VALENCIA TAKEN AS YANKS CIRCLE LEYTE JAPANESE

GENERAL MACARTHUR'S HEADQUARTERS, Philippines, Dec. 20 (UP)—Converging Yanks after seizing the Japanese headquarters town of Valencia, together with an airfield intact, drove forward north and south today in an effort to tighten a noose of flesh and steel about the largest organized enemy force still fighting on west Leyte island.

Southeast of Valencia, about eight miles north of the strategic American-held port of Ormoc, was destroyed by Gen. Douglas MacArthur today. As the 7th Division smashed into the city, the first "demolition" of enemy supply lines was driven from the direction of Carigara bay and captured Lanzo, six miles north of Valencia.

They cut behind a strong Japanese force already pinned down by the U. S. 32nd and thus the enemy force, of unestimated number, were trapped between the two American divisions.

The 7th already had placed the Valencia airtfield in use, and is providing another base for American planes which have been continuously harassing Japanese shipping and air operations.

After capturing Valencia the 7th pressed north and General MacArthur said it was holding up remnants of the once-powerful Japanese line which has been cut to bits by the American drive.

General MacArthur reported that an additional 1,444 enemy dead were found around Valencia.

PARIS, Dec. 20 (UP)—American tanks and reserves charged the flanks of German armored task forces fanning out in Belgium and Luxembourg today through a 25-mile gap in the first army front, re-establishing more or less solid lines on each side of the main Nazi break-through.

PARIS, Dec. 20 (UP)—American reserves went into action on the fluid 70-mile Belgian-Luxembourg front today, fighting desperately to halt the greatest German offensive since the fall of France. Forces were cut off but still fighting hard along the broken front and at the north end of the break-through, around Monschau, the Germans were being held on new American lines.

Exactly how far the German panzer columns had penetrated still was obscured by a partial news blackout but captured German prisoners said it was their commanders' hope that Antwerp could be taken "in five days." There were indications some Nazi spearheads were cooping toward the Ardennes gap where the break-through, the broke the back of the French army in 1940 was achieved.

By noon Monday, nearly 48 hours ago, the Germans in four main drives penetrating at least 15 to 20 miles had plunged within 10 miles of the city of Luxembourg, had overrun St. Vith, Malmedy, and Stavelot and were within 22 miles of the great base of Liege. A Stockholm report of uncertain origin today said the Nazis were only 13 miles from Liege. Groups of American and British forces were cut off but still fighting hard along the broken front and at the north end of the break-through, around Monschau, the Germans were being held on new American lines.

The Luxembourg radio had been silent since 9 p. m. Tuesday and there were indications the whole southeast corner of Luxembourg had been overrun. First army war correspondents in highly censored dispatches said "everything available" was being thrown into battle to prevent a "major break-through."

South of the great Nazi attack area third army observation posts reported a "major break-through" in the Ardennes.

26 Years Ago
By United Press
The German army launched its offensive in still-unexplored strength, sealing a "pocket" along the Belgian and Luxembourg front in what still patches said might prove Germany's last major bid to halt the advance of the Allies and win a compromise peace.

Twenty-six years ago, the last great German offensive of World War I was opened at dawn July 1 by a drive to the west against the American and French lines on a 60-mile front north of the Meuse River in Belgium. The drive was called the "Meuse-Argonne" offensive.

Official reports said Hitler's army, which had been assumed personal control of the German war effort, had been forced to retreat. The German army had been defeated in the Meuse-Argonne offensive.

CARE OF YOUR CHILDREN

By ANGELO PATRI

If a father and mother could select the child they would like to have for their own they would, most likely, choose the one they have. The neighbors' children always make him feel that he is not getting up closer and then we say, "Well, I guess ours is the best." It is hard to go on cheerfully, accepting the child as he is, if it happens to be a defective child who cannot be expected to grow into a self-sustaining citizen. It is not easy to be proud of a helpless one, to want him more than any other child but that is only the surface feeling. It is a deep wish for the neighbor on the child, for his sake. Deeper still is the feeling, "he is my own and he is more to me than any other child alive."

If he would only— It is hard to accept the child one has. Whether he be one sort or another, there he is, and to want him to be something else is like kicking against the pricks. It hurts and it is no fun.

This is true for all children and all parents. Few fathers and mothers have received a child without wishing he was different. Now if he would only learn music, if he would only go into the church, if he would only study to be a doctor, a lawyer, a minister, the mother's mind is body great for all the rest of the world to look up to.

That's healthy. A father or mother did not hope his child would grow to be a doctor, a lawyer, a minister, it works for good as long as the parents do not try to Lawton McKell, an old friend of the column, offers his Christmas idea. He's a noted American epicure, with background of wide travels in Europe and America. He is a member of the Society of Restaurant and co-author of "The Restaurant's Handbook."

He reminds us that the appearance of the table reflects the traditions of the season, with time-honored red and green kermes decorations, the dishes of olive, beef stuffed and plain, celery, radishes of available, and moist cranberry jelly, and any other relishes that Grandma has put up. Generous can be both fruit, miniature Christmas tarts and a mirror, fully arranged, or anything the appetite suggests.

McKell's Christmas Menu suggests: Grapefruit halves (each given a dessert spoon of port or raspberry syrup); Chili con carne, with dairy dressing; Soup: Oyster soup (Chowchow); Beef and vegetable soup (Liquor and putting it in a pot-luck dinner); Double boiled and seasoned with butter, salt and pepper.

SUGGESTED MENU

BREAKFAST: Baked short ribs, stuffed baked potatoes, Hubbard squash, mixed green salad with vinaigrette dressing, baked apple, lemon sauce, coffee, milk.

LUNCH: Baked short ribs, stuffed baked potatoes, Hubbard squash, mixed green salad with vinaigrette dressing, baked apple, lemon sauce, coffee, milk.

DINNER: Baked short ribs, stuffed baked potatoes, Hubbard squash, mixed green salad with vinaigrette dressing, baked apple, lemon sauce, coffee, milk.

CAFE REGULATORY ORDINANCE ASKED

BURLEY, Dec. 20.—Burley city council heard Fred Baldridge of the state public health service discuss a proposed ordinance which might be adopted here after the war for the better regulation of eating and drinking places. Baldridge and H. B. Post, sanitarian, Monday completed a survey of all eating and drinking places in Burley.

"Eating places are good and bad," was the only report they made, since specific facts are not published.

Places were judged according to the official inspection form for such establishments, and 16 points were covered in the survey. These will be the bases of a standard grading ordinance which these officials hope to see adopted soon after the war by the city of Burley. Labor and equipment shortages are the greatest problem now to set up such a control, they believe.

"We are merely going over these requirements with restaurant and pool hall owners so that when they begin buying new equipment after the war they will know what the requirements are and can buy the best. We want them to begin thinking in terms of a postwar ordinance which will be stricter."

Points on which they were judged include the following: Floors, walls and ceilings, doors and windows, lighting, ventilation, toilet facilities, water supply, laundry facilities, construction of utensils and equipment, cleaning of equipment and utensils, bacterioid treatment of eating and cooking utensils, storage and handling of utensils, disposal of wastes, refrigeration, wholesomeness of food and drink, storage, display, serving of food, cleanliness of employees, disease control.
