EAST WILL GET POTATOES SOON

NEW YORK, May 14 (AP)—There is no simple answer to the question "What happened to potatoes?" but to the companion query "When do we get some?" comes a comforting reply—pretty soon.

Increased supplies are expected within two weeks in eastern markets where there has been only a fraction of the usual potato trading in recent weeks. Several southern shipping points report peak loadings expected between May 15 and June 15. Louisiana has some 3,000 cars to ship in the next few weeks and Alabama expects to move between 6,000 and 8,000 cars.

South Carolina is still harvesting a fair crop although the season is followed by the North Carolina crop which was seriously damaged by early frost. That has made good recovery slow.

Market experts here attribute the shortage to a number of factors. The armed forces recently took practically all of the remaining supplies of Idaho and old crop Maine potatoes.

Civilian consumption had been unusually heavy due to increased potato prices and the rationing of other food items. And then the expected shipments from the south and new crop potatoes were delayed by wet weather.

Larger than normal acreages have been planted in New Jersey and Long Island, but in common with the entire Atlantic coast, these crops are now expected to mature two weeks later than normal.

During the past week small shipments have been received from California, Florida and Arizona. California acreage this year is expected to exceed the 3,000 carloads shipped last year.

When the potato garden has become well established, the important problem is how to take care of it properly. Providing the good care needed by a successful garden is an all-season job, but if you follow and during the first part of the season, the work of the latter part will be much lighter.

During the early stages, the crops probably will need watering about once a week to keep down weeds. The plant food you have added in the form of fertilizer should be enough to keep the crops growing. Do not use too much fertilizer. It will only burn the plants and cause them to rot.

Best remedy is hoe. The best remedy for weeds is a hoe. In the hands of a gardener who wants his plants to have good roots and a fair chance to produce food. Here are some pointers on how to use your hoe.

At the end of the garden is dry enough after a rain, break the crust to prevent baking and to destroy weeds. But don't do this while the ground is too wet, or the soil will be turned over and harder than ever.

When you start to work with the hoe, remember that a weed, no matter where it may be in your garden plot, is a weed. If you dig too deeply when you cultivate, there is danger of damaging the roots of the plants on the surface. You can turn out small weeds with a hoe very easily and still do only shallow digging.

There are weeds so close to the plants you can catch them up with tools, pull them out by hand. Experienced gardeners seldom leave pulled weeds, even small ones, lying where they fall because they leave the weeds may take root and start all over again. Careful gardeners gather them up and throw on the compost heap.

Many successful gardeners recommend mulching with dry straw or straw to keep down weeds. It helps to hold moisture in the ground. It helps keep soil-borne insects and diseases away from the plants. Don't Work Wet Plants. A gardener who is careful to keep his plants dry will find that plants are less likely to have as much trouble with insects and disease as a careless gardener. # Cultivate Carefully in Your Victory Garden; Fight Weeds

"This is the first of two articles prepared for NEA Service by experts of the U. S. Department of Agriculture."

M-K REBUILDING MEXICO RAILWAY

BOISE, May 14 (AP)—Morrison-Knudsen company, Inc. of Boise, through its Mexican corporation, now is reconstructing and rehabilitating 50 miles of railroad in Mexico north from the border of Guatemala. Harry W. Morrison said today on return from a 10-day tour of the project.

Morrison said the railroad, built 40 years ago, has deteriorated from lack of maintenance, and because it has become a vital link between the United States and central America, must be strengthened.

The submarine menace "became an error," said Morrison, "but nothing material was forced onto the railroad and there is no tax the already overburdened system."

He said hundreds of box cars, many of them from the Pacific Coast Express ship at Nampa, dot the stretch of railroad and are in dozens of trains which travel the route. He added that much fruit, chiefly apples and oranges, is hauled over the railroad.

Morrison also reported that his company men of the few great international contracting firms, was paving runways at two Mexican air bases.

Recessed down every particle of their food in water before eating it.

Tips to Victory Gardeners. EARLYWIGS. A common insect pest, with which many are familiar and one which will probably be familiar to all of us in a few more years, is the earlywidge.

The European earwig is important, chiefly from the standpoint of its obnoxiousness. It is often found in houses, where its presence, because of its unsightly and filthy nature, is a menace to most flowers and before vegetables such as celery, lettuce and corn, which grow in a hiding place in the daytime and also serve as food, and peaches are especially attractive. Earwigs hide in dark places in the daytime and are active at night.

The mature earwig is about five-eighths of an inch long. The general body color is dark reddish-brown, with a yellowish tinge to the head. Although it appears to be innocuous, a close examination will reveal the sharp wing covers beneath which are folded the delicate hind wings. The insect is readily distinguished by the presence of a pair of prominent forceps on the rear end of the body. Immature earwigs are smaller, and adults except in size.

W. E. Simul, extension entomologist for the University of Idaho, says that earwigs are easily controlled since they will readily come to a poisoned bait made of the following ingredients: Brul, 12 pounds, sodium fluosilicate, 10 pounds, fish oil, one quart, Dr. Shull, three states that this bait should be given thoroughly and then scattered thinly over the entire yard and garden. Special attention should be given to the baiting along board fences and along trees, telephone poles, wood piles, and other places where earwigs are known to lurk in numbers.

Your agricultural extension agent can furnish you with a bulletin on the control of this insect. Coffee Imports of the United States for the first four months of 1948 totaled more than 1,740,000 pounds, nearly in normal times.

FREIGHT CUT TO BE $150,000,000

WASHINGTON, May 14 (AP)—Revised railroad freight rates, averaged 4.7 per cent below those of the previous year, will be in effect June 1. The office of price administration has estimated they will save more than $150,000,000 annually to consumers.

In most cases, OPA said, savings will be reflected in reduced prices for consumers. The savings are automatic in all cases where dealers operate under price regulations providing for fixed mark-up over cost.

Price Administrator Prentiss M. Brown said that in most instances it will be necessary to issue amendments to existing regulations in order to pass on the freight savings to consumers. These are mostly in the fields of food, fuel, machinery and industrial materials.

Grange Gleanings

By J. R. CRAWFORD. FILER. Filer Grange held its hall with all officers except two filling their stations. Forty-five members also were present. Most of the business meeting was taken up with the question of where to put the juvenile Grange which is soon to become a reality. Filer has the children for the Grange but no place for them to meet. Consequently it was decided to excavate more space in the building to provide a separate hall for them. This is to be done as soon as possible and the children will be given a place to meet. Elmer C. O. Thomas was elected as the new president of the Grange. The vacancy left by the resignation of Slater Bonnichsen.

The program consisted of moving pictures, "What Price Victory," and "Fanner Brown Goes to Town." The Grange reported seven new members were taken in during April. Another service was added to the service flag, making a total of 10 boys from families of G.I.s. Eastern cars were sent to all of the boys. Representatives were served by Mrs. Peck, Mrs. Price and Mrs. Gene Thompson, and the social hour followed.

It is not a question of tankers, as Sweden has her own, but of the advisability of such a policy. Our war department strongly questions the advisability. The U. ## Mrs. J. E. Hayes Addresses Council

To secure order and justice and to assure the expression of the will of the majority without undue delay and still respect the minority is the purpose of parliamentary procedure. This was the theme of Mrs. J. E. Hayes' address to the council of the National Camp Fire organization.

Mrs. Hayes recommended the working out of by-laws as a good project for the girls as it gives them the opportunity to learn the fundamental structure of the organization. She also stressed the importance of the by-laws in all situations and the policies of the National Camp Fire organization.

Succession to office should be arranged to permit service of all members and avoid repeated service of any one member, while standing rules should provide for all specific situations.

U. S. PLANS BIG SNAKE RIVER DAM

LEWISTON, May 14.—A barrier almost as high as Boulder dam, blocking the Snake river's roaring charge through its deep canyon 40 miles upriver from Lewiston, is contemplated by the United States army engineers as a post-war project to generate hydroelectric power, and to control the Snake river below the mouth of the Salmon.

"In line with present day engineering technique," he was quoted, "it is probable that such a reservoir would be created by a dam in the neighborhood of 600 feet in height."

It said an addition project already having the "tailwaters" of the creek, about 40 miles farther upstream, "which provides a diversion of the Salmon river into a lake through a nine-mile tunnel into the Snake river, would produce electric energy and, presumably, at the same time uncovering fabulous riches in gold in the drained area of the Salmon."

The Snake river long has been a temptation to gold hunters and numerous "one-man outfits" have pursued the elusive treasure and tried their best for years.

Germanes Once Interested
The diversion project, said the Tribune, was "sketched favorably" as far back as 1928 by German engineers. Burety bonds were posted and announcements made that German engineers were to build the project. Only was attributed to the refusal of a Standard Oil company to give an option on land necessary to control the tunnel site.

The German holdings were transferred to the Idaho Electro-Chemical company in 1929, the Tribune said.

Quitting Colonel Leitch, the paper said it is the "tailwaters" of the creek, about 40 miles farther upstream, "which provides a diversion of the Salmon river into a lake through a nine-mile tunnel into the Snake river, would produce electric energy and, presumably, at the same time uncovering fabulous riches in gold in the drained area of the Salmon."

WHITE OPPOSED
BOISE, May 13 (AP)—Compton I. White, D. Ida., suggested that several small power dams to furnish power which would develop water's natural resources are needed in the Snake river valley to give the Albert Falls water storage project.

"What justification can there be for a water storage project in any part of Idaho," he asked in an interview, "when our real need and our real means of contributing to the nation's war effort is the development of our minerals, particularly in the Snake river valley?"

Calling attention to destruction of productive farm land by the Albert Falls dam, it is built, he said, "well-placed power projects on all of Idaho's grades of natural sites would do much to improve our nation's strategic and critical mineral needs in this war emergency."

SHOWDOWN SEEN HERE ON RECALL

BOISE, May 14 (AP)—The Townsend club at Twin Falls Sunday will resolve itself into a "showdown battle" between two factions of the organization, said a spokesman of G. A. B. Botsford and 60 legislative hopefuls in the "battle."

"We're going to find out," said Harold Howell of Boise, center in the recall movement, "whether the Townsend club is a hierarchy or a democracy."

The meeting was called by Howell and A. Scott, co-chairman of the Townsend club, to the president of the Townsend club, who opposes the recall movement.

Howell and James W. Johnston, president of the Independent Voters league, have asked Townsend headquarters to oust Scott as national representative. Conversely, Scott has requested the ousting of Howell as a Townsend member.

Howell has accused Scott of using dictatorial methods, particularly in the enforcement of candidates for public office. He further charged that Scott was "a Townsend member."

Howell predicted that many of the Townsend clubs would give up their charters and join the Independent Voters league, which was created last year to assist in sponsoring and aiding in the passage of the senior citizens' grants act.

Repealer is Issue
Repeal of the act by the last legislature is the cause celebre for the recall movement.

Both Scott and Howell are agreed the present controversy had its beginning over the Townsend endorsement of Sen. John W. Thomas. Howell claims that an "overwhelming majority" of the Townsend members endorsed Democratic candidate Glen Taylor, and that Scott went against their wishes in having the national headquarters announce endorsement of Thomas, a Republican.

Howell twice has sought public office on the Democratic ticket. Scott, north Idaho claims adjuster for the National district for Tampa on Monday night.

Scott also has called a meeting of Townsend representatives from the nine southern counties of the National district for Tampa on Monday night.

The enemy was pushed back here today!

EVER see a newspaperman's desk at the end of a crowded day—ash-strewn, paste-smears, littered with the grist of the news mill that never stops?

It's hardly to be compared with the desk of a great general—and yet the enemy was pushed back here today!

Pushed back by another 24 hours of truthful reporting...

Pushed back by community leadership in myriad war activities from band selling to tin can salays,

Pushed back by the little things that help build and sustain a nation's morale—the personal items, the pictures of the boys at the front, the helps on the home page, the laughs on the comic page and the information and inspiration throughout the newspaper.

Yes, the enemy was pushed back here again today.

He will continue to fall back so long as American newspapers have anything to do about it!

SERIAL STORY

Beth Carter, WAAC

BY LORETTA COOPER

COPYRIGHT, 1943, NEA SERVICE, INC.

THE STORY: Beth Carter, WAAC, has volunteered for a very serious mission. After she has received her orders and been introduced to her immediate superior, Major Britt Jackson, they board a Flying Fortress bound for the Pacific. Major Jackson has explained that he is commanding a Coast Artillery Battalion stationed at a remote island. It is to protect military operations from enemy air attack. Information leaks have been suspected and Beth is to assist in tracking them down. Suddenly a pair of Jap fighter planes are sighted.

ATTACK

CHAPTER III: A pair of Jap fighter planes, off the left wing it took Beth a moment to realize that Major Jackson had said.

When she joined the WAACs, Beth supposed she would "ride" war as a desk, diction type-writer, just as she had done in civilian life until the automobile factory closed. Now she was in the thick of the war, even if from a material point of view this position was not a very large one.

She arose and moved out of the side window, she had barely glimpsed the two attackers before Major Jackson had yanked her down into the protected part of the port.

"Don't do that," he yelled. "I don't want to lose you so soon!" The sentence hung for a second in the recesses of Beth's mind. Then she saw it was a warning, not a challenge.

She had not been told the Japs were coming in on the Fortress, she would have known in a few seconds anyway. She felt the Fortress momentarily shiver, and she heard the rattle of machine guns. Beth Jackson had gone forward. She was alone. True, there were men around her, but each was so identified with a task, and so engrossed in it, that none had time for her. She was as safe as they could make her.

She heard the machine guns again, and saw one of the center gunners, his face grim, pivot his weapon around in pursuit of a Zero.

She saw his lips move. She knew by his face that he had missed. Disappointment packed every line of the space from his eyes to his lips to the depths of his serious eyes.

The din was intermittent, but terrific when it came, several times. Beth realized that if it were not for the Fortress's armor, the fight would have been lost.

By the angle of the floor she knew the plane was climbing steeply. It had shaken the Japs for a minute. Then the climb leveled off and ended.

Beth Jackson was still forward, but Beth hardly was thinking of him now; she was watching the gunners.

He stood there, a huge man, appearing even larger because of his flying suit. He was working coolly and in a very businesslike manner, firing a few bursts, swinging his gun quickly, keeping a sharp eye on the sky.

There were two gunners, working back to back. Others were clustered in the big ship. Beth knew; but these two were all she could see, and it was the one whose two were half toward her that held her attention. She could read every turn of battle in his eyes.

ICKES WOWED BY FILM STAR RIDE

WASHINGTON, May 14 (AP)—That recent "prolet foray" through parkland in Wyoming by film actor Wallace Berry and posse of "gun toting" cowboys wowed Secretary of Interior Ickes, an old Chicago wad himself.

"We're lucky we can get a laugh once in a while," Ickes told a press conference, demonstrating his own good fortune by being virtually alone with amusement at the thought of the "big ride."

"I understand," Ickes told reporters. "They were all set up to mope and mope in the mountains. Some ghost-hunting cowboys put on the best multi-order raffle and dined single-barreled shotguns and rifles, and went out to defend their rights as libertarians."

"That was Ickes' view of it. The wad was not alone from the west was different. In fact, Ickes said, this was the first time he and his rancher neighbors were genuinely indignant because of wide open spaces were reportedly being copped up by the government, which had supposedly dealt a blow to the "Jackson Hole (Wyo.) national monument."

They sallied through the park, driving a herd of cattle across the allegedly forbidden land, firing shotguns into the air.

"What's wrong with them," Ickes diagnosed, "is that not a single right away taken away and they haven't any legitimate complaint."

"They're being saying that the government would do anything if those lands went into the park and that life goes on in the park. Men can take their sheep and cattle into the (monument's) grazing lands and have the best of both worlds and egress. They're not a pack animal anywhere on the landscape."

Gen. Devers Arrives in London

Gen. Jacob L. Devers, right, successor to the late Gen. Frank M. Andrews as commander-in-chief of the U. ## "Let 'Em Guess," Attitude of Allied Heads Toward Invasion

BY LEWIS HAWKINS
LONDON, May 14 (AP)—The attitude of allied military leaders as they go about their pre-invasion maneuvers may be unscientific, but accurately summed up as: "Let 'em guess what's coming and the more accurate the better."

For the first time they are resting easily on the comfortable beds of the war of nerves and they seem widely disposed to make the most of it.

The attacks may start tomorrow or they may be delayed for weeks or months. They may be delivered anywhere from the North Cape to Russia. But as one officer put it: "Anyone who tells you exactly when and where we are going to strike is either a traitor, a liar or a fool."

More Armies Now Ready
The fall of the axis in North Africa merely served to add all of Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower's armies to the British-American forces already poised in Britain and the mid-east and thus menacing almost any point on the 6,000-mile perimeter of Hitler's Europe.

The only moves which seem obvious are a continuation and intensification of the war against U-boats and the neutralization of the use of the short Mediterranean supply route to the middle east. Thus neutralization would not have to be done on the present heavy scale might accomplish the same end.

It is obvious that invasion plans which long have been agreed upon, most likely call for diversionary attacks to screen the main attack.

Political Strategy at Work
Similarly, while the military program is going forward on schedule there is little doubt that political strategy also is at work and might produce dramatic results before the triumphant of arms. The possibilities here are almost as varied as in the military field.

It might be maneuvered out of the war, Bulgaria or Rumania might be won away from the axis. Turkey might join the allies or even the Dardanelles to them—and so on. "Let 'em guess," The allies have it.

NAVY SHUT OFF ALL AXIS ESCAPE

BY PAUL KERN, LEE
ABOARD A BRITISH DESTROYER OFF CAP BOM, May 14 (AP)—"This is the scene of the Dunkerque that did not happen. This ship is an exemplary unit of the royal navy is enforcing around the bomb-lashed Peninsula retreat of shattered axis armies one of the tightest blockades ever clamped down on any comparable land mass."

German and Italian, blasted from the sea by British and American airmen and battered on the ground by British, American and French armies, the two armies literally between the devil and the deep blue sea—lucky escape, but never better spotted.

Regardless of any Hitler's face, the navy is enforcing around the bomb-lashed Peninsula retreat of shattered axis armies one of the tightest blockades ever clamped down on any comparable land mass.

Day after day after day, 24 hours a day, about the smart, tough little warship, I have watched easily visible evidences of great battles and the ship, I have been a thrilled spectator at two running bombardments of one of the last uncut axis ports on the peninsula.

I have witnessed one fugitive ship blown up by night and one frail boat captured by day.

Some small boats might make it by night to the doubtful sanctuary of Sicily or Pantellaria, but so close is the naval blockade that to sneak across by day would be a miracle and to do so by night a hazardous, long-shot gamble.

Singing the melodies that have reflected America's history since its beginning, the 200 graduates of the Twin Falls high school presented their final program at commencement exercises Thursday evening.
