YANKS SEIZE NEW CHERBOURG AREA

fierce resistance encountered, and a particularly vicious battle was being fought for control of the big airfield at Meuse, located about 10 miles east of the city.
Inside the beleaguered port, the German garrison stood up stubbornly under yesterday's 1,000-plus assault on the east and south fronts, controlling the city's defense. The U. S. ground troops had to fight for every inch of the peninsula.
Small groups were repeatedly ambushed and killed. The fighting was made on both the eastern and western sides of the peninsula.
Only about 1,000 German troops were reported by American troops to be left off the eastern tip of the peninsula by capturing the road junction of St. Pierre Eglise and three divisions, two miles westward and taking Corbelle within sight of the sea.
Last Night Fifties
A report from the 21st army group headquarters said the Germans had viewed "strong indications" the Germans had abandoned that tip of the peninsula, despite their reinforcements to the St. Vaast La Houque area.
On the western tip of the peninsula, the Americans went forward in the morning, and the Germans against whatever resistance, cutting off whatever Germans are in that area.
Allied bombers and fighters attacked German positions and broke up attacks on Cherbourg, one of the channels into only seven miles west of the city. The U. S. 1st Army indicated some of the trapped Germans might be attempting to flee there.
Many Prisoners
The allied prisoners had been described at supreme headquarters as "well over the 15,000" announced a few days ago for the first since the June 6 landings.
The 21st army group reported new allied airborne landings at Gavray in Normandy, 15 miles northwest of Cherbourg, and on the west coast, 60 miles south from the tip of the Cherbourg peninsula.
Bloody hand-to-hand fighting for Cherbourg was matched over two miles northwest of the city, where the underground is striking at the Germans on a dozen "fronts." To "dig up" several German divisions in combat, a special command from the U. S. 1st Army, Eisenhower's headquarters reported.
The French patriots, the supreme command announced, had begun movement of German troops against the bridgehead, have fought several bloody battles, and have now occupied several towns in various parts of the area.
Local Advances
A few local advances were scored along the coast of the beachhead.
The Americans drove a water-tank attack to Lo-Du-Quille in the direction of La Haye Du Puits, winning the corridor across the peninsula, for the only other gain on the American side of the Normandy front.
In the British-Canadian sector to the east, the Germans struck with a tank attack two miles southwest of Tilly-Sur-Seuil, but were beaten back by the Americans. Three miles east of Caen encountered the first German tank to be destroyed.
Allied bombers attack and destroyed a steel works just outside Caen. The Germans tried to divert it into a fortified position to block the allied tanks standing less than half a mile away.
The wind dropped and the weather improved. The allied bombers headed, permitting the allies to resume, after four bad days, the unrelenting attack.
An American airplane said to have a man in the cockpit, the last night with the hammer and tongs, but there was no immediate official announcement of such a fight. If true, it might indicate the Germans were trying to evacuate some of their trapped troops from Cherbourg.

Bombs Away

When the big B-29 of the 21st Army Group landed at Meuse, the city was hit by a series of bombs. The bombs were dropped from a high altitude and exploded in the city center. The bombs caused a great deal of damage to the city and killed many people. The bombs were dropped by the 21st Army Group and were part of a campaign to destroy the city and its defenses.

cure to decide upon its candidate. It is headed by Gov. Earl Warren, California, who will enjoy a unique position as an active campaigner against his own nomination for vice-president. If he campaigns enough he may even lose it.
Warren's advice to his delegation is to start next Tuesday as a candidate and to "vote that selection on the 30th day of the month, or bargaining or jockeying." The delegation is bound by a rule which demands that 30 votes to any candidate who can win support of two-thirds of the delegates. California is fourth in the roll of states. If the whopping 40 votes go to Dewey, the show is over.
The three-day convention session assigns today Monday sessions to elect a permanent business and executive committee of Warren as temporary chairman. The resolutions committee is scheduled to report the platform Tuesday morning. Mr. Hoover and Rep. Charles McNary, R., Conn., the only two speakers at the convention, will speak Tuesday night. And all will be well, the delegates feel, because of a presidential candidate Wednesday morning.

Dear Jim:

Song the letters late, but I'm up to my ears in the 5th War Loan Drive.

As head of the town committee, I'm busy almost every waking moment selling bonds. This is, by all odds, the most critical period of the war. Everything is at stake—everything. (As if I need to tell you that.) Our quota calls for two million dollars more in this loan than the last—everyone got to buy two or three times more than he ever bought before—if things are to go as we solemnly pray they shall.

Thank God most of the people I talk to seem to realize the critical need. They do without things they actually need in order to plunk down another hundred or two. I guess they feel as I do. With a man you love over there, the least you can do is your utmost.

I want you to know, Jim, that the folks here at home are with you—and their money is fighting with you—every last dollar they can scrape up. Mother and I think too.

Dad.

CITIZENS LAUDED IN JAYCEE

Tribute was paid to the citizenship of Twin Falls citizens in a meeting of the Twin Falls Jaycee held last night at the home of the Jaycee Club. Citizens were lauded for their contribution to the youth coordinating center, last night in the third of a series of weekly broadcasts over station KTFP sponsored by the Twin Falls Jaycees.

Tracing the development of the center from its first committee report on other functioning youth programs in various cities, Citizens described the gradual evolution of the center, the obstacles that had to be overcome and the physical characteristics of the building which as it is today. The Jaycees inaugurated the original plans which led to formation of the youth council and the center.

Explaining that the need for youth programs arose from an inevitable interest in the war on the part of parents, Citizens stated that the center and the council represented the interest of residents in "shaping the destiny of youth during their life hours."

"Though the planning committee was originally thought to consist of contributions of furniture would be sufficient to equip the building, Citizens pointed out that they decided against it in order to prevent any undue interests from attempting to make policy for the center."

Plans are being made to improve the building of the center by the installation of facilities for an art studio and indoor sports center. Citizens stated that the center was believed that the center was a center for the youth of the community. Citizens stated that the center was a center for the youth of the community.

Citizens was introduced by J. H. H. chairman of the Jaycee youth committee. The program, called "Throughout the Coming Year," will be heard every Thursday at 8:30 p. m.

Suit Filed for Note Collection

Where the Best of Beef Is Bought and Sold

In this area, at the Twin Falls Livestock Commission company, 630 Commercial avenue, more than 1,000 head of cattle are often displayed during a Wednesday sale. The above buyers from the Prescott Farms, Glenn Farris, were bought by American Packers, Salt Lake City, Utah. Edward Kalk, Twin Falls, in the background, acts as official gate opener, while Frank Musler, manager of the Union Pacific stockyard, Twin Falls, stands next to the cattle, is official weigher, (staff photo—entertainment)

"You've Bought Some Beef!"

Up on the box, with Oscar Kline, filer, auctioneer, chanting his tale of the price of beef into a hand microphone, you'll learn the price of beef is never stable. John Darnell, clerk, who records and handles every sale, keeps his books straight. Chris Darnell, a trader in the stock, helps to keep the cattle moving with a whip. (staff photo—entertainment)

Visit to Twin Falls Cattle Sale Like a Trip to Circus

By HARRY GUNNING

Do you like circuses? How about ponies, peacocks, champagne, candy? And clown? And acrobats? Well, be sure you've attended a circus where you can see a dollar-and-cents profit—just as it doesn't mean by throwing rans over knife handles in the side-show.

There's a weekly circus in Twin Falls, held every Wednesday—including the aforementioned peacocks and ponies—where everybody comes with the intention of making a profit.

Said circus is held out on Commercial avenue, at the Twin Falls Livestock Commission company—no make no mistake about it, there are clowns and acrobats among the steers and heifers.

Serious Side Too

There's a serious side to the event, though, when one stops to consider that more than 1,000 head of cattle change hands in a single day of trade and barter.

Said listening to Oscar Kline, the auctioneer up on the box, is impressive enough to make anyone, stock and money, and even a few hundreds of dollars worth of cattle. In a day—some steers bring $12.50 per hundred weight, and some bunches in the arena at one time number 15 to 25 head.

The Twin Falls Commission company, owned by the Haves brothers, John and Fred, formerly of Three Creek west of Pocatello, is a plant which covers approximately 10 acres.

Behind the scene, where the cattle are held in pens before being run into the sale arena, activity of a sort to remind you of an old-fashioned wild west show is also in progress. Keep the steers, heifers and bulls in the correct rotation for sale, and make no wonder why the master mind controlling the mass of endless, endless herds.

U. S. OFFERS TIPS ON HOME CANNING

In a new bulletin called "Home Canning of Fruits and Vegetables," the bureau of human nutrition and home economics of the U.S.D.A. has simplified food preservation rules and illustrated them in two-to-five-page patterns. The illustrated bulletins show step-by-step how to prepare fruits and vegetables for home canning, tell what kind of equipment to use, mistakes to avoid, and time schedules for processing.

Here are the seven points for successful canning listed on the cover page of the bulletin:

1. Can only fresh food in tight containers.
2. Have food, fruit, everything used in canning, thoroughly clean.
3. Work quickly, so as to can "freshness."
4. Heat food too long and too much to make bacteria and other harmful organisms grow.
5. Pull up on top-toe directions and, sometimes, backed up by scientific research.
6. Make sure jars are sealed airtight, to keep harmful organisms out.
7. Store canned food in a cool, dry, dark place.

"Home Canning of Fruits and Vegetables," bulletin AF-603, are most susceptible to drought injury. The open crop on a bearing of fruit, which caused the damage. If you examined closely, you probably would find the cause of the damage. Some of which had extremely severe, dark areas. These were the most things that caused the damage.

W. E. Shull, extension entomologist for the University of Idaho, tells us that for the home gardener the selection of varieties of onions resistant to thrips is of greatest importance. In general, Sweet Spanish varieties are injured less than others. Control by spraying is very difficult, but some degree of control can be had by a thorough spraying with a spray made up of two ounces kerosene and one ounce of molasses in three gallons of water.

For more information concerning this insect, ask your agricultural extension agent, Albert Nivole, for Memo-leaflet No. 62.

highly profitable business if you have the market, cattle, prices, and 800 other things.

Had Busy Day

Wednesday was one of the busiest days in the commission company. More than 1,000 cattle were run through the pens. Steers from the Prescott farm, bought by Elmer Nielson, Fairfield, brought $12.50 per hundred weight. Bunches of heavy steers, from the Prescott farm, brought $12.50, as did bunches of heavy steers, from the Prescott farm, brought $12.50.

There were quite a number of in-between steers sold. Although the number failed to equal sales of the previous day, the day was a steady pace throughout the day, as did the bulk. Next week is expected to show a fine run with plenty of buyers bidding.

Perhaps you'll never buy a whole cow all at one time, but a trip to one of the sales will open your eyes. It's not, it's not, it's not an experience you'll never forget.

Pay-Red-Point

And who knows, maybe you'll pay out those red points with an untroubled conscience next time you buy a steak if you know all that goes into the sale of just one cow. At least you won't be like John Haves, who said that all day long—and then said that all night long in his sleep.

Come to the sale of it, we forgot to ask John if he's a beef eater.

THINNING VITAL TO GOOD GARDEN

By HENRY L. FREE

Side dressing of most vegetables should be a part of this week's program. Use any standard vitamin garden fertilizer. The number of the package, 4-12-4, means that it contains 4 per cent nitrogen which is what is needed for best growth; 12 per cent phosphorus for better root and fiber; and 4 per cent potash for better root development. Because plants take nourishment when in liquid form only, the gardener should water soon after applying to the soil about the plants. For those who want to use fertilizer in liquid form, let a cupful of fertilizer stand in 10 quarts of water for a day or two before applying. This solution may also be used as a starter solution when setting out tomatoes and other plants.

Keep Well Thinned

Keep thinning out your rows of crowded vegetables to give them the best possible chance to mature. Best thinnings, tops, roots and all, could make nice vegetable soup. Keep thinning until those remaining reach the size of a golf ball, then harvest and can.

Allow water to run slowly until the ground is thoroughly soaked. Avoid hills, even though frequent, sprinkling, since such applications are worse than giving a bottle of oil. Light watering brings the roots too close to the surface and the re-

Record Pea Crop Looms for Idaho

BOISE, June 23, 1944.—Idaho's early crop of green peas grown for market is forecast at 23,000 bushels, and the early lettuce crop is forecast at 3,000 crates. The pea crop, if produced and harvested, would be the largest on record; but the lettuce crop would be the smallest since 1931. Both crops are now being harvested.

The freeze on the night of May 23 definitely injured some vegetable crops and delayed development of most crops. Lettuce has been late and slow in developing all season, and the cold weather during this period further delayed growth. The earlier fields of peas lost many blossoms and small pods in the freeze, but vines were not killed. The harvesting date was set back about 10 days in many early fields. Some peas and lettuce were harvested around June 5, but volume shipments were not expected before about June 15.

Early potatoes were mostly killed back to the ground by the freeze; plants were just beginning to form, but by the first of June, Idahoans were not severely damaged by the freeze, but were developing slowly.

It may be dangerous as a hot soil will quickly melt the roots. Should Feed Bed

The asparagus bed should not be cut after mid-June in the south and late June in the north. As soon as the season has passed the gardeners should feed the bed with an inch of rotted manure or a heavy grade of fertilizer, 13 pounds per 100 square feet.

The asparagus bed is kept under control by spraying with lead arsenate, 2 level tablespoons per gallon of water, and a couple of tablespoons of flour to make the mixture stick to the plants.

Peaches and plums should be thinned after the June drop, 6 to 8 inches between peaches and 4 to 6 inches between plums is recommended by the orchardist.

MEAGER SUNSHINE HITS AREA CROPS

This section of Idaho needs sunshine—and plenty of it.

That was the substance of a statement made by O. J. Bellwood, county farm labor supervisor, who pointed out that the continued wet weather and cool days and nights had "greatly retarded the growth of a majority of the crops."

Bellwood said that additional rain Wednesday night further complicated the field work as in some sections it was of such intensity that it made entering the fields Thursday an impossibility. Some Mexicans and some Japanese were in the Twin Falls labor camp Thursday because some fields were too muddy.

"We have been looking for a break in the weather for quite a long time," Bellwood said, "but it has rained nearly every day for the past few weeks. Under these conditions, coupled with the cold nights, growth of crops has been retarded."

"The fields need sunshine now, and plenty of it."

Urgent Need for Farm Help Cited

The weekly farm labor summary issued by the emergency farm labor office of the University of Idaho extension service indicates that an estimated shortage of 1,500 pea pickers will occur in Canyon county during the peak period for this season, necessitating the emergency mobilization of all farm workers help available.

Hay continues to be the next most active crop in labor demand. Rain has held back most areas and with brighter skies the need for labor will be critical, the report continued.

Although the weather has played havoc with the labor situation, said the summary, the additional mois-

4-H Clubs Help Safety on Farm

A nationwide survey just made discloses that an estimated total of 17,200 persons lost their lives through accidents on American farms during 1943, which is a decrease of 1,000 from the preceding year.

As 1943 was the first year of the national 4-H farm safety activity, much credit for the above decrease is due the 600,000 club boys and girls throughout the nation who checked farms and homes for their liabilities for accident and fire hazards and helped correct them.

The activity is continued this year with increased rewards for meritorious farm safety work, which are provided by William G. Mendenhall, N. J. The awards include a maximum of 10 silver medals to each county having 15 or more 4-H club members who turn in credible safety reports in the activity, and $20 war bonds to four representatives of each state's blue award group.

Ten sectional safety champions selected from the state will receive trips to the national 4-H club congress, Chicago, next December. The list of the winners will be chosen as national winners to receive $200 college scholarships. In addition, a hardwood plaque, appropriately engraved, will be awarded to the county receiving the most outstanding 4-H safety program.

And possible increased length of the irrigation season will be shown in the field work and loss of man hours.

During the past week, D. L. Pout, farm labor supervisor for Idaho, advised all county agents, offices of civilian defense and the United States employment services to be prepared to put in action their emergency mobilization of farm labor from the ranks of store workers, office workers and non-farm people.

HORNWORM NOT BAD AS HE LOOKS

One of the most "beautiful" worms if a worm can be called beautiful, is the tomato or potato hornworm. This large green caterpillar is marked with diagonal white bars on the sides and has a long, slender horn at the tip of the body. Many of us have thought that this insect would sting us with its horn if it were touched.

W. E. Shull, extension entomologist for the University of Idaho, says that this insect is perfectly harmless as far as stinging is concerned and that apparently the only reason for its having such a formidable looking weapon is to frighten away its parasites and predators.

We are all familiar with the use of "scouting" for protective purposes by the army and navy. Most of their spies have been obtained from examples found in nature. The tomato hornworm is no exception. It is very keen eye cannot discover through the stem of a plant even though we can see fresh signs of where it has been feeding.

The adult moth which our eye-sight is a large moth and is known by the common name of hawk moth. The moth flies about in the late afternoon and evening, feeding on the nectar of flowers and has often been mistaken for a hummingbird.

Hornworms seldom become abundant enough to do much damage; however, the worm eats a large number of leaves on a potato or tomato plant. Dr. Shull says that perhaps the easiest method of controlling this insect is hand-picking. When the infestation becomes heavy spray or dust with caldium arsenate or dust with pyrethrum.

Albert Nivole, extension agent, will be glad to furnish you with a copy of extension circular No. 77, "Defend Your Vegetables Against Insect Attack."

Novel Rose Reception Planned Sunday by Baptist Committee

Directed by members of several committees and the boards of deacons and deaconesses, members of the Twin Falls Baptist church will entertain at a novel rose reception and church bungalow in honor of new members received during the present pastorate of the Rev. Herman C. Rice. The first of 133 new members since arrival of the Rev. Mr. Rice was received into the church Nov. 1, 1932, and will be honored at Sunday night's festivities.

Roses of all sizes and colors and in all types of arrangements will be transformed into a veritable rose garden, those in charge indicate. In the reception line will be deacons and deaconesses of the church, who will welcome all who attend.

Deacons who will appear in the line include Mr. J. H. Hays, chairman, Mrs. R. C. Doud, Mrs. H. McKelvey, Mrs. J. H. Hays, Mrs. E. H. Hays, Mrs. Charles Kavan, Mr. O. Kuykendall, Mrs. J. H. Hays, Mrs. Charles Kavan, Mrs. H. H. Bullinger, Mrs. Ray McMillan and Mrs. W. A. Miracle.

Others in line headed by Herman Deaton as chairman, deacons to the reception line will include Louis E. Evans, P. S. Hays, Mrs. J. H. Hays, Charles Kavan, Mr. O. Kuykendall, Mrs. J. H. Hays, Mrs. Charles Kavan, Mrs. H. H. Bullinger, Mrs. Ray McMillan and Mrs. W. A. Miracle.

Following a welcome by the pastor, a program will be presented with songs, prayers and a collection. Robert E. Miller as accompanist for all selections.

Opening selection will be a duet, Mark, Mark My Soul, Shelley, by the choir. The choir will sing "The Hills of Babylon," Stanley Richards, by Duane Davis.

Miss Helen West will sing "Some Day, Some Day," by Duane Davis. Following a welcome by the pastor, a program will be presented with songs, prayers and a collection.

Farewell Party Honors Sister Of Mrs. Sweeley

In compliment to Mrs. Alta Hamilton, Lynwood, Calif., who has been a guest of the past three months at the home of Mrs. Sweeley, a farewell party was given for her at the home of Mrs. Sweeley, 223 Lake boulevard, Wednesday afternoon.

The country was in the nature of a farewell, after Mrs. Hamilton plans to leave next Monday to return to her home in California. She is a sister of Mrs. Sweeley.

Guests were seated at four round tables, centered with charming floral arrangements for the luncheon.

High honors at bridge went to Mrs. Edith Graham, and a guest was presented Mrs. Hamilton. Other out-of-town guests at the party were Miss Laura Macdonald, Beaver Dam, Wis., who arrived last week-end to again spend the summer at the home of her sister, Mrs. Edith Graham.

CARE OF YOUR CHILDREN

Children need praise for good deeds. Few children can be encouraged by criticism. But we should all be careful to keep the encouragement within proper limits and not allow ourselves to give the highest praise to the highest achiever. Always keep the high mark for the highest achievement so that there is no resting point.

Mark is not a gift. Some parents even call the teacher, "Mark slings and mean," because they will not give the highest mark to a child who has not earned it. One parent called the school to ask the teacher to change the mark of a child. He said, "Just change it to A so he can get his prize. He wants one so badly."

When a child gets a good mark, or a high one, without extending himself to win it, he is spoiled. He grows up with the habit of expecting the teacher to give him the highest mark for the least effort.

One of the instructors in college used to have a few problems that he did not like to solve. He gave them to the students who were the best. They were the ones who had the highest marks. They were the ones who were the most successful.

God's Front Porch

A Novel By KETTI FRINGS

Copyright, 1944, Ketti Frings—Distributed, 1944, NEA Service, Inc.

THE SCENE: Hazy, old Junction, halfway point between the Earth and the Valley.

THE STORY: Old Mrs. Johnson, the gossip, is sitting on the porch after supper giving Emily an ear. Pinky is disturbed when she says that God is not sending any more messengers to Earth for the duration. It seems they can't get through the surrounding haze of misery. Pinky had thought he might be able to keep watch over his young wife Martha and the baby that is soon to be born but now despairs at it.

Eventually Ada too "Mrs. Johnson, if that sabbie boy shows up, would you mind?"

Johnson nodded and with a weariness of tone, as though it were an old ritual, "I'll tell him 'congratulations at the Square. Ada'."

They watched her limp off.

"Poor thing," Emily commented. "I should think that up here she wouldn't need that. I mean, I don't understand that. Can't she get rid of it?"

"If she wanted to," Mrs. Johnson clearly showed her disapproval. "That's the trouble with her, you know. Like I, she's a sympathizer. It gets old. I could tell you about a lot of the old hangers-on."

"Imagine, you've known them a long time, haven't you?"

The monotony of the remark was not lost on Mrs. Johnson. She smiled primly. "Well, if you put it that way, but I'm waiting for Mr. Johnson."

"Well, that's nice."

"Though, heaven knows, I shouldn't know him if he told me once. But I'd never live a day after me. A day! It's been years now. I've looked down just the other way. Working at the Stage Door Center—at his age, imagine!"

At this point Pinky came up and went inside.

There was a large leather chair in the library, near a window. It was there for a while, looking around the room and counting the books but for something to do. He could still hear their voices, but muzzled now not to pay too much attention to them. He wanted to be near, though, in case they left.

He stopped counting as he heard steps on the porch. It was Emily, but she was only coming to the phone.

"What are you going to do?" Mrs. Johnson asked in alarm.

"On the radio. Why? Stella's on at eight, I think."

"Oh, no, don't. No with Stella's still in the house. He won't stand for it."

"You mean I can't listen to the radio up here?"

Mrs. Johnson sighed. "I know. I miss it, too. It was nice when he used to go to the office... then I could have it on all day. Did you ever listen to Lillian's husband?"

"No radio, no newspapers! Ye gods!"

"I felt that way myself. I never did find out whether she got him back. There was another woman, you see, but poor Helen, she was so involved with her career and her babies—let me see, the last episode I heard."

Fortunately they were all saved by the arrival of someone moving toward them, down the street.

For some reason, Mrs. Johnson closed up like a clam.

Pinky leaned toward the window to look. It was a sailor, a Jewish sailor, a cute little guy.

"Sorry, she's not here," Mrs. Johnson called out to him. "Had a date, I think. Went off somewhere, very nice."

"Oh... thank you. I just thought maybe..."

"That's all right."

Clearly disturbed, he strolled on. "Not that it's any of my business," Mrs. Johnson observed, when the sailor had turned the corner. "Why didn't you tell him Ada was the square?" Emily interrupted anxiously.

Mrs. Johnson continued calmly. "Because after all, with all her faults, Ada is really a very nice girl. Not that he's probably not all right, too—in fact..."

"Scene of your very best friends are Jews, huh?" Emily concluded for her.

Emily's business was forgiven. "It's true," Mrs. Johnson hastened. "I'm just a little bit prejudiced. I'm just a little bit prejudiced."

"Now look, Emily," Mrs. Johnson put down her knitting. "We have to make the better line adjustment. Pinky was just about to call out in despair when he realized that someone else was annoyed, too. The shutters at one of the upstairs windows were flung open with a bang. 'Mrs. Johnson!' The voice was firm and filled with displeasure. 'Mrs. Johnson!' Emily said audibly. 'Yes, Father. I'm sorry, Father. There was a writing on the wall. As Mrs. Johnson edged her chair closer to Emily, whispering as she did so, 'I tell you, you have no idea what it's like. Can't you walk around in this town without running into all sorts of people. Last night, in the Square, Sammy Gross—'"
