More Long Distance Paths for Your Voice

About two million miles of Long Distance telephone circuits will be added to the Bell System network during 1946. That just about equals the System's total long distance circuit mileage of twenty years ago.

Meanwhile there still aren't enough Long Distance lines to put through all calls without delay. That's because the volume of calling has gone up faster than lines could be built to handle it.

We're working hard to speed the day when all your ealls go through promptly!
