AN INTERESTING QUESTION

Over our mid-morning cup of coffee a co

AN INTERESTIMAL QUESTIAN.

Over our mid-morning cup of coffee a consiperer asked us:

"Why is it movadovs, that in our election campaigns the oppositue conditions of their electionerins to necessarily the control of the construction of the constr

the defeat of whom usually is the principal objective.

A good many of these same opportunist politicians refrain from discussing issues because they do not wish to go on record as being opposed to anything that would give them a full measure of political patronage once they were in office. Fundamentally their thinking probably is no different from that of those already in office. It's just a matter of who's in office and who gets the patronage. For all this, common sense should tell us, the people themselves are to blame. Instead of demanding from all candidates a clear cut stand on all issues brooked, the voters find themselves procecupied with the "battle of personalities." And a good many of them get seamed up over such things as playing sultars, the old plow behind the barro, whether so mad so actually were soverills and milks cows, and minor abuses of the franking rivilege.

Let some candidate actually come forth with a program for better government with a definite stand on every issue, and likely as nothe'll take a beating because his opponent has convinced the people that he was only trying to make trouble within the party and for that treason was not a real Republican. or Democrat, after all. or Edwin W. Pauley as an carriel President Truman histst on making him undersceretary of the navy. If Pauley to qualified for the job then all who have testified against him. Mr. Ickes included, are under a much cencerned?

Then there's Mayor-Congressman James M.
Curley, He was welcomed home to Boston by theering thousands who blocked the South station for 30 minutes, with a brass band
that played "Hall the Conquering Hero Comes."

Comes."
This inspiring tribute was given to the aged statesman who has been sentenced to from six to 18 months' imprisonment, and assessed a $1,000 fine, for using the mails to defraud manufacturers seeking war contracts.

Whe all comes to playing their part in good government. Just what are the American people thinking about newadays, anyway. Is it any wonder that candidates can get by with campaigns that offer nothing more than a play on personalities?

than a play on personalities?

BELATED RECKONING

The importance to the average citizen, and to the future of the United States as a democracy, of the supreme court's recent ruling denying to military authorities the right even in wartime, to usury the functions of civil courts cannot be over-estimated.

It reaffirms the unique pre-ent ambituously will be compared to the court of the court of neasurably neighton and epipole pronouncement. Sortunately, the decision was belated—nder the circumstances, it could not but been. This redemption cannot restore two civilians affected the many long this they suffered in illegal imprison—But the reckoning is none the less sure 'a tandines.'
