Scarcity of Meat Strikes Large Sections of Nation; Government Tightens Butter, Bread Control

Shoshone Moulds Airstrip From Desert

By The Associated Press

A large section of the nation remained on a meatless diet today as the government waged a fight to break illegal dealings in meat and to restore more equal distribution of supplies. The government also acted to untangle the snarled bread and butter situation.

The shortage in meat, acute in many metropolitan centers, was reported in nearly every part of the country. Conditions in many cities, however, were better than in others. In many cities, large and small, some sections said the situation was "getting worse."

Butcher shops opened their doors but weary customers didn't have much to choose from—few and cold cuts—If any. The situation was somewhat different in Utah and Idaho, however.

In Boise, one national packing company representative who would not be quoted by name said "there is no meat shortage in Idaho at the present time." However, more and more meat in Idaho is going into the black market and will continue to increase until the government gives some relief.

Edward L. Vetter, retail and wholesale meat dealer and director of the Utah Retail Grocers association, said packing houses in southern Utah are curtailing operations. He described Salt Lake City as "a meatless city."

He said that in the past few days, meat has been practically nonexistent; pork and lamb very short, and beef scarce. Some stores had ample beef, however.

Butter Control. Meanwhile, wartime controls were stepped back in an effort to get butter supplies flowing again. The government is now permitting Director Chester Brown to "relax" the butter situation within limits.

A potential bread problem had members of the retail small business committee, saying that after meeting famine relief quotas for the month, they would be unable to supply their customers' needs. The committee's spokesmen told the committee that they would be unable to supply their customers' needs.

Artists Term Alcohol Poor As Stimulant

By FRANK CAREY
Washington, April 16.—
A woman psychologist at Yale interviewed 20 top-ranking American artists to see if there was anything to an age-old theory that alcohol is "a stimulant to creativity." Her conclusion: "Alcohol is not a good stimulant."

Dr. Anna Rice, writing in the Quarterly Journal of Studies on Alcohol, said that the artists studied included five "creative" and nine "drifts" and six "executive" artists.

One Exception
Summing up on the 20 men interviewed, she said:
"With one exception, all have found that alcohol is not a good stimulant to creative work and they do not use it consciously for this purpose. If they have a heavy schedule of work they may occasionally avoid it except to have a very limited effect."

"Although most of them can't paint with a 'hang-over,' said the doctor, they prefer not to have it."

The one painter who disagreed with his colleagues was described by Dr. Rice as a "creative" artist who successfully four years while he was fully conscious drunk, but who subsequently said he had "lost touch" with his work.

"I very seldom muffed anything because of drinking," she quoted him as saying. "I could not drink when I was tight, but I could drink out of a check."

"Now, since I've stopped drinking, I have had a hell of a time to make up for that creative attitude. . . I found I infinitely rarely in paint when drunk than I do now."

Dr. Rice said she had made a clear that just because he found some excessive drinkers among painters, "are they drinking to get the job done, though, although the group balance of overindulgence is very high."

She quoted one of the "creative" artists as saying:
"I am a while I get into No. one care. Among the painters a friend, I found, that he drank too much, we think he may be unhappy and we try to understand it. The psychologist reported that 18 of the artists interviewed and subjected to various personality tests were "drifts," 10 were "creative" and 10 were "executive." In the permanent collection of the Metropolitan Museum of Art and six have been designated as "creative" by the artist.

Dr. Rice said she had "marked that they can and have done or pointed white drunk but her first picture, were a little nervous."

Sunday Mrs. Hainline conducted a meeting at the Maroon school for boys and girls wanting to join a club, and organization plans were made there.

Filner said enough boys wanting club work are available to start a boys club "as soon as a leader can be found."

What is your GUESS?

SOMETIMES, although an idea is wrong, it does no harm. Like the idea that square jaws is the sign of will power. That winter isn't as severe as they used to be, or that red hair denotes quick temper.

But there are other wrong ideas, which are definitely harmful to public confidence in and understanding of industry. One such idea is the current "guessing" about profits made by large business organizations.

Many people are apt to grossly exaggerate the money made by business. So Opinion Research Corporation (an independent organization) made a survey to learn just what the public thinks about profits. Compare these guesses with years with the International Harvester profit figures given below.

Public guess on war profits... 30.0%

In this survey, the average of the guesses by the public of the war-time profit made by industry was... 4.9%

In the four years of 1942, 1943, 1944, and 1945, the profits of International Harvester Company averaged only... 4.9%

For this period, the year by year per cent of profit on sales was: 1942-7.34, 1943-5.59, 1944-3.95, 1945-3.93.

rate of profit in normal times. Many large businesses, including ours, would consider it a bonus year if we could reach this figure. Our average profit for the last ten years—four and six cents—was 6.43%. This is a third less than what the public considers fair.

Our customers show that our profits are not high. As a matter of fact, the entire farm machinery industry is a low profit industry. In 1944, the Federal Trade Commission published a list of 76 industries and the average profit was only 3.1%.

What About Current I & P Prices? When the War ended and we planned our post-war production, we had hoped to be able to serve our farmer customers at the same level which has held since 1942. Our cost of war-time increases in costs of wages and materials.

It is plain that price reduction will be needed to meet the increased wages and material costs which we must carry.

We regret this necessity. We prefer to lower prices, when possible, rather than raise them and we know our customers prefer to have us do that. We had hoped to be able to "hold the line," at least.

But we do not see how we can avoid operating at a loss if our prices continue to remain at their present frozen level. We will not "out-compete" on any of our products, because QUALITY IS THE FOUNDATION OF OUR BUSINESS.

Our customers can be certain that we will seek no more than a moderate profit, both because of our policy and because we have approximately 300 competitors fighting us vigorously for your business. Our required price relief will be no more than is necessary to insure continued work for our employees, and a reasonable return for our stockholders.

Termed Step In Right Way

The government order imposing slaughterhouse control regulations to solve the meat shortage crisis and help the black market in meat is a "step in the right direction," Paul S. Benson, secretary-treasurer of the Independent Packing Company, said today.

The independent packing company, which is the largest of its kind in the country, has been operating for many years. Benson said that the government's action was a necessary step to bring order to the chaotic meat market.
