go to a college preparatory school? Only if he is otherwise fitted for a college course and a career that is based on that training. Some heart of bearing people can do quite as well in college as hearing people, but who has those rare, and they have an unusual ability for academic work.

The hard-of-hearing child who does not get great difficulty in getting through the grade school, but who has shown great skill, in manual work or in a purely academic field, should be sent to a vocational school that trains the partially deaf for work in the industries. There are many people connected with these schools and industries who are able to assist in the training of the deaf child. They are the ones who are the most successful in the deaf world.

After World War I there was concern about the reaction of veterans in labor matters. It was directly from bitterness over fat wages paid to war plants while men died for $30 a month.

After World War II millions of men are going to be demobilized who will have been conditioned to the spectacle of John L. Lewis pulling a strike in the mines which supplied fuel without which most war plants would shut down.

Their deep anger is certain to stop over against any attempt to unionize and workmen. This one incident may far toward making the veterans of World War II a powerful agency of unreasoning, illogical reaction in labor matters.

5, 1934 FANS SEE PHILADELPHIA IN FIRST SEVEN HOME CONTESTS

Club Attracted Only 277,000 Last Season

By JUDSON BAILEY
(Philadelphia for Whittier Martin)

NEW YORK, May 12 (AP)—A rumor is circulating among the populace of Philadelphia that there now are two major league ball clubs in the city and apparently is creating about as much amusement as if the managing edge drops on a pile of Shibe park has been found littered with unused ration books.

Sunday a curious crowd of 24,934 swept through the turnstiles to see personally whether it was true that living, breathing ball players are wearing Phillys' uniforms.

It was an unusual scene at Philadelphia's National stadium, in September of 1934, when the Brooklyn Dodgers were the visiting team in the full tide of their fantastic popularity. A Sunday double-header between the Dodgers and Phils drew 39,805.

Fernando Flatterling, then But the permanent was fluttering on those games and thousands in that crowd were from Brooklyn, discerned the playing field seeking souvenirs and autographs, prevented batting practice, and created a commotion the scene of city of brotherly love was now remember.

It was different, too, Sunday. There to live up in a full day with the New York Giants, Phils and the Phils' new owner, pulled out the batting practice. As this turned out he had to forego this morning's game, but he was working in the ticket office, which was manned by the unexpected crowd.

This pretty well shows how the reform Phillys have captured the imagination of the home-town fans. Other clubs have been rebuilt and have followed in the past, but it usually has been a tedious process requiring considerable time and money.

Still Group of Castoffs
In Philadelphia just the opposite of better ball has been sufficient to win the fans. The team still is a cast of off-casts, and in the last place in every one of its appearances at home. Yet in seven years the Philadelphia Phils have won more than 1,000 games, and a year ago the club drew only 277,000 fans.

Our Philadelphia operates as the fans are particularly pleased with the schoolboy Rube, and Kraus, the southpaw pitcher, and the back of the paying customers naturally has encouraged the players to play to the maximum and the lesson as a whole.

On the Sport Front

By GEORGE F. REDMOND

Most everybody is thinking about physical fitness—physical fitness or what these days. Consequently a little brochure on the subject that the managing edge drops on a pile of Shibe park has been found littered with unused ration books.

Older Scriveners' day may prove interesting—even though it explodes your and Ye Old Scriveners' day theories on how to become the perfect man physically.

The brochure on physical fitness is from an athletic institute in Chicago, and says its concept advanced in a new study of the subject directed by Dr. Arthur H. Steinhaus, professor of physiology at George Williams college, Chicago. Many few lectures and studies with "athletic" play classes in schools, playgrounds and adult leisure time agencies.

You'll start disagreeing with the professors right off the reel or take a "what's-the-use-of-physical-fitness-anyway" attitude after reading the first statement: "Physical fitness will lengthen your life."

And it continues just as inconceivable: "It will not insure a good heart," taking a tumble out of the "athletic heart" theory.

Your physical instructor didn't know what he or she was talking about by admonishing you not to exercise strenuously after a full meal. This athletic institute says it won't harm you at all, and, too, exercise will lengthen your life, and your resistance to "disease" and moderate exercise without diet has practically no effect on weight reduction.

Just as Ye Old Scriveners told you in the beginning, you are asking yourself, "What's the use of exercising anyway, then?"

The brochure continues: "Physical fitness is a condition of total fitness is enough for you." Dr. Steinhaus contends that the fitness of the body is not enough. "A body free from disease, but not free from disease, is not enough. It must be strong enough, healthy enough and endurance to do easily what the body is capable of doing."

"An alert mind free from worry, fear or tension that can relax, and a body free from disease, is not enough. It must be strong enough, healthy enough and endurance to do easily what the body is capable of doing."
