Peace Conference Ends Its Quarrel Over Chairmanship

SAN FRANCISCO, April 27 (AP)—The United Nations conference settled its row over a chairman today and one delegate said the job would rotate among the four big sponsoring nations.

He reported that Secretary of State Stettinius would receive the chairmanship of the all-important steering committee, which shapes the program and policies of the peace-seeking conference.

Russia tossed the conference into a deadlock yesterday on such a division of top positions, and it was not until late in the afternoon that concessions had been made in reaching an agreement.

Adjustment of the chairmanship issue opened the way for the conference to organize and get down to work. By custom, the foreign minister of the country in which a conference is held presides over it.

A delegate said he felt that Molotov would have come here with instructions from Premier Stalin to insist upon thorough recognition of Russia as an equal in the steering leadership and had used this means of letting the delegates know it.

It is seeming determination to wield perhaps dominant influence in creation of world peace machinery, which is the chief aim of a series of big-power efforts.

There was a wide range of opinion as to whether the Russian would take over even more critical issues which the conference has to tackle at the conference of 48 nations has been held in the city.

No more "voting" will be held until the 10th meeting of the conference. The British and the United States are not British would give rights to Russian.

"As far as the Soviet union is concerned," Molotov told the delegates, "I would like to see a representative at this time that in our country the whole people are brought up in the spirit of faith and devotion to the cause of setting up a solid organization of international security."

"You must definitely know that that Soviet union can be relied upon on the matter of safeguarding the peace and security of nations. This is the chief aim of the conference."

Americans Plunge in Austria; Pierce Geneva; Berlin Totters

ROME, April 27 (AP)—Troops of the U. S. fifth army smashed to within 35 miles or less of Milan today as the entire Italian front surged toward a sea-off of the Nazis.

A swift allied advance punctuated Geneva, a big north Italian port where partisans previously had been reported unofficially in control after driving out the German garrison.

Swiss dispatches cited mounting indications that the Nazis were abandoning the Geneva area and withdrawing toward the German border to join in the Bavarian Reich stand.

At captured Verona, where the American broke through the German Adige river line, the allies were about 100 miles from Brennero, a vital mountain pass to Austria, now virtually held by the Germans.

French forces north of the Alps were but 75 miles from the Brennero pass, which is the main line of communication between the Alps and the rest of Europe.

A task force of the 10th mountain division, led by William D. Dyer, Jr., of Ranger, captured the airport at Villafranca today after a fierce battle with the Germans.

The president spoke a word of hope for eventual setting up of an international peace organization, but of the statement "The Anglo-American armies under the command of General Eisenhower have met the Soviet forces where they intended to meet—in the heart of Nazi Germany."

"This is not the hour of final victory in Europe, but the hour draws near, the hour for which all the American people, and all the British people, and all the Soviet people have toiled and prayed so long."

"The union of our arms in the heart of Germany has a meaning for the world which the world will not miss. It means, first, that the last faint, desperate hope of Hitler and his gangster government has been extinguished."

"Finally, this great triumph of allied arms and allied strategy is such a tribute to the courage and determination of the American people, and to the courage and determination of the British people, and to the courage and determination of the Soviet people, that it can be accomplished only by the persistence of the courage of the fighting soldiers and sailors of the allied nations."

"But, until our enemies are finally subdued in Europe and the Pacific, there must be no relaxation of effort on the home front in support of our heroic and gallant allies as we all know there will be no pause on the battle fronts."

Churchill Elated By Allied Juncture WASHINGTON, April 27 (AP)—British information service today released this statement by Prime Minister Winston Churchill on the Anglo-American-Soviet juncture in Germany.

After long journeys, tolls and vicissitudes, across the land and oceans, across so many difficult and hazardous paths, the great allies have traversed Germany and have joined hands together. Now their task will be the destruction of all the remnants of German military resistance.

WASHINGTON, April 27 (AP)—President Truman announced today the juncture of Soviet and American forces in Germany. Press Secretary Jonathan Daniels said the juncture officially took place yesterday at Torgau, a town on the Elbe river, 75 miles south of Berlin.

The President said that as a result of the meeting, "the enemy has been cut in two," and added: "This is not the hour of final victory in Europe, but the hour draws near, the hour for which all the American people, all the British people, and all the Soviet people have toiled and prayed so long."

In a statement issued simultaneously with the British and the Russians, the President added, "The Anglo-American armies under the command of General Eisenhower have met the Soviet forces where they intended to meet—in the heart of Nazi Germany."

The statement added that "the last faint, desperate hope of Hitler and his gangster government has been extinguished."

Mr. Truman said, however, that "until our enemies are finally subdued in Europe and in the Pacific, there must be no relaxation of effort on the home front in support of our heroic and gallant allies as we all know there will be no pause on the battlefronts."

"Where They Intended" The President spoke a word of hope for eventual setting up of an international peace organization, but of the statement "The Anglo-American armies under the command of General Eisenhower have met the Soviet forces where they intended to meet—in the heart of Nazi Germany."

PARIS, April 27 (AP)—The American first army and the Russians have joined in the heart of Germany near Leipzig, cutting the reich in two. The juncture hopelessly outflanked the Saxony capital of Dresden and split German armies for reduction in detail.

Paris, April 27 (AP)—American third army troops stormed across the Austrian border into the Bavarian Reich today and opened radio contact with a Russian force apparently only 30 to 40 miles away.

A front dispatch said Gen. George Patton's third army had picked up a radio call from the Russians this afternoon and that a juncture of the two armies was believed imminent.

Closing of the narrow gap between the Americans and Russians would sever the last rail link between the Bavarian Alps and cut off the great Saxon works at Pilsen, Czechoslovakia from the Russian front. The Russian retook where the Nazis were supposed to make their last stand.

The location of the advanced Russian operation was not clear, but it was indicated they were part of the Soviet Second Army's second line. The Russian force was located south of the Americans in the vicinity of the city of Vienna.

Patton's men were across the Austro-German frontier just south of the Russian front. The Russian force was located south of the Americans in the vicinity of the city of Vienna.

Word of the impending juncture of the third army front came as the Soviet force was reported to have broken through the Bavarian front, from the west in a spectacular breakthrough that carried within 23 miles of Munich, birthplace of the Nazi party.

Whirling suddenly away from the great roads to Breitenburg, the U. S. third army's 11th armored division was ordered to cross the Alpine range to the eastward to cross the Alpine range to the eastward to cross the Alpine range to the eastward.

Heeded for Hitteway There were American troops 60 miles north-northwest of Breitenburg, 35 miles northwest of Linz, the third city of Austria. The Russian force was located south of the Americans in the vicinity of the city of Vienna.

WALLACE SEEKS TO AID BUSINESS

NEW YORK, April 27 (AP)—A four-point program government aid to small business was proposed by Secretary of Commerce Henry C. Wallace in a speech today.

It is Wallace's aim to "keep our American economy as open competitively free" and he plans to make that system "freer than it is today."

Wallace makes plain that he is "against a planned economy." That he says, "means tyranny."

President Roosevelt, Wallace points out that "small business" in 1944 provided 43 per cent of the total American and industrial employment.

"We should not, then despise of the capitalism of the common man in America," he says. "We should go to work to retain it and enlarge it."

Wallace holds, first, that government should break down "all artificial barriers that prevent a small business man from entering a business of his choice."

"Point 2 is to see to it that small businesses have a reasonable share of credit, in the matter of credit, of insurance, of loans, they are treated as well as the big business."

Wallace proposes the establishment of a government agency to guarantee loans to small business.

His third proposal is to make governmental industrial research available to small business. He cites the example of the department of agriculture and state agricultural colleges, their aid to small farmers with no research facilities of their own.

Wallace's last point is tax relief. He suggests repeal of the excess profits tax as soon as possible after the war, lightening of the income tax, and other tax reforms to ease the burden on small business.

Hay Loader With Double Chain Works Without Any Difficulty

After adding a double chain to the baler hay loader which was tested first over a second year on a farm near O'Hartown, Paul Roberts reported that another test taken Wednesday has proved it will work without any difficulty.

Back in 1924 a five-acre plot at the end of a 100-acre field of prairie grass on Polair's farm was treated with fertilizer to harvest the hay from the treated area was mixed with hay from the stock at one end of the field. Three additional stacks had hay from the untreated area.

For eight years the cattle shown the preference for the hay grown on the fertilized plot, the cattle had been used to daily to consume the stock containing fertilizer. Hay given through only one-fifth of the bulk compared with the hay from the untreated area.

PRESIDENT ASKS VICTORY GARDENS

WASHINGTON, April 27—President Truman called on Americans today to plant more victory gardens to augment the nation's food supplies for hungry people in liberated areas.

In a letter to former Gov. Prentice Cooper of Tennessee, chairman of the National Victory Garden Committee, Mr. Truman said there is a need for more and better gardens than at any time since the war started.

The war food administration, with the aid of the advisory garden committee, is conducting a campaign to exceed last year's 15,000,000 gardens, a drop from 20,000,000 in 1943.

Every new victory of our armed forces brings increased demands for food for liberated people. Mr. Truman said.

Well prepared, fertile soil, shallow and frequent cultivation with sufficient moisture in the soil at all times, will make a successful garden.

Cattle Estimates In Idaho 961,000

BOISE, April 27—Idaho cattle estimates at the opening of 1945 place the number at 961,000, or equal to last year's record total and well above all previous years and the 10-year average of 780,000.

The U. S. D. A. Bureau of agricultural economics report by statisticians Richard C. Hoax and Frank L. Merrill estimates that milk cows in Idaho number 274,000, also equal to the 1944 figure and well above previous years and the 10-year average.

An increase both in cattle and milk cows was shown in central and southeastern Idaho counties, with corresponding declines in southwestern and northern Idaho.

LIFE-LIKE AMERICAN HOUSE

It was quiet. The trip was hard, they said, and they were getting older. They preferred to have us come to Boston. We girls preferred that, too, for we loved to walk down the street and see the old buildings. Like almost every other family in the village, we had a cow, a pig, and a garden. We had a horse, too, but her use was reserved for my father. Our horse was the house by way of a maid. Being a child, my mother could never quite give me sympathy and tolerance and was forever reminding us to close the kitchen window to my mother's afraid the smell of the kitchen will get out into the stable.

My father was very proud of his house and his family. He was especially proud of Sue, who was 14 and a sophomore in the Academy. Sue was quick and would hunt him up faster than anyone when a call came in, and by the time he got his things together he would find the horse hitched and waiting in the driveway. But she was not apt and apt to be bossy when my mother was out of house. She liked to draw, and she was good at it, though she always drew things that were fierce and turbulent. First, she drew a horse and rider in a flood. Then a fighting.

She was 11, my father was proud of her, too. Though she baffled him. He himself was tender-hearted—it took almost nothing to fill his eyes with tears—but Julia scorned notions of any kind. She had to qualify all her words with a certain amount of sarcasm and having kittens drawing. She gave no sympathy and tolerance. If she was sick, she never acknowledged it. When a tooth had to come out, she pulled a thread by tying one end of a string to it, the other to the door knob, then slamming the door. Moreover, she had spirit. In those days when children were supposed to accept without question, she challenged every one, regardless of age or experience.

She could not tolerate fire, or even cats. Often my mother asked my father to bring something home from the store. It was just below the store when he forgot, he didn't like to say, "I'm sorry, but I forgot." My mother always appeared to be looking up. He never took her to task for it. I think he was afraid to.

MIN. HOME GETS $25,000
WASHINGTON, April 27.—The federal antic-trust suit has allowed $25,000 to aid in construction of a $20,622 apartment project at 2302 14th St. N. W. in Washington, D. C. The suit was instituted today.

Both Sue and Julia resembled my mother's family. Sue had blue eyes, a short, straight nose, and heavy chestnut hair which she wore in cornet braids. Julia had brown eyes, brown curls, and a nose that was pleasantly rounded. Both had slender, graceful figures. I was sturdy, like my father. I had thin, wavy hair which I wore in short, limp braids, looped up and tied with a ribbon, gray eyes, and a nose that turned up a little.

My mother had been a native of Boston, and although my father used to joke about having married beneath her and come to live in the provinces, she felt the truth of it, just the same. Whenever my grandparents visited us, he could do enough to make me use us, either. Ordinarily if a patient wanted a splint or a bandage he would let him up in the kitchen, but when my grandparents were with us, he took everyone down to the office, as if it were a matter of course. He changed his shirt the minute he came to without being reminded, and he kept his coat on all the time. (My mother had to keep a sharp eye on Julia then.) I especially liked to talk business with my grandfather. He would talk about the shrewd deals he had made.

From the time I was 7, my grandparents' visits had been growing less frequent. The trip was hard, they said, and they were getting older. They preferred to have us come to Boston. We girls preferred that, too, for we loved to walk down the street and see the old buildings. Like almost every other family in the village, we had a cow, a pig, and a garden. We had a horse, too, but her use was reserved for my father. Our horse was the house by way of a maid. Being a child, my mother could never quite give me sympathy and tolerance and was forever reminding us to close the kitchen window to my mother's afraid the smell of the kitchen will get out into the stable.
