HOW THINGS APPEAR FROM PEGLER'S ANGLE

NEW YORK—In March, 1942, the United States expressed its opinion that it was time to end a decision so ominous that even one of the nation's best defense attorneys, who was there, was thereby, unexpectedly, won his case and was disgraced. This was the case of the defense of James J. Byrne, the faithful, full South Carolina-born, American citizen, and the idealist of the new deal, the hand-rested again on a charge of atrocious assault and rape. Another had been convicted of forgery and, and the Byrne decision, went to placate the mob. Robbery, murder, and the victim ones of carrying a gun and twice for larceny. Altogether, there was not a pleasant crew.

The "New Deal" was a deal so pure, in Byrne's opinion, he felt that these men were within their rights, as union men, to get away from the owners of "over the road" trucks entering New York from other states. $2.50 for each truck and $2.50 for each driver, for trucks and entering New York. These amounts represented the local New York union's scale.

Walter P. Reuther

United American Over Road

The trucks approaching the city were manned by union drivers, members of the same international, or, in some cases, by members of other local unions. The latter, however, were not overworked; they were in the main, regular, reliable, trusted drivers who could have delivered their trucks into New York without excessive hours of strain.

has been, and the most, ever since, the chief cause of the American people's being misled to the necessity of "explanators," propagandists, and friends of its ideological and political agenda to take the curse off the most violent affront to common decency, honesty and morals ever offered by an agency of the American government.

In this case, Thurman Arnold was the chief culprit. He was the assistant attorney general, prosecuted local 807 of the teamsters' union of the American Federation of Labor, and 72 individuals, under the anti-racketeering law. This is a new York local. This law was passed in 1933 after the senatorial investigation of racketeering, then a discourge on commerce and a tax on the cost of living of millions of citizens. The law says that if any person who attempts to obtain the payment of wages" was exempted from the racketeering act. And unionists insisted that, even though the employer rejects the attempt, the gangster still has a legal right to use force in a transaction amounting to extortion or, as Justice Stone called it, robbery. If he is a member of a union.

The defendants, he said, "are entitled to immunity if their objective is to become bona fide employees of the government. If they understood even though he admitted heretofore stated that "In several cases the defendants refused to work for the government and he could not explain that they did not want to become bona fide employees."

Byrnes left the court to become president of the United States. His decision and opinion in Waxler played him ever since for he is now the of the Waxler, Kurtz or Obviously this union has a role to play in the life of the community. A union has no more right to prey on commerce in any other way than the case, the Copeland case.

Nevertheless, at the request of the American Association of Green and Padway, and with the blessing of the new deal, the bill was passed in 1935, giving the union the right to sue for discrimination to except from the discrimination the payment of the wages by an employer to an employee.

Of the 72 original individual de-police in this case, it had criminal records. For example, one had police history extending over 19 years, including one charge of grand larceny, two charges of burglary and one each of robbery and telephone sexual. Shortly after Byrnes' rejection this defendant was arrested. Twelve million sons are under arms at war. This was one of old Dan's union which had received by interpretation, from the Roosevelt Supreme court the right to extort payments even though, in the prevailing case, "the defendants refused to work for the money."

IRRIGATION PERIL APPARENTLY ENDS

Danger of conflict between irrigation rights and navigation plans in Idaho is apparently ended by congressional action now in the making. The directors of the Twin Falls Canal company learned at the annual meeting of the Idaho Waterways association.

J. R. Bodwell, attorney for the canal company, said Monday that a subcommittee of the senate commerce committee has authorized building of 10 dams for navigation on the lower Snake river. As explained, the waterways committee in pending legislation, the navigation bill will use only slack water from Lewiston to the Umatilla, Ore. dam. As a result there will always be sufficient water to interfere with navigation without interference.

The subcommittee's proposal is expected to receive final senate committee approval. The bill will certainly mean senate passage.

The proposed dams and locks would support the canal and Lewiston-Sawtooth canal.

The waterways group, meeting in its 14th annual session, went on record as supporting plans for controlling use of water without injury to navigation. Flood control or irrigation.

The association represents groups interested in development of navigation on the Columbia and Snake rivers in Idaho, Oregon and Washington. The Twin Falls canal delegation went to the session in the role of "watch dog" to keep an eye on any action which might be inimical to irrigation.

Making the trip were N. V. Sharp, canal president and head of the Idaho, Oregon and Washington Waterways association; J. R. Bodwell, J. Hatfield and Don Stafford, directors, and Bodwell.

Good Old Treasury—It's Soon To Go in the Pigeon Business

By FREDERICK O. OTTMAN
WASHINGTON, Oct. 29.—The U. S. treasury may enter into the pigeon business.

The federal salesman plan to sell a few hundred thousand dollars of silver, without the hole. The treasury has 100,000 and thinks they would be fine for electricians to carry their screwdrivers in it. It also has tons of silver paper for gas masks, which sold quicker than hot air, and silver for handkerchiefs.

These birds, plus thousands of other items, are being sold on the market. The stock is getting bigger by the day, and the boys have opened a sample room. They said they would 10 points out that they didn't want to be sold. If you want the making of a square dollar, a medium-sized box of tissue handkerchiefs, a yellow dangle bag, a rubber ball with yellow and black stripes, a fly swatter or a silver ball, you'll have to wait a while and do business with your dealer. ALLIED OFFENSIVE OPENS IN BURMA

CHUNGKING, Oct. 30.—A new allied offensive has opened in northern Burma with Chinese troops shifting toward Bhamo, 100 miles to the southwest, the Chinese high command announced today.

The Chinese occupied Bhamo, 24 miles north of Bhamo, virtually without a fight. The British advance from Mopho were said to have been repulsed.

The Chinese started probing southward from the Myittha river on Oct. 15, with the Chinese line back shortly before they reached the river.

The Chinese command said operations over the last two weeks preceded the offensive. The Chinese launched today had cleared nearly 2,000 square miles of north Burma and numerous columns, along with 100 miles of the Myittha-Chungking railroad, and supply route in north Burma.

Lord Mountbatten's southeast Asia command announced in Rangoon, Ceylon, that some combat units in almost continuous action for two months had been brought up to strength "for the next phase in the offensive." The Chinese, he said, were well equipped, and had planned the campaign.

75,000 Red Cross Yule Boxes Sent

The American Red Cross has sent 75,000 Red Cross Yule boxes to prisoners of war in Germany, according to word received Monday by Mrs. Helen Bailey, executive secretary of Twin Falls Red Cross chapter.

The boxes have already arrived at neutral ports and on their way to the prisoners, according to Red Cross information.

Each of the 75,000 Red Cross boxes included the making of a Christmas dinner, including bread, meat, and vegetables, together with mixed nuts, candies and fruit.

Small gifts include pipe, tobacco, cigarettes, a wash cloth, playing cards and a game kit.

According to Red Cross officials, relatives of prisoners of war were so permitted in 1944 to send Christmas boxes, but were advised to include Christmas remembrances in their boxes.

A large picture of the prisoner of war Christmas package, showing the contents, has been placed on the bulletin board at Red Cross headquarters in the basement of the library.

Rehearsals Keep Lions Club Busy

Officials in charge of production of the Lions club play, "Come Even," which will be presented at the high school auditorium the night of Nov. 9 and 10, said Monday that rehearsals are progressing in a satisfactory manner.

Net proceeds from the play—in blackface—will go to the local youth center fund. Tickets will go on sale Wednesday at the Idaho Panhandle company office at the Twin Falls Hotel and Trust company building. No seats will be reserved, officials said.

Come for Funeral

Word has been received that Charles P. Smith and Mrs. Ralph Carl, son and daughter of Mrs. Ida Smith, who died at the Twin Falls Hotel, will be in the city early this morning. Funeral arrangements are pending their arrival.

The body rests at White mortuary.

GERMANY WILL TRY IT AGAIN

By Sigrid Schultz

Copyright, 1914, by Sigrid Schultz. Illustrated by VRA Service, Inc.

As an American newspaper correspondent in Berlin from 1918 to 1919, Sigrid Schultz saw at first hand the events that led from World War I to World War II. And she also saw the signs and symptoms that she warns may culminate in World War III. This is the story of Germany's plans to win the peace, plans that even now are being put into effect.

Every one of the German underground leaders whose confidence it enjoyed last year deeply abated its hopes for the overthrow of the Weimar Republic. The underground for years has collected evidence on the crimes and depredations of the Nazi party members of sympathizers among their countrymen of all classes. The great burden of guilt, however, is placed by the people who have had some measure of power: the Junkers, aristocrats, professors, industrialists, businessmen, officials, besides the army. There is no way of knowing, however, how much such files, whose mere existence constitutes a menace to the holder's life, will have in the coming war.

But without exception these underground men believed that punishment, be administered by Germany, either directly or through the hands of the victors, would be a crime against the German people. They spoke time and again of the danger that the national mind among the masses might elude to martyrdom and the danger that the German people, whether or not they were guilty, would be destroyed.

The non-Nazi within the German army have weapons and access to weapons. When it becomes sufficiently clear to them that they can no longer hope for peace as long as the Nazis are in power, they will make use of their weapons in a more psychological pressure is applied. This may under no condition be understood to mean that the counter-attack of the German army will be a counter-attack of the German army. German army leaders should never be given a chance to repeat their performance of 1918 and of the following years, when they were able to hold behind the republic, claim they had not been defeated, and regain power. They will not be able to do so if we make use of them to enforce the consequences of defeat.

German army leaders who, in collaboration with the underground, may not court-martial German war criminals will automatically do everything in their power—for the sake of their own personal safety—to convince the population that the punishment is just. This will reduce their chances of organizing one more conspiracy against whoever tries to build up a new government in Germany. And the new government, which knows the republic was tried by the army in the past, will be on guard against an army commander even if it has helped bring about the overthrow of the Nazis.

German psychology being what it is, there can be no doubt that the German elements would have a better chance to take over governmental responsibility with a certain amount of prestige if there were no open occupation of Germany by the United Nations. That rigid control will be necessary is self-evident. But this control could probably be exerted more effectively from inside the ring of men surrounding Germany than it could be from within. I have seen how the situation worked in Germany after World War I, before the whole of the country was tried for nationalistic propaganda. As a consequence of observation made at that time, I am deeply convinced that the quicker the Germans are made to run their own
