IN LADY'S HATS

(From Page One)

Lord I wear a uniform, and gave a couple of taps to the top of her immaculate white and blue creation that she had made.

The other 15 people in our lookout line had their minds on hunky tumblers and something good to eat. The women of the VFW would express an opinion on the topper until they heard what J. Blandford thought of it.

Blandford, you know, is the city normal school teacher who had the protest at his wife's hat, declared, "I could make a better one, and proceed to do so. Result: Tears and wide publicity."

What he thought of my impression was "It had not cut it." The women of the VFW would make of black velvet and netted with sequined tulle, for evening wear.

Most of the dusters at the Rogers affair sleep are unimpressed by the gaudy colored chaparral Mrs. Mary Gove and Mrs. Hattie Parmer wore to the affair.

After I'd explained that I really knew a lot of velvet shawls, Mrs. Gove was very much interested.

J. B. White, after paying his luncheon check, took one look, then walked around two hat-racks and a cigarette machine to his hat, and a closer view of Jacob's coat-turndown.

Mrs. Arnette Tolsted, cable-maker, commented, "Only you'd wear that kind of a hat." Mrs. White, who came to know "Are you going to a maquerade—do you get paid for it?"

Even Fraise, Larni Stuart, the owner, gave it a "I thought I'd seen everything, look, look, he said and laughed. Mrs. W. P. Parmer, who came up behind me as "A Lilly Dache model," said:

"Mrs. Parmer, I really want to know 'Win made it' she said, looking at me, and she said, 'I see it. My reply was 'It's a Dache number—It's printed right on the crown.'"

One girl, who never did get my hat interests at heart, tried to get by with a feeling, "It's not that bad, and so on." But I said, "No, madam, you cannot borrow the bonnet. I'm sending it to Heidi's Shopper for a Christmas present."

ON CALLING" BY
S. CHILDS

ON CALLING" BY
S. CHILDS

"Why, Colonel, it's you!" Dewey, well aware of all this, chuckled over McCormick's high ambitions. The colonel suppressed his ambitions, and finally the Tribune swallowed Dewey as the nominee. In his interview the other day, however, McCormick made it clear how difficult that swallowing act was.

"Dewey," he said, "was a weak nominee. That is shown not by his being defeated, but by the fact that he has behind practically every other Republican candidate who was elected, and when they were defeated he was defeated by a larger majority."

Enlarging on the need for western control, McCormick went on to say that only one Republican nominee from New York had ever been elected, and that was Theodore Roosevelt, who had first been elected as vice-president. Lincoln, Grant, Garfield, Hayes, Harrison and Harding all came from the middle west, said the colonel.

In calling for a new GOP alignment, it is just possible that Col. McCormick has shown more forthrightness and realism than those who oppose him within his party. The Republican party cannot exist half slave and half free—half isolationist and half, for want of a better word, internationalist.

It gets down, then, to this. Is the colonel to take over the party and make it the party of nationalism? Or is the party to purge the colonel—and thereby, presumably, him too—of his internationalist party? Great deal to be discussed.

WASHINGTON—The first vote within the Republican party to call for a change of leadership in the light of the defeat of Nov. 7 has come, interestingly enough, from Col. Robert R. McCormick of the Chicago Tribune.

In an interview in Montreal, the stout colonel insisted that control of the GOP must be returned to the party's "old guard."

"I had missed my cue. I should have said, 'Why, Cornell, is you!'"

Dewey, well aware of all this, chuckled over McCormick's high opinion of himself, and suggested that his ambitions, and finally the Tribune snubbed Dewey as the "biggest underdog" (the other day, however, McCormick made it clear how difficult that swallowing was).

"Dewey," he said, "was a weak monster. That is shown not by his defeat, but by the fact that he ran behind practically every other in coercive methods was known to the union (this was not the case with the other two companies), his then began to bear down upon the recording companies. He forbade his union members to play them—unless the companies should kick him. Some of them kicked him, others simply kicked. On behalf of the two companies who held out, the department justice brought suit against the Federation of Musicians but it was told in effect by the courts that the union was not to be held responsible for the actions of its members. The union then turned to the anti-racketeering laws by virtue of acts of Congress and supreme court interpretations thereof. Then the war labor board stepped in and mildly told that Mr. Petrillo must lift his ban against the two companies. Mr. Petrillo laughed. Next the President appealed to him in friendly fashion. ## Hendrix, Cubs' Promising Freshman, Shows He's Also Adept at Basketball

Hubert Hendrix, who played first base for Gene Osterlund's Legion baseball club and batted .400 and then went on to star at end for Coach Kermit Perrins' once-beaten Cub football eleven, may be the fair-haired boy on the junior high school quintet this season.

The six-foot freshman made seven points in six tosses at the basket (five from the floor and one from the foul line) yesterday but his team, the Bob Longs, lost to the Harold Malmans in Perrins' junior high school tournament. Malmans registered five points for his team.

The Bob Longs were all freshmen, including also Gordon Howard, Eugene Cowley, Jerry Melanson, Matt Kirkland and the youngsters registered the high average in points at the basket.

In the other games the Drexel Livingstons, with Drexel himself getting seven points, defeated the King Blacks, 21-12, and the Cecil Singers winning from the Ringwoods, 15-11. Block averaged eight points. Singers, who set the pace in the South class tournament, six, while the Bob Longs, who set the pace in the North class, scored four points for the Kingwoods.

Four candidates are out at the Junior. The squad will be cut to 25 next week, Perrins stated.

Game Commissioner Choice to Be Named

A special meeting of the fourth district Sportsmen's club will be held Friday night for the purpose of appointing one of the area's nominations for member of the state fish and game commission from this district, Lud Drexler, secretary of the Southern Idaho Fish and Game Association.

Drexler said that the fourth district had been asked by Governor Bottelstein to make its nominations as early as possible. The governor will make his appointments on Dec. 9.

Drexler also said that the meeting probably would discuss reports that airplanes are being used to hunt game in this area.

"That's certainly a black-eye for our sport and we should take action to stop it hunting at once," Drexler declared.

Last Game for Service Stars

BALTIMORE, Nov. 29 (AP)—The end of the football season and more than a score of senior army and navy players, including a dozen top stars, lies in Baltimore municipal stadium.

They'll be there Saturday with their underclass fellows to fight for the pot of glory not gold that goes with victory in the 4th regional of the 1945 Navy Yankies.

Service stars will be in the line-up, including Greenberg, Charlie Gehring and Manager Mickey Cochrane as the only "veterans" to be in the line-up.

The "23-year-old Detroit became the fourth player to be named a valuable. The others were Walter Johnson, Washington (twice), Lefty Grove, Chicago, and Eusebio Rodriguez of the 1943 New York Yankees.

ATLANTIC CHARTER
LOST IN SHUFFLE

WASHINGTON, Nov. 29 (AP)—Memorandum to editors: The following may be sent to the classified department for insertion in the "lost and found":

"Lost... important document—some Atlantic charter, slightly used. Bears the signatures of Franklin Roosevelt and Winston Churchill. Liberal terms."

No one among this town seems to know the whereabouts of the original proclamation of the four freedoms, adopted on the cruiser Augusta, 1941, by the heads of the American and British states.

The library of congress which has the Declaration of Independence and other important documents doesn't have it.

The next try—the state department—seemed fruitless for a time.

"Oh, sure, I believe we have it," said the information gentleman.

"Hang on a minute!"

His wife came back a moment later, somewhat abashed.

"No, I'll have to look around and call you back."

The White House surely would know.

"No, we don't know where it is," said the information gentleman there. "But I'll ask."

This procedure took the lead off the much relieved state department gentleman.

Days later the earnest White House gentleman said:

"I'm sorry but I can't tell you where it is."

It seems there is a regulation that forbids anybody to say where it is.

They are not even permitted to say it is being kept in a secret place.

So, as far as we're concerned, it's lost.

Perfume Fatal in Appeal to Coyotes

WASHINGTON, Nov. 29 (AP)—A perfume of fatal appeal for coyotes is announced by the government.

It is essence of their real blubber. To human nostrils it is almost unrecognizable, says the interior department's information service. But there's no accounting for the preferences of a coyote.

Few men of the department noted in Alaska that timber wolves seemed to prefer the blubber of dead hair than to any other food. On the theory that what pleases a wolf might well please a coyote, scientists of the fish and wildlife service prepared to extract for use in coyote traps.

Its success in attracting the predator of western states has been such, the service says, that it now finds difficulty in supplying the demand.

Service hunters destroy more than 100,000 coyotes a year.

YANKS GET JAP
WHO SHOT GIRL

WITH THE 24TH DIVISION IN LEVIE, Nov. 29 (AP)—When the Japanese shot the farmer's daughter they saved their doom.

For five days an outpost of four doughboys had been trying to locate and exterminate a nest of snipers near a trail in the lower levee valley but the snipers were too easy.

The farmer, who lived on a rice paddy nearby, and his 16-year-old daughter, went to Palo and got a bag of rice which the girl carried home on her head.

The Japanese shot her and made off with the rice. The farmer chased them, returned and carried his daughter to a hospital in Palo and looked up the outpost.

The Japs, he said, had taken refuge under his house.

The outpost advanced with a bazooka and rifle grenades. They blasted the house, sprayed it with rifle fire.

Underneath were six dead Japs who had been surprised while eating raw chicken and watermelon, uncooked rice. The farmer thanked the GIs and put the torch to his home which he explained had been delirious by the snipers. Today he was rebuilding.

At Palo his daughter is recovering. Her attendant was Lew Ayres, the movie star.

President Again
Gives MVA Okay

WASHINGTON, Nov. 29 (AP)—A special message from President Roosevelt renewing his advocacy of a Missouri valley authority today cleared statutes trying to write provisions for an MVA into pending postwar flood control legislation.

The President recommended approval of a plan developed jointly by army engineers and the reclamation bureau. He said it would provide a "basic engineering program" for development of the valley.

Mr. Roosevelt expressed no opinion as to whether the plan should be written into the flood control bill or put forward in separate legislation for action by next congress next year.

Senator Murray, D. Mont., and other MVA proponents who want to include it in the flood control measure suggested their cause was strengthened by the message. Senator Alben, R. Vt., said the President's statement "could be interpreted either way."
