PAPER CAMPAIGN AT 50-TON MARK

Boy Scouts in the Snake river area have collected approximately 100,000 pounds of waste paper during the past six weeks. Ray Baldwin, executive of the council, announced at a general executive committee meeting in Twin Falls Wednesday evening.

Both the paper drive and Scout participation in the fourth war loan drive are being handled on a council basis, said Baldwin. Plans for the 34th anniversary of Scouting, Feb. 8-17, will be left up to districts and troops, however.

War Bond Plans
Services of Boy Scouts have been offered to various county war bond chairmen, and Boy Scout participation in the drive will be backed by nationwide publicity over the National Broadcasting company network. On Feb. 8 radio programs will feature Scout participation in the fourth war loan drive and boys will be seen in an official representative of the treasury department, Baldwin said.

He announced that the goal for Scouts of Idaho was $40,000 worth of bonds to purchase a bomber to be called the "Idaho Scout." Practically all Scouts in the council will be assisting in the drive, he said. Reports were made by Roy Painter, council treasurer, representing the following Scout districts: Adams Nielsen, Burley; Daniel Hale, Oakesdale; Dr. J. W. Ruel, Jerome; Theodore Baurill, Kimberly; the Kimberly district; Marshall district; J. B. Fiedler, Paul, representing the Minidoka district; Eugene Neider, Idaho Falls; Snake river district; and Dr. Gordon R. Tobin, Twin Falls.

Chairman Elected
The Rev. E. Leslie Hollis, council president, introduced R. H. Snyder, attorney, as the new district chairman; the Rev. George C. Roseberry, organization and extension chairman; Milton Powell was reappointed camping chairman and R. W. Carpenter, health and safety chairman.

The next meeting of the council executive board will be held at Burley on April 12.

Buhl Vet Says Tarawa Battle 'Tough Going'

BUHL, Jan. 21—Prof. Gene Jorda, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Jorda, who is serving with the marines, writes his folks that he was in the battle of Tarawa, which he characterized as "a pretty tough going for awhile."

Following the battle, Gene was given a four-day furlough in Wellington, New Zealand, where he says he was "adored" by a Wellington family and treated royally.

He is now in a rest camp, and says he sees his neighbors at lunch, Cecil and Raymond Short, who are three with him, very frequently, and that they are all fine and enjoying things where they are after the rigors of Tarawa.

Kiwanis Hear of Church New Order

BUHL, Jan. 21—Rev. D. S. Campbell, of the Buhl Methodist church, called on the new world order which has been adopted by the Methodist church to secure a fair, just, righteous and lasting peace in the world of tomorrow, at the meeting of the Kiwanis club.

Mr. Campbell quoted from an article in Time magazine on this subject and reported on the meeting held in Boise by the Methodist church on the new world order. He expressed the thoughts of the audience on the different war fronts, and their ideas of what should be included at the peace conference.

The club was reminded that this was National Potato week by having a large baked potato served during the meeting.

William Aldrich was a guest.

Nations Must Surrender Some Power in Peace, Meeting Told

By PAT PALMER
"Peace will not preserve itself. Nations of the world must be willing to surrender some of their power, securities and privileges to a 'super-sovereignty' which will adapt the treaty structure of the world to changing underlying conditions."

In setting forth the third pillar of peace, Frank L. Stepien, guest speaker at the Twin Falls world citizenship meeting, declared that this proposition means America's commitment to fight for the four freedoms, not for just America, but for the entire world.

Time Declared
He asserted the time was ripe for the machinery of peace to be set up, thus never before in history had the people been so willing to have a "regulated peace" rather than an "imposed" one.

At the close of World War I, the U. S. was woefully unprepared for the peace which came. Quite a different situation existed then. The people, of course, wanted peace, but apparently they expected the peace to be a "regulated peace" rather than one originated by Woodrow Wilson—not by the people.

Under the American form of government, the people are the source of all power. It is my belief that no such movement as the people's world citizenship movement arose during World War I. Today the right points of the Atlantic charter and the principles enunciated in the four freedoms are not actually new, but this time they have the support of the people instead of the man.

Believe in Ideal
Stepien and he believed not only the people, but the statement of the United Nations, believed in the ideal set forth in the Atlantic charter. He quoted excerpts from speeches of public figures in the U. S. and statements made by men active in the struggle today.

"Under some European philosophy, men are believed to be necessary to progress — wars and progress, they say, go hand in hand. Some nations have gained temporarily, but to the world generally has not."

"Travels up to this time have generally been mere scraps of power for a permanent peace has never been accomplished. The policy of peace treaties has been 'imposed' rather than negotiated."

"There has never yet been a time when nations have been willing to surrender some of their powers and privileges to a world organization—that time must come, and that organization must be built if we are to have a permanent peace. Presently speaking, nations which were strangers a few years ago, are close neighbors now."

World Not Static
"We must remember that this is not a static world — that there are going to be future controversies regarding international trade, taxes, education, race discrimination, international currency, raw materials, and so on. The future must be met, some machinery must be set up to see that these controversies do not again get out of hand."

It would be foolish for any group now meeting at the close of this war to deal only with the present. Stepien declared. If this is to be a permanent peace, the future must be contemplated. No lasting instrument of government was ever drafted for the time being. For an example, he cited our own federal constitution, which he said, has stood the test of time.

He suggested that this world organization or "super-sovereignty" to preserve peace, might be built along the lines of our own federal government, and that it would have to have power in order to accomplish its purpose.

Following Stepien's address, a general discussion was held. Mayor

New Technique Replacing Lost Limbs on Vets

MARE ISLAND, Calif., Jan. 21—As disabled and disabled elsewhere in the Pacific are walking out of the naval hospital here into new civilian jobs, thanks to an unusual rehabilitation program.

Some of them, sent around with little or no sense of a limb. Some, blind as bats, and some, they even said, a few of them undertake to run foot races. Their morale, says Capt. J. D. Owen, hospital commandant, is sky high.

This high degree of rehabilitation is attributed by Owen to a special technique which gives a balanced fit to their artificial limbs as they are fitted. This technique, which teaches them to do a great many things with as much efficiency as ever, could show, it demonstrates that they do not have to live in a hospital. The tailor-made limb is the result of a cooperative effort by navy nurses and civilian agencies interested in that kind of rehabilitation. In the past such appliances were standardized, not individually fitted.

Until World War II was well under way, the navy had no facilities for equipping men with false limbs. It was then that the war veterans' administration, Mare Island decided to try sending them out on their own feet.

A workshop for the construction of made-to-measure limbs was set up in the hospital. The wounded men themselves became interested in the work. Now every limb that is fitted does some work in the shop. They learn how these appliances are made and how they work.

ances are made and how they work and because of this they are better able to use them later.

Some of these men are due to return to service in limited capacities but most will be discharged when their rehabilitation is as thorough as the system will permit. Those who return to civilian life have no trouble getting jobs, Owen said.

McQuinn, Hollywood, brother and sister-in-law of Mrs. Johnson, and Mrs. Nell Tibble, San Francisco, a sister, were in Buhl for the final rites for Mrs. Johnson.

GOD NEWS FOR COFFEE DRINKERS

Now you can buy Hills Bros. Coffee in this new Wartime Package as well as in vacuum-packed glass jars. Same coffee in both... same aroma... same flavor... same strength!

HILLS BROS. COFFEE

PERHAPS, during the past few months, you have wondered why you could not get a jar of Hills Bros. Coffee every time you wanted to buy it.

There is just one reason. There is plenty of coffee, but the amount of glass available for packing coffee is limited because of the heavy demand on total glass production. These limitations have made it impossible to obtain sufficient jars to fill all the orders for Hills Bros. Coffee.

This has brought about the adoption of the glass-lined carton as a Wartime Package for Hills Bros. "Red Can Brand" Coffee. These packages, in addition to the jars, will make it possible for you to buy Hills Bros. Coffee when you want it.

The coffee which is packed in both types of containers is exactly the same. Our exclusive process—"Controlled Roasting"—insures the same matchless uniform goodness in every pound.

Our registered trade-marks, the familiar "Arab" and "Red Can Brand"—appear on this Wartime Package as our guarantee that it contains the same high-grade coffee as is vacuum-packed in glass jars under the label, Hills Bros. "Red Can Brand" Coffee.

Your grocer has this Wartime Package of Hills Bros. Coffee now. It's not vacuum-packed, so for greatest enjoyment buy it often... as you need it... but for freshness' sake, buy only one package at a time.

So, when we're asked to buy an extra $100

Here's Look at Jerome Plant Dehydrating Spuds for Armed Forces

German, Mrs. Joe Lagana, Seattle, Wash., and Mrs. Gene Hill, Seattle, Wash.

The Pictures

No. 1—Spuds get a bath as they enter the dehydrating plant from the cellar, traveling through the rotating cylinder at the right which has water jets inside of it. The woman at the left is a sorter.

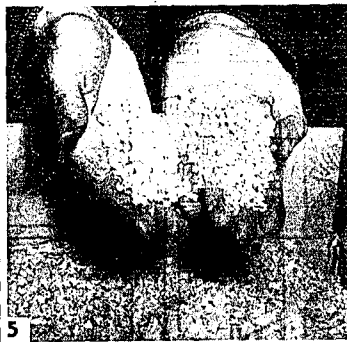

No. 2—Potatoes have gone through the washer when they come down the two chutes which form a Y at the far end of the room. These women use knives to cut out the eyes and remove blemishes, then load the spuds onto the conveyor belt in the center of the table, which takes them to the cubing machine.

No. 3—Here the cubed spuds are conveyed after 12 minutes in a steam chest. The cubes are spread evenly over a screen-bottom tray, then placed in racks which are wheeled into the dehydrator.

No. 4—Here are many of the trays of "flats." This is the first "craze-free" dehydrator tunnel in Idaho. The hot air comes in at the side instead of at one end of the tunnel, allowing the process to be completed in from six to eight hours, instead of up to 24 hours.

No. 5—Thin trip through the dehydrator completed, the potatoes have this appearance when they are opened by American soldiers at the fighting front. Ninety-seven per cent of the water has been removed, and the spuds have lost 60 per cent of their weight.

No. 6—All of this plant's product is purchased by the government for overseas shipment, and this department is an illustration of the paper shortage. Seventeen pounds of spuds go into a cardboard box which is taped and sealed. Around this goes an envelope made of metal foil and seven sheets of paper, bound together with wax and asphaltum preparations. This is heat sealed, and makes the carton waterproof. This is then placed in another cardboard box, and two of these boxes are placed in a wooden bin which is nailed and ball-tied. Final package of 34 pounds net is equivalent to more than 500 pounds of spuds in the cellar.
