GERMANY WILL TRY IT AGAIN

By Sigrid Schultz

Copyright, 1944, by Sigrid Schultz

As an American newspaper correspondent in Berlin from 1933 to 1941, Sigrid Schultz saw at first hand the events that led from World War I to World War II. And she saw the behind-the-scenes preparation for the coming "war-in-peace" that she warns may culminate in World War III. This is the story of German plans to win the peace, plans that even now are being put into effect.

Anti-semitism has provided Adolf Hitler with his first real success in the barracks outside of Munich. His campaign associates remember that just as they had met German Jews they traveled, they also met Jews. The Nazis early chose the anti-semitic platform because, as Hitler's first press chief, Adolf Vatter for Koberger put it after he had separated from the fuhrer, "It furnished a certain measure of international unity of the world. By assuming leadership over the anti-semitic movement, Hitler intended to get his finger into every national pie throughout the world. And he was right."

Hitler even deceived his anti-semitic followers. For many years he made no mention of Jews in his speeches in Nazi Germany. Thereafter, the struggle to anti-semitism which the Nazis have worked overtime: rapidly. By promoting the small details of the Jewish-controlled department stores and Jewish doctors would disappear under Nazi rule, he was the ally of the anti-semitic movement, whether his lack of success had anything to do with Jewish competition or not.

During his rapid rise from paid informer in 1919 to leader of a party that was winning seats in parliamentary elections only three years later, Hitler had fully realized the economic power that would have over men. With this realization came his craving for publicity for propaganda. He asked experts the studies of psychologists submitted to him in London; on them he based his mammoth campaigns to win control, first of Germany, then of the world.

The psychologists talked much of the dissatisfied elements. Hitler knew them well. He himself had been tortured with dissatisfaction in his days of poverty. But he knew that conditions other than poverty alone bred unhappy rebelliousness. His propaganda much reach every dissatisfied person in Germany and magnify and intrigue, whatever the cause. Women seemed more brittle, more imaginative than men. Openly the Nazis excluded them from politics, covertly they elaborated schemes with which to exploit women. The Nazis had won the lower middle-class women of Bavaria by promises to respect the "sanctity of family and religious life" (They had succeeded to promises of spoils from the future expropriation of Jews). In their thorough quest of dissatisfaction, they sought out young women artists, not quite good enough to succeed alone, but glad to listen to men who told them of future wealth—when they held power. They went after the rich women, however, for their evil-smelling car of slanders and intrigues, and found them docile and useful.

While some Nazis traded on sentimentality, others deliberately turned men and women guilty of sex irregularities into agents for the Nazi cause. The fact that many such hold high posts in Hitler's party, Captain Roehm for example, made the Nazis popular with abnormal elements in other countries. Hitler was fully aware that the carnal was a notorious offender. I have seen photostats of letters he dressed to Hitler in 1923 warning him that cooperation with Roehm and his clique endangered the national cause. Born statements attached to the photostats and Hitler has shrugged off the warning as "old bluff."

By 1934, however, Hitler realized that Captain Roehm had secured a dangerous hold on the Storm Troops and many members of his party. He knew himself strong enough to come to terms with the reckless leader on his own. So he suddenly remembered Roehm's promises. On June 30 of that same year, Hitler personally arrested the man who had befriended him when he was a scullion, to whom he owed much of his career, had him thrown into jail and executed.

Being convinced that he himself and several occult powers, Hitler directed the activities of astrologers and fortune tellers as Nazi propaganda tools. Soon after the Nazis had an excellent international vehicle. There is a certain measure of anti-semitism in almost every country of the world. By assuming leadership over the anti-semitic movement, Hitler intended to get his finger into every national pie throughout the world. And he was right.

Hitler, like the Kaiser, was certain that his mission came from God. He made no mention of Jews in an interview I had with him, when he stepped forward and greeted me. He spoke quickly at first and then slowly, but he was not alone. He had a staff of about 100,000 men behind him, all eternally obedient to him. They are blindly obedient to him, he said. "The publicans are more numerous. But they are divided. Therefore, I shall be the strongest. My will shall be done."
