MORE WORDS ON UNIFICATION

MORE WORDS ON UNIFICATION

Rec. Carl Vinson, chairman of the house naval affairs committee and one of the navy's best friends in congress, has an article in the magazine Ships which attacks the proposed and President-supported unification.

The proposed of the very supported to the control of the model force of "subordinate" are the rather plaintive substitutes for the verb "unify" which he most frequently employs.

The purpose of unification of command, aswe see it, is to qualifie and coordinate rather than to subordinate any one branch of the service. It is difficult to see why or how any branch would be weakened, in the long run, by a closer lision with the others in the interest of national defense. And it is significant that there have been else, if any, complaints of "subordination" from the army or the air forces, though apparently the system cant that there have been few, if any, com-plaints of "subordination" from the army or the air forces, though apparently the system would work the same for all.

The war offered a thorough test of unified action. And also, in President Roosevell and Prime Minister Churchill, it provided an example of evillan control over all armed forces free of detriment or discrimination. So there is little point in the talk of examin-ing the system further.

But Mr. Vinnon does have a well-taken point in his suggestion that business, labor and farm leaders, diplomats, medical men and other group representatives express their opinion on the subject. So far it has been largely the services' show. But the proposal is the whole country's concern, and the counis the whole country's conc try should be heard from. country's concern, and the coun
