State Labor Leaders Open '44 Convention

Appointment of committees featured today as delegates to the 25th annual convention of the Idaho State Federation of Labor opened three-day sessions at the Labor temple.

Around 100 delegates, from over the state, registered at the hall this morning and attended the initial business session which was continuing this afternoon. The gathering is expected to prove one of the most important for Idaho labor in many years, since postwar and re-conversion problems will probably occupy an important place in formal and informal discussions.

Tonight, at the Grand hall, a smoker will be held for men delegates while a picnic in the city park will attract the women delegates. Thursday night a dance for delegates and their families will be staged at the hall.

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 7 (UP)—A strike of Philadelphia transit workers ended today and the federal government went ahead with its study to determine the cause of the work stoppage and to determine by what means the government could best bring about a return to work of the strikers.

No Violence Reported
Striking transit workers armed with rifles with fixed bayonets, rode the cars as guards, but no acts of violence were reported.

The army, which took over operation of the transit system last Thursday at direction of Secretary of War Henry L. Stimson, announced that it would accept 100 percent and this continued as a later shift reported.

Upwards of 8,000 troops, hurried here from camps to Pennsylvania and New Jersey, still are in the city today and there was no indication when they would leave. It was expected that the strike would stop there will be no further incident.

Most of the workers returned to their jobs willingly, but there was considerable trouble in the city when the Philadelphia Transportation Company's "Municipal" street cars were taken over by the army.

Commander Backman, who is in charge of the military police, said that the strike would continue with their training.

Allies Gain in New Stalemate
Paris; Tanks Rip Nazi Defense in Heavy Attack

SUPREME HEADQUARTERS, AEF, Aug. 7 (UP)—Powerful American and British armies opened the battle for Paris today in a coordinated offensive that burst through the German Orne and Mayenne river lines less than 130 miles from the French capital, while other U. S. columns drove for a quick conquest of the great Evreux ports after killing or capturing almost 17,000 of the 25,000 Nazi troops defending the peninsula.

(Confirmed reports broadcast by the London radio said the nazis were removing their administrative headquarters from Paris to Nancy, near the Franco-German frontier.)

Both ends of the German battle line before Paris were being pierced by the Anglo-American drive as veteran British units punched across the Orne river below Caen, and Lieut. Gen. Omar N. Bradley's rough-riding American tanks swept beyond the Mayenne river in great strength and plunged toward the big communications center of the capital.

The British Tommies surged across the Orne two miles north of Caen, where the night and pushed on almost two miles to cut the Caen-Caumont highway.

Major Threat
The southern thrust was described officially as posing a "major threat" to the German line positions south of Caen, where the nazis had first army was disclosed to have come into the line.

Pune, India, said the British had moved strong anti-tank equipment into the Orne to meet the threat of a German counterattack, while the entire right flank of the British was held by the British tanks.

The bitterly contested German stronghold of Evreux, 21 miles southwest of the new break-through, also fell to the British allies.

Nazi Fleeing
At the capture of the battle line, the German army suffered the main weight of their armor eastward from Caen, where the nazis suffered a six-pronged assault that broke through the German line and resulted in the capture of the city.

British tank columns were on the march along a 50-mile front, giving the battered, weary and hungry German soldiers no chance to regroup for a major counter-attack.

Enemy Retreating
As the new offensive pounded eastward, the German army and industry forces in British attack had at remaining enemy troops on the peninsula to the east of Caen.

Headquarters announced that the Americans had taken 12,000 prisoners, including 10,000 Germans, and it was expected that those figures would be increased substantially as the fighting continued.

The primary concern of administration officials favoring the projected one-step war was the support of Congress, and avoid similar claims from Russia, France, Poland, Greece, and other countries.
