HOW THINGS APPEAR FROM PEGLER'S ANGLE

NEW YORK—Because I am a loyal follower and ardent, if secret, admirer of the great and gracious lady, and because I have known Mrs. R. is inarticulate bashful, I shall take it upon myself to write a few lines meant in a couple of shy and pay of George Spelvin, American or his daughter, Georgette, but he has allowed to. He ought to be talking the effect is to make a dirty lounge of the boss and set the Spelvin to wondering whether it wouldn't be better, after all, to abandon their self-nicknamed self-respect and American independence and to get in line with Mrs. Roosevelt's political and financial backers.

One person asked Mrs. T. what could be done to help railworkers to get the money they were owed. She remarked that union workers "gain increases by striking but while crooks are not frozen" and asked "is this fair?"

To both, Mrs. Roosevelt answered that the only thing to do was join a union.

"Only the strength of an organization can bring about any changes," said aide to the first client, and to the second, "The average person is not able to do exactly what the unions want to do, but they are not so ineffectual, as they are not organized, in which case the union can bring about change."

But the union will make a comperson contributed to Mrs. Roosevelt's party in the interests of a fourth term in the White House for her in the role of gracious lady, and will exert itself in her behalf in the fourth term campaign fund drive. So you will begin to understand why Mrs. Roosevelt wants the individuals to join the unloos and why she is a little reticent about the deeper reasons beneath her advice.

While near the second floor from where she clamored so loudly, he is right here in New York rounding up the Spelvin drive into his pound by the gracious lady and kicking out the fourth term campaign fund drive with money taken from the Spelvin while the sons of the Spelvin are fighting as his proxies around Cherrub.

Accompanying Scholer to the meeting were Herman Koppen, George and Harry Hiley, and Billy Hiley. The latter two are conservation officers.

Elko county officials were presented with a management plan for that part of the Minidoka deer herd which is in Nevada and they said they would present it to the next meeting of the board of county commissioners.

Meanwhile, secretary L. D. Drexler of the Snake River Game Association, from Patagonia James Benham of the Idaho Fish and Game commission, discussed the management of the Minidoka deer herd with Elko county officials.

ARMSTRONG FLATTENS DAVIS

Referee Halts Uneven Fight

By TED MEIER

NEW YORK, June 16 (AP)—Hammering Henry Armstrong battered Al "Bunny" Davis in the canvas in quick order at Madison Square garden last night, scoring a technical knockout in 69 seconds.

Second round, Davis was down for counts of eight and nine in the first round.

Bouncing back from a 10-round deficit at the hands of Willie Joyce in Chicago two weeks ago, Armstrong, a 13 to 5 favorite, gave Davis an unmerciful beating.

Referee Frank Fullam stopped it.

Each weighed 141 pounds.

From the opening bell Armstrong was on top of Davis. He whaled away with lefts and rights at close quarters, then, suddenly, stepped away and whiplow over his left.

Another left and right, and down went Davis for rights. Armstrong resumed over him again with a series of lefts and rights.

Red Sox Within Half Game of A. L. Lead

By TED MEIER

BOSTON, June 16 (AP)—The Boston Red Sox made all but one of their six hits count as they chalked up their ninth straight win by beating the Philadelphia Athletics, 5-1, before a 770 crowd, the simplest in several years.

Tex Hughson hurled the victory, his ninth of the season, which moved the Soxers to within a half-game of the top place St. Louis Browns, who were idle.

After collecting two runs on their first two hits against Luman Harris in the first and fourth innings, the Soxers staged their best offensive outburst with two out in the sixth.

Ben Johnson set off the fireworks by hitting a home run in the sixth, and after Bobby Doerr doubled and Manager Joe Cronin walked, Ekester Nesome tripled.

Hughson also limited the Athletics to six hits but kept them well scattered except in the fifth frame, when Ervin Hahn pulled out a Texas league, pinned second on an infield out and scored on rookie Joe Sullivan's second.

City Can Be 30,000 Ten Years After War Ends, Jaycees Told

"Stout Hearted Men" became the theme of last night's general membership banquet of the Jaycees after Philip Kingston, now chamber of Commerce secretary used the title, that of a song sung previously by Lieut. Joseph E. Farmer. To describe the city members who, Kingston declared, can build Twin Falls to a community of 30,000 in ten years.

Repeating referring to the significance of the words "Stout Hearted Men," Kingston, who shared the speaking honors with Claude DeWitt, chairman of the Jaycees, presented three reasons why the future development of this city is a matter of life and death to the city.

Stating that "the development of Twin Falls in 40 years is comparable to the rate at which have taken 100 years," Mr. Kingston said that the city's growth in the past 20 years has been "extremely rapid." He said that the city's growth in the past 20 years has been "extremely rapid."

God's Front Porch

A Novel By KETTI FRINGS

Copyright, 1944, Ketti Frings-Distributed, 1944, NEA Service, Inc.

Pinky Harrison was one of those an elderly, bearded Jew, and crying, but his hands were steady as he wrote. He was young and there was Martha and the baby that would be born any day now and, besides, he hadn't been out there long enough to learn to be afraid. Which was why he clambered over the top of the fence, alone even after he had been warned to.

The carpenter's man was white and he belonged to Pinky and his wife. He was not from Twin Falls, but he knew Pinky was on a train headed upward through the clouds. It looked just like the train down home except that it was filled with all sorts of strange people.

TV
A small station and into view, and with a smiling heart Pinky saw the sign, "Heavenly Road Junction." Yet, while it was not from Twin Falls, there was something so familiar as he gazed further, that a warm, gentle smile spread through him. The green sign, the one-red-outlook-flicking language truck, the star schedule board there next to the door. Even the station master, with his hat tipped back, his lips, leaning against the luggage truck—Pinky had had no more than a glimpse of him, but he was clearly reminiscent of old Al Sparks down home.

"Arry you coming, Pinky?" Emily had had to address him twice, raising her voice above the clatter of the train bell and above the general exodus clamor in the car itself.

"This way, Pinky," Emily observed. "Anybody isn't the place at all, see, not everybody's getting off here."

About half the car was moving toward the other. The train was leaving quietly in their seats, preceding their noses against the windows. Emily spoke to an old man sitting behind them. "Pardon me, can you tell me apparently this isn't the last stop?"

His English was very poor. Only a few words.

Emily repeated her question in French.

They chorused vivaciously for a moment. Finally Pinky said, "Oh, I'm sure it is the other." This is it, unless we want to go on to the Big Valley. He says, considering our ages—whereas that means we probably want to get off here. "She shrugged. "What do you say, little?"

"Let's get off here," Pinky suggested quickly. "Then if we don't succeed, we can always go on."

"German organization at work," Emily said. "It's on your head, let's go!"

Mr. Caterwauler was standing in the aisle, clutching his suitcase—and being buffeted constantly by those who were hurrying to the exits. He didn't seem to mind, stared listlessly. Emily saw that he was troubled by some inner worry.

"What about you, Mr. Caterwauler?"

"I'll go with you, please, if you don't mind."

It was not easy getting out of the train, but it was not impossible. The track of people moving slowly foot by foot. Several Hittite soldiers in front of them whispered among themselves in some unintelligible dialect. They carried packs and rifles. One of the Hittite soldiers looked at Pinky's shoulder. His owner bowed and apologized profusely.

A crying baby farther up the train drew Pinky's eyes, and suddenly tore at his heart. . . . as the memory of Martha and the baby he'd never seen now swept over him. Yet he could not dwell on his outward longing, for now, from outside, he began to hear sounds that were unmistakably sounds of joy and surprise.

He arrived at the exit platform and could see the new people laughing and shaking hands. . . . and the woman whose baby he had noticed. . . . he saw now that the woman was a poor Jewish refugee, in tattered worn clothes, and she was clinging
